Our Town...

By JOE BELL

The Sooner red plane circled Colorado City and a few seconds later touched ground at the makeshift municipal landing strip south of town.

Oklahoma's tall, lean Bud Wilkinson and his pink-cheeked assistant, All-American Eddie Crowder, stepped out.

Then the pilot turned the plane into the wind and winged his way to Snyder's airport, where the two coaches boarded the plane late Wednesday night for their return trip to Norman.

There you have another example of Colorado City with its embarrassingly inadequate airport facilities in a period when air transportation and travel is as essential as the automobile.

The University of Oklahoma plane delivered its passengers here, all right. But shortness of runway and lack of lighting vetoed any attempt for take off at night.

So Quarterback Club officials, after the District 3-AAA banquet, drove Wilkinson and Crowder to Snyder where their plane could take off in relative safety.

You and I don't have to be told that a football coach's appearance in Colorado City is not going to solve the farm credit problem, bring in new industry or provide the town with growing pains. Not even if he is the nation's No. 1 coach, as is the personable Mr. Wilkinson.

But for every coach who has to change his plane travel here, there are a hundred business and industrial trips which have to be routed to Snyder, Sweetwater or Big Spring.

And in this age of competition, few towns can afford to watch those planes fly by.

Council Gives Affirmative Nod On Water Issue Despite Opposition

City Council, overriding strong dissent by one councilman, voted 6 to 1 Monday night to furnish water for Loraine, if the need arises, after construction of Champion Creek dam.

The action came at the written request of Mayor Vance Dickenson of Loraine.

And it was voiced in a resolution backed by all councilmen except Jeff Taylor.

Dickenson's letter made note of plans by Texas Electric Service Company, in cooperation with Colorado City, to construct a dam on Champion Creek south of Seven Wells.

"Loraine is desirous of being included in any future water rights for any lake that might be constructed on Champion Creek," the letter stated.

The letter then asked the council to "take some affirmative action, such as passing a resolution, giving, granting and assuring the town of Loraine that should the need arise in the future, and depending upon the availability of water, the town of Loraine will have the right to obtain a water supply from said lake."

Council Answers
Councilmen answered the Loraine request by adopting the resolution that declared:

"The town of Loraine, in event Champion Creek is impounded by Texas Electric Service Company, shall have the right to purchase water from Colorado City at price and place to be negotiated at the time need may arise."

Adoption of the resolution came after a brief discussion marked by Taylor's opposition to the action, which Taylor said was premature.

Worrell Advises
City Attorney John Worrell, asked about the legal aspects of the question, told councilmen he believed the request was "pretty much in order."

"And I think it proper that it be included in the minutes that water be made available to Loraine from Colorado City at a time in the future subject to need and available supply."

The resolution recorded in City Council minutes would be the "same thing we have in Lake Thomas," said City Manager Hollin K. Snethen, referring to reported water rights of Colorado City in regard to the Colorado River reservoir.

Taylor Dissents
"I don't know," interjected Jeff Taylor, "we will be obligated."

Mayor Trevor Crawford said the resolution would be for Loraine what "we are doing for Westbrook."

"It will be goodwill," stated Councilman L. J. Taylor.

"Goodwill, the devil!" replied the dissenter. "We have done lots for Loraine and got kicked in the teeth."

"It looks like we would be tying up the hands of future councils."

Manager Snethen advised working out a plan with Loraine in regard to the proposed lake instead of taking the chance of differences between the communities that might cloud the TESCO plant before State Board of Water Engineers in Austin.

Jeff Taylor emphasized to council that he was not opposed to furnishing Loraine with water.

"But I don't think we should tie the hands of future councils," he said, "and I don't think we should act until Loraine actually needs the water—wants the water and the water is available."

"Westbrook did not say anything until they came in and wanted to buy."

Councilmen Adhere
"That's the way it should be with Loraine."

"I just feel that way about it," Jeff Taylor continued, "and we might as well go on and vote."

"I'm not going to change either," answered L. J. Taylor, who made the motion for adoption.

Bud 'Out-Foxes' Press Row By Neat Dodge, Easy Smile

By JOE BOATRIGHT, Record Sports Editor

Bud Wilkinson met West Texas' press here Wednesday night and proved as adept at sidestepping as coaching.

"One of his neatest feats of broken field running came when he sidestepped a quiz concerning recent remarks by University of Texas president."

The UT mentor was quoted as saying a college football team that wins consistently over two or three years sacrifices academic standards.

But Bud, with a shield of good sportsmanship, declined comment on grounds that he had not read the complete text of the speech.

Declines Comment
"I don't feel that I can make a comment, until I have talked with someone who heard the full statement," because, often times, a few words taken out of context can be misconstrued."

But the Oklahoma Coach, in words unsaid, implied that his Sooners, with 39 consecutive victories, could handle their reading, writing and arithmetic as easily as the Longhorns could with their less fortunate grid record.

Before facing the battery of reporters, the handsome 40-year-old coach braced himself with a cup and a half of coffee, black without sugar or cream.

He declined to talk "on the record" when asked if he thought long-term contracts for Southwest Conference coaches would help the schools' grid chances.

And he asked not to be quoted on another question, too.

That one concerned coaches "job-hopping"—leaving schools when they had perhaps two or three years left unfilled on a contract.

Reporters Fire
As he sat in the northwest corner of the plush, new school conference room at Colorado

High, the Oklahoma mentor alternately gave forth with a boyish grin or wrinkling of his sun-tanned brow as reporters fired a barrage of questions.

He had nothing but praise for West Texans on his Oklahoma squads.

Hart Brings Senate Race To Colorado

Jim Hart, candidate for U. S. Senate, visited briefly in Colorado City Thursday while on a campaign tour in West Texas.

The former State Supreme Court justice, and University of Texas chancellor is one of the leading candidates in the special election that will decide a successor to Price Daniel.

Hart, who talked briefly with individual citizens here, was en route to Snyder for a talk there, then appearances throughout.

Construction Hits Full Swing On Nine-Mile Freeway Job Work In January Totals $150,000

Construction is in full swing on the 6.3-mile freeway west of Colorado City with $150,000 worth of building done in January.

"Work for each month will be comparable to that of January," said Ben Wilkinson, resident engineer for the Texas Highway Department.

Cage Brothers Construction of San Antonio, has the $1,840,000 contract for the freeway.

Approximately 145 men are employed on the job with an estimated $35,000 payroll, a spokesman said.

About a million and a half dollars' worth of equipment is in operation.

Freeway Will Mark
Completion of the freeway will mark the first section of interstate highway in this district to be built to ultimate freeway standards, said Wilkinson.

The modern roadway will be 105 feet in width from crown to crown. The present road is 38 feet from crown to crown. There also will be 20 foot service roads on each side.

When completed, the freeway will boast ten large overpass structures and three bridges across Morgan Creek Lake.

More than 10,000 cubic yards of concrete is slated to be poured at a cost of about $500,000. Plans call for excavation of 730,000 yards of dirt.

Largest Contract
"This is the largest contract to be let in the Abilene district which is composed of 13 counties," Wilkinson said.

"Four hundred work days are allowed for the job but it will probably be completed before the time allowed," said Wilkinson.

"Construction," he continued, "will be complete about the last of December."

Work began Jan. 1.

Other Construction
Other highway construction scheduled for this year includes a job to be let in March extending from Big Spring to Marlin county line, which will cost $1,050,000.

A job scheduled in May for rebuilding the old south lane and installing grade separations to bring it to interstate design standards will cost an estimated $1,400,000, Wilkinson said.

July Work
Construction in July will be done on a 17 mile section from Big Spring to Mitchell County line installing grade separations to bring the strip to interstate design standards, he said.

"Cost will be approximately 2,200,000," Wilkinson said, "which will bring the total this year to seven million dollars."

Hutchinson School Has Book Hunt

A book hunt is now in progress by Hutchinson School.

The hunt is being sponsored by the school's student council in conjunction with a project for raising money for a book hospital fund.

Purpose of the project is to secure new or used books and to establish a fund to repair present books, according to Mrs. Benton Cain, student council sponsor.

Mrs. Cain revealed that the approximate 1000 books now in the school library are circulating among 450 students.

The public is invited to contribute either new or old books suitable for children between nine and 12 years, the sponsor said.

The book hunt and money-raising project will continue through education week March 3-8.

IN FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

Western Valentine Banquet Fetes Baptist Church Youth and Guests

Intermediate youth and young people of First Baptist Church and their guests last Thursday evening were honored at a western Valentine banquet in the church dining hall.

Approximately 100 youth and sponsors attended the fete.

Master of ceremonies was James Barber, chairman of the program committee, who was called chief cow puncher. Cowboy thanks was spoken by Rev. Jack Selraig.

Benton Cain, education director for the church, extended the welcome. "Howdy Partners", Jimmy Jones, the playing cowboy, presented accordion solos of western music. Kathleen Wood, pianist, played western music during the meal.

Mrs. H. Jene Steakley presented a reading, "A Cowboys Philosophy".

Principal speaker for the evening was John Ward, music and educational director of Plainview Baptist Church. In his talk, "Round the Bendin' Fire", Ward emphasized the need for every Christian to let his brand show.

Prior to his talk, the speaker and his wife, Mrs. Ward sang several western musical selections.

Western farewell was said by Rev. Selraig.

Carrying out the western valentine motif, a corral was set up at the entrance of the dining hall. H. Jene Steakley and additional "cowhands" welcomed guests.

Red hearts, red and white streamers were suspended from the ceiling. One corner of the room was accented with a campfire, surrounded by saddles and branding irons. Directly behind the speakers table was a hitching post and saddle.

Wagon wheels were placed against the piano. Entrance from the dining hall to the kitchen was resembled a covered wagon.

Table decorations included old-fashioned chimney lamps over red candles, cardboard cowboy and cowgirl dolls set in red styrofoam hearts. Place cards, cut to resemble long horned cattle, were placed in wood which was carved with guests' initials.

Heart shaped programs were marked with miniature lariat and various brands.

Nut cups were filled with valentine candy.

The evening's menu included: roeio winter (roast beef), potatoes in bunk (baked potatoes), ranch style beans, ranger salad (combination salad, western-felish pickles and olives), dude biscuits, branded coffee and tea and cherry roundup (cherry tarts).

Committee chairmen and advisers for the affair were as follows:

Food: Joyce Black, chairman; Howard Cox and Mrs. H. G. Doss, advisers.

Clean-up: Mark Bowers, chairman; Bill Everett and Max Caddell, advisers.

Program: James Barber, chairman; Bill Quimby, advisor.

Reservation: Charles Hubbard, chairman; Mrs. Harold Stephens and Mrs. Bill Quimby, advisers.

Publicity: Don Dodd, chairman; Mrs. B. W. Cain and Ed Rothwell, advisers.

Decorations: Danella Porter, chairman; Mrs. H. Jene Steakley and Mrs. Aelene Morris, advisers.

Don't miss the Westinghouse Laundromat®

SAND TEST

See it on TV! Proof-positive that the Laundromat® is the most efficient washer you can own!

Betty Furness on "Studio One" dumps 2 cups of sand in a Laundromat loaded with towels. Towels come out entirely sand-free after going through the famous New Way to Wash.

THE REASON? Gone is the old-fashioned center-post that bunches clothes and dirt around it, keeps mixing them throughout the wash-and-rinse cycle. Smooth agitators inside the Laundromat wash-basket lift and plunge clothes 50 times a minute. Laundromat itself is thoroughly cleaned, too, like no other washer on the market.

Come into our store and see this test for yourself.

subcommittee on military appropriations knows the importance of modern air travel and transport facilities, met with a City Council and Chamber of Commerce group recently.

The congressman wasted no words in emphasizing that a town was missing its chance, watching a modern world go ahead when that town lacked adequate airport facilities.

He told the group, too, they could go to work to improve Colorado City's air transportation. And he offered assistance in any area where his aid might be appropriate.

The sad part about Congressman Mahon's heart-to-heart talk is the fact he was telling us something we should have realized—something we should have a long, long time ago.

Colorado City is without airport facilities, we are penalizing our town.

We penalize our town because of the plain facts that business and industry need the speed and convenience of air transportation every day of the world.

When our town is without adequate facilities the firms that build our town—ColTex, Cosden, Sun-Oil, Dowell Inc., Halliburton, Shell Pipe Line—are handicapped in their operations. And we miss the opportunity to attract others on their heels.

Our makeshift air strip south of Colorado City has been criticized by business and industry for longer time than we want to admit.

It not only is dirt and without lighting. It is too short for handling the type of planes in which the usual executives or industrial cargo are carried.

And it is a strip that costs Colorado City less than $200 per year. It is a period when air transportation can be worth millions to a community.

We might look around and realize that the towns, 50 years ago, who valued railroad transportation at only $200—those towns aren't breathing today.

It might be the same way with airports.

Spend Day at Ranch

HART—

West Texas to El Paso in the next two days.

"I'm working hard and I think I have a fine chance in the race," the candidate said.

He said that public opinion polls reflect increasing strength in his campaign.

Asked about the proposed election bill now before the Senate that would set up a run-off in the special Senate election, Hart stated:

"I'm glad for a majority to decide upon my candidacy.

"I think an office as important as this—the Senate—should be decided by the most citizens possible."

"But I filed under the law as it is now written and I am ready to accept a decision under that law."

Hart expressed confidence in that his hard-working campaign across the state and his "straight forward" approach to issues will pay off in his election to the Senate.

The candidate has served as a district attorney, special district judge, assistant attorney general in charge of oil and gas division, associate justice of Texas Supreme Court and University of Texas chancellor.

In addition he is Travis County Red Cross chairman, Austin Chamber of Commerce director, Rotary Club director, Texas Fine Arts Association president, Texas Philosophical Society president, Austin Symphony Orchestra board member and member of Austin First Presbyterian Church.

man, grid team. Bud said the squad only played two games during the entire season.

"I just tell the freshmen coaches to teach the boys to run, tackle and block because we may switch their playing positions when they reach the varsity," Bud said.

When asked about his former student, Darrell Royal, now head coach at University of Texas, Bud said:

"Darrell is a wonderful guy, personally, extremely intelligent and a hard worker."

"But he added:

"Being a new coach in the hardest situation to face. Every one's behind you at first, you're paid better than your predecessor, you get more scholarship aid, but if you don't win the first season, the people immediately want to change coaches."

"People must stick with a coach for at least three years to give him a real try," he said, motioning with his massive hand.

A coach comes in, sees the boys in spring practice for 20 days, works with them two weeks prior to season opening and then the boys play for him.

"It's too short a time to really know your boys and know what they can do."

Extols NCAA

Bud said he thought the NCAA was doing a splendid job when they placed schools on probation for extreme recruiting practices.

If a school is placed on probation twice, all your athletic programs must be dropped.

"You notice that none have been placed on probation twice, so evidently it has had a good effect," he said.

Asked if Oklahoma scholarships provided any more than other schools, the Sooner mentor said "definitely not."

"All your scholarships are about the same," he said, "and a boy must maintain a C average in 60 per cent of his work to remain eligible."

Although the No. 1 coach in the nation sidestepped several issues, he was straight forward on one thing.

"The coffee that was being served was really good."

Okay Given For Gulf Pipeline By Commissioners

Gulf Pipeline Company was granted permission to build a pipeline across county roads at the Feb. 11 meeting of the Commissioners Court.

It was approved by the court after a motion was made by J. C. Northcutt and seconded by J. C. Northcutt. It was stipulated that the pipeline should be built in accordance to highway specifications. A contract was signed.

A motion made by Sam Thompson and seconded by J. C. Northcutt to bid for a radio according to the county auditors' requirements was approved by the court.

Appropriations of $8000 were recommended for precinct one, 30 per cent, precinct two, 25 per cent, precinct three, 20 per cent, and precinct four, 25 per cent. Motion for the allocations was made by W. N. Bacon and seconded by Moody Richardson.

Closing Hours, Trips Talked By Committee

Good will trips to neighboring communities—and local store closing hours were the main topics of discussion Tuesday in the Chamber of Commerce Merchants Committee meeting.

The committee, headed by co-chairman Glover Rader and Carl Gary, voted to hold the good will trips to the communities. Local merchants will meet the citizens of the community at dinners, prepared by organizations in those communities.

It will be similar to the trip to Silver conducted by the Chamber two years ago.

A poll will be conducted in the near future on merchants' preference of closing dates for 1957 and store hours.

Holiday closing dates suggested by the committee were New Years, Memorial Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Thanks giving Day and Christmas Day.

Store hours suggested were 8:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. on week days, 8:30 a. m. to 8 p. m. on Saturdays.

The committee voted to hold Dollar Day on the first Monday of each month. For the past two months, it had been held on both Monday and Tuesday.

"I'm working hard and I think I have a fine chance in the race," the candidate said.

He said that public opinion polls reflect increasing strength in his campaign.

Asked about the proposed election bill now before the Senate that would set up a run-off in the special Senate election, Hart stated:

"I'm glad for a majority to decide upon my candidacy.

"I think an office as important as this—the Senate—should be decided by the most citizens possible."

"But I filed under the law as it is now written and I am ready to accept a decision under that law."

Hart expressed confidence in that his hard-working campaign across the state and his "straight forward" approach to issues will pay off in his election to the Senate.

The candidate has served as a district attorney, special district judge, assistant attorney general in charge of oil and gas division, associate justice of Texas Supreme Court and University of Texas chancellor.

In addition he is Travis County Red Cross chairman, Austin Chamber of Commerce director, Rotary Club director, Texas Fine Arts Association president, Texas Philosophical Society president, Austin Symphony Orchestra board member and member of Austin First Presbyterian Church.

Open House Plans Told By National Guard

An open house at the national guard armory will be held 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. Feb. 22 in commemoration of Washington's birthday.

The general public is invited to attend the two-hour program, said Forrest D. Yancy, commander of Battery C.

Rollin Seaton, city manager, will be principal speaker. Equipment will be displayed which will include a 155 self-propelled howitzer, small arms, radio and communications equipment and clothing.

At 8:30 p. m. a candlelight ceremony will be held when a large cake will be cut in commemoration of Washington's birthday.

Yancy pointed out that it will be a division-wide ceremony with 55 cakes scheduled to be cut simultaneously throughout the 49th division.

Refreshments of cold drinks, coffee and doughnuts will be served. Members of the battery will act as guides and Yancy.

"The occasion will serve as a one day recruitment drive with five new members as our goal for Battery C," he said.

District Champ Tiger Quint Socks Colorado High, 77-51

Snyder's cocky Tigers — with one eye on the bi-district game — used the other eye Tuesday night to sink 77 points.

The Tiger cagers, champions of District 3-AAA, whammed the Wolves 77-51 on the shooting efforts of Milton Ham's 26 points in Tiger Gym.

With the win over Colorado High, Snyder makes a clean sweep of the district games and now must face Vernon in bi-district.

Snyder fans in the stands were talking about the possible regional foe, Pecos, quite sure the Tigers would get by Vernon.

Wolves, winners of only one district game this year, made a battle of it for two quarters. But then the Tigers began sharpening their shooting teeth, hitting with incredible accuracy all over the court.

Wolves shot into a small lead after the starting whistle. Jimmy Richardson, Wolves' high scorer with 18 points, flashed in a long one-hand push shot for a 20 advantage.

Richard Compton followed with a driving crisp shot and a 40 lead.

But Snyder's rugged center, Robert Dabbs, came through with a tip-in and two free tosses to tie the count with four minutes gone.

Ham, whose shooting skill took on shades of luck at times, used a fast break to push the Tigers ahead.

Powell Berry, Snyder guard, rammed in a goal and a free toss before Richardson scored for the Wolves for a 6-9 count.

Ronnie Smith, Snyder guard, and Richardson exchanged baskets for a 8-11 mark.

Free throws by Don Black and Jerry Treadwell gave the Wolves four points, placing them behind only three points, 11-14, at the end of the first quarter.

Wolves took over the lead as the second quarter began. Marion Flippin, Wolf center, whipped in a goal. He was fouled on the shot, missed the free toss but grabbed the rebound and scored again. Richardson added another basket for a 17-14 C City lead.

But the pesky Ham stole a Wolf pass and scored, and then seconds later scored on a fast break to shot Snyder into a 18-17 lead.

With four minutes to go in the half, the Tigers began to widen the margin. Ham marking up eight points and Dwayne Prince four for a 36-23 halftime count.

With Dabbs and Ham sinking shots from all over the court, Snyder outscored the Wolves 21 in the third quarter, mashing 23 points through the hoop while the Wolves were squeaking 12 through the net.

A sudden flurry of baskets by Tommy Prichard, Prince and Ham in the last minute of the third quarter handed the Tigers a 59-35 lead.

Wolves held their own with the Tigers in the fourth period, scoring 16 points to Snyder's 18, but the lead piled up in the third quarter was too great to overcome.

Compton, Wolves' leading scorer this season, broke loose for six of his 10-point total in the last quarter after being bottled up in the first three periods.

Prince, the 65 forward, was assigned to guard Compton the first 24 minutes of the game.

Flippin marked up three points in the final period, the same total accounted for by Jerry Treadwell, Wolves' smooth sophomore guard who played the entire game.

He cooled off the final period, chalking up only six points.

Snyder's B-team won a 46-39

Wildcats Leave For State Cage Tourney

D. W. Wallace High School basketball team plays its first game in the state tournament Friday, 11:30 a. m. against an undetermined foe.

Coach W. D. Harris said his team would play the winner of District 7-B, but he didn't know the name of the team.

The 13-man squad left Colorado City Thursday morning for Prairie View.

The Wildcats won two games and lost one in action Saturday. They had been scheduled to play in the Anson tournament but only one other team, Crowell, showed up in addition to Colorado City and the host, Anson. Although only three teams were present, the coaches decided to play several games.

In the first game, Wallace beat Crowell 74-34 and then whipped Anson, 75-67.

Wildcats played Anson again, with majority of the B-teamers seeing action, and lost to Anson 59-56.

Making the trip to the state meet are Ernest Biggers, D. W. Woods, Charles Lindsey, Joe Nathan Christian, Elmer Randle, Clifton Lee, Robert Bracy, Fred Johnson, Billy Jones, L. M. Williams and Melvin Williams.

Billy Smith is assistant to Coach Harris.

Right You Are, Mr. Manager

City Manager Rollin K. Sneath has a way of hitting the nail on the head. Latest example came when Mayor Vance Dickenson of Lorraine discussed with Sneath Lorraine's concern for water rights, if and when, Texas Electric Service Company builds the proposed Champion Creek dam in cooperation with Colorado City.

The city manager expressed confidence that an agreement, suitable to both Lorraine and Colorado City, could be worked out.

"But I don't have a rubber-stamp council," he added.

The statement couldn't have been more true. Councilmen Monday night adopted a resolution declaring Lorraine, when Champion Creek water is impounded, will have the right to purchase water from Colorado City at the time need and availability arises.

However, the resolution drew strong dissent from one councilman.

The resolution appears to be fair and sound—an example of how two communities should attempt to work together for their common good.

For Lorraine, now supplied by water wells, the resolution is assurance that water can be obtained when Champion Creek dam and lake are completed.

The resolution also looks ahead to the possibility that Lorraine may not find it economically feasible, if the need for lake water arises, to build its own treatment plant and install its own pipe line to the lake for raw water. Door is left open, in such a case, for Lorraine to obtain treated water from Colorado City.

At the same time council did not tie the hands of future Colorado City councilmen by specifying rates and other factors which cannot be determined now accurately fairly.

The dissenter, it should be noted, said he was not opposed to providing water for Lorraine. Instead, his opposition was based on theory that, first, a resolution now would bind the hands of future councils and, second, definite commitment should not be made until the lake water is actually needed.

But the resolution, as pointed out previously, does not tie the hands of council arbitrarily to particulars.

It does recognize, however, that Lorraine has a right to be concerned over future water needs.

And it makes plain the fact Colorado City can work in cooperation with that community just as it is doing now to provide water for Westbrook and Silver.

That's the finest thing about the resolution—the cooperation.

Better to work out a coordinate plan here at home in mutual understanding and cooperation rather than appear before the State Board of Water Engineers with separate proposals that could develop into a neighborhood-fuss and jeopardize the entire lake project.

For their foresight in recognizing each other's problem and the need for cooperation, Colorado City and Lorraine officials are due congratulations.

Like City Manager Sneath said, though Colorado City has no rubber-stamp council. And that's healthy, too.

Agriculture Keeps Pace With Industry

By JOHN C. WHITE

Texas agriculture, like that of the nation, stands at a crossroads. And there is little doubt as to which path it will take.

The inevitable trend of progress has had a greater effect on Texas farming than any single phase of our economy, and this trend is continuing.

Although the past quarter-century has been a period of market industrial development in our state, agriculture has kept its prominent place in a growing Texas.

During that time the farm labor force has been halved in size and more than doubled in efficiency. Whereas in 1930 more than 38 per cent of all Texas employment was in agriculture, it was little more than 16 per cent in 1954. Yet production has increased steadily through mechanization and new techniques and farming has grown by nearly 25 million acres since 1930.

The next quarter-century promises to be just as progressive as the last one, but it must be a progress of a different kind. The swallowing up of small farms into larger corporate-type farm operations is not an inevitable part of this progress. This is a trend which must be stopped.

Farming is unique among all occupations in the responsibility involved. He who farms must stay with the land, understand and supply its needs and keep it intact. This can not be done by someone indifferent to the land itself.

The small farmer must stay put to see that proper conservation measures are followed to supply specialized products which are coming into increased demand and to help care for the population growth Texas can expect.

Texas farming brought $21 billion into our economy in 1955. It is expected to increase to $29 billion by 1975. Increased efficiency—efficiency with a heart—will help us to exceed these expectations.

State politics again is making District Attorney Eldon Mahon itchy.

Itchy to run, that is.

The prosecutor cast more than casual glances last year on the state attorney general's race.

But he decided against putting his hat in the ring when Will Wilson, the new attorney general, decided to campaign.

Now, Mahon is studying his prospects for congressional large, an office decided by the votes of all of Texas, not just one congressional district.

Big question mark, of course, is a Colorado City native—Martin Dies, who now is elected to the post.

Dies is a candidate in the special Senate race to decide who succeeds Price Daniel. If he wins, then the congressman-at-large post will be vacant.

And the district attorney—if the prospects are right—may become a candidate.

CONGRATULATIONS DEPT.: Two anniversaries almost have been skipped over without notice.

City Manager Rollin K. Sneath and Chamber of Commerce Manager Bill Quimby this month are starting their second years as citizens here.

Their community service records during the last 12 months emphasize the fact that they are just about the most capable additions to this community in years.

Home isn't so bad, after all, one of our fairer sex realized the other day.

She was preparing to mail an order blank, clipped from an out-of-town newspaper, for an evaporator cooler priced at $144. It looked like a bargain buy, she said, with a time payment plan.

And the lady would have bought the out-of-town cooler, too, except a friend pointed out that the same cooler identical in detail—could be purchased here in Colorado City for $133.

The hometown price did away with carrying charges and shipping rates, too.

Maybe you think the incident is unique. But it isn't.

Over the week end, a "brand name" style coat was advertised in one of our metropolitan papers by a leading department store in Fort Worth for $12.95. And the order blank in the ad probably was answered by more than one West Texas housewife.

But at the same time the same coat—same brand, material and style—was being advertised in the Record and sold here for two dollars less.

Texas Tech is becoming more and more attractive to local students seeking college education.

At last count there were 40 Mitchell County students enrolled at Tech.

MOST AMBITIOUS IN HISTORY

32 Million Dollars Asked For State Spending Program

By VERN SANFORD, Texas Press Association.

Possibility of financing the most ambitious program in state history without new taxes has been put forth by Gov. Price Daniel.

In his budget message to the Legislature Governor Daniel recommended a $32,000,000 increase in state spending during the next two years. More money would go for public school teachers' salaries, judicial salaries, state hospitals and special schools, Prison System, Railroad Commission, State Highway, Public Safety and Insurance Departments, higher education, state employees' retirement, an archives building, old age pensions, aid to handicapped, state advertising, water conservation, highway right-of-way buying, legislative salaries and a state law enforcement commission.

Financing would be on a "little bit here, little bit there" basis. Daniel said he felt legislators might expect some increase in the comptroller's forecast of expected revenue. He also called on the oil industry to work out its bottlenecks to allow for increased oil production. This could bring the state an additional $40,000,000 in the next biennium.

A 10 per cent boost in auto license fees for right-of-way buying was proposed by the governor. He also recommended a study diversion of part of the permanent school fund to the available fund to finance public school costs, and higher tuition to help pay college teachers' more.

And, if after all these, still more money is needed, he proposed a tax of 1/2 cent per 1,000 cubic feet on gas reserves tied up in long-term contracts.

John Q. Speaks

Most of the 35th's significant legislation is now in the committee stage. Committees are required to hold public hearings at which any interested person may appear to say why he's for or against the bill being considered.

In the course of a session controversial measures bring hundreds, even thousands, of citizens to speak their minds at committee hearings.

1. Cutting firemen's hours to 60 in larger cities, 63 in smaller. Firefighters Association is pushing vigorously. Cities say they can't afford it, protest state interference in local affairs.

2. Giving more legal rights to women, another pharisaical bone of contention. Many women's groups are backing bills to abolish the wife's separate acknowledgment on property sales and allow women to convey their separate property without husband's consent.

3. Regulating handling and sale of eggs. House committee approved the bill which would require dealers and wholesalers to "properly label" eggs. Owners of small flocks, not claiming a specific grade for their eggs, would be exempt.

4. A bill requiring the admission of reporters to precinct, county and state political conventions. Approved by Senate Committee. A TPA "Better Government" Bill.

5. More power for the State Highway Department to precinct, county and state political conventions. Approved by Senate Committee. A TPA "Better Government" Bill.

6. Licensing and regulating bill bondsmen. Proponents say it is necessary to stop "tail rattling" and "fee splitting" by lawyers and bondsmen.

7. Raising Legislative salaries to $7,500 a year. Backed by Texas Jaycees, opposed by economy-minded solons and others who a similar constitutional amendment vetoed at the polls several years ago. House committee, nevertheless, approved. Both House and Senate have passed bills updating regulation of livestock feed sales.

Differences in the proposal by Sen. George Moffett of Chillicothe and Rep. Grainger McIlhenny of Wheeler will have to be adjusted.

Basic aim is to require labeling as to contents of foods and closer inspection of manufacturing.

Firm Shut-Down

State agencies have moved to close ICT Insurance Company of Dallas. Described as "hopelessly insolvent," the company is alleged to be $1,500,000 in the red.

On request of the Insurance Commission, Atty. Gen. Will Wilson obtained a temporary court restraining order against business operations.

Officials emphasized the business involved, at casualty company, should not be confused with ICT Life Insurance Co.

Eyes of the world will be on the Texas Railroad Commission hearing Feb. 20 to decide the March allowable.

In the background is an implied threat of federal control if state agencies and industry fail to step up production to supply Western Europe.
