Washington Officials Visit Wildlife Refuge

Austwell--Assistant Interior Secretary Nathaniel Reed saw his first whooping cranes Sunday and was as excited as a kid who just talked to Santa Claus.

"I saw 13 whoopers from the ground and an undetermined number from the air," the assistant secretary for fish, wildlife and parks said after a tour of the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge. "But I saw at least half of the world's population of whooping cranes."

Reed, a tall man with a quick smile and loads of enthusiasm for wildlife and conservation, was told by Robert Brown, refuge manager, that 47 adult whoopers and eight young have arrived so far. About 60--the entire whooper population--are expected to winter here this year.

Some people say the expensive federal effort to save the whoopers is a waste of money and the birds should be allowed to become extinct if they can't survive on their own. Reed disagrees strongly.

He said the same negative argument had been made about saving the Everglades in his home state of Florida.

"If they begin giving up on the Everglades and the whooping cranes, they are going to begin giving up on a lot of other things," he said. They (the whoopers) are expensive, but they're necessary because this is sort of a testing ground and will decide what kind of country we will be 50 or 100 years from now."

Before going to Washington, D. C., Reed served as a member of the Florida Pollution Control Commission and was first chairman of the state's new Department of Air and Water Pollution Control in 1969. He supported establishment of a system of aquatic preserves to protect submerged land in Florida and fought against the Everglades Jet Port project.

After touring the wildlife refuge Sunday morning Reed flew by small plane along the Gulf Coast as far as Matagorda Air Force Base and then back to

School Board Holds Meeting

At the School Board meeting Nov. 8, the trustees took the following actions:

L. Approved the minutes of the regular meeting held on October 12.

2. Approved regular monthly bills as presented.

3. Received and studied the independent audit for the school district for the fiscal year beginning September 1, 1970, and ending August 31, 1971. Norman Robertson of the auditing firm of Harris, Robertson and Company was present to present the audit with explanations of all financial transactions during the fiscal year. After considerable study by the Board, the audit was unanimously approved as presented. It was noted that per capita cost per pupil was consistent with costs of other schools in this area, said costs being $707. There has been a gradual increase over the past several years due to inflation just as cost of living has risen in all areas in the economy. Also, it was noted that the ratio of net bonded debt to assessed valuations was favorable, being only 1.83%. The legal limit is 10% of assessed valuation.

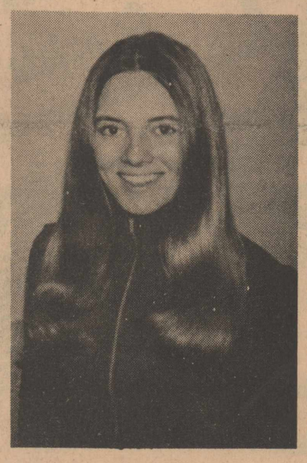

4. A textbook committee for the school year was appointed. This committee will study new books up for adoption and make recommendations of its selections.

5. A contract with Thomas Y. Pickett and Company was approved authorizing said company to evaluate for tax purposes certain properties including oil and gas, pipe lines, gas lines and systems, refineries, gasoline plants, etc. This is the same type of work this company has been doing for the county and the school district for many years.

6. The Board discussed the re-classification of the school in the University Interscholastic League from 2A to 3A, said classification made due to increase in number of pupils in high school. The inadequate seating for football games with the larger schools was discussed at length with no action taken at this time.

Mary Harrist D.A.R. Good Citizen Girl

Miss Mary Frances Harrist, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Harrist, was selected as the D.A.R. Good Citizen girl of the graduating class of 1972.

The senior class elected three senior girls who possess to an outstanding degree the four qualities of dependability, service, leadership, and patriotism. From these three girls, the faculty selected Miss Harrist to be the D.A.R. Good Citizen.

Turkey Shoot Set for Nov. 21

The American G. I. Forum will hold its annual turkey shoot Sunday, Nov. 21 beginning at 8 a.m., on Highway 35 South at the G. I. Forum Hall.

There will be three firing ranges, one for 50 yards, one for 75 yards and one for 100 yards. Either .22 long or short ammunition may be used. Contestants may bring their own .22 rifles or use rifles furnished by the Forum. No scopes on rifles.

Sandwiches, cold soft drinks and beer will be offered for sale.

Mobile Home Permits Are Denied by City

The City Council Tuesday denied four applications to locate mobile homes within the city limits, concurring with a recommendation of the Planning and Zoning Commission.

This action follows recent passage of an ordinance forbidding the location of mobile homes within the city limits except in approved mobile home parks.

The Council also followed a recommendation of the Planning and Zoning Commission and amended the ordinance as follows:

Added a paragraph to read, "Mobile homes, motor homes, travel trailers, pickup campers, towable wheeled campers and converted school buses are not to be permitted to be located within the corporate city limits for private occupancy unless located in an established mobile home or travel trailer park," and added:

"Unoccupied travel trailers, pickup campers dismounted, motor homes, towable wheeled campers and converted school buses may be stored in an approved storage area."

In other actions, the Council:

--Accepted the resignation Dec. 31 of night watchman Jack Baird.

--Granted municipal judge J. Paul Rogers a paid leave of absence in December for a vacation and appointed attorney David B. Connery, Jr., to serve in his place during the month.

--Granted Astro Amusements Co. a permit at no charge to set up a carnival for 14 days just south of the Ski Basin. Some of the proceeds are to go to the Aransas County Junior Deputy Sheriffs organization. The Councilmen agreed that in the future they expected requests for such permits to be made before the operators moved in and started to set up, which was not the case this time.

--Voted to buy a new radio receiver for a police car to get state calls.

--Expressed appreciation to Bob Eschberger of Johnson's Drug Store for a contribution to the police department to purchase a narcotic test kit to check drugs found on suspects.

--Accepted the resignation of Patrolman Kenneth Blasingame who wanted to move back to Houston.

--Approved the erection by the School District of two signs at Rockport Elementary School to state, "No Parking. Bus Loading Zone."

Two Derelict Rigs Removed

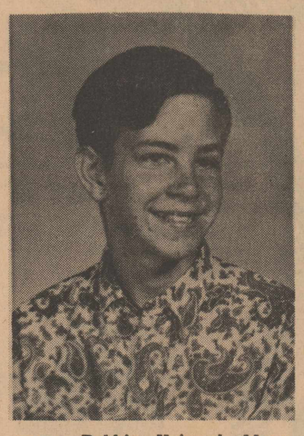

Two of three derelict oil drilling rigs which have been moored on state property in Red Fish Bay south of Rockport and near Palm Harbor and City-by-the-Sea have been towed away in compliance with orders from the Texas Attorney General's office. A third rig remains to be moved prior to the Thanksgiving Day deadline set by the attorney general.

One rig was reported to be on its way to the Galveston Ship Yard and the other has been moved to nearby Cove Harbor. An attempt was made last week to tow away the third rig but it was reported that repairs must be made to the barge hull before it can be floated.

Residents of the area who consider the derelict drilling rigs, from which all machinery had been removed, an eyesore and possible threat to navigation, have been attempting to have them removed for many months. A recent appeal to Robert Armstrong, chairman of the Texas General Land Office, by the Palm Harbor Property Owners Association resulted in a request from Armstrong to Attorney General Crawford C. Martin for action against the owners. Martin's office ordered the owners to remove the rigs from state property by Thanksgiving Day or face court action.

Cancer Society Directors Meet

The Board of Directors of the Aransas County unit of the American Cancer Society met Nov. 12 at Corky's Restaurant. Roy Smith, vice president and campaign chairman presided.

Mrs. E. T. Busch, Service and Rehabilitation chairman, reported that she had taken a cancer patient to John Sealy Hospital in Galveston for a regular 6 months check-up. She also reported that a total of 15 cancer patients had been helped this past month with transportation, home visitation, gift items, dressings or loan closet equipment. Mrs. Busch said she needed a volunteer to take a patient to Galveston Feb. 2, 1972, and if anyone is interested for them to get in contact with her soon at 729-6782. Mr. Smith reported on the District Campaign workshop he attended in Refugio.

It was announced that Joe Randow, Public Education chairman, would have a meeting of his committee Nov. 23 at 1 p.m. in his office. He asked that anyone interested in helping with the educational committee should contact him and make plans to attend this meeting.

Mrs. Thomas E. McArdle III, memorial chairman, reported that $650 was donated this past year to the memorial and honor gift program, but that since Sept. 1, $300 has been contributed.

Tough Pipeline Job Described

The story of how a 190-mile pipeline was constructed through the jungles and over the Andes mountains in Columbia, South America, by the Texas Pipe Line Co., was told in words and pictures at a luncheon meeting of Rotary Club last week at Corky's Restaurant.

Roy Olbrich, chief engineer and general manager of the pipeline company, presented a color motion picture of the project and added his own comments on the history--making construction job. Involved was construction of new roads through the jungle before heavy equipment could be moved in and the pipe line started.

Rain, almost a daily occurance, was one of the most difficult obstacles encountered, according to Olbrich. In some areas rainfall totaled 20 feet a year, and mud slides were common almost everywhere. Often it was necessary to link two bulldozers together with chains to prevent loss of equipment in mud slides.

A large fleet of helicopters was used to ferry pipe and other construction material, as well as workmen, to areas that could not be reached by road. Without helicopters the pipeline could not have been built, according to Olbrich. The new pipeline will carry oil from newly discovered fields in the interior for shipment by sea.

Olbrich reported his company has started construction of a larger and longer pipeline in nearby Equador. This one will be 300 miles long and include pipe up to three feet in diameter.

Asked about possible nationalization of the pipelines, Olbrich said his company was hopeful and optimistic.

Rockport-Fulton's Fighting Pirates will play the Refugio Bobcats in a return match game in Victoria tomorrow night for the Bi-District title and the right to advance in the Class AA football playoffs. The game will be at 8 p.m. in Victoria's Memorial Stadium. The Pirates by virtue of a toss will be the home team and the Rockport-Fulton fans will sit on the press box side. The gates will open at 6:30 p.m. for those who are eager to place themselves on the fifty-yard line.

Refugio will enter the contest as the pre-season pick as the 1971 State Champions, and will be ranked at least as the No. 2 team in Class AA--the Bobcats trailed the number one team, Eastland, in last week's polls by a mere 4 points in the voting, and after a 70-14 crushing over Yorktown last Friday night, the gap might be closed even more. Refugio is the defending member of the 1970 State Co-Champs in the playoffs this year, as Iowa Park, the other Co-Champ, moved up to Class AAA this year.

The Bobcats feature a rock-hard defense which has allowed only 64 points this year, and an offense which has mounted 285 points in nine games, for 31.7 points a game. The offense depends a great deal on deception and the speed of Carl Green and Larry Bonner.

The Pirates will also bring a tough, clutch defense into the game, having given up only 53 points for the season thus far, and only 19 points in the first half, twelve of which were scored by Refugio in the 12-8 victory over the Pirates earlier in the year. The Pirates have gained five shutout games where the opponents have not scored.

The Pirate offense will display the passing of Craig Thornton, and the hard running of Sudden Sam Morgan, Glyn Landrum, and Mark Wright.

Square Dance Well Attended

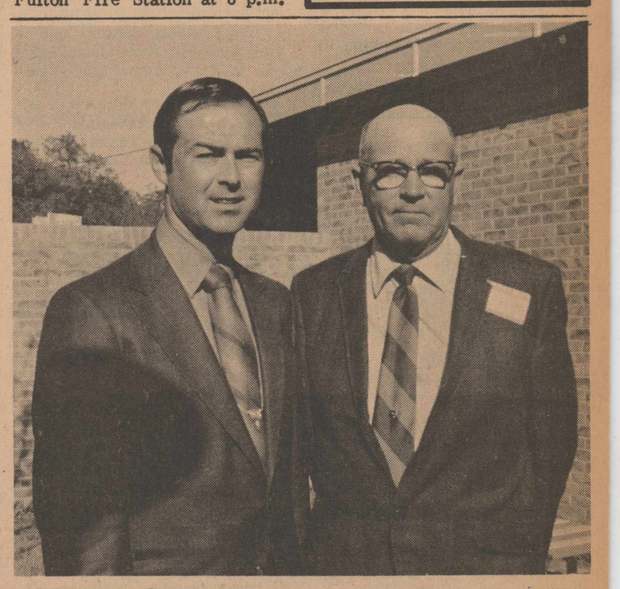

More than 150 visiting square dancers from San Antonio, Austin, Dallas, Houston, New Braunfels, Corpus Christi, Beeville and other Texas towns plus a couple from Canada and another from Florida enjoyed a great weekend of square dancing here November 12, 13 and 14.

Following the Saturday night square dance, the visitors were treated to a serving of smoked oysters and boiled shrimp, prepared and served at the square dance hall by club members. Many of the visitors had not tasted oysters prepared in this manner and a few had never before eaten oysters.

The group declared this 4th Annual Fall Frolic their biggest and best to date and booked for the second week in November, 1972.

The Paws & Taws Club members want to express appreciation to the city patrolman who was so helpful to a group from San Antonio that arrived late Friday night. It is courtesy such as was shown to these people that builds good will for our area.

South Texas standouts

Lineman of the week

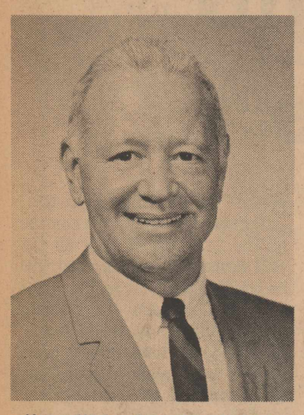

JERRY PICTON, Rockport — Picton, (6-3, 190) is a senior center and defensive end for the District 30-2A champion Pirates. One of only two players on the Rockport team to start offensively and defensively, Picton can be counted on for maximum efforts in every game. He is recognized as one of the finest blocking centers in the area. In his team's 42-0 win over Calallen last week, Picton turned in another exceptional blocking performance and made six solo tackles defensively, as well as assisting in numerous other tackles. Other outstanding linemen last week included Woodsboro's Johnny Martinez ("He's so big and quick, there's not much you can do to stop him," is the way one coach described Martinez); Lyford's Oscar Simo, who was in on 20 tackles; Premont's Benny Villegas and Ricky Cannon, Gregory-Portland's Darwin Baucum, Louis Santos and Pud Meier, Agua Dulce's Nick Gonzalez, Riviera's Mike Turcotte and Augustine Garcia, Robstown's Jeff Hoffstadt, Refugio's David Heard and Raymondville's Saul Garza.

FTA Convention Attended by 400

Approximately 400 students, representing 19 schools, attended the Future Teachers of America District III Fall Convention here Saturday.

Dr. Walter Kerr, Director of the National Youth Foundation with headquarters in Tyler and internationally recognized as one of the foremost youth leaders of our time, was the keynote speaker for the occasion. He spoke on the challenging topic, "Unity Through Understanding," and was introduced to the delegation by President Diana Moore of the local chapter.

Assistant Principal Pat Padgett gave the welcoming address and Historian Kaye Lauer gave the invocation. Boy Scouts Bruce Barre, Davey Joe Setterbo, Lee Tijerina and Michael Tijerina of Troop 280 presented the colors.

Following the refreshment break, 13 choir members sang a popular selection of numbers for entertainment.

Officials Visit—

Rockport. He said he was very happy to see the good state of estuaries and areas for birds.

"I believe this is the richest area outside the Everglades for water fowl," he said of the Coastal Bend.

But the assistant secretary expressed concern about dredging operations along the coast. "There is a continuing worry about water quality and dredging sites," he said.

Reed also is very concerned about the threat to the sea turtle population of the Gulf and Pacific Ocean. Recently national attention has been focused on the importation from Mexico of turtle skins.

The Gladys Porter Zoo at Brownsville recently asked the secretary of the interior to put all sea turtles on the federal rare and endangered species list.

Reed said Sunday that the imports were approved by the Mexican government. He said he has ordered "a full scale investigation" of the turtle skin trade and his staff is working on it now.

The Atlantic Ridley turtle is on the federal endangered list but the Pacific Ridley is not. "You can't tell the difference (between the two types) when they are made into shoes."

Reed said he believes he is authorized to act to save a species "before it gets to the brink of extinction."

Accompanying Reed on his visit here were W. O. Nelson of Albuquerque, N. M., regional director of the Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife; Gen. James. U. Cross, executive director of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department; Ian G. Purves of Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada; and John D. Parker, of Lufkin, national trustee of Ducks Unlimited.

Reed left for Washington, D. C., Sunday afternoon.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Refusal to Work

Out of work? To millions of people in that predicament, unemployment compensation has been a Godsend. But in order to collect those weekly checks, you have to be willing to take another job if one turns up.

This raises problems. How willing do you have to be? If the job is good but the hours are bad, must you accept anyhow—or lose your right to compensation?

Generally speaking, the law makes reasonable allowance for hardship cases. For example:

An unemployed woman was offered a job on the night shift at a nearby factory. When she refused to take it, her unemployment compensation was cut off.

But in a court hearing, she told the judge that she would have had to walk home in the dark through a tough neighborhood—and that she had been terrorized twice by nocturnal assailants.

The judge decided that her refusal to take the job was justified, and ordered her compensation payments reinstated.

That does not mean, however, that you can wait serenely until the perfect job comes along. Another case involved a restaurant worker who, accustomed to working from 6 a.m. to 3 p.m., turned down a job that started two hours later in the day.

"Frankly," he explained, "it's just too hard for me to change my hours. I'm used to the old way."

But this time, a court denied his right to unemployment compensation. He was out of work, noted the court, more by choice than by necessity.

Suppose a job that is offered would create religious conflicts. A number of cases have arisen involving Seventh-Day Adventists who were not willing to work on Saturday.

Almost invariably, the courts have accepted this as a legitimate reason for rejecting a job, with no effect on the person's right to collect unemployment compensation.

"Work which requires one to violate his moral standards," said one court, "is not suitable work."

Jack Horton Is Honored

Jack Horton spent a pleasant weekend in San Marcos where he attended Homecoming at his old alma mater, Southwest Texas State University.

This was the 50th anniversary of the undefeated football team of 1921. At halftime of the Homecoming game, the members of the 1921 team and their coach, now retired, were called to the field for a special honor.

Approximately 12 of the original squad, including Horton, were present.

Horton also saw many friends, not only from San Marcos, but also from Pasadena and Rockport.

Audubon Society Fears Danger To Sea Life

Officials of the National Audubon Society reiterated their opposition here Nov. 11 to an oil company's proposal to dredge a channel to a drilling site in Laguna Madre north of Bird Island, a sanctuary of the Audubon Society.

Audubon Society officials gathered at the Sea Gun Inn for a week-long workshop to discuss priorities for 1972. The group was led by Dr. Elvis J. Stahr, former secretary of the Army, and now president of the National Audubon Society.

Spokesmen said they would not object to the drilling itself, if it is done while the birds are away from the island, but are concerned about damage to aquatic life from the dredging. Dredging takes out part of the basic food chain, commented John Anderson, Sharon, Conn., director of the Sanctuary Department of the Audubon Society. He, Alexander Sprunt, research director; and John L. Spinks, Jr. of Austin, southwest regional representative, set out the views of the Society.

McMoran Exploration Co. of Dallas holds valid state leases to four submerged tracts in Laguna Madre, all within the boundaries of the Padre Island National Seashore.

McMoran has applied to the Army Corps of Engineers for a drilling permit to dredge a channel from the Intracostal Waterway to a point about 1,000 feet north of Bird Island where several endangered species of birds, including the white pelican.

The Audubon Society, the Parks and Wildlife Department and the U. S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife have filed protests. The Corps of Engineers is holding up the permit because of the objections.

On Nov. 5 those concerned met with State Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, whose offices leased the tracts, to discuss alternatives. McMoran proposed to move to a drill site about 2,000 feet north of the island but rejected as impracticticable a suggestion to slant drill drom Padre Island. There the matter was left for the time being.

McMoran has said it can complete the well within 45 days and have the heavy equipment out before the birds begin returning to the island. The company is ready to drill now. The birds will not return until early spring, according to Sprunt.

Sprunt said the Audubon Society's opposition to dredging is based on the long-range view that the continued dredging in the public waterways will have disastrous effects. One channel, such as the one proposed, probably would not have a measurable effect, he added, because the birds feed as far down as Baffin Bay.

Bird Island is the nesting area for the only coastal white pelican colony in existence, he said.

Spinks commented that the continued dredging of "a portion here and a portion there," would ultimately have a significant impact not only to fish and wildlife but to "people and economics."

McMoran proposes to dredge a channel to reach the drill site because the water is too shallow to barge in heavy equipment.

The Audubon Society officials commented that there appear to be reasonable alternatives to dredging -- either directional drilling or flying in equipment. "While these methods are more expensive they are cheaper in the long run," Anderson commented. --Caller-Times.

"Look at Tomorrow"

One may stand on Alaska's Little Diomede Island and look across the strait to Big Diomede Island, which belongs to the Soviet Union. This is really "looking at tomorrow" since the International Date Line passes through Bering Strait between these two islands.

Slow Start For Duck Hunters

Austin--Duck hunters from across the state are reporting poor shooting, and things aren't expected to get better until some really nasty weather pushes the birds south across the Red River, according to Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials.

Hunters in Northeast Texas report that the few and scattered ducks are flying high, and generally good weather in the area has kept boaters, water-skiers and fishermen on the lakes. This sort of activity has been spooking most of the ducks out of range.

On the Murphree Wildlife Management Area hunters had fair success on the first day of the public hunt there. The 164 hunters who showed up killed 700 ducks.

Things weren't so ducky down the coast. One 90-member hunter's club in the Rockport area reported killing only 172 ducks during the first week of hunting.

Hunters are reported to be disappointed in the poor showing since most of them have a season under their belts with which to get the hang of the point system to determine bag limits.

Hunters may have one to 10 ducks in the aggregate based on the following 100 plus system.

100-point ducks-canvasback ducks and red-head ducks.

90-point ducks-mallard hens, New Mexican ducks, black ducks, wood ducks and hooded merganser ducks.

20-point ducks - mallard drakes, mottled ducks, pintail hens and ring-necked ducks.

10-point ducks-all other species except black-bellied tree ducks and fulvous tree ducks.

The daily bag limit is reached when the point value of any duck taken is added to the total point value of all ducks already taken that day reaches or exceeds 100 points.

One fully feathered wing must remain attached to dressed ducks while being transported between the place taken and the personal abode of the possessor or between the place taken and a commercial preservation facility.

THE '40s LOOK is today, as exemplified in this kicky floral print design by Gayle Kirkpatrick. In challis with peplumed jacket and bias-cut skirt, the twin-printed suit puts grace back into style.

Get-Acquainted Party a Success

Last Monday night the Rockport-Fulton Tourist Association held its first planned activity at the Paws and Taws Building. Purpose was to encourage tourists to get acquainted, as well as to give suggestions for other planned activities.

Blackie Hardy did an excellent job as master of ceremonies after a short welcome speech by association president Joe Lister.

Corinne Crabb gave a short talk on the excellent facilities at Aransas County Library and encouraged everyone to make full use of the library.

Juanita Wagley asked square dance members to give a demonstration, and Blackie Hardy taught a number of tourists some of the basic steps.

Everyone had a nice time. Refreshments were served.

Thanks go to entertainment committee members Mary McKnight (Reef Motel, Fulton) and Pat Loflin (Bay Shore Courts, Fulton).

OUTDOORS IN TEXAS

BY VERN SANFORD

Where and how one fishes the Texas surf depends very much on the time of the year.

In the spring and summer when speckled trout are usually plentiful in the inshore Gulf waters, the surf-caster has to cast out to reasonably deep water. In the fall of the year when the big bull redfish are going full bore, the best surf fishing is often in water just a few feet deep.

Clear water is a must for speckled trout fishing, and along the surf fine trout action can be had by wading out waist deep and then casting seaward. In a true sense this is not surf fishing, for to have clear water the Gulf must be calm. That means an absence of waves or surf.

The wader who goes out waist deep and then casts seaward plunks his bait or lure in water approximately six or seven feet deep. Early in the morning and on days with heavy overcast skies, the speckled trout often roam just a few feet below the surface. To be successful catching fish that high up, an angler—more often than not—must use a float.

When the sun warms surface waters, the best speckled trout fishing is generally on the bottom. Then the angler must fish without a float, or rig it in such a manner that the bait almost reaches the bottom.

When fall rolls around and the bull redfish invade the surf, the days are few and far between when the surf angler can wade out waist deep. The water is rarely calm enough for that. Not only that, but the area where the water is waist deep is often the very zone where the big redfish roam. These fish love to range into the sloughs and cuts that run parallel to the beach. This is where churning waves and currents swirl the bottom and loosen the marine life that reds so love to eat.

Naturally with breaking waves and strong currents the water will be quite sandy in the fall. This, however, is the kind of water the surf redfish angler wants. When surf waters are clear in the fall, the redfish move well offshore and out of reach of the surf caster.

There is another major difference between spring-summer fishing and that found in the fall. The spring-summer fishing for speckled trout dictates light tackle. A good springy rod with a free spool casting reel or a spinning reel is necessary if artificial lures are used. If the angler decides to go with live shrimp—a really choice bait for specks—light tackle is a must since heavy weights only defeat the purpose by severely limiting the action of the live shrimp.

Heavy tackle is a must for the redfish runs. Stout gear is needed in order to cast out terminal tackle that often includes a sinker weighing four or more ounces. And then heavy tackle is a must since those big redfish generally run in the 25 to 40 pound class.

Tigers, Hammerhead Sharks Are Recorded

Austin -- A 760-pound tiger shark caught off the Galveston jetties July 3 has been confirmed as a state record upon examination of the fish's jawbone by Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologists.

Ken Higginbotham of Texas City landed the 12-foot, 1-inch long shark on 130-pound test line. The shark's girth was 69 1/2 inches.

The fish filled one of the "open" record categories established by the Texas Game Fish Records Committee of the department. When the committee took the responsibility for keeping fish records, a number of fish species had no established record.

Sharks, by individual species, are considered by the committee on merit to determine if a new category is to be established.

Another new record --although one which is likely to be short-lived -- is a 307-pound hammerhead shark caught by James W. Gorman of San Antonio, Aug. 15 off Port Aransas. The 10-foot, 1-inch hammerhead was landed on a 130-pound test line after a 48-minute battle. The front half of a 20-pound kingfish was the bait.

The new hammerhead fills a void in the record book just as did Higginbotham's tiger shark. The hammerhead record may be the first to fall, however, as there have been numerous reports of hammerheads in excess of 300 pounds being taken along the Texas coast.

Pirates Cinch District Title With 42-0 Win Over Calallen

Rockport-Fulton scored 22 points in the first quarter and added 20 more in the fourth period to gain a 42-0 victory over Calallen last Friday night in Calallen.

Riding the wave of turnovers by Calallen, the Pirates scored the first three times they had the ball, and on all three occasions the defense was responsible for setting up the scores.

Calallen ran only five plays on their first possession before a snap from center on fourth down sailed over the punter's head and he was nailed on the four-yard line. On the Pirates' first play, halfback Glyn Landrum dashed over for the TD. Quarterback Craig Thornton found tight end Clay Gillis all alone in the end zone for a pass reception and two points.

On the first play following the kickoff, the Pirates Jerry Picton fell on a Wildcat fumble to put the Pirates at the door again on the Wildcat 15. Six plays later, Thornton went over from the one for the score. On the points after attempt, Thornton again threw to Gillis for the two points, making the score 16-0 with only five minutes gone in the game.

The Wildcats were again forced to fumble and the Pirates took possession on the 27 of Calallen. In only four plays the Pirates scored again with Sam Morgan going over from the one. The points after were no good.

Later in the second quarter the Wildcats mounted an 18-play drive and marched to the Pirate one, but with a brilliant goal line stand, the Pirates kept their opponents from crossing the goal and the Pirates took possession with only 33 seconds remaining in the half.

In the third quarter the Pirates also were riddled with fumbles, giving up two loose footballs to the Wildcats, and the third quarter was scoreless.

In the closing minutes of the third period, Calallen used a quick-kick to move the ball out of their own territory and the ball went dead on the Pirates own 7-yard line. Sparked by darting runs by halfback Mark Wright, the Pirates moved down the field to the Wildcat 34. Two plays later after the teams had switched ends of the field at the quarter, halfback Joe Pina fired through a hole provided by Picton, V. K. Dullye and Bob Gillis to score on a 25-yard scamper. The try after was no good.

It was nearly a repeat of the first half as the Wildcats fumbled two plays after the kickoff and the Pirates took over on the Calallen 22. In a matter of three plays, halfback Wally Sanford found a similar opening that Pina had found and streaked 11 yards for the touchdown. Joe Dominguez, filling in for Thornton, passed to Sam Morgan for the two points to bring the score to 36-0 in favor of the Pirates.

Calallen received the ensuing kickoff but were forced to go into punt formation on fourth down, at which point Drew Carlin crashed through and blocked the attempt and chased the ball down on the Wildcat one-yard line. From that point Dominguez squeezed over for the last Pirate score.

Picton, named as the Caller-Times "Lineman of the Week", was one of the stalwarts on the Pirate defensive team along with outstanding individual performances by all of the defenders, in particular Travis Bailey who led in tackles from his linebacker position.

Pirates JV Lose 14-0 To Calallen

Rockport - Fulton's Junior Varsity fell only 14 points shy of winning the District championship as they fell to Calallen 14-0 to allow the Wildcats to claim the title. The Pirates finished the season with a 4-3 record, while the Wildcats finished the season at 8-1, but both teams were 4-0 in district play preceeding the game.

The Pirates were again led by the running of halfback Rickey McLester who gained 198 yards in 25 attempts. The game made the seventh straight in which McLester had gone over the 100-yard mark in rushing. McLester gained a total of 1171 yards in seven games.

Despite some fine defensive performances, especially by linebackers Danny Cox and Bob Mundine, the Pirates gave the Wildcats the ball in Pirate territory many times, and on two occasions the Wildcats scored.

The Pirates got as far as the Calallen 17, but the chance was fumbled away.

Frosh Lose 14-0

The Pirate Freshmen lost their chance to win the District championship by the score of 14-0 to the Calallen Freshmen. The Wildcats used a long punt return and a one-yard plunge to score two second half TD's to stop the Pirates. Arturo Garcia was the leader on offense and defense for the Pirates, along with Sammy Martinez.

Stuff Your Turkey With Seafood

Austin--Don't mess with tradition. Turkey and Thanksgiving go together, and that's that.

But if you were to try a variation on the theme with the turkey's stuffing, you'd probably be forgiven, especially if you used the recipes for oyster or shrimp stuffing offered by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Sure, those family stuffing recipes handed down from generation to generation are hard to beat, but seafood stuffings have a lot going for them too.

Both oysters and shrimp are in season this time of year so you'll probably come up with some quality delicacies.

The oysters you buy should be packed in a clear liquid. The closer the liquid looks to egg whites, the better.

The shrimp should be firm and meaty and smell fresh.

When your family is through stuffing themselves on the stuffing, remove the remainder from inside the bird and store it separately in the refrigerator. This allows the bird and the stuffing to cool faster and lessens the possibility of spoilage.

Try one of the following recipes for your Thanksgiving feast this year, and maybe you'll start your own family tradition.

OYSTER CORNBREAD STUFFING

1 can (12 ounces) oysters
1 cup chopped celery
1 cup chopped onion
1/4 cup butter or margarine
3-1/2 cups toasted cornbread cubes
1/2 cup chicken broth
1 teaspoon poultry seasoning
1 teaspoon sage

Drain oysters. Cook celery and onion in butter until tender. Add oysters and cook three to five minutes or until the edges begin to curl. Combine all ingredients and mix thoroughly. Makes approximately four cups stuffing, enough for a four-pound ready-to-cook bird.

STUFFING FOR POULTRY

For 5 - 9 pound bird---2 times stuffing recipe.
For 10 - 15 pound bird---3 times stuffing recipe.
For 16 - 20 pound bird---4 times stuffing recipe.
For 21 - 25 pound bird---5 times stuffing recipe.

SHRIMP STUFFING

1 pound shrimp fresh or frozen
1/2 cup chopped celery
1/4 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup butter or margarine
2 cups herb-seasoned stuffing mix
1/2 cup chopped macadamia nuts
1/4 cup hot milk
1 egg, beaten

Thaw frozen shrimp. Peel shrimp. Remove sand veins and wash. Cut large shrimp in half. Cook celery, onion, and shrimp in butter until vegetables are tender. Combine all ingredients and mix thoroughly. Makes approximately four cups stuffing, enough for a four-pound ready-to-cook bird.

C of C Happenings

Furnishing refreshments this week is Itschner Realty Co. New member is Kleine's Rattlesnake Point Fishing Camp, Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Kleine, Jr., owner.

The Chamber of Commerce received the following letter from Mrs. Hudson Ruff of Denton:

November 8, 1971

Dear Friend-

This is to thank you very, very much for sending literature about Rockport to me last week.

We had two perfect days. My grandson-12-went out on the Marlin Queen and caught a 4 pound angel fish. My grandaughter - 8 - loved to play in the surf and gather sea shells. She was also fascinated by the Marine Biological aquarium.

We were fortunate in seeing the whoopers, a roseate spoon bill, alligators, wild turkeys, deer, and a herd of javelinas at the Refuge. Saturday night fishing at the Copano Bay causeway was fascinating and the norther blew in while we were there.

Now the children want to come down Christmas during teacher's workshop in January, and next summer.

Again, thank you for your help.

(I'm a birder--So I had a wonderful time.)

Sincerely,

Vermilde Ruff,(Mrs. Hudson Ruff)

Earlier this month the Chamber of Commerce prepared and placed in the Minneapolis Star-Tribune an eight-column inch display ad illustrating and describing the attractions of the Rockport area for vacations and for year-round living. At the bottom of the ad was the suggestion that people write to the Chamber of Commerce at Rockport for more information about accomodations, prices, etc. So far, 44 persons have written for detailed information.

A warm welcome is extended to two new members. First to Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy D. Anders, owners and operators of Anders Enco Service Station, located at 919 Liberty St., corner of Highway 35. And then to Mr. and Mrs. Clyde T. Fuller of 327 Fair Avenue, San Antonio, new non-resident members. Mr. and Mrs. Fuller have a vacation home in the area.

Seven ladies of First Presbyterian were hostesses: Mrs. Van Morgan, chairman and Mrs. Frances Bailey, Mrs. Marjorie Small, Mrs. Johnnie Vermillion, Mrs. Peggy Holmgren, Mrs. Lucille Little and Mrs. Mildred Hatley. Each guest was greeted at the door, given a name tag, then served delicious sandwiches, cookies, coffee and punch.

Mrs. Hugg, for a number of years a Sunday School teacher at First Methodist Church in Corpus Chrisit, is a gifted speaker with much charm and wit. She gave highlights of work accomplished by the Corpus area church women and many suggestions for similiar projects that can be done in the Aransas County area.

Forty-six ladies attended the meeting and it is hoped that many more church women will be able to attend the second meeting to be held January 11, 1972 at First United Methodist Church.

MAKE IT A HOLIDAY WITH OYSTER STEW

Austin -- How long since you've make a buttery, hot kettle of oyster stew for your family? Never? Shame on you! Oysters are an excellent choice for your menu because they are a high protein food, rich in copper, iron, iodine and other essential minerals.

The warning to only eat oysters in months that have an "R" in them (September through April) is a holdover from the days of poor refrigeration and transportation. It was unwise to eat oysters during the summer months.

Now there are wholesome oysters available all through the year. But the peak harvest is just beginning off the Gulf coast of Texas, and that means an abundant supply for Texans and their neighbors.

Traditionally, oyster stew is made of oysters, milk and butter. Try this newer version that is special enough for holidays and simple enough for a family supper.

If you would like other free receipe send a postcard with your name and address to: Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, John H. Reagan Building, Austin, Texas 78701.

HOLIDAY OYSTER STEW

2 cans (12 oz. eac.) oysters
2 slices bacon, chopped
1/3 cup chopped onion
1 can (10 1/4 oz.) frozen condensed cream of potato soup
4 cups oyster liquid and half & half cream
1 - 1/4 teaspoons salt
dash white pepper
chopped parsley

Drain oysters, reserving liquid. Fry bacon until crisp. Remove bacon from fat. Cook onion in bacon fat until tender. Add soup, oyster liquor, cream and seasonings; heat, stirring occasionally. Add bacon and oyster; heat for three to five minutes longer or until edges of oysters begin to curl. Sprinkle with parsley. Serves six.

Mrs. Bill Wendell and Hub Stewart were in Baton Rouge, last week where they visited friends. They also visited Mrs. Doug Smith in New Orleans.

MENTAL HEALTH MATTERS

Bertram S. Brown, M.D.
Director
National Institute of Mental Health

Volatile Substances

Many volatile liquids produce an intoxicated state when inhaled, and, unfortunately, young children and adolescents have experimented with this method of distorting consciousness.

The magnitude of the problem of sniffing and abusing these substances is difficult to determine. In large cities, a few thousand cases come to the attention of school and other authorities each year.

A wide variety of industrial solvents, anesthetics, and other chemicals produce intoxication or coma. They can be divided into three groups. One consists of commerical solvents (containing volatile substances and found in model airplane glue, plastic cements, paint thinner, gasoline, cleaning fluids, nail polish remover, and cigarette lighter fluid).

Another group is the aerosols. The propellants in many household and commercial aerosol sprays contain volatile chemicals. Aerosols abused include insecticides, deodorants, glass chillers, and hair sprays.

The third group is anesthetics. Infrequently, ether, chloroform, and nitrous oxide (laughing gas) have been abused in recent years.

The immediate physical effects consist of irritation of the tissues in contact with the solvent, nausea, dizziness, shakiness, and muscle spasms. Weight loss may develop with prolonged periods of inhalation.

The psychic effects may include a "high" dreamlike state, drunkenness, sleepiness, disorientation, hallucinations, delusions, and stupor.

All the inhalants share the hazard of inducing an intoxicated state in which judgment and motor functioning are impaired. Accidents, some fatal, have repeatedly occurred in relation to inhaling volatile chemicals. Deaths have also been reported related to or caused by sniffing dangerous volatile substances, with suffocation the main cause of death.

Preventive efforts aimed at educating youngsters about the hazards of sniffing volatile chemicals should be incorporated into a total program of substance abuse education. Such education begins in home at pre-school age and continues during primary and secondary school.

The National Institute of Mental Health has just issued a leaflet for the public on the subject. Titled "Volatile Substances," Public Health Service Publication No. 2150, it may be purchased for 10 cents from the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. 20402.

The Kinsey Report

With Christmas approaching, thoughts are turning to gifts for relatives and friends. Here are some gift ideas which all of us can afford and should give throughout the entire year:

The Gift of Consideration: Putting yourself in the other fellow's shoes and thus proving your genuine understanding of his side of the case.

The Gift of Concession: Humbly saying at just the right point, "Sorry, you're right and I am wrong."

The Gift of Gratitude: Never forgetting to say, "Thank You," and never failing to mean it.

The Gift of Attention: When the other fellow speaks, listen attentively. If his words are directed to you personally, meet his eye squarely.

The Gift of Inspiration: Plant seeds of courage and action in the other fellow's heart. Help him to strive for greater accomplishment and lasting satisfaction.

The Gift of Personal Presence: In sickness, in trouble or in a day of great joy, there is nothing quite equal to your personal expression of sympathy or congratulation.

These are gifts that all can bestow throughout the year and be richer for the giving.

These gift suggestions were made in a recent publication of First Presbyterian Church.

Ladies of 1909 Continue Their Improvement Work

There was a called meeting of the Civic Improvement League Tuesday evening at the Pavilion, for the purpose of electing a manager. The choice fell upon W. C. Stevenson, who will at once assume charge and get in touch with such lines of entertainment as are suitable from time to time. Theatrical bookings will be interspersed with lectures, mass meetings, moving picture shows, dances, etc. No one need complain hereafter of the lack of amusement in Rockport. The formation of a local dramatic club will meet encouragement. A refreshment stand will be opened in the lobby of the Pavilion, and other improvements are under consideration.

Gertrude G. Grieve,
Rec. Sec'y.

The Civic Improvement League met Dec. 2 at the City Hall.

The recording secretary being absent, the corresponding secretary, Mrs. Bailey, read the minutes, which were approved, and took notes of the subjects discussed and acted upon.

The treasurer, Mrs. Taylor, sent in her resignation on account of the ill health of her husband. The resignation was accepted and Miss Dorothia Taylor was appointed to fill her place. The sum of $24.10 was placed in the hands of the new treasurer.

Receipts of the evening were $2.00 - $1 each from Mr. E. M. Hall and Mrs. McCown.

Mr. Clevinger, representing the advertising committee, reported that the printing of the new circulars would begin Monday or Tuesday. Mr. Bracht had no report to make.

Dr. Bailey reported that as the price of concrete posts for the park was so high that he would advise the use of hard pine.

Mrs. Perring suggested the advisability of securing auto service between Rockport, Aransas Pass and Gregory, which was discussed at length.

Dr. Bailey thought it would be well to inquire why owners of adjoining property put gates across public roads and by what right. The president appointed Mr. Hoopes and Mr. Branch to secure information.

The president reported receiving the lease for the pavilion and the arrival of the new chairs. She also stated that the Parker Amusement Co. had made an application for appearing in our city under the auspices of the League.

The Rev. George Douglas was present and gave his name as an honorary member. He was appointed to organize and act as chairman of a dramatic club.

The necessity of having a good exhibit at Aransas Pass during the land sale was discussed.

Mr. Branch gave his name as an honorary member.

There being no further business the meeting closed.

Bessie Baily,
Rec. Sec'y. pro tem

The called meeting of the Civic Improvement League at the City Hall Dec. 7 was well attended. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Mr. Klevinger of the advertising committee submitted proof of the new circulars which were generally approved.

Mr. A. L. Bracht reported that the Rockport exhibit to be placed in the agricultural building at Aransas Pass would be ready on time and he would give it his personal attention. A motion was made and carried to take a photo of the exhibit for advertising purposes. Mr. Gaffney offered to stand expense of getting a cut made for his paper and the use of the League, provided a good photo could be obtained. Mr. McCown was appointed to attend to the matter.

Mr. Hoopes related a recent experience with a man from Boston who had heard nothing would grow in this section of the country. After showing him Mrs. Hoopes' garden, Mr. Deane's place where on a small plot of ground crops had been raised, and several other gardens where vegetables were flourishing in mid-winter, the stranger was convinced he had been mis-informed.

The committee appointed to find by what right the public roads were blocked with gates requested more time.

Former Local Man, 102 Subject of Article in Galveston Daily News

An article titled "At 102, This Old Salt's an Admiral" appeared in the Sept. 26 issue of the Galveston Daily News. Written by June Angerstein, it told the interesting story of George James Bludworth, who spent his boyhood days in Rockport.

Following is the article:

How does someone live to be 102? Be born into a family with a history of longevity. That's the advice of George James Bludworth who recently celebrated his 102nd birthday and became an admiral in the Texas Navy on the same day.

Bludworth recited the length of time some of his relatives had lived which included his mother. "She lived to be 99." he said. Others didn't live quite that long, but they came close. That's how Bludworth can give the advice on how to live a long time.

Becoming an honorary admiral in the Texas Navy was a surprise to Bludworth. Steve Walter, executive director of the Texas Navy, which is based in Galveston, said that he and Gov. Preston Smith felt that a man who had given so much to his state and had been so active in maritime affairs all his life should be an admiral in the state's navy.

A letter of commendation was received by Bludworth from Gov. Smith and Walter on his birthday along with the commission making him an honorary admiral.

The centenarian lives with his daughter, Mrs. Mary Belle Brock, at 917 Oak in La Marque. Although he is in a wheelchair part of the time, Bludworth enjoys sitting in an easy chair in the living room where he is able to take part in many activities.

When he is not watching television (his eyesight is still good), he is tracing his life on the navigation charts of the Texas Coast.

Born on St. Joseph Island, Bludworth lived his boyhood years in Rockport with his parents, Mary and Bernard, and his eight brothers and sisters. His life has revolved around boats and ships and the waterways between Rockport and Galveston.

"My father ran up and down the bays," Bludworth said. "There wasn't too much trade. I heard my father speak of Indianola many times."

The 102 - year - old man has an exceptional memory. He can recall the hurricane of 1875 that washed Indianola away. "We were living at Cape Carlos then," he said. "After the hurricane, some people came by our house from Decroe's Point which was near Indianola. I remember them coming in a boat and my mother fixing them something to eat. Most of their family had drowned. The Decroes (the point was named after them) then went on to Corpus Christi."

Bludworth recalled the year, 1886, when there were two bad hurricanes. "The first one was on Aug. 8 and within a month we had another bad one," he said. "Those two storms really did tear things up."

Bludworth married his wife, Carrie, in Rockport on May 31, 1899. "We moved to Galveston in 1906 but went back to Rockport until 1910 when we came back to Galveston," he said.

While living in the Rockport area, Bludworth ran a party boat for about 10 years. "Times were pretty hard and there weren't many jobs," he said, "but we made out."

Another means of making a living during those lean years was hunting ducks in the winter.

1892 REGATTA TROPHY
Won By Bludworths

"We sold some to the fish and game house and many were shipped to New York," Bludworth said. He even remembers that the name of the New York firm was Winnat and Co.

Bludworth had a word to say about the ducks being killed off. "I don't believe that we killed off the ducks," he said. "We never killed one that would not be eaten. I believe that the ducks are getting less plentiful because of the oil slick on the water. The ducks see the oil shining on the water and are attracted to it. Then they get their wings covered and can't fly and die," Bludworth said he thinks that something ought to be done about this.

In 1892, he and his brother built the "Novice," The 30 foot sailing craft had a 12 and a half foot beam and a three foot draft.

The brothers won first place in a 30 mile race out of Rockport in 1892 with it.

"We won the race in four hours 52 minutes and two seconds," Adm. Bludworth said. "That was 22 minutes ahead of the boat that came in second."

The brothers were presented with first prize trophy by the San Antonio Daily Express which had sponsored the Rockport Regatta 1892. Bludworth still has the trophy.

His brother, John, moved to Galveston in 1906 and went into the boat building business. When Bludworth moved here, he worked for his brother as a carpenter. "We built tow boats as well as other types," he said.

When he moved back to Rockport, Bludworth built five or six boats for fishing in the bays and inlets of the coastal areas of Texas.

Becoming An Admiral At The Age Of 102 Is Not Often Seen

"They used gill nets in those days," he recalled. "I made many a gill net. The sinkers were put on the bottom of the net and floats on top. Those things floated in about five feet of water. I used them myself. And you know what we got for the fish in those days? Four cents a pound. I hear they're getting 25 cents a pound now." He sounded as if he couldn't believe such a price.

Returning to Galveston in 1910, Bludworth again worked as a ship carpenter for his brother. He later worked for Gulf Fisheries Shipyard on Pelican Spit (now Pelican Island). For 11 months he worked in Orange on four-masted schooners.

"Those schooners had their four masts but they also had oil engines," he said. Then he remembered another little fact. "As I recall, I heard that all of them except one burned."

Bludworth was silent for a moment. Then he said, "The captain of one of those schooners was Capt. Charlie Kertell," After a pause, Bludworth continued, "But he's dead now."

From 1920 to 1925, he was in charge of the Charlie Clark Shipyard. "We built tow boats there but we also built some big boats,"

The Bludworths lived in Alta Loma from 1928 to 1956. Bludworth suffered a broken back at the age of 69 when a boat at the shipyard fell on him. His daughter said that the doctors told them he would never walk again. "But I fooled them," the still energetic Bludworth gibed.

He finally walked on crutches after almost six months in the hospital and months of recuperation at home. He progressed to a cane and then was back on his own two legs. Later, he was even able to build some small skiffs.

Bludworth hasn't built skiffs or schooners in the last few years. However, he is very proud of the two sailboat models he has made. He made one while in his 90s and the other when he was 100 years old.

His wife, Carrie, died when she was 67, he said.

"We had a good life. We had five children. James was our eldest son, born in Rockport. Mary Belle came next while we were still in Rockport. The twins, John and Fred, were born while we lived at Harbor Island and Leila was born after we returned to Rockport. They're all gone now except Mary Belle."

The Bludworth family lived on Harbor Island when he was the boatman there. "We didn't have much to do," he said. "If someone had to be taken off a ship, then I rowed out to it. It was a quarantine station with a doctor too. But neither of us made much money."

Cape Carlos, which is now known as Bludworth's Island, Harbor Island, and St. Joseph's Island are near Rockport where, together with Galveston, Alta Loma, and La Marque, Bludworth has spent his 102 years.

There are many other things that Bludworth remembers. He recalls soldiers boarding ships in Galveston to go "fight the Mexicans." With pride he recalls the 101-foot pleasure boat, "Galvez," that belonged to the Dalehites. And very vivid are his recollections of the 1915 hurricane that hit Galveston and the many others that followed.

George James Bludworth, born Sept. 15, 1869, has had a full life and he shows no indications of having anything but that in the future.

His 102nd birthday was a great event. Relatives and friends of the family came by all day to visit with him.

When the interview for this story was over, I told him I was sorry if I had kept him too long. He looked at me and said, "You didn't keep me to long, I'm not tired," And somehow I had the feeling that he underlined the "I".

The Horse Marines

Roy L. Lassiter of Burlington Northern in Houston sent the Pilot the following article titled "The Horse Marines" and written by Jim Clemence. It appeared in Volume 4, Number 2/1971 issue of the Texas International OMNIS.

Grounded on a sandbar in Copano Bay, near Rockport, Texas, the Mexican schooner Watchman wallowed helplessly in the surging seas.

The captain, a swarthy middleaged Castilian, fretfully directed the efforts of the crew to move the vessel from the sands that held her fast. Under a blazing white sun, the sailors sweated and cursed in low tones as they strained to release the great wooden hulk from the bar.

From the concealment of an oak grove on the curving sandy shore, 21 pairs of sharp eyes intently watched the movements of the men on the ship. These eyes belonged to the members of Major Isaac Watts Burton's mounted ranger company.

On April 29, 1836, just a week and a day after the glorious Texan victory over Santa Anna at the battle of San Jacinto, General Thomas J. Rusk had ordered Burton to patrol the Gulf Coast country from the Guadalupe to Refugio. There had been reports that the Mexicans were concentrating at Matamoros to invade Texas by land and sea. It was believed that they would attempt to land supplies at some point on the coast.

This was the sort of military life that the virile young Isaac Burton loved--to ride over the country at will in quest of adventure and battle. He had wanted something like this ever since his early boyhood. Born in Georgia in 1805, he had been appointed a cadet at West Point and had thought that would prepare him for the kind of career he preferred. But West Point had proved too restrictive and confining; he had withdrawn after a few months.

He had turned to the prosaic study of law, but fate in the form of "a certain blue-eyed girl," had turned his footsteps back into the path of adventure and war. He met her in his 27th year, and when her family immigrated to Texas, he went along. Crossing the Sabine on January 14, 1832, he located near Nacogdoches and soon married the girl.

Burton took a leading part in the battle between the Texas settlers and the Mexican garrison at Nacogdoches in 1832. Three years later he was appointed by the general council of the provisional government of Texas. He served as a private in Captain Kornes' cavalry company at San Jacinto.

And now, on June 3, 1836, he was a major, commanding 20 well-mounted frontiersmen. For more than a month they had ridden up and down the coast eagerly looking for trouble. At last a fight was imminent. Lying hidden among the trees and underbrush, they intently watched the Mexican schooner and devoutly wished to capture her.

But how was a band of horsemen to seize a ship out in the water? There was nothing in the books of military rules and tactics on this point. It was a problem calculated to baffle the best of cavalrymen, and Burton was a good one. Moreover, he wanted to gratify his men's desire for action.

"Boys," he said, "we couldn't get out to that boat on a raft. Their sharpshooters would pick us off before we could get halfway. She seems to be fast to that bar and probably won't budge until high tide. Let's go back to camp and figure this thing out."

Quietly the men stole from the trees over a slight rise in the ground, to the place where their horses were tethered. Reaching camp, they sprawled on the ground in a circle. Privates R. Burns and James Boylan nervously began cleaning their rifles in their anxiety to attack the ship.

"I have an idea," the major said, "that we can induce them to send a boat to shore. If we can capture the boat and disguise ourselves and get to the ship, maybe we can overcome the crew and take the vessel."

"Fine," said the men, "but how are you going to get them to send a boat?"

"I'll signal the ship for help, try to make them think I'm a refugee in distress. You boys will hide there in the brush by the beach and, if they fall for my ruse and send a boat, you will rush out and help me take it."

The men approved the plan enthusiastically. They had done nothing but ride their wiry ponies since they had been detailed to this patrol duty by General Rusk, and they were spoiling for a battle. They followed stealthily behind Major Burton as he started back to the grove of trees.

Again concealing themselves in the underbrush, the rangers silently waited. Kneeling, A. L. Grey and Chester Cockrell leveled their rifles at the ship.

Major Burton, his long hair disheveled and his clothing disarranged, walked out to the water's edge and shouted to the vessel, which lay some distance away. He shouted in vain. The crew either did not hear him or ignored his frantic calls for help.

Finally, in desperation, he fired his pistol into the air. Instantly the men on board the ship halted their labors and all eyes turned toward the pretended refugee. An officer barked an order, and a boat was lowered. Five men manned the boat and four of them began rowing toward shore.

On the beach Major Burton exultantly watched and waited. "Keep low, men," he cautioned his followers, as the boat slowly approached the shore. When it was within easy hailing distance, he called in Spanish, "Thanks for coming for me. I am nearly starved."

The five Mexicans grinned. They directed their small craft toward the spot where Burton stood. The rangers kept the muzzles of their rifles trained upon the enemy seamen.

From the corner of his eye the major detected the rifles of his men. Fearing that they would be too hasty, he cautioned them in a low tone, "Don't shoot, whatever you do, unless I give the order. It would only give the alarm."

In their excitement, Samuel Smith, William Fitzsimmons and Willis Hockaday had protruded their rifles too far out into the opening. As the dory neared the land, the ensign in command detected them. Quickly he gave the alarm and ordered his men to pull for the ship.

Major Burton anticipated the move. Seizing a lariat on the ground beside him, he gave the Mexicans a swift exhibition of prize rope work. Deftly he hurled the lasso, and the loop fell safely over the stanchion on the prow. Burton jerked in the slack and hurriedly dragged the boat to shore.

"Just keep quiet," warned the ranger commander, "and we won't harm you."

Partly reassured by this promise, the surprised Mexican sailors remained in the boat until it was safely beached. The remainder of the crew on the Watchman, unable to see the rangers, had unsuspectingly resumed their efforts to free the schooner.

The five Mexicans, covered by 20 crack riflemen, marched to the clump of trees without a murmur. Perhaps the massacres of Goliad and the Alamo were fresh in their memory.

"Burns," ordered Burton, "you and four other men change clothing with them and then tie them up,"

The Texans obediently removed their clothing and donned the light seaman's garb of the Mexicans. The captives were trussed up and placed behind a tangle of shrubbery. They were left in the custody of four guards, who seated themselves out of sight of the schooner, lighted their pipes and waited for the show to begin.

Major Burton and 11 of the other rangers made themselves look as ragged and destitute as possible, while the remaining five passed as the Mexican sailors with whom they had exchanged clothing. They shoved off in the landing boat, hiding their rifles on the bottom and concealing their pistols underneath their shirts.

Members of the Watchman's crew lined the dock of the vessel as the small boat drew near. Major Burton was taking a long chance, and he trembled as the Mexicans quietly gazed at them. Once on the ship, all would be well. Seventeen Texans, he reflected, were easily a match for fewer than 40 Mexicans.

"Remember, boys," he warned his men, "try to look like refugees, half-starved and eager to get away from here. When we get on board the ship, circle the crew and draw your pistols, but don't shoot unless it is necessary. I hope to capture them without firing a shot."

A rope ladder was thrown over the side of the ship, and the Texans climbed on board one by one. Major Burton was the first to reach the deck. The other 11 "refugees" clambered wearily aboard, with sagging shoulders, while the five dressed as Mexican sailors lingered behind in the boat, keeping their faces averted. The Mexicans on the ship seemed to be so intensely interested in the Texas strangers that they had not paid enough attention to those in sailor apparel to discover that they were not the same five swarthy tars who had taken the boat ashore. The captain advanced to meet Major Burton and his haggard companions.

"We are a party of surveyors," Burton said, "and have been stranded here for days. We were about to despair of ever getting away from this place when we saw your ship. My men are hungry, and we would be grateful for food."

The captain bowed and graciously offered the Texans his hospitality. Casually but quickly the other visitors spread out until they surrounded the crew. The captain had turned on his heel to give orders when he saw the Texans draw their long pistols. The five supposed sailors had quietly boarded the schooner and had joined in the holdup. The entire crew was surrounded and covered. Most of the crew were not carrying pistols, and the captain knew his situation was hopeless. The Mexicans were so completely taken by surprise that they made no effort to resist; they surrendered meekly.

"Senor," the bronze-faced captain said, "you have outwitted me. I am at your service." He offered his sword and ordered the few seamen who had side arms to give them up.

Thus Burton, a landlubber, found himself in command of a ship. He looked over the decks and up at the tall rigging like a small boy visiting his first carnival. He still had a difficult problem. Now that he had captured the helpless vessel he did not know how to get it afloat again, or what to do once the ship got under sail. He felt as though he were in a strange country, an unknown world.

For two days the rangers waited for the tide to lift their ship from the bar, but in vain. On the third day two more Mexican ships made their appearance in the bay. Not being familiar with marine matters, Major Burton ordered a council to decide how to proceed to capture these vessels.

"Gentlemen," he said, "we have two boats out there, ours for the taking. How shall we get possession of them?"

They had not the slightest idea but, as he gazed at the ships, Major Burton evolved a plan. The two vessels, the Fanny Butler and the Comanche, lay at anchor about half a mile away. Evidently they were preparing to communicate with the stranded Watchman.

"I have it," said Burton, answering his own question. "We will make the captain of this boat signal for their captain to come aboard. When they arrive we will seize them. They will help us to get off this sand bar."

His followers agreed that it was a good scheme, and the major at once set about carrying it out. He ordered the captain of the Watchman to signal to the commanders of the Fanny Butler and the Comanche to come aboard. Boats were lowered from the two vessels, and two unsuspecting commanders were rowed into the trap.

On board the Watchman they were made prisoners, and the crews of the other two ships were told that their commanders would be put to death unless they surrendered the two ships instantly. The crews quickly turned over the vessels to the Texans, and Major Burton sent able-bodied men to take charge of the new prizes. Both were loaded with supplies for Mexican forces in Texas.

The three vessels lay in Copano Bay until June 17, when a high tide freed the Watchman from the bar. At Burton's order, the officers navigated the ships to Velasco.

As the three Mexican craft drew up to the Velasco harbor on the morning of June 18, the residents of the little port took alarm. Fearing an enemy attack, they quickly barred their homes and prepared to fight.

Major Burton went ashore to inform the people of his prizes. The Texans rejoiced, particularly when they learned that the ships were laden with fresh supplies. They were valued at more than $25,000.

The people cheered and laughed at this amazing military feat. A small force of landsmen, accustomed only to the "hurricane decks" of hard-running horses, had captured three enemy ships with the aid of a lasso! The fame of Major Burton and his seagoing rangers spread far and wide over Texas, and they became known to history as the "horse marines."

But fame was not the only thing they gained. They were generously rewarded in hard cash for their achievement. Early in July, the quartermaster at Velasco was directed to distribute $9,496 among them. Burton's share was $2,848.90.

Later in the year Major Burton was elected to the first senate of the republic. He was re-elected and served in Congress until January 24, 1839. He was appointed a commissioner to treat with the Indians in November 1836. During his last year in the senate, he was appointed one of the commissioners to select a permanent capital of the republic.

Continuing his law profession, he lived at Nacogdoches a number of years and moved to Crockett in 1841. There he died in January 1843, still a comparatively young man but with a fine record of service to Texas, and famous as the commander of the "horse marines."

Red Cross Aided By United Fund

This is another in a series of articles about agencies which benefit from contributions to the Aransas County United Fund Campaign which is now in progress. This article is about the Red Cross.

The American National Red Cross is the arm that extends your helping hand to:

*Members of the Armed Forces and Their Families
*Veterans
*Victims of Disaster
*Those Who Need
-Blood
-First Aid Training
-Home Nursing Instruction
-Swimming and Boating Safety
-Community Services
-Youth Activities.

Services to the armed forces and veterans -

"To furnish volunteer aid to the sick and wounded of armed forces in time of war...to act in matters of voluntary relief and in accord with the military authorities as a medium of communication between the people of the United States of America and their Armed Forces..." American Red Cross Congressional Charter.

Red Cross helps inductees, career members of the armed forces, and their families to resolve problems created by separation from family and homeland.

The conflict in Vietnam has expanded greatly the need for Red Cross services to the armed forces.

All major commands in Vietnam are served by the Red Cross clubmobile recreational program.

At home, Red Cross chapters counsel military families on service related problems, help in financial emergencies, and provide reports needed by servicemen and their commanders to alleviate concern and to aid in leave decisions.

Emergency messages about serious family problems speed between local Red Cross chapters and Red Cross staff in Vietnam at the rate of more than 19,000 a month.

Red Cross chapters serve one out of every three families of servicemen.

Red Cross assists veterans and their survivors with applications for government benefits. ARC staff assigned to Veterans Administration offices and the Pentagon represent veterans and their survivors before the VA and military review boards.

Disaster Services -

Chartered by Congress as the nation's voluntary disaster relief agency, Red Cross meets needs of people when disaster threatens or strikes or in its aftermath.

From a disaster that forces large-scale evacuation to one that affects just a few families, Red Cross immediately offers emergency feeding, shelter, clothing, and medical and nursing care if needed. Red Cross has placed emergency equipment at strategic locations to augment local chapters resources. Once the emergency has passed, Red Cross provides recovery aid with home replacement or repair, household furnishings, medical and nursing care, and occupational supplies and equipment for people lacking sufficient resources of their own. All Red Cross disaster relief is an outright gift.

Red Cross disaster expenditures may be a few hundred dollars in a local incident or millions of dollars after a major hurricane or flood.

In disaster relief planning and operations, Red Cross cooperates with the Office of Emergency Planning. Public Health Service, Weather Bureau and state and local agencies such as civil defense.

Trained Red Cross volunteers, many serving as Disaster Action Teams, are the vital human resources that meet disaster needs.

Volunteers are the heart and sinew of the American Red Cross. The National Board of Governors and the boards of directors of the 3,300 chapters are all composed of volunteers. Approximately 45% of ARC chapters are staffed solely by volunteers. All Red Cross funds are voluntarily contributed by millions of Americans to volunteer fund workers.

2,200,000 Red Cross volunteers of all ages give their time and skill.

Volunteers working side by side with career staff provide the manpower for all the services. The ratio of volunteers to staff is 171 to 1.

International Services -

The American Red Cross is one of 108 national Red Cross societies linked in the League of Red Cross Societies for mutual help and technical assistance in the prevention and alleviation of human suffering. The ARC works through the International Committee of the Red Cross under the Geneva Conventions and on its own in negotiations for the protection of victims of war and especially in behalf of Americans imprisoned during hostilities.

With the cooperation of the Red Cross society of mainland China, the ARC, since 1955, has been sending food parcels monthly to Americans detained in China. Relief assistance in foreign disasters extended through the League reaches around the globe.

The ARC provides study visits for Red Cross officials of other nations. It sends specialists to assist in developing health, welfare, and youth programs; it participates in technical seminars and translates its manuals at the request of other societies.

An ARC team works with the South Vietnamese Red Cross in operating centers housing over 30,000 refugees and providing health, welfare, and educational supplies and services.

Youth-

Since September 1917, the American Red Cross Youth program has given millions of U. S. students practical experience in responsible citizenship, offering service opportunities to students from grade school through college.

Red Cross Youth projects include services to the economically, socially, and educationally disadvantaged. Many ARC volunteers help retarded children, tutor the underprivileged, serve in disaster, conduct community beautification projects, and meet other varied local needs.

International projects introduce youth to worldwide humanitarian service. Red Cross arranges nearly 2,000 partnerships between U. S. schools and those in over 50 countries.

Red Cross Youth is taking action to fill a request for 200,000 friendship boxes for children in South Vietnam.

Safety Services-

The American Red Cross conducts first aid, swimming, lifesaving, and small craft programs aimed at preventing accidents and preparing persons for emergencies.

More than 61,000,000 certificates have been issued to persons completing Red Cross first aid, water safety, or small craft courses since the program began.

First aid training is conducted in industries, labor unions, government agencies, and schools and for policemen, firemen, ambulance units, and individuals. There are some 28,000 Red Cross first aid stations, detachments, and mobile units that give emergency care.

The Mission of the Red Cross-

The American Red Cross is the instrument chosen by the Congress to help carry out the obligations assumed by the United States under certain international treaties known as the Geneva or Red Cross Conventions. Specifically, its Congressional charter imposes on the American Red Cross the duties to act as the medium of voluntary relief and communication between the American people and their armed forces, and to carry on a system of national and international relief to prevent and mitigate suffering caused by disasters.

All the activities of the American Red Cross and its chapters support these duties.

Nationally and locally the American Red Cross is governed by volunteers, most of its duties are performed by volunteers and it is financed by voluntary contributions.

Surprise him with a Smith-Corona in December and he may surprise you with better grades in June.

After the holidays, your teenager faces a mighty rough year. That's when a Smith-Corona can start looking like the greatest Christmas present ever.

With our electric portable, for instance, he can learn to type twice as fast as writing by hand.

His spelling can improve, too. (A typed word that's misspelled just begs to be corrected.)

Thinking can get a jolt also, because a typewriter can accept ideas as fast as they come up.

And then a quiet little miracle called Organization can occur. When that happens, pride, confidence and self-esteem can gain a toehold.

So with a little application (plus ability, needless to say) your teenager's schoolwork could very well improve. Only June will tell.

But why a Smith-Corona?

Because all typewriters are not the same, that's why.

We invite you to... compare a Smith-Corona against any other typewriters to prove it.

Compare durability, portability, features.

Compare years of experience in actually "making" typewriters (especially electric portables).

Then remember that Smith-Corona is the only completely American-made portable typewriter, and you'll know why more people in the world buy Smith-Corona Electric Portables than any other. And why you should too.
