Cityline Community Pulse

Night meetings

More than 86 percent of callers in this week's Cityline COMMUNITY PULSE poll said they would be more likely to attend City Council meetings at night, as is currently under consideration.

Eighty of 93 callers favored the idea, citing the opportunity for greater participation by those who work 8 to 5.

"There is a community of citizens that have to work during the day that want to be participants with the city government. Greater attendance would only give us a stronger voice in helping direct city government to what is best for Midland," caller Robert Withrow said.

None of the 13 callers who voted "no" on the issue left comments to explain their position.

Cost of loving

HOUSTON — The days of free love are long gone. And the cost of being sweet to one's sweetie for Valentine's Day is higher than ever before. According to the "Cost of Loving Index," compiled by Houston Asset Management Inc., prices for romantic Valentine's Day gifts have gone up 11.9 percent since last year and nearly tripled over the past two decades. A lavish Valentine's Day including a dozen long-stem roses, Godiva chocolates in a Valentine heart, and a one-ounce bottle of Chanel No. 5 perfume would run at least $360. Add a romantic candlelight dinner and movie, and the tally rises by $156 to $516, the investment advising company said. The total is up $40 over 1991 and $372 from 20 years ago, when the same evening would have cost $144. While the cost of Valentine cards and movies were unchanged this year, the price increase was fueled by a $10, or 15 percent, rise in the cost of a dozen roses, to $75.

Vaccinations

ATLANTA — A study of children in nine major cities has found no more than four in 10 were properly vaccinated by age 2, federal health officials said Thursday. One city reported a dismal 10 percent. The national Centers for Disease Control reported that compliance with the full recommended immunization schedule for 2-year-olds ranged from 42 percent in El Paso to 10 percent in Houston. /8B

Midland leaders face a budgetary shortfall

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

The national recession hit city government hard this week, as leaders learned they're facing a budgetary shortfall that will require mid-year cuts.

City Manager Fred Poe, a 30-year veteran of the city staff, said it's only the second time a budget has fallen short in that period. The first was the bottom of the 1980s oil bust.

"We're going to be belt-tightening wherever we can," Poe said Thursday. "We're going to be looking at ways to cut back that will do the least harm overall. Nickels and dimes eventually add up to dollars."

Sheriff issue heats up

Painter, candidate clash over reverse-sting

Pam Hults/Reporter-Telegram

Reuben Richardson, candidate for the Republican nomination for sheriff, speaks at Thursday's press conference.

■ Richardson accuses sheriff of wrongdoing in 1990 transport of seized drug money.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Reuben Richardson, candidate for Midland County sheriff, on Thursday accused Sheriff Gary Painter of wrongdoing in a Jan. 9, 1990, reverse-sting operation by improperly removing $449,950 in seized drug money from Midland and taking it to Monahans for state-court forfeiture proceedings.

Painter denied any wrongdoing in the operation. But Richardson said the reverse-sting is tainted with improper procedures and lies.

Texas law requires that drug-forfeiture proceedings be held in the county (or other jurisdiction) in which illicit drug money and contraband were seized.

Richardson alleged Painter violated the law by personally driving a patrol car carrying two suitcases containing the money to Monahans.

While Painter acknowledged driving the car, he said he broke no law.

Accompanying him in the car were undercover sheriff's investigators Ed Krevit and Sgt. Jose Primera, who played the role of the drug seller, while the alleged buyers were being arrested.

Additionally, Richardson released documents he said indicated that Ron Tucker, then an investigator for former Ward County District Attorney Hal Upchurch, had twice perjured himself. Tucker first swore he had "seized" the drug money in Monahans and later, after proposals to return the money to Midland had been made, swore he had seized the money in Midland, Richardson said.

Richardson said Primera took the $449,950 in the Midland motel room near midnight on Jan. 9.

Painter recalled that he had tranferred the Southern California prepares for another storm to hit today

■ While area got respite Thursday from torrential downpours, NWS forecasts more rain through the weekend.

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Homeowners and emergency crews battered by this week's killer floods, among the worst of the century, beefed up their defenses Thursday as a big new Pacific storm loomed, drawing energy and moisture from the tropics.

The storms that hit Southern California beginning Sunday have dumped more than a foot of rain in some areas, killed at least seven people and swamped homes, businesses and streets and highways.

Four people were missing. Preliminary damage estimates in Los Angeles County alone topped $7.6 million.

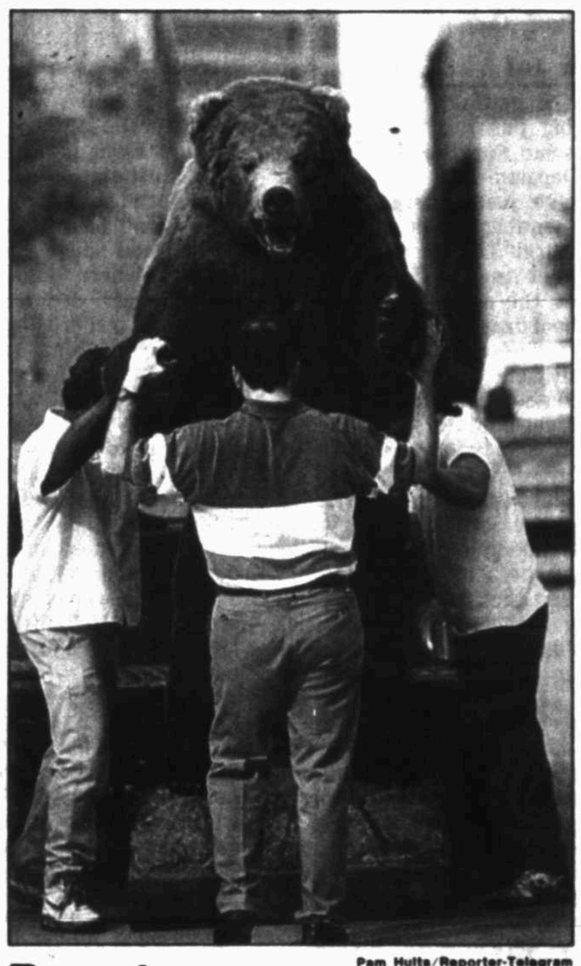

The region got a chance to catch up a little Thursday during spells of sunshine as showery remnants of the latest storm front rolled through the Los Angeles area with thunder and lightning. Rainfall totals for the 24 hours ending Thursday afternoon included a little more than an inch at San Bernardino and nearly an inch at San Diego.

Funnel clouds were reported along the central coast and in the San Joaquin Valley as the unstable air moved through the state, the National Weather Service reported. There were no reports of damage.

Meteorologists said the storms' strength and heavy rain resulted from El Nino, the sporadic warming of surface water in the eastern Pacific that generates strong thunderstorms over the equator.

The jet stream can funnel that energy and moisture northward to fuel storms like the one expected to hit by late today with the potential for an additional 3 to 5 inches of rain.

Clinton trying to regain voters' trust

By Jill Lawrence
Associated Press writer

■ Analysis

WASHINGTON — Trust between a candidate and the voters is an unspoken and fragile thing. Bill Clinton is about to find out whether, once shaken, it can be repaired.

The Arkansas governor's presidential ambitions may hinge on whether he can dispel doubts about his marital behavior and Vietnam-era draft record. He's putting on a full-court press with ads, rallies and TV appearances to prove himself trustworthy in the few days left before the New Hampshire primary.

But the Democratic presidential hopeful is facing a difficult task, whether the doubts are well founded or not.

"People just start getting a funny feeling. That primitive sort of trust evaporates and then so does your vote for the candidate," says Suzanne Garment, author of a book on mistrust in U.S. politics. "And once you get the funny feeling, you can't erase it."

The unease over Clinton began when Gennifer Flowers alleged in a supermarket tabloid that she'd had a 12-year affair with him — a claim he denies, although he has acknowledged marital "wrongdoing."

Misgivings within the New Hampshire electorate apparently have been reinforced by the furor over Clinton's draft status two decades ago. He denies he misled his draft board to avoid serving in Vietnam, although he deeply opposed the war.

A letter Clinton wrote to an ROTC recruiter in 1969, made public this week, vividly recalled that painful time while reopening questions about Clinton's motives. Why did he thank the recruiter for "saving me from the draft?" Why did he say he had given up an ROTC deferment "to maintain my political viability?" And does any of it matter now?

The Vietnam issue could erode Clinton's Southern base. But analysts believe its larger significance lies in whether voters see it as part of a pattern.

Indeed, Clinton has had other problems — the infidelity issue, for one, and skirmishes over congressional and Arkansas pay raises with officials who were under the impression he supported them in putting through the politically unpopular increases. He denies having said he favored either.

Clinton acknowledged Wednesday night on ABC's Nightline that voters are unsure of him.

"They've had all this stuff dumped on them here in the last two or three weeks, and finally the dam broke, and they're asking themselves questions," he said.

But the former frontrunner suggested they would resolve their doubts in his favor. "I think people are going to take another look," he said. "They just want to know that I'm all right, that I can do this job, that I can make them a good president."

Polls in the last week reflect a dramatic decline in support for Clinton. And there's been a distinct change of attitude among some of those who say they still back and trust him.

"It's taken the whole zip out of the excitement that I felt for the governor," said Mike White, a Keene, N.H. school principal and lifelong Republican who changed his registration so he could vote for Clinton.

"A lot of people who were for him seem to be leaning toward Paul Tsongas, thinking maybe he's the more credible man of the two," White added.

Tsongas, a former Massachusetts senator, now leads in New Hampshire polls — a development many attribute to his plain-spoken image as "the anti-Clinton," as one columnist put it.

He's also the only candidate who hasn't piled on Clinton in his time of trouble. Former California Gov. Jerry Brown brought up the Flowers allegations in a nationally televised debate. Sens. Tom Harkin and Bob Kerrey — both veterans — have repeatedly questioned Clinton's account of his draft record.

The 1969 letter "just again raises another question as to his veracity of character," Harkin said. Kerrey said he wouldn't question Clinton's personal beliefs on Vietnam but did demand of him, "Can I trust your record?"

American voters have been particularly concerned with trustworthiness since the Vietnam war and the Watergate affair, when many felt betrayed by their leaders. They've also had to deal with revelations that respected presidents like Roosevelt, Eisenhower and Kennedy had extramarital affairs.

"When we look back on great leaders, there is this disjunction between the public self and the private self," said Garment. But she added: "Looking back on it is one thing. It's another thing to be a voter and be handed this information and try to separate it out — to say I won't think about it when I vote."

FUNDS: City likely to cut services investment revenues are running behind projections, the city is facing a shortfall estimated between $375,000 and $500,000.

It's an amount some say could be made up if departments come in slightly under budget, as they usually do. But opinions differ — others say it may get worse.

Sales tax receipts, considered a measure of consumer confidence, were much lower over the holiday season than expected. Although the city had projected a 2 percent increase in those revenues this year — conservative since 1991 saw a 9 percent increase — the reality has been about a 2 percent decrease.

Then interest rates dropped — the federal government's attempt to bolster a lagging economy. It's expected to be of benefit in the long term, but the move forced Midland's investment revenue down — it may be $100,000 below projections in the general fund alone.

Sales tax revenues were the most disappointing to Poe.

"It's still early, but there's probably no possibility we can make up what we lost to date there," he said.

That means cuts in services or personnel costs. Leaders agree they will "harden" a current hiring freeze and may not fill some positions for extended periods.

Where to cut services is not expected to be an easy decision, however.

"We've had to instruct the staff to find those cuts," said At-Large Council Member J.D. Faircloth. "We think we have to have pretty significant cuts this year and next."

He thinks the shortfall could get worse unless serious action is taken, rising as high as $1 million next year if not corrected.

Most members agreed fire and police departments should not be cut, and Poe said he would not hard to save any money in them without hurting," he said. "It's hard for revenue to run below budget."

In addition, some City Council members have taken an adamant "no tax increases" stance. Meanwhile, reserves are at a minimum.

"I'd say almost everything is up for discussion," Faircloth said. "Citizens are going to have to realize there are going to be some cuts."

recommend slashing street maintenance programs.

First to go are likely to be travel expenses, office supply budgets and equipment costs. To save personnel costs, some employees may be transferred between departments.

Leaders said a solution to the city's budget crisis will follow a difficult, lengthy process. They are expected to start exploring options next week.

"We have the whole next quarter to straighten this out and get this budget balanced," said James Devenport, District 1 representative. "I don't know where we'll find the money, but we will."

"We're going to identify those areas that have some latitude," said Buddy Sipes, District 3 council member. "It may be that we can put off some capital projects, find something we can delay until next year."

"It may be we can let a pothole go for a couple of days or not mow a park as often," said Tom Johnston, District 4 council member. "We're just going to have to watch our expenditures."

Sipes said the key will be making careful decisions.

"I think we've got to watch it very carefully, but I don't think we're in any real trouble," he said.

Poe said cuts will be especially difficult since the city has already trimmed about as far as it can go in many areas.

"We cut so much in our budget the last two or three years, it's

City to end investment program

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

After a 15-month trial run, the city finance department will end a program that externalized some investments, City Finance Director Troy Gifford said.

About 30 percent of the city's investments will be returned to joint custodians NationsBank and the Dallas Federal Reserve Bank, after the City Council gave approval earlier this week. The investments had been handled by The Suggests Program, a subsidiary of Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. for more than a year — an effort to determine if the firm could generate more return on those longer-term investments.

But the investments were about as profitable as they had been under more direct city control, and the contracts cost about $100,000 a year. So the contracts will be canceled and the portfolio internalized next month, with a savings expected in the future.

Investments, at a mean interest rate of 8 percent, would generate about $4.4 million per year for various city funds.

At the same time, the city is seeking a new assistant treasurer for investments, the person Gifford said will have "day-to-day responsibility" for the portfolio. Gifford, whose title is also city treasurer, has two assistants. The current assistant for investments, Robert H. "Rolly" Hughes, will leave city employment as of today.

Bob McNaughton is Gifford's assistant for accounting.

SHERIFF: Painter denies wrongdoing money to Monahans on the authority of an agreement between Upchurch and Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre.

(From 1A)

But Schorre on Thursday denied having any knowledge of the sting until the following day, Jan. 10.

By Texas law, the forfeiture of money and drugs must be under provisions of "any local agreement" between a district attorney and law-enforcement agencies.

"I don't believe anything has been done wrong," Painter said following Richardson's press conference.

Painter said "the money never would have been transferred that night" had it not been authorized.

Painter recalled that Schorre and Upchurch, who recently was indicted for mishandling a sting operation in Sherman and the resultant forfeiture proceeding in Monahans, had agreed on the transfer.

But Schorre disagreed.

"That didn't happen," he told the Reporter-Telegram Thursday night.

Schorre, who, like Painter, was elected to office in 1984, said he first heard of the sting operation and transfer of the money the next day, Jan. 10, from J.D. Luckie, a district attorney's investigator, who had participated in the sting at the request of the Sheriff's Office.

"The night this deal happened," Schorre said, "I did not talk to Painter or Upchurch. I was nicely tucked in bed.

But later on, in February, Upchurch requested that Schorre act as a "backup," since Upchurch was having "problems" with lawyers for the defendants in the forfeiture proceedings in Monahans, Schorre said.

Those defense lawyers were aware that the forfeiture proceeding was not in the jurisdiction where the money was seized, Richardson said.

"Upchurch was real upfront about (his predicament)," Schorre said.

"Although I was reluctant," Schorre said, "I agreed to help him just so the bad guys would not get the money."

The problem was resolved, and Upchurch was awarded the $449,950, which was dispersed among the agencies involved in the seizure.

Upchurch was unavailable for comment Thursday night.

On April 10, 1990, the Midland Sheriff's Narcotic Fund (Drug Forfeiture Fund) received checks for $219,361.24 and $47,891.47 from Upchurch, according to records in the Midland County Auditor's Office and the Treasurer's Office.

Apparently for the role Schorre's investigators, Luckie and Bill Boyd, played in the sting, and for Schorre's "backup" motion, Schorre's office was awarded about $18,000 in the distribution of the forfeiture money, Schorre said.

"At the time I did the backup," Schorre said, "I didn't expect a part of the distribution."

At the time, Schorre said, members of the Texas District and County Attorneys Association had a "big flap" over West Texas sting operations and were skeptical about lawmen ranging from county-to-county to conduct those operations.

The sheriff, who is up for reelection on March 10 when he will be challenged by three opponents, including Richardson, said he has "nothing to hide." Events surrounding the seizure of money in a Midland motel room in exchange for 850 pounds of marijuana stashed in Monahans are detailed in a report by Primera.

Richardson also discussed at the press conference his reasons for delving into Painter's actions.

"Any time a politician, an elected official, says he stands on his record as a good administrator — in this instance as a good sheriff — then the public needs to know the truth.

"I'm not against a reverse sting if it's done under very strict and controlled conditions as it is designed to do. But I think they are corrupting in the sense that they have been done recently. And all you have to do is look at the number of people — police officers, law-enforcement officials — who are currently under indictment to substantiate that.

"What I am against is going out of county and importing drug dealers to come into Midland County when we have enough of our own."

Richardson said that "presumably" the Midland County Grand Jury will conduct an investigation into the sting.

STORM: Two skiers missing

(From 1A)

"We're getting ready for the next big push," said Bob Collis, spokesman for the Los Angeles Fire Department.

"We've just ordered another 10,000 sandbags," said Malibu fire Capt. Virgil Lockhart.

The Los Angeles Unified School District, the nation's second largest school district, canceled classes today for nearly 600,000 students. The district called it "a prudent common sense precaution."

And yet another storm farther out to sea was forecast by Tuesday.

Monday's storm, which flooded part of the San Fernando Valley and stranded motorists, "was computed to be a 100-year event," or the worst that might be expected in any 100-year period, said Rick Leifield, assistant chief of engineering for the Los Angeles District of the Army Corps of Engineers.

Residents of coastal, canyon and suburban neighborhoods constructed, rebuilt and reinforced sandbag canals and barriers to protect property from more high water and mudslides.

The Malibu coastal resort was awash in water, mud and debris. Beaches were littered with uprooted trees, timbers and trash as filthy, sewage-contaminated waves crashed to shore.

Raw sewage flushed out of overloaded treatment plants contaminated a 70-mile stretch of Los Angeles County beaches, which were closed by health officials.

Northwest of Los Angeles in Ventura County, where a flash flood turned the normally dry Ventura River into a muddy torrent, authorities searched the muck for possible bodies. One had been found in the area.

The flood had washed through an area where homeless people camped, carried dozens of motor homes and trailer homes out to sea from a recreational vehicle park, and swept over a freeway.

"If the bodies went into the ocean, they tend to sink, and then they float to the surface days later," said fire department spokesman Barry Simmons.

Since the storms started, three people had died in traffic accidents, two drowned and a man and woman who was nine months pregnant were suffocated by a mudslide that poured into their bedroom.

Still missing were two skiers believed buried by an avalanche at the Mount Baldy ski area in the San Gabriel Mountains 40 miles northeast of Los Angeles, a Marine whose helicopter ditched at sea, and a man who fell into the Santa Ana River while being chased by police.

Mud and water invaded hundreds of homes during the storms, including five multimillion-dollar residences in a Malibu canyon and about 100 homes and 25 businesses in the Antelope Valley community of Quartz Hill.

There were no flooding problems in Northern California.

Many schools ignore breakfast program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the availability of federal funds for school breakfast programs, schools are letting millions of students nationwide start the day on an empty stomach, a child nutrition advocacy group said Thursday.

Thousands of schools are not applying for the government money to start and run breakfast programs because they see potential problems with busing schedules and monitoring of students and they are concerned about interfering with family duties, the Food Research and Action Center said.

The barriers are surmountable, said Robert J. Fersh, executive director of the group. "This is not preferable to eating breakfast at home, but it's a necessary alternative to not eating breakfast at all,"

Studies have shown that children who eat a nutritious breakfast perform better in school, he said.

"Hunger deprives children of important opportunities to be creative and learn," he said at a news conference where he released the group's "School Breakfast Score Card."

While 89,055 public schools, or 95 percent of the total, participated in the National School Lunch Program in fiscal 1991, just 43,495, or 48.8 percent, also offered breakfast, according to the report.

The Agriculture Department, which administers the program, said 24.9 million children were eating school lunches in November, while 4.9 million children were getting breakfast.

Under the breakfast program, the morning meal is available to any student who attends the school, though lower-income students pay reduced prices and some children get the meal free.

More than half of the lunches and nearly 90 percent of the breakfasts in fiscal 1991 were served to low-income students, the advocacy group said.

The federal government subsidizes the cost of each meal. About $5 million is available annually through the federal government for schools to start breakfast programs.

Correction

In Thursday's edition, an article on MISD cluster reorganization discussed keeping one school's fifth grade as an all-neighborhood class. The school in question should have been identified as Santa Rita Elementary throughout the story.

On three references, the school was improperly referred to as Bush, which does not currently house fifth graders.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

CITY: Castro terms council's appointment 'racial'

(From 1A)

Tuesday to fill the unexpired term of Castro, who was the city's first Hispanic at-large member. The choice has angered some minority community leaders.

"I think the council picked somebody to think the way they think, in order to justify their needs in voting," Castro said in a telephone interview from El Paso. "I'm so upset. I'm very disappointed." Castro, who was transferred with his job to El Paso, said before he left he had submitted a list of names for the council to consider as replacements. All of the people were Hispanics and two were women.

Some council members have argued the seat is not designated "Hispanic" but should represent the entire city. Castro said his efforts and success toward becoming the first Hispanic at-large member should count for something.

"I felt they viewed me as a good candidate," he said. "I've never used the word 'racial' but that's what I think this is. Every time someone is appointed, it's the buddy system.

"I think citizens need to wake up and . . . demand the charter be changed," Castro said. "Every time someone vacates a seat, there should be an election."

Castro's voice joined a local group of minority community leaders who have protested Morrow's appointment. He was chosen in a 3-1 vote from a list of about eight candidates, but formal interviews were never conducted.

Michael DeVaughn, the council's only black member, was absent during the vote because of the death of his mother.

"I think it would have been a good idea to have that position go to a Hispanic," said DeVaughn, who represents District 2. "I think I represent a part of the population, and those seats should represent the other parts."

Tom Johnston, District 4 representative, voted against the appointment because he said interviews should have been conducted.

Morrow, meanwhile, issued a written statement Thursday, after learning of the controversy.

"I consider it a privilege to be offered the opportunity to complete the remainder of the term of John Castro," the statement says. "I voted for and supported him when he was elected and re-elected to the council. The City Council has asked me to fill that position and I intend to do so unless they withdraw their nomination.

"In filling an at-large position on the council, my obligation is to represent every member of this community which I will do to the best of my ability through a devoted effort to making an informed decision on all matters which may come before the council," Morrow said in the statement.

A former director of both the La Florecita Day Nursery and the Community Day Nursery, as well as a volunteer with the United Way and other organizations, Morrow said he has been committed to the minority community and will continue to be so. He pledged to represent the entire city.

"I plan to be accessible. If they want to talk or they want me to talk, I'll do it," Morrow said. "I'd rather listen, but I'll do whatever I can."

It isn't the first time City Council at-large seats — like those of many governmental entities — have been the subject of controversy.

Less than four years ago, the Permian Basin League of United Latin American Citizens began seeking the dissolution of the two remaining at-large positions, saying they were beyond the reach of minorities. Four years before that, LULAC and the Black Advisory Council won the removal of four at-large seats that became the city's current single-member districts.

A LULAC official said Thursday the group hasn't ruled out reopening its protest of the remaining at-large seats, nor has a lawsuit been eliminated from the possibilities.

"We're looking at everything, studying it and trying to figure out what the best plan is going to be," said Isabel Jimenez, president of the Midland chapter of LULAC.

But at-large council member J.D. Faircloth said if that happens, the city would fight the change. He says the system now — four single-member districts, two at-large council members and the mayor elected citywide — works fine.

But Faircloth is running for mayor in the May 2 election, and if he wins that post, his at-large seat would then become subject to appointment. Appointees in both at-large seats would be unprecedented.

Faircloth said that is not a threat, however.

"I think the appointment process removes the politics from it," Faircloth said. He said the council, working since December to find a replacement for Castro, made no attempt to "stack" the governing body and would not in the future.

"I can assure you the council's motivation was only to try to find the best candidate to represent Midland at large," Faircloth said.

But Castro disagreed.

"I believe this is why these lawsuits come about, because of real injustice like this," Castro said. "They create these lawsuits and they deserve them."

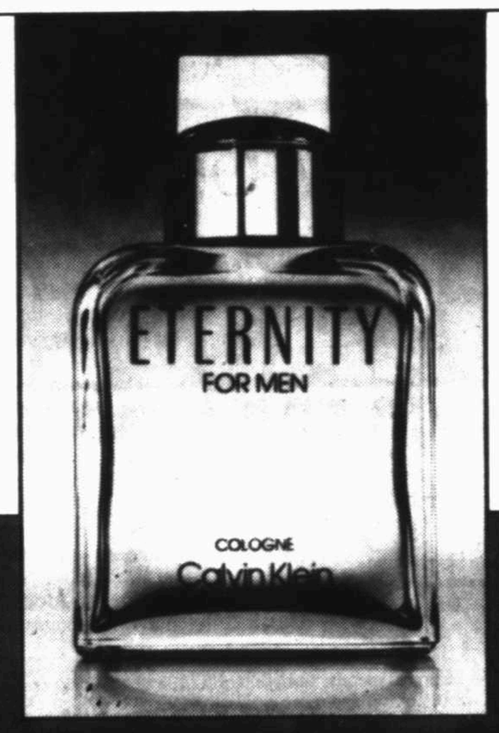

Council members and Hispanic leaders have each mentioned the possibility of meeting to discuss the issue, so negotiation may end the dispute.

Algeria near showdown as fundamentalists vow to defy ban

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Police set up roadblocks and bolstered security at police stations, preparing for a violent showdown after fundamentalists said they would defy a ban and stage a protest march in the capital today.

Meanwhile, in Lisbon, Algeria's government won some support from the European Community in the person of the foreign minister of Portugal, which currently heads the EC.

After a meeting with his Algerian counterpart, Lakhdar Brahimi, Joao de Deus Pinheiro said the alternatives in Algeria were "either a conjectured non-democracy or a system that wants, as was explained here today, to install a democracy on solid bases."

Brahimi accused the Islamic activists of planning to take Algeria back to the Middle Ages. He said the military-backed High State Committee would pursue democracy "from a healthy base."

The Islamic Salvation Front was on the verge of winning control of Parliament a month ago, but military commanders forced President Chadli Bendjedid to resign, canceled the second round of voting and began a crackdown.

The electoral success of the Salvation Front, and the subsequent repression, have created a dilemma for western nations, which say they support democracy but fear the spread of fundamentalism.

Nine policemen have died in attacks blamed on fundamentalists since the military-backed government imposed a 12-month state of emergency Sunday.

An Algerian navy sailor and two Muslim fundamentalist assailants were the latest victims on Thursday, state radio reported. Four people were reportedly injured in the clash at a guard post near the port of Algiers.

Supporters of the Salvation Front, which the government seeks to dissolve, spread word door to door through the poor quarters of Algiers that the protest march would go ahead following today's weekly prayers.

The demonstration has been banned under the state of emergency. The ruling council also said it would take legal steps to ban the Salvation Front.

The Salvation Front called for the march to press its demands for release of jailed fundamentalist leaders and resumption of democratic elections. Top leaders of the front have been jailed since a crackdown in June that followed violent protests.

Amnesty International on Thursday urged the government to make sure that people peacefully exercising their rights to expression and assembly are not subject to arbitrary arrest or detention, and that security forces used lethal force only in life-threatening circumstances.

The London-based human rights group said that according to information from media and other sources, about 70 civilians were killed and 500 injured in the past two weeks, mostly in clashes between young and security forces.

At least a dozen police and troops have been shot or stabbed to death, reportedly by Salvation Front supporters, Amnesty said.

More than 1,000 people are reported to have been arrested since mid-January, it said. Some of those arrested say they were tortured while in detention.

Muslim militants call off march to cease-fire line

MUZAFFARABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Muslim militants on Thursday gave up their plan to storm a cease-fire line that divides the disputed territory of Kashmir, stepping back from a bloody confrontation that had already left 16 dead and hundreds wounded.

The development underscored the volatility of the situation in Kashmir, which dozens of groups have been fighting to split from India. More than 3,700 people have been killed in fighting in the last two years.

Pakistan and India, traditionally antagonistic neighbors, went to war in 1948 and in 1965 over Kashmir, a former princely state divided by departing British colonial rulers in the 1947 partition.

India frequently accuses Pakistan of arming, training and harboring Kashmiri militants. Pakistan denies the allegations and accuses India of committing atrocities to crush the uprising.

In the latest confrontation, the Jammu-Kashmir Liberation Front had vowed to storm the U.N.-monitored cease-fire line and march into Indian-controlled Kashmir to show support for militants fighting for an independent state there.

The Pakistani government opposed the march, saying it could lead to another war with India. Kashmiris on both sides of the cease-fire line viewed that as a betrayal — and one that could deepen the split between militants who want all of Kashmir to be a part of Pakistan and groups like the Liberation Front that want an independent nation.

In a dramatic reversal, the front's leader, Amanullah Khan, called off the march, saying he had no choice because Pakistani troops were bent on killing him and his supporters.

On Wednesday, 16 militants were shot to death as they tried to storm past barricades along the winding route to the cease-fire line, hospital officials said. Another 350 people were hurt, 60 of them seriously, they said.

"They said they would kill us — 5,000 of us if they had to," said an emotional and trembling Amanullah on Thursday after returning from the frontier to Muzaffarabad, the capital of Pakistan-controlled Kashmir. "Why should I sacrifice more lives?"

U.N. moves ahead with peacekeeping plan for Yugoslavia

UNITED NATIONS (NYT) — The U.N. Security Council moved ahead Thursday with plans for its first peacekeeping operation on the European mainland, in which a 13,000-member international force will be sent to bolster the fragile cease-fire in Yugoslavia.

Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali secured the broad backing of the five permanent council members for his plan. Boutros-Ghali, acting on a proposal by his mediator in the area, Cyrus R. Vance, a former U.S. secretary of state, told council members the force should be sent for at least a full year.

At a meeting with the representatives of Britain, France, the United States, China and Russia, Boutros-Ghali said he was still unsure that all factions in the Yugoslav war really wanted to preserve the cease-fire and cooperate with the peace plan, diplomats and U.N. officials said.

But despite the risk that the peacekeepers might become embroiled in a shooting war between the breakaway Croatian state and its Serbian foes, the secretary general argued that the United Nations must move ahead rapidly to strengthen the truce and allow Yugoslav factions to work out the political future at a peace conference planned in Brussels.

The representatives of the permanent members appeared to support the plan, diplomats said, although the last word rests with their governments.

"We are all for it," Russia's representative, Yuli M. Vorontsov, said afterward. "We should not lose the opportunity because the window of opportunity is very, very small and we have to get there while the cease-fire is still holding."

By giving the peacekeeping force an initial yearlong mandate instead of the usual six months, the secretary general argued, the council would signal its determination for compliance and would send a message to local leaders that they cannot expect the troops to withdraw quickly before a political settlement is in place.

Authorizing deployment of the peacekeeping force for only six months, diplomats said, would arouse fears among the Serbian minority that Croatia might demand the withdrawal of the force before a political agreement is complete, leaving the Serbs unprotected.

Croatian President Franjo Tudjman has said in recent interviews that he wants the force to stay only six months.

In the letter he sent Wednesday endorsing the U.N. plan, he spoke of "technical questions" regarding the rights of the peacekeepers in Serbian enclaves of Croatia after the Serb-dominated Yugoslav army withdraws.

Diplomats say he still appears unhappy with the U.N. plan to preserve the existing Serb-controlled local authorities in these areas until a new settlement is reached.

Milan Babic, the leader of Krajina, one of the largest of these Serbian areas in Croatia, continues to oppose the plan, although he has been overruled by his local assembly.

Once the permanent council members endorsed the decision, the Secretariat immediately started to seek troops.

The senior official in charge of peacekeeping operations, Undersecretary General Marrack Goulding, told representatives of some 30 countries that he now favors a total force of 13,000, the second-largest ever deployed.

The largest force, 20,000 troops, was dispatched in 1960 to the newly independent Congo, now Zaire.

This would be the first peacekeeping force to be sent to the European mainland, but there has been a small force on Cyprus for years.

The force in Yugoslavia would consist of 12 infantry battalions of up to 900 troops, separate communication and logistic groups and several hundred police monitors.

The initial plan was for 10,000 soldiers and 500 police monitors, at a cost estimated at between $350 million and $400 million for a year.

The permanent council members pay just over half the cost of peacekeeping operations, with the United States picking up 30 percent of the bill.

Where this money will come from remains unclear because member nations already owe the United Nations nearly $1 billion in unpaid dues for past peacekeeping operations and the regular budget. The United States accounts for nearly half the balance.

But President Bush has asked Congress to establish a $700 million contingency peacekeeping fund to pay the American share of unanticipated costs.

'Roots' author cherished past

Alex Haley, the Pulitzer Prize-winning author of the book "Roots" who died earlier this week at the age of 70, will be long remembered for giving people of all races and ethnic origins an understanding, no matter how elementary, of the "black experience." In itself, however, that was not his greatest contribution to our society.

Haley and his widely acclaimed work, that resulted in a 1977 12-hour miniseries on ABC-TV, had a far greater impact on Americans than merely awakening them to the hardships endured and the glories realized by black Americans. He literally awakened all of us to our roots.

During an era when Americans were being told about the "me generation" and that introspection would result in self-satisfying revelations about the individual, Haley showed that to be truly complete a person must look into the recesses of his past to learn fully of his own roots.

He did it by taking us on one family's journey from Africa to the southern United States and through the years of slavery and the Civil War into modern society with all its complex social issues.

In doing so, Haley showed us the importance of family, and knowledge of roots, to all people — regardless of skin color or race.

Alex Haley knew that America is not strong because of the diversity of her people. Rather, she is strong because of the family ties and traditions that are passed from one generation to the next.

"Roots" was an epic not because it said something entirely knew, but because it said ordinary things passionately and in so doing ignited a fire under millions of Americans to learn something of their own roots.

Through "Roots," Haley gave every American reason to cling to their past for the glory of the present.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Feb. 14, the 45th day of 1992. There are 321 days left in the year. This is Valentine's Day.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 14 1929, the St. Valentine's Day Massacre took place in a Chicago garage as seven rivals of Al Capone's gang were gunned down.

On this date:

In 1778, the American ship Ranger carried the recently adopted Star and Stripes to a foreign port for the first time as it arrived in France.

In 1848, President Polk became the first chief executive to be photographed while in office as he posed for Matthew Brady in New York.

In 1859, Oregon was admitted to the Union as the 33rd state.

In 1876, inventors Alexander Graham Bell and Elisha Gray applied separately for patents related to the telephone. (The U.S. Supreme Court eventually ruled Bell the rightful inventor.)

In 1894, comedian Jack Benny was born Benjamin Kubelsky in Waukegan, Ill.

In 1903, the Department of Commerce and Labor was established.

In 1912, Arizona became the 48th state of the Union.

In 1941, "Reflections in a Golden Eye" by Carson McCullers was first published.

In 1945, Peru, Paraguay, Chile and Ecuador joined the United Nations.

In 1962, 30 years ago, first lady Jacqueline Kennedy conducted a televised tour of the White House.

In 1979, Adolph Dubs, the U.S. ambassador to Afghanistan, was kidnapped in Kabul by Muslim extremists and killed in a shootout between his abductors and police.

In 1985, Cable News Network reporter Jeremy Levin, who was being held hostage in Lebanon, gained his freedom.

In 1989, Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini called on Muslims to kill Salman Rushdie author of the novel "The Satanic Verses," condemned as blasphemous throughout the Islamic world.

Ten years ago: The "Night of 100 Stars" took place at New York's Radio City Music Hall as up to 200 celebrities performed to raise money for the Actors' Fund of America.

Five years ago: Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov addressed a closed-door session of a Kremlin-sponsored peace forum. Participants quoted Sakharov as calling for more democracy in the Soviet Union, while expressing his support for Mikhail Gorbachev.

One year ago: Iraq charged the bombing of an underground facility the day before, which killed hundreds of civilians, was a deliberate attack on an air raid shelter, a charge denied by the United States. Two San Francisco men became the first couple to register as "domestic partners" under a new city ordinance.

SHORT RIBS tm — by Dick Wright

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Cuomo: one foot in boat, other on dock

WASHINGTON — The issue in New Hampshire next week is not whether Bill Clinton avoided the draft but whether Mario Cuomo can induce me.

Safire

I called Cuomo headquarters in New Hampshire to find out how the write-in campaign was going, and wound up speaking to a clerk in Cuomo Appliances in Manchester who complained that his phone was ringing off the hook.

Such evidence of a groundswell was more reliable than that likely to be given out by draft-Cuomo campaign officials flooding the state with write-in pencils, or New Hampshire voters who gleefully lie about intentions through their chattering teeth.

So I called Cuomo non-campaign headquarters in Albany, N.Y., where the Chairman of Pitch & Moment Enterprises himself was putting his final touches on a speech about welfare to Harvard's J.F.K. School.

Was it mere happenstance that Mario Cuomo was making a major speech in Boston, to be carried on stations in nearby New Hampshire on the eve of its primary?

"You guys with the clever extrapolations," he said cheerfully. He assured me that the talk had been scheduled before welfare was invented. But he must have known why I was calling: to entrap him into a foreign-affairs position that could later be used against him.

What would he advise the president to do about the growing threat from Saddam Hussein?

"This is not something I'm working on right now," he started to demur, but then plunged in: "You should take the path you've established here. Last time, you were able to marshal forces, in a heroic way, through the usually disdained U.N. Now you have to stay with it. The U.N. resolutions have to be implemented, so put pressure on at the U.N. to implement them. What would you do, Bill, drop a bomb on him?"

I allowed as how that might one day prove prudent, and asked what he would suggest to make U.N. pressure meaningful.

"I'd have to sit down with Jim Baker and others," he said, growing cautious. "I'd say 'I want to get it right this time, Colin Powell, no ambiguity this time around.'"

And speaking of ambiguity, what about the Cuomo position on his draft movement? He has publicly offered neither encouragement nor objection.

"I could have called my guys in and told them: 'Look, I want no fingerprints! But take care of these people, give them money!' But I didn't. All my people here have been importuned to meet Phil Krone, who's running the draft movement in Chicago, but they haven't."

But didn't he give a positive signal to the draftees by torpedoing Bill Clinton on "Larry King Live"?

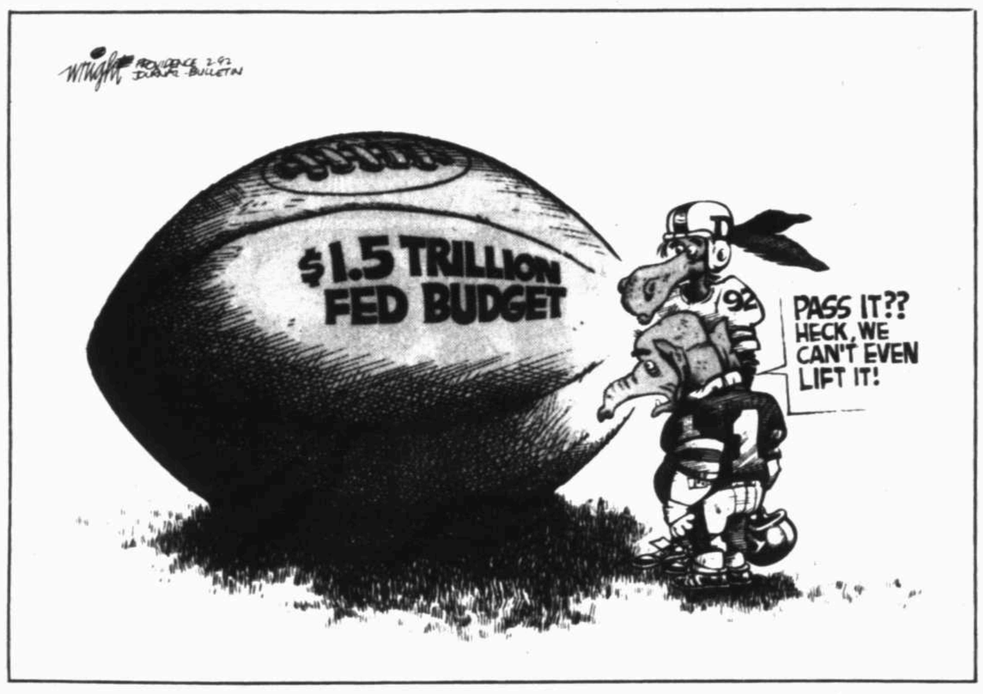

"Tell me what you ever heard me say that attacks Clinton."

Three times did Cuomo berate the Arkansas governor for an anti-Italian slur on a tape recording sold by a woman scorned.

"Clinton apologized for that on a tentative basis," Cuomo said, still unsatisfied with the extent of the slurrer's self-abasement. "When you have one foot on the dock and one foot on the boat, you wind up with your tush in the water."

As a collector of folksy political profundities, I had to write that down. It ranks with Bert Lance's "If it ain't broke, don't fix it."

William Safire's column is distributed by New York Times News Service.

United States does far too much meddling

One of the ablest, most impressive leaders on the African continent was in town a couple of days ago. Chief Mangosuthu Gatsha Buthelezi, leader of the mighty Zulus, outlined his dream of a multi-racial South Africa, based on free enterprise and democracy. The chief, along with President F. W. de Klerk and Nelson Mandela of the African National Congress, will chart South Africa's post-apartheid future.

Murchison

I heard, and I thought: This is wonderful, this is marvelous. May God prosper the chief (a sound Anglican Christian, by the way) and crown his endeavors with success. But at the end of the day, why is it the business of Americans what kind of government South Africa institutes? The reason is, our government preposterously has made it America's business.

One can't always be sure whether this is still the United States of America or whether it has turned into Uncle Know-It-All's Fix It Shop (Unbeatable Advice on Constitutions and Voting Systems; Cheap Rates; Don't Call Us, We'll Call You).

Blithely we have made South Africa's delicate and convoluted problems our own: squeezing its economy with sanctions, ordering American companies to quit the South African market, drowning in torrents of goo and hypocrisy from orators convinced the way to help South Africa was to hurt it.

Now obviously we have our druthers about who leads, or drives, the 166 sovereign countries that belong to the United Nations. A government friendly to the United States is clearly better than one hostile to us. We owe Chief Buthelezi support and friendship because the South Africa he envisions would be a friend, as well as a social and economic model for the rest of a troubled continent. Beyond this, all our long-distance moralizing about the structure of post-apartheid South Africa is past bearing.

My fellow Americans, South Africa is not our business, any more than Haiti , Algeria and Myanmar — when they don't threaten Americans — are our business. We should repeal all economic sanctions against South Africa — and then pay South Africans the compliment of letting them arrange the affairs of a country few Americans know much about and fewer still have seen. We don't need pious editorials and speeches outlining what we'll accept and what we won't.

Yes, why don't we get our own household in order before we take on as our special project the moral reformation of other countries? Maybe it would enhance our credibility to lower our crime rate — the highest in the civilized world. What about growing welfare dependency and a 50 percent divorce rate?

Look at it this way: How would we appreciate South Africa's butting into our business, delivering oily lectures on moral rectitude? When the Japanese criticize us, we grind our teeth. The reason we get by with doing unto others what we hate having done unto us is that we're rich and powerful. This is the morality of the bully.

Much more than relations with South Africa is involved here. The fall of communism deprives us of our last excuse for global messianism — the quest to turn everybody into good Americans. Woodrow Wilson's passion to "make the world safe for democracy" has infected our politics for the past half century. It's time for a change. Thanks very much, Mr. Bush, we don't need any "new world order." We need — or, rather, other nations need — the latitude to find the answers that suit them, not us.

The Cold War — which required the marshalling of our will and resources to thwart aggressive communism — is over. We couldn't help meddling then. Now we can. Pat Buchanan, who is sometimes lambasted as an "isolationist" for talking thus, in fact argues only for national modesty, and for the pursuit of specifically American objectives. He says we don't have all the answers. Anybody care to venture a contradiction?

"It is not our business," wrote William Cobbett, the radical English journalist, in 1829, "to run about the world to look after people to set free; it is our business to look after ourselves and to take care of our country and Sovereign." We don't have a sovereign, but we've got a sovereign people, who, if they heard such advice from their leaders, might relish it as much as I do.

CHARLEY REESE

Clinton's 'infidelity' indicative of irresponsiblity

Contrary to pompous punditry, character is more important in assessing political candidates than issues.

A candidate's stand on issues is a promise. Whether he will keep the promise depends more on his character than on the promise. In fact, character determines what kinds of promises a candidate will make.

Reese

It's a fact in these cynical times that most positions on issues are arrived at by campaign professionals based on public opinion polling. To say it another way, the public is polled to find out what they want and how they feel about certain issues. Then, based on these results, the candidate feeds it all back to them.

Of course the candidate doesn't say he's feeding back the results of polling. He claims that these are positions he arrived at independently. It's cold-blooded deception and that's why you should pay very little attention to issues.

All of this is applicable to Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton's escapades. The Establishment press is trying to salvage Clinton since he's the one Democrat most likely to duplicate George Bush's administration. They have tried to salvage him by suggesting that it's improper to make any decisions based on his personal misbehavior.

The exact opposite is the truth.

When a man is unfaithful to his wife, there are a number of things you can logically infer from this knowledge.

First, his word is no good. The man took a public and solemn vow to remain faithful, to honor and cherish a woman and he broke that vow. Public officials also make public vows — they swear an oath. You have to be stupid to think a man who would break one vow wouldn't break another.

Secondly, the philandering husband is a liar. They always lie until they get caught, at which point they begin to make excuses or grovel. There is no reason on God's earth to suppose that a man who would lie to his own family would not also lie to voters.

Thirdly, you can safely infer that the person lacks self-discipline. They wanted more to indulge their transient desires than they wanted to keep faith and to keep their word. Such people are easily corruptible, and the last thing you want in public office are easily corruptible people who cannot discipline their own desires and impulses.

Finally, such people have no honor. The honorable thing to do if a man falls out of love with a woman is to tell her, get a divorce, and go on with his life. Otherwise, remain faithful. Marriage is both a personal bond and a legal contract.

People should not confuse forgiveness with trust. If Mrs. Clinton wishes to forgive Mr. Clinton his transgressions, that's their business. She was the one who was wronged, not the public. The public's only interest in Clinton is can he be trusted in the office he wants? That involves an intellectual judgment. Logically, the answer is no, or at least the uncertainty that he can be trusted is so great that voters would be foolish to gamble. In theory, people can change; in practice, the record shows only a small fraction of about one percent ever do.

The only sound basis on which to attempt to predict the future behavior of a human being is the record of his or her past behavior. People can say anything. Words are not a reliable indicator of anything except the degree of skill in using words. In the case of political candidates, this is especially true because, most often, even the words are not theirs but those of a hired speechwriter.

What the cynical political manipulators want you to do is look at the candidate's position on the so-called issues for exactly the same reason mouthwash sellers prefer that you look at their advertising rather than analyze their product.

Few of Cupid's arrows clear East-West German barriers

By Mark Fritz
Associated Press writer

BERLIN — While Ina was pondering the paintings at Berlin's Altes Museum, Ralf was pondering Ina. He struck up a conversation and they hit it off.

She was East, he was West, and the twain not only met, they married. A happy story, and a rare one.

On this Valentine's Day, most of the love between eastern and western Germans is largely platonic. Even with the Berlin Wall gone, few of Cupid's arrows can clear the old barriers.

"We're united, but we're still two societies, two people," says Ralf Penke, a west Berlin fireman who married Ina in November 1990, a month after the two Germanys tied the knot.

There are few statistics to measure how much wooing is occurring over the old border. But it's clear more thawing is needed in the Cold War relationships.

Of the 12,233 marriages in Berlin during the first eight months after Germany's unification in October 1990, only 256 were East-West unions, according to the city statistics office.

Berlin, where 2.1 million westerners and 1.3 million easterners live, is the largest city in united Germany and the place where the cultures are most likely to mingle.

Remarkably, 222 of the 256 marriages — 87 percent — were between a western man and an eastern woman. Just 34 east German men married western women.

"In some cases it might be a matter of economic survival," said Sigrid Lesser, a Berlin psychologist and marriage counselor. "East German men don't have any money."

What about the low number of East-West marriages overall? Sociologist Brigitte Wiessmeier says cultural differences were so great that, romantically speaking, Germany remains two nations.

"You may as well look at the number of Germans and Americans who married," she said. "They are like foreign countries."

New scandal in Japan links politics, crime

TOKYO (NYT) — After months of rumors and speculation, another scandal involving the governing Liberal Democratic Party broke Thursday with police raids of the offices of a large trucking company that is reported to have funneled hundreds of millions of dollars to top politicians and organized crime.

A series of scandals have tainted politicans both in and out of government since disclosures of improper payoffs to members of Parliament toppled Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita in 1989. But the amounts reportedly involved in the current scandal are far larger than those in the past.

More ominously, reports have suggested that the company raided Thursday for evidence, Tokyo Sagawa Kyubin Co., might have acted as a conduit linking some of the nation's top political leaders and the yakuza, or organized crime groups. Included in the list of targets of the raids were the offices of the Inagawa-kai, Japan's second-largest yakuza family.

News reports have said the Inagawa-kai leader used some of the money for a major stock share manipulation scheme disclosed last year. In that scheme the yakuza figure received financing and assistance from the Nomura Securities Company, the world's largest brokerage house, which was hit with a heavy penalty for its sales practices in the episode.

Parliament has already been paralyzed by opposition party demands for hearings into another scandal in which a former Cabinet member who is close to Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa was indicted on bribery charges.

Politicians said the new developments could stall even further the governing party's legislative agenda.

The raids Thursday were widely expected. Japanese news organizations, obviously informed in advance, were waiting at the offices when the police and prosecutors arrived, and reports of the raids dominated evening television news as well as afternoon newspapers, which emphasized their potential political implications.

Although the prosecutors have not made any information public, the news reports highlighted allegations that Tokyo Sagawa Kyubin, a major parcel delivery company, may have provided more than $1 billion to the yakuza as well as politicians in both the governing and opposition parties.

It reportedly did this through direct payments in some instances and in others through guarantees of loans taken out by companies controlled by the gangsters.

As detailed as the reports have been on the alleged wrongdoing, they have painted a confusing picture of the reported loans and payoffs, which involved a host of subsidiaries, affiliates and dummy companies.

For instance, they have left unanswered so far the key question: Why would top executives of the parcel delivery company nearly bankrupt the firm to provide these payments to the politicians and the gangsters?

Officials of the company, which is part of a group of trucking firms based in Kyoto, have insisted that all the schemes were cooked up by two former top officials, Hiroyasu Watanabe and Jun Saotome. The company sued them last year.

It has been left unexplained, however, how the two could obtain corporate loans and provide corporate loan guarantees reportedly totaling about $7 billion, over a four-year period, without anyone else at the company knowing. Most of the money is now said to be uncollectible, causing serious financial problems for the trucking and parcel delivery concern.

So far, two former Cabinet ministers and two young, aspiring figures in the governing party have acknowledged receiving large payments from Tokyo Sagawa Kyubin.

Prosecutors have not suggested publicly that these payments were improper, but they have led to speculation that the trucking concern was trying to buy influence at the highest levels of the Liberal Democratic Party.

U.N. inspector reports more hostility in Iraq

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraqis increasingly are venting their frustration over U.N. trade sanctions on visiting U.N. inspectors, the leader of an inspection team said Thursday after returning from Baghdad.

But Maurizio Zifferero said his team found no signs on its most recent trip that Iraq was not complying with U.N. efforts to eradicate its nuclear weapons program.

Under the U.N. Security Council cease-fire resolution that ended the Gulf War, Iraq must rid itself of weapons of mass destruction. The council says sanctions on Iraq will remain until Saddam Hussein complies fully with these terms.

The sanctions have driven up prices for food and other basics and caused shortages of medicine and spare parts, making life hard for the average Iraqi.

Zifferero, an Italian representing the International Atomic Energy Agency, said that when Iraqis see the U.N. emblem, "they are convinced that it's our fault, and they begin shouting, even women and children from windows."

The government-controlled media print scathing attacks on the teams. Some U.N. officials suspect an orchestrated government attempt to counter blame of Saddam for the hardships the nation of 17 million is suffering.

Zifferero led a 36-member team on an eight-day visit to Iraq. It was his third trip under the U.N. Special Commission, which is charged with dismantling Iraq's nuclear, chemical and biological weapons and long-range missiles. The commission has regional headquarters in Bahrain.

Zifferero said his group encountered demonstrations, as did the previous team, but said, "We're very well protected, three or four security men protecting each one of us."

In Baghdad, Iraqi guards tried to block his team from visiting a pan-Arab scientific research bureau.

House Democrats craft a soak-the-rich tax-cut plan

By Bob Deans
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — House Democratic tax writers spent Thursday crafting a soak-the-rich plan designed to cut most people's tax bills by a few hundred dollars this year and next while socking upper-income folks with a $60-billion tax hike over the next six years.

If it becomes law, the plan would create a temporary, two-year tax credit worth up to $200 per year for individuals, or $400 for couples, to help offset taxes paid for Social Security.

It would also set up a new tax bracket for upper-income earners. Individuals with taxable income above $85,000, and couples with combined income topping $145,000, would be taxed at 35 percent, instead of 31 percent, the highest rate under present law.

Income above $1 million would be taxed at 38.5 percent, under the Democrats' plan.

The proposals are part of a draft cooked up Wednesday and Thursday at private meetings by leading Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee.

"It's the same old tax-and-spend Democrats," said White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater. The Republican spokesman likened the Democrats to "weasels going into a hole," to hold a "sleight-of-hand planning session," behind closed doors.

Committee chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., described the Democratic package as a populist plan to help middle-class Americans.

"You can bet your life we'll be in the 92nd percentile of approval when we come out with this tax package," Rostenkowski told the Associated Press after leaving Thursday's closed-door session.

The panel intends to send its new plan to the full House before the end of the month for separate votes on the Democratic plan and on a modified version of President Bush's proposal to cut taxes for investors, businesses and first-time homebuyers.

Republicans accused the Democrats of sparking an election-year bidding war that could swell the federal budget deficit and pit rich against poor.

House Minority Whip Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said the plan was a recipe for "economic self-destruction," a job-killer that punishes success.

"You're going right against the people who create jobs," said Gingrich. "If you want to know why America's sick, look at the Rostenkowski plan."

While there is broad agreement among the Democratic leadership on the Social Security tax credit and the tax increases for upper-income earners, party members remain divided over how to cut taxes paid on capital gains - profits earned from the sale of property, stocks or other assets.

"Probably 70 percent of this package is agreed upon," a Democratic aide said. "We're going to have it wrapped up by Saturday."

For weeks, Rostenkowski has been at the fore of Democratic criticism of President Bush's plan for using a host of tax breaks to help pull the beleaguered economy out of recession. Opponents say the president's plan favors businesses and wealthy Americans while providing scant relief for the middle class.

The Democratic plan includes several provisions contained in the Bush plan.

Both for instance want to let people have penalty-free withdrawals from their IRAs (individual retirement accounts) for the purpose of buying a first home.

The heart of the Democratic plan, however, is the Social Security tax credit, which would cut the taxes of nearly every working American.

Rape victim gives People permission to publish photo

NEW YORK (AP) — The beauty queen who was raped by boxer Mike Tyson gave People permission to run her picture and name, the magazine said Thursday.

A smiling photograph of Desiree Washington, who competed in the Miss Black America pageant as Miss Rhode Island, appears on People's Feb. 24 cover.

The magazine quotes her as saying: "I didn't do it for fame. It was the right thing to do."

Tyson, the former heavyweight champion, was convicted Monday of raping Washington, an 18-year-old freshman at Providence College, in an Indianapolis hotel room last July.

A smiling photograph of Desiree Washington, who competed in the Miss Black America pageant as Miss Rhode Island, appears on People's Feb. 24 cover.

In Indianapolis, Judge Patricia Gifford granted a defense request to delay Tyson's sentencing hearing by three weeks, from March 6 to March 27, and scheduling conflicts could make it even later, court officials said Thursday.

Tyson testified that Washington consented to sex after the two met at a pageant rehearsal in Indianapolis. During the trial, some news organizations, including NBC, identified the accuser without her consent.

Washington's personal lawyer in Rhode Island, Edward Gerstein, had no comment on the People magazine report. Two messages left on a answering machine believed to be Washington's in her hometown of Coventry were not returned.

Washington wasn't paid for permission to use her identity, said People spokeswoman Beth Kseniak. She said Greg Garrison, the special prosecutor who won the Tyson conviction, arranged for Washington to talk with a People correspondent and grant permission for use of her name and photograph.

But Garrison denied arranging anything. "What happened is that the prosecutor has been passing on all requests and letters to the victim and her family," he said.

"I was asked if I would arrange it, I said I would pass the request along and I did," Garrison said. "We will not refuse to pass along any request, but it is not the truth that we have arranged anything. It's a dumb idea."

The magazine goes on sale Sunday but People provided a copy of the cover and story Thursday. Kseniak said People interviewed Washington after its story on the trial had gone to press, so the cover was the only place she could be quoted.

ABC spokeswoman Lucy Kraus said Barbara Walters will interview Tyson's accuser Feb. 21 on "20-20." The network stopped short of saying she would be publicly identified.

ABC also carried Diane Sawyer's "PrimeTime Live" interview with Patricia Bowman, who accused William Kennedy Smith of raping her, after the Florida trial in which Smith was acquitted.

Rob Smith, a spokesman for the Indianapolis prosecutor's office, said Tyson's accuser had earlier expressed an interest in becoming an advocate for victims.

"She indicated that's something she wanted to do," said Smith. "That's her own prerogative. We think she'd be very good in that sort of role."

MISD to break ground for Abell Junior High

■ The building, planned for completion by September 1993, will house 41 classrooms and a double gymnasium.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

When Midland school officials poke their shovels into dirt today they will symbolically embark on the task of building the school district's most ambitious project since the 1960s.

At 3 p.m., school officials will conduct a ground breaking ceremony for the George T. Abell Junior High School. The public is invited to attend the ceremony at the school's future site, Loop 250 and W. Wadley.

The $9.5 million facility will encompass 149,330 square feet and accommodate almost 1,000 students, according to Wilson Heidelberg, executive director of auxiliary services for Midland Independent School District.

The new junior high school will have 41 classrooms, a double gymnasium, and a fine arts component featuring a band hall, choir room, and a theater arts and stage area.

The school will also have an outdoor learning center surrounded by seven science classrooms, according to Terry M. Harden of Fort Worth, architect for the project.

"All the science classes can get out and prepare earth and life science experiments," Harden said. "They will also have a greenhouse."

Harden said the front entrance will open onto a student commons or multipurpose area.

"This is probably the school's most spectacular aspect," Harden said. "It will have a stage area and cafeteria."

The architect said the student commons area will be ideal for student assemblies, evening presentations, or Parent Teacher Association (PTA) programs.

"In the past, junior high schools have always had the kitchen, cafeteria, and auditorium separate from each other, whereas, Abell will have them all in one space," Harden said.

Harden said the double gymnasium, housed under one roof, will also be unique to Midland public schools. "It will have a curtain to separate the gyms so both can be used at one time," he said.

Heidelberg said the junior high sports teams often have several teams per grade level. "They have girls and boys sports and a number of teams," he said. "Participation is such that they really need two regulation-size gyms."

Abell's color scheme will feature a combination of grays and blues with touches of magenta and purple hues, according to Harden.

"There will also be dark blue glass on the outside of the building. The outside will have a

United Way cites Shuey, workers for '91-'92 effort

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The satisfaction that comes from working with the United Way was described as a "heart glow" by the featured speaker at the organization's annual meeting and awards luncheon on Thursday.

"How can you say no to that heart glow?" Thomas J. Wageman asked a group of about 360 United Way supporters at the Midland Hilton.

"You let yourself be touched so your life can be changed and you can change other people's lives," said Wageman, president and CEO of HomeFed Bank in San Diego.

Wageman, the 1986 United Way of Midland campaign chairman, described a calling volunteers get to such work.

"We're chosen people who come to this. This is no accident," Wageman said.

"That's what I found here in Midland," he said. "You led me to my heart."

"It's a special work and only gets done by special people and that's what you are to me," Wageman added.

As a result of that "special work," companies, employees and volunteers were recognized for their efforts in the 1991-92 fund-raising campaign which collected

UTPB top salaries below average, state discloses

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The average salary for top faculty members at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin fell 9 percent for the 1991-92 school year, leaving the school below the statewide average, according to figures released Thursday.

But when all teaching positions are included, UTPB beat the statewide average, according to Higher Education Coordinating Board statistics.

Average salaries at Midland and Odessa Colleges, meanwhile, are higher than the statewide average, but Howard College salaries are below average.

The coordinating board said UTPB average salaries for the top three teaching tiers — professor, associate professor and assistant professor — dropped from $43,548 for 49 full-time equivalent professors in 1990-91 to $39,611 for 55.85

Toddler's parents hope city will give gift of love

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

A 22-month-old Midland girl suffering from cancerous tumors on both kidneys undergoes chemotherapy every week.

Her parents expect bills totalling a quarter of a million dollars to start rolling in by this June and they have no idea where the money will come from.

But two local groups are throwing their collective support behind the family that first learned the tragic news last December. The groups are hoping that other Midlanders will follow suit.

Beta Sigma Phi Sorority, along with Windtree Apartment manager M.J. Haire, are soliciting the community's help for the parents of toddler Kylee Morgan Pepper, who spent Christmas Day in a hospital and only recently returned to her home at Windtree Apartments.

Already the rising medical bills have taken their toll on the family, Ms. Haire said.

The parents say they are grateful for the quality medical care but costs after two months have already surpassed $75,000.

The local sorority recently opened the Kylee Morgan Pepper, Medical Fund with a $250 donation.

"I think the offer to help is great. We really need it. Her bills are outrageous," Mrs. Pepper said. "She still has another surgery or two. The tumors have not shrunk as much as the

Fort Worth dance troupe brings 'A Romantic Evening' to Midland

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

"A Romantic Evening" awaits dance lovers Saturday when members of the Forth Worth Ballet perform at Midland High School Auditorium, 906 W. Illinois Ave.

"It's a very lovely program that is representative of the company's work," said Anita Hammonds, marketing director for the company. "We have several pieces that show the gamut of what the company can do."

The two-hour program, which begins at 7:30 p.m., includes "Webern Pieces," music by Anton Webern and choreography by Paul Mejia, the company's artistic director; "Sylvia" pas de deux, music by Leo Delibes, choreography by Mejia; "Joie de Vivre," music by Jacques Offenbach, choreography by Mejia; and "Brahms Waltzes," music by Johannes Brahms, choreography by Mejia.

"He choreographed this piece in 1989," Ms. Hammonds said, referring to the "Brahms Waltzes."

"The company recently took it to Washington, D.C., for the Kennedy Center's Texas Festival, where it was successful. It features solo piano accompaniment with the pianist on stage with the dancers."

Born in Peru and raised in New York, Mejia was discovered by George Balanchine when the former was a scholarship student at the School of American Ballet. Balanchine invited the 17-year-old to join the renowned New York City Ballet where he danced principal roles in such Balanchine masterpieces as "Rubies," "Agon," "Symphony in C" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

Mejia later joined Maurice B jart's Ballet of the 20th Century. During his six years abroad, he choreographed works for the B jart Ballet and the Ballet de Guatemala. He joined the Chicago City Ballet as co-artistic director with prima ballerina Maria Tallchief in 1981.

In 1987, Mejia became artistic director of Fort Worth Ballet and director of Fort Worth School of Ballet.

combination of beige and gray brick with some blue-glazed brick," he said, noting that the carpet will reflect a combination of blues, grays, magentas and pastels.

Harden said the school was also designed for transportation safety. "The school district worked very hard to get the proper separation of the visitors' and parents' pickup from the bus drop off and traffic," he said.

The architect also noted that the junior high, being built on a 30-acre site, is resulting in the biggest school construction project since Lee High School was built in 1968.

Another plus for the community — as far as taxpayers are concerned — is that the $9.5 million bid accepted for the project was lower than expected.

The district passed a $10.8 million bond to build the school in the May 4, 1991, election. The election involved two bond propositions — one to build the junior high school and a $13.3 million proposition to build two other schools and fund other construction and renovations. Some bids for other projects have come in much higher than expected.

"We had a lot of competition for the (junior high) bid because of the size of the bid. There were even several out-of-state-bidders," Harden said.

He said it was notable that the Austin-based Faulkner Construction elected to open a permanent office in Midland.

"This will open up the market and provide additional competition for the rest of the work coming up — such as the airport and the hospital — which I think is healthy," Harden said.

In the meantime, a flurry of construction will ensue to get Abell opened in September 1993.

"This is going to be a fantastic building for Midland," Harden said.

Dave Leonard, former owner of Midland's Leonard Construction, is area manager for Faulkner Construction and will oversee the project.

full-time equivalent teachers this year.

The statewide average for professors increased from $44,305 to $45,254.

But when the three other teaching positions — instructor, lecturer, and teaching assistant — are included, UTPB averaged $37,638 for all positions, just above the $37,119 statewide average.

All Midland College salaries averaged $34,286 while Odessa College reported an average of $35,296. The average at Howard College was $29,776. Those figures compare with a statewide average of $33,889 for public junior colleges.

Average salaries for professors increased statewide by only 2.1 percent.

"These modest increases will not allow Texas to improve its relatively low standing among the nation's other most populous states in terms of faculty salaries," said Higher Education Commissioner Kenneth H. Ashworth.

Ashworth said the average faculty salary in Texas trailed the average of the top 10 states by more than $5,800 last year.

The highest averages for the top teaching positions were at the University of Texas at Austin, $55,113; University of Texas at Dallas, $50,582; Texas A&M University, $50,243; University of Houston, $49,950; University of Houston at Clear Lake, $46,755; University of Texas at Arlington, $44,438; and Texas Tech University, $44,334.

The coordinating board also reported enrollment for all minorities increased at Texas public universities in 1991-92 from 1990-91, but enrollment of Anglo students dropped 1.7 percent from 280,768 to 276,019.

The number of black students increased 3.4 percent, from 33,339 to 34,473. Hispanic student enrollment grew 4.3 percent, from 58,765 to 61,297. The number of Asians in universities increased nearly 7 percent to 14,549 while American Indian enrollment rose 19 percent to 1,376.

Jury clears girl in father's fatal shooting

TYLER (AP) — Jurors deliberated more than eight hours before finding Thursday that a 17-year-old girl had not engaged in delinquent conduct in the fatal shooting of her father.

The girl and her mother wept and hugged after the verdict was read.

If jurors had found she had engaged in delinquent conduct, the girl faced confinement by the Texas Youth Commission until she was 18 and then a possible 30-year sentence.

Her father, a 49-year-old truck driver from the Sand Flat community in Smith County, was shot six times last May 24 with a .357-caliber Magnum revolver.

Attorney Bryan Johnston, who represented the teen, said the girl had been sexually, emotionally and physically abused.

He claimed she fired in self-defense, although a medical expert testified the victim's wounds did not match that scenario.

A new state law that took effect in September allows evidence of family violence to be used to justify a killing.

"This is not a new defense," said prosecutor Rod Boyles, who said he was not surprised by the verdict.

"The verdict did not surprise me, no, based on the evidence they heard and the tack the case took," he said.

Medical problem leads to collision

Staff Report

A 41-year-old Midland driver became unconscious after a medical problem and crashed into another vehicle causing a chain-reaction accident Wednesday night at N. Garfield St. and W. Loop 250, police reports said.

Bruce S. Byron, of the 4800 block of Richmond St., was northbound on N. Garfield St. following two other vehicles when he passed out due to a diabetic complication and struck a 1987 silver Nissan driven by 35-year-old Mitchell Scott Craig, the accident report stated. Craig's vehicle then struck a 1988 blue BMW driven by 34-year-old Dr. Gary Dean Madden, reports said.

None of the drivers was seriously injured in the accident.

Officials question insurors' language rule

AUSTIN (AP) — State officials and a civil rights advocate Thursday called for an investigation into insurance companies that they say refuse to sell health insurance to people who don't speak or read English.

"Not only do some health insurance companies turn you down if you are likely to get sick, but they'll turn you down if they don't like the way you talk or the way you read," said Amy Johnson, of the Office of Public Insurance Counsel.

Ms. Johnson, state Rep. Eddie Cavazos, and Norma Cantu, regional counsel of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund, said they want Texas Attorney General Dan Morales to investigate the matter.

Morales' office said it welcomed the opportunity to review the information and consider their request.

The three officials were armed with letters from insurance company representatives who are opposing a proposal before the State Board of Insurance that would require insurers to print a toll-free assistance number in both English and Spanish on their policies.

"An individual who cannot speak, understand or read English at a minimal level are (sic) considered ineligible for our coverage," wrote G. Scott Smith, president and chief executive of National Health Insurance of Grand Prairie.

Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, and chairman of both the House Insurance Committee and the House Mexican-American Legislative Caucus, said the letter represented "David Duke marketing of racism."

JFK conspiracy fans find evidence in Dallas police files

By Mike Drago
Associated Press writer

DALLAS — New scrutiny of Dallas police files on the Kennedy assassination has given conspiracy buffs more ammunition, but detractors say they're blowing smoke.

Clearly the documents raise more questions than they answer.

Since the documents were unsealed Jan. 27, researchers and reporters have stormed the city archives, looking at the new material as well as information that had been available — but unnoticed — since 1989.

The city's action came in the wake of renewed interest in the assassination caused by Oliver Stone's movie "JFK" which suggests the president was the victim of a government plot.

Journalists and documentary makers Ray and Mary La Fontaine found information among those documents they say raise questions about the Dallas police investigation into the murder. They reported on the findings in a story published this week by The Houston Post.

The La Fontaines discovered a photograph that they claim suggests official tampering with evidence involving Lee Harvey Oswald, who the Warren Commission said acted alone in killing Kennedy.

In addition, they found documents about three "tramps" pulled off boxcars after the assassination. No documents on the three had ever surfaced, and they had never been identified. Researchers have pointed to that absence as evidence of a conspiracy.

Researcher Gary Mack of Fort Worth, who challenges the Warren Commission's basic conclusion, said the discoveries could have far-reaching implications — or could mean nothing.

The photo could mean officers simply were attempting to find out if the photograph could have been faked, he suggested.

"This is representative of why we still have so many questions," Mack said.

"While this may mean a whole lot, it may mean nothing. It really shows the ineptitude of the investigation."

Ms. La Fontaine found several versions of the photograph depicting assassin Lee Harvey Oswald standing in his back yard with a rifle on his hip. The Warren Commission said the rifle was the one used to kill Kennedy.

Some conspiracy buffs — as did Oswald before he was killed by Jack Ruby — insist the picture is a fake.

One of the newly discovered prints has Oswald's figure cut out as it would be in a darkroom procedure called matting. The technique can be used to impose an image on a photograph.

"All we're saying is there is a photograph with evident matting," Ray La Fontaine said. "One thing we don't want to do is overstate what it is. We found records that no one knew existed and the photo certainly is suggestive."

The other information the La Fontaines tout is the arrest reports on the long unidentified tramps.

The three were detained for four days on vagrancy charges, according to the newly discovered documents. It had always been said the three were released hours after being questioned.

A widely circulated photograph shows officers arresting the "tramps" near the assassination site at Dealey Plaza, and skeptics have long wondered why vagrants on railroad cars would have fresh haircuts and recently shined shoes.

Ms. La Fontaine found three arrest reports written at 4 p.m. on Nov. 22, 1963, less than four hours after the assassination.

The reports say Harold Doyle, 32, Gus W. Abrams, 53, and John Forrester Gedney, 38, were "taken off a train box car in the rail yards right after President Kennedy was shot."

Former Dallas police officer Paul McCaghren, who participated in the investigation of the Kennedy and Oswald murders, dismisses all the conspiracy talk.

McCaghren said he doesn't know why the cutout photograph was in the files or why officers may have been trying to recreate the Oswald photo, but he insists police didn't tamper with evidence.

He said identifying the hobos means nothing because police took in dozens of people for questioning that day.

"They had nothing to do with this," McCaghren insisted. "No one ever asked me anything about the tramps on the train. I've heard all that. I just throw cold water on it."

Brazil seeks to return falcon

AUSTIN (AP) — Brazilians want Texans to remember "Mr. Alamo."

That's the nickname of an injured peregrine falcon that has gained fame in Brazil since it was found last November by a 9-year-old girl in the rain forest.

The 2-year-old bird, one of an endangered species that can fly thousands of miles, apparently spent some time in Texas because it was tagged by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service last October on South Padre Island.

"This bird is a Texas citizen," Johan Dalgas Frisch, a spokesman for the Wildlife Preservation Association in Sao Paulo, Brazil, told the Austin-American Statesman.

almost exclusively been choreographed by Balanchine or Mejia, said Ms. Hammonds, herself a former dancer.

"Paul Mejia has choreographed a tremendous number of works. It's unusual to produce so many ballets and so many good ballets in such a short amount of time. He has really expanded the Fort Worth Ballet repertoire."

In addition to the public performances in Odessa tonight and Midland Saturday, the company is performing for students in both public school systems.

"This visit by the ballet is a part of the district's continuing effort to provide a broad education for our young people," said Maridell Fryar, executive director of instructional services for the school district.

"We consider that a community outreach and a service," Ms. Hammonds said of the in-school performances. "Each time we tour we do try to do some educational performances."

The in-school performances here and in Odessa have been made possible, in part, by a grant from the Texas Commission on the Arts Touring Program and are being sponsored by the school districts. The Midland in-school performances are planned for Monday and Tuesday.

Saturday's public performance includes, in addition to the selections being presented to the students, the classically choreographed segment of Delibes' "Sylvia."

Tickets are $8 for students and persons over 65 and $12 for the general public. For more information call Grace Osadchuk, coordinator of fine arts, MISD, 689-1034.

Proceeds from the general public performance will help provide future cultural experiences for elementary students as well as help fund the Midland City Council PTA Student Scholarship Fund.

Midland and Odessa are not the only Texas towns being visited this season by Fort Worth Ballet.

"We're doing six Texas performances throughout the season," said Ms. Hammonds. "We're going to six different Texas towns to do performances and that includes Midland and Odessa, Beaumont, Waco, Marshall and San Antonio."

The reason for these performances is two-fold, Ms. Hammonds said.

"This is to really bring high quality professional dance to communities that don't always have the opportunity to see it and to give exposure to the company."

LULAC honors at-risk students

The reception — which will be held at Casa de Amigos, 1101 E. Garden Lane — is being hosted in conjunction with the 63rd anniversary of the national organization of LULAC.

Students from Midland Independent School District will be honored, according to Isabel Jimenez, interim president of the Midland Chapter of LULAC.

"These are students who dropped out who have made it back to school," she said. "These students don't get much recognition and we are always concerned about encouraging them to stay in school."

The nationwide observance of LULAC's anniversary begins Saturday.

FAMILY MATTERS

'Making other people happy' is emotional strain

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I am a 20-year-old female working full time, going to college and living on my own. I have been seeing this gentleman for over a year. We are very much in love. We share everything, like the same hobbies and do lots of things together.

May

Recently he asked me to marry him. I was so happy and surprised. When I called and told my family they were extremely upset, especially my mother (she cried). They told me that I was too young and uneducated to get married (although my mother married when she was 20). So, after talking to my family and thinking about it, I said no to his proposal. I don't want my family disappointed or unhappy with me.

Well, the problem only starts here. My apartment lease is up in a year and I am moving out. My boyfriend is pressuring me to move in with him, and my parents are excited about me coming home to live with them. I love and respect my family a lot, my parents gave me everything possible. Living at home is fine but I don't want to move home.

What I want to do is accept the engagement ring, move in with my boyfriend and finish college (I have two years). I know that my parents (who are in their 60s) would not approve because it is not morally right. If you could please give me some advice, I just want everybody to be happy. I have found out in the past that making other people happy instead of me makes me unhappy most of the time. Do you get it? Help me. TO-BE-OR-NOT-TO-BE

DEAR TO-BE: I think the clue to all of this is in your last paragraph. When we try to make everyone happy, we often make no one happy — not even ourselves. Try reading Melody Beattie's book, "Beyond Codependency," and/or Robert Ackerman's book, "Perfect Daughters."

You may need to learn how to set boundaries with both your boyfriend and your patents. Boundaries are "where you begin and another person ends." Ms. Beattie offers the following suggestions:

- When identifying the need to set a limit with someone, do it clearly, preferably without anger, and in as few words as possible.
- A person cannot simultaneously set a boundary (a limit) and take care of another person's feelings.
- When setting boundaries, people often feel ashamed and afraid.
- Anger, rage, complaining and whining are clues to boundaries that need to be set.
- People who set boundaries will be tested.

Also, be prepared for the consequences of your boundary setting. Usually we upset someone else by saying "no," but that is part of the process. When you start setting boundaries, things do not change at once but they will change over time.

Finally, I encourage you to discuss your consideration of moving in with your boyfriend with your minister, priest or a counselor. There are many ramifications to such a decision that warrant a full disucssion.

Good luck and let me know how you are doing.

DEAR FAMILY: A good friend of our family and a special friend to my 4-year-old is dying of cancer. She has fought the disease hard but we have been told that it has spread and there's not anything that can be done. We want to start now so that we can be prepared to tell our daughter something when (friend) dies. I already know that I'm going to be so upset, I'm afraid that I won't do the right thing. AFRAID

DEAR AFRAID: A pre-school child should be given a simple, direct and honest explanation. Sometimes the death of a pet is helpful in teaching a child about death. Be prepared to help your daughter identify and express her feelings. Try to avoid such explanations as: "she has gone to sleep," or "she got sick and died," or "she went to the hospital and died," or "God took her to heaven because she was such a good person." These explanations are very confusing to a concrete thinking preschooler — you can imagine what conclusions she will draw about going to sleep, getting sick, going to the hospital or being "good or bad."

These are only a few brief thoughts on a complex and difficult subject. Consider reading Earl Grollman's book, "Explaining Death to Children." You may also want to contact Hospice of Midland for additonal resources and ideas. I commend you on addressing this issue beforehand. Death is a natural part of life but it is still a difficult mystery for children.

Jim May is the director of the Family Wellness Center.

Questions for this column should be addressed to Family Matters, P.O. Box 10485, Midland, 79702.

DEAR ABBY

Ten commandments point way to happy marriage

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Here it is, St. Valentine's Day again.

Some years ago, when I was less savvy about equal rights for women, I unabashedly wrote a St. Valentine's column on "how to keep your man happy." I called it the Ten Commandments for Women — and soon it was followed by a Ten Commandments for Men.

Van Buren

Then an early feminist, Mandy Stillman of Milwaukee, wrote, demanding equality for the sexes and insisting that there should be only one set of commandments for both genders. Well, Ms. Stillman won — and here they are:

TEN COMMANDMENTS FOR A SUCCESSFUL MARRIAGE

Put your mate before your mother, your father, your son and your daughter, for your mate is your lifelong companion.

Do not abuse your body with excessive food, tobacco or drink, so that your life may be long and healthy, in the presence of those you love.

Do not permit your business or your hobby to make you a stranger to your children, for the most precious gift a parent can give his or her family is time.

Do not forget that cleanliness is a virtue.

Do not make your mate a beggar, but willingly share with him or her your worldly goods.

Remember to say, "I love you." For even though your love may be constant, your mate yearns to hear those words.

Remember always that the approval of your mate is worth more than the admiring glances of a hundred strangers, so remain faithful and loyal to your mate, and forsake all others.

Keep your home in good repair, for out of it come the joys of old age.

Forgive with grace. For who among us does not need to be forgiven?

Honor the Lord your God all the days of your life, and your children will grow up and bless you.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Communication skills can be learned

By Steve Edwards

QUESTION: How can I communicate more effectively?

ANSWER: Your chances of really being seen and heard increase dramatically when you take responsibility for having yourself at eye level and at arm's length position with anyone, including children, with whom you're trying to make contact. This helps to create an atmosphere where issues can be dealt with more clearly.

Edwards

Have you ever noticed how people consciously maneuver others psychology by standing and looking down while the other person is seated? It's an intimidation of power tactic. Your distance from another person has significance when you're much beyond an arm's length, the feeling of presence and closeness is lost — and it becomes easier to act inhumanely and to hide. It's not exactly what contributes to good communication. Eye contact and physical position lead to seeing and hearing and having effective communication.

QUESTION: Why are the elderly so involved with reminiscence?

ANSWER: Because memory and reminiscence are the ways we preserve important events and people in our lives. It's our way of maintaining a sense of continuity and personalizing our experiences.

In some cases, reliving the past and reminiscing with others is necessary for resolving grief. For some in poor health, looking back to pleasant experiences may be far easier than looking ahead.

Reminiscing is a key way of maintaining family history. These shared feelings among the elderly not only bring back memories, they're a positive way of helping to ease emotional pain as well. It's important for us — as humans — to tell our stories, express our feelings and relive our good and bad experiences over and over again. Realize though, reminiscence is an interpersonal experience: it takes someone to tell the story and another to listen.

QUESTION: What is a major source of emotional pain?

ANSWER: It's lack of intimacy with others, or loneliness. In the holiday season, it's magnified — "No man is an island," we need one another.

No doubt, building intimate friendships is always going to have its occasional troubles, along with rewards. As humans, we're basically selfish and so even intimate friends will offend each other from time to time. The pain from occasional conflicts with friends is far better than the constant, gnawing pain of loneliness.

Like depression, loneliness is a choice. Those who are lonely are those who choose not to make the effort it takes (including the occasional rejections and hurts) to build a few close friendships. They allow the fear of intimacy to dominate their will, never realizing that they do not have to do so. The bottom line is "we do need each other!!" Especially those intimate friends with whom to share our deepest feelings.

QUESTION: Why is it so difficult for my grandfather to accept assistance?

ANSWER: Accepting assistance is difficult for many people, and especially true for some elderly, who are proud of their independence or who may be frustrated over financial concerns or a variety of stressful situations including loss of spouse or friends, decreasing abilities or a loss of independence.

In assisting your grandfather, be as careful as possible. Listen carefully to what he's saying or how he's feeling. Offer your support without trying to impose instant solutions to problems. Present your concerns as positive as you can.

For example, rather than saying "you can't cook any more and you're never going to get better if you don't let someone help you," you might say "I noticed that cooking seems to be difficult for you. Did you know that for people in your situation, there's a program that can deliver meals directly to you?" If he agrees to assistance, work out a plan together. Remember, whenever possible, older people should have the opportunity to pursue options that will maximize their independence.

Steve Edwards is executive director of Community and Senior Services and consultant for the Visiting Nurse Service of Midland.

Life experiences give wisdom to some elderly

By Henry F. Page, M.D.

As the human population relentlessly expands both in numbers and age, how best can society adjust so as to cope with this challenge.

Page

In days of yore, one derived knowledge from experience, and only after many, many years could be considered intelligent. For example, Sparta (Greece, that is) around the sixth century BC, was ruled by the Council of Gerontes (old men) and likewise in both Europe and China during the Middle Ages, elderly religious leaders held sway — all interrupted at times by militant youths not noted for constructive social mores.

Now, thanks to modern scientific and communication advances, we have exploded into a youth-oriented society. This raises the question: Do youths, no matter how brilliant, have enough understanding to plan the lives of oldsters?

For example, the second-year medical student feels sure that he knows more than any of his professors! Several years ago, one of the great men of American medicine, Dr. Irving Page (no relation), editorialized on the necessity for old persons to have old doctors. Who else can really comprehend the litany of complaints one develops in the golden years.

The social planners and architects must recognize the apparent increase in height of curbs and steeper inclines; the progressive diminishing senses such as vision, hearing, touch and smell; the reachability of shelves and appliances; and availability of usable transportation. Outlets for both physical and mental stimulation and spiritual support need to be easily accessible.

It is only then that proper housing, economic and legal support can provide an adequate milieu for oldsters. Again, it probably takes an older individual to truly comprehend the various problems, but to activate the process the vitality of youth must be incorporated and the whole thing moderated by the acumen of maturity.

Any committee concerned with an important project must resemble the Naval Officer Corps — young squirts, old fuds and Lieutenant Commanders.

Henry F. Page, M.D., F.A.C.P., is health and safety consultant to Midland Presbyterian Homes.

AARP convention planned for June 2-4 in San Antonio

Staff Report

There will be something for everyone at the 1992 Biennial Convention of the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) June 2-4 at San Antonio's Henry B. Gonzalez Convention Center.

The theme for this convention is "Generations Growing Together" and it will feature dozens of nationally known experts on issues including personal finance, health and fitness, the future of the economy, consumer fraud and the environment.

Televisions personalities Ed Bradley, Hugh Downs, Louis Rukeyser, Eric Sevareid and Dr. Art Ulene; psychologist Dr. Joyce Brothers; consumer advocate Ralph Nader; automobile executive Lee Iacocca; former first lady Lady Bird Johnson; and journalist Irving R. Levine are among the speakers.

"Many issues facing our nation will be covered by these excellent speakers," said Mrs. Jippie Tolbert, the Texas AARP state director and chief volunteer in the state. "I want to encourage all older Texans, even if they're not AARP members, to attend this three-day event."

The convention will include daily sessions on health and lifestyle issues, consumer and financial concerns, and politics and public affairs. Two fitness walks are planned and more than 200 displays featuring everything from volunteering to travel to consumer goods will be available in the convention exhibit area. Hands-on demonstrations of new technologies that may change the way we live also will be available. Special evening performances by Mitzi Gaynor and Mel Torme also are scheduled.

The convention registration fee is $3, which covers entrance to the sessions, the exhibit halls and all convention activities (except the two major entertainment events). Tickets for Ms. Gaynor's and Torme's shows are $8 per ticket, per show. Limited seating is available for all activities on a first-come, first-served basis. All fees are non-refundable.

AARP's delegate assembly also will meet at the convention to elect officers and members of the Board of Directors and conduct association business. For further information about the convention, write: AARP Convention Activities, 601 E. Street, N.W., Washington, D.C., 20049.

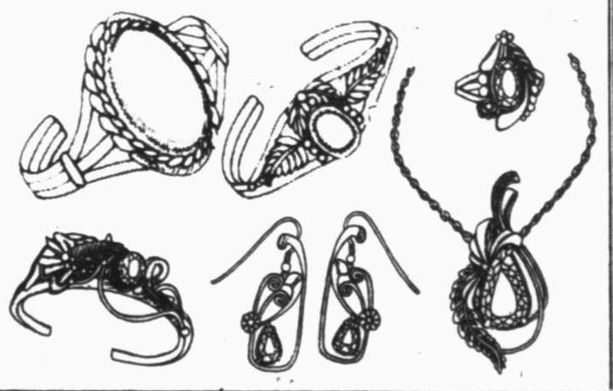

AARP is the nation's leading organization for people age 50 and over. It serves their needs and interests through legislative advocacy, research, informative programs and community services provided by a network of local chapters and experienced volunteers throughout the country. The organization also offers members a wide range of special membership benefits including "Modern Maturity" magazine and the monthly "Bulletin."

Opening lead: Five of ♣

Contrary to popular belief, what you don't know can hurt. Look how one of the world's great players, Gabriel Chagas of Brazil, made life for the defenders difficult on this deal from a recent major European tournament.

Once North showed grand slam interest by bidding five no trump, Chagas leaped to seven hearts on the strength of a solid heart suit. Had North's ace of diamonds or king of clubs been the king of spades, the grand slam would have been near laydown. As it was, the only legitimate hope was to find a defender with a bare king of spades.

Declarer won the king of clubs, cashed the ace and ruffed a club. We venture to suggest that most declarers we know would now cash the ace of diamonds for a spade discard, and go one down in peace and quiet. However, Chagas is made of sterner stuff.

Rather than reveal the closed hand's distribution, Chagas immediately ran six heart tricks, coming down to the Q 10 of spades and A Q of diamonds on the table and three spades to the ace and a trump in hand. West came down to the guarded kings of spades and diamonds. East sluffed the four of diamonds, then the two, to show an even number of cards in that suit, and a low spade.

When South now led the last trump, West, mesmerized by the deluge of trumps, parted with the eight of spades. Dummy's queen of diamonds was pitched, and the ace and queen of spades and ace of diamonds took the last three tricks.

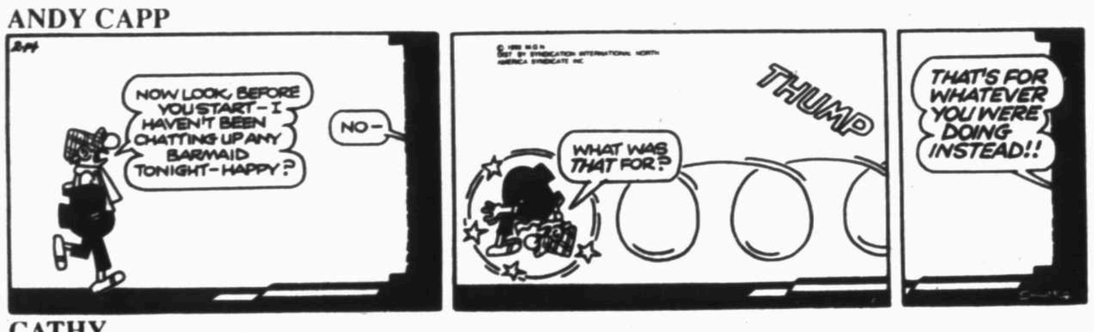

West took his eye off the ball. The auction marked South with the ace of spades, and if he held a diamond as well, the contract was cold no matter which king West unguarded. Therefore, West should have kept a second spade, for the only chance was that declarer was void in diamonds.

Stallone gets flowery invitation to special awards presentation

PARIS — The flowery invitation from the Culture Ministry wasn't of a sort Rocky or Rambo would expect to receive.

But sure enough, Culture Minster Jack Lang was soliciting guests to be so kind as to attend a ceremony Feb. 21 to award the medal of the Order of Arts and Letters to Sylvester Stallone.

Tuesday, Lang will present a medal to rock 'n' roll star Lou Reed, whose anthems about drugs, transvestism and violence have become cult classics.

Lang, despite occasional jibes at perceived American cultural imperialism, is an aficionado of U.S. culture.

Other recent recipients of the Arts and Letters medal include Jack Nicholson and Robert De Niro.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Whoopi Goldberg, who recently completed a movie in South Africa, has purchased land near Kruger National Park.

The black actress, an outspoken critic of apartheid, bought the 105-acre plot outside the town of Phalaborwa, where many landowners are right-wing farmers who favor racial segregation.

Goldberg

Real estate agent Chris Vorster told The Star newspaper that the property has no buildings, but Ms. Goldberg indicated she wanted to build a lodge. Ms. Goldberg paid about $180,000, he said.

Ms. Goldberg last month finished filming "Sarafina," an anti-apartheid movie set during the 1976 student uprising in the Soweto township outside Johannesburg.

With the lifting of the international cultural boycott against South Africa, several big-name entertainers have visited recently. Singer Paul Simon gave a five-concert tour and Spike Lee filmed several scenes for his movie on Malcolm X.

LONDON — A spiritual healer said Thursday she has treated the Duchess of York for back and neck pain under a blue plastic pyramid in her basement apartment.

The Greek-born mystic, who calls herself Vasso, said the 32-year-old daughter-in-law of Queen Elizabeth II sat on a stool under the pyramid to soak up energy around her in order to relax.

Vasso, 54, showed reporters the pyramid after The Daily Mirror published a photograph of the duchess embracing her Wednesday as she left the apartment in Islington, north London.

"I think she is a very special person," Vasso said. "The healing was for her back and neck. . . . She said she was happy."

A Buckingham Palace spokeswoman, who spoke on condition she was not identified, said: "The lady in question is a friend of the Duchess of York, but other than that we have no comment."

The duchess is not the first member of Britain's royal family to use alternative medicine. Prince Charles, heir to the throne, is an outspoken proponent for it and visited an Indian holistic doctor Wednesday.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor James Woods, whose cousin was shot to death in Florida, is offering a $25,000 reward for information that leads to the killer's conviction.

Ronald L. Woods, 48, died Wednesday at a hospital after being shot in the head Tuesday night in the cab he drove for Yellow Cab of Bradenton, Fla., police said.

Woods

"He was the kind of guy who would help anyone, anytime anywhere, an incredibly good-hearted man," Woods said Wednesday in a telephone interview from his Beverly Hills home.

The 44-year-old actor played a tough New York cop in his last film, "The Hard Way." His next film, "Straight Talk," with Dolly Parton is due out April 3.

Bradenton police had no suspects and few leads, said Larry Dellaposta, a police spokesman.

Woods said his cousin often helped his mother, Martha Dixon, who also lives in Florida. "All I know is that every time my mom had troubles at her house, Ronny would be there to help her," Woods said.

WAVERLY, Tenn. — Country music star Loretta Lynn says her son is "just mischievous" and she'll tell that to the judge who will sentence him for dealing cocaine.

"I'll take the stand for him if I have to," she said Tuesday.

Ernie Lynn, 38, will be sentenced March 26. The younger Lynn, a member of his mother's band, was convicted in January of selling a gram of cocaine to an undercover agent. He could get up to 12 years in prison.

Loretta Lynn's rise from poverty to stardom was made into the 1980 movie "Coal Miner's Daughter."

TIJUANA, Mexico — Rock guitarist Carlos Santana says his concert next month in Tijuana — the city of his youth — is the realization of a lifelong dream.

"This is a dream come true," Santana, 44, said Tuesday.

Vaccination levels leave nation short of goal

The national Centers for Disease Control reported that compliance with the full recommended immunization schedule for 2-year-olds ranged from 42 percent in El Paso, to 10 percent in Houston.

ATLANTA (AP) — A study of children in nine major cities has found no more than four in 10 were properly vaccinated by age 2, federal health officials said Thursday. One city reported a dismal 10 percent.

The national Centers for Disease Control reported that compliance with the full recommended immunization schedule for 2-year-olds ranged from 42 percent in El Paso, to 10 percent in Houston.

The others: New Orleans, 40 percent; Oakland, Calif., St. Louis and Washington, D.C., each 38 percent; New York City's Bronx borough, and Cleveland, each 36 percent; and Miami, 27 percent.

Such vaccination levels leave the nation — or at least those cities — well short of the government's immunization goals for the year 2000, said Betty Zell of the CDC's Division of Immunization.

"None of them are good, considering the goal is 90 percent," she said. "As far as the variance between cities, we can't answer why that is."

The U.S. Health and Human Services secretary, Dr. Louis Sullivan, announced Thursday in Philadelphia a $46 million program to reach that 90 percent goal. He said he was approving immunization plans for six cities, which will be used to develop programs for about 80 other immunization projects.

The initiative resulted from President Bush's call last June for health officials in the six cities — Philadelphia, Dallas, Phoenix, Detroit, San Diego and Rapid City, S.D. — to examine what could be done to increase immunization among preschool children.

The amounts of money for each city's program weren't yet determined, Sullivan said.

The CDC's immunization committee says children should have, before age 2, four doses of diphtheria-tetanus-pertussis (DTP) vaccine; three doses of polio vaccine; one dose of measles-mumps-rubella vaccine; and, in most cases, four doses of haemophilus B vaccine. Many of the vaccines can be administered simultaneously; the recommended schedule can be done in four visits after birth.

CDC officials also have recently recommended three hepatitis B shots for young children, but that was not yet in effect when the nine-city study was conducted.

The CDC said the low vaccination rates have been blamed primarily on parents not returning for the fourth DTP shot, at 15 months. But excluding that shot, proper vaccination rates in the nine cities still ranged from only 40 to 61 percent, the agency said.

The study was conducted last year by examining the health records of a statistically selected sampling of first-graders in the cities, to see how many had proper shots by age 2. The result is "a very valid survey" of vaccination levels in those cities just three or four years ago, Zell said.

Children who were up-to-date on vaccines at 3 months had a much greater likelihood of getting the shots they needed by age 2, the CDC noted. For example, in St. Louis, 52 percent of kids who were up-to-date at 3 months stayed up-to-date at age 2; among those already lagging at 3 months, only 13 percent caught up by 2.

Nationwide, about 95 percent of recommended vaccines have been administered by school age.

Cuts cause Congress to consider plan

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Fearing economic dislocation from $50 billion in cuts to the Pentagon budget, Congress is considering a variety of proposals to cushion the effect on communities, employees at arms plants and displaced military personnel.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, has proposed allowing military personnel a year's leave to attend college or undertake vocational training to prepare for civilian life, then providing increased retirement pay to those who go into teaching, law enforcement and other jobs designated by the government as particularly useful to society. congressional budget analysts have not yet determined the cost of the proposal.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, has called for keeping arms-production lines open to improve existing weapons, in part to keep highly skilled workers in military industries like fighter jet and tank manufacturing.

Rep. Beverly B. Byron of Maryland, who heads the Armed Services military personnel subcommittee, suggests sending displaced military forces to help the former Eastern bloc and Soviet countries rebuild.

Although no one is certain what the economic effect of the military budget cuts will be, members of Congress are reacting to concerns that the savings will seriously harm some areas of the country. Some members argue that some of the money should be reinvested in hard-hit communities or otherwise used to ease the pain.

The Defense Department has announced plans to cut $50 billion from military spending from 1992 through 1997, but some lawmakers have called for cuts two to three times that size. The aerospace industries in California and Texas and big shipyards in Connecticut and Rhode Island could be especially hurt.

The administration has so far not offered any sweeping proposals about softening the effect of the budget reductions. Christopher Jehn, assistant secretary of defense for force management and personnel, said in response to Nunn's plan:

"The concept in general is an interesting one. When we get hard legislation, we will take a serious look at it."

The Pentagon's main effort so far has been to earmark $200 million since 1991 to help retrain and find jobs for employees from arms plants who have been laid off and assist communities affected by base closings.

"This funding replenishes badly taxed resources already stretched to the max by cuts in defense spending," said Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn..

Cowboys-Oilers to be in Japan

IRVING (AP) — How do you say Run-and-Shoot in Japanese?

The Houston Oilers and Dallas Cowboys will find out this summer when they travel to Tokyo to play in Japan's version of the American Bowl.

The Cowboys finally gave into commissioner Paul Tagliabue's arm twisting after Dallas owner Jerry Jones had asked to be bypassed this year. Jones put on a happy face Thursday, saying "the NFL convinced us that the Cowboys were needed in the game."

Tagliabue met with Jones on Tuesday.

"Several weeks ago the Cowboys were approached about the idea of going to Japan, but we were reluctant and didn't want to disrupt our training camp and conditioning during preseason," Jones said. "The NFL said our visibility would be great for the game."

Jones added with a wry smile, "It will be a great opportunity for us to demonstrate the work ethic of the Dallas Cowboys in Japan."

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson has said he wouldn't be happy with a trip to Japan coming in the middle of training camp.

"Jimmy feels we will get some benefit out of it," Jones said. "We've got to get used to this. We're going to be on more Monday night games."

Chaps stymie Texans

■ Midland College steals a 70-66 basketball victory at South Plains College Thursday.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

LEVELLAND — Midland College overcame a rash of turnovers and miserable first half shooting to defeat the South Plains College Texans, 70-66, in Western Junior College Athletic Conference action here Thursday night.

The win gives MC (21-5 overall, 11-1 in conference) a two-game lead over second-place SPC (20-7, 10-3), and a sweep of the regular season series against the Texans. And for MC head coach Steve Green, it was the fourth consecutive win his teams have posted against SPC's Ron Mayberry.

In other conference action, Odessa College downed Clarendon 80-65, Howard College edged Frank Phillips 109-108 and New Mexico Junior College bested Western Texas 96-89.

"They've just got a better team than we do right now," Mayberry said. "They did things better than we did."

The Chaps shot just 24 percent from the field in the first half, and actually finished the first 20 minutes with more points from the free throw line than from the field. MC hit 15-of-16 shots from the stripe before the break.

The Chaps hit 25-of-32 from the line in the game, while SPC went to the line just 20 times, hitting only 12.

Sophomore guard Chris McKinney, playing with a jammed finger and a bruised knee — both injuries suffered in the first half — finished the game with 23 points. A pair of free throws from McKinney with 14 seconds left secured the MC win, putting the Chaps up 70-66.

The Chaps owned the glass, out-rebounding SPC, 54-28. Fabian Mina had a game-high 12.

"I think what we did tonight better than any other time this season was limit them to one shot," Green said. "They didn't seem to get a lot of offensive rebounds when they were in a position to score. It seemed like they'd have to regroup."

SPC, in fact, was limited to nine offensive rebounds.

The down side for MC was turnovers. The Chaps had 25, 14 of which came in the sloppy first half. SPC had just eight give-a-ways.

Despite the downs, MC did enough right to make up for the mistakes.

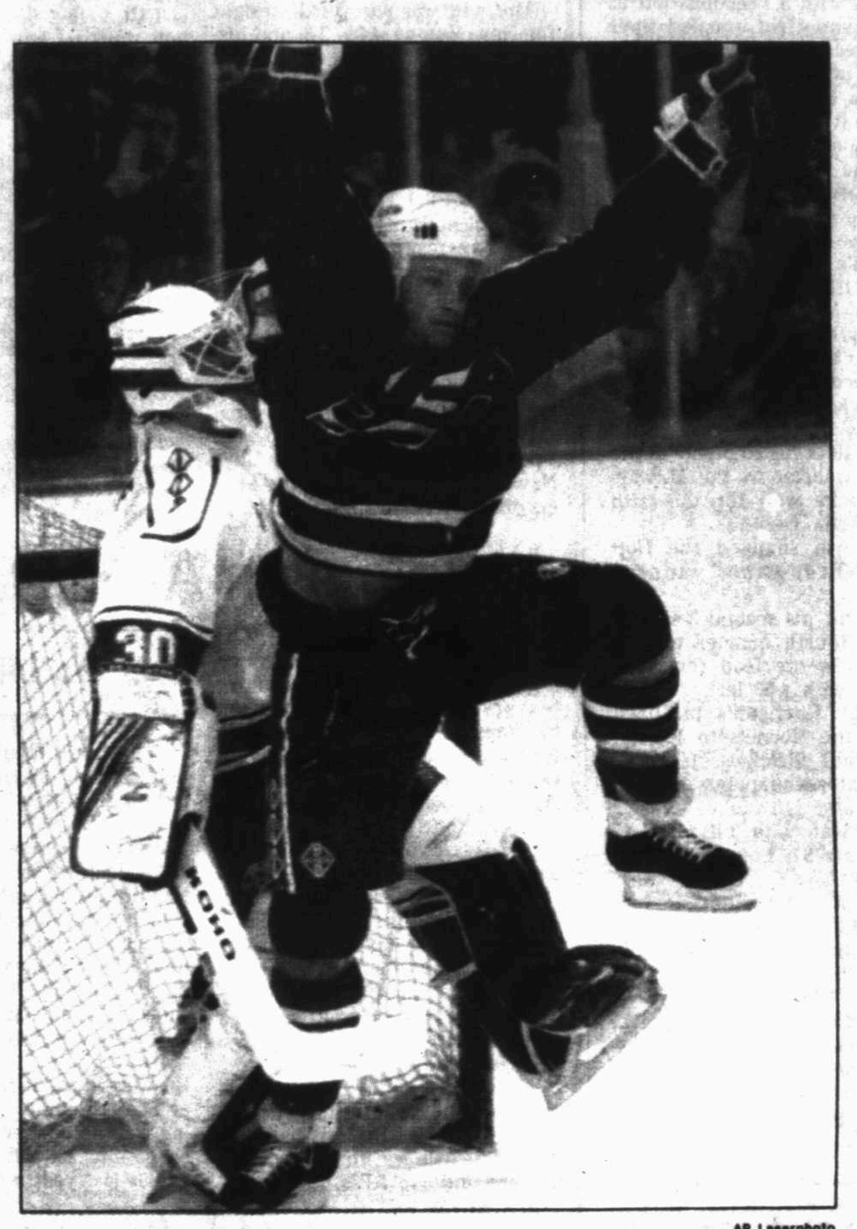

"They just came at us," Mayberry said, "and we didn't counter what they did. They played well. And they played smart. When we changed, they changed."

The game featured 12 lead changes, and MC didn't go ahead to stay until the 1:40 point, when Shawn Morris hit a deuce to put MC ahead 65-63.

ALBERTVILLE, France — A waltz by figure skater Paul Wylie, a golden oldie by the U.S. hockey team and a hot new tune on the slopes by Donna Weinbrecht brought the Americans out of a deep funk at the Winter Games.

Wylie leaped out of the shadow of teammates Christopher Bowman and Todd Eldredge to place third Thursday behind Ukrainian Viktor Petrenko and Czechoslovakian Petr Barna going into Saturday's final program.

"Ouch!" Bowman exclaimed, staring at his first set of scores for required elements.

"Whoops!" he said, shaking his head at the second row of numbers for presentation.

With those two words, the U.S. men's figure skating champion, who came here hoping to win a gold, summed up his disappointment at placing seventh after the short program. His only chance of winning an Olympic medal now appears to be in Lillehammer in 1994.

The undefeated U.S. hockey team is in much better position, reaching the medal round for the first time since the golden days of 1980 with a 4-1 romp over 1988 silver medalist Finland.

Up on the slopes, the acrobatic, whimsical and wild took over as Weinbrecht won the first Olympic gold medal in moguls freestyle, a sport once denigrated as "hot dog skiing."

ALBERTVILLE, France — The arenas sit on either side of the street at Parc Olympique. The activities inside are nowhere that close.

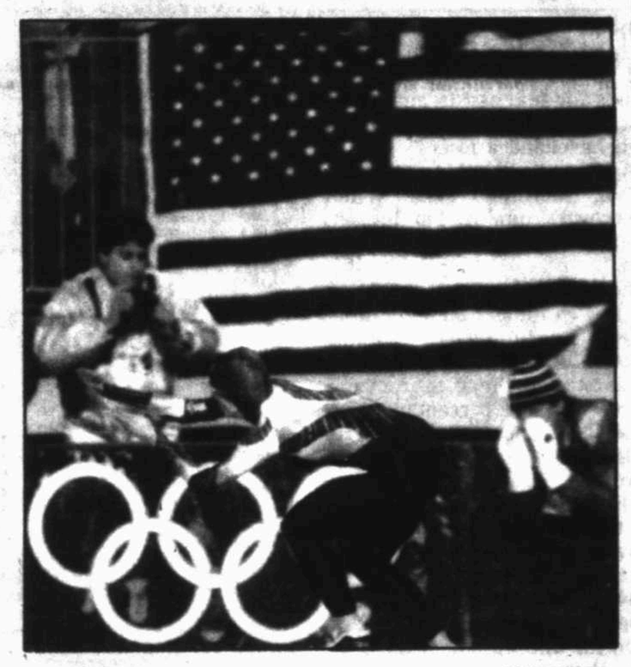

At the ice oval, a temporary open air facility that will be converted to a running track after the Olympics, the speedskaters worked out before the women's 1,000-meter race today — American Bonnie Blair's last chance for a second gold medal at the Albertville Winter Games.

In the ice rink, figure skaters practiced, preparing for the ice dance compulsories and the first look at Isabelle and Paul Duchesnay, the French brother and sister who could be the Torvill and Dean of 1992.

CBS will focus its taped television coverage on both buildings Friday night, showing Blair's bid and the dancing Duchesnays, as well as the 120-meter ski jumping team competition.

In the morning, the network has live coverage of the ski jumping and the hockey game between the Unified Team and France, a match that takes on almost crisis proportions

Lady Rebs can tie for first in closer

■ A win tonight over Odessa High would give Midland Lee's girls a district co-championship with Abilene High.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

It has been a wild, emotional season for the Midland Lee Lady Rebel basketball team. The girls team has overcome injury, illness, and a pre-season prediction that had them finishing no better than fifth by one newspaper.

They weren't supposed to beat Odessa Permian. But they did. Twice.

Nor were they supposed to beat rival Midland High. But they did. Twice.

Most assuredly, they were not supposed to beat Abilene High. But not only did they win that game, they embarrassed the league-leading Lady Eagles, 63-43, prompting AHS head coach Sam

4-5A Basketball

Nichols to say of his team, "We stunk the floor completely up, and it won't happen again," although it did last Friday when AHS lost to San Angelo by 19.

Incidentally, Lee's two district losses — to AHS and OHS — have been by a combined nine points. AHS's two defeats have been by a total of 39 points.

The Lee girls have overcome a season-ending knee injury to Courtney McHugh, as well as the loss of senior Lisa Cochran following surgery to remove a benign tumor.

Lee wasn't supposed to make the Class 5A playoffs, but it has, clinching a spot what seems like ages ago. Tonight, there's another one of those hurdles the Lady Rebs aren't supposed to clear, but somehow just may: Should the Lady Rebels defeat the Odessa High Lady Bronchos this evening, Lee will end the season tied for first place with Abilene High.

If Lee and AHS end the season tied for first, a one-game playoff will be held next Monday at 7:30 p.m. in Coahoma to determine playoff seeding.

First though, Lee must get past OHS, a team it has already lost to twice this season. Three wins against one team in a single season is known throughout the sports world to be a difficult chore to accomplish. First-year Lee coach Elise Kail, though, won't speculate on whether the three-win jinx is an advantage for her Lady Rebels.

"I don't want to say anything that's going to give him (OHS coach Harry Masch) any fuel," Kail said.

"We've been talking this week about how we're going to play our style of ball and not get into any psychological warfare which we did in the first two games. They talk trash and are very physical."

Lee, 14-10 overall, entered District 4-5A play with a 5-8 overall record. They were supposed to flounder, but have instead flourished. Is it emotion? Is it the losses of McHugh and Cochran that have inspired them to accomplish the unthinkable?

"I think it (emotion) carried us for a couple of games, but we've laid back off of it now," Kail said. "Every kid has got to be more intense about their job.

"We over-excelled when we played AHS. Other than that, I don't think we've overachieved, in fact I think we're underachieving. In the games we've played on the road in the second half of the season, we haven't started playing well until the second half (of the game). We haven't been playing to our full potential."

The Lee-OHS tip-off is set for 8 p.m. at the Rebel gym.

Elsewhere, the MHS girls (5-6, 19-10) close out their season at Permian (4-7, 11-16).

In boys' games, fourth-place MHS (5-5, 16-12) hosts Permian at Chaparral Center, while third-place Lee tries to keep its playoff hopes alive at Odessa High. The Rebels, at 5-4, are two games behind second-place Cooper with three games remaining. All games start at 8 p.m.

NEW YORK — Horace Grant scored 13 points in the first quarter and finished with 18 points, 11 rebounds and seven blocked shots as the Chicago Bulls beat the New York Knicks for the 12th consecutive time, 106-85 Thursday night.

NBA

The Bulls, who outshot New York 72 percent to 37 percent in the first period, never trailed after scoring the first eight points of the game. They led 31-22 at the end of the quarter behind Grant's 6-for-7 shooting.

Michael Jordan and B.J. Armstrong scored 17 points each for the Bulls, now 22-0 when holding the opposition under 100 points.

Warriors 109, Spurs 94

OAKLAND, Calif. — Chris Mullin scored 25 points and Sarunas Marciulionis 21 as the Golden State Warriors shut down David Robinson.

Robinson had 14 points and 16 rebounds, but took only nine shots. With teammates helping out, Tyrone Hill held Robinson to two points and one missed shot in the second half.

Willie Anderson and Terry Cummings each scored 18 points for the Spurs, who managed 40 points after halftime, shooting 42.5 percent in the second half.

Hill had 17 points and Tim Hardaway and Billy Owens 16 each for the Warriors.

Timberwolves 96, Pistons 93

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Jerome Richardson's 3-pointer at the buzzer lifted the Minnesota Timberwolves to their first victory ever over Detroit.

Richardson finished with 19 points and 13 assists for the Timberwolves who had lost the five previous games against Detroit since the club was formed.

It was the ninth victory in 48 games this season for Minnesota, the only NBA team that hasn't reached double figures in the win column.

Heat 121, Hawks 119

MIAMI — Seldom-used guard John Morton hit two free throws with 3.3 seconds left as the Miami Heat equaled their team record of 24 victories in a season with a victory over the Atlanta Hawks.

Glen Rice, who had 26 points, hit one of two free throws and added a spinning layup as the Heat tied the game at 116-116 with 90 seconds left.

Atlanta's Paul Graham missed a 15-foot jumper and, at the other end of the floor, fouled Miami's Keith Askins, who hit one of two free throws to give Miami a 117-116 lead at 35.6 seconds.

Bucks 127, Hornets 118

MILWAUKEE — Dale Ellis scored 19 of his 30 points in the fourth quarter as the Milwaukee Bucks won for the fifth time in six games.

The win snapped the Hornets' three-game winning streak.

Ellis hit his second 3-pointer of the fourth quarter to give the Bucks the lead for good, 108-105 with 4:57 left.

Kenny Gattison's put-back closed the Hornets to 108-107, but Frank Brickowski scored the next seven points for the Bucks and Milwaukee took a 115-110 lead with 2:18 left.

Jazz 97, Lakers 91

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone scored 35 points, including eight straight in a span of 1:18 to break a fourth-quarter tie, as the Utah Jazz defeated the Los Angeles Lakers.

The score was 86-86 with 4:33 remaining before Malone scored on two outside jumpers, a fastbreak layup and two free throws, putting the Jazz ahead 94-86 with 3:15 left.

New Mexico drops No. 21 Miners

Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE — Willie Banks produced the early offense and reserve Lewis LaMar remained on a late-season surge as New Mexico scored a 68-56 win Thursday over 21st-ranked Texas-El Paso.

Top 25

The win was the third straight for New Mexico (14-9, 8-3) and lifted the Lobos into a tie with UTEP (18-4, 8-3) and Brigham Young for the Western Athletic Conference lead.

The Miners were led by David Van Dyke's 23 points and 15 rebounds, but UTEP's season-long strength in the backcourt disappeared against an aggressive New Mexico defense.

Miner guards Prince Stewart and Eddie Rivera hit just two of 18 shots, with Stewart going scoreless with a zero-for-10 shooting night. Both went into the game averaging better than 11 points a game.

With Banks hitting back-to-back 3-pointers in the first five minutes, New Mexico stayed with the Miners offensively through the first 12 minutes and took the lead for good at 20-18 on an off-balance bank shot by Will Scott with 8:00 left in the first half.

No. 3 UCLA 72, Oregon St. 62

CORVALLIS, Ore. — Don MacLean broke Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's UCLA career scoring record and the No. 3 Bruins pulled away in the final 10 minutes for a Pac-10 victory over Oregon State.

UCLA (18-1, 9-1) trailed throughout the first half and didn't take the lead for good until Mitchell Butler sank a 3-pointer with 11:56 remaining to put the Bruins on top 54-52.

Butler's basket ignited a 9-0 UCLA run and the Beavers (11-12, 3-7) never were closer than six points again.

MacLean scored 16 of his 22 points in the second half. The 6-foot-10 senior pushed his career scoring total to 2,329, four more than Abdul-Jabbar.

No. 7 Arizona 94, Washington St. 72

TUCSON, Ariz. — Chris Mills scored 25 points to lead five Arizona players in double figures as the No. 7 Wildcats blew out Washington State.

Arizona (18-3, 8-2 in the Pacific-10 Conference) took its 14th straight win against Washington State (16-7, 4-6), including eight in a row at home.

Trailing 75-50 with 8:08 to go, Washington State outscored Arizona 13-0, with Neil Derrick and Brian Paine each scoring two layups and Tyrone Maxey a 3-pointer, before three of Arizona's starters returned to the lineup with 5:49 left.

No. 13 Southern Cal 69, Oregon 68

EUGENE, Ore. — Rodney Chatman's two free-throws with 17 seconds left lifted No. 13 Southern California to a victory over Oregon.

Chatman hit both ends of a one-and-one for a 69-65 lead.

Oregon's Clyde Jordan rebounded a missed shot and scored on a 3-pointer with 2 seconds left to cut the final margin to one.

The Trojans (17-3 overall, 9-1 in the conference) won their ninth straight conference game for the first time in 52 years.

Oregon (6-13, 2-8) was led by Antoine Stoudamire's 32 points.

Harold Miner had 32 points for the Trojans, 19 in the first half.

No. 14 Tulane 76, No. 22 N. Carolina-Charlotte 68

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — David Whitmore scored two quick baskets during an 11-0 Tulane run early in the second half and the 14th-ranked Green Wave held on for a Metro Conference win over No. 22 North Carolina-Charlotte.

Tulane (19-2, 7-0) was trailing 43-40 when a jumper by Anthony Reed at the 17:07 mark started the spurt.

G.J. Hunter followed with a 3-pointer, then Whitmore hit his shots, and by the time the streak ended, Tulane led 51-43.

For the game, the Green Wave outshot the host 49ers 58 percent to 40 percent.

No. 23 Florida St. 64, Virginia 63

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Virginia's Bryant Stith, the Atlantic Coast Conference's leading free-throw shooter, missed a pair of foul shots with 2 seconds left, allowing No. 23 Florida State to escape with a win.

The triumph was the sixth on the road for the Seminoles (17-6, 9-4 ACC) in league play, two more than any other first-year team in league history.

Angels sign Alvin Davis for $800,000

Associated Press

Baseball Roundup

NEW YORK — Three more players had salary arbitration hearings Thursday, and the California Angels signed free agent first baseman Alvin Davis to a one-year contract for $800,000.

Seattle outfielder Jay Buhner and Texas Rangers right-hander Kevin Brown had hearings before arbitrator Gil Vernon, and Baltimore right-hander Bob Milacki had a hearing before arbitrator Anthony Sinicropi.

In another signing, Seattle reliever Mike Schooler agreed on a one-year deal for $800,000, a $310,000 raise.

Davis, 31, hit only .221 last season for the Mariners with 12 homers and 69 RBIs. His best season for Seattle was in 1984 with 27 homers and 116 RBIs.

The Angels have been looking at help at first since Wally Joyner left to sign as a free agent with Kansas City.

Owners have won eight of 10 cases decided thus far, including six straight. Twenty-seven players remain in arbitration and three more players have hearings scheduled for Friday: Seattle right-hander Brian Holman, Boston shortstop Jody Reed and Texas left-hander Kenny Rogers.

Meanwhile, the Milwaukee Brewers invited free agent infielder Scott Fletcher to spring training as a non-roster player. Fletcher, 33, hit .206 with 28 RBIs in 90 games last year with the Chicago White Sox. He is the 76th of 98 free agents to agree to a new deal.

Schooler was 3-3 with a 3.67 ERA and seven saves in 34 relief appearances last season. He had asked for $925,000 and Seattle had offered $650,000.

Buhner, who made $247,500 in 1991, is asking for $1,445,000 while the Mariners are offering $750,000. Buhner, who hit several long home runs, including one over the left-field bullpen at Yankee Stadium, hit .244 last season with 27 homers and 77 RBIs.

Brown, who made $355,000, is asking for $1.2 million and the Rangers are offering $750,000. He was 9-12 with a 4.40 ERA in 33 starts last year.

Milacki, who made $280,000, is asking for $1.18 million and the Orioles are offering $700,000. He was 10-9 in 1991 with a 4.01 ERA.

in the second half, after sustaining the injuries to his hand and knee. Add to his point total nine rebounds and four assists, and it was clear McKinney didn't want to leave Levelland a loser.

"A big game like this ... it's kind of fun," McKinney said. "When the crowd's into it, I'm into it. When the crowd is dead, I'm dead."

The crowd, too, was definitely into it. Chap fans nearly outnumbered the hometown Texan backers.

"We started the game putting two of our low percentage free throw shooters on the line (Morris Conley and Mina)," Green noted. "I wouldn't exactly put them on the line to shoot technical shots. But they were hitting their free throws, and when your low percentage guys are hitting their free throws, you're going to be tough to beat.

"On the line was about the only place they weren't guarding us. They're the best defensive team in the league."

MHS's Katherine Bash and Courtni Harrison will also compete in girl's diving.

The MHS Aqua Dawgs, led by Matt Houston and Steve Thomsen — two veterans of the Austin championships — have won the Region I title in each of the last two years and have 12 boys taking part in today's preliminaries.

Houston, a senior, has won the 100 butterfly two years running and been to state where he's finished third. Thomsen was on MHS' region champion 200 freestyle relay last year.

Ten girls represent Lee in swimming, and six boys will take the blocks.

Canseco arrested after ramming car of estranged wife

MIAMI (AP) — Jose Canseco's rocky marriage went public Thursday when he was arrested after police said he chased his estranged wife's car, rammed it twice and spat on her window.

Canseco, the Oakland A's 27-year-old slugger, was booked in the Dade County Jail and released 15 minutes later on $5,000 cash bond. He was charged with aggravated battery, which carries a maximum penalty of 15 years in prison and $10,000 in fines.

The confrontation began about 4:30 a.m. EST when Canseco and his wife Esther started arguing at a 24-hour gas station, Metro-Dade police spokesman Ralph Fernandez said.

Canseco took his wife's purse and pager, a police report said. He eventually gave back the purse but refused to return the pager.

Mrs. Canseco took the purse and sped off in her BMW. Canseco followed in his Porsche and in one block rammed the left front panel and the right rear panel of her car, causing about $10,000 in damage, police said.

When Mrs. Canseco, 25, pulled to the side of the road, Canseco walked up to her driver's side window, the report said. An officer arrived in time to see Canseco spit on her driver's side window, Fernandez said.

"She explained to the officer what had happened," said police spokesman Donald Blocker. "She explained the thing repeatedly."

Tip of the Week

Combination spares, called "Sleepers," can strike fear in the hearts of most bowlers. They don't have to be a problem if you know how to line up for them. Anytime you are dealing with a sleeper, whether it be in the form of the "bucket" (2-4-5-8) or double wood (2-8, 3-9, etc.), always line up for the sleeper or back pin. If you cover that back pin, then the ones in front are sure to go with it.

OLYMPICS: Bowman falters on combination jump

(From 1C)

Kronberger's gold and Anita Wachter's silver in women's combined skiing. Germany came up empty on a grand day for host France and 1994 Winter Games host Norway, which moved into a tie for fourth with six medals. The Russian-led Unified Team was third with nine.

Finland is fifth with four medals, followed by the United States and Italy with three each among the 60 awarded so far.

Wylie, 10th in 1988 and the self-described "old man" of the U.S. team at 27, leaped in the air when he finished his sparkling program featuring the most intricate step sequences of the night to the music of Ravel's "La Valse" — The Waltz.

He sprinted off the ice into the arms of coaches Mary and Evy Scotvold to await marks as high as 5.8.

"I'm psyched," Wylie said. "I felt I had to prove myself. Everyone has said from here is just the frosting on the cake. I decided I really like frosting."

Bowman said "I can't believe it" to coach John Nicks as he left the rink after touching his hand to the ice in the midst of his triple axel-double toe loop combination. His routine was slow and uninspiring, in contrast to the verve he showed in winning his second national title last month at Orlando, Fla.

Nothing fancy was needed at hockey, just basic rock 'n' roll defense.

Scott Young, who scored two goals, played on the seventh-place U.S. team in 1988 that got off to a 1-2 start and said this year "it's a completely different feeling" after winning the first three games.

"We had a good team in '88," he said. "We should have been so much better. It was a major disappointment. This is tremendous."

Goalie Ray LeBlanc made 29 saves in a nifty sequel to his 46-save shutout of Germany.

"Not taking anything away from Italy and Germany," Young said of the first two U.S. victims, "but we feel Finland is one of the better teams in the tournament. They've always been in the running. We've been reading the papers. We knew everybody was going to gauge us on this game."

Some people didn't know what to expect at moguls skiing. Invented in Europe in the 1920s and popularized in the United States in the late 1960s, the sport turned out to be a big hit with the crowd here as France's Edgar Grospiron and Olivier Allamand won the men's gold and silver, followed by American Nelson Carmichael with the bronze.

Weinbrecht and Grospiron were mobbed like rock stars by the 10,000 fans, who turned the event into a wintry carnival with snowball fights near the finish line.

"The sport is really going to go places after what happened today, Weinbrecht said. "It means a dream come true. I have waited for it for years."

Weinbrecht, a two-time world champion, grabbed the gold with two huge spread-eagle leaps and smooth slaloming among the 66 bumps on the course, where points are awarded for speed and style.

"It's a young sport and, after this, we will have to continue to work hard so that the other freestyle disciplines, ballet and aeriels, also become medal events at the Olympics," Grospiron said.

French champagne flowed in celebration of the country's best start since 1968 at Grenoble, when Jean-Claude Killy skied to three golds and France won its most medals ever, nine.

"It's delirium. It's the start of two weeks of partying," said Grospiron, who helped France match its medals total for the past four Winter Olympics combined.

And the home team's favorites haven't even gotten into the act.

Skier Carole Merle hasn't passed her first gate, the Duchesnays haven't danced on ice, Surya Bonaly is still waiting for her first jump in figure skating, and Franck Piccard, a silver medalist in the downhill, has more slalom races to come.

Norway won its second and third golds and a bronze. Speedskater Geir Karlstad slushed through a hard rain to take the men's 5,000 meters, cross-country skier Vegard Ulvang won the men's 10-kilometer race, and women's moguls skier Stine Hattestad won a bronze.

Karlstad made up for his disappointing seventh place in 1988, when he was heavily favored. But that didn't stop him from joining in a chorus of complaints about the race conditions.

"It wasn't equal competition for everyone and that is not good for the Olympics," said Karlstad, who benefited from a freshly smoothed surface. "I wanted the whole event postponed because of the conditions. For the future it is important that we have the Olympics indoors."

American Eric Flaim, who finished fourth in this event indoors at Calgary, was sixth outdoors here.

Kronberger, the queen of Alpine skiing, slalomed flawlessly through fresh, fluffy snow to complete her victory in the combined event after skiing the fastest combined downhill Wednesday.

Wachter, who won the combined gold in 1988, was far behind in second, with France's Florence Masnada taking the bronze.

American Krista Schmidinger, second in the downhill, finished 11th overall after a pair of respectable slalom runs. Schmidinger, a downhill specialist, rarely races in the slalom.

"It was a rodeo ride out there," said Schmidinger, after racing in freezing rain and heavy snow that gave the mountains a different look than they had on a warm, sunny day Wednesday. "It was kind of like going through some whipped cream. It was pretty neat."

Kronberger, 22, has dominated women's skiing for the past three seasons, winning the overall World Cup title twice and leading again this year. She also is world champion in downhill.

But in ski-mad Austria, that was not enough. When she entered the Olympics in the worst slump of her career, hometown critics turned up the pressure and her confidence plummeted.

"The pressure is not so high now," said Kronberger, looking more relieved than delighted.

SKATING: Blair ready for 1,000 for the former Soviet Union team's psyche after its loss to Czechoslovakia.

(From 1C)

Also scheduled is taped coverage of the men's luge doubles, and the women's 7.5-kilometer biathlon relay. Friday's other hockey games have Switzerland against Norway and Czechoslovakia playing Canada.

The 1,000-meter race allows Blair to return to one of her speedskating specialties. She is a sprinter, more attuned to the the shorter distances like the 500, where she delivered America's first gold medal Monday. In Wednesday's longer 1,500, she tired and struggled to finish 21st in the field of 32.

Blair's coach, Peter Mueller, had urged her to try the longer race.

"She was fourth in the World Cup 1,500," he said. "You have to be realistic, but she's here to win. She's a medal contender every time she steps on the ice."

Mueller said Blair's victory in the 500 — she is the first woman to win two Olympic golds at that distance — had taken the pressure off the entire United States speedskating team.

"These are the Olympics," he said. "It's not easy to win a gold medal once. To come back and do it again, that's extremely difficult."

Blair wasn't blue over the 1,500 showing, since she's always viewed the distance as training for her other races — even if Mueller did not. Her coach was optimistic, too.

"We worked hard for 10 months," he said. "Now we're on vacation. This is the fun part."

Dear Mr. Campbell,

Thanks for finding a sponsor, Midland Truck and Equipment Co., for us to receive the Midland Reporter-Telegram this year. Our teacher has neat ideas every week on "Newspaper Day." She lets us circle nouns, adjectives and verbs with crayons or markers.

Sometimes we cut out pictures. Once we cut out a picture of two horses and they were having a converstion. One of my favorite things is looking at the TV schedule and finding the channel and time for a certain program like Full House. Another favorite thing is the one where the Newspaper people printed the Christmas tree grinding machine and we wrote some other ways you could see it. We use the left-over paper for art projects or reading skills.

Prices climb

NEW YORK — Oil prices rose sharply Thursday, as OPEC ministers tried to strike a deal cutting back production.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in March settled at $19.68 per barrel, up 41 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

"The real story of the day here is what are the Saudis going to do and will they continue to play hardball," said Thomas P. Blakeslee, an energy analyst with Pegasus Econometric Group Inc., in Hoboken, N.J.

The consensus among oil traders was that OPEC will agree to an overall production ceiling, but the cartel may have a more difficult time setting individual quotas for each oil state and making sure everybody sticks to the prescribed limit. OPEC fears prices could collapse during the second quarter if production is not reined in.

Natural gas prices fell, with contracts for delivery in March settling at $1.115 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 2.1 cents.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK — The dollar climbed Thursday on world foreign exchange markets after the government reported unexpectedly strong economic figures.

On New York's Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery fell $2.20 an ounce to $355.90.

Earlier, gold fell in London to $356.30 an ounce from $357.50 late Wednesday, and to $356.50 an ounce in Zurich from $357.00 late Wednesday.

In Hong Kong, gold rose $1.29 an ounce to close at a bid $357.96.

Silver for current delivery fell 1 cent an ounce to $4.203 on New York's Comex. Silver fell in London to a late bid of $4.21 an ounce from $4.22 late Wednesday.

In New York, the dollar rose to 127.65 Japanese yen from 127.40 yen on Wednesday.

The dollar also edged higher against the British pound. In New York, the pound was quoted at $1.7725, down from $1.7895 late Wednesday.

Other dollar rates as of 4 p.m. EST in New York, compared with late rates Wednesday, included: 1.6240 German marks, up from 1.6065; 1.4600 Swiss francs, up from 1.4385; 5.5310 French francs, up from 5.4720; 1,220.50 Italian lire, up from 1,208; and 1.18625 Canadian dollars, up from 1.18085.

Stock dive

NEW YORK — The stock market suffered a setback Thursday as interest rates rose and hopes dimmed for new credit-easing steps by the Federal Reserve.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 25.26 points to a new closing high on Wednesday, fell back 30.18 points to 3,246.65.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 9 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Saudis reject deal to cut output

■ Some OPEC nations want to reduce production by more than 1.5 million barrels.

Associated Press

GENEVA — Saudi Arabia on Thursday fended off efforts by its OPEC partners for a quick deal to slash the cartel's oil production by more than 1.5 million barrels a day in the coming months.

The kingdom, the world's largest crude exporter, promised to offer its own ideas Friday.

Ministers of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries failed in day-long bargaining Thursday to wrap up an agreement that would be designed to give a lift to crude prices.

"Everything is still under discussion," said Iraqi Oil Minister Osama al-Hiti after members of the cartel held talks in the evening. He described the meeting as the most important since the Gulf War.

A majority of producers favored a sharp cut in the cartel's surging production by slicing output from 24.2 million barrels a day currently to 22.5 million barrels in the spring.

Augustin Hervo-Akendengue, the Gabonese oil minister, described a new ceiling of 22.5 million barrels a day as "an objective" that would be "good for all of us."

But sources said Saudi Arabia, the cartel's most powerful member, was holding out for a higher ceiling in the range of 22.7 million to 23 million barrels a day.

Some said the superproducer was insisting on maintaining an enormous chunk of overall output.

Prices rose anyway on the futures market Thursday, with spot-month oil contracts settling at $19.68 per barrel, up 41 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The ministers are trying to fashion an accord that will pull enough oil off the markets to move prices sharply closer to the group's target of $21 a barrel.

Weak demand for the producers' oil this winter has been blamed in part for sliding prices.

The price of a basket of crudes monitored by the cartel averaged less than $17 a barrel last week. The New York futures price is always several dollars higher because it more closely reflects the value of premium, low-sulfur oil.

All the ministers but Saudi Arabia's influential Hisham Nazer met for closed-door bargaining Thursday morning. Saudi sources said Nazer stayed away because the discussions were at an early stage.

Afterward, ministers said they had narrowed their differences.

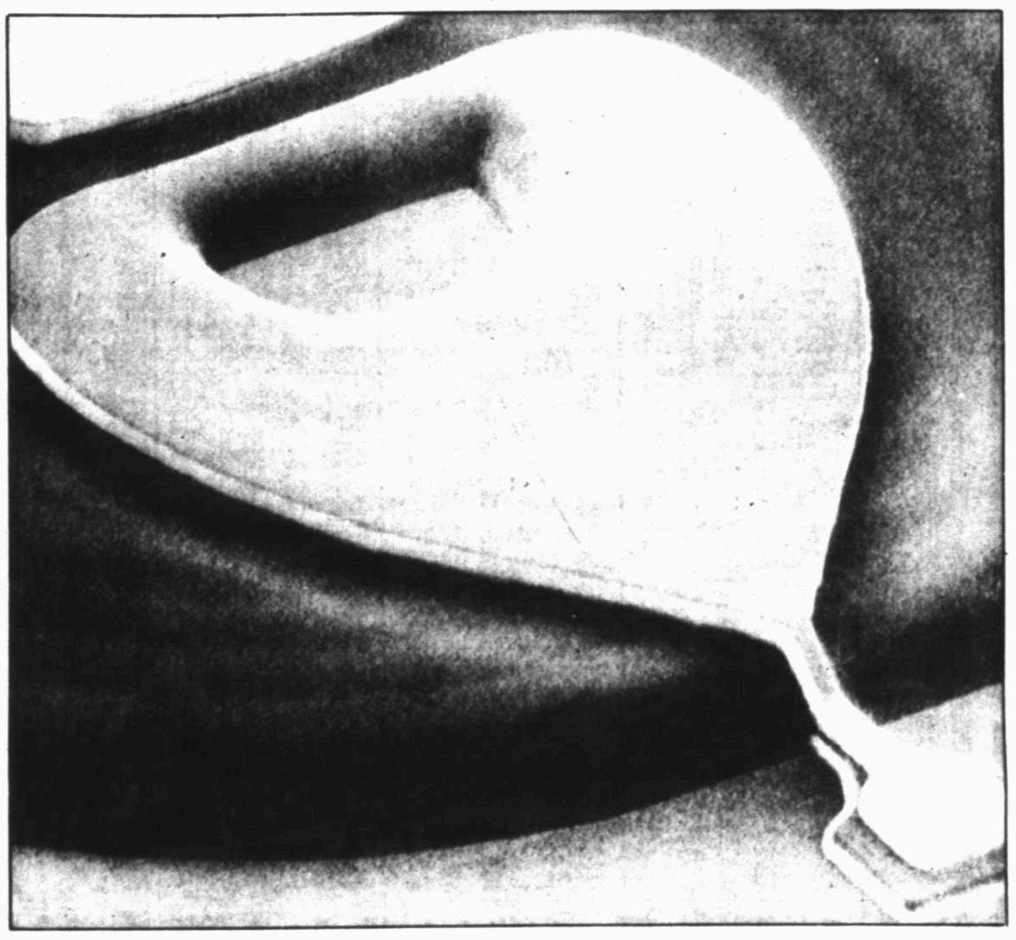

Nigerian Oil Minister Jibril Aminu, the cartel's president, said the gap between the nations' positions on a new output ceiling amounted to 300,000 barrels.

Another round of bargaining in the early evening failed to resolve that difference, and experts were asked to rework figures to try to find a compromise.

Saudi Arabia pumps more than a third of the group's oil at its estimated current output of 8.4 million barrels a day.

It boosted its production sharply after Iraq's August 1990 invasion of Kuwait to make up for the loss of the oil from those two nations. Prior to the conflict, the kingdom produced about a quarter of the total.

OPEC nations are: Algeria, Ecuador, Gabon, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Libya, Nigeria, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Venezuela.

Cheap gasoline is election-year ploy, experts say

By Dirk Beveridge
Associated Press

■ Analysis

NEW YORK — OPEC's dilemma, too much oil on the market, has become a windfall for millions of average Americans, who are paying the lowest price in years for gasoline at the pump.

But critics of the oil industry say you had better enjoy the cheap fuel while you can. Some see it as an election-year phenomenon that won't last past November, although other experts say gasoline is a bargain in the United States and can be expected to stay that way.

"Consumers should look forward to reasonably low prices," said Edwin S. Rothschild, energy policy director for Citizen Action, a Washington-based consumers group.

"Once the election's over, consumers can expect prices to go back up again. In the short term, it's a good thing for consumers. In the long term, it's not good energy policy. We ought to be consuming less oil. We ought to be less dependent on foreign oil."

Rothschild said he believes Saudi Arabia, the biggest oil exporter, has been working to restrain prices, partly to help revitalize depressed Western economies and help President Bush win re-election as a payoff for the Persian Gulf War.

In recent years, Rothschild said, oil prices have tended to go down while elections are under way, then rise in odd-numbered years as political campaigning subsides.

Others view the theories of a Bush-Saudi understanding on oil prices as ludicrous, saying the Saudis have their own selfish reasons for wanting to keep the crude price down.

Drivers in many parts of the United States have recently seen some of the cheapest gasoline pump prices for quite some time. The price has even fallen below 80 cents a gallon in some local price wars.

To be sure, motorists in markets like the New York area still pay much more than $1 a gallon, often because taxes and the regional cost of living is much higher.

But the American Automobile Association, which performs weekly surveys of retail gasoline prices, found this week that the nationwide average for a gallon of self-serve regular unleaded was $1.045.

That was the lowest level since the Easter week of 1990, when the AAA found an average price of $1.026. The gasoline itself is even cheaper now, because higher federal and state taxes have more than made up the difference.

Taking a broader look at gasoline prices, some experts contend that if inflation and increased fuel efficiency are taken into account, the cost of driving is now at about half of the level just after World War II.

Evaluated in 1991 dollars, the retail price of gasoline in 1947 came to $1.491 per gallon, peaked in 1980 at $2.026 per gallon and has been generally drifting lower, says an analysis by Cambridge Energy Research Associates, a consulting firm in Cambridge, Mass.

The low point was 1988, when the retail price was $1.063, while for 1991, the cost was $1.147, the firm said.

That is not to say the price will stay down. Gasoline prices can be expected to show another seasonal increase when the weather warms up, experts say.

Ford reports $2.3 billion loss

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. on Thursday reported a record $2.3 billion loss in 1991, another sign that last year was the U.S. auto industry's worst.

Enormous losses that analysts expect from General Motors Corp. later this month would push combined Big Three automakers' losses toward $7 billion, far surpassing the previous record of $4.5 billion lost in 1980. Chrysler Corp. last week reported losing nearly $800 million in 1991.

Despite the miserable financial news, Ford treasurer David McCammon said some faint signs of recovery can be seen. And if things hold together, he said, a turnaround in the strapped auto industry could begin by year's end.

Indeed, the Ford announcement coincided with industry sales figures that showed a surge of car buying in early February.

The 22.7 percent jump was the strongest in many weeks, although it was compared with anemic sales of a year earlier, when the nation was preoccupied with the Gulf War.

Still, many dealers have said they're only seeing more browsers, not buyers.

"They come in and shop and everything. They're just a little bit nervous," said Tony Viviano, owner of Sterling Heights Dodge in Sterling Heights, Mich.

For the fourth quarter, Ford lost $475.7 million, or $1.03 a share, on $22 billion in revenues.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Investor worries about mutual fund's safety

By Bill Doyle

Q. My life savings of $120,000 were invested on the advice of a broker I am using for the first time: $70,000 in U.S. Treasury bonds and $25,000 in each of two "government security" mutual funds. I would like to hear from you as to the safety of the two funds. What can you tell me?

Doyle

A. No mutual fund can be called absolutely "safe." There is some risk in every mutual fund. However, the risk is not large in most funds holding U.S. Treasury and federal agency securities as investments.

There have been exceptions. A number of "government-plus" mutual funds promised to provide very high returns by engaging in option trading with Treasury bonds. That ploy backfired. Those funds and their shareholders took financial beatings.

Fortunately for you, neither of the funds named in your letter is in that category.

You can be sure all the Treasury and federal agency securities the two funds hold will meet their interest payments on time and will be paid off at face value upon maturity.

However, that does not guarantee the market prices of those securities will stay unchanged. Those prices will rise and decline in line with market conditions — taking the values of your mutual fund shares up and down. In a nutshell, this means you might get more or less than you paid when you redeem your shares.

Q. I am now in a growth mutual fund and am considering changing to a government bond mutual fund. What would be involved in that switch and what would it cost?

A. To transfer your investment from one mutual fund to another, you must redeem the shares you own in the first fund and buy shares of the second fund.

If both funds are in the same management group, which mutual fund people like to call a "fund family," it's unlikely you would pay a large commission. Most fund organizations allow switching from one fund to another within the same group free of commission load or they levy a small transfer fee, typically $10.

Of course, if the fund into which you move your investment is a no-load fund and has no commission charge, you can make the move without laying out additional money.

However, this will not relieve you of an income tax obligation. If you have a profit from the redemption of the first fund's shares, you will have to report it as a capital gain on your income tax return and pay the tax due.

Your capital gain, if any, will be the difference between your "basis" on the shares you redeem and the amount of the redemption. Your basis is the price you paid for the shares, plus all reinvested dividends and capital gains distributions.

In the unhappy event you have a loss when you redeem fund shares, you can take that as a capital loss on your income tax return.

Q. I have always wanted to invest in a utility fund but, as a small investor, I don't know how to go about doing so. What do I need to do? How small an investment can I make?

A. More than two dozen mutual funds invest strictly in stocks of electric, gas, telephone and/or water utility companies. So, you have a reasonably wide choice.

You can buy shares of those and other mutual funds through a securities brokerage firm. Some are no-load funds, whose shares you purchase directly from the fund organization. Many permit first investments as small as $1,000.

Visit the reference section of a public library and study the Wiesenberger Investment Companies Service manual and other books providing details about mutual funds. You'll get all the information you need. Write or telephone a number of a funds that seem suitable for you. Virtually all have toll-free phone numbers. Ask for a prospectus and other literature. Resume your studies, then invest in the one you like best.

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
• You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
• You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).
Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
• You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed lower today, backing away from the record highs it reached on Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 25.26 points Wednesday, dropped 16.10 to 3,260.73 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 3 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 652 up, 976 down and 530 unchanged.

Wall Streeters have been anticipating a new move soon by the Federal Reserve to ease credit conditions.

Before taking such action, the Fed is presumed to be awaiting the completion of a $36 billion quarterly financing by the Treasury. The final stage of the three-day refunding came today with an offering of $10 billion in 30-year bonds.

INS changes form to be submitted by employers

Whether hiring one person or 1,000, all employers will be affected by changes in the new I-9 form released by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Kiker

The previous I-9 form, a part of the Immigration Reform and Control Act (IRCA) of 1986, mandated that all employers verify employees' legal right to work in this country.

"Probably the most pertinent change in the revised form is the increased emphasis on informing employers about the anti-discrimination provision of the law," said Dick Edwards, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The new document carries this anti-discrimination notice: "It is illegal to discriminate against work-eligible individuals. Employers CANNOT specify which document(s) they will accept from an employee. The refusal to hire an individual because of a future expiration date may also constitute illegal discrimination."

"When the law was being debated in 1986, many in Congress expressed great concerns that the citizenship requirements would discriminate against Hispanics and other," Edwards said. "Unfortunately, these fears turned out to be well-founded."

According to Edwards, a survey showed that indeed 18 percent of the employers who described their hiring practices were being discriminatory. In Texas, this percentage was 28 percent, the highest of any state surveyed under this particular law.

However, changes in the new form should help prevent discriminatory practices, which were found to be mostly unintentional, Edwards said. The form also was revised to clear up any question as to which documents would satisfy the identity and authorization requirements.

"What many employers would do is ask to see one of the several documents listed on the old form as being acceptable," he said. "If an applicant did not have it, the employer would not hire the person, when in fact, there were many other acceptable documents not listed."

The new form does not give a specific list, but a separate, expanded list that employers can use to match up the documents they are given by applicants.

Another change on the I-9 is the addition of a third section, which deals with reverification of temporary documents. The old form requested an expiration date, but there was no place on the form to show that employers had reverified these documents. Now, if a person lists a document with a temporary expiration date, there is a place to update it. Also, if an employee leaves but is rehired, the employer only has to fill in the rehiring date if the original I-9 form is still on file.

Edwards says following these suggestions will help employers avoid problems when complying with the anti-descrimination provision of the IRCA:

- Compete the I-9 form after an offer of employment has been made. In the past, many companies would ask only certain applicants to fill out I-9 forms prior to being hired because they felt others would not have the proper documentation. Not having all applicants fill out the I-9 form at the point of application could be deemed discriminatory.
- Allow the employee to decide which documents he or she wishes to provide for work authorization and identification. Do not ask to see a specific document (driver's license, Social Security card, green card, etc.) Refusal or request of specific documents is discriminatory because the applicant may not have these, but others that are valid. The employer should ask for documentation that shows work status and verification. Then, the person chooses what to show.
- Do not refuse any valid document because of future expiration date. Another practice that could be discriminatory is failing to hire someone who has a temporary document that can be updated or made permanent.
- Do not ask for additional documents after a person has provided documents sufficient for verification. What the documents should show are identity and legal status in terms of the right to work. Some documents such as the "green card" does both. If one document does not show this, another must be presented. Rather than asking for specific documents, let applicants show what they have. If the documents are not appropriate, require that others be furnished. Do no ask for additional papers if the documents presented show identity and legal work status.
- Do not have a U.S. citizen-only hiring policy unless required by law or specified by government contract. For most jobs, a person does not have to be a citizen. If an employer implements a "citizen only" hiring policy this may be discriminatory unless it is specified by government contract.
- Keep I-9's in a file separate from an employee's personnel file. The I-9 form contains certain information not available on the application, so the form should be filed separately. If kept with the personnel file, some could imply that reference was made to the I-9 form and that information was used in a discriminatory manner.

"Employers who do not abide by the documentation provisions of the IRCA risk sanctions that range from $250 to $5,000 to imprisonment," Edwards said. "Penalties for violating the anti-descriminatory aspect of the law also can include hiring those discriminated against, plus back pay and perhaps even attorney fees."

Cattle may be used to spread seed on the range

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department scientists are turning steers into Johnny Appleseeds of the Western range, using them to spread seed on remote, rough terrain inaccessible to farm machinery.

They are fed gelatin capsules filled with seed to steers, which then are excreted along with manure fertilizer on remote and poor-quality rangeland in New Mexico.

"Some cattle graze areas so rough and inaccessible that no conventional seeding equipment or technique could be used to improve the land," said Jerry R. Barrow, a plant geneticist with USDA's Agricultural Research Service.

"But cattle can spread seed. These cattle are reminiscent of John Chapman, better known as Johnny Appleseed, who planted apple seeds as he roamed the American frontier of the early 1800s."

Barrow said that "just like the kind of gelatin capsules we swallow, these also dissolve in the stomach. In our case, medicine is released, but in the steers, seeds were released. The seeds were excreted with manure on the land two to three days later."

Kris M. Havstad, Barrow's colleague at the Jornada Experimental Range near Las Cruces, said seeding rangeland from conventional farm machinery is too expensive for most ranchers. And there's no guarantee the seed will germinate and establish itself on land that gets less than 10 inches of rain a year.

"When cattle deposit seed on the range, it's in the middle of manure droppings that contain moisture and all the nutrients plants need to start growing," said Havstad.

"It would be hard to create a more ideal growing environment for this seed — 50 percent germinates," he said.

Four plants native to the Southwest were tested in the experiment. The scientists found that about half the seed from fourwing saltbush, alkali sacaton and blue panicgrass passed through the steers' digestive tracts. Another grass seed, sideoats grama, was completely digested.

"We need to find ways to improve our rangelands for domestic animals and wildlife," Havstad said. "This method is one possible approach because it is inexpensive and doesn't disrupt the environment. The downside is that it will take longer to have an impact compared to mechanical seeding."

He explained that "when you seed mechanically you generally put out eight pounds of seed to an acre, thousands and thousands of seed per pound, and a tremendous amount of seed is dispersed very quickly. However, seeding through cattle disperses less seed and doesn't distribute seed uniformly across the landscape."

Also, in many areas mechanical seeding equipment can't be used because it might disturb threatened or endangered plants and animals. "Other areas must be protected because they are archaeologically important," he said.

Dahmer says he wore condoms during sexual acts

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jeffrey Dahmer wore condoms when having sex with his dead victims, showing he could control his urge to have intercourse with corpses, a psychiatrist testified Thursday at the serial killer's insanity trial.

"The intensity of his sexual urges at that point was less than many teen-agers experience in back seats with their girlfriends," said Dr. Park Dietz, the final prosecution witness.

Dahmer, 31, confessed to killing and dismembering 17 young males since 1978. He pleaded guilty but insane to 15 Milwaukee County unable to know right from wrong slayings, and a jury must decide if he will be sent to prison or a mental institution. The case could go to the jury Friday.

The defense and prosecution rested their cases after calling 28 witnesses in 12 days, and closing arguments were scheduled to begin Friday morning. Defense attorney Gerald Boyle told the judge that Dahmer had decided against taking the stand.

Dietz, on the stand for the second day, said Dahmer suffers from a variety of sexual disorders, but none would have made him or unable to stop himself from killing.

"'I don't think anybody can kill somebody and think it's right,'" Dietz quoted Dahmer as saying during more than 17 hours of interviews.

He said Dahmer told him: "'I know I am responsible because I know I am the one who caused everything to happen. No one else had anything to do with it.'"

Dietz said Dahmer possessed the willpower to control his sexual attraction to corpses much like other individuals control more conventional sexual urges.

Defense attorney Gerald Boyle has argued that Dahmer's uncontrollable compulsion to have sex with the dead drove him to kill.

Dietz also testified that Dahmer told him he once drank a vial of blood while working at a blood plasma center "just for the strange excitement and to see how it tasted."

Dahmer didn't like the taste and spit the blood out, Dietz said.

Dietz, who said he would receive $39,000 for his work on the case, said he does not believe a sexual disorder by itself can be a basis for an insanity defense.

But under cross-examination Thursday, he skirted the issue when directly asked if he believed Dahmer suffered from a mental disease at the time of the killings.

"I haven't said he did not have a mental disease," Dietz testified. "I don't know, partly because it's really a jury question in the end."

To be found insane under Wisconsin law, Dahmer must prove he suffered from a mental disease at the time of the killings, making him either unable to know right or wrong or unable to stop killing.

Three defense psychiatrists have said Dahmer suffered from a mental disease, and under cross-examination a neutral psychologist called by the court and a prosecution psychiatrist have agreed.

Benetton ad uses bedside photo of victim dying of AIDS

NEW YORK (AP) — Apparel maker Benetton shrugged off complaints of exploitation Thursday and said it was having no problem finding U.S. magazines for a new advertisement that shows a dying AIDS victim and his grieving family.

The trendy fashion concern is pinning its "United Colors of Benetton" logo on previously published news photographs, including one that shows David Kirby on his deathbed in May 1990 comforted by his family.

The Kirby family supports the ad, but most magazines in Britain rejected it, saying it unfairly exploits an emotional and personal issue to sell sweaters and scarves. Company executives said every U.S. magazine they approached accepted the ad.

Last year, some publications refused to run one Benetton ad that showed a priest and a nun in religious habits kissing and another that showed the blood-stained body of a newborn baby with her umbilical cord attached.

Earlier Benetton ads that aroused debate showed a black person's arm handcuffed to a white person's arm, a black woman nursing a white baby and a black youngster with hair shaped like horns hugging an angelic-looking white girl.

Company officials concede the ads are designed to improve consumer awareness of the brand, but said they also want to raise issues like ethnic harmony.

Benetton creative director Oliviero Tocascani said he searched through thousands of news photos for this year's ads to "reflect the reality of life" rather than staged situations with models.

Those chosen include photos of immigrants fleeing to a ship, a man with a gun slung over his back and carrying a huge bone and a couple carrying a few possessions through hip-high floodwater.

The Kirby photo, taken at the family's invitation in hopes its publication would warn others about the dangers of AIDS, appeared in the November 1990 issue of Life magazine.

It shows an anguished William Kirby cradling his dying son's head while David's sister Susan held her daughter Sarah at his bedside.

William Kirby and his wife, Kay, traveled from their home in Stafford, Ohio, to appear with top Benetton executives Thursday as they presented the company's 1992 $80 million ad campaign.

The Kirbys said they supported Benetton's use of the photo, arguing that more people would see it.

The ad appears in the March issues of Vogue, Vanity Fair and Interview magazines and will run later in Details, Elle, Mademoiselle, Us and Spin, said Benetton spokesman Peter Fressola.

Company cuts leave job seekers disappointed

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Not long ago, Ann Piening McMahon had a career analyzing laser communications satellites and making computer models for McDonnell Douglas Corp.

Now, she's showing rocks to preschoolers for a living.

"As far as I know, I'm the only scientist who does birthday parties," she said.

McMahon is one of the success stories among 11,000 workers laid off since September 1990 by the nation's largest defense contractor.

The last time a survey was done, in the fall, only 45 percent had secured full-time employment, almost all at lower wages. They were swept out of their jobs in the initial wave of post-Cold War military spending cutbacks that government analysts predict will take 2 million jobs nationwide.

"There's not a lot of jobs for these people to go into," said Don Kirchgessner, director of a program that helps new small businesses at the St. Louis County Enterprise Center. "But they come out with a severance package and with skills and stability, so a lot are in a good position for a change."

McMahon, 32, knew prospects for being rehired at McDonnell Douglas were bleak. She took advantage of company-sponsored entrepreneurial training and emerged a year ago as the Science Lady.

"I said, 'Hey, this is an opportunity for me,'" said McMahon, who spent 10 years with McDonnell Douglas Missile Systems Co. "I really have been amazed at how much demand there is for a person who can make science real for kids."

The mother of two young children works at preschools during the week. On weekends she becomes Serendipity, the Science Magician, on the party circuit. She uses balloons, trash bags and imagination to teach kids about astronomy and the solar system.

On a recent visit at the Eliot Chapel Nursery School, McMahon brought home the differences in various rocks to the 4-and-under set by equating the layers in the Earth's crust to that of a pizza.

"She really communicates well with young children," said Sally Schoenecker, director of the nursery school. "She has a way of painting a visual picture with words that kids can grasp."

McMahon said enthusiastically, "You can do a ton of science with balloons."

While her husband still works at McDonnell Douglas as a structural designer, she has traded her better paying corporate job for one where her lab coat is adorned with multicolored handprints.

"My job at McDonnell Douglas was amazingly more technical than this," McMahon said. "I liked what I did there, but this has an element of fun."

McMahon's radical career change appears to be the exception. Other McDonnell Douglas casualties starting spinoff businesses are sticking closer to their old job descriptions.

That's the advice given by Bob Brockhaus, director of the Institute of Entrepreneurial Studies at St. Louis University.

"We tell them to use their skills and education and network acquired over the years," he said. "Don't throw that away."

Ron Warhurst tested automatic equipment for three years at McDonnell Douglas and was a contract engineer for about 15 years when he got laid off in September 1990. He began a one-man computer repair business about a year ago, working with personal computers.

Warhurst gets reduced rates for office space and business advice from the Enterprise Center program.

"It's getting a lot better," Warhurst said. "When you start up with nothing and get to where you can see daylight it's encouraging. And I like doing it."

One aerospace engineer who voluntarily left McDonnell Douglas hopes his startup business will create jobs for former co-workers.

George Brill, 28, is now the president of AeroTech Service Group, which soon plans to hire up to 17 laid-off workers.

HAPPY VALENTINES DAY!
MOM
Love William

OLIVIA, (Optical Mart)
We only met for a short time, but I came away totally infatuated by your charm and beauty. But like in the play Cyrano De Bergerac who could not confess his admiration for his lovely Roxanne, I too must hide in the shadows of your heart. So my darling I must sign this anonymous.
R

TO MY PIZZA MAN!
I don't tell you very often that I love you, but I hope you know that I do. I couldn't have asked for a better husband and our children couldn't have asked for a better father! Thank you for being our best friend!!
WE LOVE YOU!
Connie, Pepper, Pocket, Stormy

Cynthia K. Infante,
Happy Valentines also means Happy Wedding Anniversary, 16 years. You're undaunted faith in Christ Jesus has firmly bound our family.
I love you still with God's love.
Husband, John

TO BILLIE
Love Always and Forever!
Barry

Charles
HAPPY VALENTINES DAY!
Roses are red,
The sky is gray,
I love you even though,
You're an ocean away.
Love You
Becky

Once again, I'll say that all four of you make my life complete. You're all in my heart and soul.
Love, Steve Gonzales

Good for One Hug

Manuel,
You are so dear to me Sweetheart, you'll never know how much I think about you all the time. Oh, how I need your touch.
Love, Helen

DEE,
Take all the poems of sweethearts ever writ, with all their lines of honey dripping wit, and make believe I said them all to you.
JOHN P.

For the endless love you give,
For all the sacrifices you make,
For the children & family you've given me
Thank you,
Happy Valentines Day,
I love you always, Quincy

To: Vickie Mosely.

A caring Mother to our children four
A wonderful wife you already are
I only ask of you
one thing more...

Be My Valentine
Love, Your Husband
Mark T. Mosely
