CARMEN ANN McCOLLUM

Miss Texas from Odessa

FORT WORTH (AP) — Carmen Ann McCollum of Odessa won the Miss Texas pageant Saturday night after wowing the audience with a snappy melody on the saxophone.

The 5-foot-8 brunette, who measures 36-25-36, was Miss West Texas in the pageant. She won the talent competition Wednesday night.

First runnerup was Miss Haltom-Richland Area, Holly Waynette Walker.

Second runnerup was Miss Dallas, Lorrie Ann Smith; third runnerup was Miss East Texas, Patrece McLemora; and fourth runnerup was Miss Toledo Bend, Elizabeth Joan Clark.

Miss McCollum, a graduate of Permian High School in Odessa, will represent the Lone Star state in the Miss America pageant.

Twister, high water reported near Lenorah

A tornado and high water were reported in the Lenorah area Friday, but a quick survey of Howard County locations indicated light showers fell here generally Friday and Saturday.

Boyce Hale said he spotted the tornado five miles northeast of the Grady School or about 25 miles west of Big Spring 4:35 p.m. Friday. The twister was spinning in a curtain of rain.

"Tornadoes are like women, beautiful but destructive," Hale observed.

Dan Saunders, Martin County Sheriff, said Jim Franklin reported Friday high water near the Knott highway northeast of Lenorah.

At the Knott Station, around .3 of an inch was felt Saturday morning. Just west of Webb Air Force Base, John Ratliff reported from a trace to .1 of an inch.

Jack Buchanan, in the Luther area, said only sprinkles hit the well-soaked ground.

American executed

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Angolan firing squad on Saturday killed American mercenary Daniel Gearhart and three Britons in what President Ford called an "unjustified and unwarranted execution."

In a statement issued in Newport, R.I., where he dined with Britain's Queen Elizabeth II aboard the royal yacht Britannia, Ford said:

"This execution, carried out in defiance of worldwide pleas for a humane commutation of Mr. Gearhart's sentence, will make even more difficult any steps toward the normalization of relations between Angola and the United States."

Gearhart and the Britons were executed by the firing squad Saturday afternoon less than two weeks after being convicted of war crimes by a revolutionary court, the Angolan news agency ANGOP reported.

In a brief announcement distributed by the Angolan Information Ministry in Lisbon, Portugal, ANGOP said the mercenaries were executed by military police in the presence of the justice minister, the attorney general and popular organizations of the Marxist Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA) that runs the country.

The report said relatives of the four executed men would have eight days to reclaim their bodies from the African nation.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger gave Ford official confirmation of the executions as they flew by helicopter from Otis Air Force Base, Mass., to Newport.

Ford "expressed his sincerest condolences" to Gearhart's wife.

Hearts 'n flowers

Not worth saving

With Tommy Hart

A novelist named Gerald Durrell, founder of SAFE (Save the Animals From Extinction), says there's one animal not really worth preserving — the human being.

Humans, he points out, are responsible for the fact that every animal seen in a conventional zoo represents about nine that have died from disease contacted in captivity or from carelessness on the part of collectors.

An an ironic example of how old-fashioned zoos are actually helping animals toward extinction, Durrell noted that the last passenger pigeon on earth died in 1914 — in a zoo.

Durrell would like to see zoos become "breeding reservoirs" similar to his Wildlife Preservation Trust, which amounts to a stationary Noah's Ark for some 800 animals. It is located in the English Channel on Jersey Island.

Durrell says his favorite animal other than his wife was a fully-grown chimp named Cholmondeley, who liked his spot of tea and an occasional cigarette.

The chimp was to die violently. He split the scene rather than go through a dental operation and had himself a riotous time in one of London's parks before he was shot by zoo keepers.

"They shot him, as they do other animals, for bothering people," Durrell sighed. "It should be the other way around."

Is there any more hollow phrase in the English language than: "Let's keep in touch?"

It's all right to do your own thing, I suppose, as long as you don't get caught.

Couldn't you identify a baby-sitter as a teenager who is asked to act like an adult while the adults go out to act like teenagers?

You're a little smarter than you were after you discover that the man who writes the advertising for the bank isn't the same fellow who makes the loans.

Carter sure, veep spot hazy

Shaws going to Demo confab

By WALT FINLEY

At least 117 Texas'delegates will be ready to vote for smiling, soft-spoken Jimmy Carter on the first ballot in nominating him for the next President of the United States.

The Texans voting for the Southerner will not want a thing in return . . . except to have their names spelled right in Carter's Memory Book.

BIG SPRINGER Delano Shaw, one of Texas' 130 delegates to the confab in "fun city" wings from Midland this morning. The Cosden Oil and Chemical Co. employe will be accompanied by his "older" brother Larry Shaw, Howard County farmer.

How about his possible vice presidential choice?

"I think Carter will probably select about five possibilities," Shaw said. "I think he'll let the convention nominate one of the five.

"I also believe he'll probably pull a candidate from the Ohio-Illinois area for the veep spot. Adlai Stevenson Jr. could be one or Sen. John Glenn could be a possible pick. I also think that Frank Church remains at bat."

LARRY SHAW, who enjoys "politickin" is leaning towards ex-Astronaut Glenn. "Glenn's farm policy impresses me," he added.

He wanders aloud if the Democrats are slightly masochistic.

"For the Democratic party to have its national convention in New York City is like the survivors of the Galveston flood celebrating by taking a pleasure cruise on the Titanic," Larry explained.

The first official caucus of the Texas delegation, joined by the 70 alternate delegates, is scheduled a few hours before the Monday night opening of the four-day convention.

"Our main job will be to do Jimmy Carter all the good we can and have a good time," said Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, state chairman for Carter.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe, who boosted the unsuccessful drive of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., for a favorite son nomination, is titular head of the delegation. But Armstrong will be making many of the decisions as chief of the Carter cult.

CARTER WON 92 of the delegates in the May 1 primary election and another 20 at the July 19 state convention.

Former Sen. Ralph Yarborough, liberal Democrat leader Billie Carr and at least three other "uncommitted" delegates have already said they will vote for Carter.

Rep. Paul Moreno, D-El Paso, and two other delegates say they will cast a first ballot for California Gov. Jerry Brown.

Houston lawyer Hall Timanus, longtime supporter of George Wallace, will cast one vote for the Alabama governor.

Delegate Oralia Garza of San Antonio says her vote will go for Morris Udall.

ACTUALLY, it looks as if the Texans will not get a chance to vote for Carter before he is nominated.

The selection of a vice president is expected to be anticlimatic and merely a rubber stamp of Carter's choice.

Briscoe and Bentsen said earlier they would prefer John Glenn. Armstrong said the choice was up to Carter but at one time he said his personal choice would be Rep. Barbara Jordan, D-Tex.

The cut and dried outlook for the convention has removed most of the drama, and many of the delegates have reportedly set their sights primarily on having a good time.

Action/reaction: Impact statements

Q. Have the environmental impact statements for any of the other Air Force bases that are being studied for closure been released yet?

A. The Herald asked Cong. Omar Burleson, who represents Big Spring in Washington, to look into this question. His reply was:

"In reference to your specific inquiry about the release of environment ' 'mpact statements for other Air Force bases, particularly Craig (in Selma, Ala.), I am advised by Air Force officials that none of the statements for any of the bases have yet been released. I am advised that all will be released together, and the time will probably be some time in the fall."

Offbeat: 'Super bad' caper

IRVING, Tex. (AP) — Two would-be robbers got two all-beef patties, special sauce, lettuce, cheese, pickles, onions on a sesame seed bun Saturday when they grabbed a sack from a bank clerk. If they had it their way, it would have been money.

Mrs. Marlene Brown, a clerk for Citizens Bank in this Dallas suburb, told police she was carrying the sack of hamburgers to the bank's drive-in tellers when two men in a station wagon pulled up to her in the parking lot.

She said they pulled a gun and demanded the sack. After discovering its contents, they demanded her purse. It also was empty of cash. They handed both back to Mrs. Brown and drove off.

Meanwhile, area police said they received an unexpected benefit when motorists with citizen band radios urged one another on the Dallas-Fort Worth Turnpike not to broadcast "Smokey" reports as officers were in pursuit of the two men, who escaped.

BAPTIZING A JAIL INMATE — Pastor M. J. Mullins (left photo) baptizes Steve Sigmon, a jail inmate charged with drug violations, at the First United Pentecostal Church. Sigmon, who claims to have rededicated himself to the Lord, emerges with a smile on his face. Sheriff A. N. Standard said 10 or 12 county prisoners have been baptized in recent years. "We always had to maintain security in doing this, but it's never been breached as far as I know," Standard said.

Drinking beer, smoking pot, chasing girls not answer

Former 'sinner' immersed in religion behind bars

By JOHN EDWARDS

After three months in county jail, Steven C. Sigmon, 23, said: "I'm happy up here now. I'd be happy anywhere.

"I look back at the things I used to do on the street: drinking beer, smoking marijuana, chasing girls. I thought that was the life, but it wasn't."

Sigmon, who would have to post $26,000 in bonds to be released, claims to have become closer to the Lord since he was arrested March 16 on warrants for delivery of LSD and marijuana.

HIS CONVERSION started after L. W. (Dusty) Free, assistant pastor of the First United Pentecostal Church, and members of the congregation started visiting the county jail, Sigmon said.

Pastor Free, Lillian Johnson, Mary Lil Johnson, Jim Hodges, Bill Moren and Chris Flores attend four church services Sundays — two at the church, one at city jail and one at county jail.

"THEY JUST started coming up here you know," Sigmon said. "The first time they came, I listened because I didn't have anything else to do."

We were sitting in a newly cleaned jail cell, Sigmon wearing a red headband around his long hair.

Sigmon said he began to "look forward" to the visits.

"This feeling started coming over me," Sigmon recalled.

"A MAN takes a Sunday when he could be with his wife and kids," Sigmon remarked.

Dusty impressed him, particularly. "He's a strange kind of person. He's got some kind of power about him. The Lord talks through that man."

Pastor Free will talk to prisoners whether they listen or are polite or not, Sigmon said.

Not just the Pentecostals, but Baptists and members of the Gideon Society visit the county jail regularly, Sigmon said.

"TERRY CARTER, he's up every Wednesday," Sigmon said. "He's another good type person. He's good people."

"A lot of people up here spend a lot of the time reading the Bible," Sigmon said.

"A lot of times, we'll have a group discussion about the Bible," the prisoner said. When they cannot interpret a passage, the inmates wait until Sunday to confer with the visitors.

"There's a lot of prayer up here," Sigmon said. "The atmosphere is just completely different than what it was four months ago."

THEN, SIGMON said, there were many "people with negative attitudes, and just no outlook on life whatsoever . . . (they think) here in jail, there's nothing I can do but give up and let them have me."

"You've got people up here that talk about suicide," Sigmon said.

"If they turn to the Lord, then they won't be in that state (of depression), because He's got a whole new plan for you."

Does he think rededication to Christianity will improve a defendant's chances in court?

"I BELIEVE it will have a bearing in the courtroom," Sigmon said. "They can see that person, that he's a new person, because of the way he expresses himself, the way he carries himself."

Is he or are any of the inmates feigning religiousness in hopes of a light sentence or probation?

"NO, YOU can't play that game," Sigmon said. "That might be the case with some people. He might get out on the street again, but, with him playing that way, he's going to get his toes stepped on, because the Lord doesn't play that way."

"It's my plan to study the Bible, and I hope to become a preacher," the former hospital maintenance employe said.

"A man that's been behind bars can minister to men that have been behind bars better," Pastor M. J. Mullins of the church said.

Economy not hurt yet, survey discloses

Possible Webb closing leaves Big Springers wary

The announcement which swooped down on Big Spring last March 10 that Webb Air Force Base would probably close put a lot of people into shock for several days.

The numbness wore off within the week, and people went to bat both trying to save the base and trying to search for additional industry that would replace the base if necessary.

THE PSYCHOLOGICAL effect on the community held into May, but as summer approached, more and more people appeared to be becoming accustomed to the idea.

A lot of businessmen in the community are very optimistic about the continued growth and progress and the economic situation. Many find that their business is actually on the upswing.

Those who have taken a realistic look at the picture and the $33 million annual income that would be gone are certainly concerned.

They are working daily still in the battle to try to keep the base. At the same time, some of these community leaders have realistically visited towns that have had base closures and studied their problems.

THE INDUSTRIAL development team of the Chamber of Commerce works night and day trying to locate prospects for possible new industry in the community.

The pulse of the community at this time has ceased to be one of desperation and become more dogmatic and determined to survive. Those who love Big Spring have from the first attempted to determine ways to help the community progress, no matter what the future may hold.

JOHN CURRIE, president of State National Bank, said, "The original announcement that Webb Air Force Base might close had a psychological effect on the community. "However, there wasn't any noticeable change in business. It did cause people to put off plans for projects due to the uncertainties involved.

"If it does come about, our statistics show that 12½ per cent of our customers are directly base-related. Some eight per cent of our deposits are base-related. This would of course make a change.

"Just as a personal tragedy for the bank, we would lose some employes that we think a lot of that are connected with the base."

AL STEPHENS, who is chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Economic Development Council and manager of Gibson's Discount Center, said, "Here at our store, we actually were affected more by the tearing up of Scurry Street prior to its completion than we were by the announcement in March that Webb might close.

"I hope the base never closes, but if it does, I know that our industrial development team is working tirelessly to bring other industries into Big Spring. I'm sure there would be a period of difficult adjustment for the community. I would not be among those who predict how long it would last."

RICHARD ATKINS, retail chairman for the Chamber of Commerce said, "When the announcement first came out, it might have affected business a little bit for a few weeks.

"We here at Big Spring Hardware have recently had a 30 per cent increase. I think if the base does end up closing, there would be an effect on every business in town with some suffering far more than others.

"Businesses that might be caused to close upon that occasion would probably be ones that are already having some problems. It would probably take a minimum of two years for the community to completely recover."

BUILDING PERMITS in the city are up to $3,324,014 in comparison to $2,122,675 in 1975 at the sametime. On the surface, this sounds great, but the bulk of the permits came prior to the announcement that Webb Air Force Base might close.

Prior to that the $2 million permit for the college coliseum had been filed. Things were looking absolutely great for Big Spring and that very week, the owner of Barcelona Apartments had asked for an emergency passing of a zoning change so that they could build additional apartments across the street.

Of course, the ground has never been broken for this new apartment complex. At that time, there were also prospectors in town discussing a new shopping center. These plans have apparently been shelved as have the plans by one car dealer for a big new building.

During June, Roy Hester and D. D. Johnson showed confidence in the future of the community by filing a permit for $120,000 for new apartments on Goliad. They also plan to build a second phase which will probably cost around $140,000.

OTHER PERMITS since March have been mostly private residences. The construction of new residences has held firm in the community. There have been several built ranging in price from $35,000 to $75,000.

Ironically, it is still difficult to find a house in Big Spring. One prospective coach recently decided not to come because he could not find the kind of house he was hunting. Rent houses with more than two bedrooms are almost nonexistent.

However, realtors worry that if Webb Air Force Base does eventually close, the bottom might fall out of the market.

There has been some checking into the possibilities of some type of federal program that would help keep the market firm.

The city recently went into rent subsidy programs for low income persons. A lot of landlords oppose this program. However, if times became hard, they might welcome it.

THE SCHOOLS have not been plagued with problems other than worrying about the future and the future budget.

Thus far, the annoouncement has not affected their program. However, they have taken a census and it shows that they have 740 students that are militarily connected and 422 students who are related to civilian workers at the base.

This makes a potential of 1,162 students or approximately 18½ per cent of the student body that might be affected in some way.

There are 27 teachers who are directly connected to military families and 27 more connected to families who work on the base in a civilian capacity.

The board decided last spring to renew all contracts and that if the base closed sometime during the school year, some teachers might be reassigned if necessary or used as aides and substitute teachers, but that all contracts would be honored.

DR. EMMETT McKENZIE, superintendent, told the board at that time, "If this were not the case, we would not have been able to hold our faculty."

The city of Big Spring has not raised taxes in many years and is already faced with many problems. Looking at its next year's budget, the city administration already anticipates that a choice may have to be made between a possible tax increase or reducing the number of employes.

If the base should close, one of the first effects on the city would be less revenue in the water and sewer department and other cutbacks. Officials would probably again be looking at fewer employes.

If that came about, they could not cut back in the fire or police departments, because police protection and fire protection might have to be increased if there was a period when there would be some vacant homes and buildings in the community needing protection.

NOBODY LIKES to think about these possible problems, but the men who have to set up the budgets for governmental agencies must face all of the possibilities.

Everybody hopes that either the base will stay open or something is found to replace it rather quickly, but those in positions of juggling the figures have to face those figures.

Bank deposits show no clear cut effect from the closing announcement. Assets at the end of the second quarter of the year were down $3 million from the first quarter, but that is to be expected in an agricultural community when crop expenses mount up during the second quarter.

TOTAL DEPOSITS are still up about $13 million from last year at this time, and a spokesman at First National Bank says that "there hasn't been any changes in business" since the closing announcement.

To the spokesman's knowledge, no accounts have been closed due to the impending shutdown of Webb, but he estimates that there is a possibility of a 10 per cent effect on deposits if and when the base closes.

The spokesman at the bank agreed with other banking experts that the decline in deposits over the second quarter "was typical." He has seen "no effect at all" on transactions at the bank that might be related to a base closing.

CHARLES BEIL at First Federal Savings and Loan says that there will be "very little effect, and certainly no drastic effect" on business at his institution.

"We have minimal dollar deposits from Webb-related personnel," Beil said.

The home loans that are carried by Webb personnel will not be affected, according to Beil.

"The government has a Home-Owners Protection Plan by which when and if the people move and cannot sell their house, the government will buy the house at 90 per cent of the pre-assigned value of the house, then determine the equity and assume the payments on the house," he said.

"Consequently," he added, "there will be no repossessions of houses, and there will be little effect on us."

Beil anticipates, therefore, only a 10 per cent effect on the real estate market.

JEFF BROWN, local realtor, is very optimistic about the housing market situation:

"The real estate market is performing surprisingly well. Sales slowed temporarily after the announcement that Webb was a candidate for closure. Low priced properties never did stop selling . . . and within the last 75 days higher priced homes have sold well, too.

"Recently, a very expensive home sold in the Big Spring market. I suppose this is the supreme test that Realtors are trying to go about their business as usual.

"There is not much discounting of prices yet, and all of this is taking place in the complete absence of the military buyer."

J. D. NELSON, president of Security State Bank, 1411 Gregg, has seen no change in trends due to the Webb announcement.

"I can't tell at this point. It is just too early to tell, he said. "But the trends at this bank are much the same as six months ago," he added.

The possibility that Webb may be closed has not escaped Nelson's attention, however.

"If Webb is closed then we (bankers) will certainly feel the impact," he said.

Automobile dealers in Big Spring are guardedly optimistic about their future. According to officers of the Big Spring New Car Dealers Association, sales slumped for varying periods following the Webb announcement, but are now ahead of last year for most dealers.

"I haven't really had time to refer to overall statistics, but it is my impression that the announcement hasn't drastically affected sales," said Bill Pollard, president of the association," and owner of Pollard Chevrolet, 1501 E. 4th.

"THE ENERGY crisis was much worse (than the Webb announcement) for sales. You really can't blow Big Spring out of kilter that easily. This is a solid town," he added.

Bob Brock, association vice president, and owner of Bob Brock Ford, 500 W. 4th, did experience the slump.

"Our sales dropped for about 10 days, but since then they have increased here, and all over town, as far as I know," he said.

"Sales are ahead of last year's at most places in Big Spring. This is part of a statewide and nationwide trend. Car sales are better than ever," he continued. "But I would really hate to lose the base. It represents about 15 per cent of my sales," Brock lamented.

SONNY SHROYER, association secretary-treasurer, and owner of Shroyer Motor Co., 424 E. 3rd, experienced a larger slump following the announcement.

"We had a slump of about 30 days during the shock period. But sales are really up now," he said. "If they close it (the base), they close it. We'll survive."

But Shroyer called for some preparation in the event the base does close.

"Right now, during the trend, we are selling all the big cars we can get. But if the base closes, we will definitely be affected. We should really be searching for an alternative industry in case that happens," said Shroyer.

BIG SPRING MERCHANTS speak of a "shock period" which followed the Webb anouncement. According to different estimates, the period, which supposedly precipitated a slump in sales, lasted from two weeks to a month.

Though it would be impossible to determine whether the Webb announcement was solely responsible, retail sales figures do show a sizeable drop-off for the months of March and April of this year.

An estimate of sales was made from retail sales tax figures received by the city. This represents only taxable items which were sold in the city, and does not include items such as groceries.

The estimated retail sales for March and April of 1975 were $2,865,137 and $5,883,034, respectively. Sales for May of 1975 were estimated at $8,331,265.

DURING THE so-called "shock period" of March and April of 1976, the estimated sales dropped to $1,995,767 and $1,924,818, respectively. This represents a total drop in retail sales for the two months of almost $5 million.

The really surprising figures, however, were recorded for May, following the slump (June totals were unavailable). Estimates for May of 1976 show retail sales of $12,586,843, as compared to the $8,331,265 figure for May of 1975.

Adding the May, 1976 figures to those for the previous two months almost makes up for the drop during the "shock period." Three-month totals for both years are $16,979,436 for 1975, and $16,507,428 for 1976.

She loves to make dolls

with Marj Carpenter

A Murphey doll is a loving thing. Many, many children in West Texas can testify to this.

And Mrs. Freida Murphey at Lake Thomas makes dolls all day long. Her dolls are particularly soft, loveable and cuddly and are made out of socks. She gives them to children. Recently she donated 52 of them to the Home Demonstration Club who sold them all at a special Bicentennial event in Snyder.

Mrs. Murphey, who has lived alongside of Lake Thomas most of her life, is 86 years old. And she loves to make dolls and give them to children.

She said the whole process started years ago when her granddaughters were going to have to throw away their dilapidated dolls. "I'll bet Mama Freida would fix them," they declared. And she did.

Now she spends most of her time making and dressing dolls. Around Christmas she also dresses dolls for the Goodfellows.

Mrs. Murphey, whose land is split by the lake, lives on one side and also owns land on the other side. Her family, the Von Roeders also are longtime residents of the area. They also own a lot of the land around the lake.

She's seen some really tough weather around that lake, long before there was a lake there. She came out to the area in the early years with her father, who came west hunting land. They had earlier lived near Lockhart. There were ten children in all and they all helped. She can remember when they drove a hundred head of good cattle to Seminole during the 1917-18 drouth and stayed there until the drouth broke.

"We went with 100 head and returned with 21 dogies. We kept selling cattle to buy more feed," she related. She also remembered that on Jan. 10, 1918, it got so cold in the Lake Thomas area that it froze the feet off the cattle.

"On May 15, 1922, it hailed so hard that it knocked the roof off our house and we all hid in the bathroom," she related. She added and smiled, "I guess we all remember the dates of the bad times."

BOXES OF DOLLS — The boxes behind Mrs. Freida Murphey are full of dolls which she makes and gives to children. The 86-year-old woman lives at Lake Thomas.

She has a framed picture of the seven homes in which she has resided in her lifetime, including the one she stayed in on the ranch near Seminole during the drouth. It includes a picture of the rock home in which she now resides.

The gate and also the fire place in the house have a large variety of rocks from all over the place. It includes some petrified wood, some granite and many other rocks.

A lot of people give her old materials for the dolls. She has seven grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. They have in turn made pillows for her, which she keeps on display in the front bedroom. Some of these include some excellent needlework.

She has four sons, Brent, who lives nearby; Lloyd and Bruce, who live in Melrose and Clovis, N.M. and Glenn Ed who lives at Breckenridge. Her sister, Mrs. Agnes Sorrells and her brother Herbert Von Roeder live close at hand.

The old Murphey School, named for her husband's family is now closed down and vacant.

And Mrs. Murphey — this wonderful and energetic woman gets up every morning, and makes dolls. She has time for friends and relatives and church and club. But her hobby is making dolls. And if you get a Murphey doll, you get a doll that was made with love.

That's what I found out when I came home with a doll last week when I was out ridin' fence.

Death ruling

His ruling followed an autopsy by a Midland doctor indicating the death was due to a heart attack.

Micky Butts, a son who lives in East Texas, was unable to contact Mrs. Lindley by phone June 28 and notified law enforcement officers.

Mrs. Lindley was found about one-quarter of a mile from her ranch home nine miles southwest of Lomax.

State Troopers Ben Lockhart and David Jones conducted the search with the help of Fuzz Minnick.

Mrs. Lindley's new car was found parked with the keys in it. She was an employe of the First National Bank in Big Spring for 32 years, retiring in 1972.

Pete Snelson, state senator from the 25th District, predicts that Texas will fragment into five states sometime during the next century, a right granted the state by the United States when it was brought into the nation.

The advantages of such a split are obvious because it would give the area more representation in the Congress. Each of the states would adopt a unicameral legislature.

And what would be the capital of West Texas — Fort Stockton (because of its location)?

It's only fitting that the Treasury Department, after ten years, decided to again start issuing $2 bills. The people in Washington have been dealing in double talk for years.

You've heard about the new dance craze in our nation's capital. It's called The Cabinet Shuffle.

There's one thing about it: Bores won't bother you if you monopolize the conversation yourself.

That fellow who plays the likeable lush on television, Foster Brooks, never made it to center stage until he was approaching 60. He never drinks anything but tea before going out to entertain an audience. He never even had a bank account five years ago. Recently, he loaned money to a bank.

Brooks says that at his age (64), his hope is to do as much as he can as fast as he can to reach his goal — which is to retire in comfort. From here, it looks like he's home free.

You're having to look harder than ever for farmland. No less than 2.2 million acres a year are being converted to use as roadways and urban sprawl. Five years ago, farmland was diminishing at the rate of 1.5 million acres annually. There'll come a time when water will have to be imported from elsewhere to make use of West Texas soil that is now serving no purpose, if the nations hope to grow enough food to help feed the world. We explode one atomic bomb every decade or so, and spend millions for the exercise. Most people become accustomed to eating three times a day, yet do precious little to get ready for the day when we must make use of all the resources available to us.

Brief bursts:

You may end up owning the majority stock in AT&T and have the president calling you for advice but, if you've ever been broke, the fear of being that way again never leaves you.

Nobody beats a friend named Jim to the punch, especially if he found out if is spiked with gin.

Shed a tear for the world's pessimists. Most of them got that way by loaning money to optimists.

Many golfers I know would give up the game if they didn't have so much tied up in sports clothes and equipment.

There are those in this country who hope members of the military organize a union. They reason that one of the platforms of organizers of such a group would be a shorter work week, which would produce shorter wars.

Some men dislike the thought of their wives visiting their mothers, reasoning the visits end up as refresher courses in nagging.

Church of Christ revival begins

Doyle Maynard, Big Spring youth who now works with the MacArthur Park Church of Christ, San Antonio, will speak at a revival at the Main Street Church of Christ starting today.

The services will be held at 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. today. Monday through Thursday, the services will include a morning service from 7:15-7:45 a.m. and an evening service a 7:30 p.m.

Maynard, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Maynard, received his degree from ACU. He is married to the former LaVelle Wasson and they have two children, Deanne and Bryan.

'From one institution to another'

Blind since birth, he conquers world of darkness

EDITOR'S NOTE: Ervin Eugene Cooper, 21, blind since birth, has had a life that would make most sighted individuals give up and quit trying. But through efforts of the Texas Commission for the Blind, housed at the Big Spring State Hospital, and by way of other treatment at the local institution, he has become the first totally blind individual earn his GED at the Big Spring State Hospital. This is the first part of his story, full of sad but hopeful moments.

By DANNY REAGAN

Early records are indistinct, concerning the birth of Ervin Eugene Cooper. Certain individuals say he was born at Baptist Memorial Hospital in Houston, and others suggest that he was delivered at the Herman Hospital in the same city.

Ervin, however, is certain he was born at Herman Hospital 21 years ago. He was two months premature, was delivered by Caesarian section, and spent a month in an oxygen tent. All of these factors combined to leave him totally blind.

His grandmother swears that Ervin could see for a time during those first two months, though. She has told Ervin on more than one occasion that she saw him look up at her and smile.

Ervin's father, of the same name, was a truck driver who Ervin really didn't get to know at all. The older Cooper died suddenly in a grinding turnpike smash-up early in Ervin's childhood.

Ervin's mother, Ruby, was never close to her blind son either. Back in those days, less could be done for an unsighted dependent than now, and some parents could not cope with unsighted children.

ERVIN CAN REMEMBER little of those early days with the family. His grandmother once told him that he walked down a flight of stairs when he was seven months old, and she considered it a miracle. His grandmother always liked Ervin.

Ervin has an older brother, James Wesley, and a younger sister, Carolyn, but memories of them mainly center around sibling fights. He and his sister never were close, but James kept up an unusual brotherly love-fight relationship with Ervin.

At the age of four, Ervin was sent to the Human Development Center in Houston, an institution geared to educational development, where he began his early schooling.

Two years later he went to the Texas School for the Blind, staying only a year, because he was "causing trouble." From there he was sent back to the Human Development Center.

Because of more "trouble," he was sent to the H. Croft Clinic in Houston two years later, leaving three years later in 1967, for another stint at the Texas School for the Blind.

In 1972, at the age of 17, he was "dropped out" of the eighth grade at the TSB. He went straight from there to the Austin State Hospital, for two months. This was the beginning of three years of continual moving from one institution to another, to help solve his "trouble." He was shuffled through 10 different locations:

1. After two months at the Austin State Hospital, he was sent to Ft. Davis, Tex., to Prude Boys' Ranch.

2. That lasted until 1973, when he was abruptly sent back to the ASH.

3. THAT SAME YEAR, he was transferred to San Angelo and the West Texas Lighthouse for the Blind.

4. In August and September of that same year, he was sent to Casa Blanca, a halfway house in El Paso.

5. September through October saw Ervin at the Topeka, Kansas Rehabilitation Center.

6. He spent the next year at Criss Cole School in Austin.

7. For the first time in many years, Ervin got to "see the outside." He stayed three weeks with his grandmother in Kilgore, Tex.

8. Then it was on to an institution called Opportunities in Tyler for a few months in 1974.

9. He went from O.I.T. to the Rusk State Hospital.

10. From there he went to the halfway house at the Austin MH-MR Center.

And finally, in a most fortunate move for Ervin, he came to the halfway house at Big Spring in August of 1974. There were several blind clients at the house when Ervin arrived.

Two months later, he went to the campus of Big Spring State Hospital, and has been there ever since. There he was taken under wing by Jerry L. Schlothauer of the State Commission for the Blind (a separate organization from the Texas MH-MR, but located on the campus) and W. A. (Woodie) Mann of the Behavioral Modification unit of the hospital.

THEIR TASK was to see if they could succeed in correcting Ervin's "troubles" where the many others before them had failed. The "troubles" that kept Ervin going from one institution to another were related to combative, aggressive, and assaultive behavior that saw use of foul language, involvements in fights, and "blowing his stack from time to time."

Schlothauer and his staff quickly saw that Ervin's major problem was not only sight-oriented.

"He had the abilities to function as an unsighted person," said Wanda Hill, later to become rehabilitation assistant at the commission, "he had a minor mobility problem, as he hadn't had that much experience moving about, but he had the intellect to succeed."

"He had been a client of the Commission for the Blind for 14 years," stated Schlothauer, "and his blindness had been more of an inconvenience than a handicap."

The head of the Behavioral Modification unit, Mann, knew that Ervin needed motivation at the outset.

"He had spent so much time in institutions, he lacked confidence in his ability to succeed outside," said Mann.

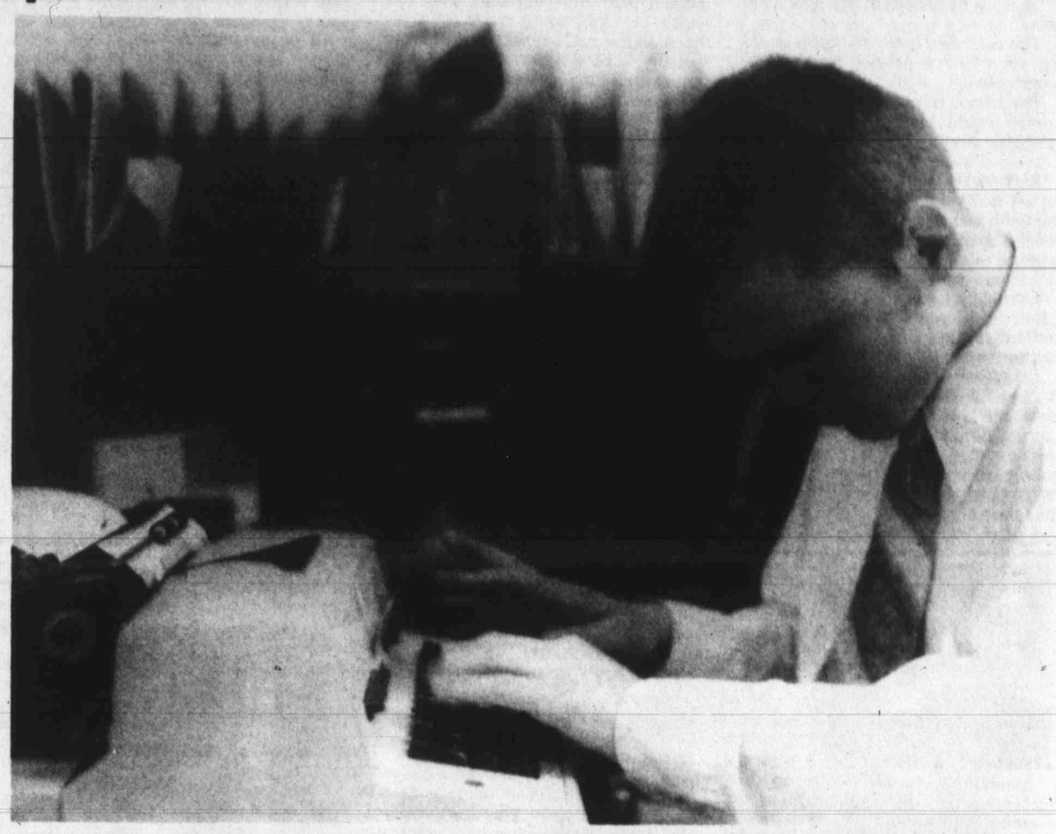

"He has an impulse control problem," Mann continued, "he was assaultive and aggressive, and had been using this behavior to get out of responsibility."

Mann knew of certain steps he wanted to take, and set up a special treatment plan.

"THE LAST THING in the world we would want to do would be to pamper him. That's the worst thing you can do for a blind person. We knew what he was capable of doing, and sought to act accordingly," stated Mann.

"What he needed most of all was independence, confidence and control," concluded Mann.

Schlothauer and his associates were members of the treatment team, even though they were a separate agency, and they went to work to help him in the most effective manner.

MOVING, TYPING AND THINKING FASTER THAN MOST — Ervin eugene Cooper, 21, is the first totally blind individual to earn his GED (equivalent of a high school diploma), at the Big Spring State Hospital. His actions are scarcely restricted by a life of darkness, and the unfortunate background that he suffered is even more reason for his accomplishments to be phenomenal.

The optimum motivation seemed to come from education, as Ervin was intelligent and was interested in learning. The staff then decided to set up a program whereby Ervin could begin the General Educational Development program to earn a GED, the equivalent of a high school diploma.

"It was a major undertaking," Schlothauer said. "All the GED books came in braille, and the then rehabilitation teacher, Carol Schnitcher, had to transcribe all of them to match her own books."

Wanda Hill later replaced Carol, and was able to order the braille books straight from the Library for the Blind, avoiding the tedious transcribing process.

Kathy Hopper, director of educational services at the hospital, was also a member of the decision-making treatment team. Hospital aides Darla Coy and Anna Marie Thompson were also involved in the program.

BIG SPRING Independent school teachers who had never been trained to work with blind people, innovated teaching methods and came out to the hospital to help Ervin. Nadara Luenberg, Mary Trim, Kay Wilson and Jerald Wilson all gave up their time to assist in the project.

Reader's Digest, National Geographic and other books in braille were acquired. Talking books and records were obtained, and the wheels were set in motion to do what had never been done at the local hospital before.

Schlothauer, Hopper and their staffs were now ready to attempt to sufficiently educate a totally blind person that had been in mental institutions for 14 years, so that he might gain the equivalent of a high school education, and one day leave the hospital forever.

(Continued in Monday's Herald is the second part of Ervin Cooper's story, the effort of a group of dedicated individuals to give this story a happy ending.)

Rains boost crop, range conditions

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — Field crops and forages in Texas are making good progress where moisture is available, Dr. Daniel Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, says,

Hay harvesting remained active throughout the state last week with some second cuttings being baled, he said.

Watermelons and cantaloupes are being harvested in southern and western areas. Harvesting of the Presidio cantaloupe crop is about half complete but the Pecos crop is generally behind schedule because the crop is late, Pfannstiel said.

Field beans and peas are being harvested over much of Central and East Texas and peaches are still moving to market in north central and eastern sections, he said.

Range and livestock conditions are generally good across Texas except in West Texas and the Plains where forage growth has been limited by lack of rainfall, he said.

District agricultural agents gave these reports:

Panhandle: Wheat harvesting is about complete. Yields are better than expected. Baling of the second cutting of alfalfa is generally complete. Corn, sorghum, cotton and sugar beets are making good progress. Range cattle remain in good shape.

South Plains: Farmers in southwestern counties who had not been able to plant earlier because of a lack of moisture are now planning to plant early-maturing sorghums. Recent hail damaged some 50,000 acres of cotton. The wheat harvest is virtually complete.

Rolling Plains: Much of the area needs rain. The peanut crop is making good progress in Jones and Motley counties. The third cutting of alfalfa is under way. Peaches are being harvested in Yosng and Wichita counties.

Far West: Recent rains boosted crop and range conditions but more moisture is needed. The cantaloupe harvest in the Presidio area is halfway complete. Alfalfa is producing excellent yields.

West Central: Early cotton is beginning to square. Early sorghum is booting. Rain is needed but livestock remain in good shape. Hay baling remains active.

South Central: Most crops are making good growth but insects are increasing in some fields. Rain is needed to produce additional hay cuttings.

Southwest: Early corn and sorghum is maturing rapidly. Carrot and cucumber harvesting is about complete. Rain is needed for pastures and ranges. Screwworms, ticks and flies are numerous.

It's easy to get discouraged

There is no garden at my house this year.

The reason is not that I have given up, for I have a passion for growing vegetables.

The reason is not that I am ashamed to try again this year, although I probably should be.

BUT A GARDENING mistake I made last year discouraged me. The mistake was one of location. The soil wasn't bad or my plants didn't get washed away, but my modest plot adjoined a real garden.

I should have known better than to plant a garden next to one worked by a retired farmer. Any fool should know better than that.

Despite my garden's being the most successful one I had ever planted (in fact, the only successful one), it was always dwarfed by my neighbor's. By successful I mean only that some small amounts of food were produced on my plot. All of my previous efforts had been unqualified failures.

I should have been tipped off when I noticed that my neighbor, who was twice my age, could work twice as hard as I would. Whenever I looked out my back window, there he was, improving his garden, keeping the pressure on.

But work was not the only difference because I poured my heart into that soil. The difference was plain know-how and experience.

The two plots sat side-by-side, and you cannot imagine how embarrassing it was. His plants came up before mine. His plants quickly grew big and strong while I nursed my puny ones along in a catch-up game. His plants produced vegetables while mine were sickly infants.

To make things even worse, my neighbor was a generous soul. He was all the time offering me the produce of his garden. I took some greens; mine were't quite ready (never were, as it turned out). I took some beans; mine didn't make much to speak of.

There's nothing more embarrassing than having a neighbor give you something out of his garden and not be able to give him anything back out of yours.

All of my friends knew about the garden, and when they visited us, they naturally wanted to see it. As we walked to the backyard, they spotted my neighbor's garden first (it was taller) and exclaimed, "My, what a beautiful garden!"

Then I had to explain that the beautiful garden belonged to that other house. Mine was the next plot over.

THE DAY WAS somewhat saved for me when a friend showed me how to prune my tomato plants to remove nonproductive suckers. As a young man, he had been a truck farmer.

My tomatoes turned out abundant, and I thought this might provide one opening for me to return produce since my farmer-neighbor had only two small tomato plants.

It turned out, however, that he didn't much like tomatoes, and that's why he didn't have a dozen plants towering over mine.

My gardens end up with everything failing except one item, usually squash or cucumbers. Of that one item, I have enough to feed the state. We learn to hate it. For example, we haven't eaten any more squah since last year's one row took over the whole garden.

My neighbor did like squash, and I finally persuaded him to take several small ones. So I didn't get skunked, but the vegetable trading went something like 10-to-1 against me.

I learned never to plant a garden next to one belonging to a real farmer.

But that's not my excuse this year. Now I have moved to Big Spring and, since it was winter, I unwittingly located next door to the yardman to end all yardmen, R. L. Heith, and I'm having a hard time keeping up in the front.

There's nothing more embarrassing than to have a yellow, weedy lawn while your neighbor has a manicured putting green.

For Reagan

Buckley, Jr.

Senator Goldwater's letter to the delegates to the Republican Convention requires analysis. It is set out with a kind of explicitness not routinely invoked by Senator Goldwater, as coming from the senior conservative elected official in the country. And it urges the Convention to name Gerald Ford as its nominee.

WELL, IF HE HAS TO put it that way, I have been fighting the ideological wars as long as Senator Goldwater, in the same army, though in a different service (G-2) and I believe with all due respect for him that Senator Goldwater is dead wrong. This conclusion is shared by many of my friends and colleagues.

1. Senator Goldwater says that President Ford is "turning this country back in the right direction." And should be encouraged to continue to do so. The implicit premise of the statement is that Mr. Ford will be elected if nominated, and that Reagan would not; moreover, that Ford would succeed, if elected, where Reagan would fail.

Much too much is taken for granted here. In the first place, the polls show that both Ford and Reagan would lose. Perhaps the polls are as wrong as they were when they said that Truman would lose. But perfectly cool heads, analyzing the ideological demographics of the country, come to the conclusion that Reagan would do better against Carter than Ford; and that where he would not do better than Ford is those states in which Carter has so heavy an edge as to make Ford's advantage over Reagan meaningless.

Moreover, Senator Goldwater says that Mr. Ford's experience in Washington equipped him to deal with "a Democratic Congress which has done more damage to the American concept of government and free enterprise than any other in my memory."

THERE IS A contradiction here. If it is the worst Congress in the memory of Senator Goldwater, then he must face the coincidence that the worst Congress in history carried on under the Presidency of Gerald Ford. Gerald Ford has done a lot of vetoing, and some of his vetoes have stuck, others have not. What reason is there to think that his vetoes would be more effective than Reagan's? And what reason is there to think that Reagan might not bring in a better Congress than Ford, if Reagan were elected, which is at least as probable as that Gerald Ford would be?

2. The foreign policy of the Nixon-Ford Administration has not succeeded in its stated aims. When Senator Goldwater declares that Ford and Reagan are both conservatives he is correct. He is not correct in suggesting that therefore there would be insignificant differences in foreign policy if Reagan were elected.

Mr. Reagan's concern for the physical security of this country is more pronounced than Mr. Ford's. His penetration of the failure of detente sharply contrasts with Mr. Ford's lingering attachment to it. In the past, no one has expressed greater concern than Senator Goldwater over our deteriorating military situation. President Reagan would do what he could to reverse the trend.

3. THE REPUBLICAN PARTY is in pretty awful shape — a handful of Governors, a third of Congress, 20 per cent of the registered voters.

REMEMBERING...

By BILL D. BROOKS

DUMP GROUNDS

Nothing was more exciting and just plain fun, to this kid anyhow, than finding a dump ground I didn't know about. Most of the people who lived around us just hauled their trash down into the pasture away from their house and dumped it in some low place where it couldn't be seen from the main road. POSTED and NO TRESPASSING signs were unheard of then so we roamed around all over the countryside.

What a treat it was to discover a new dumping place! Most every trash pile would yield something that with just a little imagination and work could be turned into a fine plaything. If you had a tricycle back home that was missing a wheel you could most likely find a replacement in the dump. Though it wouldn't usually match the others it didn't matter, so long as it worked.

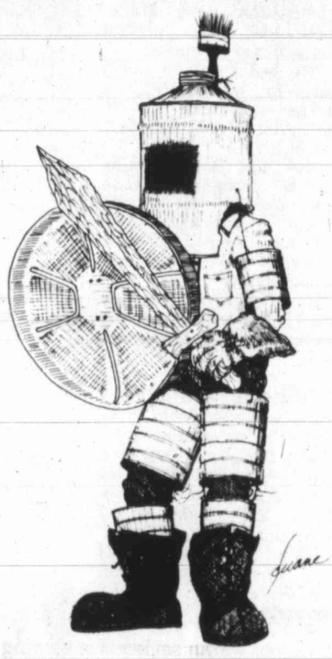

You could spend hours at a good dump ground, turning over every rusty can, breaking jars and bottles, rummaging through old boxes, barrels and containers full of old rags, papers, mechanical parts, half of a toy, a pan with a hole in the bottom, pieces of rope, an old tire that could be rolled down a hill, a shiny chrome-plated hood ornament.

To find a good dump ground was like having a huge toy store at your disposal. You could have anything you wanted because the people it had belonged to had thrown it away. We would wag home an indescribable assortment of junk and upon sight of it Mother would go into shock. She would finally agree that we could keep the stuff for a couple of days if we would throw it away when we were tired of playing with it.

I remember one project I made out of junk one time — a suit of armor. I took a large metal container of some sort that fitted over my head and half way down my chest when I removed its bottom and cut slots for my shoulders. A discarded paint brush made a fine tassel. An eye slot was cut in the front and covered over with screen wire. My shield was an old garbage can lid. With bottoms and tops removed, appropriate sized tin cans covered my arms and legs. Dad's galoshes and blacksmith gloves provided protection for my hands and feet and a whittled out sword added the finishing touch to my outfit. I must have looked fearsome clanking around in that suit of armor, trying to see where I was going.

I declared to my brother that absolutely nothing could hurt me as long as I wore that suit, even if someone threw rocks or clods at me they would just bounce off. My brother tried one rock, just to find out. It bounced off my helmet, making such a ringing sound inside that my earlobes vibrated. I jerked off the can but the echo lasted for some time inside my head.

Garage sales of today are not much different from trash piles back then. The thing is, people sell their junk now instead of throwing it away.

Milk intolerance can be overcome

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can a person who is allergic to milk train the body to digest and absorb milk by gradual day-to-day intake? — Y.C.

It is possible for some.

Your question raises two points concerning milk intolerance. You could be intolerent of it because of a lack of an enzyme (lactase) necessary for digestion of lactose (milk sugar). Or you could be allergic to whey or casein proteins in the milk. Both conditions produce similar symptoms, so it's important to find out which is your problem.

If your allergy is due to the whey protein, boiling milk for 20 minutes can make it tolerable. Also, evaporated milk can be used. But boiling won't help if the allergy is to the casein protein.

If your problem is an allergy (not the enzyme lack I mentioned) there is a trick you can try. Avoid milk and milk products completely for a while. Then use it in small quantities at intervals. Your system may become desensitized enough to allow some tolerance. Dr. Claude Frazier, an allergist, points out that the allergy may remain, however, with different symptoms. A runny nose or a skin rash may replace, say, diarrhea.

Some allergies do tend to subside with time. But, it is important to find out, first of all, just what is causing the intolerance — an allergy or an enzyme deficiency.

Chemical analysis will determine this.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have your booklet, "Solving Your Nail Problems," but it does not mention what a person can take to grow hard nails, which is what I need to know.

I have been taking calcium pills and zinc for more than four months, but my fingernails are still soft. A friend of mine has been taking vitamin C for two years and her nails have improved greatly. Can you comment further? — C.D.

On page 5 of that booklet, you will find in the third paragraph, the following: "Faulty diet, deficient in protein, can lead to weakness in the nails for the simple reason that keratin is a protein material, and that is what the nails are made of."

Your friend's vitamin C could have helped, because that vitamin has to do with the body's use of protein. I also mention that a change in diet (emphasizing protein) would not produce any noticeable effects for weeks, perhaps months. Nothing will alter the basic health of nails already grown out. The same with hair, another protein-based substance. An anemia, common in women, can also cause soft nails, so be checked for that.

My nails booklet is one of my newest. I wrote it because of the heavy volume of mail received on the subject, much of it of a general nature, as your own letter. I believe it covers most common complaints about nails. Readers with nail problems can have a copy by sending 25 cents to me in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it true a person can get vitamin D from exposure to sunshine? — Mrs. O.O.

The action of sulight turns certain substances in the body into vitamin D. It is an essential vitamin, one the body depends on to utilize calcium in foods for bone strength.

That is why a vitamin D deficiency can lead to rickets, which is featured by bone weakness. Vitamin-fortified foods have practically wiped out rickets in modern societies.

Emphysema can be controlled. To learn how to live with this serious lung problem, write for a copy of Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "How to Control Emphysema," care of the Big Spring Herald. Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

What about constipation? Many can be relieved of it, both mentally and physically, by reading Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "The Way to Stop Constipation." For a copy write to him in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Big Spring Herald Mailbag

Dear Editor:

After reading "Focalpoint," Gasoline alley, in last Wednesday's Herald, it is apparent you are not familiar with the Federal Energy Administration price regulations on fuel.

As for the statement in your article, "The refinery sells oil to the transport trucks at the same price for all." This is false. Bill Wilson Oil Company is not billed directly for any fuel from Cosden refinery, and we transport most of our fuel from this refinery. We are billed by Phillips Petroleum Company for all fuel purchased from them. All major oil companies have a monthly fuel allocation for their jobber or consignee. The price being governed by the Federal Energy Administration regulation.

We are aware that all major oil companies do not have the same selling price for fuel. This is attributed to the amount of foreign oil the company has had to purchase to meet the American public's demands.

The Maximum selling price of fuel is determined by the selling price of fuel on May 15, 1973. (Taken from a guide pamphlet sent to us by the Federal Energy Administration, quote);

1. "You may never exceed your maximum authorized selling price."

2. "You may always sell below your maximum authorized selling price."

I am sure a very small per cent of your readers are familiar with the Federal Energy Administration on rules and regulations, but, I can assure my customers and friends that the F.E.A. sets the rules and regulations on maximum fuel prices. This also holds true for all Phillip "66" service stations. I feel the public has been misinformed.

Dear delegates

Art Buchwald

Dear Democratic Delegates,

Welcome to the Democratic National Convention in New York City, which we know will be one of the most exciting events of the last 200 years.

Our program committee has worked day and night to make this an enjoyable, entertaining and suspenseful experience.

This is the tentative schedule which I know will meet with your approval.

ON MONDAY evening at exactly 8 o'clock we will all stand and sing the "Star-Spangled Banner." This will be followed by welcoming speeches from Gov. Hugh Carey and Mayor Abe Beame, both of whom we know you've been waiting on tenterhooks to hear.

Then that Texas spellbinder, Democratic Chairman Robert Strauss, will give his report on the state of the party.

This will be followed by a real treat. At tremendous expense we are going to present a film showing highlights from the careers of all the great Democratic Presidents. It will keep you riveted to your seats.

But there's more. We are going to hear keynote addresses from Sen. John Glenn, America's most famous hero, and Congressman Barbara Jordan, who will both tell us what a mess the Republicans have made of the country for the past eight years. This will be a night to remember.

I KNOW YOU DON'T think we can top Monday night, but wait until you hear what we have in store for you on Tuesday. There will be reports from the Credentials and Rules Committee followed by the highlight of the evening, which will be the reading of the Democratic platform.

We want everyone in their seats for the reading of the platform, and we don't want anyone sneaking off to watch the All-Star baseball game on television. A motion that the Democratic National Committee adjourn the Tuesday night session and charter special trains to go to Philadelphia to watch the game was overwhelmingly defeated by the committee last week by a vote of 35 to 34. The platform reading will go on as planned.

Wednesday afternoon will be devoted to the Rules Committee report, and then we will all break for dinner. After dinner we will come back and hear the nomination speeches for our presidential candidates. At this moment we haven't decided how many nominating speeches we will have. But it is our hope that they will be given by a well-known politician, a woman, a black, an American Indian, a Puerto Rican, an Eskimo and, if she's in town, Elizabeth Taylor.

FOLLOWING EACH nominating speech we will expect all of you to rise in your seats and hold a SPONTANEOUS DEMONSTRATION. Your floor captains will give you your instructions as to where and when the SPONTANEOUS DEMONSTRATIONS will be held. For reasons we can't explain at this time, Georgia will be given the courtesy of leading the demonstrations.

After the demonstrations we will vote on the nominations. This should take about 10 minutes.

Then we will have another SPONTANEOUS DEMONSTRATION and 1,000 balloons will be dropped from the ceiling of Madison Square Garden. We advise you to be there that night as only delegates in attendance will get a free balloon.

Thursday will be windup day for this exciting week. First we will nominate the Vice President and then have another SPONTANEOUS DEMONSTRATION followed by — are you ready for this? — the union band playing "Happy Days Are Here Again."

Then you can go to dinner.

When you come back, the evening will be devoted to a solemn occasion. We will open with a prayer and then an introduction of the presidential candidate, whoever he or she may be.

HE OR SHE will then give his or her acceptance speech, promising peace, full employment and the works. He or she will vow that, if it's "God's will" that a Democratic President be elected, he or she will never lie to the American people.

We will then adjourn after a final SPONTANEOUS DEMONSTRATION.

My answer

Billy Graham

Dear Dr. Graham: I am 32 and unmarried. The only thing that makes life worth living is a wife and children. I wonder if God has any hand in whether or not people get married. — M. K. W.

Dear M. K. w.: One part of the Bible I want you to read is chapter 24 of Genesis. It's the story of how Isaac got his wife. God figured in that event quite prominently.

The question you raise is only part of a larger one having to do with whether the Almighty God gets involved with us, His finite creatures. The answer is yes. Here's what the Psalmist wrote: "O Lord, you have examined my heart and know everything about me. You know when I sit or stand. When far away you know my every thought. You chart the path ahead of me, and tell me where to stop and rest" (Psalms 139:1-3, Livng Bible).

The believer can let God know all of his secret desires through the ministry of prayer.

Big Spring 'like set out of western movie'

By MARJ CARPENTER

"My father was born in Poland. When the Germans took over Poland in 1939, Dad was sent back there as a station master for the railroad. We stayed until 1945 when the Russians came and then we went back to Germany."

This was recalled by Evalora Petersen during her visit here this week in the home of Mrs. Sallie Wasson. Evalora and her husband Vagn are now from Denmark and between the two of them know much of the history of Continental Europe during the past four decades.

Petersen, who is an important manager in Copenhagen, met "Sallie" when she was on a tour through Denmark in 1971.

That was the trip in which Mrs. Wasson visited the Hans Christian Anderson house, she recalls.

The Petersens and Mrs. Wasson met for the second time in 1972 when the Petersons were international visitors at the Montreat World Mission Conference in North Carolina.

The Petersens belong to the Reformed Church and Mrs. Wasson to the Presbyterian, but the two churches are very close in doctrine.

The Petersens recall that in Poland, the country was primarily Catholic in the early days, while Germany was primarily Lutheran.

"Now, however, countries under the domination of communism, such as Poland, have very little of any type of Christianity," the Petersens said quietly.

On this trip to the United States, the two Danish citizens said, "We are visiting friends in New York, Boston, Atlanta, Memphis, Big Spring, and San Francisco."

They laughed about Big Spring being the smallest town they were visiting and added, "It seems like something we cannot even imagine — it's like the set out of a western movie."

Mrs. Wasson was taking the pair to Carlsbad Caverns and on to El Paso. "Might as well see it all while they're here," she stated.

The Petersens have lived all over Europe and are really familiar with the moods of the various countries. He went to school in England, lived in London, joined the army in Denmark. She lived in Poland, then in Brenham, Germany. They married and lived three years in German — then in Paris.

He said, "America seems to have as many facets in one country as Europe does in many countries." When you consider where they have visited and compare New York to Boston and Boston to Atlanta and Memphis and these cities to Big Spring, you can understand why he would think we have many facets.

She is a Sunday School teacher in the Reformed Church. She spoke of the difference in the churches and then they mentioned church tax.

In Denmark, ½ per cent of the net income is church tax to the Lutheran Church, even if you belong to another church. The income tax is 47 per cent of their net income.

Cars are out of sight in cost and gasoline is over a dollar a gallon. Alcoholic beverages are high.

"Rent is lower," Mrs. Petersen said, casting around for something that was less costly.

"America seems like a wonderful place to many in the world," they added.

THEY KNOW EUROPE — Mr. and Mrs. Vagn Petersen of Denmark have lived in Germany, Poland, France, England, and Denmark. They are presently visiting in Big Spring and say America has as many facets as the various countries of Europe.

Exhibit in Heritage Museum lures visitors

Preliminary plans were discussed for a permanent exhibit in the Heritage Museum when the board met recently for their quarterly meeting.

The board also heard reports on the new paint job and repair job on the wheels of the covered wagon on the grounds.

John Taylor, vice president of the board, said that the old windmill is next in line for a face lift.

Bill Read, president, reported that the current exhibit called PotPourri has had a large number of visitors including some from Germany, Denmark, Canada and Australia.

Mrs. Gerri Atwell, curator, said, "Many people return to the museum to visit the different exhibits."

It was also reported that recent reproductions of Caylor's were brought by Howard Duff. The four new ones include "Sunset," "Roping the Outlaw," "The Old Shack" and "The Old Timer."

'Center for Living' title adopted by local directors

The "Center For Living" is the title proposed for expanded family services adopted by the board of directors of Howard County Family Service Center at its regular meeting, Thursday. The proposal underlines the long-range purposes of the Center to: "Create a family center which will be a Center for Living for all citizens in the community by generating a constructive philosophy for living and a range of corresponding services dedicated to assisting people with the problems of living.

The agency will espouse family structures that will result in sound development of individual personality."

The propsal contemplates the employment of a second counselor and an "outreach worker" to serve the families of the "North Side." It includes provision for additional clerical service, furniture and equipment and new housing. Total cost of the proposal is $89,645.

Help will be sought from the United Way of Big Spring-Howard County. Approximately $63,000 will be sought from foundations and government grants. The Center has itemized a list of equipment and furnishings valued at $7,065 which it hopes to raise through special events.

"Our plans and our budget are ambitious, but they are very realistic. The needs and the demands for service require that we plan as we have done. Our limited staff and space cannot continue to meet these steady growing demands," stated Julian C. Patterson, president of the board.

Wilfrid M. Calnan, in his report to the board, recommended that the Center adopt emphasis on providing family therapy (in which all members of the family are interviewed), pre-marital counseling and Family Life Education to help families develop healthy patterns of living together.

Since the beginning of their second year of service, the Center has served 48 families in counseling and personnel has delivered ten speeches. Two professional workshops are scheduled for the staff to give in the fall.

Hobby Commission

Are 'free' state-owned museums thing of past?

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—Free admission to state-owned museums will be a thing of the past if the "Hobby Commission" on government economy has its way.

The commission voted Friday to recommend to the legislature that admission fees be charged at all state museums, such as the Institute of Texan Cultures in San Antonio.

A 25 cents per person admission fee at the six biggest state museums would have reduced the need for tax support by nearly $250,000 in fiscal 1975, a commission study showed.

The commission delayed a decision, however, on the hottest issue before it—merger of the three state water agencies.

The commission—whose official title is the Joint Advisory Committee on Government Operations—deferred that one to a later meeting.

It then will have to choose between two agencies, one agency or no change at all. Commission members spoke out for each of those alternatives.

The natural resources subcommittee recommended placing all permit and regulatory duties in a Texas Water Resources Control Board. Planning, bond administration and administrative support would repose in the present Texas Water Development Board.

The Texas Water Quality Board and the Texas Water Rights Commission would be merged into the Texas Water Resources Control Board.

House Speaker Bill Clayton, vice-chairman of the commission, said a study made several years ago recommended a single umbrella agency for all state water activities.

Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, subcommittee chairman, replied that this was not advisable because of the power it would concentrate in a single agency.

"Texas right now is fantastically short on water as demands increase ... We didn't want to put anything this critical into so small a sphere of responsibility," Jones said.

Rep. Charles Evans, D-Fort Worth, moved to substitute the single-agency concept for what Jones's subcommittee had proposed. But Lt. Gov. Billy Hobby, commission chairman, instructed the subcommittee to report back after giving further thought to the advantages and disadvantages of the single agency concept.

Some commission members questioned the notion that there should be a merger at all

CAUTION
Your savings may be costing you money.

Your savings are earning interest, right? But are they earning as much as they could be? If not, your savings are actually costing you money.

The truth of the matter is that many financial institutions, including banks and credit unions, are simply not structured to pay the highest interest rates. In fact, some can't even guarantee payment of the interest rates they quote.

And other kinds of investments have even higher degrees of risk. For example, mutual funds and other stock investments don't even guarantee return of the money you put in, much less earnings.

If you want to make the most of what you've got, and you want guaranteed interest rates, you've got to go to a savings specialist. Like First Federal Savings and Loan.

We call ourselves savings specialists because we can offer you higher guaranteed interest rates, more specialized savings-related services, and more ways to save than anyone in town.

And if none of our standard plans fit your particular needs, we'll custom tailor a savings plan specifically for you, whereby you can receive your interest checks any way you want. Monthly, quarterly, semi-annually or annually.

The following are just a few of the many special services and savings plans available to you from First Federal:

PASSBOOK SAVINGS Our Passbook Savings account is basically the same as a regular savings account offered by a bank — only our interest rates are higher. Passbook Savings earn a full 5¼% interest compounded daily, and paid daily. For example, if you make a deposit and withdraw it three days later, you'll be paid interest for the three days your money was on deposit.

Anyone can open a Passbook Savings account with only a $5.00 deposit. There are no term restrictions. You can make deposits and withdrawals whenever you want. And with our new convenient, easy-to-use Tele-Transfer service, you can transfer money from your Passbook account to your checking account with just a phone call.

CERTIFICATES OF DEPOSIT First Federal offers you four Certificate of Deposit savings plans to choose from.

- 4-year plan (min. $5,000) earns 7½% interest
- 2½-year plan (min. $1,000) earns 6¾% interest
- 1-year plan (min. $1,000) earns 6½% interest
- 3 months (min. $500) earns 5¾% interest

Interest on all of our Certificate of Deposit savings plans is compounded daily and distributed quarterly.

SELF-EMPLOYED PENSION PLAN (KEOGH) This plan is designed for the individual who wants to establish a retirement plan for both himself and his employees. All contributions are TAX DEDUCTIBLE. You don't have to pay any income tax on either the contributions or interest until you begin drawing funds.

INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNT (IRA) This plan is designed for employed individuals, not currently participating in a retirement plan. Self-employed persons are eligible, but are not required to include employees in this plan.

All contributions are TAX DEDUCTIBLE. You don't have to pay any income tax on the money you contribute to the plan or the interest it earns until you start drawing funds.

AUTOMATIC DEPOSIT OF SOCIAL SECURITY PAYMENTS This service allows you to deposit your Social Security check in your savings account without lifting a finger. The check is sent directly from the U.S. Department of Treasury to First Federal.

And deposit is guaranteed. You never have to worry about losing it. What's more, our new Tele-Transfer allows you to transfer as much of it as you want to your checking account. All it takes is one phone call.

INTEREST COMPOUNDED DAILY Interest on all First Federal Savings Plans is compounded daily. That means that if you leave your Passbook savings on deposit a full year, or your Certificates of Deposit in until they mature, your money actually earns more interest than quoted as our standard rates.

Here's how it works. When you make a deposit, your money (principal) starts earning paid interest the first day. Then each day following, the interest on your principal is compounded along with the interest accumulated from the preceding day or days. So if you have a Passbook account which earns 5.25% daily, and you leave your principal on deposit for a full year, you have actually earned 5.39% interest at the end of the year.

The following chart shows how much interest (percentage-wise) your savings actually earns annually when the principal is left on deposit until maturity, and the interest is compounded daily.

STANDARD INTEREST RATE	TYPE OF SAVINGS PLAN	ACTUAL PERCENTAGE OF INTEREST PAID ANNUALLY
7.50%	4-year Certificate of Deposit	7.79%
6.75%	2½-year Certificate of Deposit	6.98%
6.50%	1-year Certificate of Deposit	6.72%
5.75%	3-month Certificate of Deposit	5.92%
5.25%	Passbook account	5.39%

All things considered, it just makes better sense to save the First Federal way.

For more information about any of the services or savings plans outlined above, drop by First Federal today. Or call Mrs. Margie Hill or any of our other savings counselors at 267-8252.

Martin County residents enjoy parade, showers

By MARJ CARPENTER

Showers never dampen the spirits of Martin County people, since they are mostly farmers and ranchers.

They came out in droves to attend the annual Old Settlers parade Saturday in spite of light showers falling on the proceedings.

Floats depicting the history of the United States as well as the importance of the Old Settlers Reunion were many and varied.

The top prize went to a float constructed by the Preceptor Laureate Alpha chapter of the Beta Sigma Phi and included a group of Pilgrims conferring on one end of the float and a tribe of Indians sitting down for a Pow Wow on the other end.

The second place winner was entitled, "We've Come a Long Way." It featured a man dressed as Abraham Lincoln signing the Emancipation Proclamation surrounded by members of the Edell McAllister, Gladys Edwards and Bernice Jenkins families.

THIRD PLACE went to the Standefer family float which depicted a typical family reunion and included all members of their clan. Some were gathered around the organ singing, a football player was showing his trophy, some of the women were quilting and following behind was a little tyke in a small vehicle with her father and a sign, "I'm part Standefer too."

Due to the large number of float entries, five prizes were given in this category.

Fourth Place went to the Stanton Music Club for its 13 colonies float. Children dressed in blue as stars depicted the 13 original states and members of the club were on the float garbed in identical old-fashioned dresses.

A FIFTH PLACE went to a float called "Love" which depicted children in the early days working together. One little boy chopped wood with enthusiasm all during the parade. An honorable mention went to the float from Stanton View Manor.

The judges also commended the Bicentennial Commission float which had a huge birthday cake.

Only one walking unit received a prize and it was the boy scouts who were at the front of the parade.

The mounted and riding unit prizes went to the Kelly family, who had five generations on horseback and their own family flag, the Todd Mims group, who were great-grandchildren of Crystal Webb in a small car and Johnny Dunn, rodeo clown who stood on horseback all through the parade.

THREE PRIZES for best dressed people in the crowd included Mrs. Walter Kelly, best dressed woman; Gina Snell, best dressed girl; Joe Stewart, best dressed man and Ricky Fleckenstein, best dressed boy. Dwayne Henson was this year's mystery rider. Honorable mentions to persons in the crowd included Charlotte Nelson and family, dressed in red, white and blue and Nita and Ded Graves of Temple in a mother and daughter dress.

First place in window displays went to Roadrunner Chevrolet for the history of transportation; the Stanton Variety, second and Western Auto, third. M&M Meter Service received an honorable mention.

The parade also included units from Brady and Odessa and several old cars.

ICK PETERS, who has never missed an Old Settlers Reunion gave the welcome at the barbecue following an afternoon of old fiddler's music and contests. Johnny Louder, president of the organization, acted as master of ceremonies. Glenn Sargent of Belvue Church of Christ gave the invocation.

Mrs. Nelda Hazlewood and Joni presented recognitions and awards. Jo Jon Cox read communications and new officers were elected. Owen Kelly was in charge of the memorial and the Rev. Rhinehold Schmitt, St. Joseph's Catholic Church, gave the benediction.

The traditional pink lemonade was served outside the registration headquarters. This year, the old Stanton barrels had worn out and new ones were obtained from a location in Ohio.

Nobody had any barrels anymore, but there were still plenty of Old Settlers — at Stanton on Saturday.

Howard-Glasscock Counties Old Settlers Reunion slated

The 52nd Howard-Glasscock Counties Old Settlers Reunion has been slated for August 6, Dwight McCann, president, announced today.

At the same time, he named a number of committee chairmen to plan for the gathering, which he hopes will be the "biggest and best" in the long history of the annual reunion.

The first reunion of early settlers of Howard-Glasscock Counties was held at the farm home of J.L. McKinney in the Center Point area

Later, the reunion was moved to Cottonwood Park, also known as Reoper's Grove or Parrish Park, east of Big Spring, and eventually to Comanche Trail Park.

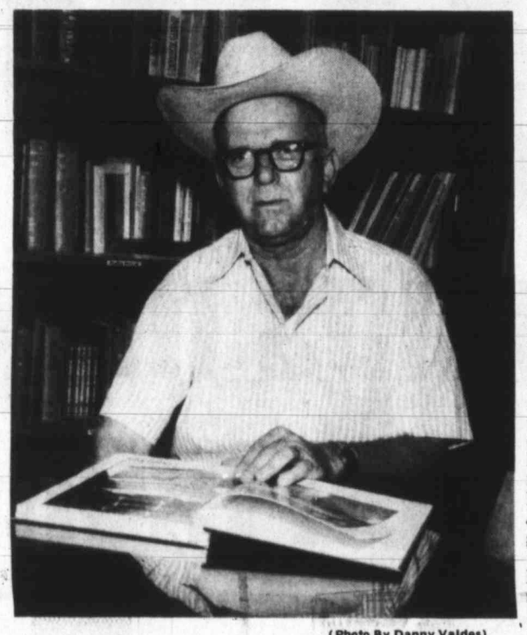

Comanche Trail will again be the site for the reunion in the pavilion built near the Totem Pole by the Old Settlers.

Assisting McCann in executiion of plans for the reunion are Jerald Burgess, vice president and Mrs. Gertrude McCann, secretary-treasurer.

Assignments for the reunion include "Daddy" Don Brooks, KHEM Radio, master of ceremonies; Dr. Claud Craven, memorials; Jesse Manuel, tobacco spitting contest; Mrs. Burgess and Mrs. A. C. Jones, egg race; Richard Posey, horseshoe pitching; Mrs. Mamie Lee Dodd, entertainment; Pete Jenkins and Gene Madry, band; Mrs. Morris Robertson, concession stand and Mrs. Marj Carpenter, publicity. Others will be named later.

The Howard County Playboys will furnish music for the reunion and will play for the traditional reunion dance 8:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. at the pavilion.

Old-fashioned barbecue, son of a gun stew, homemade ice cream and other old favorites will be served during the day.

Retired Maj. Gen. Walker arrested on sex charge

DALLAS (AP) — Retired Army Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker says a recent arrest on charges of public lewdness here will result "in at least a change of image."

Court records revealed Thursday show that Walker was arrested June 23 for allegedly making a sexual advance to a plainclothes park patrol officer in the men's room at Dallas' Cole Park.

He was released the next day after posting a $200 bond set by Municipal Judge George Martinez. The case will be tired by Judge F. Harold Entz. No trial date has been set.

The charge is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine up to $2,000. It also carries a possible one-year jail term.

Walker, whose ultra-conservative views have placed him in the center of many controversies, resigned as a major general in 1961.

His resignation came not long after he was relieved of his command of the 24th Division in Germany following complaints that he was indoctrinating his troops in John Birch Society-type doctrine.

Asked about the charges, Walker, 66, said, "I am free, independent and unattached to suit myself and no one else."

Following his resignation, Walker, a 1931 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy, became involved in supporting conservative political candidates and issues.

In the 1962 race for governor of Texas, Walker finished fifth in a field of six candidates.

Although he has been less active politically recently, Walker still makes available to phone callers a tape recorded message with an ultra conservative theme.

Knight, who has attended the two previous conferences in Ohio and Nebraska, was elected to the executive board of the NSSP last summer. He will go on July 12 as he is on an organizational committee for the conference.

Drake, a freshman member of the council, was also selected to attend. Big Spring High council was named outstanding safety council in the state last year.

Ford 'shocked'

Letter stirred hornet's nest

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — President Ford, who read it, said he was "shocked" by the letter and ordered it reviewed. Helen Walsh, who wrote it, called it perfectly rational and is not one bit happy.

A seemingly routine letter mailed June 25 from the Health, Education, and Welfare Department's regional civil rights office to the Scottsdale, Ariz., school district has stirred a hornet's nest of national proportion.

Signed by John Palomino, chief enforcer of antidiscrimination laws in secondary schools in the West, the letter said traditional father-son, mother-daughter school functions were sexually discriminatory. A school district which discriminates on the basis of sex could lose vitally needed federal funds, the letter said.

"I was shocked," Ford told a news conference Friday. "I think it was a very wrong decision."

Ford was so irritated by the letter, which amounted to official policy, that he ordered HEW Secretary David Mathews to review the matter. That effectively suspended enforcement of the policy, and Mathews said Friday that he couldn't agree more with the President.

It began in February when Dr. Ira King, who is in charge of making certain the Scottsdale schools comply with antidiscrimination laws, routinely queried the San Francisco HEW office.

If schools sponsored banquets and restricted them to fatherssons or mothers-daughters, King asked, would that be considered discriminatory?

King's inquiry came to Palomino's office. He dispatched it to the regional office attorney who, in turn, "bumped it to Washington and the HEW general counsel for advice," according to Robert Fouts, public affairs officer here.

"They chewed on it for five months and the answer finally came back, 'Yes, it is discriminatory,'" recalled Fouts.

HEW officials contacted in Washington and San Francisco cited a portion of Title IX of the 1972 Civil Rights Act, which reads in part:

"Any aid, benefit, or service to a student shall not, on the basis of sex, subject any person to separate or different rules of behavior, sanctions or other treatment."

With the decision made in Washington, it went back to San Francisco, where Helen Walsh, 28, an HEW "equal opportunities specialist," was assigned to draft a reply to King.

"It was very routine," Ms. Walsh, who prefers the feminist designation, said later of the letter. "I thought the decision was very rational. The letter pointed out that having parents' night, instead of either fathers or mothers night, would allow fatherless boys and motherless girls to be included.

Lamesa city attorney quits

LAMESA — City attorney Vernon Adcock submitted his resignation to Lamesa city council members earlier this week.

City Secretary Ben Allen said the council is having trouble finding a replacement, because the position is part-time.

The normal procedure calls for the city manager to interview lawyers within the community, after which he would offer a recommendation for a successor to Adcock to the council.

Ray Renner of Lamesa has been reappointed by the council to another two-year term as a director of the Canadian River Municipal Water District.

Several fights already brewing

New prison proposed for West Texas

By MARK BROWNING
Harte Hanks Austin Bureau

Texas prisons are bursting at the seams, and it may cost the state $99 million to do something about it.

Inmate population in the Texas Department of Corrections (TDC) is at 20,500 and rising rapidly. To cope with the increase a new prison housing a minimum of 2,000 prisoners is being proposed for West Texas in the TDC's 1978-79 budget.

Several fights are already brewing over the prison. Prison reform groups don't want a new prison at all, and organized labor "will oppose it every way we know how," if it is built with inmate labor, said Harry Hubbard, president of the Texas AFL-CIO.

THE TDC budget gives the legislature two choices: build the prison with inmate labor for an estimated $64 million, or use an outside contractor and spend $99 million.

The option selected could make a great difference in the economic impact on whatever West Texas town is proposed as the location. All persons involved in planning the prison say no specific sites have been considered yet.

Regardless of how the prison is built or where it is located, something must be done to relieve overcrowded facilities, said TDC administrator Jim Estelle.

In his general statement accompanying the proposed TDC budget, Estelle said, "The citizens of Texas, through their juries and courts, have responded to the increasing level of criminal activity in a definitive way. They are sending more people to prison for longer sentences..."

The TDC budget notes that inmate population has increased 60 per cent since 1970 and will likely reach 25,565 by 1979. According to the TDC budget proposal, "Expected population cannot be housed by 1981. It is therefore imperative that additional units be provided to adequately house the expected population."

Talk of a new prison had been heard before the TDC budget was released, but what surprised those involved in the state's budget-making process was the projected cost.

"Outside of higher education, the Department of Corrections budget is far and away the largest budget request among the agencies in the history of the state, as far as I know," said David Klarer, a budget examiner for Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

LARRY KOPP, the TDC budget examiner for the legislature, said he wasn't sure the request was the largest in Texas history, but added, "I'm not aware of any other single area where we've seen a larger request in terms of an increase." The TDC budget represents "a sizeable request in terms of an agency that size," he said.

Despite the huge cost to the state and ultimately the taxpayers, Estelle says the alternatives to a new prison are worse. Expanding present institutions (all located in central East Texas) would put severe strain on kitchen, dining, bathing and laundry facilities, the TDC budget says. Minimum standards for space per prisioner probably would not be met, either, like they are in the proposed prison.

Community-based corrections are not feasible at the present time, although the concept is good, Estelle feels.

"WE SUPPORT well-managed and well-run community-based corrections," Estelle said, "but in the 10 to 15 states where it has been tried extensively, the residential type of facility has had very little impact on the total inmate population."

Most community facilities house from 20 to 75 people, Estelle said, and "a community can only absorb so many of those."

Costs are "significantly higher" then prisons, he added.

"It has been sold on the basis in other states that it is less expensive, and it's simply not true," Estelle said. "In many cases it is more effective in rehabilitation, but I don't want to see the idea sold on the basis of cost when it is more expensive."

Charles Sullivan, lobbyist for Citizens United for Rehabilitation of Errants (a prison reform group), disagrees.

"We are 100 per cent against any new prison," Sullivan said, "and we have communicated this to the Department of Corrections. We intend to lobby to beat any proposed new prison."

SULLIVAN REFERRED to a statement made by Estelle in the past that 40 per cent of those in Texas prisons did not need to be there. "I can't understand, if 40 per cent are ready to be released, why they would ask to build another prison?" Sullivan said.

Sullivan also objects to the proposed West Texas location, saying its isolation from other prison units will increase the possibility of brutality to inmates.

Above all, he said, the reform group objects to TDC putting money "into steel and concrete and not human services."

ORGANIZED LABOR has another objection: it wants to handle the steel and concrete.

"If they try to go with inmate labor, we're gonna fight the hell out of it," said Gerald Brown, head of Texas building and trades unions. "We've been told and promised they wouldn't try this anymore, ever."

Brown said the unions and TDC had an understanding that construction on existing TDC facilities could be done by inmate labor, but not in the outside world.

"There's no way we can compete with zero wages," Brown said. "I thought slave labor should have gone out last century."

Brown said 17 international unions in West Texas might be involved in constructing a new prison, and added that the $99 million TDC estimate was too high.

"With our knowledge of construction," he said, "our contractor has got an advantage and can purchase construction materials just as cheaply as the state."

"If they try to do it any other way, we'll raise all kinds of hell," Brown added. TDC has a budget hearing before the Legislative Budget Board Aug. 9, and Brown said, "We're damn sure going to be there."

"I DON'T want to leave the impression we're fighting Jim Estelle," he said. "He's a friend of mine. I don't know he even put that (inmate labor) in there unless someone told him to."

Estelle sings a different tune: "I wanted to be very honest. I wanted the people of Texas to know the savings that can accrue by using the skilled labor of our own inmates." The projected saving is $35 million.

Virtually all TDC construction in the past has been done by inmates, Estelle said. "The construction is tied in with our vocational training program and gives the inmate actual in-field experience, which is a valuable part of that program," he explained.

ORGANIZED LABOR has been "very, very fair" in the past in letting inmates do construction, Estelle added.

"They realize we are only building prision facilities, and they realize the tax savings, because they are among the biggest taxpayers in the state," he said.

AFL-CIO president Hubbard remembers things differently. Unions "acquiesced" to letting inmates build the Coffield Unit, now under construction near Palestine, he said. The unions won't let TDC "interfere with the free market," he added. "I guess that's pretty well been accepted."

From the Legislative Budge Board viewpoint, Kopp guesses the other way. "I would think that it would be highly probably that the thing would be done with inmate labor," he said. "It would be my guess that would likely occur."

"It's my personal observation that is probably the way it will be built," agreed Klarer, though he emphasized Briscoe would determine final recommendations.

THE ISSUE seems likely to be decided on the floor of the legislature, though both the Legislative Budget Board and Briscoe will make proposals before the end of the year. Kopp said legislators will want to know how much economic benefit would come to a community where the prison would be located and whether the need for a new prison justified the huge expenditure.

Meanwhile, the prisons are filling up, and as Estelle noted in his administrator's statement, "I wish I could report the increase is going to level off, but neither our own research efforts nor the census predicters for the nation give us any cause to look for immediate relief."

Webb AFB rumor shot down

Where is 'Location X'?

Harte Hanks Austin Bureau

The site of the proposed West Texas prison farm remains unchosen.

But Texas Department of Corrections Director Jim Estelle knocked down one rumor that has been going around the state capitol that Webb Air Force Base in Big Spring is it.

THE AIR FORCE has announced that Webb was under study for possible closure. A final decision of Webb's fate is not due until fall.

But Estelle said that abandoned military installations are only one alternative among many.

"Most military bases are not constructed with prisons in mind," he said. "The only uses like that that I've seen have been on a temporary basis."

The TDC hopes to begin the new prison somewhere in West Texas beginning in 1978. It means a possible $99 million investment and 200 or so jobs for some city.

A new prison in West Texas would give a city an "obvious economic advantage," says David Klarer, budget examiner for Gov. Dolph Briscoe. "It means jobs."

It also means over 2,000 prisoners though Estelle says a low escape rate and economic benefits to cities have brought community acceptance of prisons in the past.

HOW MUCH money a new prison would pour into a local economy depends on several factors. Most importantly, the legislature would have to agree with the TDC that overcrowded prisons justify the large expense of building a new facility.

Also, the legislature must decide how to build the prison. TDC estimated $99 million would be needed for a contract with outside labor, but only $64 million for inmate labor. The $99 million contract would employ many West Texans in construction jobs.

If a prison were approved, estimates are that from 150 to 200 jobs would be created, most of them for local residents, said Jack Kyle, assistant director of business at TDC's Huntsville offices.

"A NEW prison will have a tremendous impact, but it will depend on the size of the unit," he said. The estimate of from 150-200 jobs is based on the number of persons expected to be employed at the Coffield Unit, now under construction near Palestine. Like the proposed West Texas prison, the Coffield Unit plans call for housing 2,000 prisoners, but that number may have to be expanded by doubling up inmates in cells, Kyle said.

Local residents make up most of the employes, he said. "We have had greater success of keeping people who are near their own homes." A "single, massive training" program would be conducted at "Location X" before a prison was opened, he added.

Where is "Location X"?

"WE HAVE no specific site in mind. If there were one, I'd tell you," said Estelle. A committee of TDC staff and board members is developing criteria for a prison location, he said, with primary importance being placed on available irrigation for farming, suitable acreage and accessibility to other parts of the state.

Attorney John Mark McLaughlin of San Angelo is the West Texas member of the TDC board, and he also says no specific sites are being considered.

"We're trying to locate areas right now," he said, "We're not even down to counties or individually-owned properties. We haven't talked with individual landowners."

McLAUGHLIN DID say, however, "I frankly would be surprised if it is in San Angelo."

Another possibility, according to Kyle, is "a site that might already belong to the state."

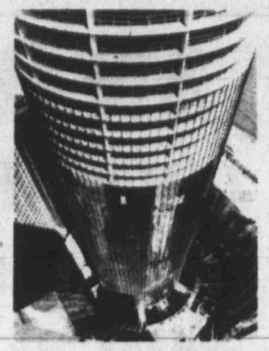

Estelle, Kyle and McLaughlin all agreed in separate interviews that a recommendation probably won't be made before late fall, and the final location won't be certain until the legislature makes its mind up on the rest of the issues involving the prison, including whether to build it at all.

Ike had temper 'that put the fear of God' into anyone, says David

NEW YORK (AP) — David Eisenhower says his grandfather, the late war hero and president, Dwight D. Eisenhower, had a temper "that put the fear of God" into anyone who felt its force.

Eisenhower is working on a book about his grandfather, tentatively entitled "Going Home to Glory: Dwight D. Eisenhower."

Random House, which will publish the book, said Eisenhower declared in his proposal for the book, "He was powerful, friendly, stern with a temper that put the fear of God into man and child alike with its terrible force."

GOING UP IN DETROIT — This glass tower rising on downtown Detroit's riverfront, will be the 1,400-room Detroit Plaza. The spectacular 70-story structure is the centerpiece in the city's new Renaissance Center and is scheduled to open next spring. The glass ring around the hotel's base is a skylight over an eight-story atrium that is crossed by aerial walkways.

Dog attacks Mrs. Crocker

Mrs. H. V. (Lona) Crocker, 1707 Benton St., said a dog attacked her in an alley as she and her granddaughter returned from a neighbors house Friday afternoon.

The dog which was tied with a chain to a brick knocked her down and left a number of puncture wounds in her leg, Mrs. Crocker said. She was treated at Malone-Hogan Clinic.

Diane Crocker, 8, was not hurt.

Dr Pepper formula kept in vaults of banks

Special to the Herald

DALLAS — There is a formula so secret that only three people in this world are privileged to see it.

Only two copies of the formula exist and they are kept in the vaults of separate Dallas banks.

TWO OF the three privileged persons must go together to see the formula.

According to officials: It's not a cola. It's something much, much more.

It's not a root beer. There are root beers by the score.

It's . . . the joy of every boy and girl.

At least that's what Dr Pepper officials say. And their security measures are intended to maintain that super-secret originality.

Dr Pepper, the "misunderstood" Texas soft drink, has grown during more than 90 years from a Waco soda jerk's concoction to the fourth largest soft drink in the country.

But long before it was big anywhere else, it was big in Texas. It has been a part of growing up in Texas for generations.

And that is what made the advertising campaign of a few years ago so mystifying. "Dr Pepper — The Most Misunderstood Soft Drink."

What could we be not understanding? We'd been raised drinking and talking about it.

"Did you know there is a doctor in our town with a glass neck?" No, Really?" "Yeah, Dr Pepper."

THAT WAS a real knee-slapper back in grade school. It rated right up there with "Why did the moron throw the clock out the window.?"

Along about junior high we heard the story that Dr Pepper was made with prune juice. Well, that was the end of Dr Pepper for a while.

Everybody knew what prune juice was for and that only grandparents drank the stuff.

But then came high school and everyone was drinking Dr Pepper again. We certainly never discussed the reason for its sudden acceptability, but we all knew it.

It's still not easy to talk about, but it was pimples, the curse of adolesence, and everyone knew that chocolate and colas only made them worse.

In the face of acne (or with acne on the face), even suspected prune juice was better than cola. So Dr Pepper was in again.

It was about this same time, incidently, that it became very fashionable to say "DP" instead of "Dr Pepper." It sounded so cosmopolitan.

For most people that was probably the end of consciously thinking about Dr Pepper as anything more than refreshment. But not for anyone going into journalism.

A sure trick question on journalism style tests was to spell "Dr Pepper." I'll bet you've never noticed there is no period after "Dr" in Dr Pepper.

Any reporter who didn't learn it in college was sure to find out the first time he got it wrong in the newspaper.

Errant reporters always get a friendly little note from the company's attorneys pointing out that Dr Pepper is a registered trademark and one does not mess around with registered trademarks.

For those who wonder about such things, the period was dropped from "Dr" in 1955 because company officials thought it made their new bottle emblem look cluttered.

But back to the story. How could we possibly "misunderstand" something we'd been through all that with?

The answer is, we didn't. Those television commercials were aimed at folks north of the Mason-Dixon line who were getting Dr Pepper in their area for the first time.

"They thought it was a tonic, that is had medicinal qualities. It did not and never has had," explains Harry Ellis, Dr Pepper's vice president for public relations.

THE DRINK we'd been understanding in Texas since 1885 achieved complete national distribution only three years ago.

If Texans understood that Dr Pepper did not have medicinal qualities, it was because we hadn't paid much attention to Dr Pepper's early advertising.

The company was never afraid to extol the healthful aspects of its drink.

"The Friendly Pepper Upper" was probably the last advertising slogan of that ilk.

But there were plenty of similar solgans before that one "Good for Life," a phrase used in the 30s, can still be found on drink boxes and metal sign boards in rural stores.

The well-known "10, 2 & 4" slogan first appeared in 1925 as "Drink a Bite to Eat at 10, 2 & 4."

(And that reminds me of another high school recollection, "Dr Pepper" was a popular, though juvenile, version of five-card draw.)

"Vim, Vigor, Vitality" was an earlier slogan. And one of the earliest was most blatant. "Dr Pepper, Nature's Own Remedy."

The drink was first created in the early 1880s by an experimenting soda fountain employe at the Old Corner Drug Store in Waco.

The soda fountaineer soon returned to his native Virginia to marry a girl by the name of — you guessed it — Pepper.

HE LEFT Waco without ever developing his concoction past the point of naming it Dr Pepper. Company histories don't even mention the inventor's name.

The name they do mention is R.S. Lazenby, a Waco resident and patron of the Old Corner Drug Store. He began working on the drink and after two years of testing, blending and refining, put it on sale in 1885.

That makes it the second oldest soft drink in the country. The oldest Hyers Root Beer, began a year earlier.

The company headquarters remained in Waco until 1922 when it was moved to its present location on Mockingbird Lane in Dallas.

As you might expect, company officials don't talk much in specifics when discussing the Dr Pepper formula.

They do say one thing specifically and emphatically — Dr Pepper does not contain prune juice.

Company brochures are hopelessly vague: "Its unique taste comes from the blending of pure fruit flavors with other wholesome ingredients."

W.W. Clements, president and chairman of the board of Dr Pepper, offers a little more detail. He says it includes more than 30 ingredients, of which 23 contribute to the taste.

"But the real secret is in the blending," he says.

Clements is one of the three people privileged to see the formula.

"I never even saw the recipe until I was a chief executive in the company," he says. "And I've only seen it three times since then."

EMPLOYES WHO make the Dr Pepper concentrate at the Dallas plant are not told the names of the ingredients they are working with. All processing and ordering is done by numbers.

Clements concedes that some ingredients are recognizable to employes, but says individual employes work with only small portions of the manufacturing process and do not know what other ingredients are going in at other points along the line.

He credits all this security with maintaining the drink's individuality and its success.

"It's the only soft drink that has never been successfully copied or imitated," he says.

Whatever is responsible, Dr Pepper has definitely grown, especially after its distribution was rapidly expanded a few years ago.

According to the last annual report, net sales have gone from $32 million in 1966 to more than $138 million last year.

Earnings per share went from 18 cents in 1966 to 62 cents last year. Company officials say Dr Pepper has grown at three times the rate of the industry.

And through it all, the hometown folks look for their own. Waco continues to have the highest per capita consumption of Dr Pepper of any place in the world.

Two Social Security payment adjustments recommended

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cost-of-living changes in Social Security payments should be computed twice instead of only once a year to help protect inflation, the Senate's Special Committee on Aging says.

Chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, who has introduced legislation to make the changes, said with the release of the report Thursday that older persons are engaged in a "desperate struggle" in which more and more items which are "musts" in the monthly budget are becoming "maybes" or "not-at-alls."

In a minority report, committee Republicans conceded that the 23 million Americans who are aged 65 and over have "many unmet needs in income, housing, job opportunities, health care, nutrition, recreation, education and transportation." But they said important progress has been made in the fight against inflation during the last year and noted that the rate of inflation has been reduced.

The committee majority also recommended changing the Social Security formula to reflect the actual spending patterns of older persons, since they spend proportionately more than younger persons on food, shelter and medical care.

The report said average health care costs for those over 65 are three times the level for individuals 19 through 64, and Medicare covers only about 38 per cent of the expense.

It also recommends greater employment opportunities for older workers. Unemployment for persons 45 and older averaged 1,567,000 during 1975, the highest number since the Bureau of Labor Statistics began compiling records in 1948, the report said. Periods of unemployment for persons in this age bracket were also of longer duration.

Total unemployment was between 7.7 million and 7.8 million during the final quarter of 1975.

PUNCHING IT HOME: Johnny Miller, USA, "punches" the ball in as he eagles the five-par 13th hole in today's British Open Golf Championship final play. At this stage he was running well ahead of the rest of the field.

Nicklaus ties for 2nd

Miller wins British Open

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — Johnny Miller finally put the British Open title in his bag Saturday by crushing Jack Nicklaus and 19-year-old Spaniard Sevriano Ballesteros by six strokes for the most convincing victory in this tournament in more than 40 years.

Miller had said when he arrived in Britain only two days before the championship began he would win it this time. Last year, he shared third with Nicklaus and three years ago was second to Tom Weiskopf.

Miller, a 29-year-old, 6-footer from Napa, Calif., had been "bubbling with enthusiasm" through all four rounds. "I felt good and strong, and I knew somehow I could do it," he said after his victory.

Miller was always within a club's length of the lead. He had a par 72 in the first round, was four under in the second round and came into the final at 213 — three under par and two behind Ballesteros, who had shared the first-round lead and led the next two rounds.

But Miller snatched the lead from Ballesteros for good after the fifth hold Saturday.

JOHNNY MILLER

'I want to be like Sam Snead'

Miller fired a final-round 66 for 279, nine under par, while Ballesteros staggered in with 74 for 285. After blowing all chance of victory, Ballesteros eagled the 17th and birdied the 18th for a second-place tie with Nicklaus, who shot 69. Ray Floyd was alone in fourth with a 70-286.

Nicklaus, the man everyone looked to beat in this tournament, paid tribute to Miller's consistency after Nicklaus had vainly tried to catch him on the last nine holes.

"I never could put any pressure on him," Nicklaus said. "I think he'll win quite a few more tournaments. He's young, he's strong, and he's going to win."

Miller took the crown by keeping relentless pressure on anyone who even looked as though he would challenge. First, it was Ballesteros, who nobody thought would be able to keep the lead through the first three rounds.

Then, after Ballesteros had faded badly — he took a six on the par-four sixth and a seven on the par-four 11th — Miller turned his attention to Nicklaus.

Nicklaus started off three strokes behind Miller, but at one point was only one stroke adrift. After bogeying the first hole of the day, Miller gathered five birdies plus an eagle on No. 13. And even Nicklaus didn't look like stopping him, although he had three birdies on the last five holes.

Miller made it plain after his win he wasn't just going for the big ones — he's already won the U.S. Open.

"I want to be like Sam Snead," he said. "He won 150 tournaments, not just the big ones."

In a group at 288 were Ireland's Christy O'Connor, Americans Tome Kite and Hubert Green, and Tommy Horton and Mark James of Britain.

Red Sox mourn Yawkey

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox donned black arm bands and lowered the Star Spangled Banner and the 1975 American League pennant to half staff Saturday in mourning the death of Thomas A. "Tom" Yawkey, the father-like owner of the club since 1933.

The sports world in general, and baseball in particular, joined the Red Sox in mourning the passing of Yawkey, a multimillionaire sportsman who died of leukemia at the age of 73 Friday.

"It's the loss of the one person I've always thought was indeed the prototype of the true sportsman, of whom I've met no others," Chicago White Sox owner Bill Veeck said.

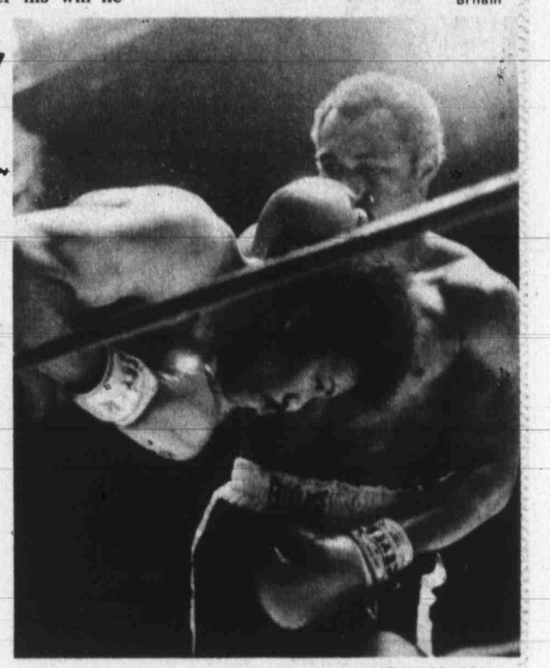

"Mr. Yawkey had a heart the size of a watermelon," said Ted Williams, who earned Hall of Fame entry in two decades as a Red Sox player.

"The entire baseball world has suffered an immeasureable loss," Williams said in a phone call from Canada. "I loved the man and have always admired him from the bottom of my heart for his love of the game, his unselfishness, his fairness, his sincerity, his honesty with everyone."

"It was like losing a father," Red Sox slugger Jim Rice said. "How long has (Carl) Yastrzemski been here—16 years? And he treated everyone like Yaz."

"I hope in my 16 years here, my play on the field gave him as much satisfaction, enjoyment, as I had just knowing him," said Yastrzemski, the team captain who shook off visible grief to hit a three-run homer and a double in an 8-6 loss to Minnesota.

Yawkey, a shy, humble person outgoing only with his ball players and friends, dodged personal tributes and rarely attended public affairs or dinners. He also asked no favors.

Pair sets blistering pace in rainy partner tournament

Mark McCraney and Pat Weaver set a blistering pace Saturday in the first round of action in the oft-rain-interrupted Big Spring Partnership Tournament being held on the Municipal Course to take the lead in the scratch flight while two pairs share the lead in the handicap flight.

McCraney and Weaver rolled in four birdies for a 31 on the front nine and five birdies on the back nine for another 31 to give them a two-stroke lead.

Dub Huckabee and Steve Timms of Monahans fired a 64 to claim sole possession of the second spot in the scratch flight. Dominoe whiz Bob Waters and his partner Jerry Barron came in with a 66 good for third.

The teams of Tano Chavarria and Javier Villallobos and Ron Plumlee and Mel Williams each registered 65s to tie for the lead in the handicap flight.

More than half NFL players on dope?

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Dr. Lee Johnson, chairman of the recreation department at the University of California at San Diego, was on the podium talking treason.

He was saying that more than 50 per cent of the players in the National Football League who took part in a survey he conducted acknowledged that they had used a drug called speed to improve their performance on the field. Eighty per cent of those players planned to keep on taking the drugs.

"The fans don't know it, but half the players on the field could be taking amphetamines," Johnson said.

Dr. Bruce Ogilvie, a sociologist from San Jose State, said that Johnson's findings correlate his own studies that still are under way.

Both men were here for a seminar this week on sports and society.

Johnson said he found:

—48 per cent of those taking speed in professional football were rookies.

—Many began in college.

—Most of the players who started on drugs in college were from the western United States.

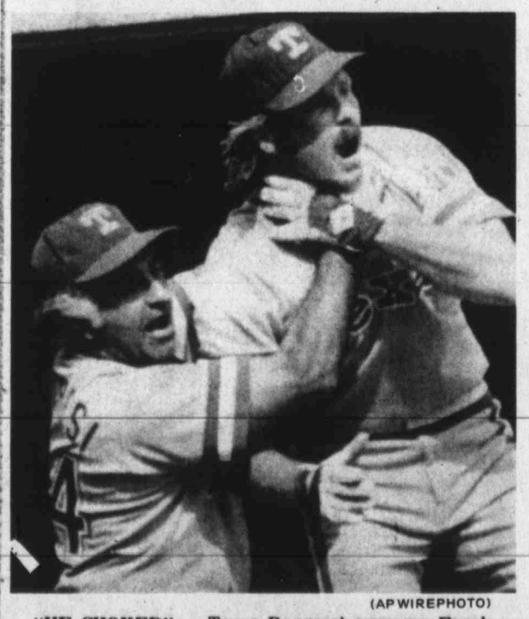

—Defensive players were more likely to take drugs than offensive players.

Pete Rozelle, NFL commissioner, stopped Johnson from gathering data for the study when he was working on it during the 1973 season.

Jones starts

CINCINNATI (AP) — Randy Jones of the San Diego Padres, the winningest pitcher in the major leagues this year with a 16-3 record, will be the National League's starting pitcher in Tuesday night's All-Star Game, NL Manager Sparky Anderson of the Cincinnati Reds said Saturday.

Anderson said the only thing that would keep him from starting the Padres' ace lefthander would be if San Diego Manager John McNamara uses him in Saturday's or Sunday's games.

"HE CHOKED" — Texas Rangers' manager Frank Lucchesi pretends to choke player Toby Harrah as they continue argument with first base umpire George Maloney Saturday late in game against the Brewers at Milwaukee. The Rangers did not like Maloney's decision against Harrah. They claimed that Maloney "choked."

Johnson names coaches

NEW YORK (AP) — Boston Red Sox Manager Darrell Johnson has announced his American League coaches for the Tuesday's All-Star Game in Philadelphia. His third base coach will be Minnesota Twins Manager Gene Mauch and his first base coach will be Cleveland Manager Frank Robinson.

In addition, the AL announced Saturday that the team trainer will be Jim Dudley of the Kansas City Royals.

Hard-working Perry doesn't earn Money

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Don Money drove in two runs with a homer and an infield out and American League All-Star Bill Travers pitched eight strong innings, leading the Milwaukee Brewers to a 3-1 victory over the slumping Texas Rangers Saturday.

Travers, 10-6, won a pitcher's duel with 37-year-old Gaylord Perry, who shrugged off 96-degree heat to hurl a four-hitter. Perry, 9-6, struck out 10 and retired 12 batters in order after the Brewers scored the decisive run in the third inning.

The Brewers, who have won seven of their last 10 games, took the lead to stay in the first inning on Money's 10th homer of the season.

Fast pitch tournament

The Church Fast Pitch League Tournament which pits the top four teams of the regular season against one another in a double-elemination tourney played Monday and Tuesday, July 12 and 13 and possibly Friday, July 16.

Second place Church of God will challenge third place Crestview Baptist in the first game (6:30) Monday night. Top ranked Nazarene (14-0) will tangle with fourth place Hillcrest Baptist in the 8:15 game.

The losers of the first two frays will meet in the nightcap Monday (10:00) and the winners will open Tuesday's fireworks at 6:30. The loser of the first game Tuesday will play the winner of the final game Monday night to see who will battle the team in the winner's bracket for the championship.

Whichever team wins this 8:15 game Tuesday night meets the winner of the first game Tuesday in a 10:00 game. If the team which won the 6:30 game also wins the 10:00 game it will be the champion, but if it loses it will play the same team again Friday night for the championship.

After the final game trophies will be awarded to the top two teams.

The Nazarene Superstars finished the regular season undefeated for the second straight season and they haven't lost since their first game of the '74 season — 41 games ago.

Living on 'Bird' seed

DETROIT (AP) — The William Morris Agency has been selected to represent Detroit Tiger rookie pitching star Mark "The Bird" Fidrych, the Detroit Tigers said Saturday.

The Tigers said the agency would handle Fidrych's dealings in advertising and commercial matters and would not be involved in negotiating his player contract.

Fidrych, 9-2, who lost a narrow 1-0 decision Friday to Kansas City and towered his era to 1.78, the lowest in the American League, now earns the minimum American League salary of $16,500.

Lampasas star in Olympics

PLATTSBURGH, N.Y. (AP) — Schoolboy sprint sensation Houston McTear has been scratched from the Summer Olympics due to an injury, a spokesman for the United States Olympic Committee said today.

Johnny Jones, 18, a high school football star from Lampasas, Tex., who will enter the University of Texas this fall, was named to replace McTear, who currently runs out of Santa Monica, Calif., in the 100 meters at Montreal. Jones finished fourth in the trials at Eugene, Ore.

The announcement was made by the USOC following a meeting of the track and field coaches and the USOC medical staff headed by John Anderson, M.D., of Brunswick, Maine.

American officials agreed that McTear could not run in Montreal because of a hamstring tear in his left leg suffered in Thursday's practice.

Smallest woman on tour

Palmer leads by 2

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sandra Palmer, the defending champion, dueled JoAnne Carner head-to-head Saturday and took a two-stroke lead after three rounds of the U.S. Women's Golf Championship at Rolling Green Golf Club.

The 35-year-old Miss Palmer, at 5-foot-1 the smallest woman on the tour, shot a two-over-par 37-36—73 for a 54-hole total of 217 over a small but tricky course that has defied the best field of 50.

Although she lost her two-stroke second-round lead, Mrs. Carner, recognized as the longest hitter in women's golf, was still in contention as she carded a six-over-par 38-39—77 for a three-round score of 219.

Mrs. Carner led Miss Palmer by two strokes starting the third round, but a triple bogey on the par-three third hole and a double bogey on the 10th turned the struggle around.

Jane Blalock also was in contention as she carded a 35-38— 73 for 220. She actually tied for the lead after 10 holes, but fell back when she double bogeyed 14 and went one over par on 17.

The rest of the field appeared to have succumbed to the deceptive looking 6,066-yard Rolling Green course with its treelined fairways, slick, elevated greens and deep-set bunkers.

There was only one round of par or better Saturday — eight for three rounds — and that was a one-under-par 70 by Susie McAllister, who wound up at 224, eight strokes off the pace.

At 225 were Sylvia Bertolaccini who shot 74 in the third round, and Amy Alcott who came in with a 78.

Miss Palmer won her first Open last year at Atlantic City, N.J., and is seeking to become the fourth player in the history of the tournaent to gain consecutive championships.

Mrs. Carner, a five-time U.S. Amateur champion before turning pro in 1970, won the Open in 1971.

Dollar wins Big Spring Bowler of the Year title

Harold Dollar edged Mike Edwards by 10 pins to win the fifth annual Big Spring Bowler of the Year award in a 12 game roll-off held jointly at the Bowl-A-Rama and Webb Lanes.

Out of 811 bowlers to bowl in Bowler of the Week competition 84 qualified to compete in the Bowler of the Year Tournament. Seventy of those who qualified participated in the tourney. All of the bowlers had a handicap (which is based on a 210 average).

Dollar, a 178 average bowler, had an actual score of 1085 for his six games on the Bowl-A-Rama lanes and 1182 for his six on Webb's lanes. This plus the 76 pins handicap he received for each three game set gave him a total score of 2571.

Edwards, who averaged 159 during the season, hit for 1019 actual at Bowl-A-Rama and 1054 at Webb which added to his handicap gave him a total of 2561.

At each alley a competitor bowls three games on two lanes and then moves to two other lanes to finish up.

J. S. Self (183 average) had a final total of 2531 good for third and last year's champ Phillip Rengener (180 average) copped fourth with a score of 2509.

Olympic solution possible

'We have the right to participate in the games and we have the obligation to participate only under the name designated by the IOC,' — Lawrence Ting, vice president of the Taiwan National Olympic Committee.

LORD KILLAMN

President of the IOC

MONTREAL (AP) — Talks between the International Olympic Committee (IOC) and Canadian officials, trying to resolve the problem over Taiwan's participation in the Summer Games, broke off after nearly three hours today.

An IOC spokesman said the IOC and Canadian and Taiwanese Olympic officials would meet together for the first time later in the day.

Canada is demanding that Taiwan not use its official name, the Republic of China, claiming that is misrepresentation. Canada does not have diplomatic ties with Taiwan but does maintain them with the People's Republic of China, also known as mainland China.

The Canada-IOC meeting broke for lunch at about 1:05 p.m. EDT and a highly placed IOC source said: "After the way the talks have gone this morning, I am hopeful that a solution will be reached later today."

The full nine-member IOC delegation was due to meet later, joined by the Canadian group and the two Taiwanese officials, who were returning from the Olympic Village.

Meanwhile, the Taiwanese team, staying in a Brookline, Mass., motel because it is barred from entering Canada, spent the day sightseeing in downtown Boston.

The athletes toured Chinatown, hoping to catch a glimpse of the Tall Ships procession in nearby Boston Harbor. They declined comment on the dispute that has left them in limbo.

But a spokesman for the Republic of China consulate in Boston said of the competitors' morale: "I think they're in good shape. They're eager to participate in the Games, but they're not bothered by this situation."

The delegation from Canada's External Affairs Ministry, headed by Andre Bissonette, deputy under-secretary of external affairs, began meeting under strict security at 10:15 a.m. EDT at a downtown hotel, about 15 minutes after the conclusion of a two-hour meeting between the IOC and two members of the Taiwan delegation.

Chia Ming Shen, president of the Taiwan National Olympic Committee, and Lawrence Ting, its vice president, took a hard line against the Canadien demands, refusing to drop the name of the Republic of China or to change the national flag during the opening ceremonies' march.

"We have the right to participate in the Games and we have the obligation to participate only under the name designated by the IOC," Mr. Ting said.

The meeting broke up at about 10 a.m. EDT and, 15 minutes later, a delegation from Canada's External Affairs Ministry began a meeting with IOC officials.

The Taiwanese and Canadian delegations were being seen by Lord Killanin, president of the IOC, and his three vice presidents—Philip Krumm, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee; Switzerland's Tom Keller, president of the International Rowing Federation, and Britain's Charles Palmer, president of the International Judo Federation.

It was the first face-to-face encounter between the IOC and the Canadian government since Killanin arrived to try and break the deadlock over the Taiwanese.

Canada has said the Taiwanese will not be admitted unless they promise not to compete in the Olympics under the name of the Republic of China. The IOC, accusing the Canadian government of a breach of faith, has threatened to cancel the Games if the Taiwanese are not given free and unqualified entry.

The Taiwanese issue was not the only political cloud over the Games. The government of Tanzania announced its athletes would not compete because New Zealand is taking part, and a New Zealand Rugby Union team recently went on a tour of South Africa.

That means Filbert Bayi, Tanzania's world 1,500-meter record holder and one of the top stars of track and field, would not run.

The IOC stiffened its stand against the Canadian government Friday after a meeting of its tripartite commission, made up of the IOC vice presidents and representatives of the international sports federations and national Olympic committees.

A statement issued after the meeting said the IOC would have no alternative but to cancel the Games if a settlement was not reached over the Taiwanese.

The IOC has been canvassing the 26 federations which control the sports in the Olympic Games. All but two of them gave full support to the IOC's firm stand for the rights of the Taiwanese. The Associated Press learned.

The two dissenting federations were those of basketball and weightlifting. Both recognize the People's Republic of China, and not Taiwan.

Killanin has insisted the dispute is over a fundamental principle, not simply over China. The IOC claims it deals only with sports bodies and not with governments and that by recognizing the Taiwan Olympic Committee as the Republic of China it implies no recognition of any political regime.

Canada has been pressured by Communist China, which has applied for recognition by the IOC and demanded that Taiwan be kicked out of the Games.

Canada allowed two officials of the Taiwan team to travel to Montreal, but the rest of the party was refused permission to enter because they did not have visas. The athletes of all other countries have been allowed in on Olympic identity cards only.

The fact that two Taiwanese officials were allowed in, however, raised hopes in Olympic circles that the Canadian government was ready for negotiations.

CHANGING DESTINATIONS — Officials of the Taiwan Olympic team hold tickets as they head for a flight to Boston from Detroit Metropolitan Airport Friday. Some 45 members of the team landed in Detroit from Los Angeles and had expected to continue on to Montreal but Canada banned their airline from flying them in due to a political wrangle involving recognition of mainland China.

Swimming highpoint of strong U.S. squad

MONTREAL (AP) — For anyone who watched the 1972 Olympic Games in Munich, the outstanding individual athlete was American swimmer Mark Spitz, who splashed his way to a record seven gold medals.

Now Spitz has graduated from the pool to the broadcast booth and no athlete is expected to duplicate his medal haul. But the United States swimmers still are expected to excel in the 1976 Games which open July 17 in Montreal.

American athletes also are expected to accumulate their share of medals in the other Olympic glamour sports of basketball, track and field and boxing. But nowhere is the United States expected to dominate the competition as in the pool.

"I feel this is probably the best international team we've ever had," said veteran Coach Doc Counsilman.

Headlining the American men's team are six world record holders, Bruce Furniss, Brian Goodell, John Hencken, Jim Montgomery, John Naber and Bobby Hackett. And three of them, Furniss, Goodell and Hencken hold two world marks.

America's women swimmers are headed by Shirley Babashoff, who won a gold and two silvers in 1972, when she was only 15 years old.

She was the top qualifier in the 100, 200, 400 and 800-meter freestyles and American Coach Jack Nelson describes her as "the greatest female swimmer ever for the United States."

Besides Miss Babashoff, two other Munich gold medalists are swimming for the American women again. They are Melissa Belote in the 200 backstroke and Karen Moe Thornton in the 200 butterfly.

If swimming is the dominant American sport at these Games, basketball won't be far behind. The United States, determined to regain the gold medal it lost in a disputed finish against Russia in the 1972 Games, has assembled a youthful, lightning-fast, defense-oriented team.

The Americans won 63 consecutive Olympic basketball games and every gold medal until the final game in 1972.

PRO WAITING FOR ALL-PROS — PGA touring pro Lee Trevino (left) waits with his playing partner Jerry Lackey (a Big Spring grad who now owns a business in Hatch, Tex.) for Charlie Johnson (also a Big Spring grad) and Jess Whittington, who were both all-pros in the National Football League.

Ex-footballers receive golf tips from Trevino

After dedicating a new building for his car dealership in Hatch, Texas, Jerry Lackey joined his old Big Spring Steer teammate (and guest speaker for the dedicating ceremonies) Charlie Johnson and Jess Whittington, one-time all-pro with the Green Bay Packers, as guests of Lee Trevino for a round mf golf on Trevino's private course in El Paso.

While they were playing the three ex-footballers didn't miss any opportunities to pry some free advice from Trevino, past holder of both the United States and British Open titles. (Trevino withdrew from this year's British Open because of back problems.)

Lackey is the son of Mrs. Vera Lackey who resides at P. O. Box 2343 in Big Spring.

LET ME SHOW YOU — After demonstrating the correct way to hold the club for an approach shot Trevino shows Lackey the correct way to swing.

OKAY, NO MORE PRACTICING — Johnson strolls up, catches Trevino giving Lackey pointers and says, "Let's play — no more practicing . . . uh, on the other hand, Lee, could you show me that swing again?" Then Whittington came up, "Hey, you guys . . ."

Dierker no-hits Expos

HOUSTON (AP) — Larry Dierker has a new contract with the Houston Astros including a $2,500 raise, and he still finds it hard to believe he has snapped what he considered a no-hit jinx.

After two near-misses earlier in his 12-year career, Dierker tossed the first no-hitter of the 1976 major league season Friday night as he shut out the Montreal Expos, 6-0.

"I had a perfect game against the New York Mets through eight innings in 1965 but I lost it on two straight hits in the ninth," Dierker said. In Atlanta in 1969 I pitched 8 2-3 innings of no-hit ball, but lost it and eventually wound up with a no decision when we lost it in the 13th."

"I really didn't think I would pitch a no-hitter the rest of my career. I didn't think I had the stuff."

Dierker, 29, struck out eight Expos and walked only four as he evened his season mark at 8-8 and recorded the fifth no-hitter by an Astros pitcher.

After the two early career near no-hitters, Dierker said he had made some plans if the situation ever arose again. But he didn't use them.

"If I was ever to get close again, I told myself I wasn't going to give anybody anything good to hit," he said. "But that didn't work. I had to throw strikes. I was too fired up. I looked for the corners, but I wasn't too choosy. I just wanted to go after the hitter."

This was particularly true in the ninth inning when Dierker said he was "just trying to put it past them."

"The ball was rising and sailing pretty good. My best pitch was my fastball."

Dierker struck out Pepe Mangual and Jim Lyttle leading off the ninth and got Mike Jorgensen to hit a grounder at first baseman Bob Watson, who handled it unassisted to end the game.

LARRY DIERKER

'Didn't think I had the stuff'

Dierker held a 6-0 lead at the end of the fifth inning.

Jose Cruz' RBI double and Dierker's sacrifice fly accounted for two second inning runs, a home run by Ed Herrmann and Rob Andrews' RBI single gave the Astros two more in the fourth and Herrmann's run scoring single nd Roger Metzger's RBI single accounted for Houston's final runs in the fifth.

"Any time you see a no-hitter, you'll see a few great plays in the field and this was no exception," Dierker said.

Andrews made a fine fielding play on Lyttle's hard grounder in the fourth and Cruz made two fine catches in the outfield in the seventh and eighth innings.

Dierker said he began thinking about the no-hitter in the second inning but not seriously until the end of the sixth.

He couldn't resist taking a good-natured jab at himself as he joked: "Actually, I thought it was a bit unusual that I had pitched the first two innings without giving up a hit."

In the late innings, Dierker said he was anxious to get "back out there and get it over with." He said he was afraid his arm might get stiff if the Astros had a long inning at bat.

Horton healthy

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Tigers designated hitter Willie Horton is anxious to get back in action, but says he'll be playing in pain for the rest of the year.

Horton has been sidelined since early June with a sore tendon in his right heel. Thursday night he took batting practice with the rest of the team and said he wanted to get back in action before the All-Star game next Tuesday.

Royal Leonard outduels Detroit's 'The Bird' 1-0

By The Associated Press

Mark Fidrych went into his act again at Tiger Stadium. He talked to baseballs, smoothed down the mound and slapped backs all over the place.

The crowd loved it—everything, that is, except the finale.

The Detroit Tiger pitcher known as "The Bird" for his eccentric behavior usually wins. Friday night, he lost a 1-0 pitching duel to Kansas City's Dennis Leonard.

Spurred by an audience that provided a World Series aura to crusty Tiger Stadium, Leonard struck out eight batters, including five in a row at one point, and improved his record to 9-3.

In the other American League games, the Minnesota Twins beat the Boston Red Sox 8-6; the New York Yankees edged the Chicago White Sox 2-1; the Milwaukee Brewers whipped the Texas Rangers 7-2; the Oakland A's nipped the Cleveland Indians 2-1 and the Baltimore Orioles beat the California Angels 4-3.

Leonard did not allow a man past second base and did not issue a walk. The Royals scored in the fourth inning when George Brett singled, moved to third on a single by John Mayberry and came home on Hal McRae's base hit.

The loss ended Fidrych's string of consecutive victories at eight, dropping his season's record to 9-2.

A long way, baby, and still trucking

By CANDY SMITH

The women out in front this week were the nation's "firsts" in institutions from West Point to the Navy. Competition with men is not wholly new, but the breaking-up of formerly all-men areas signals a new trend in the work force of this country.

It's not strange these days to see women in places they were never seen before. From the military to business, females are expanding their careers and aspirations beyond the limits set even a decade ago.

Along with construction, the highway patrol and various other "men's jobs," freight trucking and delivery has never been thought of as a particularly enticing occupation for a woman. Most men would say it's too hard, too rough or just plain unladylike.

Who, for that matter, would have ever thought that a woman herself would enjoy managing a freight delivery company. Jan McKinnon enjoys it. She doesn't just keep the books, but makes rounds in the truck too, anywhere within the city limits.

Jan and her husband Don started their own company last May. "Heavens, we've worked for other people for such a long time. You can't go home anytime you want, but at least when you do go you don't have to say, 'Hey boss, I'm going,' " said Jan.

Jan quickly dismissed the argument that the work might be too hard for a woman, saying, "It's easy. I like it."

Explaining how the operation took form, she said, "Don always wanted a business of his own so he could work without having to answer to anyone. We both used to work for Tex-Pack when other people owned it and last "May we bought it from them."

Meanwhile, they're both trying to get through college. Jan and Don have both gone for about a year but the going has gotten harder since they took on their own business. "It's hard, especially if you do it a little at a time," Jan said of her higher education.

While her husband owns the business, he's not always there. Don works for another trucking company which keeps him away much of the time. So although Tex-Pack may be in his name, running it is Jan's domain.

There's another fellow who works for the McKinnons but Jan does all the town delivery, which takes about three hours a day. Besides that, she does the bookkeeping work too. "We deliver to just about everybody in town," she said.

"We get freight from all the states we work with in the morning. A big truck comes in early in the day and he gives us all the things sent to Big Spring. Then at night, the truck comes back and picks up everything going out of Big Spring." It makes a long day but Jan insists she wouldn't like it any other way.

Driving around town making deliveries is fun, she says. "I like the people I meet. You get hot and tired, but there's always the bad with the good and I think the good outweighs the bad."

Bedecked in pigtails, a daisy-covered railroad cap and a wide grin, it's not hard to believe her.

Staying home is the last thing on her mind. "I did that for a while. But even just sitting around on Sundays is hard for me. I have to get out and work, or I get nervous."

"It makes me feel good!" Jan said of her work. "I don't know how to explain it but it helps if you're working for yourself." Her husband is her boss now, she said, but "we get along just fine." "This way, we see more of each other," she added.

The McKinnons don't have children but do have a "half-weinee and half-pekingese" dog who just lately added another four members to the canine household. With such a growing family, Mrs. McKinnon can hardly afford not to work.

The most impressive part of Jan's job is the way she does it — with real happiness and enthusiasm. The work force can always use a woman like that, despite the fact that it might have previously been considered a man's job. Work is always done better by one who enjoys it.

LADY BEHIND THE WHEEL — Jan McKinnon delivers any kind of freight under 100 pounds to any business in Big Spring. One of her clients is the Big Spring Herald. Husband Don McKinnon bought the business last month in order to go to work for himself.

College entrance test scores on steady decline

By CANDY SMITH

In an ever-increasingly technological society as the United States, a society that demands intelligence as a password to success, it's a source of consternation to those involved in the educational system that college entrance test scores have gradually but somewhat steadily decreased over the last ten years.

It is also a cause for distress among high school and college-age student's parents that, apparently, their children are not as smart as those who came before them.

But what appears to be a simple answer to declining scores is not. No teacher, administrator or counselor would venture to accept such an explanation as lower scores being a result of lowering intelligence.

"I don't think kids are getting any less smart," said Mrs. Harold Rosson, a counselor at Big Spring High School. "I think kids are as sharp or sharper than two, four or six decades ago. The distribution of ability is the same now as it was then only there is more information," said Dr. R. Wayne Bonner, counselor at Howard College.

But what aspects of the students, the system, the society and the instructors would cause college entrance exam scores to constantly fall?

A clue may be in the divisions of the entrance tests themselves. For this article, ACT college entrance exam test scores were compiled and used, both on a national and local basis.

Nationally, the social sciences, followed by English, have declined the most strikingly. Math has declined less sharply and the scores in natural sciences have risen. Still the composite score is 18.7 for 1974 as opposed to 20 in 1966.

Math scores here have fluctuated the greatest degree and the most often, changing the most drastically in the years from 1973-75 at Howard College. Natural sciences have fluctuated the least. The scores for social studies are also at an all-time low for the period since 1966 to the present.

It must be taken into account, however, that ACT scores for Howard College are compiled only from those students who attend there, not all students who have taken the ACT tests there. Many who graduate from Big Spring High School do not take the ACTs at all, taking SATs which are required by various other colleges.

Leo A. Munday, vice president of ACTs Research and Development Division, in his report of an ACT study, said two possible explanations may account for declinging admissions test scores.

Many more students from the lower half of their high school classes are attending colleges, and these "new" students are not as well academically prepared as were the "traditional" college students, said the study.

Another reason may be that today's students leave high school and enter college or work with less academic preparation than previous years' students, the report found.

For various reasons — including greater use of electives, lowering of teacher demands and expectations, and schooling directed relatively more by students than by teachers — students are less prepared to take the ACT.

"Not only is there a measure of truth in each explanation, but they likely interact with one another," said Munday.

Our school is not really college oriented," said Mrs. Rosson. "My personal opinion is that we are not printed-word oriented anymore. English and verbal scores are coming down because we just don't read like we used to. We spend so much time watching TV and are not testing the way we're teaching."

Or perhaps for what students are learning, both in school and in everyday life.

"We are an area vocational school," said Mrs. Rosson of Big Spring High School. "I'd say almost everyone in the high school is involved in some sort of vocational program here."

There are seven day trades including auto mechanics, electrical appliances repair, building, metal work, furniture building and regular mechanics. Also there are work-skilled trades and co-ops that train students on the job.

A special program for students with either a low reading level or a home situation which lacks motivation in study, is available for students who consistently make lower grades, but who are not seriously deficient in any area. Those classes are limited to fifteen students each and have essentially the same material, taught several grades below.

Bonner believes that, "some kind of higher education is one of the most important things to come. It's been proven that general education in this country has become very effective for a nation of 'educated populace."

"I'm not anti-vocational training. But one argument for higher general education is that great numbers of people did not retain enough education to be at least well aware of the bill of rights, and you get that from general education," he continued.

"Like Jefferson, I'm not afraid of an 'educated populace.' We need a lot of educated people now," said Bonner.

Mrs. Rosson cited a broader base of population and an increase in population as some possible explanations for the decline.

"What a person brings with them to the test involves what they have brought with them from home. I can remember my family quoting from literature quite often. You never hear that anymore," she said.

Another factor may be that there are many more people entering college today that would never have considered it before. Now that it is commonplace for almost all high school students to at least consider college, parental expectations, economic factors (statistics show that college graduates, on an average, make more money than non-college graduates) and peer pressure may induce persons, who are not particularly academic minded, to enter college anyway.

And, he said, "In the last ten years, there has been tremendous change and pressure on schools to wipe noses, hold hands with and lead students off to college. But there is no one answer. The educational system always has room for improvement."

"One of the beauties is that we can criticize the system," he said. Are lowering scores a reflection on the educational system? "Possibly, yes," said Bonner. "But I'm not so critical of a system that's been working. Those who criticize the most are those who have benefited from it."

"Nearly every astronaut was public school-trained," he added. The ACT is just one measure of the process and I hope we don't start

(see Achievement, p. 2-C)

Below are the American College Testing composite test scores from 1966 through 1975 for both the nation and Howard College:

Year	U.S.	Big Spring
1966	20.00	17.9
1967	19.4	17.0
1968	19.0	16.8
1969	19.4	17.3
1970	19.5	17.6
1971	18.9	18.2
1972	18.8	17.8
1973	18.9	17.4
1974	18.7	16.6
1975	unknown	15.8

AIN'T WHAT IT USED TO BE —Students out of high school are finding college entrance exams harder than they were ten years ago. Vocational training provides for some jobs but not as well for college.

CHAMPAGNE FLIGHT — Jimmy Carter and his wife Rosalynn find time at the end of a fund raising trip to Florida to celebrate their 30th wedding anniversary on their flight home in Plains, Ga. Carter gets back to business Thursday with interviews scheduled with two prospective vice presidential candidates.

Carters observe anniversary during campaign plans

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Jimmy and Rosalyn Carter observed their 30th wedding anniversary Wednesday, but politicking takes precedence over nostalgic family celebration for the probably Democratic presidential nominee.

Carter and his wife planned to fly to Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., Wednesday night for a final fund-raising reception before the Democratic National Convention, which opens Monday in New York City.

Carter was expected to spend most of the day at his ranch-style home in Plains, deciding which Democrat will nominate him at the convention, polishing his acceptance speech and working on the vice presidential question.

The former Georgia governor, who is all but assured of the nomination, said he interviewed Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota on Thursday in his vice presidential search.

He also interviewed another prospective vice presidential nominee last Thursday, and speculation centered on Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, the former astronaut.

Carter, who spoke earlier with Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine, said he plans to interview at least five potential running mates before and during the convention. The last two interviews were expected to be held in New York at the convention.

After winning the endorsement of 30 Democratic governors at the National Governor's Conference in Hershey, Pa., on Tuesday, Carter flew to Atlanta to get a haircut and have his teeth checked in preparation for the convention.

An aide reported that Carter had no cavities.

"He hasn't had a cavity since he was governor," the aide said.

NOW group objects to Ford's stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal ban on school-sponsored mother-daughter and father-son events irritated President Ford so much that he ordered it rescinded. But a women's group says such functions perpetuate sexual stereotypes and should be eliminated.

Ford ordered a study to determine if single-sex social events violate federal sex discrimination laws, as alleged by the civil rights office of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

White House spokesman Ron Nessen said Wednesday that Ford was irritated when he read of the ruling banning single-sex school events.

The HEW ruling was in response to an inquiry from the Scottsdale, Ariz., public schools, which sponsor father-son banquets and mother-daughter teas. Scottsdale officials wanted to know whether the events violated the laws prohibiting sex discrimination in public schools.

Officially, the ruling issued last week was suspended pending research by lawyers to determine whether Title IX of the Civil Rights Act is violated by such events.

Nessen said that if it is found that the law is being violated, Ford would immediately send legislation to Congress to change the law.

The National Organization for Women took opposition to Ford's stand.

"We are watching Title IX being nickeled and dimed to death," charged Lynda Weston, a NOW staff member.

Dividing the sexes for school-sponsored fashion shows, softball games, banquets and breakfasts is a tradition in many communities.

"What happens is you get the girls together with the moms and you have teas and awards for sewing and fashion shows. You get the boys and dads together and you have community leaders come in and give rousing speeches," the NOW official said.

Other opponents argue such affairs are unfair to children with only one parent.

Ford phoned HE[illegible] Secretary David Matthews and "expressed displeasure at the ruling," said Nessen. "The President advised the secretary that he cannot believe that it was the intent of Congress to prohibit mother-daughter or father-son events at schools.

Nancy Low, spokeswoman for the civil rights office, said that after a five-month study the office determined that such events were prohibited by the antidiscrimination law.

"Arbitrary separation of the sexes is not permitted," she said.

Matthews, disclosing that HEW planned no enforcement action regarding the events during its review, said the department "will advise any school wishing to have such events to proceed."

Achievement test scores down

teaching toward a test," said Bonner.

Another interesting side to declining scores is that, if women were separated from the men and taken alone, scores would be even lower. A hard pill to swallow, it is most true in the area of math. Perhaps because women are seldom encouraged to enter fields such as engineering, architecture, science and other mathematically related careers.

But one section of the report from the ACT Assessment "points a finger at females as being one of the likely causes of the (overall) decline," said ACTivity, an ACT related publication.

Over the last 10 years there has been a 1.0 drop for males and a 1.6 decline for females in the ACT composite standard scores," said the publication.

For the combined-sexes tests, the publication noted that, "There have been no changes over the last 15 years in methods used for scaling and equating the ACT tests. The data show that the ACT Assessment test scores are as highly correlated as in the past with college grade point averages.

This evidence implies that it is what is measured that has changed. Why is more complex. One answer is not sufficient and will certainly not be simple. But it relates, at least in part to all the facets of education, from teacher to student and system to parent.

Lentils make a delicious lunch or supper salad. Nowadays they do not need soaking and take only a short time to cook. Dress the drained lentils with oil and vinegar and garnish with hard-cooked egg: serve on lettuce. Add sliced tomato and cucumber if you like.

Ceremony conducted in Stanton Methodist

Miss Debra Lynn McMeans became the bride of Stephen Jay Moore in a ceremony conducted Saturday evening in the First United Methodist Church, Stanton.

The Rev. Davis Edens officiated during the ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Superintendent of Schools and Mrs. Russell McMeans of Stanton, and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Moore, Mason.

The church was decorated with one large arched candelabrum. Two spiral candelabra laced with greenery also accented the church. Votive candles lined the altar.

The bride wore a formal gown of ivory organza with Cluny and Venice lace in a demi-bell silhouette. Matching laces formed a V-yoke on a peaked bodice with a Venice lace medallion marking the center front. Venice lace accented the wedding ring neckline and long bishop bleeves. Two tiers of lace around the hemline formed a deep border on a slender skirt that flowed to back fullness, forming a chapel-length train. A Camelot headpiece held a chapel-length veil of illusion.

The bride carried a cascading bouquet of roses, carnations, stephanotis and gypsophila, accented with long stemmed red roses. The bride presented her mother a rose upon arriving at the altar, and presented the groom's mother with a rose upon leaving the altar.

Miss Cindy Newton, Ft. Worth, served as maid of honor. Mrs. John McMeans, Amarillo, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor. Miss Diane Foster, Lamesa, was bridesmaid.

Serving as best man was Brent Cox, El Campo. Tony Williams, Canadian, and Paul Little, San Angelo, were groomsmen.

Brothers of the bride, Johnny McMeans and Dwayne McMeans, served as candlelighters and ushers.

Mrs. John McMeans provided music with the guitar. She was also vocalist, as was Miss Martha Fugitt, Stanton.

A reception was held honoring the couple in the Fellowship Hall of the church. Mrs. Milt Yater, Stanton, made the cloth covering the bride's table. Serving at the bride's table were Mrs. Rodney Robinson, Midland; Mrs. Dennis Melton, Midland; Mrs. Jack Ireton, Stanton, and Mrs. George Glynn, Stanton.

Miss Brenda Borron, Lubbock, was at the register. Serving in the houseparty were Mrs. Virgie Eaves and Mrs. Harvey McMeans, San Angelo, grandmothers of the bride.

Following a trip to Lake Buchanan and Austin, the couple will make their home in San Angelo, where the groom is completing pre-med training. The bride teaches special education for the Wall Independent School District.

Does God give change for a $5 bill?

DEAR ABBY: While in church, I saw a woman put a $5 bill in the collection plate and take back $4. Is that considered proper etiquette?

CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: Why not? God knows she put in five.

DEAR ABBY: This is an old story, but I need any help I can get. I fell in love with a married man. I'm married, too. There was no good reason for this, as I have a very nice husband, but nonetheless it is a fact.

I can't respond to my husband sexually, and it is hurting him. Things seem to be completely out of control.

I have tried keeping busy and active, but to no avail. I still wake up at 3 in the morning and toss and turn for hours. Taking an interest in other people is a real challenge. My children are the ones who are suffering most.

It's not necessary to tell me not to see the other man because there is no contact between us now, but I think of him constantly. Also, please don't tell me there must have been something missing in my marriage for this to have happened. I already know that, and it doesn't help.

What I want from your readers is any suggestion that has worked for them.

LOVESICK

DEAR LOVESICK: Lovesickness is a "mental disease." It doesn't respond to logic, and what has worked for one may not work for another. You can't kill love: it has to die by itself.

Talking to a therapist is your best bet. Try it. Also forcing thoughts of "him" out of your mind by replacing them with other thoughts helps. And so does time!

DEAR ABBY: I often eat out with friends who seem to gobble their food down. Unfortunately, I wear dentures and must eat more slowly.

Is it considered bad manners to continue eating after the guests and hostess have finished their meal?

PLAIN DUMB

DEAR PLAIN: Please don't label yourself "dumb" because yours is a very intelligent question. Take all the time you need to enjoy your meal, and don't worry about those who have gobbled down their food hastily. They are lacking in good manners—not you.

Band students journey to Angelo State camp

By FAYE ROBY

Paula Mcraw, Julie Hall, Robert Williams, Mike Myers, Lisa Petit, Patrica Roby, Pierce Mcraw, Teresa Sneed, Cheryl Greenfield and Dana Talley are some of the students who will benefit from the excellent training received at band camps across the country this summer.

The Angelo State University Band Camp is in its second year.

Harris Brinson is Camp Director again this year.

Last week I mistakenly reported that the East Howard County Senior Center would meet on Tuesday, it will meet on the 13th.

The program is still the same as announced last week. Mrs. Beulah Reynolds of Big Spring will conduct a class in macrame.

The group will meet at 7:30 in the fellowship hall of the First baptist Church of Sand Springs.

I apologize for any inconvenience I may have caused anyone.

Coahoma Mayor Joe Swinney said there is no report from the State Parks Board on the proposed swimming pool. The board hasn't met this month.

The Mayor said there will be a city council meeting this month.

Coahoma Presbyterian Church will begin a new program Wednesday for first thru sixth grade students. The series of programs will last through Aug. 4.

The first program will begin at 5:30 at the church, where the children will view a film, "The Promise of the Rainbow," an American Bible Society presentation.

After the film the group will travel to the YMCA in Big Spring where they will swim.

Each student is asked to bring a bag supper (sandwiches, etc.,) and $1.00 to help defray the cost of the film and swimming.

All area children are invited to participate.

If you happen to be driving on the San Angelo highway this Sunday and notice several vehicles stuffed with bulging suitcases, bed rolls, musical instruments and kids it isn't an invasion. It might be members of the Coahoma High Band on their way to band camp on the Angelo State campus.

Class members gather again

Those attending included Mr. and Mrs. Morris Barnes, Knott; Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Roman, Big Spring; Mr. and Mrs. Odell Roman, Big Spring; Mr. and Mrs. Onie Albright, Andrews; Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Irwin, Lubbock; Mrs. Sis Blackburn, Waco; Buddy Henderson, Houston; Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Shores, Cisco; Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Clark, Dallas; who had just recently moved back from London, England, and the Dittos.

Growing role of women

What, would you guess, was the most important influence on sports in the last ten years?

Golf? Skiing? Tennis? Football?

All wrong. According to the man who knows more about the subject than probably anyone in the country—Leonard Steinlauf, head of Herman's World of Sporting Goods, a division of W. R. Grace & Co.—the answer is women.

In the past ten years women have become sports activists. They have taken sports out of the locker room and made them a social habit.

Dusty picks first prize

RALPH (DUSTY) STEWART

Stewart, who plays with Hoyle Nix and the West Texas Cowboys, was accompanied by three members of the West Wind. His daughter, Reva Piper, played drums; and Irland McCormick, bass guitar. John M. Shiflett was the vocalist.

His performance of two songs, "Rose City Chime," and "Misty Blue," won Stewart the distinction.

Chairman of judging was Leon McAuliffe, formerly steel guitar player for Bob Wills and the Texas Playboys. Don Helms, who worked with Hank Williams and Ernest Tubb; and Jimmy Latham, Odessa, who has been associated with Johnny Horton and Jim Reeves, were co-judges.

Among those performing at the Jamboree but not competing was Jody Nix, Big Spring on the drums.

'Things that go bump in the night' explained

By JAN STEPHENSON
CHILDREN' LIBRARIAN

In the 19th century, it was believed that through reading a child would grow up to be good or bad. So each story ended with a moral. Today we recognize that this is not true.

However, books do help children grow up and find themselves. Like big people, little people have their problems, too, and books can be used to encourage children to talk about their problems and worries and to ease their little minds.

DARKNESS FRIGHTENS many children. When the room is dark, sight is limited and the darkness shuts out the familiar. The dark separates a child from loved ones, and one of the greatest fears of childhood is separation or loss of a parent. Bedtime can be a traumatic experience for little ones.

Russell Hoban's "Bedtime for Frances" is a reassuring story about a little badger who is tucked into bed by her mother and father.

Frances cannot get to sleep so she sings to herself. Her song mentions tigers, and she starts thinking about big tigers, little tigers and father tigers, until she believes she sees a tiger crouching in the corner of her room.

After reassurances from her parents, she climbs back into bed. This scene is repeated when Frances sees a giant in her room and then worries about bugs and spiders crawling from crack in the ceiling.

WHEN THE WIND blows the curtains, Frances is frightened once again and goes to her sleeping father. Father tells her the wind is only doing its job by blowing the curtains, and everything including himself has a job to do.

Frances goes back to bed only to hear a thumping and bumping at her window. She pulls the covers over her head but then decides to look and discovers it is a moth doing his job. Frances finally falls asleep.

Another story of reassurance for young children is "The Alligator Under the Bed" by Joan Nixon. Jill is frightened by an alligator under her bed which keeps making clicking noises with his sharp teeth.

Uncle Harry, who comes to check on Jill when she calls for help, knows all about alligators and imaginative little girls. They pull the alligator from under the bed and send him back to his own family.

"THERE'S a NIGHTMARE IN MY CLOSET" by Mercer Mayer shows how one young man handled his nightmare. Because a nightmare lived in the closet, the boy always made sure the door was shut before going to bed.

Finally, he decided to get rid of the nightmare. He fortified himself in bed with his pop gun and helmet, turned off the light and waited.

Soon, he heard the monster creeping toward him. He turned on the light and shot him; the monster began to cry and would not quit.

To keep from waking the family, the boy tucked the nightmare into his bed, closed the closet door, and climbed into the bed with the nightmare.

These three stories are examples of children's books which help a child overcome some of the fears of the dark and the unpleasantness of being along.

There is reassurance in knowing that other children see and hear strnage things in the dark and that these children overcome their fears.

WHAT A RACKET — Debbie Stephens, wife of Figure 7 Tennis Center pro Barry, considers alternative life styles. Her duties at the center are varied and include stringing rackets. The center is open 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday and is closed Monday. The city maintains nine courts and a backboard here and is remodeling the pro shop and adjoining Dora Roberts Community Center.

'Rich Man' like poor 'Waltons'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Earl Hamner says he doesn't understand why "Rich Man, Poor Man" is getting all the credit for introducing the novelistic technique to television.

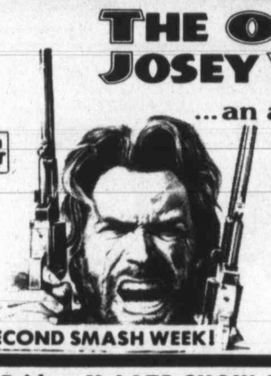

"We've been doing that on 'The Waltons' since we've been on the air," said Hamner, whose soft Piedmont accent is familiar as the narrator.

Circus crew multilingual

ABILENE — Backstage at Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, 21 languages are spoken.

That's not counting the roars, snarls and trumpets of The Greatest Show on Earth's more than 200 performing animals.

The man in charge of the Circus' huge cast of performers from around the globe and a modern Noah's Ark of animals speaks only English. Yet for 30 years, Bob Dover has made himself understood.

He's performance director of the Bicentennial Edition of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, arriving at the Taylor County Coliseum in Abilene on August 3, with two performances daily August 3-4.

It's Dover's job to see that The Greatest Show on Earth moves smoothly in and out of the arena and to know what's going on in all three rings every minute. That takes a lot of doing.

In addition to his Performance Director duties, Dover is also the Associate Director of The Greatest Show on Earth, working closely with Director Richard Barstow at the rehearsals of both the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus units. It's a big job, but one uniquely fitted to Bob Dover's talents.

Hitch-hiking across the country, Bob found himself short of cash and fibbed about his age to get a popcorn salesman's job with Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey.

He found that Circus life suited him. So he decided to stay with the show.

BLOOD BROTHERS

We're always encountering the heredity versus environment controversy . . . even when we think about brothers. Is blood primarily responsible for the bond of comradery and affection pictured here?

Or did the influence of parents and the atmosphere of their home largely inspire this relationship?

History suggests the answer in man's religious growth: it was when he came to know God as his Father that he began to think of other men as his Brothers.

The beliefs that draw families to church on Sunday inspire the dimensions of brotherhood every day.

Jimmy Hopper Toyota Introduces the '76 Toyota Celica GT Liftback™

Take one out and open it up.

Sporty looking! Sporty handling!
But more practical than a sports car!

The Toyota Celica GT Liftback™ is more than just racy. It's very practical.

The rear hatch lifts up and the back seat folds down so you can pack a bundle.

The 5-speed overdrive transmission helps save gas and reduce engine wear.

The new digital-readout ESP™ (Electro Sensor Panel) is an early warning system that gives you time to take care of minor problems before they become major ones.

But we haven't forgotten that the GT Liftback™ is a sporty car. So we added a peppy 2.2 liter engine, wide steel-belted radial-ties, styled steel wheels with beauty rims, corner-hugging MacPherson strut front suspension, power front disc brakes, and an outside "GT" mirror.

The spacious interior includes an AM-FM stereo radio. An 8000 rpm electric tach. Reclining Hi-back bucket seats. Thick nylon carpeting. Tinted glass. A resettable trip meter. Even an electric clock.

Bicentennial town crier

Mission impossible! That's the task of the Big Spring-Howard County Bicentennial Commission in trying to express thanks to all who made our year of celebration a success. Clubs, individuals, firms, governing bodies — all took part with such enthusiasm that it becomes a blur as we look back. To each of you, one last "thank you," and we hope you had as much fun at the party as we did. It was a blast!

Efficient Carol Hunter has agreed to script and tape recordings to go along with our Bicentennial slides. She'll work closely with our man, L. B. Paul, Sr., and that should insure a top-notch product. Thanks, Carol!

Three faces we won't soon forget belong to Marj Carpenter, Danny Valdes, and Carl McMillan. These have followed us to so many events that we finally had to say "we've got to stop meeting like this!" Without them, we could never have gotten the job done!

Tid-bits: Al Stephens provided the Freedom Wagon for the group of square dancers headed by Mr. and Mrs. Gary Davis . . . Dene Sheppard located and showed the film about our 1949 Centennial. Now, that brought back some fond memories . . . Donnie Trim gave total involvement as head of the Elks Lodge bike races, and the Elks provided great support in many ways . . . The Jaycees, Veteran's groups, Evening Lions, and Sig Rogers all made major contributions to "get the show on the road" . . . Napkins for our birthday cake were donated by State National Bank, Security State Bank, First National Bank, and First Federal Savings and Loan (and how about all those heritage receptions, and colonial costumes — true '76 spirit!) . . . A Borden County neighbor, Barbara Anderson, called to get word about the national bell-ringing. We're still a-gog over the success of their Memorial Weekend fete . . . Johnny Shortes was our Johnny-on-the-spot during the on-again, off-again use of the amphitheatre — Invaluable! . . . The talents of Roy Peet were very evident in his Bicentennial window display at Inland Port . . . We loved the Herald special 1946 edition. How time flies (and who was the good-looking new coach on the sports page — the face is familiar! . . . One last tip of the hat — to Jerry Avery and Harold Davis, who certainly must be the two most patient and understanding husbands alive. They have gone the second mile — many times!

The support of KBST, KBYG, KHEM, the Prairie Pilot and the Big Spring Herald has been fabulous. They've had the Spirit for two long years!

So now, we can return to families, and jobs, and clean up the confetti after the party. We hope it will not soon be forgotten, and that somewhere, sometime you found something that made you proud to be an American. It has been a joy to work with you. Your Bicentennial scribe has been Janell Davis, aided and abetted by Johnnie Lou Avery, and scores of alert reporters. I almost think I could write a book about Bicentennial — and come to think of it, maybe I already have! Have a happy Century III!

Group studies housing info

LAMESA — The Housing Committee of the Chamber of Commerce voted to pursue information about the construction of moderate income housing in Lamesa.

The committee met with John Gildersleeve of Levelland, who explained many similar projects which have been undertaken in surrounding towns with Farmers Home Administration financing for 40 years.

Post, Crosbyton, Seagraves and Tahoka were cited as examples. He told the group that the first step toward proceeding with such a project is to take a housing survey of the community's needs.

Dog handler

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Mary Elizabeth Rayner, 22, says her job at Lackland Air Force Base, Tex., ideally combines her love of animals and her interest in law enforcement.

Airman 1.C. Rayner is the first female dog handler to be stationed at the base's Department of Defense Dog Center.

Before joining the Air Force, Miss Rayner studied police administration at Grand Rapids Junior College and was a member of the Kent County Sheriff's Department cadet program.

Era of hope

By WILFRID M. CALNAN
Director
HC Family Service Center

The telephone rang twice. The Crisis Intervention volunteer picked it up. "This is Alma, may I help you?" There was a pause, then a sigh on the incoming line. A hesitant, masculine voice said, "I, I have a crisis." "Would you like to talk about it?" she asked. "Yes," he answered. "Why don't you try to tell me?" Alma replied. "The President is resigning," the man responded. "I know. It is bad, isn't it?"

The sensitive volunteer did not question the seriousness of the man's plea. She was conscious of a historical fact. In all civilizations, people and families have been affected by the kind of governance their countries experienced. The Roman mother brought her sons as her "jewels" to the civil authorities. Jesus was born in Bethlehem because of a decree of the Roman emperor sent his family there for census registration. The age of Feudalism trapped thousands of families in serfdom. Charles Dickens in "Tale of Two Cities" wrote movingly of a family that was profoundly touched by the French Revolution.

In our country, because of the nature of the ideological struggle that brought it into being, there is an intimate connection between government and the family. Both political and personal behavior of Presidents and Congressmen influence family life. Look at the Sixties. Our youth were in rebellion. They did some "dumb" things like burning draft cards and getting into drugs. They were protesting something they saw and-or sensed, a double standard of behavior that reached across the country. The Seventies have disclosed how far this tendency went into Congress, the Presidency, and the branches of government administration.

As we begin the Third Century of our existence as a country, there are encouraging signs. There is deep inquiry into "the assassinations." Congressional committees have scrutinized intensively the activities of our intelligence agencies. Congressmen are learning that for them there is no such thing as private lives. Their every action is interpreted as "public" behavior.

On the eve of the political conventions, American citizens face a choice such as they have not known for a quarter of a century or more. Each of three men who could be chosen as president are men of unimpeachable personal integrity.

We can have a rebirth of our country in which we realize the eternal verities on which our republic was founded. If we devote ourselves to the task, we can have "clean" government from city to statehouse to White House. We can learn that Mae West was wrong, that "Goodness has everything to do with it."

If we can resolve to follow this course, our youth will get better, our family life will improve. I look forward to "The Bicentennial Era" as the Era of Hope, and am willing to work for significant accomplishments. Will you share my hope and my enthusiasm?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Portrait Gallery says it has been presented a portrait of Sarah Porter which was painted in 1896 by Robert B. Brandegee.

Miss Porter was founder of Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn.

Lifesaving crabs noted

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — The horseshoe crab has been found to have a type of blood that is of a special chemical nature that makes it valuable in detecting bacterial contamination in various drugs.

According to Dr. Edwin Joseph, director of the South Carolina Division of Marine Resources, researchers with his agency and other scientists have established pilot projects at the Fort Johnson Marine Laboratories in Charleston to "farm" the organisms for commercial use.

Joseph, who was here attending the Conference on Marine Resources of the Coastal Plains, said at least three pharmaceutical firms are completing details on how they will go about using the serum of the horseshoe crab for testing the quality of their drug products.
