Robbie Stone, assistant curator of the White Deer Land Museum, positions a model of a pump jack built by Leo Braswell of Pampa. The model is part of an exhibition scheduled to open Wednesday at the museum on Phillips Petroleum Company. The exhibition includes a display by the oil company entitled Phillips 66 — 1927 to 1983. The exhibition is on loan from the Hutchison County Museum in Borger. The museum also will be featuring an exhibit on loan from the Devil's Rope Museum in McLean on buffalo hunter tools and leather-making.

Floods

Roger Davis and his wife, Tina, returned to find that their mobile home in Williamsport, Pa., had been picked up by the floodwater and smashed into the trailer next door.

"Our 2-year-old keeps saying she wants to go home," Mrs. Davis said. "How do you explain that home is gone?"

Pennsylvania officials estimated damage from the floods and the Jan. 7 blizzard at $700 million.

In the hardest-hit areas of Pennsylvania, it was the worst flooding since Hurricane Agnes blew through in 1972. In that disaster, 220,000 Pennsylvanians were left homeless and 48 were killed. In Maryland, the Susquehanna River had its second-highest flow on record, surpassed only during Agnes.

In West Virginia, where 1985 floods killed 47 and caused $570 million in damage, an estimated 3,000 homes were damaged last week and two people died when they tried to drive on flooded roads.

Jim Neville said a row of cars outside his service station in Henderson, W.Va., was a testament to the stubbornness of some drivers.

"Every one of those drivers tried to go through that high water, and every one of them had his engine seize up on him,"

Report: Bosnia promises to free POWs

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) - The Bosnian government has promised to release its prisoners of war and end a stalemate that has blocked compliance with Bosnia's peace accord, a U.S. diplomat said today.

The United States has threatened to withhold training and equipment from the Muslim-led Bosnian army unless the prisoners are freed.

Under the Bosnian peace accord, all 900 known prisoners of war were to have been released by Friday. Two-thirds of them remained in custody after the government demanded that the Serbs first account for some 20,000 missing Muslims, widely presumed to be dead.

Flood damage

Flooding from the melting snow and last week's heavy rain had forced thousands from their homes in parts of Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, New Jersey, Maryland and New York.

Martin's Ferry, Oh.
Residents will be without fresh drinking water when storage tanks run dry. Some parts of town already had no water.

Wheeling Island, Oh.
The Ohio River covered most of the island, home to some 3,500 people, with water up to 9 feet deep.

Marlington, W. Va.
The Greenbrier River rolled through the valley 9 feet above flood stage on Friday.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.
About 100,000 were ordered to evacuate for much of Saturday; officials estimated damage from the storms at $700 million.

Harrisburg, Pa.
Firefighters had to wade through hip-deep water to reach a fire which broke out in an evacuated historic neighborhood.

At least 32 deaths were blamed on the flooding in the region where the Susquehanna River crosses Maryland.

Hagerstown, Md.
Flood damage to a water treatment plant in western Maryland left 5,000 to 10,000 people in the area without drinking water.

Neville said. "A couple of them had little kids in the car, and the fire department had to go rescue them."

Some areas have no drinking water because their town supply was flooded.

About 10,000 residents of Martins Ferry, Ohio, soon will be without fresh drinking water because of submerged pumping stations. And National Guard troops brought emergency water supplies into Hagerstown, Md., because of flood damage to a water treatment plant. A world-class whitewater boater was among seven people arrested for taking kayaks or canoes onto the storm-swollen Potomac River in Washington, D.C.

And in Lesage, W.Va., part of the Ohio River was on the fairway of the local golf course, but manager Bob Frazier was still getting calls from golfers.

"They got all their new toys for Christmas and want to use them," he said.

Panhandle GWCD to install new officers

WHITE DEER - The Panhandle Ground Water Conservation District No. 3 board of directors will meet Wednesday to install new officers.

The new officers will be sworn in during the board's regular meeting at 7 p.m. Wednesday at 300 S. Omohundro Street in White Deer.

Jerry H. Green was elected in a two-man race in Precinct 5 in Donley County, according to Yvonne Thomas of White Deer, district spokesman. The other races were unopposed and under the Texas Election Code no election is held in unopposed races.

The directors include Philip Smith, Precinct 1; John Spearman, Precinct 3, and Robert Clark, Precinct 7.

The board of directors is responsible for legal, financial and business matters of the district along with the responsibility for approval or denial of applications for water well permits and agricultural water conservation equipment loans.

Wednesday's meeting will also include a budget review, a review of the ag loan audit, consideration of the 1994-95 audit, continued participation in the ag loan program, consideration of ag loan requests and a manager's report.

Thomas also said there could be an executive session to discuss ag loan applications.

Three snow monkeys fatally shot near sanctuary

DILLEY (AP) - Officials were investigating five deer hunters in the shooting deaths of three Japanese snow monkeys found just outside the fence of their South Texas sanctuary, the monkeys' caretaker says.

"These monkeys weren't hunted, they were slaughtered," Lou Griffin, director of the Texas Snow Monkey Sanctuary near Dilley in LaSalle County, said Tuesday. "They lured them about 2 feet across the fence line, and they went at them with high-powered rifles."

The monkeys, who were shot Sunday, are part of a troop of more than 500 that live on a remote ranch bordered by land used for deer hunting near Dilley.

No charges had been filed as of late Monday, said Texas Game Warden Larry Griffin, who is not related to Lou Griffin. He could not be reached for comment Tuesday by The Associated Press.

An official at the LaSalle County Sheriff's office said an investigation was under way but would not provide details.

Griffin interviewed the deer hunters at the scene Sunday, examined tire and boot prints and confiscated a weapon.

"We've got some people who were there," Griffin told the San Antonio Express News. "We're doing an investigation. It's kind of a gray area. We don't know what kind of charges could be filed."

Ballistics tests would be conducted on the seized weapon, said Griffin, who will meet with LaSalle County authorities and prosecutors to discuss possible charges.

The monkeys, brought to South Texas in 1973 as a novelty, spent more than two decades multiplying in blissful obscurity on a cattle ranch in the middle of the South Texas brush.

But the troop began roaming and, in June, game officials declared the monkeys unprotected exotic game, spurring an outcry among animal welfare advocates.

Judge hears arguments over interracial adoption issue

AUSTIN (AP) — A civil rights group and the white parents of two adopted black children have accused the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services of illegally holding up interracial adoptions.

The allegations were made Monday in the court of District Judge F. Scott McCown by a Central Texas couple and the Washington-based Institute for Justice.

They are attempting to launch a class-action lawsuit that would allow them to represent all nonwhite children in the state's custody who are awaiting adoption.

McCown declined to rule on the motion. He said he has questions about the motives of the Washington-based civil rights group and its qualifications to represent the state's more than 11,000 children currently awaiting adoption.

Linda Edwards, a spokeswoman for the Department of Protective and Regulatory Services, said her agency is actively upholding a new law that prohibits the state from using race to prevent or delay adoptions.

"We support the law wholeheartedly," Ms. Edwards said. "The intent of the law is that children find loving permanent homes as quickly as possible."

"That is our goal and it's supported by our statistics which show that over 40 percent of our adoptions are transracial. That's double what it was about five years ago," Ms. Edwards said.

The lead plaintiffs in the case are Scott and Lou Ann Mullen of Lexington, just east of Austin, who last year won the right to adopt 7-year-old and 2-year-old black sons after a lengthy legal battle.

The Mullens and the Institute for Justice contend that race should not be a factor in any adoption coordinated by the state.

"As far as I am concerned, I represent all nonwhite children," Mrs. Mullen said. "I don't want any other child to have to go through the suffering that my children went through."

McCown raised questions about the credentials of the Institute for Justice. He said the group had gotten the Mullens to sign an agreement that gave the lawyers final say in all legal decisions.

McCown said such an agreement was odd.

"Usually the clients are telling the lawyers what they are attempting to argue," McCown told Institute for Justice lawyer Clint Bolick. "You've struck a deal with these people to have them give up their decision-making."

McCown told Bolick he wanted more information about the group and for the Mullens to be joined by at least five more plaintiffs in order for the judge to consider class-action status. He asked for the next round of motions in the case to be filed by Feb. 19.

"I wouldn't be surprised to find in the state of Texas that good adoptions have been messed up because race was taken into account improperly," McCown said. "But when you say race can't be taken into account at all, you are asking me to take all the black and Mexican-American children in the state and allow you to represent them. I don't know you."

The Institute for Justice has filed a similar lawsuit in Tennessee.

"I am quite confident that the Institute for Justice is going to withstand any kind of scrutiny because we care passionately about winning this lawsuit and making adoption decisions free of race," Bolick said.

Toni Hunter, an assistant attorney general, said the state doesn't discriminate based on race.

She said statistics show the adoption waiting period is "very close" for white and nonwhite children — 22.3 months for white youngsters, and 23 months for nonwhite, from the time they come into state care.

'TEXAS' schedules auditions for '96 season

CANYON — The 31st season of the TEXAS musical drama explodes into action in 1996, and the search begins soon for performers and technicians. Some 140 talented actors, singers, dancers and technicians are needed to fill salaried positions in this internationally acclaimed outdoor drama.

TEXAS is performed each summer in the Palo Duro Canyon State Park near Amarillo and Canyon. Auditions are scheduled from late January through early March in six cities across the southwestern United States. A job with TEXAS has enhanced many a career. The show, directed by Neil Hess, offers expert instruction and valuable exposure to cast members who come from all across the United States. In 1995, more than 15 states were represented in the TEXAS cast and crew. Many company members also use the opportunity to advance academically by earning college credits on the nearby campus of West Texas A&M University.

Pulitzer Prize winning author Paul Green wrote TEXAS. The action takes place on stage in the Pioneer Amphitheatre beneath the spectacular 600 foot cliffs of the Palo Duro Canyon State Park.

The production is known for its full houses. The Institute of Outdoor Drama in Chapel Hill, N.C., recognizes TEXAS as the best attended outdoor drama in the nation.

Last season, audience members traveled from every state in the nation and 89 foreign countries. To date, more than 2.5 million people have seen this exciting saga of the men and women who tamed the Texas Panhandle in the late 1800s.

The summer performance opportunity is open to anyone 18 years or older. In addition to actors, dancers, singers, and technical crew, positions also are available on the TEXAS hospitality staff.

West Texas A&M University will host auditions on Saturday, Feb. 10, on the third floor of the Quadangle-Texas Union Building in Austin; Sunday, Feb. 11, in Dallas at the Owens Fine Arts Center on the Southern Methodist University campus; and Saturday, March 23, at the Institute of Outdoor Drama on the University of North Carolina campus.

Individuals interested in auditioning for TEXAS must bring a photo and references.

The script calls for four men and four women in leading roles. In addition, there are six male supporting roles. Actors will present a memorized scene, not to exceed three minutes, that accentuates outdoor voice and presence. Actors often double as members of the chorus and should also prepare a vocal number.

All voice ranges are required in chorus, solos and men's quartets. Singers should prepare one number of their choice. No "pop" or "rock" hits will be accepted. An accompanist will be provided or a singer may bring his or her own. Since singers also fill minor speaking roles, each should also prepare a short, one to two minute, memorized scene or monologue that will accentuate outdoor voice and presence.

Men and women with ballet or modern dance training are auditioned as a group. Dancers should wear appropriate workout clothing for the audition.

Musicians must be experienced in string bass, acoustic guitar, banjo, accordion, or violin. Members of the hospitality crew are the show's first and last contact with patrons. This group of 40 sells tickets and programs, works concessions and the barbecue, conducts tours, entertains on the patio, seats visitors and assists with other theatre duties.

While the script for TEXAS never changes, costumes, lighting and special effects are constantly updated to keep the show fresh and entertaining.

TEXAS is produced by the non-profit Texas Panhandle Heritage Foundation Inc. For additional information about auditions, or for show reservations, call (806) 655-2181 or write P.O. Box 268, Canyon, Texas, 79015.

Actors will present a memorized scene, not to exceed three minutes, that accentuates outdoor voice and presence. Actors often double as members of the chorus and should also prepare a vocal number.

All voice ranges are required in chorus, solos and men's quartets. Singers should prepare one number of their choice. No "pop" or "rock" hits will be accepted. An accompanist will be provided or a singer may bring his or her own. Since singers also fill minor speaking roles, each should also prepare a short, one to two minute, memorized scene or monologue that will accentuate outdoor voice and presence.

Men and women with ballet or modern dance training are auditioned as a group. Dancers should wear appropriate workout clothing for the audition.

Musicians must be experienced in string bass, acoustic guitar, banjo, accordion, or violin. Members of the hospitality crew are the show's first and last contact with patrons. This group of 40 sells tickets and programs, works concessions and the barbecue, conducts tours, entertains on the patio, seats visitors and assists with other theatre duties.

While the script for TEXAS never changes, costumes, lighting and special effects are constantly updated to keep the show fresh and entertaining.

TEXAS is produced by the non-profit Texas Panhandle Heritage Foundation Inc. For additional information about auditions, or for show reservations, call (806) 655-2181 or write P.O. Box 268, Canyon, Texas, 79015.

The script calls for four men and four women in leading roles. In addition, there are six male supporting roles. Actors will present a memorized scene, not to exceed three minutes, that accentuates outdoor voice and presence. Actors often double as members of the chorus and should also prepare a vocal number.

Colombian politician's campaign chief confesses about drug money

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The newest revelations will hurt Colombia's image abroad. In particular, U.S.-Colombian relations will likely grow more tense. The United States has long suspected Samper of ties to drug traffickers and has criticized narcotics-related corruption in the Colombian government.

U.S. officials have largely kept silent on the scandal, fearing Samper would use any criticism to whip up Colombian nationalism. They had no comment late Monday.

The allegations Botero made are not new; the jailed campaign treasurer, Santiago Medina, said last year that Samper knew about the drug money. But Botero is a more respected figure.

Ministers and military brass rushed to the presidential palace Monday night to pledge their support, but critics clamored for Samper's resignation on the grounds he has no credibility.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Bringing charity home to roost

Arguably the most promising development in 1995 in the political world doesn't have to do with maneuvering in the electoral arena or strategizing about government policy, but with a push to get people involved in helping private-sector charity.

Conservative political types are known for praising private charity in principle. But actually rolling up their sleeves and becoming active participants? For many, that's another matter. The Washington-based Center for Effective Compassion, comprised of some prominent conservatives, along with some of the country's more dynamic charity activists, aims to do something about that dichotomy between practice and preaching, especially on the Right. In a variety of ways, center officials say they intend to challenge conservatives to embrace compassion as a key element of their agenda. By compassion they mean the old-fashioned, intelligent sense of the word — an empathy and assistance for those in need that shows them genuine respect — not the gooey, condescending "liberal" kind that translates into another counterproductive government dole.

The center has just launched a print and TV campaign urging Americans to increase their participation in volunteer outreach as a sensible, effective alternative to failed welfare programs.

The advisory committee of the Foundation includes some conservatives known for a thoughtfulness that goes beyond pure political calculation. There is Robert Woodson of the National Center for Neighborhood Enterprise; Elaine Bennett, wife of prominent Republican William Bennett; Marvin Olasky, author of the provocative book, The Tragedy of American Compassion; and activist and author (and politician's wife) Arianna Huffington.

The organization is promoting a "Bleeding heart conservatism" — surely a worthy aim, if the conservative goal of reining in government is to be achieved in a way that strengthens the social fabric, and — as conservatives and libertarians argue — actually gives people in need more freedom and a greater chance to better themselves.

Pampa and Gray County would be appropriate places for taking the Foundation's message to heart and promoting voluntarism in a systematic way, as a companion aim to streamlining the public sector.

Missile shield can't ward off reality

A woman without a man, pookish feminists used to say, is like a fish without a bicycle. The same could be said of a superpower without a national missile defense.

But telling that to conservatives is not a cost-effective use of your breath. At least since Ronald Reagan's presidency, they have been obsessed with the idea of deploying a system to fend off a nuclear attack, at the imposing price of $48 billion.

You'd think that the end of the Cold War, which removed the immediate threat posed by 10,000 Soviet warheads, would have dampened their ardor. But like a traveler who responds to getting lost by going faster, they have redoubled their effort. Missile defense advocates are not about to be diverted by something as inconsequential as the collapse of our only major enemy.

The conservative view is expressed in lurid terms by the Center for Security Policy, a Washington lobby group headed by former Reagan aide Frank Gaffney. Last month, shortly before President Clinton vetoed a Pentagon authorization bill requiring the deployment of a nationwide anti-ballistic missile network in just seven years, CSP lamented his "determination to leave America defenseless."

Well, America is defenseless against a missile attack in the same way that Mike Tyson, walking along the street, is defenseless against an assault. Any number of passersby might be able to sneak up from behind and land a sucker punch. But no one is apt to try, for the simple reason that the ensuing events would be terribly unpleasant.

That is precisely why no one is likely to use weapons of mass destruction against the United States, which, in the space of 15 minutes or so, can turn any enemy into the world's largest source of radioactive charcoal. Since the dawn of the nuclear age, Americans have never relied on defense to foil attacks after they begin; they have relied on deterrence to assure that such attacks don't occur.

That strategy worked perfectly for four decades against a superpower adversary armed with thousands of nuclear warheads and bent on global domination. But conservatives somehow assume that it can't work against petty Third World dictators.

The Persian Gulf war provided a lasting boost to advocates of missile defense by unveiling the Patriot, which was seen repeatedly demolishing Iraqi Scuds in the air.

But it turned out that all that CNN footage didn't show what it seemed to show. In reality, the Patriots failed to destroy a single Scud warhead. John Pike, director of the space policy project at the Federation of American Scientists, says conservatives got the lessons of the Gulf War entirely backward. Missile defense didn't work in Operation Desert Storm. What did work — spectacularly — was deterrence.

Saddam Hussein could have used chemical or biological weapons against American troops or Saudi Arabian cities. But he knew that would invite nuclear retaliation by the United States. So he went down to defeat with his most fearsome weapons on the shelf.

Even if he or Kim Jong Il or Moammar Khadafy were to acquire nuclear weapons, none would be able to gain anything by using them against us. The only value they have been to any country is defensive — to discourage potential attackers.

But assuming these rogue despots wanted to start a nuclear war, would they employ the intercontinental ballistic missiles that an ABM system is designed to shoot down? Not when there is a multitude of cheaper, simpler and less detectable means of delivery, from a Piper Cub to a rented truck. Ballistic missile defense is the most expensive protection against the least plausible threat.

Advocates say some sort of "peace shield" is needed to protect against something that can't be deterred: the accidental launch of a nuclear-tipped missile. But this is another exceptionally remote possibility. Despite all the Russian and Chinese missiles pointed at us, none has ever gone off inadvertently. And the best protection against accidental launches is to reach agreement with other nuclear powers to take all missiles off perpetual alert.

The second best protection is to reduce the size of Russia's missile force, the world's largest next to ours. But the Russians have made it clear that if we proceed with an ABM program, they will refuse to ratify the START II agreement, which commits them to eliminate some 4,500 warheads — more than half their stockpile. So this effort to make us safer will appreciably degrade our security.

Such inconvenient realities suggest that missile defense is an extravagant fool's errand. But on this issue, conservatives have never let reality get in their way.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Jan. 23, the 23rd day of 1996. There are 343 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Jan. 23, 1968, North Korea seized the U.S. Navy ship Pueblo, charging it had intruded into the communist nation's territorial waters on a spying mission. The crew was released 11 months later.

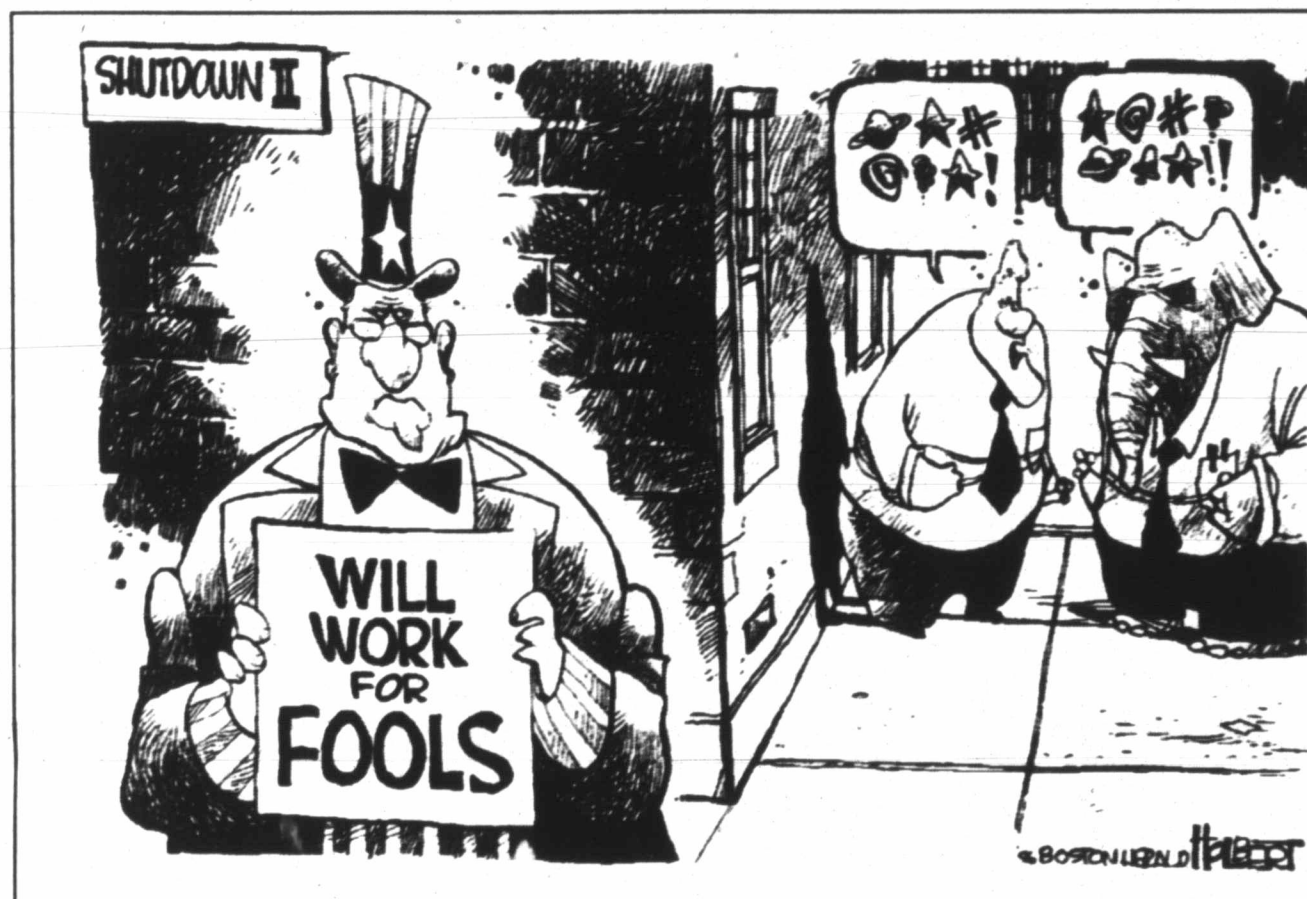

On this date:

In 1845, Congress decided all national elections would be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November.

In 1849, English-born Elizabeth Blackwell became the first woman in America to receive a Doctor of Medicine degree, from the Medical Institution of Geneva, N.Y.

In 1920, the Dutch government refused demands from the victorious Allies to hand over the ex-king of Germany.

In 1932, New York Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt announced his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The responsibility of owning a gun

Charley Reese

While I am a strong supporter of people's rights to own and use firearms for self-defense, I have always been reluctant to encourage people to buy a gun for self-defense, especially if they have no life experiences with firearms and violence.

It is a serious step and one that requires a lot of careful thought. The first thing to work out is to decide if you are psychologically prepared to kill a human being. In a self-defense situation involving firearms that may be a consequence.

The majority of times, the mere presence of a firearm scares off the criminal, but you can never be sure if the attacker will run or accelerate his attack.

The law of the hills is never point a gun at somebody you're not prepared to kill — and to kill without hesitation. And never fire until you know who it is you are shooting.

There are few things people do that can't be either undone or at least ameliorated, but killing is one of them. Once you pull a trigger, you can't call the bullet back. Once you kill a person, you can't resurrect him. My dad said to me 10,000 times as he was teaching me to shoot, and when I was older, to drive a car, "After you kill somebody, it's too late to be sorry."

I have never met a normal person, either cop or soldier, who did not feel bad about killing, no matter how justified it was. One of Israel's great heroes, Yoni Netanyahu, wrote in a letter to his loved ones, "Every time you kill a man, a little bit of your own soul dies, too."

So don't take this question lightly. Real killing is quite different from the movie versions. Most anybody you kill will have relatives, and you will have to be prepared to look them in the eye.

Once you settle that issue, then you had better study the law of self-defense in your jurisdiction. Today, many prosecutors seem more eager to prosecute honest folk defending themselves than the criminals who are attacking them. While it may vary in some respects, basically there are three necessary elements.

One, you cannot have initiated the confrontation. If you do, you forfeit the claim of self-defense no matter what the other person does. Two, you must, as a reasonable person, believe you are in imminent (that means immediate) danger of death or great bodily harm. Three, unless you are at home, you must retreat if there is a way to do so.

You can't kill to stop somebody from stealing your property; you can't kill if someone is trying to get away from you; you can't kill if you could easily get away from that someone.

The legal ramifications of self-defense are serious, and you'd better know what you are doing or you can end up practicing unarmed self-defense in a state prison.

In my state, merely threatening someone with a firearm can be construed as aggravated assault, conviction of which requires a mandatory prison sentence.

After that, you have to realize that merely having a gun doesn't mean you're going to win a gunfight. You must practice with that gun and become exceedingly familiar with it.

You can reasonably expect that an attack will be (1) unexpected, (2) sudden and (3) probably in the dark. Unlike the movies, most fatal confrontations start and stop within a matter of seconds.

You will be startled and scared, and you won't have much time at all to put your weapon into play. That's why you must decide the issue of taking a life ahead of time.

When someone is trying to kill you, you don't have time to resolve philosophical and moral doubts. Shooting a person who is trying to kill you is a lot different from shooting a paper target at the gun range.

There are a lot of other things to think about. A gun is no help unless you have it, and have it loaded, when you are attacked. That creates problems of keeping it safely, yet available, especially if you have children.

With every right comes responsibility. Don't exercise the right unless you are prepared to accept the responsibility.

CNN knockoffs: News you can consume

A show of hands, please: How many of you believe the addition of three 24-hour cable news networks will improve the quality of coverage?

Oh come on, surely one of you does. There'll be more competition, the marketplace forces at work and all that.

Think of the O.J. trial of the future: Three more TV towers will surround the courthouse; another 20 or 30 journalists/lawyers/consultants will analyze each arch of the defendant's eyebrows, each scratch of the nose; more celebrity anchors and correspondents will be on air at 7 a.m. on Verdict Day to begin their breathless countdowns until judgment is proclaimed.

Oh my, the anticipation. CNN has had the field to itself for 15 years, but now ABC, Fox and NBC have announced their intentions to launch all day news operations. With the sports networks and the financial networks and the entertainment networks and the local all-news stations that are popping up in major cities across the country, we will be able to tune in any kind of news we want, any time we want.

Nirvana, hey?

You're not impressed, are you? Every story I view or read about the public's attitude toward the media, I see or hear you using such words as inaccurate, untrustworthy, cynical, nasty, resentful, hostile, ignorant, remote, negative, hypocritical, paternalistic, intrusive, adversarial, moralistic, insipid. I hear you saying we're so bad, even the politicians spurn us.

In a career that spans nearly three decades, I have heard it all before. Richard Nixon played the public against the press like a virtuoso, and he won two presidential elections. Spiro Agnew made an art form of press bashing, and the public ate it up. There is no insult, no vulgarity you could hurl at me that would constitute a new experience. Been there, done that.

I'd be equivocating, though, if I did not acknowledge things have gotten much worse. In 1973, the National Opinion Research Center pinned the public's "confidence" in the news media at about 25%. A year later, with the press riding the Watergate horse to honor and glory, the Gallup organization determined that 69% of its respondents evinced a "great deal" or a "fair amount" of confidence in the media.

In 1993, the National Opinion Research Center fixed the confidence level at an appalling 4%. From 1981 to 1993, the Gallup firm said, the number of Americans who felt the media were highly ethical had declined from 30% to 22%.

Permit me to digress at this point and say that if anybody in the business wants to pay me a consulting fee, I think I could improve the electronic news media's image almost overnight. The first thing I'd do is make everybody from grip to guru go on a long Humility Retreat. The second thing I'd do is forbid all anchors and White House reporters from calling themselves journalists. The former would be "readers," as in those who recite the words reported and written by others. The latter would be "relayers," as in those who transmit the pronouncements of official spokespersons.

Getting back to the main point, though, you probably suspect I share your skeptical attitude about the improvement of news quality with the addition of three all-news networks. That is because their establishment has nothing to do with quality. The business people behind them have dollar signs in their eyes. They see a merging of on-line services; broadcasting and news, and they want to be there when the bucks start rolling in.

There is nothing wrong with profit. But it wasn't too long ago that profit in the television news business played second fiddle to public service. That all changed in the mid-1980s, when megafirms like General Electric and Capital Cities began buying networks and insisting that news divisions make money.

It is not coincidental, in my opinion, that the public's already dismal view of the media began to sink at the same time.

Mrs. Clinton to testify Friday for Whitewater grand jury

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hillary Rodham Clinton faces extensive questioning by Whitewater prosecutors under an unprecedented grand jury subpoena summoning the first lady to the federal courthouse on Friday.

Mrs. Clinton will be asked about "the discovery and content" of long-sought billing records outlining her work for a savings and loan owned by the Clintons' Whitewater business partners, the White House announced Monday.

Trying to determine whether anyone hid the documents from investigators, Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr also subpoenaed three White House aides and two of the Clintons' personal attorneys.

Mrs. Clinton's grand jury appearance will cap a tumultuous three weeks in the Whitewater affair marked by the mysterious appearance of records first subpoenaed two years ago of her legal work for Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan.

Legal scholars say it is the first time a sitting first lady has been compelled to testify before a grand jury. "It's unprecedented," said Paul Rothstein, professor of law at Georgetown University Law Center.

Carolyn Huber, a longtime Clinton aide, testified last week that she found the billing records in August on a table in the White House residence book room. She said the records hadn't been there several days earlier when she was there. Huber said she didn't actually examine the records and realize what they were until Jan. 4, when she notified David Kendall, the Clintons' Whitewater lawyer and one of those subpoenaed by the grand jury.

The subpoenas for Mrs. Clinton and the others were served on Kendall last Friday and the White House negotiated with Starr on Sunday and Monday.

As all grand jury sessions are, this one will be behind closed doors.

Negotiations focused on the fact that Mrs. Clinton was being summoned to the U.S. Courthouse where the full glare of media publicity will be on her as she enters the building, said one person familiar with the negotiations.

The source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Mrs. Clinton's lawyers wanted to have Whitewater prosecutors come to the White House to question her, as they have three times in the past.

White House spokesman Mark Fabiani refused to say anything about the negotiations, and deputy Whitewater prosecutor John Bates declined to discuss the negotiations or any other aspect of the matter.

"The first lady ... is as eager as anyone to resolve questions regarding the billing records, and she will continue to provide whatever help she can finally to resolve these issues," Fabiani said.

Mrs. Clinton has always characterized her work for Madison as limited and she says the newly surfaced records support her contention. However, Republicans disagree. The billing records show she did about 60 hours of legal work over 15 months, having at least 68 contacts with S&L executives, colleagues at the Rose Law Firm in Little Rock, Ark., and regulators.

Among them: at least 22 conversations about a proposed stock sale by Madison, a project on which Mrs. Clinton has said her work was "minimal." Also, she had at least 14 conversations with businessman Seth Ward on Castle Grande, a 1,050-acre tract south of Little Rock financed by Madison that has cost taxpayers some $4 million.

Mexico briefs

Mexican fugitive arrested in Chicago

WICHITA (AP) — A Mexican man wanted in connection with the shooting deaths of four others was arrested in Chicago, a U.S. deputy marshal said.

A spokesman from the Mexican Attorney General's Office confirmed Monday night that Lauro Soto Salas faces charges on four counts of homicide for the March 20, 1995 murder of four members of a family.

In an apparent family dispute, Soto and three other armed men rode their pickup around Villa Cardenas in the central Zacatecas state, stopping in three separate locations to kill four members of a family, according to the extradition request.

Mexican stock exchange closes at record high

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican Stock Exchange closed at a record high Monday, carrying on sharp increases late last week.

Even though the market lost many of its early gains during the course of the day, the key IPC index surged late in the day to close near the day's highs on speculation that primary interest rates will drop at Tuesday evening's weekly Treasury bill auction.

The Mexican market's key index closed 0.96 percent or 29.39 points higher at 3,087.81 points.

The Mexican stock market, peso and secondary money market, all saw healthy demand last week as foreign funds piled into the markets in search of high yields and undervalued shares.

Former moving company executive pleads guilty

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A former moving company president has pleaded guilty to causing illegal campaign contributions to congressmen to be concealed from the Federal Election Commission.

In an agreement with prosecutors, Leslie Alfred Taber pleaded guilty Monday to five counts of causing the campaign committees of congressmen to hide illegal contributions from the Federal Election Commission.

Among the five donations was one in 1990 to U.S. Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur Springs, currently a Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate seat held by Republican Phil Gramm.

"Jim Chapman is not and never has been a target of any Department of Justice investigation," said campaign official Catherine Moore. "He has cooperated fully with the Justice Department investigation of Mr. Taber and will continue to do so if requested."

None of the congressmen has been charged with wrongdoing.

Taber was president of Sherwood Van Lines Inc., a now-defunct moving company in San Antonio that once held lucrative military contracts. Taber left the federal courthouse Monday declining through his attorney, Sam Millsap, to speak with reporters.

Taber originally was charged with making illegal corporate campaign contributions to Chapman and nine other current and former congressmen by passing them off as personal donations made by him or his wife, Ilene.

A Chapman spokesman has said an internal audit of campaign accounts in late 1993 found no record that the campaign had been billed for the 1986 move. Based on outside estimates of what such a move would cost, Chapman's campaign paid $4,426 in May 1994.

Elderly man claims he robbed banks to help poor

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A retired insurance agent and church elder has been sentenced to 51 months in prison for committing five bank robberies he said were pulled to help the poor and downtrodden.

"I would never have done such a thing except that helping people became an addiction, 71-year-old Karlton Halbert told U.S. District Judge Fred Biery Monday.

He recalled assisting three sisters who together had 15 children. He said he took them sacks of clothing for their children because they were poor and needed help.

"Somehow, I came to rationalize that it would be OK (to rob banks)," said Halbert, who pleaded guilty last year to one charge of unarmed bank robbery.

In return for Halbert's plea, federal prosecutors dropped charges that he robbed four other banks in San Antonio and Austin over a 15-month period in 1993 and 1994.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Mike Hardy told Biery that FBI agents suspected Halbert was planning a sixth robbery when agents arrested him at his home a year ago.

Defense lawyer Bill Blagg told Biery that medical tests showed Halbert suffered from dementia, a disease that brought on erratic behavior that began at age 69 after he had lived an exemplary middle-class life that included service in World War II.

Halbert was a member of Northside Church of Christ and church friends said he had devoted himself to helping others.

But prosecutor Hardy told the judge, "He knew better than to rob banks, and he robbed not one but five banks and planned a sixth robbery. We have to put an end to violence."

Physician oversupply needs adjustment

WASHINGTON (AP) — America has too many doctors and medical colleges should reduce class size, with no public funds being spent for new schools of medicine, said a study released today.

The Institute of Medicine, an affiliate of the National Academy of Sciences, said the nation needs to take immediate steps to reduce the number of U.S. medical students and to put limitations on the training and entry into practice of medical graduates from foreign countries.

A study last fall funded by the Pew Charitable Trusts recommended that the United States close at least 20 percent of its medical schools over the next decade because of a surplus of doctors, nurses and pharmacists. The study released today found that the number of practicing doctors in the United States has increased from 308,487 in 1970 to 627,723 in 1992. The ratio of physicians was 151 doctors per 100,000 people in 1970 and 245 per 100,000 in 1992, an increase in ratio of 62 percent.

"Yet for all this growth we have seen too little improvement in the cost or quality of, or access to, health care," said Don Detmer, senior vice president of the University of Virginia and a co-chairman of the Institute of Medicine panel. "Having more physicians has not meant having more care of the right kind, at the right place or at the right cost."

The committee found that increasing the number of doctors actually leads to higher aggregate health care costs for the nation.

Simpson soft spoken during testimony

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With Ron Goldman's father watching from across a long conference table, O.J. Simpson was subdued and soft-spoken as he testified for the first time since the killings of his ex-wife and her friend.

Simpson was so quiet at times that he couldn't be heard as he responded to a battery of questions from Fred Goldman's lawyer, according to another attorney who witnessed the videotaped deposition on Monday.

The testimony during the private proceeding was described as detailed, the tone workmanlike. But tension filled the offices of lawyer Daniel Petrocelli.

And he and other lawyers handling the wrongful-death lawsuit brought by the Goldmans and Nicole Brown Simpson's family were just getting warmed up.

Simpson faces four to six more days of grilling.

Testimony was to continue today.

Michael Brewer, who represents Ron Goldman's mother, Sharon Rufo, said Simpson was inconsistent on several "fairly major issues."

The questioning focused on Simpson's Connecticut golf trip a week before the slayings and his thoughts and actions the day he fled from police in the nationally televised June 17, 1994, Bronco chase, Brewer said.

Simpson also was questioned about the letter that his friend Robert Kardashian read shortly after Simpson disappeared that day. Many considered it a suicide note.

Lawyers plan to interrogate Simpson on his whereabouts on June 12, 1994, when Ms. Simpson and Ron Goldman were slashed to death outside Ms. Simpson's condominium.

"We haven't yet gone into the central issues of this case," Brewer said.

Fred Goldman told reporters that Petrocelli questioned Simpson "very meticulously." He would not discuss Simpson's specific answers or demeanor but said he was encouraged by the session.

"I think there have been some very interesting things that have come up," Goldman said. The deposition was "necessary but difficult," he said.

Simpson, who was acquitted Oct. 3, never testified at his trial. His only detailed statement was made to detectives the day after the slayings. But the jury never saw a transcript or heard the tape. During the deposition, Simpson cannot invoke his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination because he has already been acquitted of murder.

Simpson is scheduled to give a live interview Wednesday night to Black Entertainment Television, which reaches 43 million homes. Jeffrey K. Lee, president of the cable channel, said there are no ground rules and no topics are off limits.

Since his acquittal, Simpson has spoken briefly with several reporters but has not discussed the slayings or the trial in detail.

Simpson arrived at the glass-paneled West Los Angeles building housing Petrocelli's office at about 9:30 a.m. A black Ford Explorer took him past dozens of reporters and into a parking garage. He skirted reporters by leaving the same way just after 2:30 p.m.

Nation briefs

Report: George Burns near death

NEW YORK (AP) — George Burns is too weak to eat and near death, and the gravity of his condition is being hushed up, New York Post columnist Cindy Adams reported today.

The comedian, who turned 100 on Saturday, "is not eating. He is not taking solid foods. Not that he doesn't want to. He is not able," Adams reported.

The comedian's manager, Irving Fein, said Saturday that Burns was weak and "not eating much." The columnist, wife of comedian Joey Adams, also reported that Burns is confined to bed and hardly responded to Fein and old friend Barry Merkin, who visited him on his birthday.

Adams wrote that Burns understands how sick he is: "He knows it's now next-to-closing."

Burns, who was using a wheelchair to get around, stopped performing after he was injured in a bathtub fall in 1994. More recently, he caught the flu after attending Frank Sinatra's Christmas party, and two weeks ago, he stopped his daily trips to his Hollywood office and to the Hillcrest Country Club to play bridge.

Police search for pregnant 10-year-old

HOUSTON (AP) — A 10-year-old who is 8 1/2 months pregnant ran away from a youth center, prompting a police search and raising fears that she will attempt to have the baby without medical supervision.

The child came to the attention of state caseworkers Jan. 12, when she posed as a 14-year-old and tried to apply for welfare benefits for herself and the child she is carrying.

The girl, who was taken into state custody and examined by a doctor, disappeared from a youth shelter Sunday morning.

AT&T adds TV programs to service offerings

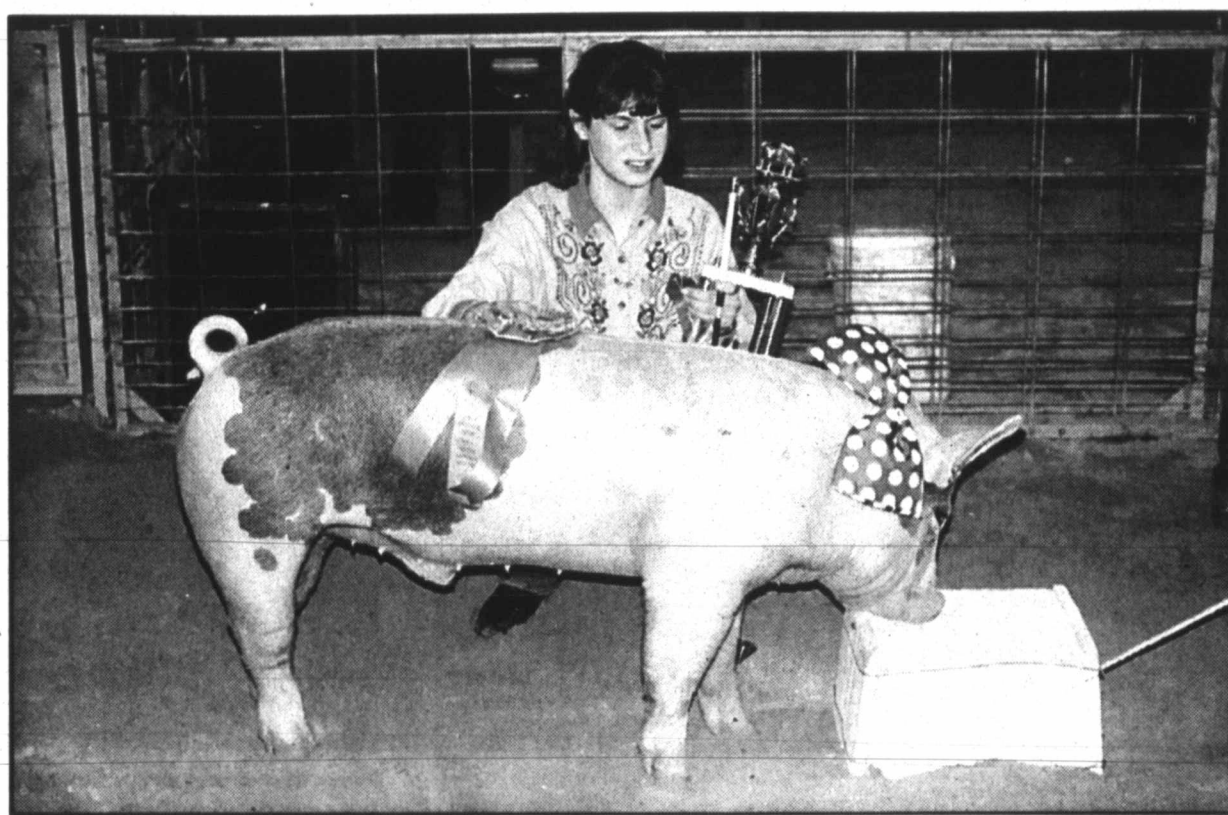

NEW YORK (AP) — AT&T Corp. has jumped into the TV business, acquiring a stake in DirecTV Inc. and announcing plans to market that company's direct broadcast satellite service this summer.

The $137.5 million deal is another step in AT&T's drive to be a one-stop provider of all kinds of communications.

People will be able to buy the 18-inch satellite dish and receiver and sign up for DirecTV's 175-channel program service from AT&T, the companies said Monday. If a person also has long distance service from AT&T, the company will provide one bill for both.

AT&T has bundled cellular and paging services since last year and provided a combined credit and long distance phone calling card since 1990. It is now prevented by a Justice Department agreement from combining its cellular and long distance services.

Two ex-Korean presidents indicted for treason, accused of taking bribes

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The legal problems keep mounting for former presidents Chun Doo-hwan and Roh Tae-woo, childhood chums who rose through the military ranks together, served as consecutive presidents and now may end up in prison together.

Already facing charges they took huge bribes and headed a coup that carried them to power, the two were indicted today for treason stemming from a bloody crackdown on pro-democracy protesters nearly 16 years ago that remains one of South Korea's most divisive issues.

Also charged in connection with the "Kwangju Massacre" were six former army generals. Prosecution officials said three or four others, now serving in the National Assembly, are expected to be arrested later.

All could face the death penalty, which theoretically would be mandatory for Chun as the alleged ringleader, although execution is considered unlikely.

Chun and Roh came to power as a result of a 1979 coup that followed the assassination of their mentor, President Park Chung-hee, by his security chief.

Six months later, they sent troops and tanks to brutally suppress an uprising by hundreds of thousands of people in Kwangju, an opposition stronghold in the south. The crackdown helped Chun and Roh consolidate power.

The indictment claims Chun and others forced Choi Kyu-hah, who became a caretaker president following the assassination, to resign after eight months. Chun then took over and was replaced by Roh in 1988.

The Kwangju clash remains steeped in controversy, with two big questions unresolved: How many people were killed and who ordered the military to open fire?

The then-jointly announced that 193 people, including about 30 soldiers and police officers, were killed. They later revised the figure to 240. Dissidents claim the toll was much higher.

Junta leaders said troops were forced to open fire in self-defense, but protesters claimed they stole rifles from police stations only after soldiers fired on them.

Lee Jong-chan, head of the investigation team, claimed Chun ordered troops to put down the uprising "by whatever means." He said Chun and four other generals were responsible for permitting the troops to shoot.

Government investigators last month traveled to Kwangju, which remains a hotbed of dissident activity, to question witnesses and survivors. They also visited the sites of suspected mass graves. The results of the probe have not been released.

President Kim Young-sam said history should judge the coup and ensuing massacre. But in December, he changed his mind, citing massive corruption by his two predecessors.

Chun and Roh are also alleged to have taken bribes in exchange for major government contracts for nuclear plants, weapons purchases and other projects. They reportedly still had hundreds of millions of dollars in bank accounts and real estate when they were arrested.

The first former presidents to be charged with wrongdoing in office aren't giving up without a fight.

Chun has filed suit against a law that Kim ordered passed in December that paved the way for the treason charges by excluding time in office from the 15-year statute of limitations.

Army exposes chemical secrets: Virtually tons of lethal agents stockpiled

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decade after it was ordered by Congress to destroy its chemical weapons, the Army is making public how many and what types it has. All are to be destroyed by the year 2004 at a cost of $12 billion.

The previously secret figures show a little over 30,000 tons of nerve and blister agents in what the Army calls its stockpile. That is about what observers had widely assumed before Monday's disclosures.

Russia, the only other country to acknowledge having chemical weapons, has put its total at 40,000 tons. The United States is helping Russia destroy them.

Less well known was the amount of chemical agents the Army counts separately from its stockpile. There are, for example, more than 13,600 tons of chemicals in a category that includes materials used for testing and materials and weapons obtained from other countries during wars, officials said. In a few cases, the Army doesn't even know what chemicals are in these weapons.

Also not counted in the 30,000 tons are agents used in the Army's chemical defense program. These total nearly 10,000 tons and are stored at Aberdeen Proving Ground in Maryland and at Dugway Proving Ground in Utah. They are used to validate the Army's chemical defenses such as protective clothing for the battlefield.

Bryan Whitman, a Pentagon spokesman, said the Army may keep as much as one ton for its chemical defense program. Every other category of chemicals will be destroyed.

By far the most common chemicals in the U.S. arsenal are the mustard agent HD and nerve agents sarin and VX. The only examples of mind-bending drugs of the type that caused great controversy in the 1970s when it was revealed the Army had experimented with them on humans, are small amounts of BZ stored at Aberdeen and Dugway.

Maj. Gen. Robert Orton, head of the Army's chemical weapons destruction project, told a Pentagon news conference that declassifying the information will expedite efforts to get environmental clearances needed to incinerate the weapons.

"It also may enhance our credibility by confirming that we are not holding back from regulators and the public," Orton said. "It eliminates a serious irritant."

The weapons destruction project was ordered by Congress in 1986. So far about 900 tons of chemical agents have been incinerated on Johnston Atoll, a U.S. territory in the Pacific that has been the testing ground for incineration.

The United States never used any of the more than 3 million chemical weapons it built since their use was outlawed by the 1925 Geneva Protocol.

Here is the breakdown of some of the U.S. chemical weapons stockpiled:

—At Tooele Army Depot, Utah, 13,616 tons in 1.1 million individual weapons. The chemicals are three kinds of mustard agents, five of nerve agents and lewisite, a kind of blistering agent. Tooele is the largest single storage site.

—At Anniston Army Depot, Ala., 2,253 tons in 661,000 weapons. Two mustard agents, two nerve agents.

—Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., 1,624 tons in bulk containers. Mustard agents.

—Blue Grass Army Depot, Ky., 523 tons in 101,000 weapons. One type of mustard agent, two of nerve agents.

—Newport Chemical Activity, Ind., 1,269 tons of the nerve agent VX in bulk containers.

Childless Couples Don't Need Thoughtless Words of Comfort

DEAR ABBY: My brother and sister-in-law have been trying for three years, without success, to conceive a child. They are a responsible, well-educated couple who are financially secure and would make wonderful parents. Every time their results come up negative, my sister-in-law says she goes through the same grieving as someone who has lost a child.

Adding to their pain and disappointment are the thoughtless comments she and my brother hear when the subject of children comes up.

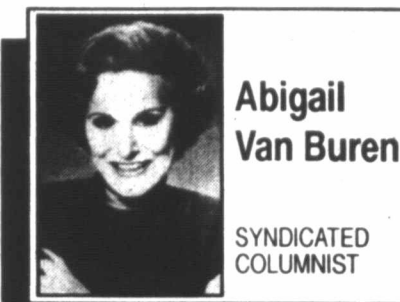

Abby, didn't you publish something in your column a few years ago about what not to say to an infertile couple? If you can find it, please run it again.

SYMPATHETIC IN SEATTLE

DEAR SYMPATHETIC: In 1989, I printed a list of the 10 worst things to say to an infertile couple. It was written by Jan Short, a member of RESOLVE, a group that provides support and information to couples who are trying to cope with infertility.

DON'T SAY:

1. "Relax." It implies that the couple's anxiety is the cause.
2. "No children? Then you must have a flourishing career." What about aging baby boomers who have no careers or children?
3. "I know two women who

Abigail Van Buren

adopted and then got pregnant." The rate at which adoptive parents spontaneously conceive is about 5 percent, the same as for infertile couples who have not adopted.

4. "You're not taking drugs, are you?" Chances are she is and, of course, she's concerned about multiple births.

5. "Maybe you've created it." A tacky version of blame-the-victim.

6. "Well, you must be having a lot of fun trying." With regimented sex dominated by thermometers, charts, medical tests and the clock, it's highly unlikely.

7. "You want kids? Take mine!" You don't really mean it, and we don't want your bratty kids anyway.

8. "It's better not to bring any more children into this world."

9. "I have the opposite problem. He just looks at me, and I get pregnant." (A likely story!)

10. "Your work is your contribution to society." When we hear this, we feel robbed and resigned to childlessness.

Anyone desiring further information about RESOLVE should send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: RESOLVE Inc., 1310 Broadway, Dept. DA, Somerville, Mass. 02144-1731.

DEAR ABBY: Rick and I have been married less than three weeks, and we've already had a serious fight. Here's what happened:

Rick picked up the proofs of our wedding pictures, and there were only two pictures that were any good. There was one in which I looked good but Rick looked terrible. In the other one, he looked good, but I looked terrible.

The photographer said if he took them over, we would have to pay for another sitting, and that was out of the question.

We decided to put the pictures away and think it over. A couple of days later, Rick called the photographer and ordered the one in which he looked good and I looked terrible.

Do I have the right to be mad?

BRIDE OF THREE WEEKS

DEAR BRIDE: Yes. Tell your husband that fair's fair, then call the photographer to order a copy of the picture you liked. That way, each of you will have a picture you look good in.

(When you look at the pictures in 25 years, you'll probably agree that both of you looked terrible!)

the truth won't be constructive.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Industriousness and determination, not luck, will enable you to accomplish your objectives today. Stand on your two feet instead of depending on a rabbit's foot.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Today you might have to make a decision that will affect others as well as yourself. Do not be impulsive. Make sure to carefully analyze the situation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You can find competent helpers today to finish a task you are unable to do unaided. You will be grateful to have this project out of the way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Even though you'll be in a sociable, gregarious mood today, you'll also appreciate exchanging worthwhile ideas with serious thinkers.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Operating independently of others could prove advantageous for you today. Partners may be fun to have around, but they might distract you.

PAMPA — Pampa Middle School basketball teams competed against Westover and Valley View Monday night.

Pampa defeated Westover, 40-28, in the 8th grade B game.

Top scorers for Pampa were Jason Kolger with 10 points and Jeremy Buck 8.

Other results are as follows:

7th Grade A
Westover 56, Pampa 47
Pampa - Gary Alexander 25, Brandon Albus 7.

7th Grade B
Westover 31, Pampa 28
Pampa - Urdal Jernigan 9, Ryan Black 6.

8th Grade A
Valleyview 41, Pampa 34
Pampa-Jesse Francis 12, Russell Robben 8.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Massachusetts center Marcus Camby had a leisurely workout in his first practice since a scary fainting episode.

He shot jumpers that were fetched by a student manager, jogged slowly and rode for awhile on an exercise bike Monday night.

Coach John Calipari said he is leaving the decision up to Camby about whether playing tonight for the No. 1 Minutemen (16-0) against Pittsburgh at 9 p.m.

Woodson in, Haley ailing for Super Bowl

By BARRY WILNER
AP Football Writer

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Could Rod Woodson's amazing recovery and Charles Haley's tough luck be omens for this Super Bowl? The Pittsburgh Steelers wouldn't mind. The Dallas Cowboys say no thanks.

Just after the Steelers arrived in Arizona for their first Super Bowl since 1980, coach Bill Cowher announced that Woodson, the perennial All-Pro cornerback sidelined since the season opener with torn knee ligaments, would play Sunday.

Earlier Monday, Haley was held out of practice with a 101-degree fever, another bad break for the star defensive end who underwent back surgery seven weeks ago.

Considering the slide the AFC has been on in the big game, with 11 losses in a row, the Steelers were off to a better start than their conference brethren usually manage.

"Rod is going to play," Cowher said. "How much he practices will be the determining factor how much he plays."

"That's great," All-Pro center Dermontti Dawson said. "Rod's really worked as hard as anyone I've ever seen for this chance. You know, with a Rod Woodson on the field, it has to help."

Don't expect to see Woodson covering Michael Irvin 1-on-1, or returning many punts, however. His role figures to be limited after missing four months with an injury that usually sidelines players for a year.

"It would have crushed me if the Steelers made the Super Bowl and I couldn't play," Woodson said. "The Super Bowl is what kept me going. If they had put me on injured reserve, there wouldn't have been a reason to work out so hard."

Haley also has worked hard to get back. He hoped to play in the conference title game, just as Woodson had.

Dallas' main pass-rushing threat, Haley hasn't been in a game since Dec. 3.

"He didn't feel well at breakfast, then felt worse this afternoon," coach Barry Switzer said. "Doctors were giving him some intravenous fluids to try to get him well from the viral infection."

"If we got 20-25 plays out of Haley in the game, and if he is well, he might even be able to play more than that. We've got to find out in the physical practices whether he can cope with the physical play and play the run."

Teammate Russell Maryland, who has had his own bouts with injury this season, said a return by Haley "would be a nice little added boost."

"I think his presence really helps us, just being around," the defensive tackle said. "I don't think he would miss this game. Being his fifth Super Bowl, trying to go for that other ring that nobody has... he's that type of player who would try to come through for us."

Steelers quarterback Neil O'Donnell certainly wouldn't mind if Haley doesn't make it into the lineup. Haley had 10.5 sacks despite missing the final month.

"You're taking a lot away from a team if it is without a Charles Haley," O'Donnell said.

What the Cowboys definitely do have is an edge in experience and success, with two championships in the last three years. Even with Woodson, the soul of their team, on the field, the Steelers can't match that — their last Super Bowl was in 1980.

Then there is the 11-year slide for the AFC, even if the Steelers didn't lose any of those games.

"That's just another stat," O'Donnell said. "I don't get caught up in any of those things. This is my first one, so I'm just trying to go out there and win one for this team and myself, not for the AFC or anything."

Rockets fall to Hawks

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Hawks can thank their defense for extending their winning streak to eight games.

"The defense is out there working hard and everyone's getting rewarded on the offensive end," forward Grant Long said Monday night after the Hawks beat the two-time defending champion Houston Rockets 105-96.

"If your defense is constant, it gives you opportunities, because if you miss a shot you can come right back, be up on people, bother them and maybe make them turn the ball over or take a quick shot," Hawks coach Lenny Wilkens said. "I liked our defense."

The Hawks forced Houston into committing a season-high 27 turnovers, and capitalized offensively.

Steve Smith scored 26 points, Craig Ehlo a season-high 25 and Mookie Blaylock 20.

"Atlanta's playing as good as anybody in the league," Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich said after his team lost its third in a row.

Atlanta's eight-game streak is second longest in the NBA, behind only Chicago's 11-game string.

"The pressure all the time, their quickness outside was evident," Tomjanovich said. "They're very good at stripping the ball, but we helped them."

Ehlo made nine of 13 shots, including four 3-pointers, and scored 18 in a stretch of just over six minutes when the Hawks turned a 65-62 deficit into an 87-78 lead with 8:20 remaining. Ehlo capped the spurt with his third 3-pointer in a three-minute stretch.

"I got rolling pretty well and got off some shots that got a lot of net," Ehlo said. "It was one of those lucky nights when everything was going in."

"Ehlo was good," Tomjanovich said. "Smith was good, and I thought our guy Henry James was fantastic. If we don't have him tonight, we don't even have a game."

James, who signed a 10-day contract with the Rockets on Saturday, scored 16 points on 6-of-8 shooting, including four 3-pointers. He lifted the Rockets into ties twice in the opening 90 seconds of the final period with his long-range shots.

Ehlo's 3-pointer with 9:13 left gave Atlanta an 81-78 lead, one it never lost.

Clyde Drexler led the Rockets with 23 points and Hakeem Olajuwon added 20. Besides his 20 points, Blaylock had a season-high 10 rebounds, nine assists and six steals.

"We didn't execute as we normally do," Drexler said. "Atlanta was aggressive on defense and hustled. That's how they win."

Spurs go cold against Heat

MIAMI (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs went cold against the Miami Heat, missing easy layups and desperation jumpers and every other shot they tried.

Held without a basket for the final 7:42, San Antonio blew a 12-point lead Monday night and lost 96-89.

"We just couldn't score at the end," coach Bob Hill said.

David Robinson scored 25 points, for the Spurs, but couldn't even get a shot in the fourth quarter. Sean Elliott also scored 25, but missed two shots in the final 90 seconds with a chance to give San Antonio the lead.

"In the last five minutes we just couldn't get over the hump," Hill said. "David had a tough time, and Sean couldn't get to the foul line or get it in the bucket. That is what you have to do in the clutch, and we didn't get it done."

Alonzo Mourning and Rex Chapman each had 25 points for Miami. Trailing 86-74 with 7:42 left, the Heat went to their strength — defense — and outscored San Antonio 22-3 the rest of the way, including 10-0 in the last three minutes.

"The effort was there, and it made a difference in the game," Mourning said. "It was tenacious defense. Tenacity grows and grows, and it becomes contagious."

Miami held an opponent below 100 points for the 28th time, second only to Cleveland.

The Heat, who had lost seven of their past eight games, beat a team with a winning record for the first time since Nov. 18. Their next four games are against teams with winning records.

"We just needed a win, period," Mourning said.

Pampa High cagers welcome non-district competition

PAMPA — The Pampa boys' and girls' basketball teams will get a break from District 1-4A action tonight, but both will be involved in non-district competition.

The Harvesters will be playing the Class 3A Childress Bobcats while the Lady Harvesters will meet Class 2A West Texas High in McNeely Fieldhouse. Games are 6 p.m. for the girls and 7:30 p.m. for the boys.

Childress has a 5-17 record and is 1-4 in District 1-3A.

"This game with Childress will give us a chance to catch our breath before we start all over in district," said Pampa head coach Robert Hale. "Five of our next seven games are at home, so it's going to be a nice little homestand for the team and the fans."

Pampa gained sole possession of first place in the 1-4A race last Friday night with a 72-63 win over Hereford. The Harvesters are 20-3 for the season and 6-0 in the district standings.

Senior guard Rayford Young leads District 1-4A in scoring, averaging 26.5 points per game, but four other Harvesters are averaging 10 points or better.

Senior forward Coy Laury is averaging 14.6 ppg, senior forward Jason Weatherbee, 11.0; junior pivot Devin Lemons, 10.1 and junior guard August Larson, 10.0.

Senior pivot James Foster at 6-4 has been one of Childress' top scorers. Taron Wyatt, a 6-0 senior, is another key player.

The second half of district play starts Friday night for the Harvesters when Randall comes to McNeely Fieldhouse.

WT High has a 15-4 record and is one of the stronger Class 2A girls' teams in the panhandle. WT defeated the Lady Harvesters, 40-33, in an earlier game.

The Lady Commanches are led by 5-7 junior Jody Avent and 5-8 senior Kim Locke.

For the Lady Harvesters, junior guard Jennifer Jones is averaging 13.8 points in district play. Junior pivot Kristi Carpenter is averaging 8.7 points.

Pampa, 1-6 in district and 12-11 overall, hosts Randall at 6 Tuesday night.

Hometown fans cheer for Morris

By JEFFREY WEISS
The Dallas Morning News

COOPER, Texas — As surely as he hauled defenders over the goal line in the AFC Championship Game, Bam Morris is carrying his hometown to the Super Bowl.

The star running back for the Pittsburgh Steelers is playing out the cliché of a small town lifted by a successful native son. Bam is a top topic in this northeast Texas town of about 2,400 between Commerce and Paris. He's the talk of the Dairy Queen, the bank, the high school and the local factory.

"When you're a small town, you don't have a lot of chances to have a big anything," said high school librarian Annell Patterson.

Bam Morris has been big for a while in Cooper. He starred for the Cooper High Bulldogs and won the Doak Walker Award as the nation's top running back as a junior at Texas Tech University.

Last year, Morris signed with the Steelers. Against the Indianapolis Colts, he scored the winning touchdown while covered with defenders. That score, and the Pittsburgh victory, landed his team in Sunday's Super Bowl against the Dallas Cowboys in Tempe, Ariz.

Morris' first name is Byron. But everyone — the mayor, former teachers, current high school students, his parents — just calls him "Bam." And they talk about him as if he were about to walk by at any moment.

That's because he might, they say. A few weeks ago, he was swigging down milkshakes at the local drugstore (where shakes are still made with real ice cream, syrup and milk). And he's not an uncommon sight wandering the halls of the high school, visiting a pep rally or picking up a soda at the convenience store.

"He's always been nice," said Mike Copeland, an electrician who runs an air-conditioning installation business. "He never thought that he was any better than anybody else."

Copeland will be rooting for Dallas on Super Bowl Sunday, Bam or no Bam. But he recognizes how Morris affects Cooper.

"My kids think Bam's just about IT," he said.

Bam is the youngest of 10 children reared by Marie and Marvin Morris. They married when he was 19 and she was 15. Neither graduated from high school. Both worked long hours for long years.

Marvin Morris did carpentry and roofing, ran cattle and drove trucks. Marie Morris worked as a medical aide at the local nursing home for more than 25 years — and attended every local sporting event in which any of her children participated.

The Morris' oldest child is 42.

Bam, at 24, is the youngest. Mrs. Morris picked her baby's big week to publicly correct the tale of how he got his nickname. Over the years, Bam had said an uncle gave him the name after catching him "bamming" another little boy on the head.

Nope, said Mrs. Morris.

That uncle gave all her babies nicknames while they were still in the crib. "Bam" owes more to Bamm Bamm of "The Flintstones" than to any fighting prowess on the part of young Byron, she said.

The Morris children all graduated from high school. Five went on to other schooling. One has a master's degree.

That success makes the people of Cooper just that much more willing to share in the happiness the Morris' are getting from Bam, said Fred Wilkerson, superintendent of Cooper schools for 22 years.

"It's pride, but more than in their athletic ability. It's their character that we stand for and we stress," he said.

Being poor and black in mostly white rural Texas offered particular challenges, Mrs. Morris said. She listed several people in Cooper — a bank loan officer, teachers, friends — who helped the family during their years of struggle.

"I think they're just as excited as we are," she said. "They knew how hard it was to raise them."

The town is planning a reception for the Morris' on Thursday in the school cafeteria, and maybe a nice send-off on the town square Friday morning when nine of them head to Tempe. Mrs. Morris hasn't decided exactly who from her large family will join her and her husband with the nine tickets Bam sent her.

Ron Morris, five years older than Bam, was a wide receiver who played for Southern Methodist University and was drafted by the Chicago Bears in 1987. He played for six years, leading the team in reception yardage in 1989 before blowing out a knee three years ago.

The brothers are featured on a small billboard erected in July at the edge of town: "Cooper Texas," it reads. "The Boyhood Home of, Chicago Bears Ron Morris and Byron Bam Morris Pittsburgh Steelers."

Bam seems to have left figurative footprints all over Cooper (pronounced KUH-per by the natives).

Manton Miller, owner of Miller's Drug Store, chuckled about the time years ago when the boy accidentally knocked out a window. And about the time last month when he showed up with two high school friends, ordered milkshakes and realized he hadn't a dime in his pocket.

J.C. Fisher, a retired salesman, recalled a high school game when Bam came over to his toddler grandson and offered to show the boy his football equipment.

"That just thrilled that little boy to death," Fisher said to smiling nods around the table at the Dairy Queen. The nods became more emphatic as Fisher recalled how, when the game started minutes later, Bam ran past with two or three defenders hanging on him.

At the high school last week, an English class of a dozen senior girls squealed excitedly when asked if they cared about Bam going to the Super Bowl.

"We're his number one fans," said Leslee Zachry, 17, an All-State forward for the Bulldogs' basketball team.

"He's living the dream for a lot of the athletes here," said Judy Falls, one of Bam's former teachers.

"Bam is just like a big brother," said Mashunda Brown, 19, another senior at the school. She repeated a line said by many others in Cooper who tried to explain why they felt so good about the far-away success of one of their own.

"Bam is just Bam," she said.

And Cooper is just Cooper. This has always been a small farming community, city leaders say. Cotton, soybeans, corn, hay and some cattle can be found nearby. The land is flat. When the wind blows hard and cold, as it did one day last week, it blows dust high from the fields.

Many of the storefronts around the town square and nearby streets are empty or boarded up. Some roads are still unpaved. The Dairy Queen is the only fast-food chain in town.

A recent addition — a factory where car starters and alternators are rebuilt — employs about 260 people. A new park offers the chance to pick up tourism dollars from people looking to camp, hunt or fish at nearby Cooper Lake.

The Dallas Cowboys had only been in town for a few minutes Sunday before some reporter asked Aikman whether he still felt he had something to prove after winning two Super Bowls.

"We won a Super Bowl in Pasadena (in 1993), my first Super Bowl," Aikman said. "After the game in that press conference, I was asked what I have left now?"

"I'm 26 years old. It was my fourth year in the league and we've just won the Super Bowl. 'What do you have left to prove?' I laughed at the question because I knew that as long as I continued to play, there would be plenty left to do. And there is."

"But as soon as this game ends, whether we win or lose, it starts all over again," Aikman added. "Nobody really cares about the fact that we won the Super Bowl then. It's 'What are you going to try to do it again next year?' It's a vicious cycle."

HERE'S THE FINAL SCORE: It'll be Dallas 45, Pittsburgh 44. At least, that's what the GTE telecommunications company is predicting.

GTE's Project PASS, which started in 1992, has correctly predicted the winner of the past four Super Bowls. The company picked San Francisco to beat San Diego 46-15 last year. The final score was 49-26.

To come up with its computerized picks, GTE figures in four factors — previous Super Bowl victories, win-loss percentage in the regular season, giveaway-takeaway differential and the ratio of total points scored to total points allowed.

NICE SURROUNDINGS: Emmitt Smith walked into the Arizona Cardinals' practice facility for the first time Monday, and was taken aback.

"I was in awe," Smith said. "It is really, truly a nice facility, and those guys have something to be proud of. But they've got a lot of work to do."

The Cowboys are using the Cardinals' facility to practice for Sunday's Super Bowl.

"To have a facility like that just makes you want to go out and be winners. The owners are definitely believing in those guys and providing them with something special. There are a lot of people in this league, in their locker rooms, they hang their clothes up on nails. I've heard some stories."

"But their (Cardinals) locker room, their facility, has to be, if not the best, then in the top three. Along with ours, it has to be."

NOW FOR A WORD IN SPANISH: For the first time in Super Bowl history, NBC-TV will offer a secondary, foreign-language audio feed to its affiliates in Sunday's game.

The Spanish call of the Super Bowl will be provided by Edgar Zambrano and Paco Cruz, who are the local Spanish-language broadcasters of Arizona Cardinals games.

NBC has offered secondary foreign language feeds six times previously — for the past three NFL seasons, the last two NBA All-Star Games and the 1994 Major League Baseball All-Star Game.

ARE YOU EXPERIENCED?: The NFL Experience, a 20-acre interactive theme park, is expected at least 200,000 people to pass through its gates by the end of its seven-day run.

The event opened last Friday along a dry river bed north of Sun Devil Stadium and drew 73,000 over the three-day weekend, including a record crowd of 28,000 on Sunday.

By comparison, only 60,000 people attended the first NFL Experience in Minneapolis in conjunction with the 1992 Super Bowl. Crowd totals were 125,000 in Pasadena, Calif., in 1993, 140,000 at Atlanta in 1994 and 150,000 at Miami last year.

No. 3 Kansas holds off OU

By CRAIG HORST

AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Ryan Minor's shooting slump put Oklahoma in a hole that was too deep to overcome against Kansas once he found the range.

Minor finished with 22 points, 15 in a furious second half Monday night, but No. 3 Kansas (15-1 overall, 3-0 Big Eight) held on for a 72-66 victory over the Sooners (10-7, 2-3).

"We did everything we could do to stay in the game. We played hard," said Minor, who is carrying the weight of the Sooners on his shoulders.

"They seemed to get all the bounces. A couple of calls here, a couple of bounces there, and we might be in the game at the end."

Minor, who has made just 30 percent of his field-goal attempts in Big Eight games and 39 percent in all games, was 3-for-17 on Saturday when the Sooners were defeated by Kansas State in a rare loss on their home court.

He missed four of his six attempts in the first half against Kansas before he almost single-handedly rallied the Sooners back in the second half.

"For a team like this, you have to hope somebody steps up," said Minor, who seemed to grow increasingly frustrated as things started to go bad in the first half.

"I tried to step up. I don't know what it is. Maybe it's a concentration thing. I did the best I could to spark my team."

In the only other game involving a ranked team Monday night, No. 8 Virginia Tech defeated St. Bonaventure 65-58.

Kansas used a 15-4 run late in the first half to surge to a 39-28 lead. But the Jayhawks couldn't finish off Oklahoma until the final moments of the game.

Minor finished by making five of his last seven field-goal attempts and seven of nine free throws.

"Their (inside) guys are huge," Minor said. "They are fundamentally sound. When they get the ball inside, they are either going to score or you are going to foul them. It raises your level of play sometimes."

Kansas' 6-foot-10 inside players, Scot Pollard and Raef LaFrentz, combined for 27 points and 20 rebounds. Pollard had 15 points and nine rebounds and LaFrentz 12 points and 11 rebounds.

"I thought we did a good job in the first half of rebounding and controlling the tempo, not just defensively, but offensively as well," Pollard said. "We played the way we wanted to."

The Jayhawks kept throwing defensive players at Minor, alternating Jerod Haase, Paul Pierce and even point guard Jacques Vaughn on him in man-to-man defense.

"We just gave him different looks," Vaughn said. "First it was Jerod, then Paul, and even I was on him for awhile."

"I think the challenge is what I desire, and that brings out the best in me."

Pollard fouled out of the game by fouling Minor with 3:59 left, and Minor made both free throws to pull the Sooners to a 66-56 deficit.

A 3-pointer by Tyrone Foster with about three minutes left made it 66-59.

But Vaughn, who had 11 assists, lofted an alley-oop pass to LaFrentz for a dunk for a 68-59 lead with just over two minutes left, and time began to run out on the Sooners.

Allen Field House worked its magic again for a Kansas team that had won its first two league games on the road.

"It's early, but we're happy to be in that position," Vaughn said. "To get two road wins and then to protect our turf is a good sign for us."
