Clinton lays out fine print

President submits $1.5 trillion 1994 budget

Plan weighs heaviest on wealthy

By Jill Lawrence
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Clinton budget has a dash of sweet — and some sourness as well — for groups across the spectrum of America, ranging from westerners and students to veterans and construction workers.

Almost everyone would pay new taxes, but the burden is heaviest on the affluent. Children do better than the elderly under the Clinton scheme, and scientists would fare better than doctors.

The broadest tax increase, and the only one that directly affects the vast middle class, is the administration's proposed tax

■ Blueprint boosts taxes on rich, slashes military spending.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton unveiled his $1.52 trillion budget on Thursday, a blueprint for 1994 that boosts taxes on the rich and slashes military spending to break the government's deficit-spending habit.

The budget, thick as a fist, fleshes out the skeleton plan that the new president released in February. The biggest change is that the amount of deficit reduction — $447 billion in five years — is slightly lower than what Clinton initially announced.

Clinton's budget projects spending $1.52 trillion for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1. That increase — 3.2 percent over current spending — essentially keeps pace with

Defense tries to cut impact of confession

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Defense attorneys continued their apparent attempt to show that a 21-year-old man on trial for the Nov. 13, 1991, capital murder of a church secretary gave a false confession.

On Thursday, jurors in Judge John Hyde's 238th District Court listened to a Dec. 9, 1991, statement in which Curtis Dean Purser said he acted only as a lookout for the sole killer.

Two days earlier, the prosecution played an April 15, 1992, recording in which Purser said he stabbed 28-year-old Brenda Branch twice at the office of the Living Way Foursquare Church.

Evidence has shown that Mrs. Branch had been stabbed 36 times and her pants pulled down. She was discovered about 11:20 a.m. by the church pastor, who left her about an hour earlier to run errands.

The day after the crime, police arrested Gearld Benjamin Kelly, who had a past conviction for robbery of a church secretary.

Kelly, 22, made a plea agreement two months ago and was sentenced to life in prison for capital murder, which can be punishable by the death penalty.

During the few weeks following the murder/robbery, Purser was viewed as a potential witness by the District Attorney's Office, testimony showed.

After making the Dec. 9, 1991, statement to J.D. Luckie, chief criminal investigator for the District Attorney's Office, Purser became a suspect also, testimony indicated.

And Purser became a capital murder defendant after the confession four months later. Luckie testified that Purser was knowledgeable of elements of the crime scene that only someone

North Texas man pockets a cool million

Midlander picks five of six in Lotto

By Darren J. Waggoner

Jerry Robbins had an odd feeling Wednesday that his number was coming up. All but one did.

Even so, his failure to pick the final number in the Lotto Texas pick-six game — the integer that would have made him a multi-millionaire — hasn't dampened his spirit.

No indeed, Robbins — a 42-year-old lifetime Midland resident — is a self-described hard-core lottery player with a $60 a week habit.

And he still won $770 for correctly selecting 2,4,7,9 and 14. The odd number out was — oddly enough — 12.

He earned an additional $166 for picking four numbers on two other tickets.

ODESSA — Doyle Norton didn't say much as he waited to see if he would be the state's next millionaire.

And, he didn't say much after he became the state's newest and youngest millionaire.

The only thing that changed was the expression on the 24-year-old's face, which went from nervous anticipation to dazed amazement.

"This is great," he said, moments after opening a safe containing $1 million Thursday. "I can't believe it has happened."

Prosecutor calls officers brutes; sacrificial lambs, defense says

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A prosecutor portrayed four policemen Thursday as pitiless brutes who inflicted street justice on Rodney King. But a defense lawyer called them "sacrificial lambs" and suggested King was to blame for last year's riots.

During closing arguments in the officers' federal trial, Assistant U.S. Attorney Steven Clymer said the four went "far beyond" the force necessary to arrest King. "These defendants taught Rodney King a lesson," Clymer said. He added that they concocted elaborate lies to cover up their misdeeds.

King was clubbed, kicked and shocked with an electric stun gun after police chased and stopped his speeding car on March 3, 1991. A neighbor's videotape of the beating was broadcast worldwide. When the officers were acquitted of most charges in a state trial

Shell, Exxon to redevelop largest field in North Sea

By Anne Pearson
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Shell and Exxon have announced a $2 billion redevelopment plan for the huge Brent field that would add a decade to the life of the North Sea oil and gas field and unlock large amounts of new gas reserves.

The redevelopment, which begins this year and should be completed in 1998, should allow the two companies to recover an extra 34 million barrels of oil and 1.5 trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

Brent is the North Sea's largest oil and gas field, providing 13 percent of the United Kingdom's oil supply and 10 percent of its gas. Oil from the Brent field is the benchmark North Sea crude.

Brent was discovered in 1971. The first oil production came in

Sunny skies, 80s to reappear

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the lower 80s and southwest winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be clear with a low in the mid-40s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should be sunny with a high near 90.

After an overnight low of 50, Thursday's high reached 72, compared to the record high for that date of 93 set in 1989. The record low was 28 set in 1938.

STATE

After a day of varied conditions ranging from clear skies to snowfall, today should be clear with average temperatures.

South Texas got rid of a rain-producing cold front Thursday afternoon, sending it eastward out of the state.

But the region won't be safe for long as an upper level disturbance coming from the west triggered showers and a few thunderstorms along the Rio Grande River from near Del Rio to Eagle Pass.

Otherwise, skies were fair with northerly winds producing midday readings between 66 at Junction to 81 at McAllen.

The forecast calls for scattered showers overnight with otherwise fair skies through Friday. Lows will be in the 40s and 50s with today's highs in the 70s and 80s.

In West Texas, snow fell for about an hour early Thursday afternoon in the Guadalupe National Park, though none accumulated.

There also were scattered showers and a few thunderstorms over portions of the Permian Basin.

NATION

Heavy rain continued to fall Thursday in the lower Mississippi Valley, prompting flood warnings in several states.

A flash flood watch was posted for the afternoon over south-central and southeast Louisiana, where up to 4 inches of rain had fallen since Wednesday.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

TRIAL: Jury hears statement by defendant

(From 1A)

there would know.

In addition to the confession, the prosecution has linked Purser to the crime through his hair, which closely matches one found on the body of the victim.

The defense has made clear that all other crime scene evidence — including a bite on the victim's neck, a bloody boot print, and DNA tests — point to Kelly.

And Kelly, in his plea agreement, stated that the crime was committed with Purser.

The defense called Kelly to testify Wednesday in hopes he would reiterate alleged earlier statements that Purser was not involved. Kelly, who could not refuse to testify because he cannot self-incriminate himself because of the plea agreement, refused to testify.

By the end of the day, the judge found Kelly in contempt of court 21 times as a result.

After the jury went home on Thursday, the judge listened to arguments on whether a former prisoner who spoke to Kelly in February could testify for the defense.

Kelly said Purser "was nowhere around ... the crime," testified Donald Phiffer, 24, who was in jail for revocation of probation for forgery.

Kelly "told me they'd met a few weeks before. ... He (Kelly) basically said he needed some place to point the finger," Phiffer testified in the jury's absent.

To challenge the credibility of those statements, a jailer testified, with the jury absent, that in that same month Kelly said he "was going to mess up the Purser trial. He (Kelly) said he was going to testify that Purser wasn't even present."

District Attorney Al Schorre then took the stand and said he also talked to Kelly in February, a few days after the plea agreement.

Kelly said he and Purser went to the church to rob, confronted Mrs. Branch and escorted her down a hall at knife-point, according to Schorre's testimony.

Kelly said he went to look in the bathroom because he heard running water and when he emerged Purser was brutally stabbing the woman, Schorre said.

Kelly said he cut his hand when he grabbed Purser to stop, Schorre said.

To counter the prosecution's hearsay, lead defense attorney Matthew Blair testified that he spoke to Kelly on Wednesday. Kelly said he lied about Purser's involvement to get the plea agreement, Blair said.

Kelly said another man killed Mrs. Branch and Kelly wore a hat that belonged to Purser, Blair testified.

The defense implied that the hat explains Purser's hair at the crime scene, although an expert testified that the hair was forcefully broken. In Purser's confession, he said Mrs. Branch hit him in the head.

The judge will decide whether Phiffer will be able to testify about the jail conversation on Monday when the trial continues.

FIELD: Redevelopment to begin this year

(From 1A)

1976, and gas production followed in 1982.

Production from Brent peaked in 1986 at about 416,000 barrels of oil per day, but it is expected to average just 219,000 barrels per day this year. The field is yielding about 500 million cubic feet of gas per day as well.

Shell spokesman David Stewart said Tuesday the project won't arrest the daily production rate decline, but it will extend the life of the field a decade beyond its original estimated play-out of 1998.

When the construction program is complete in 1998, Shell estimates daily oil production will be down to about 165,000 barrels per day.

Shell and Exxon hope to unlock the additional reserves through a technique that is not totally new, but has never been used on such a large scale, industry experts say. It is new to the North Sea.

"In the case of Brent, redevelopment is a daunting task, far more difficult than developing a new field," said Chris Fay, managing director of Shell U.K. Exploration and Production.

The companies will halt water floods that have been used for years to maintain the pressure in the oil- and gas-bearing reservoir and allow the reservoir pressure to drop substantially.

That pressure drop should allow the companies to recover large quantities of natural gas that are locked under high pressure in oil that is unlikely to be recovered under the current production method, company officials explained.

The price tag is huge because Exxon and Shell must replace the processing and handling equipment that is designed for higher pressures.

Natural gas expands under lower pressure, and new storage facilities must be added to handle the larger volumes.

Machinery also must be installed to recompress the gas before it goes into a pipeline.

Shell, the operator of the Brent field, estimates that the redevelopment project will increase the ultimate recovery to 1.98 billion barrels of oil, 5.5 trillion cubic feet of natural gas and 620 million barrels of natural gas liquids.

Three of the field's four production platforms will be outfitted with new processing facilities. One of those platforms also will receive new living quarters.

Stewart said only one platform will be shut down at a time, and each one should take about a year to renovate.

To date, Shell and Exxon have invested the equivalent of $4.5 billion to develop the Brent field.

KING: Attorneys present closing arguments

last year, three days of deadly rioting ensued.

Clymer replayed the videotape, urging jurors to watch it repeatedly during their deliberations and to convict all four officers of violating King's civil rights.

Defense lawyer Ira Salzman told jurors that the officers were denied a tool to subdue suspects when the police department restricted use of the controversial chokehold but never replaced it with another technique.

"These sacrificial lambs are foisted on the public altar of justice to pay for negligence" by police management, Salzman said.

Salzman said King was headed for Hansen Dam, a place he had visited in childhood, when he was stopped for speeding. "Because of that, people died. People lost their homes because someone wanted to go to Hansen Dam without interruption," Salzman said.

He said King accused the officers of racial epithets to inflame jurors. "This case has never been about race," Salzman insisted.

King, who is black, testified during the federal trial that the officers, who are white, uttered racial slurs when they beat him. But under cross-examination, King said he wasn't sure they used racial epithets.

Clymer's and Salzman's summations lasted about three hours each, pushing back the other three defense lawyers' closing arguments and government rebuttal to Friday and possibly delaying the judge's instructions to the jury until Saturday. U.S. District Judge John G. Davies has said he and the jury would work through the weekend if necessary.

During his summation, Clymer called Officer Theodore Briseno a coward who stomped King "to become one of the boys."

He accused Officer Laurence Powell of pummeling King excessively, bashing in his face, then filing a false report. He denounced Officer Timothy Wind for kicking the helpless King as he lay beaten on the ground, then lying about it. He depicted Sgt. Stacey Koon as abandoning his duty to stop the beating.

"The defendants tried Rodney King at Foothill and Osborne (boulevards) with Stacey Koon as judge and Powell, Briseno and Wind as the executioners," Clymer said. "And they found him guilty."

Clymer said the officers punished King for being "disrespectful" and wouldn't stop until he begged for mercy.

"When Rodney King begged them to stop, they accomplished their mission," Clymer said. "That's what they wanted all along. ... What they did to Rodney King violated the constitution as well as LAPD policy."

Clymer reminded jurors of the pain and injuries described by King on the stand but said he offered no excuses for the motorist, who has admitted he was drunk and driving too fast the night of the beating.

"He's no angel," Clymer said. "But he's not a monster, a hulk or a Tasmanian devil," descriptions used by Koon. "He's a human being."

"We are asking you as members of our community to apply the Constitution in this case," Clymer said. "You have to decide what police officers have a right to do and if what you see on the videotape is reasonable."

SINGER: Music great Marian Anderson dies

(From 1A)

to entertain at the White House and the first black to sing a major role with the Metropolitan Opera in New York.

Her 1939 concert at the Lincoln Memorial epitomized her long struggle against racial discrimination, a breakthrough achievement that helped bring the nation together.

Her musical ability helped break down the walls of prejudice much as the athletic prowess of Jesse Owens, Joe Louis and Jackie Robinson led to tremendous gains for black people, the Rev. Jesse Jackson said.

"Beyond her extraordinary singing talents, she was a source of light and hope in one of the dark periods of American history," he said.

"She helped soothe the savage in us in the face of the ill winds of fascism. She represented a fresh breath of hope and spring."

The Lincoln Memorial concert came about when the Daughters of the American Revolution refused to rent her Constitution Hall in Washington, claiming the date was already taken.

Eleanor Roosevelt thought Miss Anderson was a victim of discrimination, resigned from the group and arranged for her to sing at the shrine. The audience of 75,000 was the largest public tribute since Charles Lindbergh returned from France a decade before.

"She was grateful that she was able to make a difference, but her goal in life was really to make music, and when that opportunity was denied, there was the outrage of a nation, rather than her outrage," DePreist said.

"She was not bitter about it and never exploited it."

Miss Anderson, who sang professionally at 12 to help her family following the death of her father, scaled the heights of the music world with a voice that evoked an emotional response from her audience. She helped dispel the myth that blacks could not excel in classical music.

Her Lincoln Memorial program included "America," the aria "O mio Fernando," Schubert's "Ave Maria" and the spirituals "Gospel Train," "Trampin'" and "My Soul Is Anchored in the Lord."

She told the racially mixed audience: "I can't tell you what you have done for me today. I thank you from the bottom of my heart, again and again."

As her career wound down, she regretted all doors had not been open during her prime.

"If I only could give what I had to offer then. But they wouldn't accept it, or me," she said. "Other Negroes will have the career I dreamed of."

Born in Philadelphia, she began singing at 3 and joined her church's junior choir three years later. At 8, she earned her first money as a singer — 50 cents. Her father was a coal and ice dealer. Her mother, a schoolteacher, lived until age 89.

In 1925, she was chosen from 300 singers to appear with the New York Philharmonic. With financial support from fellowships, she studied in Europe in the late 1920s.

In 1933, a Berlin promoter arranged a concert for a $500 fee. Success was instantaneous and before returning home she performed across Europe and for the kings of Sweden and Denmark.

LOTTERY: N. Texas man wins

(From 1A)

Community College in Mesquite, won the money in the Texas Lottery Millionaire Grand Prize Drawing at the Holiday Inn Centre in Odessa.

Finalists for the $1 million drawing were selected March 30 from ENTRY tickets for the "Lone Star Millions" or "Texas Match Up" games or from Lucky Lone Star tickets from the "Lone Star Millionaire" game.

The seven finalists in the drawing were narrowed down as each picked a hat with a number, then waited as a machine containing seven ping-pong balls decided how much money they would win.

It came down to Norton and 65-year-old Aubrey Taylor of Rusk. Each stood in front of one of two vault doors, one containing $50,000 and the other $1 million. The standing-room-only crowd counted down, the men opened the doors and Norton, who instantly became a millionaire, tossed his cowboy hat, the symbol for the Texas Lottery, into the air.

Hugged and congratulated moments later by his parents, Glynn and Pauline Norton, Norton said he really didn't know what to say except that he was happy.

"I've been nervous for the past week," he said. "But, I'm a lot more nervous now. This is great, just great."

Part of his winnings will go to his 6-year-old nephew, who scratched off Norton's winning entry.

"I told him I would split the $1 million with him, but he just said he wanted $100 for a Sega Genesis," Norton said. "I'm going to take him and my niece shopping."

The rest will go in the bank and he will keep his job with a lawn service and stay in college.

"I'm going to try to be sensible about it," Norton said.

As for playing the lottery again, the state's newest millionaire said he probably won't be spending any of his winnings on lottery tickets.

"I might as well quit while I'm ahead," he said.

Other finalists in Thursday's contest were Taylor, who won $50,000; Eve Vela of Pasadena, who won $25,000; Gale Nettle of Austin and Mary Patrick of Dallas, who each won $15,000; and Jeff Wood and Raymond Robinson, both of Houston, who won $10,000 each.

PICK: Man selects five of six lent numerical combinations a week since the pick-six game started on Nov. 14, Robbins said he doesn't plan to stop until he hits the jackpot.

"You can feel it when you're gonna hit and I'll keep on doing it until I do," said Robbins, a semi-retired operator of Area Presort Mail. "I had that feeling this time but I was off."

His million-dollar strategy?

"I play in sections. You have to cut off 30 numbers or so either at the top, the bottom or in the middle," he said. "You've got to make the odds better. It's the only way we know to win. And I'm a lucky guy."

BUDGET: Blueprint boosts taxes on rich, cuts military funds

inflation.

Before he left office, President Bush put forward a document assuming the same amount of spending for next year. But he was prepared to seek fewer defense cuts, tax increases and spending boosts than Clinton proposed.

Clinton's economic battle plan hews closely to the philosophy he campaigned on last year: more money for low-income students and other initiatives to bolster the economy and create jobs, and an attack on federal red ink led by higher taxes on the rich, energy users and higher income Social Security recipients. These changes would still have to be enacted in legislation.

"The plan flows from the demand of the American people for change and my vision of what America can be if we embark upon an economic strategy of investing in people and putting people first," Clinton wrote to Congress.

"Achieving this change will not be easy, but the cost of not changing is far greater."

Republicans scoffed that in fact, Clinton was merely bowing to Democratic Party dogma.

"It's pretty much what they promised — more taxes, more spending," said Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

"Far from being bold or bringing real change to government that Americans voted for, this budget is nothing more than a return to the failed policies of the past — higher taxes on everyone, more federal spending and bigger government," said Rep. John Kasich of Ohio, ranking Republican on the House Budget Committee.

With record speed, majority Democrats have already whipped a deficit-reduction outline through Congress. It closely tracks Clinton's thinking. Over five years, it would cut deficit spending by $67 billion more than the president proposed.

Combined, the two plans would produce $514 billion in budget cuts by 1998, exceeding the nearly $500 billion that the 1990 budget summit planned over five years.

The $447 billion in reductions Clinton proposed relies on $296 billion in tax increases, one of the biggest revenue boosts in history; $108 billion in defense and domestic program cuts, and $43 billion in lowered interest payments on the national debt.

To save money, the military would reduce its active force of nearly 2 million troops by 108,000. Cuts would be made in support payments to farmers, law enforcement grants to local governments, NASA's efforts to fly to Mars and Medicare payments to doctors and hospitals.

But along with these reductions were spending bonuses for other initiatives. The Head Start program for pre-school children, federal anti-drug efforts, road-building, and aid to communities hurt by military cuts would all grow.

As a result, Clinton now said his budget would leave a 1994 budget shortfall of $264 billion, down from an anticipated record this year of $322 billion.

The red ink is expected to drop to $214 billion in 1997, but balloon again to $250 billion in 1998, due to the rapidly growing costs of Medicare, Medicaid and other government health-care programs. The administration plans to complete its package for containing medical costs next month.

With such gargantuan deficits, Clinton plans to spend $212 billion next year — and evermore afterward — to pay interest on the federal debt. That's nearly one dollar of every seven going to holders of Treasury notes.

Clinton's budget arrived just three days after his controversial jobs bill was stalled in the Senate by a Republican filibuster.

That standoff raised questions about the prospects for Clinton's tax hikes and spending proposals.

"Much remains to be done," Clinton conceded in his message to lawmakers.

And that remaining work doesn't only involve battling defiant Republicans.

For one thing, what Clinton calls his "investment" plan would boost spending, on everything from airport runways to teaching disabled children, by more than $160 billion over the next five years.

But Clinton's proposals would exceed spending caps in Congress' budget by $19 billion in 1994 and 1995. This means that to keep his spending proposals intact, the president and lawmakers will have to cut other domestic programs by the same amount.

PLAN: Budget falls heaviest on the affluent

on the heat content of various fuels. It's expected to take a $17 monthly bite from families with annual incomes of $40,000.

The administration's biggest argument about the proposed fiscal 1994 budget is that it is fair.

"It asks every American to contribute to our economic future: senior citizen, federal workers, doctors, hospitals, farmers, the wealthy, everyone," said budget director Leon Panetta.

The balance could change in future months and years as the administration makes decisions on health-care reform, agriculture subsidies and weapons systems. These decisions will affect senior citizens, doctors, farmers and defense workers.

The proposal on the table, considered reasonably equitable by most analysts, nevertheless signals some early winners and losers.

More than half the new taxes would be paid by those with annual incomes above $200,000. At various points above $140,000, people would be hit with a 5-percentage point increase in their income tax rate, a 10 percent surtax and higher Medicare taxes. Many also would lose breaks on business-related meals, entertainment and club dues.

Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen sought Thursday to minimize the impact of the energy tax on taxpayers.

"If they refinanced their home mortgage, they would have saved several times that every month," he said, referring to the low general interest rates that have set off a wave of refinancing.

On the spending side, the Clinton plan tilts toward low-income children with more dollars for Head Start, immunizations, nutrition programs and federal efforts to remove lead-based paint from schools.

Low-income families would benefit as well from increases in the earned income tax credit, migrant health services and a program that helps people pay fuel bills. Veterans would see an extra $1 billion poured into their health-care system. And more would be spent on women's health research and services for AIDS victims.

But older people with moderate incomes — $25,000 and up — could be stung.

Cost control, a central element of the health reform plan due this spring, is also a factor in the 1994 budget.

Doctors, hospitals, labs and pharmaceutical companies will be hit as the administration squeezes more than $3 billion in Medicare and Medicaid savings from their reimbursements.

Among other professionals, scientists stand to gain from a 7 percent increase in the budget for the National Science Foundation, which gives out research grants.

World Court orders Yugoslavia to halt 'crime of genocide'

THE HAGUE — The International Court of Justice urged Yugoslavia Thursday to assure that any forces it controls in Bosnia and Herzegovina do not violate the 1948 convention banning genocide. The World Court suggested, but did not explicitly assert, that Yugoslavia has been supporting Serbian bands fighting in Bosnia. Yugoslavia denies this, and a Yugoslav diplomat repeated the denial after the verdict Thursday.

Although Bosnia, which filed the complaint that led to the verdict, won an implicit condemnation of Yugoslavia, it failed to persuade the court to take immediate compensatory action. Bosnia had asked the Court to exempt it from the U.N. arms embargo against republics of the former Yugoslavia, and to order the Belgrade government to pay reparations for war damages.

The court's president, Sir Robert Jennings, a Briton, read the judgment in the ornate chamber. Its heart was a single paragraph couched in relatively strong legal language. It said:

"The government of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia should in particular insure that any military, paramilitary or irregular armed units which may be directed or supported by it, as well as organizations and persons which may be subject to its control, direction or influence, do not commit any acts of genocide, or conspiracy to commit genocide, or direct any public incitement to commit genocide, or of complicity in genocide, whether directed against the Muslim population of Bosnia and Herzegovina or against any other national, ethnical, racial or religious group."

Francis A. Boyle, a University of Illinois law professor who presented Bosnia's case, called the judgment "an overwhelming victory" and "a solid verdict in favor of Bosnia-Herzegovina and against the rump Yugoslavia."

"This should have a profound impact on governments of the entire world," Boyle said. The court, which is the principal judicial organ of the U.N., has no enforcement powers, but its judgments often influence public and diplomatic opinion.

If the judgment increases diplomatic support for Bosnia, Boyle said, Bosnian diplomats at the U.N. may begin new efforts to win an end to the arms embargo. He also said Bosnia would seek a Security Council resolution ordering the Belgrade government to pay war reparations.

Yugoslavia's charge d'affaires in the Hague, Ljubinko Zivkovic, who helped present his country's case to the court, said he did not consider the judgment a defeat.

Many zoo animals display signs of mental illness, survey shows

LONDON (AP) — A bulimic gorilla, a psychotic baboon, a self-mutilating bear. Not the sorts of furry creatures people hope to see at the zoo.

Yet according to a survey conducted by Britain's Born Free Foundation, mental illness is rampant among zoo animals.

The foundation, a charity that monitors animals in capitivity, did not calculate the numbers of animals affected compared with the total number of animals monitored, which concerns skeptics.

But in a telephone interview, the researchers said their examples represent a global problem.

"The most important thing was the same species displayed the same abnormal behavior in zoos worldwide," said William Travers, the director of the study.

"Our evidence confirms that deprived of their natural environment, social structures and outlets for many of the skills for which they have naturally evolved, animals exhibit abnormal behavior."

Most experts agree that caged animals pick up peculiar habits, but not all consider this behavior a sign of insanity.

The border between sanity and mental illness is fuzzy among humans, and even blurrier among non-humans. Scientists do not know how or even if animals think. If they do, what's normal?

"The important thing is that most of these behaviors have a germ of normality in them, but in capitivity become obsessive," he said. "That's when we start to be concerned," said Travers.

Workers try to clean up nuclear spill

MOSCOW (AP) — Hundreds of disaster workers cleared snow and built dams in the Siberian wilderness Thursday in an effort to clean up the radiation from Russia's worst nuclear accident since Chernobyl.

Commonwealth Television showed heavy damage at the nuclear weapons complex in the secret city of Tomsk-7, where an underground tank containing a poisonous mix of liquid nuclear waste exploded and burned on Tuesday.

The roof and several walls of the complex's plutonium processing facility were destroyed in the blast, which spewed a radioactive cloud into the atmosphere.

The Russian Air Defense Command said the wind was blowing the radioactive cloud northeast from Tomsk-7 at a height of 1.2 miles and a speed of 22 mph, according to the television. There were conflicting reports about the extent of the contamination and the cloud.

A shift supervisor at the Tomsk-7 plutonium processing plant, meanwhile, blamed the accident on poor work discipline, a report said.

Although no evacuations were ordered and officials said the contaminated areas were unpopulated, the Russian government called it the worst nuclear accident since the April 1986 explosion and fire at the Chernobyl atomic power plant in Ukraine.

That accident rated a 7 on the International Atomic Energy Association's seven-point scale, while the Tomsk-7 accident rated a 3.

At the complex, workers in masks measured radiation in the area, while more than 500 firefighters and civil defense troops cleared away contaminated snow and dirt.

The environmental group Greenpeace said several villages were at risk from fallout, and called for the immediate shutdown of the plant.

But Marina Ryklina, a spokeswoman for the government's State Emergency Committee, said the radiation level in Georgiyevka, a village of 20 people about 14 miles from Tomsk-7, was 0.035 roentgens an hour, and did not warrant evacuation.

The initial radiation from Chernobyl was about 200 roentgens an hour.

A roentgen is a measure of the human body's exposure to radiation. The radiation dose considered acceptable for nuclear workers is 2 roentgens per year.

Report: Demand increases for child, teen prostitutes

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Doctors, police officers and social workers accustomed to dealing with sexual abuse are reporting a troubling phenomenon: children and adolescents are increasingly in demand as prostitutes because clients see them as "safer" and likely to be free of AIDS.

In the brothels of Manila and Bangkok, the port district of Rio de Janeiro and the backrooms of Frankfurt, pimps hawk the services of children as young as 8 to 13 years old by emphasizing that they are "clean," experts reported here recently at a conference organized by UNESCO on "the sex trade and human rights."

Customers are willing to pay far more for very young girls or boys who are described as virgins or whose youth suggests innocence, they said, and most of the children are kept working secretly to avoid attracting attention from the authorities.

"Since the massive arrival of businessmen from Japan, Hong Kong, Taiwan, the sex business is rising," said Dr. Duong Quynh Hoa, director of a pediatric hospital in Ho Chi Minh City, Vietnam. "The customers are afraid of AIDS. So there is a high price on virginity. The procurers are going after children 10 or 11 or 12 years old."

Specialists seeking to curb the sexual exploitation of children, including police officials, lawyers and social workers, said at the conference that the demand for child prostitutes was increasing for varying reasons in different parts of the world, and not simply because of fear of AIDS. But they agreed that the global AIDS epidemic was a major factor.

The experts also pointed to pornography, peep shows, "sex tours" and other products of the multibillion-dollar sex industry, which they said have normalized the open buying and selling of sex and have eroded taboos against sexual exploitation of children.

Cities hold key to tourist safety

Americans and Germans alike should be repulsed by the violence in Florida that has been directed at German tourists. Crimes such as the brutal slaying of a German woman who was robbed and then run over by a car last Friday should outrage all people who believe that all human beings have a basic right to be protected from criminals.

The principle is imbedded in the United States Constitution, but it is guaranteed by local — not federal — officials.

That's why the call by Florida Gov. Lawton Chiles for federal assistance in quelling the upsurge in attacks against foreign visitors is totally out of place. Where are the local Miami police? Why aren't they doing their job? And if they feel they truly need help in stopping these attacks, where are the Florida state police? Why throw the problem in Uncle Sam's lap?

Certainly one can argue that foreign visitors should be aware that crime exists in states like Florida and cities like Miami, and that they essentially come to these areas at their own risk.

But that having been noted, Chiles also must concede that if foreign visitors are taking an exceptional risk in visiting Miami, that city's own citizens must be living daily amid an unacceptably high crime potential.

Chiles and the mayors of Florida's cities have no one to blame the problem on but themselves. It is up to the local citizenry in every community in this nation to take the necessary steps to make their cities safe. Passing the buck to Uncle Sam won't resolve local problems. If anything it will result in a loss of local control to officials who should not be involved in the local situation. The tragedy in always looking to Uncle Sam to fix all our problems is that in giving up a measure of our independence, we also give up some of our rights.

Florida's cities should make themselves safe environs for foreign visitors — and for the people who call them home. That's the only way to achieve peace of mind; Uncle Sam can't manufacture it.

When Chiles wants to find the person to hand this problem to, he only need look in the mirror.

Turkey, Greece fight over ins at Capitol

WASHINGTON — At a recent White House reception to honor Greek Independence Day, President Clinton was in a joking mood.

"You might argue that I could have a reverse affirmative action suit for the over-representation of Greeks on the White House staff," cracked the president, who counts five Greek-Americans as close advisers.

Anderson

Across town at the Turkish Embassy, nobody was laughing.

The fact is that White House Communications Director George Stephanopoulos, a Greek-American, has sparked a war of words between the Greek and Turkish Embassies. It's much different than any of the bloody wars that have plagued relations between the two countries for centuries, but it's a thorny issue nontheless.

After being romanced by Republican presidents for the last 12 years, Turkey has reason to fear that a Democrat in the White House will be tougher on the country's sorry record of human-rights abuses. But any suggestions that Stephanopoulos is behind such a change seem groundless.

One prominent Greek-American lobbyist told us, for example, that word has spread throughout the Greek community that "the Turks have been taking shots at George" since the campaign.

One top official at the Greek Embassy traces that proliferation of rumors to last October, when the Clinton campaign released a statement to the Greek-American community declaring that the United States. "has a moral obligation as well as a national security interest to see that (Turkey's) illegal occupation of Cyprus comes to an end."

"The Greek Embassy should know that we want to promote a good relationship between Turkey and Greece," said one high official at the Turkish Embassy.

The normally stoic Stephanopoulos erupted emotionally when we took the dispute to him. "Look, I'm an American," he said. Stephanopoulos added that foreign policy-making was not his job, and that he works "for the president" and not the Greek lobby.

Shortly after the election, one Turkish tabloid's lead headline consisted of a four-letter expletive directed at Clinton for his Cyprus comment. Greek sources say that their Turkish counterparts and some Turkish media then baptized Bill Clinton as "Clintonopoulos."

Greek officials also assert that the Turks threw a tantrum when Turkish President Turgut Ozal came to Washington less than a week after Clinton's inauguration for a series of engagements, including a medical checkup and meetings with Turkish-American groups.

Then Stephanopoulos told reporters at a regular morning meeting that Clinton would not be able to see Ozal because he was "busy working on the economy and other issues." He also accurately noted that custom dictated that a new American president meet face-to-face with the Canadian leader, in this case Prime Minister Brian Mulroney. Stephanopoulos' explanation rubbed salt in the Turkish wound.

The Clinton administration finally scheduled the Mulroney meeting, removing the obstacles for a Feb. 8 Ozal meeting. But that didn't placate everyone. It seems that even journalists from the two nations are at odds.

But one Greek correspondent told us: "(Stephanopoulos is) accessible to us when we need him. He goes to all the Greek-American functions, and he snacks at the (local) Greek restaurants."

CHARLEY REESE

War is murder with certain rules to follow

What is the difference between lining up 100 women and children and shooting them with rifles and dropping a bomb on the same 100 women and children?

Morally, I see no difference. Dead is dead, murder is murder, and the method of killing is irrelevant. That's why outside of the fog of war and war propaganda, we don't even attempt to make such silly distinctions.

Reese

I have never heard of a criminal defense lawyer plead for mercy on the basis of the method his client employed in killing the victim.

It's a good point to remember when politicians start talking about war crimes, as if war itself were not a crime against humanity and as if all the participants, including the politicians who start them, were not equally guilty.

I no longer even believe in the concept of a just war. I don't think there is any such thing. .

For example, when the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor, they bombed only military targets — the fleet and the airfields. By the time we had fought our way to Japan, however, we were bombing Japanese cities. We were deliberately killing Japanese non-combatants. Thus, even though we had been attacked and were justified in responding, the process of war corrupted us, for war is a brutalizing experience.

We became as savage and as merciless as everyone else in that war. In the name of winning, any act of cruelty can be rationalized and usually is. I can't see any moral difference between gassing people and burning them with a nuclear fireball. And don't kid yourself. If the Japanese government had not surrendered, we would have kept on killing and those of us at home, including me, would have kept on cheering and applauding every fireball and mushroom cloud.

Thus, even pursuing survival, can be morally ruinous. One might paraphrase a biblical expression, what does it profit a man to survive and lose his soul? Maybe that's what the pacifists figured out a long time ago — that this murderous part of ourselves has to be kept chained for the sake of our souls.

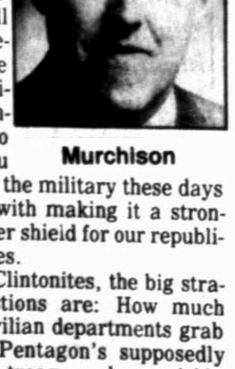

In the Gulf War we killed more Iraqi civilians than the Iraqis killed Kuwaitis during their invasion and occupation. The only distinctions between the killings are legalistic, not moral. Well, it was bad for the Iraqi to kill this Kuwaiti mother, because the U.N. does not approve of it, but it is okay for the U.S. to kill this Iraqi mother because the U.N. approves of it. I seriously doubt either the Kuwaiti or the Iraqi victims of the war give a damn about such rationalizations.

Clintonites tamper with military, nature

Don't we get to wondering sometimes what a military is for? To defend America's interests against foreign foes? To further the cause of social justice? Or, in some novel and interesting way, to do both things at once?

Murchison

The latter possibility seems the right one, as the Clintonites and their Capitol Hill friends decamouflage their military agenda. Next to nothing you hear about the military these days has to do with making it a stronger, sturdier shield for our republican liberties.

For the Clintonites, the big strategic questions are: How much can the civilian departments grab from the Pentagon's supposedly bottomless treasury; how quickly can we thrust women into combat roles; how efficiently can we open military service to professed homosexuals? The Roman empire, in its latter days, was not this wacky. At least the Romans granted the proximity of barbarians (the Greek term for foreigners) who could be counted on to take a dim view of Rome's independence and prosperity.

Our trouble today, to some extent, is a lack of obvious barbarians, the Russians having resigned their long-playing role. The Clintonites don't seem unduly concerned that other barbarians might come along to threaten us: in which event, we might be unprepared to resist them effectively, present military trends being what they are.

Here's the Navy, suggesting combat roles for women. How in the name of John Paul Jones is this supposed to enhance combat readiness? There is now, as there always has been, an ample supply of males for naval duty. Now, as always, there are large, civilizational reasons for the absence of female warriors.

The first reason is, God, for reasons best known to Him, didn't accord women the physical stamina or capability for combat; exceptions to the general rule are freaks. The Navy replied the other day that in combat aircraft, for instance, women can do fine. But that's only superficially true, for a reason that transcends physical capability.

The reason is that military roles for women are contrary to nature. I know it's quaint and backward to talk about nature — a thing we're supposed to worry about only when there's bark on it. Human nature fine, government can remold that. Yet, male human nature recognizes the impropriety, yes, the evil, of exposing society's life bearers — women — to death and maiming. Nature revolts against it. Here, nonetheless, in the name of job opportunity, are the Clintonites, trying to repeal the laws of creation. A fat lot of good this does world history's greatest military establishment.

If we have the world's greatest military — and we do — why change it fundamentally? It's unnecessary to see Bill Clinton as Hanoi Jane Fonda's advance agent to wonder whether, in matters military, the new commander in chief is way over his head.

Nation's servants become masters

What have the American people done to themselves?

The servants have become the masters.

I refer to members of the Congress of these United States, who, when the country is deep in debt — debt they themselves created — vote themselves huge raises.

And, to make things worse, they determined that inflation last year was 3 percent and increased the pensions of all retirees, Social Security, and all other government retirees, such as military personnel, government retirees, and others, but increased their own pay by 3 1/2 percent. That is looking out for No. 1, isn't it?

And a more startling thing is that they provide the ex-speakers of the House of Representatives (I don't know if this applies to any senators) with an office, a staff and expenses for the maintenance of this office. How's that for taking care of questionable characters such as Jim Wright?

Is there nothing that we can do about such actions?

Midland nurseries afraid to compete

I almost lost my breakfast recently while reading the article on how our wonderful city council denied a building permit for a nursery in our city. I keep hearing from city officials how we need to cultivate and support business in our city and as patriotic citizens we should "Buy the Basin." What a joke!

Part of supporting a business is knowing that you have a choice of merchants that offer products at competitive prices. I think that the other nurseries in the area are afraid of a little competition and because of this, we may lose an important business in our area.

I also find it difficult to believe that the city would turn its back on the opportunity to receive additional property and sales tax revenue that the new nursery would generate. The city council needs to reconsider its decision or it may be setting a bad example for businesses that may wish to expand into our area. By the way, as a former Dallas resident, I would like the chamber of commerce to tell me where I can buy items for the same price in Midland as I could in Dallas.

State legislature passes the buck

Our state legislatures,trying to finance our schools, knew from the beginning the Robin Hood plan was wrong, they knew the taxes would be enforced illegally and unconstitutionally regardless of precedence. More tax dollars wasted in court because of "ignorance of the law is no excuse." They didn't think anyone would notice.

Apparently, Nancy Chambers (Letters, Nov. 20, 1992) was not the only one who believed the lottery would help finance our schools. Bob Bullock denied that he or other representatives claimed the lottery would finance schools in a letter. I believe, as usual, voters were misled. Where is the money going really?

Our state government wants an income tax but is using deceit in a chess game mimic to get it. Texas fell prey to destroy our constitutional protection against an income tax when ex-governor Mark White was elected. An amendment to garnish wages for child support was the clouded issue, which opened the door for an income tax — remember? Texas is the only state (I think) left without such a tax. Now, the state is losing revenue from lottery winners.

Our state legislature plans to pass the buck again, forcing us to fall victim to their bad deeds, putting our backs against a brick wall for a "Catch 22; Gotcha!" Look for the usual political play on words that cloud the real issues.

When an amendment is cast to voters, shall we go with Tom Craddick, vote no? At least the monkey is cast back on their backs and risky. Should we vote yes and put the issue back in the courts again? Robbing Peter to pay Paul is centuries old.

Fellow Texans, we are in "check mate," plucked and ready to pickle. The lesser of two evils is not right.

Worthy of note: Beware of the destruction of the homestead act and gun control. The feds and states have been after our guns since 1962, using anything to break your hearts. Isn't it interesting that the feds decided to go to Waco when our legislature is discussing "gun control" in Austin?

Girl who was switched at birth seeks divorce from biological parents

By Laura Higgins
N.Y. Times News Service

SARASOTA, Fla. — Kimberly Mays wants to divorce her biological parents, a lawyer said Wednesday.

Mays

"They keep attacking the father she loves," said attorney Arthur Ginsburg. "The more they attack him, the less she wants to do with them."

Another attorney, appointed by a court to watch over the girl's interests in a long-fought baby-swap case, said: "She wants the opportunity to be a kid while she's still a kid."

Ginsburg — representing Robert Mays, the man who raised Kimberly — said after a court hearing here that the 14-year-old girl is looking for a lawyer to file her divorce lawsuit.

Ernest and Regina Twigg of Sebring, Fla., have been battling Robert Mays, of Englewood, Fla., for years — first to prove that Kimberly was indeed their daughter, switched with another newborn at a Central Florida hospital nursery, and now for visitation rights.

As the case has worn on, the relationship between Robert Mays and the Twiggs has grown increasingly bitter, as evidenced at Wednesday's court hearing.

The Twiggs' lawyer argued that a psychological report on the mother, Regina Twigg, should be kept confidential, while Mays' lawyer contended that it should be made public.

Ginsburg then accused the Twiggs of slinging accusations at his client in the pages of a new book, and "going on the talk show circuit" to sell it.

"It's hunting season on Bob Mays all the time," Ginsburg said. "I think it's about time for Regina Twigg to dodge some buckshot, too."

The recently published book, "The Baby Swap Conspiracy," was written with the cooperation of the Twiggs and their lawyer, John Blakely.

The book portrays Robert Mays as a temperamental father who is "controlling, explosive and abusive" — a description based on accounts by his ex-wife, Cindy Tanner, who married Mays shortly after his first wife's death.

The book suggests that the two infants were deliberately exchanged by hospital workers with the knowledge of the late Barbara Mays, who had given birth to a sickly child. Barbara Mays died of cancer in 1981.

After the Wednesday hearing, Ginsburg said the book and the publicity surrounding it had upset Kimberly and fueled her desire to sever her relationship with the Twiggs.

Genetic tests, conducted in 1989, have confirmed that Kimberly and another newborn had almost certainly been sent home from Hardee Memorial Hospital in Wauchula with the wrong parents.

But the courts have allowed Robert Mays to retain custody of Kimberly.

Arlena Twigg, who was the biological child of Robert and Barbara Mays, was raised by the Twiggs. Arlena died of complications in 1988, following surgery for a heart defect.

Shortly before her death, the Twiggs had learned that her blood type was incompatible with their own.

David Denkin, an attorney appointed to represent Kimberly's interests in the visitation case, said Wednesday that she is tired of the legal tug-of-war that has been waged ever since.

He said he couldn't comment specifically on conversations with Kimberly, or say whether she intends to seek a divorce. But he said that they had discussed "several options."

"She wants this case to stop," Denkin said, adding that a divorce proceeding would be "one of the ways to get this to stop. She wants the opportunity to be a kid while she's still a kid."

Police arrest 2 in German tourist slaying

MIAMI (AP) — Two men were charged Thursday in the slaying of a German tourist who was beaten and run over by a car on a Miami highway as her mother and children watched.

The arrests came as leaders from cities across south Florida met to confront an outbreak of violence against tourists that led Germany and Great Britain to issue traveler's advisories this week.

Christian Jensen, whose wife, Barbara Meller-Jensen, was slain April 2, thanked Miami residents who helped lead police to the suspects.

"We have seen the very worst and the very best of your community," he said. "These criminals would likely not be in jail today were it not for the help of concerned and caring citizens."

Seven foreign tourists, including three Germans, have been killed in Florida this past winter and many other attacks have been reported.

Charged Thursday with murder and robbery were Anthony Williams, 18, and Leroy Rogers, 23, who were already in custody on unrelated robbery charges. Both men have criminal records, police said.

"Both admitted being involved in the homicide, and being part of the strong-arm robbery," said Maj. John Brooks.

Meller-Jensen, 39, of Berlin, was killed after getting lost on her way to Miami Beach and venturing off the interstate into an inner-city neighborhood, where her rental car was bumped by another car. When she got out to inspect the damage, she was beaten, robbed and run over by the car while her mother and two children, ages 6 and 2, watched.

Investigators said they had recovered the car used to run over the woman and found physical evidence in the car, but would release few details.

At the crime conference, meanwhile, Miami officials suggested several ways to increase security for tourists, including posting police officers at car rental agencies and outfitting rental cars with a protective film making it harder to break glass. Another suggestion was undercover operations in dangerous neighborhoods.

Students fall behind grade level in math

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most American students cannot do math at their grade levels, Education Secretary Richard W. Riley said Thursday in releasing a report showing modest improvement in mathematical achievement.

"While we're moving in the right direction, unfortunately today's news is not all good," Riley said at a news conference to release the 1992 "Mathematics Report Card for the Nation and the States." "We see that students across the board are not meeting the high standards we have set."

The report found student performance in math has improved nationally and in some states, but cautioned that "a considerable challenge remains."

The study compared student performance in 1992 and 1990 in grades four, eight and 12 in 44 states, territories and the District of Columbia.

It found that, on a scale of 0 to 500, the nation's average score increased from 262 to 266 between 1990 and 1992.

Riley called the report "a positive statement about the increased attention that is being given to mathematics in our schools, and in our homes."

Iris Carl, past president of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics, said the report card "means our students' major improvements are at very low levels."

Residents seek bottled water after health alert

MILWAUKEE (AP) — People picked stores clean of bottled water, schools covered drinking fountains and restaurants boiled large pots of water for washing food Thursday after thousands got sick, possibly from municipal water.

Health officials said a parasite could be to blame for the flulike illness.

Mayor John O. Norquist recommended that residents of the Milwaukee area boil drinking water until the source of the problem is determined. Some 800,000 people depend on the water system, which is drawn from Lake Michigan.

Many decided to buy bottled water, and stores around the city had run out Thursday.

Roosevelt Harris, carrying four bottles of spring water, talked as if he had struck gold.

"I don't want to get sick. I'll buy it if it costs a dollar a gallon," said Harris, 74, one of the first customers through the door when the downtown Woolworth's opened.

Hospitals and businesses placed huge orders for bottled water and water coolers, and spring-water bottles struggled to keep up.

"We're working frantically to get enough empty bottles and add shifts to meet demand," said Todd Peterson, president of Chippewa Springs Ltd. "Some of our suppliers were ringing even before the start of business."

Dorothy Heim seemed resigned to going without a glass of water with her breakfast at a diner for breakfast.

"I suppose we'll have to unless we turn to coffee or soda," she said.

City health commissioner Paul Nannis said tests on eight patients who drank tap water showed they had cryptosporidium, a microscopic parasite that produces flulike symptoms. However, the cause of the outbreak had not been pinpointed.

Symptoms include fever, vomiting and diarrhea.

Hundreds of people sought treatment at hospital emergency rooms, but many more are sick, said Dr. Thomas Schlenker, medical director of the city's health department, who declined to give a firm estimate.

"Most people who get sick with this never go to the doctor," he said.

Some private schools were closed because of ailing students and teachers, but Milwaukee Public Schools remained open and administrators were taking precautions.

"We're covering all the water fountains in all the schools," spokeswoman Karen Salzbrenner said.

Salzbrenner said thirsty children could have milk or juice. The problem wasn't as serious as it could have been, she said, because students are on spring break next week.

The mayor's advisory also applied to water used to wash food, and many restaurants around the city had large pots boiling, turning kitchens into steam baths.

Businesses reported many workers calling in sick. Jim Jertson, associate manager at Woolworth's, stocked shelves with bottled water even as he took yet another call from a sick worker.

"We've sent a number of people home sick," he said.

Stores were selling out of over-the-counter flu remedies.

"We Have Imodium A-D," a Walgreen's drug store on the city's east side proclaimed on a large street sign.

The Milwaukee Journal and Milwaukee Sentinel distributed a free four-page edition Thursday devoted to the crisis.

Agency investigates MHMR

■ Allegations surface that local officials mishandled clients' funds.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Officials at a local mental health organization are baffled by recent claims that the agency mishandled clients' money and committed Medicaid fraud.

The state attorney general's office is currently investigating allegations that Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation of Midland collected Medicaid money for physicals performed on clients while simultaneously billing the client.

The physicals — which include a series of mental-fitness tests — can cost up to $2,000.

The attorney general's office declined to comment on the investigation.

Larry Carroll, chief of operations for MHMR of Midland, also declined to comment.

But Carroll did talk about an investigation by Home-based and Community Services (HCS) examining alleged misuse of money intended for MHMR clients in the residential program.

"We don't understand where this is coming from.

FRIDAY

DAY WATCH

Investment scam

ODESSA — The Odessa Police Department and the Midland office of the FBI is investigating an investment scam reported to be operating in the Permian Basin.

Residents are being asked to purchase shares in an organization at a minimum price of $100 per share, with promised return of millions of dollars for their investment. This investment is being diverted into a fund involving the "Funds of Mussolini and Hitler."

Anyone with information should call the Odessa Police Department or the Midland FBI office.

Car hits pedestrian

A Midland woman was in stable condition Thursday at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center after a vehicle/pedestrian accident Wednesday afternoon.

According to a police report, a 1989 Ford Aerostar, driven by 18-year-old Jimmie Lynn Ayers of Midland, was eastbound in the 400 block of Michigan at 3:06 p.m. Wednesday. Ruth McGinnis, 51, was walking eastbound from the northwest curb in a crosswalk in the 600 block of Big Spring. The van turned left on Big Spring and struck Ms. McGinnis, dragging her to the east curb before coming to a stop.

Ms. McGinnis was transported to the hospital with severe road burns on her forehead, both arms and legs.

Ms. Ayers was charged with failure to yield right of way to a pedestrian.

Traffic watch

ODESSA — The Odessa Police Department will begin directed patrols and selective traffic enforcement programs beginning Monday.

The purpose of the programs are to attempt to decrease accidents through traffic law enforcement at high accident rate intersections.

The traffic unit will lbe concentrating on the following intersections: East 42nd Street and North Grandview, East 42nd Street and North Dixie, East 42nd Street and Tanglewood, University and Andrews Highway, East 42nd Street and Parkway, Grandview and Maple and Grandview and East University.

Star Party

The West Texas Astronomers will conduct a Star Party at 8 p.m. on April 16 at the Marion Blakemore Planetarium of the Museum of the Southwest. After a short program inside the planetarium, the event will move to Haley Park, where telescopes will be available for viewing with the help of the West Texas Astronomers. Mars and Jupiter will be visible, as well as many deep-space nebulae and galaxies. In the event of cloudy or inclement weather, the party will be moved to April 17 at 8 p.m. Admission is free.

Youth meeting

"Warriors of Light" is the theme for this year's Youth Conference for teen-agers, 14-18 sponsored by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The two-day conference is set for today and Saturday at the Gateway Chapel. Around 200 youth are expected to attend from Midland, Odessa, Monahans, Seminole, Fort Stockton, Big Spring, Big Lake and Pecos.

Scheduled activities include workshops, a service project at the Midland Senior Citizens Centers, activities at Lee Youth Center, an impromptu band, movie video production, testimony meetings and dances both evenings.

The service project will include serving lunch to senior citizens, help clean up and entertaining them.

Angels may be short on home runs

■ Many players are lefties and stadium isn't conducive for them to hit out of the park, manager says.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

In these days of massive federal deficits and non-stop government spending, Midland Angel fans can rest assured that this is the year they may be able to save a few bucks.

That time-honored tradition of holding up a $1 bill after a Midland player hits a home run may go the way of the dinosaur.

No, don't look for an abundance of wall bangers on this year's Angel team.

Also, most of these guys are lefties. Manager Don Long says as many as five left-handed batters and one switch hitter will be in the opening day lineup.

"Up and down the lineup," Long said, "we have a group of guys that can put the ball in play. We'll do a lot more situational hitting this season."

Which is baseball-ese for the Angels' profound absence of anyone who remotely resembles Hank Aaron or Babe Ruth.

"We don't have a lot of guys who can hit the ball out of the park," Long said.

"We have a lot of left-handed hitters which, in terms of being a good park to hit in, it's a better right-handed ball park than it is a left-handed ball park because of the way the wind blows. It has a tendency to blow right to left, so we're going to have to sac bunt, we're going to have to hit and run, we're going to have to become really proficient at taking the extra base on balls in the dirt."

Not surprisinly, the Angels are small in stature. Of the 11 infielders and outfielders, eight stand at 6 feet tall or less. Of the 24 players on the roster,

Concert pianist encourages Carver students to keep their dreams alive

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

Students clapped, clucked and yelled "ole" on cue during pianist Laura Spitzer's performance at Carver Cultural Center Thursday.

Ms. Spitzer, who also performed for Midland Community Concerts final concert of the 1992-'93 season on Thursday, carried elementary students on a musical journey that included works by Mozart, Beethoven, Chopin and Haydn as well the oft-heard "Malaguena" by Ernesto Lecuona and the seldom heard "Islamey" by Balakirev. She spoke of the composers in words that made their experiences and work accessible to the students.

Students jumped to their feet as they applauded her final number, and she said, "I appreciate your obvious good taste. On a scale of one to 10, I had a 10 time today because of you."

When the laughter died down a little, she asked the students to close their eyes and picture something they loved very much. Once they had the picture in their minds, she asked them to take their hand and carry the picture to their hearts.

"Follow your love, and it will make you happy," she said. "Don't follow your love, and it will make you . . ."

Students filled in the space with the word "sad."

Agents doubt siege will end after Passover

WACO (AP) — Hopes of ending a 40-day standoff between authorities and a heavily-armed religious cult after Passover may simply pass over, an FBI agent said Thursday.

FBI special agent Bob Ricks said negotiations with cult leader David Koresh resumed late Wednesday night for the first time in six days. But the talks were futile, said Ricks, adding that the FBI hung up on the 33-year-old religious zealot after he rambled on nonsensically about the Bible's Book of Revelation.

The Branch Davidian cult is observing Passover, a religious holiday celebrating the Jews' exodus from slavery in ancient Egypt. Attorneys who entered the compound last week said they received assurances from Koresh that he would end the standoff when the seven-day-long Passover ends next week.

But Ricks said discussions Thursday with Koresh's top deputy Steve Schneider indicated the cult members are in no hurry to come out.

"The bad news about this whole situation is that . . . pretty much he (Schneider) is saying he never understood what the big deal is about Passover and is wondering why everyone is putting so much stock in them coming out after the passing of Passover," Ricks said.

"They also said, which was disheartening to us, that they never made such an agreement with their attorneys," Ricks said.

Award-winners

Students winning acclaim for their performances in the recent 4-5A UIL (University Interscholastic League) district competition for one-act play were: from left, Effie Brunson of Midland High School, named to the All-Star Cast; Elizabeth Burgin, MHS, All-Star honorable mention; J'Lynn Wilson of Lee High School, All-Star Cast; Kamalyn Taylor of Lee High School, named Best Actress in the competition; and kneeling, Matthew Johnson of LHS, All-Star Cast honorable mention. The LHS cast performed "The Long Christmas Dinner," under the direction of teacher Horace Griffin, and the MHS cast performed scenes from "I Never Saw Another Butterfly," under the direction of teacher Pam Keel.

Mentone County no longer has pay phone

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Folks who want to dial up from the least-populated county in the United States will have to use a private phone.

GTE Wednesday removed Loving County's only pay phone, at A&G Cafe in Mentone.

The problem is that GTE only makes money from the local calls and there were not enough of those to cover upkeep and collection costs, officials explained.

Mentone's population is only about 19, and the county has never had more than about 110 residents.

GTE did offer to leave the phone if the A&G Cafe would contribute $40 monthly, but restaurant owner Ann Hogue declined. That price was too high, considering she doesn't make any money off the phone.

Board opposes insurance industry proposals

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The insurance industry unveiled its wish list Thursday, urging lawmakers to eliminate some consumer reforms and reduce state regulation.

Rick Gentry, an insurance industry spokesman, said the changes before the House Insurance Committee would cut the cost of doing business and ultimately lead to cheaper rates for consumers.

But the state's chief insurance regulators and several consumer and public watchdog groups said the proposals would leave policyholders at the mercy of insurance companies.

"It would be disastrous for consumers," said State Board of Insurance Chairwoman Claire Korioth.

Gentry disagreed. "We think there are some technical changes that can be made that will not only make it more efficient for us but also ultimately make it less costly," he said.

Among the approximately 100 proposals, the insurance industry wants to:

■ Keep secret the financial examinations of insurance companies.

■ Remove the Texas Department of Insurance toll-free number and complaint notice that is required on policies.

■ Change the three-member full-time Insurance Board, which regulates rates, to a nine-member part-time board.

■ Limit the state's consumer representative in insurance hearings.

■ Allow insurance trade organizations to be parties in rate cases.

The changes would "gut" insurance reforms passed by the Legislature in 1991, Ms. Korioth said.

She said insurance trade associations were removed from rate hearings because they dominated the proceedings like a cartel in demanding higher rates.

Keeping secret insurance companies' financial reports would deprive Texans of information that is available to consumers in most other states, she said.

And the seven proposals aimed at weakening the Office of Public Insurance Counsel are a "direct attack on consumer advocacy in this state," she said.

MHMR: Clients' debts usually aren't collected, official says

(From 1B)

We've had residential services for about eight years and we're audited every year. Up until this point, nothing has come up," Carroll said. "I'm perplexed and distressed that this has become an issue."

Chris Prentice, an attorney representing MHMR client Howard Gatlin — a mentally retarded person who participated in the agency's mental health residential program — said his client was told he owes MHMR nearly $6,000, money that was supposed to be handled by the agency.

He said there are as many as 30 other MHMR clients who have accumulated similar high debts.

"It makes no sense. MHMR is the payee, yet these people are in debt to them," he said. "They aren't in charge of their own finances, how can they run up these debts? Some of these people are building up debts of up to $10,000."

Prentice said he is concernced with the agency's practice of billing clients for services in addition to those covered by their monthly Supplemental Security Income checks.

Those checks, which average $350, are intended to cover rent, utilities, food and clothing.

Under MHMR policy, caseworkers — who also serve as payees to individual accounts — must submit written requests for additional money from HCS and the Prospective Payment Program.

That money is then used to help cover excess expenses incurred by MHMR residential program clients.

But Prentice said the responsibility for the debt ultimately falls to the client.

"The PPP money is there for MHMR to handle expenses associated for people with mental retardation — the clients," Prentice said. "If the client doesn't have enough available in SSI, they (MHMR) take it from agency funds."

"It makes no sense. In the long run they end up taking it out of the clients' SSI money, because unless a rich relative dies and leaves one of them money, they can't pay those kind of debts," he said.

But Carroll said the fact the agency records the debts is simply to help keep the accounting records straight.

"The debts are not actively collected. However, at the same time we wouldn't refuse any money on any of them," he said. "We realize that someone making $300 to $400 a month can't always reimburse us for the rent."

"When this happens, when they have no money, there are instances where they could run up a debt."

He said that persons with mental retardation generally have joint checking accounts with their caseworker. If the client wishes to buy something, the check must be signed by both people.

"The caseworker's responsibility to the client is to help him better manage his money. However, some clients don't have the money for all of their needs," Carroll said. "We try to put them in a living situation that they can afford, we try to teach responsibility. It hasn't been a real big issue that they owe a lot because it doesn't really mean anything."

MHMR is a community mental health and mental retardation organization that provides an alternative to institutions.

The local program serves 3,000 people annually from Midland, Ector and Pecos counties and provides programs for mental health, mental retardation and substance abuse.

PIANIST: Organization conducts membership drive

(From 1B)

She then had them repeat the following after her, "I promise I will always keep my dreams alive in my heart, no matter what."

"The idea is — if you have a focus to your life, lots of things can happen to you, but they are just things that happen to you," Ms. Spitzer said in an interview following her performance at Carver.

"If you've got a passion, it shines brighter than the bad things that happen to you."

She cited Beethoven as an example of passion shining brighter than any obstacle, calling him a classic case of an "abused child who then went deaf," and "should have been a classic case of suicide."

Beethoven "considered suicide but decided against it because he had more music to write," Ms. Spitzer said.

"I can't think of anything worse than to walk around without an inner core, that light that shines in you," she added.

Ms. Spitzer's performance at Carver Cultural Center was one of three she gave Thursday to a total of 500 students before her 8 p.m. performance for Midland Community Concerts Association.

MCCA, a non-profit group dedicated to bringing professional music and dance programs to Midland at affordable prices, is conducting its annual campaign drive.

In years past, MCCA has conducted an active campaign for two weeks during the spring with a table set up in a public place.

"The Community Concerts drive is going fair because we only ran it for one week instead of two like we usually do," said MCCA member Francine Weaver. "But, we're going to have a phone-a-thon to contact the people who haven't mailed in."

The 1993-'94 season includes the Famous People Players, the Epic Brass; Helicon and The Tennessee Waltz group.

"I feel that we have a wonderful set of programs," Ms. Weaver said. "We begin with the Famous People Players, who are larger-than-life puppets played on a black stage lighted by black lights. This will appeal to families.

"The Tennessee Waltz is a group of 16 dancers and six musicians who will tell about country music from its inception in Appalachia to today.

"The Epic Brass from Boston is a well-known young brass group of five musicians, and it looks like they will be an outstanding hit.

"Our last one, Helicon, is a group of three young men who have traveled around the world gathering folk music and play 13 different instruments. This should be a hit because it will be during the Celebration of the Arts. This is the first time we've done a program then."

Membership dues are $25 for adults; $10 for students through high school; and $60 for a family membership admitting two adults and all children.

All concerts are held at Midland High Auditorium at 8 p.m. A membership in Midland permits the ticket holder to attend concerts in other cities including Alamogordo, Carlsbad and Ruidoso, N.M.

"We're encouraging members to find new members either in their workplace or church or neighborhood that might enjoy the programs next year," Ms. Weaver said. "Our aim is 1,500 members."

For more information or to join MCC call 694-8008, 682-0516 or 682-1375.

CULT: FBI hangs up because Koresh rambled on about Bible

(From 1B)

Houston attorneys Dick DeGuerin, who is representing Koresh, and Jack Zimmermann, who is representing Schneider, defended their claims last week that a resolution seemed close.

"We repeatedly said to everybody there are no promises for a specific date of them leaving," Zimmermann said. "But we are still hopeful that upon conclusion of Passover the end will come in a peaceful resolution."

FBI pressure tactics, including in increase of blaring loudspeakers and roving spotlights at night, may have made the cult members more reluctant to cooperate, Zimmermann said Thursday.

"If it was up to us, I don't know if I would be doing some of the things they are doing right now," Zimmermann said. "I don't know whether their pressure tactics are helping or hurting."

Ricks said a person slipped out of the compound through a window and then re-entered the fortress late Wednesday. The maneuver alarmed authorities, who immediately began calling for an explanation, Ricks said.

Cult members said they were not aware of a person leaving the compound, according to Ricks.

"It's always been our agreement that we don't want anyone outside the compound, especially at nighttime, because we view that as a potential threat to our people," Ricks said. "If our people believe their lives were threatened, they would probably be authorized to take fire on those people."

Ricks said Koresh became enraged at the FBI's orders to keep his 96 followers inside and began using abusive language.

A large banner reading "Rodney King We Understand," which cultists had draped from a four-story tower in the compound two weeks ago, was dropped to the ground about 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

A banner that read "FBI God Sees Your Lies" and cited "Habakkuk 3:14," an Old Testament verse, was dropped in its place about 45 minutes later.

In other developments, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms intelligence chief David Troy refused to discuss claims in a report by the Houston Chronicle that an undercover agent inside the compound told superiors to call off a raid on the compound Feb. 28 because of a tipoff.

HOMERS: Angels to be sporting new uniform only one pitcher — Erik Bennett — and two catchers — Fausto Tejero and Jorge Fabergas — tip the scales in excess of 200 pounds.

Seven members of last year's Angel team return for the '93 season: Tejero, pitchers Ken Edenfield, Erik Bennett and Steve Peck, infielder Mark Wasinger, and outfielders Dan Rumsey and John Jackson.

Orlando Palmeiro, a distant nephew of Texas Ranger Rafael Palmiero; former University of Miami catcher Jorge Fabergas, and Luis Raven, mentioned by Long as the team's possible clean-up hitter are some of the new faces offensively.

The starting pitching rotation — which consists of five right-handers — is set.

John Fritz, a 20-game winner at Quad City last year, will be the No. 1 starter. He is followed by 22-year-old Shad Williams. David Holdridge, the Angels' No. 1 pick in 1988, and Erik Bennett will interchange in the Nos. 3 and 4 spots, and Chance Gledhill, a 24-year-old Utah native, will hold down the No. 5 spot.

Notes: The Angels will sport new uniforms and caps. The uniforms greatly resemble the newly redesigned outfit the California team is wearing this year. In addition, the Angels have an expanded clubhouse, and a new facility is open behind the first base stands for the visiting team and the umpires. . . .

Midland opens the season with a 10-game homestand beginning with today's 7 p.m. game against San Antonio. After five with the Missions, El Paso comes to town before the season-opening home stand comes to a close on April 18. . . . Because of two farm system changes for the 1993 season, Edmonton and Quad City are no longer affiliated with the California Angels. Taking their places will be the Class AAA Vancouver Canadiens, of the Pacific Coast League, and the Class A Cedar Rapid Kernels in the Midwest.

State rests its case in Railey trial

CITYLINE - 560-2400; NEWS - 1210

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press writer

SAN ANTONIO — The state rested its attempted murder case against former Dallas minister Walker Railey Thursday after losing a legal battle over its final witness.

Bowing to vigorous defense objections, state District Judge Pat McDowell ruled that an FBI expert on violent crime could not provide jurors a profile of a "domestic homicide."

The defense insisted the testimony would point a "patently inadmissible" finger of suspicion at Railey, accused of a 1987 attack on his wife.

"I can't think of anything more prejudicial than allowing this witness to testify that it was a domestic homicide," defense lawyer John Hagler told the court.

He said such testimony "clearly is the same as saying the defendant committed this offense."

Outside the jury's presence, agent David Gomez said a person who commits a "staged domestic homicide" usually strikes at his own residence, leaves no forensic evidence, alters the crime scene and attempts to mislead police.

"In a domestic homicide, there usually is a delay in reporting the victim so the offender can establish an alibi," Gomez testified. "Usually, the offender is present when the body is discovered."

The state maintains Railey did all of this.

In sustaining the defense motion, McDowell described Gomez, an FBI criminal investigative analyst, as "well qualified" and called his testimony "very interesting."

But, he added, "It is the kind of evidence that could jeopardize this case."

The state rested its case shortly after the ruling and the judge recessed the proceedings until Monday morning.

The trial began March 22.

Despite Thursday's setback, chief prosecutor Cecil Emerson said he felt "real good " about the state's case. As he left the courtroom for the Easter recess, he added:

"I'm feeling better every minute."

Lead defense lawyer Doug Mulder sidestepped a reporter's question, saying: "The judge told us not to comment. But I think you know my general impression."

He said previously the prosecution produced no "smoking gun."

Neither Mulder nor his associates would say if Railey would take the stand next week to explain inconsistencies in the story he told police the night his wife was attacked.

"Ultimately, that will be Dr. Railey's decision," said defense lawyer Roy Barrera Jr.

Prosecutors do not expect Railey to take the stand.

Railey told investigators he was doing book research at Southern Methodist University at the time of the attack. He said he returned home about 12:40 a.m. and discovered his wife lying on the garage floor.

She had been choked unconscious and left for dead.

Peggy Railey, 44, now lies in a Tyler nursing home with irreversible brain damage.

Bill Arnold, a Dallas lawyer representing her interests, had Railey served with legal documents Thursday requiring him to explain how he's paying his five-member defense team.

Asked that same question by reporters, Railey snapped: "By the hour."

In 1988, a Dallas judge held Railey civilly liable for the attack on his wife and ordered him to pay up to $18 million in damages.

Arnold told a news conference Thursday, "We are trying to find out the $64,000 question of why Walker Railey can walk into the courtroom with his very tailored suits and handkerchief and have five, high-priced lawyers and yet cannot spend one cent toward the help of his wife, who he basically abandoned over five years ago."

When court convenes Monday, the defense is expected to request an instructed verdict of acquittal, contending in effect the state failed to prove its case against Railey.

Emerson said the chances of McDowell granting the motion are "highly unlikely."

The state contends Railey wanted his wife out of the way so he could openly pursue his love affair with psychologist Lucy Papillon, 51, the daughter of a Methodist bishop.

Morales is included on list of potential justices

AUSTIN (AP) — State Attorney General Dan Morales says anyone would be flattered to be mentioned as a potential U.S. Supreme Court justice nominee, but he likes his current job.

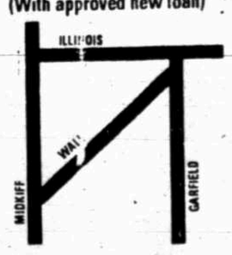

"I think that there a number of well-qualified jurists and other legal professionals in our state who would make terrific United States Supreme Court justices .. Suffice it to say, I trust President Clinton to make the right call," Morales said Thursday.

The Hispanic National Bar Association has sent the White House a list of seven Hispanic lawyers it considers to be the most qualified to serve on the court. It includes Morales and another Texan, Fortunato "Pete" Benavides, former state Court of Criminal Appeals judge.

FAMILY MATTERS

Alcohol abuse among teens is serious problem

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: My husband and I both think that all the fuss over the kids drinking is just a bunch of goodie-goodies complaining about everything. Everyone drank when they were teenagers and we all know it. We don't think things are any worse now than they were when we were growing up. People just won't admit that what these kids are doing is no different than what we did and we turned out OK. Kids are going to drink. They always have and they always will. It's just a lot better than having them out doing drugs.

May

We've talked about all of this with a lot of our friends and we all agree that it's just a bunch of self-righteous people trying to make a big deal out of everything. My friends dared me to write the paper about this so I decided to write you. See if you dare to print this. REALIST

DEAR REALIST: Thank you for writing to share your views. I want to share another reality with you: Many major studies over the years have found that "the earlier a child begins to use alcohol, the earlier the child will manifest problem behaviors and the more likely the child is to become intensely involved with alcohol." ("Alcohol Health and Research World") The average age for first use of alcohol in the United States is 11 years for males and 12.7 years for females.

Other findings show that between eighth and 10th grades, those who begin drinking early tend to drink heavier. The ones who drank were drinking more and more often. Heavy-drinking males and females showed little difference in drinking patterns. The survey also found that more white and Hispanic students consumed alcohol than did black students. Another survey also found that polydrug use by 10th-grade males was associated with an earlier use of alcohol.

An additional concern is the possible effects of alcohol on the health of adolescent drinkers, specifically: neurologic effects on the adolescent's developing brain; digestion and nutrition effects on uptake, storage and utilization of vitamins and minerals; effect on liver caused by increased levels of iron in the blood (which may be a precursor to later liver damage); and effects on bones caused by possible suppression of the levels of growth hormones. Accidental injury also is reported to be one of the most profound consequences of teenage alcohol and drug use. Researchers also have reported on association between alcohol use and unprotected sexual intercourse among adolescents.

In summary, research data found that between 15 percent and 20 percent of adolescents consume high levels of alcohol. One study even found that 14 percent of graduating seniors drank to intoxication on a weekly basis. The research clearly suggests that no good comes of alcohol consumption by teenagers. So while there was much less known about the effects of alcohol when we were growing up, we now know how profoundly damaging it can be.

I strongly encourage you, your friends and all parents to do all they can to discourage alcohol usage among teenagers. We cannot expect teens to understand or agree with our position but the research strongly suggests that the potential destructive nature of chemical consumption far outweighs its benefits.

THE FOLLOWING DESCRIBES THREE ADDITIONAL QUALITIES OF GOOD PARENTING RULES AS SUGGESTED BY THE PERMIAN BASIN CHILD ABUSE PREVENTION PROGRAM:

A good parent-child rule is clearly communicated and not confusing or ambiguous. For example, a rule which states that the child must "behave" while at day care is not clear enough. Specific concrete behaviors should be communicated which spell out in detail what "behave" means: follow the directions of the teacher, finish your work on time, do not talk when the teacher is giving the class instructions, etc.

A good rule is consistent in that is has general application. If there are too many circumstances where the rule does not apply, it may not be a good rule. For example, a rule that you must wash your hands after using the restroom is a consistent rule.

Finally, a good rule is flexible. A good rule has room to change due to circumstances. There are times when priorities take precedence over a rule. A rule such as "No one may play with your ceramic doll" may need to be modified to be "No one may play with your ceramic doll without asking me first."

DEAR ABBY

Mother died alone because she didn't have full ID

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Several weeks ago, I lost my mother. She was the victim of a traffic accident. Her sudden death stunned our family. The worst part of it is that she lay in the trauma center — only a few miles away — and we didn't learn of the accident until she had been dead for several hours. She had a personal ID card with her, but nothing to specify whom to call in case of emergency. The police found my name only after they went to her apartment and talked to her neighbors.

Van Buren

Abby, please urge your readers to carry with them, at all times, some form of identification along with the telephone number of whom to notify in case of an emergency.

I refer to people who drive to work, to joggers, walkers, bicyclists. Mom, sew a little name tag in your son's shirt before you send him off to school. Grandpa, carry an emergency notification card in your pants pocket, even if you're only going down to the corner to pick up a newspaper. If, God forbid, something happens to you (a stroke or heart attack), the emergency room staff will be able to summon a person who cares about you, so you won't be alone. And those who love you won't be denied the chance to be there with you when you most need them. — MARGARET'S DAUGHTER, POMPANO BEACH, FLA.

DEAR MARGARET: Thank you for reminding me to remind my readers to always carry the name (or names) of next of kin or a person to contact in case something happens to you.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are both in our mid-30s. During the last few years, as I have become aware of health-related risks, I've tried to make changes in our diets, for our sake as well as the future of our two small children.

I am genetically predisposed to heart disease, so I try to pay attention to what I eat, and I force myself to exercise regularly.

My husband, on the other hand, is predisposed to cancer. Both parents have had cancer, and other relatives have either had cancer, or have died of it.

My problem is that when I try to have only healthful foods in the house, or mention that something he is eating too much of is not good for a person with cancer risks, he gets very defensive and tells me to quit nagging him.

Abby, I can't help it. I just want him around as long as possible. What can I do? — A CARING WIFE

DEAR CARING WIFE: I know you have your husband's best interests at heart, but please stop nagging him. He knows what's good (and bad) for him, and constantly reminding him that he's at risk for cancer won't do his health any good either.

DEAR ABBY: There seems to be a question regarding couples living together before marriage.

I am an associate professor at San Diego Mesa College, and the experience of two of my students proves that living together is no guarantee of a successful marriage.

This pair had lived happily together for several years before they got married. After the marriage, the young woman was miserable. Her husband, you see, had different expectations of her role as a wife than he had of her role as a mistress. — ROGER A. GEE

YOUR CHUCKLE FOR TODAY: A schoolteacher asked her students to name the two books that have helped them the most. One bright pupil replied, "My mother's cookbook and my father's checkbook."

What teens need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting along with peers and parents is in "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. In Texas, flowers grow wild, with help from friends

By Anita Baker
N.Y. Times News Service

Wildflowers don't just grow wild in Texas.

Many get a little help from their friends in the highway department, who have added native grasses to their program of encouraging a pavement-straddling nature zone.

Every year, the Texas Department of Transportation buys 3 tons of seeds for bluebonnets and other "wildflowers" that are cultivated by seed companies. And the state has expanded the program to include native grasses.

Not only are the changes pleasing to the eye, they are environmentally sound, said Craig Steffens, the department's chief landscape architect.

"We must have something growing on the slopes ... so we don't lose sedimentation from the highway and pollute the streams," he said.

Last fall, three state agencies — the Texas Water Commission, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and the highway department — signed a "memorandum of understanding" supporting a return of the native prairie with a minimum of mowing along the highways. This transformed into a policy that the highway department had followed voluntarily for at least 10 years.

To meet Texas Water Commission standards to protect streams from polluted runoff, vegetation is needed to trap sediment on the right of way and act as a filtration system, Steffens said.

"Tall vegetation increases and enhances wildlife habitats, which is where the Parks and Wildlife comes in," Steffens said.

Mowing will be limited to once at the end of the year after vegetation is dormant, he said. The annual cutting will then take the place of grazing buffaloes and grass fires that in previous centuries kept prairies healthy.

For wildflower lovers, the changes mean highway color through the summer and fall seasons.

"We have arguably as good a wildflower season in the fall as in the spring with bluebells, gayfeather, goldenrod, snow-on-the-mountain and Maximillian sunflowers," Steffens said. "All the beautiful yellow flowers in the fall, which are perennials, don't have to be reseeded."

The highway department seeds roadsides in several ways, depending on how quickly they need the plants to take hold and bloom.

For quick bloom, seeds are planted by machine. For long-term, economical planting, wildflower hay bailed along an established roadway, is spread in another area to allow seeds to filter to the ground and germinate naturally.

Not everyone has been happy with the changes.

'We have arguably as good a wildflower season in the fall as in the spring with bluebells, gayfeather, goldenrod, snow-on-the-mountain and Maximillian sunflowers. All the beautiful yellow flowers in the fall, which are perennials, don't have to be reseeded.'

— Craig Steffens
Texas Department of Transportation

Sometimes, it is hard to change public opinion, especially among people who think mowed lawns are beautiful, Steffens said.

"We had public outcry and public support," he added. "The public support comes from people who understand environmental issues, and the outcry comes from farmers who don't want tall grass next to their land. They fear fire and weeds."

Support services for seniors plentiful

By Henry F. Page M.D.

Midland being such a young, dynamic city just a few "time hoofbeats" away from where cowboys and Indians struggled over hot, parched land bereft of all civilized amenities, a natural question arises from its now more genteel and elderly inhabitants. That is: Is there any place I can receive support if victimized by impaired health or other affronts to my social well-being? The answers is: "Can a bird fly? Can a fish swim?" Yes, almost a thousand times yes!

The well-noted, friendly, caring nature of the individual Midland inhabitants, both past and present, manifests itself in out-reach activities not only in more than 100 churches of all sorts and sizes, but also in more organized and specialized activities available in many civic endeavors. A prime example of this helpful attitude is the Christmas-In-April program, a concept originating in Midland years ago and now spreading throughout the land. It consists of the hands-on rebuilding of decrepit homes by volunteers. Community and Senior Services Inc. — practically non-existent over 25 years ago — has now burgeoned into a vast, efficient city-wide organization supplying visiting nurses, meals-on-wheels, and grocery and handyman services. It also promotes Permian Gold, a means of obtaining shopping discounts for the elderly. Another sprout from this activity became the Dellwood Senior Citizens Center, where meals, congeniality, wellness and social support abound. All this is replicated in part by Casa de Amigos, aimed particularly at our Hispanic population. The Housing Authority of Midland runs both Hillcrest and Langtree Apartments that constitute that "rara-avis" — actually top-flight living accommodations for low-income senior families.

Midland Memorial Hospital and Medical Center has expanded from a single small frame house into a veritable temple of health with state-of-the-art equipment operated by skilled personnel covering all medical, surgical, both major and minor urgent care, mental and addictive illness, rehabilitation, cancer screening and therapy. Retirement, home care, day care, personal care, nursing home care, Hospice and friendly funeral care are all available through private community sources.

Chicken soup and casseroles remain a high priority item on an individual basis for temporary conditions, with more organized efforts afforded by specialized activities such as those for leukemia, multiple sclerosis, Alzheimer's muscular dystrophy, kidney, mental retardation, blind and physically handicapped, deaf, diabetes and cancer.

Social and intellectual support is available via an excellent library, theater, symphony, Midland College, opera, ballet and last but not least, that emotional "grasshopper suppository," Manetta Heckathorne's "Kitchenette Band."

Considering all of the above senior support, one local wiseacre commented if Mother Theresa came to town, she would die of boredom.

Henry F. Page, M.D., F.A.C.P., is health and safety consultant to Midland Presbyterian Homes.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Elderly sometimes need dietary advice

By Steve Edwards

QUESTION: Is there diet counseling for the older homecare patients?

Edwards

ANSWER: Yes, through the assistance of a registered dietician. The need for this counseling is growing rapidly as more and more older patients are being discharged from hospitals with limited knowledge about diet and its impact on recovery. Some of these patients then become victims of poor nutrition due to not understanding their diets, functional limitations or because of depression.

Very few homebound patients seem to have a clear idea of the benefits they may derive from modifying their dietary intake. Yet this understanding is crucial. Take the example of what happens in the body when the patient eats something salty and yet is on a sodium-restricted diet. A simple explanation to the patient would be: "When you eat something salty, your body can no longer get rid of the salt quickly. Your body reacts by holding extra water to dilute the salt, and that's what builds up in your chest, making it harder for your heart to pump and harder for you to breathe — and also causes your ankles to swell."

Diet counseling is also needed to update the diets of patients. Patients will say, "I can't drink orange juice because it's too acidic for my stomach ulcer," or "when I eat potatoes, I never eat bread. My diabetes doctor told me years ago to eat only two slices of bread a day and not much starch." Food choices are frequently guided by medical advice given years ago. Yet often diets need to be reviewed due to the changing status of a patient's health condition.

A patient in need of new information may state: "I don't drink any milk because it gives me gas or diarrhea." Yet they need to know that new enzyme preparations or milk treated with it are available to counter this problem. Or the patient who thinks he or she is decreasing sodium intake by diluting soup with water needs advice on lower sodium soups.

Eggs, synonymous with "cholesterol" in the eyes of many, are often omitted by older people when they could provide high quality protein at low cost with extra advantages of being easily prepared and eaten. With few exceptions, whole eggs are a valuable source of protein for those over 65.

The elderly patient may lack the strength or energy to prepare a meal, and if able, may be too tired to eat it. Suggestions can be given for nutritious meals that require little or no cooking, meals cooked in foil, one-pot meals or for appropriate commercially frozen meals when the food budget allows.

Steve Edwards is executive director of Community and Senior Services and consultant for the Visiting Nurse Service of Midland.

Good nutrition

Toby Felcher of Elderly Nutrition Services in Baltimore, second from left, talks with members of the Waxter Senior Center over lunch in Baltimore recently. Advocates for the elderly say growing numbers of seniors may be at an increased risk of malnutrition because they are not getting at least one hot-cooked meal a day, whether it's delivered to their homes or eaten at a local senior center.

Medicare benefits are based on needs

Staff report

If you are a Medicare beneficiary, you may have heard that Medicare will only pay for a certain number of days in a hospital.

Many people have heard similar statements from health care providers or other Medicare beneficiaries and are unaware that this is a common misconception about the Medicare payment system.

Medicare covers health care that is medically necessary, provided in the appropriate setting, and meets the patient's individual health care needs. Therefore, one patient may need to stay in the hospital for 10 days, while another patient having the same surgery may only need to stay for five. In both cases, Medicare pays the hospital the same amount, but that should have no effect on health care provider's decisions regarding each patient's medical treatment.

If you have any questions about your medical treatment or your need for continued hospital care, don't hesitate to ask questions of your doctor. Often, a doctor can alleviate your concerns. The hospital's patient representative or social worker will also help you with your questions and concerns about hospital services.

However, if you feel you are being asked to leave the hospital too soon, ask a hospital representative for a written notice of explanation immediately. Once you receive this written notice, usually called a "notice of noncoverage," you may 1) leave the hospital, 2) remain in the hospital and pay for the remainder of your hospital stay, or 3) request a review of your medical record by your Medicare peer review organization (PRO).

There is a PRO in every state under contract with the Medicare program to review the quality and medical necessity of care provided to Medicare beneficiaries. And as a notice of noncoverage states, you have the right to request the PRO's review of your medical record if you disagree with a hospital's decision to discharge you.

If you request such a review, the PRO will assess your medical record to determine whether or not you continue to require care in the inpatient setting. As long as you request the review by noon of the first working day after you receive the notice, you will not be held financially responsible until the PRO renders a decision.

Texas' PRO, the Texas Medical Foundation, believes it is important for you to learn about notices of noncoverage and your rights as a Medicare beneficiary before you receive medical care. For a free information packet, call the Texas Medical Foundation at 1-800-725-8315.

Memory decline studied

NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers from five medical centers have banded together to learn more about memory decline in aging and determine whether anything can be done about it.

Many older people have troubling symptoms of memory loss without any identified disease as a cause, and "right now medical science has little to offer these people," said Richard Mohs of the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York.

The new consortium will investigate basic questions about how the brain remembers, look for ways to predict who will suffer age-related declines and find out whether drugs or a person's activities can help, scientists said at a recent news conference.

The program will receive more than $8.4 million from the Charles A. Dana Foundation, a private New York organization that gives grants in health and education. The memory consortium includes investigators from Mount Sinai, the Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, Harvard Medical School, Johns Hopkins University and the University of Pennsylvania Medical Center.

Mohs said he thinks the phrase "use it or lose it" applies to the brain, but "the problem is we don't know exactly what we mean by 'use it.' We don't know how much you have to use it to prevent how much loss."

But such things as memory training, physical activities and formal education might help minimize memory deficits in aging, and the consortium will investigate such activities, he said.

Studies have found that people with more education have better-preserved mental powers in old age, and some small studies suggest that regular, vigorous physical activity may help mental functioning in elderly people, he said.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, APRIL 9, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Reconciling your differences with your loved ones will lead to tremendous happiness. Plan a family gathering for June. By August, you could be busy with a new love interest. An alliance forged in September could lead to exciting developments in November. Make the winter holidays a time for forgiveness and fresh starts. Your career will surge ahead early in 1994. Investigate carefully before lending your name to a project that could prove controversial.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Dennis Quaid, golfer Seve Ballesteros, model Paulina Porizkova, songwriter Carl Perkins.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A residential or financial project proceeds rapidly once you make the necessary calls and trips. Heed your hunches; they will tell the true story. Do not let outsiders wreak havoc with your love life.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Taking care of business may lead you to neglect someone's emotional needs today. After your work is finished, touch base with a loved one who depends on you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your special talents will gain wider recognition now if you apply them to an important project. Today's events buoy your spirits. Spend the evening with someone who shares your optimistic outlook.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may have to deal with someone's shortcomings today. If you do not have the answer, seek expert help. Let the creative, fun-loving side of your nature take over tonight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Wait a while before starting a major project. Progress will be swifter if you hold off for several weeks. Competing with an old friend spurs you both on to a better performance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take the lead in business today. Contact overseas clients about lifting old restrictions. Delay key signings until next week. Friends are more sympathetic and tolerant.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Financial squabbles can mar domestic bliss. When authorizing expenditures, check even seemingly minor details personally. Trust the experts where a personnel matter is concerned.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A roadblock is present for a reason. Heed a warning to "go slow." You gain new insights from talking to well-informed people. Hold off on making any accusations; further information is needed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Study messages and conversations for hints. You get the "green light" on an opportunity to display your special talents. Emphasize your creativity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An urge to take risks grows stronger. Exercise self-discipline to avoid making a costly mistake. Secret transactions look especially chancy. Steer clear of trading favors.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): What looks like a setback could work in your favor. A partner who does not appreciate your feedback will let you know it. Stick up for your rights and you will impress someone influential.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Getting your personal life in order is the first step toward a more rewarding career. Clear the decks before getting down to business. Concentrate on finding a way to earn extra income.

The bidding:

4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♠

Some hands offer sure-trick lines for your contract. More often than not, though, you will have to sift through several options. As declarer, your task is to select the best of the lot and hope that luck smiles on your choice.

North-South reached four spades as a result of a transfer sequence. With a 5-4-2-2 shape and little strength, North preferred to play in spades rather than no trump. With an excellent two no trump opening bid and fine spade support, South ventured to game. Even though North had little of value, the contract had play.

West led a trump and declarer judged well to play the jack from dummy. East made the correct technical play of withholding the king and declarer had several ways to proceed. Since it was unlikely on this auction that West was leading away from the king of trumps, South opted to repeat the spade finesse, then cashed the ace to drop the king and exhaust all hands except dummy of trumps.

Next, declarer played off the ace and king of diamonds, attempting to fell the queen. When that did not work, declarer continued with a diamond and got a break—West was the defender who held the queen of diamonds. In with that card, West had a choice of losing options. A diamond would give dummy an entry for a heart finesse; a heart would be into declarer's tenace; and a club would be up to the king. No matter how West defended, declarer was assured of a 10th trick.

'Cheers' filming finale ends with farewell tears

LOS ANGELES — Filming of the final scene of "Cheers" ended in tears as Ted Danson, Kirstie Alley and other cast members bade farewell to the 11-year-old sitcom.

Harrelson

Most of the 90-minute episode, featuring the return of Shelley Long as the intellectual barmaid Diane Chambers, was shot last week because of the actress' time constraints. But the final scene for the May 20 finale was shot Wednesday following filming of the second-to-last episode.

Former Paramount Studios chief Brandon Tartikoff and "Doonesbury" cartoonist Garry Trudeau were among the extras seated at the bar for that episode.

Woody Harrelson, who plays Woody the bartender, said just reading through the final script was "heavy."

"Boy, did I cry! Just bawled my eyes out," he said.

Harrelson said he will miss his fellow cast members terribly, but he's not entirely sorry the nation's most popular TV bar will be closing down after 271 episodes on NBC.

In the past few years, the work has been "just totally unchallenging," he said.

NEW YORK — Maria Riva says growing up the daughter of Marlene Dietrich was more a job than it was a childhood.

"I did my job; I did what I was told to," Riva said. As an only child, Riva often was responsible for numerous chores required to maintain the image of the late sultry German film icon.

"I shook the feathers very well," Riva said Wednesday at the New School for Social Research at a class by Richard Brown on filmmakers, reflecting on her current best-selling biography on her mother, "Marlene Dietrich" (Knopf).

"I learned things like you never put fur in a plastic bag, you always keep it wrapped in cloth and linen.

"And I know how to thin false eyelashes. Dietrich was very critical of Greta Garbo's (false eyelashes) — she used to say, 'Oh, look at those brooms!'"

Riva said she learned how to make false eyelashes look perfect by manicuring them with orange sticks.

"Oh there's lots of little tricks!" she said.

OXFORD, Miss. — Author John Grisham and his wife, Renee, are paying for two programs they hope will attract more writers to the University of Mississippi.

The Emerging Southern Writers in Residence program will bring an author to teach a fall semester course. Another program will bring one to three writers to the campus for brief visits each semester, expanding an effort begun in 1979 by another Oxford author, Willie Morris, the university announced.

"I remember how much everyone enjoyed it when Willie Morris brought writers like William Styron and George Plimpton and John Knowles to speak at Ole Miss while I was a law student," Grisham said in a statement.

Grisham, whose latest legal thriller is "The Client," also is the author of best-selling novels "A Time To Kill," "The Firm" and "The Pelican Brief."

NEW YORK — A crew filming Al Pacino's new movie, "Carlito's Way," ejected from the Times Square subway station for damaging property and disregarding passenger safety, transit officials said.

"They seem to feel they have carte blanche to do what they will," said Bruce Lane, a Transit Authority superintendent.

The agency frequently accommodates filmmakers shooting on location in the city. But Lane told New York Newsday this film crew wore out its welcome by disrupting subway traffic, knocking huge holes in a Brooklyn station ceiling and then trying to saw down a pole on a train in the Times Square station, apparently to get a better camera angle.

Martin Bregman, the film's producer, said the Transit Authority had been "totally uncooperative," but he would not discuss details until the filming in New York was complete, Newsday said.

The movie co-stars Pacino and Sean Penn, and is directed by Brian DePalma.

LOS ANGELES — Sportscaster Ahmad Rashad will be host of "Caesars Challenge," a daytime game show that debuts in June, NBC announced.

Rashad

Contestants will answer questions and unscramble words as they compete for more than $25,000 in prizes and a grand prize luxury car, the network said Wednesday. The half-hour show will be taped before an audience in a showroom at Caesars Palace, a casino hotel in Las Vegas.

Rashad, 43, was a Minnesota Vikings wide receiver before he became a sports commentator.

O'Leary: SSC is 'science that has been dreamed of'

WAXAHACHIE (AP) — Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary allayed fears Thursday that she is lukewarm on the super collider, calling the giant atom smasher "science that has been dreamed of for decades."

O'Leary's visit was her first to the super collider, which would be the world's largest scientific experiment. Backers of the project used the visit to personally gauge O'Leary's level of commitment to the $8.25 billion project.

Collider supporters became concerned earlier this year when O'Leary told reporters that she does "not feel passionately" about the project. In fact, one collider official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said earlier that "there are mixed signals" from O'Leary on the project.

But following a General Accounting Office report critical of the super collider's management, O'Leary defended the collider and has since said: "I and my administration continue to support this project."

She reiterated that view Thursday after examining the high-powered dipole magnets and peering down the 245-foot shafts where construction on the collider's 54-mile underground tunnel is progressing.

Scientists hope the giant particle accelerator will offer clues to the origin of matter.

"The issue here is whether we as a nation are interested in providing the benefits of the highest science and physics to our people," O'Leary said.

"One could not have imagined in the 60's not shooting for the moon. I cannot imagine in the 90's not completing this project," she said, as about 150 super collider workers and media looked on.

Collider laboratory spokesman Russ Wylie said criticism of O'Leary was "unwarranted."

"I've never heard a stronger department endorsement of the project than the one she gave today," he said.

O'Leary also used the event to introduce Houston attorney Bill White as her deputy secretary.

Congressional opponents already are gearing up for their annual fight to terminate the collider. They nearly succeeded last year, when the House voted to slash all funds. A furious lobbying effort saved the project.

Some on Capitol Hill contend White House support for the collider will ebb after a special Senate election in Texas in May, where the interim senator, Bob Krueger, faces a tough challenge.

Krueger toured the collider with O'Leary, as did Rep. Joe Barton, one of the Republicans running against Krueger in the May 1 election. Rep. Pete Geren, D-Fort Worth and Rep. Martin Frost, D-Dallas, also toured the facility.

"This is bigger than the Senate race. It is bigger than politics," said Barton, R-Ennis, whose district includes part of the collider.

The Energy Department has included $640 million in its fiscal 1994 budget for the collider, which would mark a 19 percent increase over current funding.

West Texas blaze continues to spread

FORT DAVIS (AP) — A fire that has been burning at the base of the Davis Mountains for close to a week continued to spread slowly Thursday, officials said.

Variable winds drove the blaze down H.O. Canyon, about 12 miles west of the McDonald Observatory. The northeast edge of the fire was spreading north toward a state highway about 8 miles from the observatory, said Sam Logan, fire information officer for the Texas Forest Service.

So far, fire crews have been able to get the fire 50 or 60 percent contained, mostly on the southern flanks.

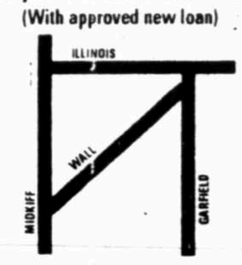

The fire has been burning since Saturday and has charred some 12,000 acres, mostly in Madera Canyon and adjacent canyons. It was apparently started by lightning.

It won't be a mystery if Texas loses out on thousands of jobs...

It's a classic case of greed that could cost Texas thousands of jobs and billions of dollars in investment and economic development.

And the high rolling corporate executives from New York City, Atlanta, and San Francisco who own Texas' major daily newspapers have their fingerprints all over it.

The out-of-state newspaper moguls see fiber optics as a threat to their profits, and are abusing the power of the press to protect their financial interests.

Fiber optics can help bring jobs to Texas. It will help businesses be more competitive and allow our state to make the most of technological advances in education and health care that will benefit rural and urban areas alike. It also has the potential to change the way we live by bringing interactive services that will allow you to shop and even bank from your own living room, no matter where you live.

Phone companies are ready to invest in a fiber optic system that will bring jobs for Texas as well as increased business for them—and have even offered to protect consumers with a four-year freeze in basic phone rates. Yet the newspapers are fighting against progress, looking only to protect the profits they're making now.

The newspaper publishers claim to be looking out for your interests, but the truth is they're just another special interest getting their way at your expense.

Call your state legislators today and let them know what you think about out-of-state newspaper corporations risking Texas jobs to protect their special interests.

Morris injured the shoulder during a fight in a March 30 exhibition game against the Cleveland Indians. He and Indians pitcher Jose Mesa, who touched off the fight by throwing a fastball behind Morris' head, have received three-game suspensions.
Dr. Melvin Post, a shoulder specialist, will operate on Morris in Chicago.

Brooklyn ruling

NEW YORK — In a ruling sure to be a hit with brokenhearted baseball fans, a federal judge ruled Thursday that the Los Angeles Dodgers abandoned Brooklyn in 1958 and cannot stop a restaurant there from using the team's nickname.
The decision by U.S. District Judge Constance Baker Motley came after a four-year legal battle that followed the 1988 opening of The Brooklyn Dodger Sports Bar & Restaurant in the Bay Ridge neighborhood.
"We won and we won big as we deserve to," said Richard Picardi, a part-owner of the bar that seats fewer than 100 people. "They just thought they would grind us down. They figured we were little guys in Brooklyn."
Calls for comment to lawyers for the Dodgers were not returned.
The dispute had torn open old wounds in a city that never quite got over losing the Dodgers to the West Coast in a move that ultimately led to the creation of the New York Mets.

TOMORROW . . .

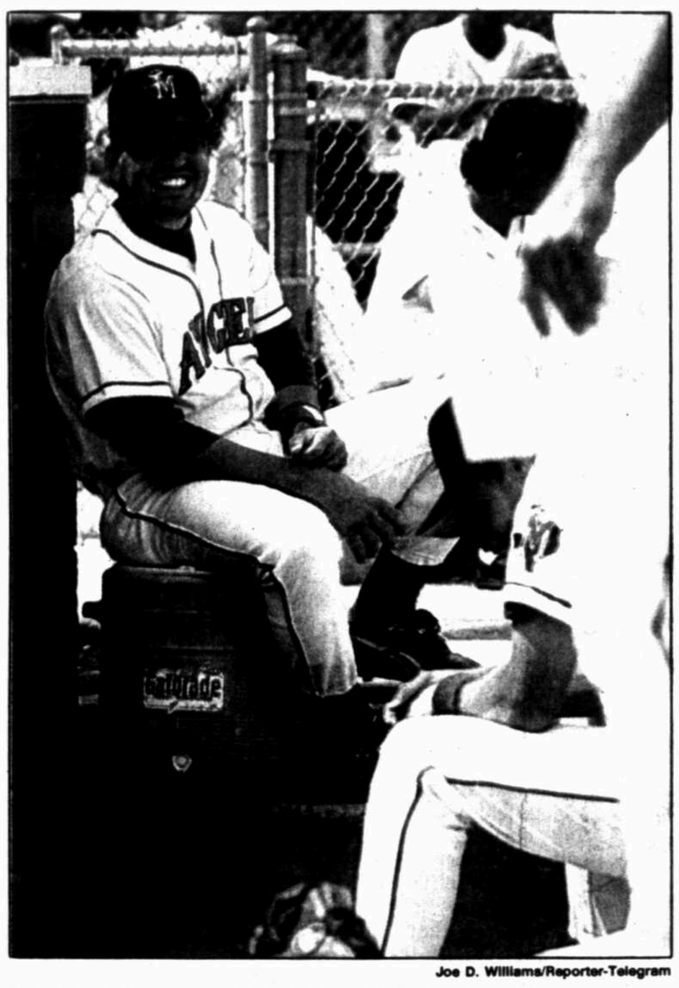

- Results from the Midland Angels season-opening game against the San Antonio Missions.

Midland manager changes tack as 1993 season begins tonight

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

Predicting the outcome of a minor league baseball race in the preseason is almost impossible. Don Long won't even try.

But Long, in his third year as manager of the Texas League Midland Angels, does have a pretty good feel for where the 1993 Midland team will be, and he can thank Pat Riley. Yes, the New York Knicks basketball coach.

Long

Long has instituted an innovative method of measuring effort that Riley outlined in his book "Showtime."

"(The Los Angeles Lakers) kept a chart of going after loose balls, boxing out, going after rebounds," Long said. "So I got the idea, and I've been trying for a couple of years to apply it to baseball, and it's taken awhile to find the things that are really important."

Long said some of the areas of the game that are charted are, "if a guy makes a great play, or makes a good read base running, or if a guy drives in a runner from third with two outs we write it down during the course of a game, and we all get together after the game and we go over those things both positive and negative."

Long has always put a great deal of thought into how to deal with his players and the game they play. Since Double A baseball is still highly instructional in nature as opposed to gearing solely toward winning a pennant, Long must be teacher, motivator, leader and friend. Last year's team, though, was a strain on the Washington native.

"I did a poor job last year," Long admitted. "I felt we got to the point where the personalities we had on the team ... they weren't real go-getters, guys who were going to play with a lot of intensity.

"As a result, I got to the point where I was really poor about thinking we couldn't get better, and as soon as you think a group of people can't get better, you're going to start thinking in the back of your mind that you're going to stop doing the things necessary to make them better."

Long said he actually, "stopped pushing them, and stopped doing the things I knew they had to do to be a competitive ball club." The 1993 season, though, will bring a change in attitude for everyone involved with the on-feild product.

Mills gets in district form

- Midland Lee's Tanisha Mills wins four events in Tall City Relays.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

Midland Lee's Tanisha Mills is the reigning Queen of the District 4-5A track world and she sat on her Memorial Stadium throne again Thursday night at the Tall City Relays.

Mills was a winner in four events, winning the shot put (35-5¼), the 400 meters (in a record 56.22), the 200 (25.68) and ran the anchor leg on Lee's winning 1600 relay.

Mills, the defending 5A state champion in the 400, ran the 200 and 400 in the same meet for the first time, winning both.

"This is kind of a test for me," Mills noted. "Coach (Bill Martin) wants to see if I can run the 400, 200 and 1600 relay without much turnaround time for those events. We will then decide what I will run at the district meet next week."

Coach Martin said, "I don't think there is enough turnaround time for her to run those three events back-to-back. She had a cramp after the 200."

So the mystery continues for the District 4-5A meet in Midland next Saturday as to where Mills will be seen, but you can almost bet she will be back in the 400 where she is a dominate force among state runners.

But this wasn't just a Mills' show. Two Midland High runners emerged as district threats, virtually from the land of the unknown.

MHS sophomore Elaine Salgado won the 100 hurdles for the second week in a row while Charles Christ posted a fine 2:01.30 to surprise in the 800, an event he was running for only the second time.

"I've been running all year, but I'm just a sophomore," Salgado said of her 15.59 win. "I'm just getting it right before district."

Christ, a senior, said, "I will repeat this next week at district. This is only the second time for me to run this event, but I felt strong. Since I'm new to the event, I don't know what the competition will be like at district, but I feel I can do this again."

Good fortune smiles on Angel owner

Miles Prentice considers it a stroke of luck that he was visiting Vermont the morning of February 26.

Prentice is a corporate lawyer, New York style. Around these parts, Prentice is better known to baseball fans as majority owner of the Midland Angels.

Patterson

The morning of February 26, you'll recall, is the morning terrorists detonated a bomb in the underground parking garage of the World Trade Center, killing five and injuring hundreds. Prentice's office with the law firm of Brown and Wood were located in the WTC on that tragic day.

Brown and Wood takes up the 57th, 58th and 59th floor at WTC, right about where television cameras captured trapped people who had busted out windows in a desperate attempt to breath something other than thick, black smoke.

Prentice, fortunately, was not among those in the building. Instead, he was at a board meeting at the Vermont Law School. But he does speak highly of the way his fellow New Yorkers reacted after the blast.

"It appears people in the building conducted themselves with a great deal of calm," he said. "There were no stories of any panic. It was really quite incredible. The entire communications system (at WTC) was knocked out and it was a situation that could have deteriorated quite rapidly, but the people in the building and the staff did a tremendous job making the escape from the building as orderly as possible."

Prentice has since changed law firms, and as a matter of fact had intended to resign from Brown and Wood the Monday following the blast but was forced to delay the announcement to his former employers un til the end of that week. Now, he says with a hint of relief in his voice, his new offices are only 23 floors up in a building located in midtown Manhattan.

"The firm was fortunate," Prentice said of his former associates. "We had one person with smoke inhalation and another person who was walking across the lobby at the time of the explosion. He was thrown and knocked out. Other than that we had no real problems at all."

When the blast occurred, Prentice was in a meeting with the president of the Vermont Technical College.

"I couldn't reach anyone in my old office, so I called my new office. Reception said, 'Mr. Prentice, do you know your building has been bombed?' People around the world had been calling wanted to know if I was all right. I was most fortunate in a lot of ways, but the old firm suffered."

Prentice said it took a month for things to return to normal for his old employers, and he still has yet to retrieve some business files from his old office.

With terrorists out of the way for now, Prentice can only think about one other subject.

"Let's talk about baseball," he said. "I'm really looking forward to the season."

Only six weeks removed from the worst terrorist incident in U.S. history, though, Prentice still can't help but think about how lucky he was to have been out of the state. And it was luck — not fate — to hear Prentice tell the story.

"I don't question those things," he said. "I just feel very lucky."

Baerga homers righty, lefty in same inning

Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

CLEVELAND — Carlos Baerga became the first player in major league history to homer from both sides of the plate in the same inning, highlighting a nine-run seventh inning that led the Cleveland Indians over the New York Yankees 15-5 Thursday night.

Baerga, batting right-handed against Steve Howe, hit a two-run homer to put the Indians ahead 8-5 with no outs in the seventh. With two outs, he hit a solo homer while batting lefty against Steve Farr.

Baerga is the first Indians player to homer twice in an inning. The feat, accomplished 26 times in the majors, was last done by Boston's Ellis Burks on Aug. 27, 1990.

Cleveland got eight hits in its big inning, including Alvaro Espinoza's three-run homer and single. Albert Belle was hit by a pitch from Howe after Baerga's first home run, then Steve Farr was ejected by plate umpire Al Clark after a pitch close to Belle's knee following Baerga's second homer.

Baerga went 4-for-5 with a double, scored four runs and drove in three. He marked the 92nd time that a switch hitter had homered from both sides of the plate in a game; Mickey Mantle and Eddie Murray each have done it 10 times.

White Sox 9, Twins 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Ron Karkovice and Tim Raines hit two-run homers, leading the Chicago White Sox past the Minnesota Twins.

Alex Fernandez allowed two runs and five hits in eight innings, walked three and struck out three. The 23-year-old right-hander was helped by his defense, which ended each of the first three innings by turning double plays. Roberto Hernandez gave up a pair of ninth-inning runs.

Pat Mahomes, also making his 1993 debut, walked four, hit a batter and threw two wild pitches in the first four innings. Because of his wildness, he gave up five runs despite allowing only four hits over six innings.

Tigers 3, Athletics 2

OAKLAND, Calif. — Reliever Mike Henneman got Jerry Browne to ground into a game-ending double play with the bases loaded, and the Detroit Tigers held on to beat Oakland for their first win of the season.

The Tigers, who gave up 21 runs in losing the first two games of the year to the Athletics, took a 3-2 lead into the ninth inning.

Henneman relieved to start the ninth and walked Scott Brosius, and an error by shortstop Travis Fryman put runners on first and second. A sacrifice by Eric Fox and an intentional walk to Rickey Henderson loaded the bases. Henneman escaped with his a save, however, when Browne hit a grounder to Fryman, who started the double play.

Red Sox 9, Royals 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Scott Cooper, Boston's replacement for five-time batting champion Wade Boggs, had three hits and four RBIs and the Red Sox pounded Kansas City for their first three-game sweep at Royals Stadium.

The Red Sox began a season with three straight road wins for the first time since 1957. The Royals are off to another slow start after going 1-16 to begin 1992.

By the time Boston had finished batting in the second inning, it was 8-0 and every starter except Luis Rivera had a hit off Mark Gubicza (0-1).

Cards' Smith ties Reardon save record

Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

ST. LOUIS — Lee Smith tied Jeff Reardon's career record with his 357th save as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the San Francisco Giants 2-1 Thursday.

Smith, a 35-year-old right-hander who has been in the major leagues since 1980, pitched the ninth for his second save of the season.

Mark Whiten, acquired by the Cardinals in March from Cleveland, snapped a seventh-inning tie with his first home run. Whiten lined a 2-0 pitch from rookie reliever Kevin Rogers into the left-field seats. The two-out drive was measured at 408 feet.

Donovan Osborne allowed five hits in seven-plus innings, and Gregg Jefferies homered in the first for the Cardinals, who had only four hits.

Pirates 5, Padres 4

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Pirates used Andy Van Slyke's two-run homer and Jeff King's two-run double to withstand three San Diego homers and sweep the Padres.

Fred McGriff, Gary Sheffield and Phil Plantier homered for San Diego, but once again the San Diego starter couldn't last five innings.

The Pirates supposedly lost much of their punch when free agent Barry Bonds — who returns to town Friday — signed with the Giants, but the Padres' pitching staff probably isn't convinced of that after getting swept in the opening two-game series.

Jay Bell went 5-for-7 with three doubles in the two games, rookie Carlos Garcia had four hits, Van Slyke had three hits and Jeff King drove in four runs. The Pirates have opened each of the last two years 2-0, the first time that's happened since the 1975-76 seasons.

Expos 14, Reds 11

CINCINNATI — The Montreal Expos scored 14 times in the first four innings, with Moises Alou and Darrin Fletcher driving in three runs each, then held off the Cincinnati Reds.

The Expos batted around twice in the first four innings off Tim Belcher and the Reds' beleaguered bullpen in taking a 14-6 lead. It was Montreal's biggest run production since a 15-9 victory over St. Louis on Oct. 1, 1990.

Larry Walker also homered for Montreal. Roberto Kelly hit a grand slam for Cincinnati and Kevin Mitchell also homered.

Montreal scored four in the second, two in the third and eight in the fourth off Belcher, Dwayne Henry (0-1) and Steve Foster. The Expos sent up nine batters in the second and 12 in the fourth to take a big lead that the bullpen nearly frittered away.

Braves 6, Dodgers 1

ATLANTA — Tom Glavine pitched six scoreless innings despite six walks and the Atlanta Braves won their home opener over the Los Angeles Dodgers before a sellout crowd that included Vice President Al Gore.

Deion Sanders hit two of Atlanta's five doubles. Pinch hitter Otis Nixon's bad-hop double drove in two runs in the sixth inning and broke the game open.

Ryan, Arlington Stadium retiring together

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — As the nation relishes the promise of a new season and the novelty of baseball in Denver and Miami, the Texas Rangers harken to a bygone time as they open their final season at Arlington Stadium tonight.

Fittingly, Nolan Ryan will start for Texas against the Boston Red Sox, kicking off his own good-bye.

Tom Vandergriff, the former mayor who played a critical role in luring the Washington Senators from the nation's capital two decades ago, will throw out the first ball, as he did in the team's first game here in 1972.

Next year, the team moves into plush new digs, a $168 million stadium under construction just up Ryan Expressway.

With his first pitch, Ryan will go where no man has gone before — a 27th major league season, a 53rd major league record.

And so begins the end of an era.

The 46-year-old right-hander said he doesn't want much fuss made over his last swing through American League ballparks. But Rangers pitching coach Claude Osteen wonders whether emotions can be so tempered.

"I doubt very seriously that there will be any more pitchers come along that are going to retire in the manner that he is retiring," Osteen said. "He's going to be leaving as a complete power pitcher.

"I've seen so many of them over the years, Robin Roberts, Tom Seaver, a whole bunch who more or less became off-speed pitchers in the last two or three years of their careers."

Not so with Ryan, who just this spring threw a seven-inning one-hitter.

Ryan is the last of a breed: the power pitcher who threw more fastballs than tricks, pitched every fourth day and was counted on for 300 innings a year. When he walks off the mound for the last time, he'll take with him the epoch from which he came.

Even if another talent like Ryan comes along, these are the days of five-man rotations, more off-speed pitches and fewer innings as franchises protect multimillion-dollar investments with lighter workloads.

"There will never be another one like him," Osteen said. "Most power pitchers make the transition and come down to earth to be a another pitcher like the rest, changing speeds and moving the ball around. Nolan changes speeds a lot, but he's still going out with complete power."

Still, the key to Ryan's performance is not the 95 mph heater, but the make-or-break curveball. Cut it sharply, and Ryan's on; the chance of another special day is at hand. Float it in flat, and he's in for a long, laborious day.

"If my curveball is doing what I want it to do, then my fastball's that much more effective," Ryan said.

"When he's on, that's total power. You know it from the very first pitch," Osteen said.

Ryan said he won't allow any farewell hoopla to interfere with the team's drive or his determination to make up for a disappointing 1992, when he missed six starts due to injury.

day, including a record breaking 43-11 triple jump by Michael Nunn, who broke his own record. Nunn was a double winner, also winning the long jump.

"I should do pretty good in district. I want to go to the regionals this year," Nunn said. "I think the only person I have to worry about is Bobby Smith of Abilene High, the defending champion, but he can be beat."

Lee's Scott McLeod won the shot put, as usual, with a 56-4¼, but was short of the 57-foot mark he hit last week in Kermit. Lee went 1-2-3 in the shot with Bernard Oldham and Scott Cloud.

"This was a small meet, but I wanted to get it out there more. Next week is what really counts and I plan to practice hard for that," McLeod said.

Lee sophomore Roderick Mayfield won the 300 hurdles in 40.16, but didn't run against district favorite Kendrick Parrett of Permian.

"I've had a better time (39.14) when I ran against Parrett, but I've got the second best time in the district. That's pretty good coming from a sophomore," Mayfield said.

Lee's Farrah Fisher took her first 800 victory in 2:34.39 to open a few more eyes.

"This is only the third time for me to run this event, but I have a feeling I'll be running this at district next week," Fisher said, who also ran a leg on Lee's winning 800 relay team.

Odessa Permian has won seven consecutive District 4-5A track titles and you can safely add No. 8. The Panthers rolled to 217 points to win the meet by a 67-point margin over Lee. MHS had its best point outing this year, deadlocked with San Angelo for third place with 77 points.

Permian could have easily beaten the 41.29 record in the sprint relay, but Lavorick Robinson juggled the baton before catching it in time costing mid-air, as Mojo finished with a 41.34. Permian won 10 events.

San Angelo won the girls division with 197 points, 59 points more than second place Lee. The Lady Bobcats finished a rare 1-2-3 in the triple jump, 3200 and 1600 events. In addition, Vanessa Garcia set a new high jump record of 5-10, beating the old mark of 5-4¼. That was the most impressive single event showing of the day.

Thursday's final results from the Tall City Invitational track meet at Memorial Stadium.

LONG: Skipper approach more hands-on in '93

(From 1C)

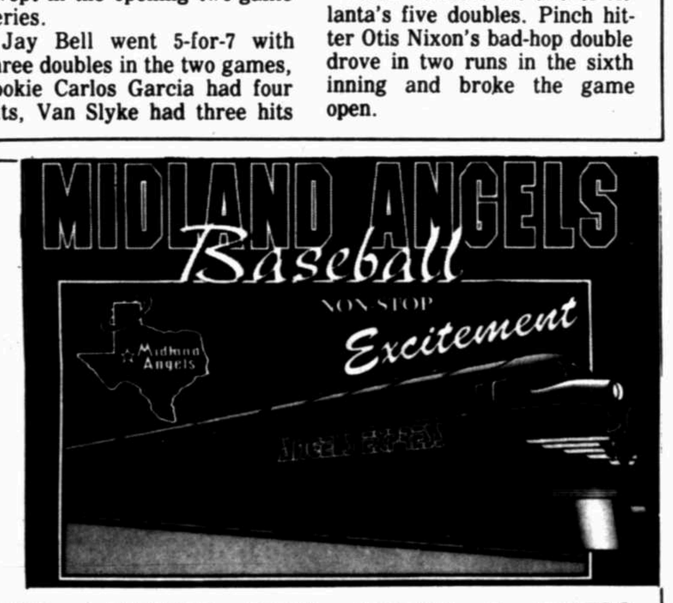

"I'm really getting involved in the workouts," he said. "Instead of standing and watching them, I'm getting out and working with the guys."

And what will be the end result of the Pat Riley techniques and a new-found approach to working with the team?

"What I'm really trying to get back to is making comparisons to ourselves," Long said. "If we stay on top of it, we'll kind of re-intensify ourselves, re-energize ourselves and play as well as we're capable of playing.

"We may struggle, and we may not, but we won't change our approach."

Chap golfers finish second

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Midland College finished second in the Scottsdale Community College Invitational golf tournament, even though the Chaparrals were without the services of top players Stephen Dundas and Guy Redford.

As the British Amateur champion, Dundas earned the right to play in this week's Masters, and Redford is also in Augusta, Ga., as a spectator.

The Chaps were led individually by Luke Mongrain, who shot a two-day total of 145 for second place in the medalist standings. Scottsdale's Brian Kontak was first at 136.

Scottsdale also won the team title with a total score of 579, 14 strokes better than the Chaps.

Results from the Scottsdale (Ariz.) Community College invitational golf tournament:

Team Standings: 1. Scottsdale Community College, 282-297—579; 2. Midland College, 299-294—593; 3. Brevard (Fla.) Community College, 301-300—601; 4. Florida Community College, Jacksonville, 307-305—612; 5. Phoenix Junior College, 303-310—613; 6. PIMA Community College, 313-312—625; 7. Odessa College, 308-319—327.

Rangers fall in 16-11 slugfest

GREENWOOD — Greenwood's baseball team scored 11 runs but saw its record fall to 4-15 in its second season, as the Rangers lost to the Odessa High junior varsity 16-11 here Thursday.

Rusty Purser had a big day with the bat for Greenwood, driving in three runs on a 2-for-5 effort. Bucky Smith was 3-for-5 with two RBI, while Casey Oso was 3-for-5 with one RBI.

The next game at the Greenwood diamond will be next Tuesday, when the Ranger JV plays the Fort Stockton JV.

Brooks named basketball coach at UH

HOUSTON (AP) — University of Houston assistant Alvin Brooks was named the school's basketball coach Thursday, the fourth in the program's 47-year history.

Brooks, 33, replaces Pat Foster, who left more than two weeks ago for University of Nevada-Reno.

"Obviously I'm very excited. I think this is a fantastic day in my life," said Brooks.

Shaw breaks 3-pointer record

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Brian Shaw set an NBA record with 10 3-pointers and scored 32 points as Miami beat Milwaukee 117-92 Thursday night.

Shaw sank six 3-pointers in the first quarter and added four in the third period to break the record of nine held by Dale Ellis and Michael Adams.

The record-breaker came with 52 seconds left in the third quarter. Overall, Shaw was 10 of 14 from long range.

Ellis made nine 3-pointers for Seattle against the Los Angeles Clippers in in 1990. The following year, Denver's Adams tied the record against the Clippers.

Shaw made three 3-pointers during a 1:43 stretch in the third quarter as Miami took a 73-54 lead.

Miami, which led 83-71 after three periods, opened the fourth quarter with a 20-2 run to break the game open.

Rony Seikaly had 17 points and 21 rebounds for Miami, which has won 17 of its last 26 games in a late-season bid to qualify for the playoffs.

Knicks 110, Celtics 88

NEW YORK — The New York Knicks clinched their first Atlantic Division title since 1989, beating the Boston Celtics behind Patrick Ewing's 31 points.

The Knicks, who have a 10-game lead with nine games remaining, also extended their lead over Chicago to 1½ games in the Eastern Conference. The winner will earn homecourt advantage for a possible meeting in the conference finals.

The Celtics trailed just 53-49 after a 7-0 run in the third quarter before Ewing and Doc Rivers, playing with an eight-stitch cut on his chin, led a 12-4 run that put the Knicks back in control.

Ewing scored six of his 12 third-quarter points during the burst and Rivers had four points and two steals that led to baskets.

Rockets 95, Jazz 90

SALT LAKE CITY — Hakeem Olajuwon scored 27 points and blocked eight shots as Houston survived a furious fourth-quarter Utah rally.

Vernon Maxwell added 21 points for the first-place Rockets, who won their fourth straight to maintain a three-game lead over San Antonio in the Midwest Division.

Karl Malone had 23 points and 12 rebounds for Utah, which dropped 6½ games behind Houston. John Stockton added 16 points and 11 assists for the Jazz, who have lost four of five games against the Rockets this season.

The Rockets led by 23 points in the third quarter and 14 early in the fourth before Malone, held to just six first-half points, sparked the Jazz comeback.

Spurs 112, Clippers 108

SAN ANTONIO — Dale Ellis scored 25 points and San Antonio snapped a two-game home losing streak, beating the Los Angeles Clippers to sweep their four-game season series.

The Spurs also got 21 points from David Robinson, 20 from Antoine Carr and 18 from Avery Johnson.

Danny Manning led the Clippers with 31 points. Ron Harper added 21 points and Ken Norman had 18.

San Antonio, which shot just 58 percent from the line in its previous two games, made 37 of 44 (84 percent) against the Clippers. Los Angeles attempted only 18 foul shots.

Pistons 100, Nets 98

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Isiah Thomas hit two free throws with 3.5 seconds left and Detroit continued its late bid for a playoff berth by beating New Jersey.

Thomas scored 11 of his 25 points in the final 5:50 as the Pistons won their fourth straight game and seventh in their last nine.

The Pistons are now tied with Orlando (35-37) for the ninth-best record in the Eastern Conference.

MASTERS: Five tied for lead at 67

and, for at least one brilliant spring day, assume major roles in golf's most treasured tournament.

There was 53-year-old Jack Nicklaus, the greatest of them all, finding the spur he needed in a gentle jibe from a spectator, and going on to a 67 that tied for the first-round lead with Janzen, Larry Mize, Corey Pavin and Tom Lehman.

There was 50-year-old Ray Floyd, a former Masters winner and a runner-up last year, just one stroke back at 68.

There was 63-year-old Arnold Palmer, still called "The King" by his peers, running off an opening string of three consecutive birdies and renewing an old rivalry.

There was 43-year-old Tom Kite, the U.S. Open champion, who refused to yield to a painful back injury and managed a 73.

"If it went out, it went out," he said, "but I wasn't going to back down."

And there was Tom Watson, also 43, who took three straight one-stroke penalties for an 8 on the 13th hole, then finished with five birdies to salvage a remarkable 71.

Some of the game's more current stars were not so fortunate.

Defending champion Fred Couples said he "got away with a bunch of bad shots" in a round of 72. PGA title-holder Nick Price also was at par for the day.

Greg Norman could do no better than a 74, but British Open champ Nick Faldo of England checked in with a 71.

But the name that excited everyone was Nicklaus, the oldest man ever to lead this tournament at any stage.

It was a question from a spectator that spurred Nicklaus.

"Have you seen what Arnold's doing?" someone asked as he walked to the first tee.

Nicklaus looked up and saw that his old friend and golfing nemesis had opened with a birdie-birdie-birdie.

"We're still competitive," he said. "I didn't want to let Arnold get ahead of me."

He didn't let anyone get ahead of him.

"Surprised? Let's just say I'm very pleased," he said, adding: "I don't want to be too surprised. I have to play again tomorrow."

Someone asked if he thought he could win, Nicklaus said: "If I didn't, I'd excuse myself and go home.

"It was considered pretty phenomenal when I won in '86. I was 46 then. I'm 53 now. There's not much difference between the way I was then and the way I am now."

But there's a lot of difference between the way he is now and the way he was a year ago. He didn't win. Not on the PGA Tour, not on the Senior Tour. He had back troubles. He had hip problems. His swing deteriorated.

But an exercise program eased physical problems and almost restored his swing.

"I found a little something on the practice tee yesterday," he said. "It just kind of fell into place. I could control the ball again. I controlled it better today than I have in a long time."

Still, a few got away.

One was on the par-3 6th, where a 5-iron missed the green, and a chip into the bank failed to reach the putting surface.

Nicklaus saved par with a 15-foot putt. "One of two shots that kept the round going," he said. The other was a 10-foot, par-saving second putt on the 10th.

He also pull-hooked a drive on the 13th into an azalea bush, had to take an unplayable lie and made his only bogey of the day.

But much of the rest of it was like the Nicklaus of '86, or even '76, or even '66.

MC's Dundas battles case of nerves

Staff report

AUGUSTA, Ga. — It was obvious in the early going of his first-ever Masters golf tournament that Stephen Dundas was nervous.

Trying to get over a literal case of shaky hands, the Midland College sophomore started out the first tournament round Thursday by going double bogey-bogey-bogey. He had two more bogeys on the first nine holes to finish the front side at 7-over par. And even after he shot 1-under on a back nine that includes the fabled Amen Corner, Dundas was still a bit awestruck after his opening round of 78.

"My hands are still shaking," he told one reporter.

Dundas, a 19-year-old from Glasglow, Scotland, earned the right to play in the Masters by winning the British Amateur Championship. But though he may be the best non-professional golfer in the Queen's realm, Dundas is finding out this week he has a lot left to learn.

"He played a practice round with Seve Ballesteros and Gary Player Wednesday. They were extremely nice to him and very courteous. He had a good practice round and I feel like he learned a lot. It's amazing how the older players show the younger players a lot of respect and make them feel comfortable in a very exciting and unsure situation," said MC golf coach Delnor Poss, who is in Augusta with Dundas.

After playing in a threesome that included Mark McCumber in Wednesday evening's par 3 tournament, Dundas was able to see legends such as Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer in action.

"Today (Thursday) he was paired with Tom Watson. Understandably, he was extremely nervous to start off with. But then he played Amen Corner at 1-under and we were real excited.

"It showed a lot of character for a guy who just turned 19 in December to play the last 11 holes in 1-under at the Masters. And over that stretch, Watson birdied five straight holes (after triple bogeying 13) for a 71. I just thought it was an exceptional display of golf for a person his age," Poss said.

Prices sink

NEW YORK — Oil prices dropped again on Thursday as the oil market grew more concerned that Kuwait might return to full production, possibly destroying the output reductions agreed to in February.

Kuwait has threatened to open its oil taps unless other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries abide by the cutbacks.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in May settled at $20.22 per barrel, down 15 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. Crude has slipped 43 cents a barrel this week since estimates that OPEC exceeded its own quota by about 700,000 barrels last month.

Analysts' estimates particularly point to Iran as a violator of the quotas, which were intended to force world oil prices higher.

A meeting of OPEC's monitoring committee is scheduled for Sunday and an informal OPEC meeting is due to take place on Monday.

The Nymex is closed on Good Friday.

Dollar drops

NEW YORK — The dollar sank against most major currencies Thursday, tumbling to another post-war low against the Japanese yen, in a selloff incited by falling interest rates in the U.S. bond market.

In New York, the Japanese yen ended at 113.40 yen, the same as the London close and down from 113.50 yen in New York late Wednesday. It was another post-war record low for the dollar against the Japanese currency.

A pound fetched $1.5275 late in New York, compared to $1.5135 Wednesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Wednesday's quotes included: 1.6065 German marks, down from 1.6190; 1.4785 Swiss francs, down from 1.4910; 5.4395 French francs, down from 5.4770; 1,573.50 Italian lire, down from 1,591.00; and 1.2571 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2631.

Dow eases

NEW YORK — Stocks closed modest lower Thursday as jitters about first-quarter earnings canceled out positive news on inflation and a drop in interest rates.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 0.54 point to 3,396.48, ending the week with a gain of 25.67 points. The stock market will be closed on Good Friday.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by about 10 to 9 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 984 up, 880 down and 619 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 282.48 million shares, down from 296.30 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index fell 0.48 to 243.84. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 1.43 to 416.24. The NASDAQ Composite index fell 2.55 to 666.33.

Producer prices rise 0.4 percent

■ Gasoline, fuel oil lead increase; best news on inflation's over, economists warn.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Prices paid to farmers, factories and other producers jumped a worrisome 0.4 percent in March, driven up by a blip in gasoline and fuel oil prices, the government said Thursday. Economists warned that the best news on inflation is over.

Other reports, public and private, show the economy continuing to grow — but slowly. Many major retailers said sales in March were down from a year ago. New claims for unemployment benefits dropped in early April, but less than expected. And businesses said they plan the biggest increase in new equipment and buildings in four years.

Much of the March increase in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index was attributed to special factors, including energy costs and a pre-Easter rise in egg prices.

That left the increase in so-called core prices — prices excluding the volatile food and energy sectors — at only 0.1 percent in March.

"The (financial) market reaction was very happy because core inflation was up only one tenth, but I'm less than happy because I do eat and I also drive a car and heat my home," said economist Paul W. Boltz of T. Rowe Price and Associates, a mutual fund company in Baltimore.

Analysts said inflation wasn't in any danger of roaring out of control, nevertheless they said the economy probably has strengthened enough to rule out improvements in inflation.

Producer prices also had risen 0.4 percent in February following a 0.2 percent increase in January.

Taken together, the first three months of the year represent an annual inflation rate of 3.9 percent, the worst rate in any quarter since the final three months of 1990 and more than double the 1.6 percent rise for all of last year.

Boltz said he expects producer price inflation of about 2 percent for all of this year and consumer price inflation of about 3.4 percent, up from 2.9 percent in 1992.

"Inflation is not dead. It's not zero. It's a solid 3 percent and looks to be going up. At 3 percent inflation, prices double every 24 years," he said. "The message here is that the best news on inflation is behind us, but the deterioration will be very gradual."

The Labor Department is scheduled to report Friday on consumer prices in March.

In other reports Thursday:

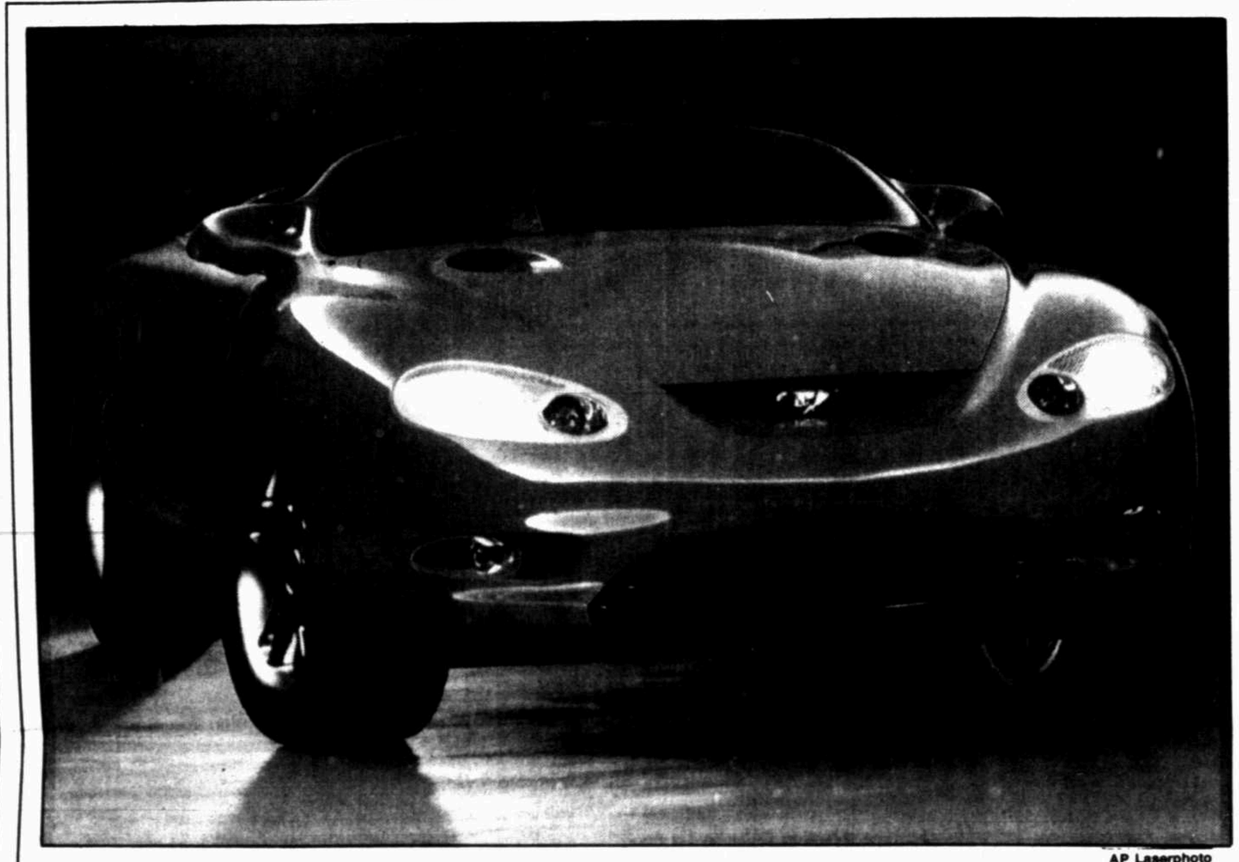

■ Unsettled weather and shoppers' uncertainty about taxes and the economy continued to pummel retail sales in March. Many storeowners reported business was down from year-earlier levels, or, like industry leader Wal-Mart Stores Inc., posted meager advances.

■ American businesses told the Commerce Department they plan to increase investment on new buildings and equipment by 6.6 percent, to $582 billion, this year.

■ New claims for unemployment insurance dropped by 9,000 to 369,000 during the week ended April 3, the Labor Department said. However, the drop was only half what economists expected and followed a 31,000 increase the week before.

"When we step back, the basic picture is one of an economy in a sedate advance," said economist Robert G. Dederick of Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. "Businesses . . . haven't been hiring people, but they've been buying equipment and that's been a significant support to the expansion."

At the White House, spokesman George Stephanopoulos said the new figures on jobless claims were fresh evidence of the need for President Clinton's $16.3 billion economic stimulus package, now bottled up in the Senate.

U.S. retailers report sales sag in March

Associated Press

Wintry weather and consumer nervousness about taxes and the economy punished the nation's biggest retailers in March, leaving storeowners to announce disappointing sales results Thursday.

Many retailers reported business was down from year-earlier levels. Others, such as industry leader Wal-Mart Stores Inc., posted only small gains.

Sales dipped during the first half of March as a winter storm in the East and an assortment of bad weather in other parts of the country kept shoppers out of the malls or even shut stores down. Business revived in late March and the first few days of April with the return of spring-like temperatures.

But retailers said consumers' growing concern about the economy — and higher taxes under President Clinton's budget plan — was evident even when the weather cleared.

Sears to convert ex-catalog stores

CHICAGO (AP) — Sears, Roebuck and Co. said Thursday it will convert about 350 former catalog stores across the country to new, small retail stores by year's end.

Sears said the stores would be operated by independent dealers and sell appliances, electronics, and law and garden equipment.

On Jan. 25, Sears told the owners of its 2,000 catalog stores that most would have to close by the end of the year because Sears was pulling out of the catalog business. But Sears also said it might keep some of the independently owned stores open as retail outlets.

The end of Sears' catalog business is part of a larger survival effort, announced at the same time, that includes closing 113 other Sears stores and cutting about 50,000 full and part-time jobs to save an estimated $300 million a year.

Agency pinpoints minority lawyers for big jobs

By John H. Cushman Jr.
N.Y. Times News Service

ATLANTA — Susan Davis, who has a new law practice in Columbia, S.C., had never thought of the Resolution Trust Corp. as a potential client. But that changed after the agency pulled her name from a state bar association list and invited her to a conference this week on opportunities for minority and female lawyers.

"I had no idea there was any work to do for them," said Ms. Davis, who was among more than a hundred lawyers who attended the workshop. The corporation, which seizes bankrupt savings and loan associations and sells their assets, spends about $1 million a day for legal fees.

With years of work ahead, the corporation is in the midst of an aggressive campaign to steer as many legal contracts as possible to minority and female lawyers, as mandated by the law that established the agency. The lawyers are handling everything from routine title searches and foreclosure proceedings to complex lawsuits involving responsibility for a failed savings and loans.

Many government agencies have similar programs to favor small businesses or those owned by women and racial minorities. But none of them have pinpointed lawyers for so much business. With a caseload of 76,000 legal matters at the start of the year, including 32,000 cases in litigation, the corporation is in an especially good position to motivate lawyers to apply for inclusion on the list of outside counsel approved by the agency.

That is even truer when it comes to women, blacks, Asians, American Indians and Hispanic lawyers, who get preferred treatment when they bid for the corporation's work.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Redeeming fund shares easy way to set basis

By Bill Doyle

Q: I have been investing in a municipal bond mutual fund for nearly 10 years, reinvesting all dividends and periodically adding to my account as extra money became available. Today, it is worth about $250,000, with a monthly dividend of approximately $1,200.

Doyle

While the dividends are tax-free, I know capital gains are not. Approaching retirement, my wife and I expect to begin cashing fund shares to pay for travel and other expenses.

What is the easiest method for computing our "basis" — cost for tax purposes — so we will know our taxable capital gain?

A: Far and away, the easiest way would be to redeem all your fund shares in one shot.

Then, your basis would be the total of the money you originally invested, the amounts you added periodically and all those dividends you reinvested to buy more shares. If your fund declared any capital gains distributions and you reinvested that money, it too should be included in your total basis.

The difference between that total basis and the proceeds from the redemption would be your profit or loss. For your sake, let's hope it's a profit.

When you redeem just some of your shares, the calculation of your basis is much more complicated. The Internal Revenue Service allows you to choose between two basic methods, each of which has two variations.

You can use the specific identification — also called "identified share" — method or the average cost method.

With the specific identification method, you tell the mutual fund exactly which shares you want to redeem, using the confirmation statements you received when you made your purchases to identify the shares by the prices you paid and the dates on which you bought them. Do it in writing.

The variation there is first-in, first-out, through which you redeem your longest-held shares.

With the average cost method, you divide your total basis by the number of shares you own. The resulting number is your average basis per share, which applies if you use the single-category variation of average cost.

Using the double-category method, you divide your shares into two groups — long-term shares held more than one year and short-term shares owned for a year or less. Then, figure your average cost for each group.

Q: From a tax point of view, what is the most advantageous way to compute the basis of mutual fund shares I redeem in dribs and drabs?

A: The specific identification method. Instruct the fund to redeem the shares on which you have the highest cost. That way, you would realize a smaller capital gain.

Let's say you own 1,000 shares of XYZ Fund, purchased at prices ranging from $5 to $10 a share. Let's also say that fund's per-share redemption value is $11. By redeeming 100 shares, you would get $1,100, no matter what price you paid for those particular shares.

If you redeem 100 of the shares you bought for $5 each, you would realize a $600 capital gain, all of which would be taxable. But, if you redeem 100 of the shares you bought at $10 per share, your realized capital gain would be $100 and you would owe the revenooers less money.

Q: When I cashed in some of my mutual fund shares last year, I asked the fund's shareholder relations department to compute my cost basis on those shares. In return, I received a form letter claiming that cannot be done.

Why?

A: That form letter told a half-truth. Although most mutual fund management companies do not provide such information, about 20 do. Some even figure out shareholders' capital gains or capital losses when shares are redeemed.

Those fund organizations use the average-cost method to determine the tax liability.

There's a move afoot in Congress to require all mutual funds to provide such information.

All deposit accounts of First City, Texas - Midland, N.A. were transferred to New First City, Texas - Midland, N.A (hereinafter referred to as the "Bridge Bank") which had been organized and charted as a national bank in accordance with federal law as a means of preserving the going concern value of an institution pending a solicitation of offers for, or the disposition of, the institution.

On February 13, 1993, the Board of Directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation has determined that the Bridge Bank should now be dissolved. The Comptroller of the Currency has appointed the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation as Receiver of the Bridge Bank. The Receiver of the Bridge Bank has transferred the deposit accounts of the Bridge Bank to Texas Commerce Bank - Midland, N.A.

If you do not claim, ratify, or arrange to continue your deposit within eighteen (18) months after your deposit was transferred to Texas Commerce Bank - Midland, N.A. you may become a creditor of the Bridge Bank receivership rather than an insured depositor.

Texas Commerce Bank - Midland, N.A. has agreed to accrue and pay interest on interest bearing accounts at the interest specified in the respective deposit agreement. All transferred deposits are insured by the FDIC up to $100,000.00 Withdrawals may be made by depositors without payment of a contractual early withdrawal penalty. However, if the deposit account has been pledged to secure an obligation of the depositor to either First City, Texas - Midland, or the Bridge Bank any withdrawal thereof will be subject to the terms of the agreement governing that pledge.

If you have any questions about your account, please contact Texas Commerce Bank - Midland, N.A. at the following address:

NOTICE TO CREDITORS
OF
NEW FIRST CITY,
TEXAS - MIDLAND, N.A.

October 30, 1992, First City, Texas - Midland, N.A. was declared insolvent and closed by the Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was appointed Receiver. Pursuant to a Purchase and Assumption Agreement dated as of the same date, as amended, the receiver of First City, Texas - Midland transferred certain assets and liabilities to New First City, Texas - Midland, N.A. (hereinafter referred to as the "Bridge Bank"), the Bridge Bank having been organized and chartered as a national bank in accordance with federal law as a means of preserving the going concern value of an institution pending a solicitation of offers for, or the disposition of, the institution.

On February 13, 1993, the Board of Directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation has determined that the Bridge Bank should now be dissolved. The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency has appointed the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation as Receiver of the Bridge Bank. The Receiver of the Bridge Bank has entered into an agreement with the Texas Commerce Bank whereby the Texas Commerce Bank has assumed certain of the liabilities of the Bridge Bank.

If you have not received payment from the Texas Commerce Bank for the Bridge Bank's obligation to pay you or you have not been contacted by the Texas Commerce Bank concerning its assumption of the Bridge Bank's obligation to you by March 29, 1993, you must present your claim, together with proof, to the Receiver or such claims may be disallowed by the Receiver. Claims for liabilities not assumed by the Texas Commerce Bank must be filed by presenting to the receiver no later than June 16, 1993, at the following address:
