(By Associated Press)
OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 19.—A tornado of terrific force today cut a swath of death and destruction through the little church colony of Bethany, seven miles west here. Twenty-three persons were killed. One hundred were injured and approximately the same number of buildings were destroyed. Striking during a heavy rain storm, the tornado leveled a 200 yard wide path through the eastern edge of the town, burying many persons in the splintered wreckage of their homes.

HAYS, Kas., Nov. 19. (P)—Sixteen school children were injured, none dangerously, when a tornado demolished a rural schoolhouse 14 miles northeast of here at 11 a. m. today.

Dr. B. Anderson, Victoria physician who attended the injured, said all the boys and girls were cared for at their homes. Considerable other damage was done to farm property in the neighborhood.

after the storm had cleared to protect the scattered valuables from vandals. Dropping first a few miles south of Bethany, the twisting funnel of death wrecked the Camel Creek school house, killing four pupils and injuring the teacher and 12 other children.

Floyd Roettger, 12, one of the pupils, described how Miss Mary Proctor, the teacher, attempted to save the children and how he himself called an ambulance and removed two dead.

"It kept getting darker all the time," he related. "I was looking out the window. Soon I heard a loud noise. I shouted."

"The kids screamed. Miss Proctor told us to be quiet and all fall to the floor. Every one did. But before we were all down, it seemed the school was sliding. Then all of a sudden it crashed."

"The next thing I remember was a man telling me to call an ambulance. When I got back, I carried

Gang Rule Extends Scope

The rule of the gangster and the racketeer, seemingly so far removed from this section of the country, may not be as far removed as we are inclined to believe.

Not long ago the editor of the Morning Avalanche had occasion to visit in Houston. Noting a heavy percentage of local crime news in the columns of Houston papers, the Avalanche editor inquired of the editor of a Houston paper, one of the oldest, largest and finest papers in the whole Southwest, of the reason.

"Some of it," was the Houstonian's reply, "is due to slack business conditions and unemployment of the times. But we have actual proof that waves of robberies and hijackings are due to the spread of the gang system and in Houston today we undoubtedly have experienced gangsters, preying upon the public in several forms."

Yesterday's papers carried a story from Tulsa, where a race-track bookmaker, known as a "square gambler," had been kidnaped by gangsters and held for ransom. The dispatches included an announcement from police headquarters that the gambler's bodyguard, who has been on the job since threats to take the gambler "for a ride" last summer, was to attempt to make necessary "contact" with underworld bosses to secure release of the bookmaker.

What is true in Houston and Tulsa is probably also true in San Antonio, Dallas, Oklahoma City and other centers of population in the Southwest. Linking facts together leads one to believe that we of this part of the world, removed as we are from Chicago, New York, Cleveland and Detroit gang strongholds, may not be so safe from underworld invasion as we might think.

If it is only a step from the big cities to the secondary cities, then it will be only another step from places like Houston and Tulsa to places like Wichita Falls, Amarillo, Abilene, San Angelo and Lubbock. In other words, something isn't done at the top to put a stop to wholesale gang domination, the scourge of present-day civilization is apt to wrap its tentacles about larger territory and extend its operations to include many of us who are now basking in the belief that we are and will always be immune.

Sooner or later the arrogant gangs must be smashed, their leaders and followers placed behind the bars where they belong. If police are unable to cope with the situation there is always the National guard, the army, the navy—and, if necessary, the United States Marines!

It is sound overdraw to hint of the necessity of calling upon the armed forces of the nation to put down the gangs but time may show that it is not such an exaggeration, after all.

INCREASE IN CRIME

What have the widely advertised wars on crime in the cities of the United States accomplished? Seeking the answer, the National Bureau of Criminal Investigation undertook a survey with disappointing results. Crime has increased everywhere, so the only claim the police can make is that but for their "crime wars" the increase might have been greater.

The survey covered 772 cities in 44 states and the period from January to August. It reveals that petty larceny accounted for 43.6 per cent of all crime; automobile theft, 26 per cent; aggravated assault, 4.6 per cent; murder, 6 per cent and other minor classifications completing the total. There was an increase of 10 per cent in crime in August over July, and these figures are exclusive of the New York and Chicago contributions to crime.

Outside of New York and Chicago, the most lawless cities are Detroit, Los Angeles, Cleveland, San Francisco, St. Louis, Philadelphia and Newark in the order named. But some of the smaller cities would take precedence over the larger were the percentage figured on a per capita of population basis. Cincinnati having a larger murder rate than Chicago on this basis.

Practical Health Problems

FATS IN DIET ARE BIG AID IN GENERATING ENERGY

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN, Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

The chief advantages of fats in the diet of an infant are that they provide twice as much energy as either carbohydrates or proteins. If fats are omitted from the diet, it is necessary to give large amounts of carbohydrates and protein in order to make up the energy value. Fats have chemically the same composition as carbohydrates or sugars, except in the relations of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen in the molecule.

When fat enters the blood, some of it is carried to the tissues under the skin and deposited there. The rest of it goes to the liver, the great chemical factory of the body, where it is changed to such a form that makes it useful as fuel.

During starvation the fat that has been stored away is picked up by the blood, carried to the liver and put in proper form for use where needed.

There is fat in the milk of both the human and the cow, as well as in the milk of other animals. The nature of the fat and the quantity differs with the species. The fat of the cow's milk is approximately the same as that in human milk, so far as the quantity is concerned, but that fat of cow's milk is more irritating to the intestines than that of human milk and is also less digestible.

When infants are overfed with fat they are likely to be constipated. If very little sugar and a good deal of protein is given at the same time, if, however, a great deal of sugar is given at the same time and relatively little of the curd protein or casein, an excess feeding of fat will produce diarrhea.

One of the most astonishing achievements of modern medical science is the remarkable response to the use of a correct method of infant feeding prescribed by a specialist who studies the conditions, finds out the food which the child has been receiving examines the excretions of the child and then prescribes a correct formula.

Almost immediately the disturbance of digestion will cease, the child will sleep well, become alert, begin to gain weight and in other ways to approach normalcy.

What Other People Think

The average society girl is "the gifted amateur"—that curse of this country which hates professional talent because it hates taking pains.—Shaw Desmond.

The words "high-brow" and "low-brow" stand for a most vulgar and unreal distinction.—Professor T. H. Pears.

There is just about as much truth, I believe, in the legend of the theater having spun out its brief existence as there is in that the "road" is over and done with.—Ephial Bazemore.

Election Is Called A Bomb

By CHARLES P. STEWART, Central Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Hard times may or may not have been the direct cause of the other day's election result.

Personally I think not—not directly. Indirectly, yes, however. If it had not been for hard times, I think that millions of voters who evidently voted their convictions on Nov. 4 would have felt that they could not afford to vote such convictions.

While "prosperity" lasted, I think that no policy which the party in power could have conjured up would have induced a majority of the voters to vote against the party in power. They may not have been very sure that they were beholden to the party in power for all the "prosperity" they were enjoying, but neither were they sure that they were not being taken any chances.

With prosperity gone, they could vote as they chose and possibly would have liked to vote in 1928 or even 1924 maybe. In the sense that hard times, according to my humble calculations, set the voters free to vote to suit themselves last election day, hard times may be said, then, indirectly to have influenced the result most decidedly—in fact, decisively.

IT HAPPENED none too soon, and it is no particular reflection on the G. O. P. to say so.

The last 10 years' trend of government in Washington has been in a direction in which war and immediately post-war conditions started it trending. It is likely enough that the trend would have been the same way under a series of Democratic as under a series of Republican administrations.

It has been a trend toward a destination where material prosperity is placed above everything. This is not merely my own individual opinion. If I had room I could quote a long list of eminent authorities on the subject—nobilitates like Senators Norris, Tom Walsh, Couzens, Caraway and the late Senator La Follette. I got a long interview once from Senator King on our public life's drift entirely away from the spiritual; another one from Senator Shipstead on the growth of Mussolini-ism in America.

Of course material prosperity is fine—but not at the sacrifice of everything else—democracy, liberty, human rights, every high ideal. That's what these senators, among many others, were free to admit that they were fearful of.

Moreover, they agreed that the tendency was accelerating—threatening to "arrive" and dig itself in. I believe some folk would be surprised if they realized the extent to which, in recent years, responsible public men in Washington have seriously discussed the prospects of popular government's extinction in America.

But while prosperity hung on there appeared to be nothing that anyone could do about it.

THE ELECTION result, however, has had the effect of a bomb bursting in the very vitals of the steam roller of materialism. It does not matter so much what party profits by the explosion.

The essential thing is that the burst has scattered the machine's eggs and rams all over the landscape. I believe some folk would be surprised if they realized the extent to which, in recent years, responsible public men in Washington have seriously discussed the prospects of popular government's extinction in America.

IF THE OLD firm of political contractors is permitted to continue on the job two years hence it will be an exceedingly chastened firm of contractors. If the old firm's rival firm is given the contract instead, it can be depended on to instruct its driver to be mighty careful with that steam roller throughout the ensuing quadrennium—not that it is any better as a firm, than the other one, but it will be afraid of its life.

Or maybe both firms are on the ragged edge of disintegrating, to be supplanted by a couple (or more) of new firms.

That really would be the most satisfactory outcome.

The two old firms have been dead on their feet for a long while. People repeatedly have expected one or the other or both of them to blow up and go into liquidation, but hitherto they have kept on worrying along somehow.

AT ANY RATE, it is a mistake to think of Nov. 4's catastrophe to the G. O. P.'s steam roller in terms of what will happen to the roller's driver in 1932 or in terms of what driver Aunty Democracy probably will suggest to put in charge of the roller, should the contract be awarded to Aunty.

The thing to think of is that our spell of hard times, painful as it has been, is one of the best things that ever happened to this country.

It gave the voters a chance to express themselves.

ABOUT GROWING OLD

The psychologist who said the other day that old age and death is a mere matter of psychology, seems to be skipping about the edge of sophistry. I claim full credit for modern knowledge which has lengthened human life five years in two generations is one thing, but to reach from that for a logical conclusion that life may be prolonged indefinitely by mere psychological effort is something different. This would be comforting to those who desire to live to be 200 years old, but before men reach that age other knowledge than merely how to wish for prolonged existence will be necessary.

To fix an arithmetical program by which human life is to be lengthened according to the ratio of the first modern steps is to invite disappointment. Some time, possibly, men may live to be much older than in this generation, but when that time arrives human beings will be found living as well as thinking in a manner far from the habits of 1928. Physical death and old age is something more than a simple matter of psychology, at least in man's present state of knowledge.

The young fellows now call me Sir. That very plainly indicates they think I am growing old.—Dr. William Stephen Rainford.

Today's One-Minute Sermon

Then said he unto the disciples, It is impossible but that offences will come; but who unto him, through whom they come!

It was better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he cast into the sea, than that he should offend one of these little ones.—St. Luke, xvii, 1, 2.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON A PRISONER GAINED 40 POUNDS IN THE DEATH HOUSE.—The murderer who gained 40 pounds awaiting execution, pending his emperor's confirmation of the sentence, was Mombé, of Epinal, who was convicted of murdering his wife and infant. He was executed in 1869. The bizarre physical effect on him of the death house was related in a paper read before the 8th International Congress of Penitentiaries in Paris, 1910, by Dr. Douglas Clayborne.

THE IRON PILLAR.—The Iron Pillar, which I sketched in the Mosque of Kutubul Islam, Delhi, is one of the most curious antiquities in India. It is a solid shaft of wrought iron, more than 16 inches in diameter, and 23 feet 8 inches in length. According to tradition it was Anang Pal, the founder of the Tomar dynasty, who erected the pillar in Delhi after its removal from Bihar in the ancient country of Magadha, Gupta Empire. Its inscriptions date back to 400 A. D. It has been exposed to the elements since that date without rusting. Due to the pure content of the iron. Analysis of its material shows that it is 99.72 per cent pure iron.

Heart Hungry

by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN AUTHOR OF "RASH ROMANCE" © 1930 by NEA SERVICE, INC.

Adventure enters the life of CELIA MITCHELL, 17, when she learns the father she has supposed dead is alive and wealthy. She leaves her unpretentious home in Baltimore to live in New York with her father, JOHN MITCHELL, and her aristocratic grandmother. Margaret Rogers, Celia's mother is now a widow, having divorced Mitchell and remarried later. Barney Shields, young newspaper photographer, is in love with the girl and before leaving Baltimore Celia promises to be loyal to his love. Mitchell asks Evelyn Parsons, beautiful widow, to introduce the girl to young people. Mrs. Parsons agrees, considering Celia a means to win Mitchell's affections. She soon becomes jealous of the girl and schemes to get rid of her. Parsons introduces Celia to Tod Jordan, fascinating but of dubious character and does all she can to encourage this match even after Mitchell forbids Celia to see the young man. Tod Duncan, socially prominent, becomes Celia's loyal friend. The girl goes to Mrs. Parsons' Long Island home for a lengthy visit and Jordan calls there frequently. He and Celia attend the races and there she encounters Barney Shields, now employed by a New York picture service. Celia meets Shields next day and they have dinner together. He asks if she still cares for him and Celia admits she has lost her heart to Jordan. A few days later Mrs. Parsons opens her apartment in town and Celia goes there as her guest. She meets Shields on the street one afternoon and is with him when Jordan suddenly appears. Jordan was with another man. They were talking briskly, coming toward Celia and Barney Shields. As yet the girl was sure Jordan had not seen them. His face was turned toward his companion. Instinct prompted Celia. She did not want Jordan to meet her with Barney. There would be much to explain. Her eye caught a sign in the store window they were passing, "Nash's Nuts." The sign read, "Extra special fancy shelled pecans. All varieties of salted nuts." The girl hesitated only a moment. "Oh, Barney, let's come in here! I want some cashews." She tugged at his arm and, somewhat surprised, he followed. They stepped into the tiny store. Behind a counter made of glass bins filled with nuts, a young man stood. "Something for you, ma'am?" he asked. "Yes, I mean—why, yes. Have you any cashew nuts?" "There was a guilty alertness in Celia's manner. She tried to smile to hide this.

Owe Konjola Lasting Debt Says This Man

Fort Worth Citizen, Confined To Bed, Astounded At Wonders Worked By New Medicine

MR. W. E. MONTGOMERY

"For years my health had been gradually breaking," said Mr. W. E. Montgomery, 1621 East Steller street, Fort Worth. "My stomach was giving me trouble for my food failed to digest and I had a constant burning sensation in my throat. I became very badly bloated and the gas pains were severe. I was so constipated that only the strongest laxative moved my bowels. Ten weeks ago I was confined to my bed with a nervous breakdown and I was forced to remain there for some time.

"The very first bottle of Konjola brought about such a change in my condition that my friends remarked 'about it. Three bottles in three weeks ended my long period of suffering. My digestion is now fine. My nerves are now calm and quiet and I am back at my work. I feel like a man of thirty five although I am twenty years older than that. I owe a lasting debt to this marvelous medicine."

Although Konjola works swiftly it is usually best to take this medicine over a period of from six to eight weeks. The cost is little enough when the results are considered.

Konjola is sold in Lubbock, Texas at Bowen's Drug Store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section. Adv.

Here is The New Taste Adventure

Have You Tried These Rare Central American Coffees That Women Everywhere Are Changing To?

Twice The Richness—Twice The Flavor
Never "Thin" Or "Flat"

TO the thousands upon thousands who are already using Folger's, of course it is an old story. But to you who are not, a brand new experience is in store! Your first taste of rare Central American mountain coffee!

In the tiny spots shown on the map are grown coffees that leading experts the world over concede have the tangiest flavor, the fullest mellow-rich body of probably any known today. They are utterly different in richness and flavor from any other coffee you have ever tasted.

But please don't take our word for this. We want you to try it yourself and see.

First Introduced By Folger

Years ago these coffees were first served in the old Bohemian restaurants of metropolitan San Francisco where they were brought by Folger. Travelers tasting them there were captivated. They wrote back for shipments. Connoisseurs among the European nobility, it is said, even purchased private plantations in Central America to secure these rare coffees — first for their own tables, and later to export commercially in Europe.

Through your grocer, Folger now brings you these coffees packed in flavor-sealed vacuum tins, always as fresh as they left the roasting ovens.

Accept A Pound To Try

Just go to your grocer and buy a pound of Folger's. Drink it tomorrow morning.

FOLGER'S COFFEE

Freighting Coffee In Costa Rica

Over roads that would wreck the mightiest motor truck, the trusty "Ox-Motors" haul tons of rare mountain coffee down to the sea.

Loading Central American Coffee for Export

The first Central American coffees imported by Folger, were transported by lazy trading schooners. Today they are carried by fast, luxurious liners of the Panama Mail Line, that speed passengers and freight to and from Central America on schedules that compare with Trans-Atlantic service.

VACUUM PACKED

Next morning serve the coffee you have been using. The third morning serve Folger's again. Then choose between them.

If for any reason you decide against Folger's, your grocer will refund your money. We'll pay him. That's fair, isn't it?

Heart Hungry

AUTHOR OF 'DAGS TOMMY' © 1920 & NEA SERVICE, INC.

"I-well, that I don't want you to meet my friends. I do! I know you and I'd want to meet each other a lot and I want you to meet. It's only that just now."

"Oh, don't bother to explain I get the drift all right."

"Barney you mustn't talk that way. You make me feel dreadful. Well, why should you want to meet my friends? I want to see you with a no-account like me?"

"Barney, please—"

He saw the base of tears filling her brown eyes. Instantly Shields was compassionate.

"See here, Celia, forget about it. He told her roughly. I didn't want to hurt your feelings. Sure, you've got a right to do what you want to. Don't think about it."

"Then you won't call yourself a no-account any more and think I don't want people to meet you?"

"Not if it makes you feel badly. I'll want."

The young man looked embarrassed. His voice was near tendering, and it was always embarrassing for Barney to show emotion. He changed the conversation to something about a building they were passing.

When they were in front of the apartment where Evelyn Parsons lived, Celia said with an effort:

"What if you come up and meet Mrs. Parsons? She's the friend I'm staying with."

Shields shook his head.

"Thank, he said. I'll have to be getting home. Got a night assignment and I want to drop in on the editor of the paper. Still he hesitated for a moment.

"Why don't you answer my note?" he asked.

"Thank you, I'm sorry about that. I've been so busy. You see, I've been working in an office of sorts so much. I've been meaning to call you up, but somehow I didn't get to it."

His life was unconvincing, but Celia understood that. She said she would call him.

"Why don't you call me again?" Barney grinned.

"I'd like to see you tonight—if it weren't for the Communists. Some sort of Red rally down on Fourteenth street that the office thinks is worth my valuable time."

"Are you going to make promises?"

"Yes, it's likely to bust into a riot. That's why I'm to be there."

"Oh, Barney, maybe it'll be dangerous."

"I'll be laughing like that child. Those boys go in for lots of oratory, but they're about all. Maybe you'll see some of my pictures in tomorrow's paper."

"I'll look. Only it scares me to think of you going to such places."

"Say—if that's all I had to worry about. Why this will be just nothing. I'll give you a thought. I'll try to call you up during the next few days. Maybe we can get together for dinner or see a show."

"I'd love that, Barney."

"Well, I'll telephone. Got to be going now. So long."

Celia entered the building and rang the bell for the elevator. She felt happier than she had been for days. Barney was willing to be friends again. As the lift bore her upward, she hummed a tune under her breath.

Mrs. Parsons' apartment was on the 22nd floor. It faced westward with a magnificent view of the cross skyline from the windows of the living room. The rooms were furnished in a ultra modern manner. Squat, dark wooden tables and cabinets, low chairs and divans upholstered in blue and silver, curious metallic ornaments and hangings of eggshell gauze at the windows.

Celia sat herself in. She pulled off her hat, passed her hair into place and walked into the living room.

"Oh, here you are!" Evelyn greeted her. "I've just sent Rose to bring tea. My dear, I'm simply exhausted. I've been in every shop on 5th street looking for those ribbon sandals. Fannie told me about you. You know she said she got them at Bend's, but that can't be true, because they told me they haven't even ordered any. I don't know how I'm to wear them. I simply went everywhere!"

"Couldn't you have them made?"

"Well, I'm going tomorrow to Harrison's. They made those blue pumps everyone thinks I bought abroad. Evelyn sank back against the divan. "I'm so worn out I've telephoned I won't be able to go to the Parkers' this evening. They'll have to get someone else to make up the table. I couldn't possibly play bridge!"

"I'm glad we're going to have tea," Celia said. "I'd like some, too."

"Have you been walking?"

"Yes, I went to the park and then I got to looking in shop windows and forgot all about the time."

The maid appeared with a large silver tray. She set it on the low table before Evelyn.

"Um—macarons! I love them!" Celia exclaimed. Mrs. Parsons poured a cup of tea and handed it to the girl.

"Macarons are fattening," Evelyn cautioned.

"Yes, but not just one or two." Celia helped herself to the plate of cakes. "I'm glad you're going to be here this evening," she said. "I've got something on and I was wondering what I could do to amuse myself."

Evelyn sipped her tea.

"Think I'll lie down a while before dinner," she said presently. She rose and left the room.

From where Celia was sitting she could look across toward the western sky. The sun had sunk behind the horizon of jutting spires and masses of steel and concrete. There were towers like fairyland, and other more monstrous. The brilliant lights, soon to transform the top of the metropolis into a firmament, were not yet glowing.

Celia lingered until the sun's rays faded and the first gray of dusk appeared. Then she went to dress for dinner. There was half an hour. The meal would be served at seven o'clock.

She selected the blue chiffon, which was one of the frocks bought on her first shopping trip with Mrs. Parsons. Celia bathed and powdered and got into her fresh garments hurriedly. She was back in living room before Evelyn.

There was a ring at the door and the maid answered it. Celia recognized List Duncan's shrill soprano and hurried to meet her.

"List!"

"Hi-o, sweetheart. Listen, you've got to let me dress here. I'm going to meet Dicky at 9:30. Brought my duds. See?" List held up an overnight bag.

"Parsons had entered from the opposite side of the room.

"Good evening, List," she said. "I'm so glad you've come. Celia and I need company."

List explained her errand. She put aside the over-night bag and went in to dinner with Evelyn and Celia. Afterward she went to Celia's bedroom and reappeared in a flaming gown of yellow taffeta. List came into the room dancing.

"Let's have music!" she cried, beginning a tap dance.

Celia obligingly turned on the radio. A rousing fox trot filled the room. List shifted her step to fit the rhythm.

The tune ended. There was a pause and then the announcer cut in crisply.

"We are interrupting the program at this time," the voice said, "to report that fire costing from 30 to 50 lives tonight wrecked the building in which a Communist convention was being held at Fourteenth street and Third avenue. Victims were trapped when smoke cut off escape by a single stairway."

Celia waited no longer.

"It's Barney," she gasped. "Come on!"

FACT NO. 15

The hand that makes a cheap thing falters, if ever so slightly, when it attempts to make a fine thing. The finest things invariably come from those who make only fine things. Schilling is the one coffee roaster who produces one grade of coffee only. There are no 2nd or 3rd grade Schilling Coffees—no cheap blends—no dual standards of quality. There are many excellent coffees—but, of them all, where is the finest apt to come from.
