Candidate takes 'Hart' after upset

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

Gary Hart and Walter F. Mondale were back on the campaign trail bright and early today, Hart rejuvenated by an upset primary victory delivered by "cantankerous" New Hampshire voters and Mondale demonstrating his vow to fight to the end for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Hart returned to an electronics plant outside Manchester, N.H., where he had received an enthusiastic reception earlier this winter — this time to thank the white-coated technicians for helping spring his New Hampshire surprise.

"We will win others in the South, in the West and elsewhere," declared Hart before flying to Denver for a triumphant homecoming.

Mondale headed out early for afternoon stops in Georgia and Alabama — site of two of the three Southern primaries March 13 in which the former vice president hopes to establish dominance over Hart, who thus far has made little effort in the region.

But he first took time out to greet commuters at a Boston subway stop while an Irish band played in the background. Massasusetts also has a primary March 13 — the Super Tuesday that will provide the next big political barometer.

Also early this morning, Sen. Alan Cranston of California, the first man to enter the race, became the first to bow out after a disappointing seventh place finish.

"I know the difference between reality and dreams," Cranston said. "I know when to dream and how to count votes."

Mondale, a limping front-runner at best, predicted he would win the nomination despite Tuesday's surprise.

"I am ready to contest every primary.... I am ready to run this race and win," a somber Mondale told supporters late Tuesday.

■ Hart ready to race Mondale

■ Cranston calls it quits — Page 6E

But Hart, appearing on NBC's "Today" show, predicted today he would go "head to head in very close contests" with Mondale. "Instead of eight candidates going state to state, it is now two candidates going throughout the entire country," he said.

President Reagan beat Harold Stassen in a non-contested Republican primary. And he polled more write-in votes from Democrats than the final three finishers — Cranston and Ernest Hollings, and former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew.

Reagan said the Democratic results in New Hampshire will "stir things up" but declined to get into which candidate would make a tougher opponent for him in November.

Hart polled about 40 percent of the vote to 29 percent for Mondale, who had been heavily favored until polls began detecting a sudden shift the day before the voting. Glenn had 13 percent with Jackson and George McGovern locked at 6 percent.

The final vote totals, with just a few partial precincts left to be counted, looked like this:

Hart 39,062, or 40 percent.
Mondale 27,710, 29 percent.
Glenn 12,041, 13 percent.
Jackson 5,280, 6 percent.
McGovern 5,145, 5 percent.
Hollings 3,583, 4 percent.
Cranston 2,087, 2 percent.
Askew, 1023, 1 percent.
Others 884, 0 percent.

Midland superintendent Dr. Joe Baressi, right, outlines an alternative to a proposal regulating student absences, allowing school districts to draw up individual plans. Also testifying to a full audience were Midland's Director of Secondary Education Maridell Fryar, above, and Greenwood Superintendent James Warlick. Listening intently is State Board of Education member J. Murphy Horton, left.

Educators discuss absences

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

"How many of you are in favor of rescinding the whole thing?" State Board of Education member J. Murphy Horton asked. Nearly everyone in the room raised a hand.

Horton and a Texas Education Agency hearing officer listened to testimony Tuesday on a rule that would regulate student absence from school for extracurricular activities.

About 75 people — mostly school officials from local and area districts — attended. Although those testifying offered different solutions, they uniformly opposed the proposal as written.

The rule states that school districts shall not allow students to miss more than three days per semester or five days per year for extracurricular activities. Exemptions would be made for events considered to be an extension of academics and UIL and vocational competitions beyond the district level. In essence, athletics only would be affected.

It also says students must maintain a C average in at least four classes to be eligible to participate in extracurricular activities.

The proposal has been approved on first reading by the state board and requires three readings before it becomes policy.

Compromises offered in testimony included:

—Basing limitations per activity rather than per student.

—Increasing to 10 the number of days a student could miss.

—Allowing students who are making good grades unlimited participation.

—Forbidding students who are failing a particular class to miss that class for school-related activities.

—Lengthening the school year.

—Letting local districts make the decision.

A statewide rule cannot meet the needs and values of local districts, said Midland Independent School District's superintendent, Dr. Joe Baressi. He suggested each school district be allowed to submit for state approval an individual plan for regulating student absence. It should include justification for what might be considered excessive absences.

"It seems like our administrators and our school board in Midland are best qualified to decide what's best for our students," City Council PTA President Molly Bedrich supported.

"I don't believe it's possible to set a limit statewide that can be applied fairly," agreed Jerry Doyle, superintendent of Coahoma ISD. He said the same rules for metropolitan schools would not address the needs of small districts and geographically isolated schools.

Many testified the proposal would discriminate against schools which have to travel long distances to compete. Several West Texas teams have to travel more than 200 miles one way to attend district games.

"If y'all do what you're proposing, then what do you need us for?" asked a school board member from Crane.

"I don't need you to tell me what is right or what is not right for my child," parent Rose Evenoff stated. It was widely indicated that high-achieving students would be hurt the most, since they are often the ones competing in more than one activity.

MADD, council agree on need for DWI task force

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

In the beginning, the two forces started on different roads. But at the end of the meeting in City Hall Council Chambers, the head of Mothers Against Drunk Drivers was driving down the same road as the Midland City Council.

The two agreed that a task force should be established to find solutions to the drunk driving problem in Midland County. Appointing members to that board will be on the council's March 13 agenda.

Cynthia Grubb, head of MADD, said she had come to the council "not to point our finger at anyone."

Before Mrs. Grubb could explain her points, Mayor G. Thane Akins said he took issue with an earlier allegation that the Midland Police Department charges people with Public Intoxication (PI) instead of Driving While Intoxicated (DWI). He also blamed the State Legislature for tying the hands of city governments in enforcing some laws.

"We charge when appropriate as DWI and records show we have made a good effort," the mayor continued. "The public has been left with the impression that the police department doesn't file DWI. That's in error."

He released a report of the 420 DWI cases filed in 1983 by the Midland Police Department.

Of that 420, four went to trial, 152 persons pleaded guilty and 170 pleaded nolo contendere. Another 21 cases were dismissed, 57 are still pending and five cases involved clerical errors and shouldn't have been filed.

From Jan. 1 to Feb. 20 of this year, the release shows 69 DWI cases have been filed with 10 persons pleading guilty. The rest are pending.

Combining 1983 and the first two months of this year, 10 persons have been sentenced — one to pay a fine and spend time in jail, the other nine to a suspended sentence.

The number of DWI cases filed in 1983 was 37 percent higher than the previous year. And this year should see at least 500 cases filed, according to the mayor.

"We're on the same side as Mrs. Grubb," the mayor said, still not allowing Mrs. Grubb to say anything.

"If we do any good in prosecuting this problem, it is because we have all the law enforcement agencies, all the prosecutors, on our side. If there's a full cooperative effort, this council will be behind it."

Mrs. Grubb's complained of three problems: PI charges were being filed instead of DWI, adequate records weren't being kept and the open container law wasn't being enforced.

She pointed to two recent incidents when PI charges instead of DWI were filed. "I'm putting it mildly when I say I'm upset about the two latter incidents."

She described MADD as the voice of the victim. "We are here to say we need to take some positive steps in Midland County. What we've been doing is not enough."

She suggested a task force of seven to 10 members. Included would be representatives of MADD, county attorney's office, district attorney's office, hotel-motel and restaurant association, city council, Texas Association for Alcoholism and each law enforcement agency.

After the meeting, Mrs. Grubb said she expects the coalition to be effective in reducing drunk driving in Midland County. Other counties throughout the country have initiated such commissions and they have found solutions which were "workable and effective."

The mayor mentioned a program in Montgomery County, Md., in which there was a 75 percent reduction in deaths caused by alcohol.

Bobcat, trapped in city, not in enviable position

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

He crouched in the hay in a corner of the small cage. As the television cameras moved closer, he growled menacingly, a low rumble that seemed to come from deep within, rippling through his beautiful brown, beige, white and gray striped fur.

He swiped ferociously at the photographers with harmless claws.

Accented by white fur underneath, his dark-rimmed eyes caught the late afternoon sunlight, flashing first green, then gold and blue. He swirled, protecting himself from all sides. His small, triangular, coral-colored nose quivered.

He was scared and there was no place he could go.

The small bobcat was picked up at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday near the intersection of Golf Course Road and Garfield Street. A local veterinarian had first spotted it a month ago.

Animal Control Officer Lisa Ferguson used mackerel to bait the trap cage. When the bobcat was brought back to the Animal Control Shelter, she noticed it was wearing a tight collar. They thought it had grown into its skin.

He was taken to a veterinarian who had to anesthetize the wild animal to remove the choking, cutting collar.

While the bobcat was under light sedation, the veterinarian examined him. He had been neutered and declawed on all four legs.

The bobcat had been taken from his natural habitat and placed in a home. Someone tried to make him a pet. And animal control officers speculate he either had gotten loose or had been freed by his owners, who may have feared the outbursts of wild behavior that are natural as he grows older.

The instincts may be there; the means are not. He most likely had survived by scouring through trash cans.

"This leaves us in a position of either trying to find a place that's suitable for it, or putting it to sleep," said Rice Freeman-Zachery, Animal Control Public Information Officer.

If he were to be placed in the wild, he would be easy prey. Although his teeth are still sharp and dangerous, with no claws he would easily be outrun by other animals. Even other bobcats would probably attack him because his scent has been altered by neutering, she said.

"If something gets them down, they use their hind legs to disembowel them," Ms. Freeman-Zachery said. "But if he's got all of his claws gone, that leaves him defenseless."

And it leaves the animal control personnel in a compromising situation.

"We're in an awful position," Ms. Freeman-Zachery said. "We know what's right, but what can we do now?"

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecast for Thursday includes snow for the Midwest and Northeast and showers for the Northwest. Most areas will be colder.

Fair, warm weather due in Permian Basin Thursday

Mother Nature decided we've suffered enough. The elements have relented and Midland can expect fair and warm weather Thursday, said the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The forecast for tonight calls for fair skies, but still chilly with lows in the middle 30s. Thursday, however, is expected to be fair and warm with highs approaching 70.

Southerly 5 to 15 mph winds tonight should turn southwesterly at 10 to 20 mph Thursday.

Monday's high was a mere 46 degrees, about half the all-time high of 87 recorded on that date in 1940. An overnight low of 25 was just five degrees warmer than the record 20 set in 1960.

STATE

Temperature records were broken in eight Texas cities and tied in one today as readings plunged under clear skies and high pressure that extended from the central United States into the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Forecasters expected clouds to increase tonight and Thursday over southern sections of the state, along with a chance of scattered showers and thundershowers.

Pre-dawn temperatures were mostly in the 30s and 40s, while readings in the 20s were noted over portions of North Texas.

Brownsville set a record low for the date when the mercury hit 37, surpassing the old record of 40; College Station's 27 degrees bested the previous low of 30; Victoria's 31 degrees broke the old record of 38; San Antonio's 29 surpassed an old record of 32; Waco's 23 degrees broke the previous low of 27; Port Arthur's 32 degrees bested the previous record of 33; El Paso's 23 degrees passed a 31-degree record, and San Angelo's 19 degrees surpassed the old record of 22.

Galveston tied its record of 39 degrees for the date.

Temperatures at 4 a.m. ranged from 22 at Amarillo to 46 at McAllen.

NATION

A monster storm already blamed for 42 deaths spread more snow today through the Northeast, where up to 2 feet had accumulated, and snowplow operators facing stiff winds and 10-foot drifts said it was like trying to "push back an ocean with a teaspoon."

Highways were closed by snow and ice this morning as far south as Birmingham, Ala., where the entire interstate system was barricaded, and more than half a dozen Dixie cities from San Angelo, Texas, to Mobile, Ala., reported record low temperatures for the date.

With much of the Midwest east of the Mississippi River buried under a foot or more of snow, some of the latest totals from this week's storm included 25 inches at Niagara Falls, N.Y.; 22 inches at Buffalo, N.Y.; 16 inches at Cleveland; 18 inches at Erie, Pa.; and 1 inch at Tupelo, Miss. Eight to 15 inches collected over a wide area of Ohio from Dayton to Lake Erie with 14 inches in the mountains of New Hampshire.

Twenty-two of the deaths were linked to heart attacks brought on by snow-clearing efforts and there were six alone in Ohio's Cuyahoga County, where Deputy Coroner Lester Adelson warned, "Just like a gun, a snow shovel in the wrong hands is a deadly weapon."

Two children in New York state died of carbon monoxide poisoning, and police in Mason County, W. Va., said a 19-year-old mother of two was crushed to death when a boulder pried loose by ice crashed down a mountainside and slammed through a wall of her house.

Bodies recovered from transport

ZARAGOZA, Spain (AP) — Rescue teams today recovered 16 bodies from the wreckage of a U.S. Air Force transport plane which crashed in a mountain range in northeast Spain, an Air Force official said.

The plane, a Hercules C-130, had been carrying 17 U.S. servicemen and a Spanish air force officer when it crashed Tuesday night, apparently while trying to make an emergency landing in bad weather.

Capt. Roger Davis, Air Force spokesman at the U.S.-leased base in Zaragoza, said 16 bodies had been recovered and that a search for the two other people aboard the plane was continuing.

A U.S. Air Force official in West Germany said earlier there had been no reports of survivors.

Davis said identification of the victims was being withheld until relatives ad been notified.

The plane crashed in the fog- and snow-swept Moncayo mountains as it headed for Zaragoza following military maneuvers.

Capt. Lorrie Kropp, spokeswoman for the Air Force's European Headquarters in Ramstein, West Germany, said the wreckage was discovered about two miles northwest of the village of Borja, 45 miles from Zaragoza.

Officials at the Zaragoza air base said the plane's pilot had radioed the control tower at nearby Navarra de Ablitas air base to say it was going to attempt an emergency landing because of bad weather. The region had been hit by a heavy snowfall throughout the day Tuesday.

Capt. Kropp said, however, there was no immediate indication as to the cause of the accident. She said that in such cases a board of officers is usually appointed to investigate.

The Spanish national news agency EFE reported earlier today that several helicopters and four-wheel drive vehicles had come across the wreckage near the summer resort of Santuario de la Misericordia, outside Borja.

AP Laserphoto Map

Both Spanish and U.S. Air Force spokesman in Spain directed all inquiries to the U.S. base at Ramstein.

Chief Master Sgt. C. Strongwell said nine of the 10 crew members and six combat controllers and one para-rescue person on board were from the Rhine-Main U.S. air base near Frankfurt. The other American crew member was from the U.S.-leased base at Zaragoza. A Spanish air force officer also was on board.

The Zaragoza air base, 175 miles northeast of Madrid, is used by the U.S. Air Force under a 1953 military cooperation agreement with Spain.

Iran says U.S. presence 'act of aggression'

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran said today that the U.S. military presence in the Persian Gulf is "an act of aggression and blackmail" and warned that Washington must take responsibility for any incident in the area.

A statement by Iran's Foreign Ministry, broadcast on Tehran Radio, said conditions established by the United States regarding air and sea movements around the U.S. vessels violate international law and represent support for Iraq. Iran and Iraq have been at war for 3½ years.

"The Islamic Republic of Iran, considering its responsibility to protect its sea and air borders, will under no circumstances accept this and strongly condemns it," said the statement by an unidentified ministry spokesman.

The United States, which has five Navy ships in the gulf and 30 more in the Indian Ocean, has declared a five-mile safety zone around them.

President Reagan sent the flotilla into the area in response to Iranian threats to close the Strait of Hormuz, through which 20 percent of the non-Communist world's oil passes.

On Sunday, a U.S. warship fired machine gun shots and flares at two Iranian frigates and an airplane to warn them off after they had approached too closely.

Today's statement represented the first Iranian reaction to the incidents but did not mentioned them directly.

The war was escalated last week after a series of Iranian offensives that began with a push by Iranian fighters into Iraq's southern border region, near the Persian Gulf and its oilfields.

In fighting Tuesday, Iraq claimed it won the biggest victory of the war by crushing an Iranian offensive and driving Iranian forces back across the border near the southern city of Basra.

But Tehran Radio claimed today that the Iraqi counterattack was "smashed" by Iranian forces using "special tactics."

The claims could not be independently verified. Western reporters are rarely allowed into the war zone.

Associated Press Writer

NEWARK, N.J. — The social complications of having a baby on Feb. 29 were really the last thing on Kim Walker's mind four years ago today.

"When I went into labor, the nurses kept telling me, 'Hurry up, hurry up before tomorrow.' And I said 'Why?' And they said that tomorrow was leap year," recalled Ms. Walker, who lives in Asbury Park and gave birth at Jersey Shore Medical Center in Neptune.

"Well, I didn't think about it then, because I was in labor," she said. "But afterward I thought, 'Wow, Bryan's not going to have a birthday but every four years. Since he was born the day after the 28th, I thought maybe I should celebrate it on the first. But, he wasn't born in March."

Most parents don't want their babies born on that odd day that occurs every four years, but "people unfortunately don't plan pregnancies out quite that carefully," said Dr. Anthony Quartell, a Livingston obstetrician.

Quartell had two patients due to deliver today at St. Barnabas Medical Center, and "neither one wants to have that baby on the 29th," he said.

"Women simply don't want to have babies on holidays," he explained. "April 1 is the day no one wants to have a baby. This year, I had two patients due on April 1 — one already delivered very prematurely. The baby is fine, and the woman later said, 'Thank God I didn't have the baby on April Fool's Day.'

"The exception is Dec. 31. On that day, they want the kid out by midnight."

Doctors say that their aim to please their patients stops with the calendar.

"We can't do anything about it," Quartell said. "You never, ever want to be in the position to speed up or slow down a labor for essentially a social decision. Now, if it's a repeat or elective Caesarean, you have a chance."

Maureen Cappuccino of Harrison recalled that when her son, Nicholas, was born Feb. 29, 1980, "the nurses were kidding that night and saying why don't you wait a few more hours, and I said, 'No, no.' I was in labor for such a long time that, at that point, I didn't care what day it was."

For Leap Year babies and their families, the lifelong question is whether to hold birthday parties on Feb. 28 or March 1.

In Minnesota, Peter Flatten of Minneapolis gets the opportunity today to celebrate on his true date of birth as he turns 96 years old — or, as he likes to say, 24.

"He always says he's never as old as he really is," said his son, Darwin Flatten.

As it happens, Julius Caesar invented Leap Year in 46 B.C. as the chronographic solution to just such confusion.

One solar year actually totals not 365 days, but, as Caesar figured it, closer to 365.25 days.

That means roughly that without leap day, the seasons would creep out of whack with the calendar over a long enough time; in 1985, for example, autumn would start on Feb. 11.

And so time marches on, except for today, when it leaps, allowing Leap Year babies that quadrennial luxury of a true birthday celebration.

Mrs. Cappuccino usually holds a party for little Nicholas on Feb. 28, and says her son can't figure out why his birthday "comes once every four years."

Hearing held on student absence ruling

"The ones who are (affected) are the cream of the crop. They're the ones who will be penalized," asserted Glynda Jones, a parent and substitute teacher for MISD.

"If the 5/3 rule comes in I can just do away with extracurricular activities. And that would deny those kids a total education," claimed Alpine principal Tom Patti. Small districts, he explained, are dependent upon multiple participation to keep programs going. He said of 370 students at Alpine, 260 participate in one or more activities.

"I think athletics have been singled out as the primary reason for missing school. It's not true," asserted Pecos athletic director Daylan Whitehurst.

Three percent of the student population is responsible for 33 percent of absences and those are students who are not involved in extracurricular activities, said Lee High athletic chairman Paul Steuckler. "It seems to me we may be shooting the wrong horse."

"With these rules we're going to put some youngsters on the street" because they will not be able to participate in as many activities, he added. "It's going to be a very great waste."

A few said many borderline students, if denied the chance to participate, would drop out of school. Most however, approved of the four C restriction. The only problem is unclear wording, officials said.

Several claimed the rule had several inconsistencies. Some thought it unfair that only athletics was restricted.

Others said it would not be fair to fail a student for four absences due to competitions when a student who was truant four times would not fail.

In addition, the state board has all but finalized a policy which says credit shall be granted by subject mastery, not time spent in the classroom. The 5/3 rule is not consistent with this policy, some said.

"This proposal does nothing to solve the problem," accused Doyle. "It's got enough back doors and loopholes that anyone who wants to can abuse it. There's no way to monitor it. If I wanted to cheat I could."

Others pointed out ways the rule's intent could be sidestepped.

Ms. Bedrich said the more she learned about the proposal, "the more loopholes I see in it and the more problems I think it will create."

Doyle referred to it as a bookkeeping nightmare for principals. "Now the principal has got to keep a running tab on how many days each student has missed."

"The more we get into this the more it looks like we're getting in a briar patch," Horton said. "I vote to rescind." He indicated he would propose MISD's suggestion of state-approved individual district plans to the state board.

Correction

A statement attributed to Rena Ventura, counselor at Odessa College, in a Feb. 26 article on the club CAHOOTS, actually was made by Steve Quinn, vice president of the group.

The statement, referring to people who park in spots designated for the disabled, was "Either they can't read or they think they're for mentally handicapped."

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

Bobcat captured inside city limits

A game warden recommended a few people to contact who may be able to provide the animal an unrestricted but safe home.

The officers at the animal control shelter shy away from zoos, citing overcrowded cages and unnatural habitat as cruel.

Ms. Ferguson is mad. Normally one who stays away from the spotlight of the media, she felt strong enough about this situation to go in front of the camera.

Exotic animals can be found for sale in classified ads of newspapers, Ms. Freeman-Zachery said. When the animals are small, they're cuddly and cute, but as they grow older and less domesticized, the owners often abandon them, Ms. Ferguson added.

Inside Midland city limits, there are a couple of cougars and a lioness, Ms. Freeman-Zachery said. According to Dalton Byerly, Animal Control Shelter director, "any wild animal must be in a situation we approve of."

If a person has such an animal, they are required to contact the shelter for inspection of the facility in which the animal is kept. Animal control officers then can keep an eye on it.

"There are people around here with ranches with a lot of room," Ms. Freeman-Zachery said. "And there are some people out of the goodness of their hearts who will make up for the ignorance of others."

Or so animal control officers hope.

They don't have too many choices for this "gorgeous animal."

"Some people think that because the animal is exotic and special, having that animal will make them exotic and special," Ms. Freeman-Zachery said.

"Most of us grow out of it. Some of us don't."

MADD, council see need for task force

Mrs. Grubb pointed out that the city still is filing about 50 percent more PI charges than DWI. "We start with police enforcement and work our way up."

Police Chief Wayne Gideon said he had no objection to Mrs. Grubb's request to address police officers. "I've been mad a long time before this," he said of the effort to reduce accidents caused by alcohol.

And he apologized for the two PI charges that were filed instead of DWI.

City Attorney Joe Nuessle blamed the inability to enforce the open container law on the State Legislature. Nuessle said bills that would have taken a stronger stance against DWI were introduced in the last session of the legislature.

"Neither time could we get the bill out of committee. It's due to the liquor lobby in this state. Out of frustration, we (city of Midland) passed our ordinance about not allowing open containers while driving. Lobbyists for the beer association told an Austin reporter I didn't understand the legislative process," he said.

"I don't know what more we can do until the State Legislature allows us to do more."

Guerrilla attack on trains kills at least 18 in El Salvador

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — In a carefully planned attack marking a new offensive, guerrillas ambushed two trains carrying freight and passengers, killing at least 18 soldiers and civilians, El Salvador's armed forces said Tuesday.

The ambush occurred Monday in rolling sugar-growing country about 80 miles northwest of San Salvador as the trains made their way toward the capital from the western provincial center of Santa Ana. Rebels of the Popular Forces of Liberation, who had announced a new offensive against military targets Monday, claimed responsibility for the attack.

Three children were among those who died in the crossfire between guerrillas and troops of the Salvadoran Treasury Police, who were guarding the trains. In all, an armed forces communication said, ten civilians and eight soldiers died and another 14 civilians and seven soldiers were wounded.

The bodies of eight civilians were counted Tuesday by reporters reaching the scene near the town of San Antonio Grande with a relief force from the Salvandoran army's First Brigade. A spokesman for the Salvadoran National Railroad said six crewmen from the two trains were among the wounded.

Survivors said the attack began about 5:30 p.m. Monday when two remote-controlled mines exploded in front of the first train, a freight carrying aviation fuel and cement.

A second train, carrying more cement and a car with about 50 passengers, most of them peasants, became caught up in the shooting that followed. Fighting between the guerrillas and about 20 train guards lasted more than a hour, survivors said, with most of the civilian casualties occurring inside the passenger car.

Most of the survivors managed to walk to nearby farms for help after darkness fell, but troops who reached the trains Tuesday found at least one wounded woman still lying beneath a seat in the blood-drenched passenger car.

"We waited all night for help," said José Teodoro Escobar, one of the wounded Treasury policemen.

Salvadoran guerrillas, who recruit heavily among the nation's poor, are usually careful not to inflict civilian casualties, and a special guerrilla radio broadcast Tuesday made an obvious attempt to mute the impact of the civilian deaths.

The broadcast by the Popular Liberation Forces, the most hard-line of five leftist guerrilla bands fighting the Salvadoran government, which is supported by the United States, described the first train as a "military convoy" carrying troops on a mission in the area, as well as military supplies and fuel for the air force.

The second train with its civilian passengers blundered onto the scene after the attack had already begun, the broadcast said. The Treasury Police, who guard potential economic targets throughout El Salvador, "cowardly took shelter behind the second train," thus provoking the civilian casualties, the guerrilla broadcast asserted.

Gemayel reportedly visiting Damascus

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

BEIRUT, Lebanon — President Amin Gemayel is visiting Damascus for reconciliation talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad today, according to reports reaching here from the Syrian capital.

A Syrian presidential spokesman said Gemayel would be visiting within 48 hours, but Western diplomatic sources were quoted by Agence France-Presse in Damascus as saying he was expected to arrive today at 11:30 a.m. A spokesman at the Lebanese Ministry of Information refused to comment "for security reasons."

The Syrian announcement came in the midst of persistent but still unconfirmed reports here that Gemayel has decided to abrogate the May 17 accord between Lebanon and Israel and is now seeking some tradeoff from the Syrians to appease Christian opposition to his decision.

Still unclear is how Gemayel would go about the formal abrogation of the accord, which was approved by an overwhelming majority in the Lebanese Parliament and only awaits his signature for ratification.

Gemayel could make the abrogation decision himself, resubmit the agreement to the Parliament or ask the next session of the National Reconciliation Conference of Lebanon's top political leaders in Geneva to take a decision on it.

The Gemayel-Assad summit is believed to have been arranged during the visit last week by Saudi Crown Prince Abdullah to Damascus. The Saudis have been playing the role of mediators in the current Lebanese crisis and searching for ways to defuse it.

Observers here felt it was unlikely Assad would have agreed to the summit unless Gemayel had already committed himself at least in principle to abrogation of the May 17 accord, which provides for eventual pullout of Israeli troops in southern Lebanon and opens the way for normal relations. Syria has said it must be scrapped as a price for its cooperation in helping to resolve the crisis.

Gemayel's visit is expected to permit resumption of the National Reconciliation Conference, which held a first session in Geneva last November and then suspended its meetings to allow the Lebanese time to deal with the Lebanese-Israeli agreement. The Druse and Shiite opposition also oppose it.

Christian leaders here have been demanding that Syria at least carry out a partial withdrawal of its forces from the mountains overlooking the Christian enclave northeast of Beirut and give a pledge for an eventual total evacuation in return for an easing of their opposition to the abrogation of the May 17 accord.

A final decision by Gemayel on the agreement was not expected until the Saudi mediator, Rafiq Hariri, returned here with a reply to Gemayel's counterproposals to an earlier Syrian demand for a unilateral abrogation of it.

Hariri still has not returned here. After meeting Monday with King Fahd and Prince Bandar bin Sultan, the Saudi ambassador to Washington, in Riyadh, he flew to Damascus, apparently in preparation for the summit.

Administration denies Rumsfeld resignation

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration denied Tuesday that special Middle East negotiator Donald H. Rumsfeld had decided to resign after his next trip to the region, but spokesmen pointedly declined to address the question of his longer-range intentions.

In recent days, White House spokesman Larry Speakes has conceded that the administration has suspended its diplomatic effort in Lebanon while Lebanese factions and Syria, with Saudi mediation, sort out the next moves there. That redirection of U.S. attention back to larger Arab-Israeli issues led to published reports that Rumsfeld was dissatisfied and would soon resign.

"I don't have any information to that effect," State Department spokesman Alan D. Romberg said Tuesday. However, he added, "I do not know what his plans in the long term may be."

Speakes was likewise cautious in assessing Rumsfeld's future. "He will return to the region," Speakes said repeatedly, emphasizing that the envoy would concentrate on the overall Mideast peace process rather than Lebanon. But he added that he did not know what Rumsfeld might do once he has completed the trip.

Soviets battle way into Afghan valley

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — Soviet tanks recently fought their way to a garrison in Afghanistan's rebel-held Panjshir Valley in apparent preparation for a springtime offensive, Western diplomats said here Tuesday.

Quoting from an official cable received from Kabul, the Afghan capital, the diplomats said that a column of Soviet tanks battled its way to the Soviet-manned Unawa Garrison — also known as Anaba Garrison — in Panjshir Valley last week.

He added that the Afghan guerrilla commander Ahmad Shah Massood, whose forces control the strategic valley, believed the move could signal plans for a Soviet offensive in Panjshir in the spring.

It would be the Soviets' seventh attempt in four years to take the valley, located about 55 miles northeast of Kabul and vital for Soviet convoys moving on the highway from the northern Afghan border to Kabul and further south.

A truce signed by Masood and the Soviets after the failure of the last attempt a year ago expired last August but remained unofficially in force until the two sides began renewed activity at the start of the Afghan winter.

Between 200 and 400 civilians are estimated to have died, according to the diplomat, in recent Soviet shelling and ground operations against rebel positions and civilian support areas in the southern reaches of the valley.

South Africans, Angolans agree on cease-fire

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — South African and Angolan officials, meeting in emergency session in the southern Angolan town of Cuvelai Saturday, agreed on a formula to formalize and monitor their unofficial cease-fire, diplomatic sources said here Tuesday.

The sources added that the swift agreement on the monitoring procedure appeared to have saved the 4-week-old cease-fire from its first major crisis, which arose when South Africa complained last Thursday that Namibian guerrillas were violating it.

Under the new agreement, the sources said, a joint commission is to begin monitoring a four-phase withdrawal today of about 1,000 South African troops still deployed over a 24,000-square-mile area of southern Angola that they have occupied for more than two years.

As the South Africans move out, the commission must ensure that Angolan troops and Namibian guerrillas do not enter what will then become a demilitarized zone.

The sources explained that the commission will deploy joint teams to investigate complaints of violations lodged by either side. Meanwhile, the United States has set up a small temporary mission in the Namibian capital of Windhoek that will be on standby should the two sides request its mediation.

The South African withdrawal is scheduled to be completed by March 31, at which point the monitoring commission is to be based at the Namibian border town of Oshikango while further efforts are made to sew up an agreement leading to pre-independence elections in Namibia.

South Africa called for the emergency meeting only nine days after officials of the two countries had held an historic meeting, with the United States, in Lusaka, Zambia. They agreed to formalize a trial cease-fire that South Africa had declared unilaterally Feb 1.

South African Foreign Minister Roelof F. Botha complained that about 800 Namibian guerrillas were moving southward toward their homeland's border in violation of the understanding reached at Lusaka.

While U.S. mediators who had painstakingly brokered the truce watched anxiously, officials of the two countries — meeting in a town where their armies were locked in battle only two months ago — swiftly reached agreement a second time.

Next day, Botha announced that both sides had expressed their concern at the southward movement of the guerrillas and reaffirmed their decision to formalize the cease-fire.

Observers here said Tuesday that South Africa appeared to have been mollified by the Angolans' cooperative attitude at the meeting.

Moslems struggle to win approval for mosque in Rome

ROME (AP) — After a decade-long struggle and barring any last minute hitches, Moslems will soon have their first mosque in the very heart of the Roman Catholic world.

After dozens of false starts, bulldozers this month finally began plowing a road to the site for the mosque on Monte Antenne in the fashionable Parioli section of the city.

If all goes well, construction of the $30 million project will begin this summer and be finished in three years.

There are 917 Roman Catholic churches in Rome, numerous Protestant, Greek and Russian Orthodox churches, and eight synagogues.

But unlike London, Paris, Vienna and most other European capitals, the city of popes and Caesars has never had a mosque. There is a small mosque in Catania, Sicily, built with funds from the Libyan government.

Since the idea was first seriously proposed in 1973 to build a house of worship for Rome's Moslems — estimated to number between 15,000 and 40,000, mostly connected with the 27 Islamic embassies in the city — one hurdle after another has cropped up to delay construction.

Moslems crossed the first hurdle when the Vatican announced in 1974 that Pope Paul VI had no objections to a mosque.

"The Vatican has been very kind to us," said Prince Abolghassem Amini, a diminutive, bespectacled Iranian who has been in Italy for the entire struggle. Amini is secretary-general of Rome's Islamic Culture Center.

He said the Vatican at one point even offered to give Moslems one of the two dozen churches that have been closed in the city center because of population shifts.

"But we ran into problems with the Ministry of Fine Arts which objected to us making any changes in historic buildings," Amini said.

Rome's Communist-led government later donated a 7.4 acre undeveloped lot to be used for the mosque. Islamic countries donated $12 million for the construction. Saudi Arabia, a prime mover behind the mosque, pledged to cover any costs above the initial donation.

But conservationists and local residents raised objections with the city government, saying a mosque would ruin the aesthetics of the neighborhood.

That problem was resolved after the Islamic Culture Center made clear that two-thirds of the land would be used for a park open to the public and that 120 new trees would be planted, Amini said.

There was also some concern that the area might contain ancient ruins, but a test dig by the government indicated that there was nothing of archaeological value.

Official admits giving documents to Soviets

OSLO, Norway (AP) — The government says Foreign Ministry official Arne Treholt has admitted giving classified documents to Soviet officers several times since 1973 but has not said why he did so.

Magnar Flornes, director of public prosecutions, said in a news release Tuesday that 31 witnesses had been questioned so far and Treholt, who was arrested in January, had testified almost daily.

Flornes said the investigation covers a span starting in 1973, including a period when Treholt had access to classified documents as a member of Norway's delegation to the United Nations.

"He has admitted having handed over classified documents to KGB officers both before and during his service in New York, but claims they were low-grade documents," the prosecutor said.

Leaders warn politicians

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Brazil's four top military leaders are telling politicians they should tone down criticism of President Joao Figueiredo.

In an official statement Tuesday, the heads of the army, air force, navy and joint chiefs of staff said "vulgar terms and insults" were being made "exclusively for agitation" and were unacceptable.

The statement said the military "is ready to fulfil its constitutional mission of defending the homeland."

The Justice Ministry has said remarks critical of Figueiredo, a retired general, violate the National Security Law, a vaguely worded act that covers a wide variety of activity considered against the state.

'Phantom' arrested

FULDA, West Germany (AP) — Police say a metalworker has been arrested for transmitting lewd and anti-Semitic broadcasts over citizen-band radio channels for more than a year.

They said the man was seized Sunday in a forest near the East German border where he had parked a van equipped with a sophisticated transmitter. He was not identified.

A police statement Tuesday said a man known as the "Phantom Transmitter" interrupted radio channels for hours with "sexually perverse insults and evil, anti-Semitic hate tirades."

Egyptian firms raided

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Police cracking down on illegal foreign currency trading netted $20 million in raids on four companies in Cairo and the Nile delta city of Tanta, Cairo newspapers said today.

The reports said the import-export companies had been converted into illegal banks that exchanged Egyptian pounds into U.S. dollars for Egyptians working in oil-rich Arab countries.

Barbershop where old friends meet

PARAGOULD, Ark. (AP) — Strolling by Ruby's Barbershop, one might dismiss it as just another of Paragould's many tonsorial parlors.

But, as owner John Powell puts it, "It's a place where old friends can meet."

The casual pedestrian should look closely.

As likely as not, he will see a pair of elderly fellows bent over a checkerboard by the window. Perhaps one or two more will be watching, waiting for a turn. Another will be reading a newspaper or gazing out the window.

Conversation centers on local events, politics, reminiscences.

It's the sort of barbershop that might have provided the background for a Norman Rockwell painting 40 or 50 years ago. The artist froze such everyday American institutions of that era firmly in time.

Ruby's is not frozen in time, though. Like its patrons, it is showing its age. Paint peels from the wall here and there. Business cards, newspaper clippings and photographs by the telephone reveal their ages by their shade of yellow.

Powell bought the shop 10 years ago. He and his wife barbered there together, as they had through most of their marriage in Paragould, Dallas and Houston, until she hung up her clippers two years ago.

When Powell isn't reigning over his domain from his chair, he grooms quite a number of heads. He counts among his regulars about 30 women.

"The beauty shop doesn't know how to trim it up and shape it," he explains. The beauty shop probably can't compete with his haircut fee, either.

Another incentive is a pair of dice he keeps handy. "I'll shoot craps double-or-nothing for a haircut," he says.

Wolf trap to reopen in summer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The rebuilding of the main theater at Wolf Trap Farm Park, destroyed by a mysterious fire in April 1982, probably will be completed in July at a cost of $18.7 million, permitting an abbreviated concert season under the stars this summer.

Wolf Trap officials announced the start of a nationwide, $14.5 million campaign to pay off final construction costs and to start a $10 million endowment fund. Proceeds from the fund would help underwrite cultural activities at the only national park for the performing arts, which runs up an average $2 million deficit annually.

Wolf Trap already has raised more than $6.3 million privately for rebuilding the fire-ruined Filene Center, and the federal government has donated $9 million. Officials said they hope to raise the remaining $14.5 million in cash and pledges before the end of the year.

The new building nearing completion in a 117-acre park in the Virginia countryside, about 20 miles west of Washington, will include a $1.7 million system of fire detection and prevention devices. Besides an elaborate, automatic sprinkler, fire alarm and surveillance system, every steel beam is coated with protective chemical insulation and the Douglas fir walls will be fire-retardant.

The National Park Service, which maintains Wolf Trap although it is privately operated, said the destruction of the original Filene Center was so complete that "the actual cause will remain undetermined," although arson has been ruled out.

The first building, a soaring, open-sided amphitheater that seated 6,500 people inside and on the sloping lawn, was built in 1971 for $2.3 million, the gift of Wolf Trap's founder, Mrs. Jouett Shouse.

The cedar walls of the original Filene Center, however, were not treated against fire, and the government did not insure the building against loss.

The new wooden walls and ceilings will be "cosmetic" dressing for concrete and steel beams, said engineer John C. Welch, in contrast with the original construction of laminated wooden trusses supported by suspension cables.

The new theater building will look very much like the old one, except for a copper roof and an extensive addition in the rear to house numerous lounges, dressing rooms, offices and a rehearsal hall.

Although the interior of the auditorium closely resembles the original design, elimination of most of the old box seats and suspension of lighting from the ceiling have made room for 352 more seats, raising the total capacity to 6,886 seats, including the lawn. There will also be new light and sound systems.

During the 10 years before the fire, the Filene Center was host to 5.5 million people who saw 23,000 artists perform in 947 shows and concerts. For the past two summers, Wolf Trap has held its summer season in a temporary shelter.

Women's rights groups stunned by sex discrimination ruling

Goldsmith

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stunned by a setback in the Supreme Court, women's rights advocates are regrouping to fight for congressional approval of a broader law against sex discrimination on college campuses.

"Today, I must say to the Supreme Court, 'Shame on you,'" Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., told a news conference.

In a legal victory for the Reagan administration, the court ruled, 6-3, Tuesday in favor of a narrow intepretation of a 1972 federal law banning sex discrimination at colleges that receive federal aid.

The court said the government may not cut off all aid to a college because it practices sex discrimination in a particular program. The court said the 1972 law mandates that funds be cut off only for the specific program that receives federal aid.

While the administrtion's interpretation of the statute prevailed, the decision could still spell political trouble for the Reagan forces.

Women's rights groups described the administration's position as "thumbing its nose" at women and minorities, stirring anger that will do little to improve President Reagan's standing with women.

"This is yet another piece of President Reagan's complete insensitivity toward the needs of women," said Judy Goldsmith, president of the National Organization for Women.

The women's groups think they have a good chance of reversing the Supreme Court decision in Congress.

Last Nov. 16, the House adopted a non-binding resolution by a vote of 414-8 that any school receiving federal education funds may not discriminate against women in any program. The job of women's rights advocates will be to give that sentiment the impact of law.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of a House subcommittee on civil rights, said he had "no doubt the response will be swift in the House." Senate action appears to be less certain.

Meanwhile, some college officials said they doubted the Supreme Court ruling would change anything because they said their schools do not practice discrimination against women.

"I don't think it's going to have any effect, here or across the nation," said Gothard Lane, director of women's athletics at the University of Maryland. "We've got one of the best women's athletics programs in the country and it's going to stay that way."

The court case started as an obscure dispute between the U.S. Education Department and tiny Grove City College in Grove City, Pa.

The administration has described its position in the case as middle-of-the-road.

It said that Grove City should be required to provide necessary paperwork to the Education Department pledging opposition to sex discrimination, but that a college should not face a cut-off in all federal aid based on discrimination in one program.

Grove City, a private, co-educational liberal arts college, receives no direct aid from Washington. But some of its students accept federal grants to help defray their educational costs.

Principal: 'Walkmans' should take a walk

CANTON, Mass. (AP) — A high school principal wants to ban headphones because they permit students to turn on to their portable stereos and to tune out their teachers.

"They serve to keep students' minds off school and, when worn by students, they successfully eliminate communication between teachers and students in the hallways," Canton High School Principal Joseph Joyce said in a letter to the school committee.

The committee will discuss a ban Thursday.

Selectman Richard Staiti, who is also a teacher, said individual teachers had their own policies on permitting use of the headsets in the classroom.

"I definitely don't want them in the classroom," Staiti said in an interview published Tuesday in the Patriot Ledger of Quincy. "As a teacher, I think they can be distracting."

Some Houston-area hospitals won't treat rape victims

HOUSTON (AP) — About 35 hospitals in the Houston area discourage women from reporting rapes by refusing to treat victims of the crime, the director of the rape crisis program for the Houston Area Women's Center says.

Susan Turell said Tuesday that only about 25 hospitals in Harris, Montgomery and Fort Bend counties treat rape victims. In those counties, she said, large areas do not offer complete medical treatment to the victims.

This practice means many rapists are going free, she said.

"To tell a woman who has been through this traumatic experience that she will have to go somewhere else is very devastating," Ms. Turell said. "It may curtail the woman's going further to report the crime."

Several hospital administrators confirmed that emergency room doctors decide whether they want to treat a rape victim. Ms. Turell said some hospitals don't treat rape victims because their doctors don't want to testify in court.

"That's not a very good reason," Ms. Turell said.

Administrators at some smaller hospitals said they did not have the staff to give comprehensive treatment to rape victims.

Lt. J.W. Glezman, who heads the Houston Police Department's sex crimes division, said there are 36 hospitals that handle rape victims and the hospitals are evenly distributed throughout the city.

But Ms. Turell said Glezman is counting hospitals that provide partial treatment. Full treatment, she said, includes care of the woman's physical injuries, treatment to protect her from venereal disease and pregnancy, and collection of evidence.

Ms. Turell said certain areas, such as Pasadena, Houston's east side and the near north side, do not have hospitals for rape victims.

Some physicians at Memorial Northwest prefer not to perform rape examinations because of the legal ramifications, said Jane Herrin, unit supervisor in that hospital's emergency room.

"It's a shame that some of our physicians don't want to do this," Ms. Herrin said. "As a woman, I wish we could take every (rape) victim in."

Ms. Herrin said the hospital prefers rape victims to go to Hermann Hospital for follow-up treatment.

Bob Vitto, administrator at Beltway Community Hospital on the city's east side, said his hospital does not have psychiatrists, social workers and pathologists to provide extensive treatment.

"This is a very involved and demanding type of treatment," Vitto said. "We don't feel we would do as good a job as the larger hospitals.

"To tell a woman who has been through this traumatic experience (rape) that she will have to go somewhere else is very devastating. It may curtail the woman's going further to report the crime."

— Susan Terrell, rape crisis program director

Bell won't be seeking temporary rate hike

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell has given up its plan to add $2.75 to residential rates while the company awaits a Public Utility Commission decision in a $1.3 billion rate case.

Paul Roth, Bell vice president for revenues, said Tuesday there will be no appeal of State District Judge Mary Pearl Williams' order against an immediate, temporary hike of $280 million.

Roth said Bell "urgently" needs the money because it has a "revenue shortfall" of $700,000 a day, but, "to pursue the point further would be time consuming, and it is highly unlikely the legal issue could be concluded before the entire rate case is resolved."

The PUC is expected to rule in April on Bell's $1.3 billion rate hike request.

The court fight was over bonded rates — the temporary, refundable rates that utility companies are allowed to set and collect while the PUC is considering a rate hike.

The commission, Attorney General Jim Mattox and Mrs. Williams said a law approved by the 1983 Legislature governs the Bell case. Under the previous law, which was in effect when Bell began filing its rate case in June, utility companies were allowed to collect bonded rates 125 days after filing.

The new law, which went into effect Sept. 1, added 60 days to the waiting period. Bell said the old, 125-day law should govern its case because the first filing was in June.

Utility commissioners and the state district judge said the new rule affects the case because Bell did not finish filing the case until Oct. 19.

Roth said the company still doesn't agree, but won't fight.

No one seeks offices

COAHOMA (AP) — Does anyone want to be mayor of Coahoma? How about alderman?

No one seems to be interested in running for office in this West Texas town of 1,100 just east of Big Spring.

"While it's not common, it's happened before," said John Steiner of the Texas secretary of state's office said.

Up for grabs are one-year unexpired terms for mayor, one alderman position and three two-year aldermen spots. Only one incumbent with an unexpired term, Steve New, has decided to stay in office.

The incumbents say they are tired of being criticized, particularly for an unpopular garbage collection fee they imposed.

If no one files by the March 7 deadline, the places would be listed on ballots and citizens could write in candidates, Steiner said.

Asked what would happen if no one bothered to vote in the election, Steiner said courts could appoint someone to perform a specific duty.

Hightower testifies at hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — No commodity produced in Texas last year brought farmers a price higher than the production cost, according to Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

"That's a very simple bit of arithmetic for farmers, and it adds up to bankruptcy. But the administration's policy is based on holding the farmers' price down," Hightower told the U.S. House Agriculture Committee on Tuesday.

The state official testified at a hearing on the 1985 farm bill.

The nation needs "legislation that will set a price at least at the cost of production so farmers at least have a prayer of making a profit if they are good farmers," Hightower said.

"Last year, the cost of producing every single commodity in my state exceeded the average price the farmers got for it. The figures showed it cost about $6.40 to make a bushel of wheat in Texas, and our farmers are getting $3.20 for it," he testified.

Americans are willing to pay higher prices if they are convinced the money will find its way to family farmers, he added, saying that 65 percent of U.S. net farm income in 1983 went to 1 percent of the farmers.

Consumers "believe, and rightly so, that their food dollars and their tax dollars are going to benefit everyone but that small- and medium-sized family farmer," Hightower said.

He blamed the Reagan administration for keeping prices too low to support farmers.

Persian lesson

There was a day not many years past when the developments now taking place in the Persian Gulf would have stricken fear in the heart of many an American motorist.

That was the time following the infamous 1973 Arab oil embargo when a stoppage of the oil freighters to this country could wreak havoc with the economy, strand motorists in lengthy lines at gasoline stations and, generally, boost the sales of antacids in America. The country was at the mercy of overseas oil moguls and that isn't ever an enviable position.

Now that isn't the case, though, as illustrated by the escalating Iraq-Iran war and the deteriorating situation in the gulf. There are a number of reasons why.

During the past decade the United States government took seriously the compromising position created by its oil vulnerability. Actions taken since 1973 have resulted in:

— A shift of oil imports from the volatile Middle East to other countries considered more stable, notably Mexico and Canada.

— A major move by American automobile manufacturers and car-buyers to smaller, more fuel-efficient automobiles. Also, emphasis on lowering traffic speeds and altering driving habits to benefit fuel consumption.

— More emphasis on preparing for the unexpected. A good example is the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, which now contains 385 million barrels of crude oil — enough to meet the nation's total oil import quota for 90 days, according to figures from the Department of Energy.

— A glut of oil worldwide, which means a stoppage of imports won't affect this country as rapidly.

All the emphasis on preparedness doesn't mean the United States simply can rest on its laurels if a major Middle Eastern oil stoppage results from the Iraq-Iran war. What it means is that this country now has a little working advantage.

Ironically, while a break in oil imports in years past would have been economically damaging, now it might actually help to revitalize the American economy. Ed Thompson, executive vice-president of the Midland-based Permian Basin Petroleum Association, noted that a breakdown in oil imports probably would help the oil industry nationwide.

That breakdown in imports probably would not hurt the United States too quickly, said Peter Wellish, communications director for the Independent Petroleum Association of America. He noted that the level of oil now existing in the Strategic Petroleum Reserve is enough to replace 900 days of net imports from the Persian Gulf or seven months of imports from all nations affiliated with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

While an international crisis precipitated by the Iraq-Iran war should be avoided if at all possible, it's interesting to note that this time Uncle Sam probably won't be a casualty. At least not an immediate casualty.

The situation isn't ideal yet. But the lesson is clear in the developing "crisis" in the Persian Gulf: This nation should never place itself at the mercy of a foreign government again.

Another View:

Deficit diagnosis

Where, in your judgment, did that big budget deficit come from? Before you can prescribe a cure, you need to arrive at a diagnosis.

Until the 1980s, it was generally true that economic expansion shrank the deficit because tax revenues rose and social spending dropped. That won't happen in the years ahead.

Even with rapid and steady economic growth through the end of the decade, the administration agrees that the 1989 deficit would still be around $200 billion if present tax and spending laws remained unchanged. Using slightly less wildly optimistic assumptions, the Congressional Budget Office calculates that by 1989 the deficit would be over $300 billion.

President Reagan touched lightly on this uncomfortable subject at his press conference last week, when he said that about half of the present deficit is cyclical — meaning that it is the result of the recent recession. But if he's right, the other half of the deficit is structural.

Two questions arise here. Why is the structural deficit now three times as large as it was when Reagan took office? And why is the structural deficit growing?

The White House offered an explanation in the budget that it published earlier this month. The rise of the structural deficit, it said, is rooted in "the strong momentum of federal spending increases," and in the mismanaged policies of the 1970s that "stunted the economy's ability to grow."

Really? Several pages later the same budget document proudly points out that domestic spending, in real terms, has not increased since Reagan took office. The budget cuts of the past several years have been very effective, and they have in fact ended the previous pattern of continuous increases.

As for stunted growth in the past, that surely would not explain the predicted increases in the structural deficit during a boom over the next five years.

The real answers start with the federal tax system, which, after the 1981 changes, is no longer significantly progressive. Even if the country's income rises, the share of it going into taxes will remain at the present level.

Meanwhile, regardless of the rate of economic growth, two categories of spending are going to keep rising rapidly — defense and interest on the federal debt.

Since interest is truly uncontrollable, that leaves defense spending and the tax structure as the only subjects really worth pursuing. And then it needs to be said that all of the reasonable defense cuts put together add up only to a rather small fraction of the structural budget deficits now in prospect for the late 1980s.

When you begin to hear Reagan talk about tax increases, you will know that he is preparing to deal seriously with the Reagan deficits.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Expert's Lebanon warning failed

WASHINGTON — The disintegration of the U.S.-trained Lebanese army is nearly complete. Moslem troops proved more loyal to their religious leaders than to their Christian officers, and deserted in wholesale lots. Some of them even wound up using the military skills their American advisers taught them to attack the presidential palace they were supposed to defend.

Jack Anderson

All of this has been mightily embarrassing to the Reagan administration, which had placed great faith in the reconstituted Lebanese army. President Reagan had, in fact, made it the keystone of his hopes for a settlement in Lebanon.

But the army's pathetic performance was foreseen a year ago by an unsung professional whose warnings were ignored. He's retired Army Col. James Wootten, who now analyzes military affairs for the Congressional Research Service, an arm of the Library of Congress. He claimed it was dangerous to put much reliance on the Lebanese army.

I have learned that the professionals usually are more reliable than the politicians. So I got hold of a copy of Wootten's "Policy Alert" and published excerpts in a column on April 3, 1983. The publicity didn't help; Wootten's message continued to go unheeded.

With almost pinpoint prescience, his report warned that the weakness of the Lebanese army would make it difficult for the United States to achieve its goal of total foreign troop withdrawal. The army, which Wootten noted was in "very poor condition," would be unable to keep peace when challenged by the battle-hardened, highly motivated militias of the rival religious factions in Lebanon.

Wootten recommended taking time to resolve the inherent flaw in the Lebanese army: the hostility between its Christian and Moslem elements. Only when these differences had been settled would it be wise for the United States to stake its hopes on the army, he advised.

The Israelis, who shared the skepticism about the Lebanese army, got hold of his report and handed it to Philip Habib, President Reagan's Middle East envoy. Sources tell me Habib flung the report on the floor in a rage, and made a disparaging remark about the Congressional Research Service. Later, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin personally delivered the report to Sam Lewis, the U.S. ambassador to Israel.

The only result was that several intelligence analysts set to work trying to shoot holes in the report. Then they returned it to the author, pointing out various "errors."

GORED OX GRIPES: When a private group with a siphon into the U.S. Treasury is criticized for extravagance, it upsets the recipient of government largesse. The flow of money could be cut off.

So I wasn't surprised that my Jan. 20 report on the wanderings of Spencer Oliver, founder of the American Council of Young Political Leaders, provoked an angry response. ACYPL gets about $400,000 a year from the U.S. Information Agency.

Oliver listed several complaints. Many were quibbling; many were strongly disputed by knowledgeable administration and congressional sources.

My January report focused on a trip to Australia that Oliver wanted to take at USIA's expense. It would have been his 33rd such "junket" (a word Oliver objected to).

In turning him down, the USIA pointed out that the case "involved plans for an individual who already had taken a large number of tax-supported ACYPL trips to go on still another," and added: "We believe ACYPL and other such groups should strive to involve as many qualified Americans as possible in educational exchanges — not send the same people on trip after trip."

Oliver claimed that a number of his trips were paid for by other organizations, not by money the USIA gave to ACYPL. But USIA auditors concluded that "ACYPL's financial records will not support a determination of the source of funding for Mr. Oliver's travel for any period prior to the beginning of calendar year 1981." And 31 of his trips were made before that date.

I also noted criticism of ACYPL's selection procedure for participants in the taxpayer-funded excursions. A USIA-directed evaluation (provided, incidentally, by Oliver) complained that there was "a strong tendency towards a CLOSED process" that was "somewhat confusing and overly complicated."

The evaluator said his questions on the selection process "were not effectively answered."

As for an internal USIA memo I quoted, which suggested Oliver had used trips abroad as rewards for his political pals, he claimed the memo is a forgery. The USIA reconfirmed its authenticity.

Only one of Oliver's complaints had some merit. I attributed the transfer of the USIA official, who had nixed Oliver's Australian trip, to USIA's fear of offending an influential congressman with whom Oliver has close ties. Actually, a high USIA source said the official's fall from grace was also due in part to columns I had previously written critical of programs he administered.

Footnote: The American Council of Young Political Leaders almost lost its USIA funding after my January report. An outside review panel recommended this. But the USIA decided to continue funding — if ACYPL agrees to six conditions that will tighten up its administrative and accounting procedures.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Latin population poses challenge

WASHINGTON — Latin American women may be having fewer children now, but the area's population, nevertheless, is expected to double by the year 2025.

William Giandoni

Birthrates are declining in most of the hemisphere republics, demographers say. But because of "the control of transmissible and communicable diseases and sharp improvements in medical care, sanitation and potable water standards, death rates are plummeting, according to Robert Fox, an Inter-American Development Bank sociologist.

In Mexico, for example, the birthrate stayed at around 44 per 1,000 throughout the 1940-1970 period. But the death rate was more than haived, from 23 per 1,000 to only 10. Mexico's population soared from 20 million in 1940 to 51 million in 1970.

Fox estimates that Mexicans now number 75 million and that Mexico's population will reach 174 million by 2025.

His figures are much in line with those of the U.N. Latin American Demographic Center which recently released projections for all the hemisphere republics, based on high, medium and low fertility hypotheses. CELADE's high figure for Mexico is 188.3 million, the medium 154.1 million and the low 127.4 million.

Fox, who was working with earlier CELADE figures, warned against the mistaken tendency "to equate a falling birthrate with a large reduction in the expected population size."

"The population issue is more serious today than it was 10 to 20 years ago," Fox wrote in the Inter-American Development Bank News.

"There has been a radical change in the centuries-old relationship between birth and death rates. Traditionally, the differences between the two have been small, with births slightly exceeding deaths," Fox said.

Death rates in the developing countries, like those of Latin America, began to drop sharply in the 1930s, but not the birthrates.

In Mexico, Fox said, there now are many more young people in the population than ever before.

"This is the direct product of a 50-year history of declining death rates and a steady high birthrate. Accordingly, a much greater number of young women of childbearing age is producing a greater number of children than before, even though the birthrate may be lower," he said.

Fox explained that 6.6 million Mexican women gave birth to 1.8 million children in 1960. The birthrate was 45 per 1,000. Twenty years later, in 1980, the birthrate had fallen to 36, but the 13.2 million Mexican women of childbearing age had 2.7 million babies.

His expectation is that the birthrate in Mexico should be down to 25 per 1,000 by 2000, but that the 24.6 million women of childbearing age will have 3.1 million babies.

Situations are similar in other countries.

"What this means for all of Latin America, according to recent U.N. estimates, is that the region's population will rise from its present 390 million to 800 million by 2025 — more than doubling in a mere four decades," Fox said.

At the same time, the need for new jobs, education and other services is escalating.

"Latin America's labor force amounted to 55 million in 1950," according to Fox. It reached 99 million in 1975, and by the year 2000 it will total 197 million.

"That figure is solid because it is derived from a population already born," Fox said.

Mexico and Central America combined will have a labor force of 53 million by the year 2000.

"From now to the end of the century, about 1.2 million jobs need to be created annually just in this region," Fox said.

The magnitude of the challenge can be appreciated considering that some 2 million jobs were created each year in the United States during the 1970s, "yet the Mexican and Central American economies combined are scarcely 6 to 8 percent the size of the U.S. economy," Fox said.

"The challenge posed by the extraordinary population growth of recent decades has not disappeared," he warned. "It is still slowly emerging...."

EDWIN FEULNER

No more 'rubber stamping'

For the past twenty years Washington liberals have known they could rely on the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights to rubber stamp their prejudices and theories, with studies and pronouncements that columnist William Raspberry concedes were at times "trivial," "flawed," or contrived to prove a point.

Edwin Feulner

Today, there is a new civil rights commission and Washington liberals are fearful the new commission will produce the same kind of flawed studies — to prove a different point. Let's hope not.

The purpose of the civil rights commission never should have been to prove anything. Nor should its role, as Raspberry suggested recently, have been to be "the government's conscience on matters of race

One of the great fallacies of our times is that civil rights is a racial issue.

Certainly, there has been and continues to be racism in our society. There also are people who hate Jews, Orientals, Italians, think all Polish people are dullards, all Southerners are rednecks, all Catholics have short-wave radio transmitters in their attics which they use to keep in touch with the Vatican, think blondes have more fun.

There are also people in our society who think. And these people — the vast majority of Americans — don't need a surrogate conscience.

Commission Director Linda Chavez and Chairman Clarence Pendleton have said it's time for the commissionn to discared the rhetoric of the past and chart a new course for itself.

They will not, for example, search for racial motives for everything that happens. It's easy to blame black unemployment and black poverty on racism. That's what the United States has been doing for years, and by crafting "solutions" that treat economic problems as primarily racial in nature, the Left has managed to create even bigger problems.

Black teenage unemployment, for example, is three or four times greater than it was thirty-five years ago. Is America more racially divided than it was then? That's nonsense.

In the years that followed the Supreme Court's landmark civil rights decision in Brown v. Board of Education, Americans of good conscience lobbied for meaningful anti-discrimination laws that would open doors previously closed to many Americans because of their race, national origin, or religion. The goal was to create an equal-opportunity society, in which decisions about education, employment, job advancement, and so forth would be made on the basis of merit, not race.

This approach soon fell out of favor with the Left and during the 1960s and '70s the notion developed that the government had to guarantee equality of results — not just opportunity.

And in order to do this, the government itself adopted discriminatory policies, creating "affirmative action" rules that required certain numbers of jobs to be set aside for racial and ethnic minorities (broadly defined as blacks, Hispanics, women, and virtually every other group with a gripe).

The incredible theory was, apparently, that white males had no civil rights.

The new civil rights commission has an historic opportunity to remind America that the Constitution guarantees all of us rights, and that the government should be equally concerned with abuses of those rights no matter what our color or religion or family origin is.

Young blacks raising roof at Kennedy Center

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kennedy Center had never seen anything quite like it — a bunch of young black kids from the ghetto raising the roof with their irreverent lyrics, fancy dance steps and special brand of music played on homemade instruments salvaged from neighborhood trash cans.

Members of the Barry Farms Junkyard Band, aged 12 to 17, made their debut at the elegant, marbled cultural center on the Potomac one recent Saturday morning before an audience of nearly 400 shouting, hand-waving, hip-swinging youngsters attending the center's annual "cultural diversity festival," marking Black History Month.

Lead singer Steven Herrion, hip in sunglasses and tight slacks, drew laughs and cheers with his undulating takeoff on Michael Jackson's "Billy Jean" routine. The crowd warmed to "Shake It On Down" and "Barry Farms Slide," and went wild when the band swung into one of its most popular numbers:

"Crystal went down to the food stamp place.

"The man shut the door in Crystal's face.

"She said, What's hapnin, what's the word?

"He said, Hey girl, haven't you heard?

"The trip's gettin deep, it's not too funny.

"Reagan's makin bombs with the food stamp money."

The infectious, driving beat, which continued non-stop through the 45-minute show, is played on sawed-off plastic buckets, tin cans and cowbells mounted on milk crates and bright orange traffic cones. Abetting the percussions are toy store trumpets, tambourines, snare drums and cymbals, a cheap electronic keyboard and a set of bongos donated by a fan.

For the 10 members of the band, the Kennedy Center stage was only a few miles away by rented van — but a world apart — from their home in the Barry Farms neighborhood of Anacostia, a poor, inner-city community in southeast Washington.

In a eighborhood where men huddle glumly on street corners and passersby walk fast, band members practice their "junk funk" after school in a cramped tenement apartment.

Their director is Derrick McCrae, 22, a mail clerk for the District of Columbia police department who organized the Junkyard Band in the summer of 1980.

"They started making noise together in my backyard, and I said, 'Hey, I like that. I gotta show this to the world'," McCrae said. "We got this place for rehearsals, and we've been rolling ever since."

They've played at local theaters, colleges, benefit marathon races, night clubs, recreation centers and parks, the city convention center and coliseum and Christmas festivals at swank shopping malls. They even give sidewalk concerts for loose change.

They've appeared on a syndicated children's TV show, been written up in National Geographic World magazine, won a certificate of appreciation from President Reagan for a summer concert in the park behind the White House, and played a bit role in the movie comedy "D.C. Cab."

Boxing champion Sugar Ray Leonard caught their gig in a night club, and liked what he heard. He bought them specially designed Barry Farms Junkyard Band T-shirts and jackets to wear at concerts.

"This neighborhood is a real, low-income ghetto," McCrae said. "We've got our share of drugs, alcoholics and crime. This keeps them off the streets and gives them something to do."

McCrae insists that to stay in the band, his musicians must maintain at least a C average in school and stay out of trouble with their parents. Members who leave are replaced by younger kids "to keep our youthful image," he said.

They're entirely self-supporting, and have banked enough earnings to buy their own van, the costliest item in their budget.

"Things are looking up," said McCrae, his musicians nodding assent. "My goal is to make enough money to get some real instruments and go to Hollywood."

Attorney twits his colleagues in book

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Dan White was writing his book parodying the legal profession, he was confident about the project because, he says with a smile, "Everyone in the United States either is a lawyer or hates one."

Motivated by that thought, the 30-year-old attorney, who works at one of the top Washington law firms, spent evenings and weekends scribbling his thoughts on a legal pad.

The result is "The Official Lawyer's Handbook," a $5.95 paperback that is a hodgepodge of humorous text, photographs, cartoons, lists and dos and don'ts for the aspiring lawyer.

The irreverent handbook spoofs lawyers as greedy, boring and self-important. And yes, they like to confuse the issue by using big words, White says.

But White says most lawyers he knows don't mind the book's kidding — and if they do, it's because they wish they had written it.

White's chapter on "The Creative Art of Billing" begins: "Anyone who says lawyers aren't creative and imaginative hasn't seen a lawyer fill out his time sheets."

Yet, White insists lawyers are not overpaid for what they do. The day-to-day routine, he said jokingly, is often as interesting as "cleaning up Madison Square Garden after the International Horse Show."

Much of the book is devoted to areas White knows about — getting into a good law school, doing well, landing lucrative and fun summer internships and, finally, snagging the right job, preferably at a high-powered firm that starts associates at $43,000 a year.

Scoreboard offer is too good to refuse

Cubs Stadium in Hogan Park will have a new scoreboard this summer, one that not only well keep fans updated on inning-by-inning score, balls and strikes, but send messages to fans and develop a severe case of the shakes at the sight of a home run.

The scoreboard is being donated to the City of Midland by Phillip Morris, a tobacco company, for a 10-year exclusive advertising rights on the scoreboard.

"I really don't know that much about it," said Midland Cubs General Manager Bill Schammel, "We (the Midland Cubs and Midland Cubs Inc.) don't have anything to do with it. However, since we are the main tenant, we will benefit as will all teams and tournaments using Cubs Stadium."

Schammel added, "The Phillip Morris offer did come at an appropriate time. The old scoreboard didn't work the final four games of the Texas League season last year because of a broken cable. It would have cost $2,000 to have it repaired."

Phillip Morris plans to install 35 such scoreboards in minor league baseball stadiums, the park picked to be decided by attendance in relation to the size of the city. The only other Texas League park with a similar scoreboard is Beaumont.

When Midland was selected by the tobacco company, the offer was made to the City Council, which accepted it at the regular meeting Tuesday. The electrical system will have to be altered, but otherwise it will cost the city nothing.

The $92,000 scoreboard will be located 10 to 13 feet behind the fence. It will be 20 feet tall and will come with a message center good for relaying batting averages, reporting birthdays, welcoming fans to the park and celebrating home runs.

It is planned to move the old scoreboard to the Hogan Park softball complex.

Winder joins Raider staff

LUBBOCK (AP) — Dick Winder, head football coach at Abilene Cooper High School last season, Tuesday was named defensive end coach for Texas Tech.

Winder, 41, becomes the fifth new assistant named by Tech football coach Jerry Moore. He compiled an 82-49 record in 13 seasons as a head high school coach.

Winder started his coaching career at Roswell, N.M. in 1968, then moved to Odessa High School. He entered private business for two years before returning to Odessa High. In 1979, he entered the college ranks as offensive backfield and quarterback coach at New Mexico. He then spent three years at Monahans before moving to Abilene Cooper.

He succeeds Rodney Allison, whom Winder coached at Odessa and who has joined the Duke University coaching staff.

What's best way?

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Among the 10 coaches at the NCAA's annual College Football Preview this week were two who learned last season what it's like to have a national championship team.

Miami's Howard Schnellenberger won his championship in a poll. Rey Dempsey of Southern Illinois — now the coach at Memphis State — won his on the playing field in the Division I-AA playoffs.

"To be involved in a playoff game and win the national championship is a great thing," said Dempsey. "I like the playoffs, but I've never been able to figure out how to do it in Division I-A.

"Our players really liked it (the playoff system), but when you're in I-AA you don't get a chance to get much publicity. For I-AA it's a great, great thing. It did affect us academically. A lot of guys had to take incompletes in some courses for the semester. I didn't feel that 14 games (11 regular season, 3 playoff) were too many."

'We're No. 1'

SCHNELLENBERGER agreed on that point.

"I don't see any problem with 14 games," he said. "We have 13 games now (Miami plays in the 1984 Kickoff Classic, plus a possible postseason bowl game) and we scrimmage on the Saturdays we're off anyway."

But he doesn't have any argument with the current system since "Miami is the only one that has a chance to win two national championships in a row."

But Schnellenberger has also coached in the pros and he said that "the NFL gives you one champion and 27 losers. The worst thing in the world is to be in the Super Bowl and lose. The best thing to happen to college football is that all the people at Auburn and Nebraska and Miami think they're No. 1. The more winners you have, the better off you are in intercollegiate athletics."

Dempsey saw some of that in the playoffs.

"The teams we beat felt like they were losers, and that's terrible because they had great years," he said.

BUT MARYLAND'S Bobby Ross said his team didn't feel like a 1983 loser despite a 30-23 loss to Tennessee in the Florida Citrus Bowl.

"I don't believe that at all," he said. "I believe we should have a playoff (in I-A). And I don't see why everybody gets that concerned about grades. Basketball has tougher academic problems than we have and they have a playoff. It should be decided on the field. I'd like to see it structured in some way through the bowls."

Riverside expels Monterey

El Paso Riverside's sawed-off Rangers were too fast and too quick for Lubbock Monterey's taller Plainsmen and scored an easier-than-it-looks 75-66 Class 5A bi-district victory at Langford Chaparral Center Tuesday night.

Riverside returns to Midland Friday for the Region I tournament, probably against No.1 ranked Fort Worth Dunbar.

Five-nine David Neria led the Rangers, who had just one starter over six feet, with 29 points, 21 coming in the last half when Riverside opened a 62-44 lead midway through the fourth quarter.

Lubbock Monterey, with just starter under six foot, made a rush at the Rangers late in the first half after trailing 18-9 early in the second quarter. A whirlwind flurry cut the Riverside lead to 23-19, but the El Paso team widened the gap to 27-19 at half.

It was 62-44 before either of Monterey's 6-8 postmen scored a basket.

Five-10 Eric Fino scored 17 for El Paso while Glen Seale came off the bench to share the Monterey scoring led with Curry Blackwell, with 13 points each.

Riverside brings a 26-5 record into the Region I tournament while Monterey, which had eliminated Odessa Permian, wound up 24-8.

El Paso Jefferson defeated Amarillo High, 53-51; Fort Worth Dunbar buried Arlington Sam Houston, 85-60; and Fort Worth Southwest defeated Hurst Bell, 47-45, to gain the other Region I berths.

Go to class or ride bench

PHILADELPHIA — Basketball players at Temple University have to go to study hall or they can't play on the team. At first some thought it was a joke.

But now, Temple players, ranked 18th in the country with a 22-3 record, are winning in the classroom, too.

They're doing it with the help of a former graduate student, a salesman and a businessman who love basketball, and in the process some of the players are getting help planning careers.

"There has been a clear shift in academic progress," said counseling director Emily Sherwood. "Some may not have thought about education before.

"So few people are going to make it to the pros, for them to count on it would be a mistake," she said.

"We have told them for years about how winning in the classroom leads to winning on the floor, and now they're starting to tell us some of the same things," said Coach John Chaney, who has rescheduled practice or taken a tutor along so his players can keep up with their homework.

TEMPLE'S RECORD this year is a big improvement over last year's 14-15 finish, although last year several key players were hurt.

The rules are firm: The entire basketball team must attend study hall once a week at the Temple counseling center. Players who have tried to cut study hall have been told they couldn't play on the team.

But study hall means more than books.

"It's like a family," said Granger Hall, a business major who is Temple's star forward and leading rebounder.

"We all get along, we all joke. And that concept carries over on the court, because we all know what our abilities are," Hall said.

The basketball team's four-year-old program, run by Jon Cohen, is the oldest of the study hall programs for Temple athletes. Study hall isn't mandatory for the other teams.

THE PROGRAM was partly the result of local and national publicity over the poor academic progress of some student athletes.

"There were articles breaking in the news and some awful stories that came out," said Dr. Herbert Horikawa, a psychologist at the counseling center.

Cohen, 32, was a graduate student in psychology when Temple Athletic Director Gavin White approached him four years ago about starting the tutoring program.

"He mentioned that in the last few years very few Temple players had graduated, and he asked Emily Sherwood and me what we could do to help," Cohen said. "I had an interest in athletics, and I thought I'd take on the challenge." He now works part-time for the athletic department.

Temple didn't release the number of players who graduated before the tutor program began, but Cohen said one third of the 450 athletes made the dean's list for the fall semester, and all of the basketball players are on target to graduate.

Academic improvement is very hard to measure, said Cohen's wife, Mary Toscani, who started as a tutor with the basketball team and last September became a full-time academic adviser to the athletic department.

"But we can see, because basketball players are a relatively small group, that they've turned from having a negative attitute toward studies to having an interest with them," Toscani said. "In four years with the program, no one on the basketball team has flunked out."

"I really do empathize with these kids because of their schedule," said tutor Rachelle Williams. Twice this year, the players have missed five days in a row because of road trips and they frequently have to practice at 6 a.m. before classes.

ERIC ZEMPER, a research coordinator for the NCAA in Kansas City, said academics has "been a concern for a long time." Starting in the fall of 1986, incoming college freshmen will need a C average in 11 college preparatory courses to qualify for athletic scholarships under NCAA rules, he said.

Cohen said starting the program seemed like a thankless job at first.

"I thought study hall was a joke, and some other players said, 'We have to go to practice and to class, why this?'" said senior center Colin McNish.

"But now, the guys look forward to coming down here. We all know everybody needs help wherever they go," McNish said.

Cohen recruited several part-time tutors to help him, including a salesman he met in a shoe store and a businessman who shared his love of basketball. They are paid a "minimal amount."

Players come to the study hall at various times, whenever classes allow, and meet individually with tutors. Some players have found new areas of study, and some have gained new confidence.

Judge rules against USFL's ban

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A federal judge has ruled the United States Football League's regulation barring the signing of underclassmen violates the Sherman Antitrust act, a league attorney said Tuesday night.

Don Meyers of Phoenix, Ariz., who represented the USFL in the suit brought by a former Arizona football player, said he had been told of the ruling in a telephone call from the clerk of Judge Laughlin Waters, who tried the case in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles.

"I have no details," said Meyers, although he said he had been told that the judge had left the way open for the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals to hear an appeal and make a broader ruling.

A clerk for Waters said a decision had been reached, but would not be made public until Wednesday.

Bob Boris, who filed the suit, has since joined with the Oklahoma Outlaws of the year-old league, but a ruling in his favor could open the way for others to sign with USFL teams and have a bearing on a similar regulation in the National Football League.

Meyers said that although the ruling had "no direct legal impact on any other student athlete, the application of the court decison to any other student athlete is apparent."

An adviser to Marcus Dupree, a former Oklahoma University running back, said the ruling opens the way for Dupree to sign with the New Orleans Breakers before the end of the week. Ken Fairley, a Hattiesburg, Miss., businessman told RKO Radio he had learned earlier Tuesday that the ruling was favorable to Boris.

Meyers said Waters decision came as no surprise because he had been aware that the judge considered "the eligibility rule as used by the USFL and the National Football League a Section 1 Sherman Act violation."

"The judge ruled it would be unconsitutional for underclassmen not to be allowed to play professional ball." Fairley told RKO Radio from his office in Hattiesburg, Miss. He did not say how he had learned of the ruling.

Dupree, a sophomore, dropped out of Oklahoma during the 1983 season, and subsequently enrolled and later dropped out of Southern Mississippi.

The Breakers received permission to talk with him from the New Jersey Generals, which have USFL territorial rights to Oklahoma players. Chet Simmons, USFL commissioner, has said that the league's regulation would bar Dupree from signing until his original class at Oklahoma is graduated.

TED BATTLES

High schools fight colleges

The battle lines are being drawn between the high schools and colleges over basketball, of all things.

It all began when the Southeast Conference and Turner Broadcasting System started televising games on Friday nights back in January.

The resulting drop in attendance at high school games since the telecasts began has been cause for alarm among the prep officials.

IT SEEMS it was only a few years ago that the high schools fought to make Friday nights safe from professional football, back in the the days when the NFL, after years of plodding in relative obscurity, exploded as the thing to do and watch. After the Baltimore-NY Giants playoff game in the late 1950s, it became the rage. A new league was organized and everybody got into the act.

It took an act of congress to make high school football safe, but it was decreed that Fridays were for high schools, Saturdays for colleges and Sundays for pros.

With the fat contracts colleges are receiving for the rights to their basketball, the high schools fear college football may be tempted to try Fridays, if it were made worth their while.

Of course, before the SEC-TBS hookup, Pac-10 games were televised on Friday, but a 10 p.m. tip off isn't prime time and constitutes no threat.

YOU CAN'T really blame the colleges for trying to make an extra buck by taking advantage of the spoils of tv. Many college athletic budgets are being strained to the limit by the expanded women's athletic programs, which in most cases haven't established the kind of following that translates into a profit.

TV basketball has been a blessing, a godsend. In fact, considering the limited expense and the small squads, tv has made the return on the dollar more lucrative for the college with a small-time football program by making big time basketball that much more accessible.

EACH FRIDAY 10,000 high school basketball games are played. It is estimated the average loss per game is $100. That doesn't sound too serious until you multiply it with the number of games and come up with $1 million.

The high schools, however, may have an ally in their fight...the colleges. Several major conferences have noticed that since the glut of tv, sometimes as many as 20 games a week are carried on the tube, attendance has been off, not alarminly, but noticeably, nevertheless.

And why not? Why sit up in the rafters when you can sip a beer, munch on pretzels and watch the same thing at home?

A sprinkling of empty seats here and there isn't going to alter the present course, but it is an alert to possible oversaturation.

Back in the 1950s, boxing was a tv regular almost every night of the week. It seemed as though folks just couldn't get enough. Then, it was almost as though someone through a big switch. There was no boxing.

Only the personal magnetism of Muhammad Ali saved the sport from extinction. Boxing returned to television and again is carried as regular fare. Boxing sudden decline as a tv sport could be a warning for college basketball or any sport for that matter.

Winter blahs? Try ice fishing

By ROLLA WILLIAMS
Copley News Service

There is an interesting fishing game played through the ice in the northern tier of states during the wintertime.

It's called ice fishing and it enables a zealot to extend his fishing season long past summertime, when it's legal, and, at the same time, harvest a passel of good eating fish. Refrigeration, certainly, is no problem.

In North Dakota and Minnesota, the hoped-for catch is walleye, but the volume catch is crappie and perch. Residents are allowed, in addition, to spear northern pike. They cannot spear walleyes.

That is a special sport, by itself, spearing northerns. An angler armed with a multi-tined spear, sharpened to razor edge, might return home with a long, strong, silvery fish grinning from an alligator mouth and containing some of the sweetest, white-meat flesh ever ran past a frying pan.

It's easier to tell than do. A successful pike spearer must have the nerves of a long-range rifle shooter, the patience of a spider at the net, the swift reactions of a cobra on the strike, the unerring eye of Ted Williams at bat.

ON THE PLAINS of the Dakotas and Minnesota, where the food grains are king, winter fishing attracts close to one-third of the normal summer crowd.

This is an impressive figure, since these are popular summer fishing states and wintertime fishing frequently occurs at below freezing temperatures, sometimes with snow and a bitter wind, in addition, howling around one's ears.

Spear fishing is so popular in the north that participants pay $7.50 in addition to the cost of a base fishing license just to qualify.

Last winter, my partner and I had just walked onto Lake Sallie, near Detroit Lakes, Minn., when Duane Burnside of Glyndon, Minn., emerged from his fish house with a pike hanging on his spear. Burnside had his personal cheering section, sons Troy, 12, and the 11-year-old twins, Adam and Brady.

A bit further along, on the way to our rented fish house, was Harlan Pratt, from Moorhead, Minn., who obligingly dumped out a bucketful of panfish he'd caught beneath the ice. He had bluegill mostly, but a sizable representation of crappie and a few bass, all of which, he said, bit readily.

For him, perhaps, but not for Morrie Rasmussen, my brother-in-law, and myself. We fished just off the bottom, as advised, for walleyes and anything else that would bite. Nothing did though we lifted to shallower depths and jiggled our baited hooks frequently.

Well, it was an interesting and thoroughly worthwhile experience, and it's recommended as an antidote for the winter blahs.

A WEEK BEFORE we'd fished in the open, on a calm, sunny, perhaps 20-degree day, at Devils Lake, N.D. That was delightful because we were dressed to handle the cold and, besides, we nailed six walleyes, which we carried home to Fargo, N.D., for a dinner feast.

It was colder on Lake Sallie, around 10 degrees, a blustery breeze and certainly a minus zero chill factor. It was a fierce walk to the fish house, but comfortable inside.

The plywood house, about the size of a storage shed, rented for $10 a half-day. Fish holes already had been drilled at each corner and the wood stove, located along one wall, was cherry red as it generated heat. We shed jackets and gloves a few moments after arriving.

OUTSIDE, IN the weather, fish holes must be skimmed frequently to remove newly formed ice. Inside, however, the heat from our stove kept the skim ice at bay.

Dick Hassinger, chief of fisheries in Minnesota, says some fish houses — he calls them "ice houses" — have carpeting, bunks, TV, a refrigerator.

"They're like summertime cabins," he says.

Mille Lacs, largest of Minnesota's 10 Thousand Lakes, sometimes attracts 5,000 ice houses on a winter weekend. It is a veritable city on ice with streets and avenues, picket fences and even greenery of the kind funeral folk spread around graves in a cemetery.

Most houses remain for the season, after the ice is thick enough to permit sliding the house into place. The season for walleyes continues through Feb. 15 and, after that, for 100-a-day limit perch fishing.

Trick that big trout

One of the more frustrating experiences encountered when casting hardware lures in clear water is to see a big trout or bass following but not strikimg your lure.

If changing lures and retrieve speeds doesn't produce more strikes, here's another tactic that may bring dramatic results: Rig a trailing wet fly, nymph or streamer 18 inches or so behind the hardware lure. Remove the treble hook from a spoon, tie on a length of leader material and your fly. Fish are attracted and aroused by the flash of the hardware lure and slam the smaller, more natural-looking trailing fly.

Freeze underscores value of fish tagging

BY RODNEY RIEHLE

The December freeze-related fish kill along the Texas Gulf Coast underscored the importance of fishery management programs, including recovery and reporting of tagged fish.

Thousands of red drum, spotted seatrout and other species have been tagged in the past and more will be tagged in the future, says the Texas Parks and Wildlife Dept.

A tagged fish can be identified by a brightly-colored plastic streamer protruding from its side just behind the gill cover. Tags are anchored internally by a rectangular plastic disc and each disc has a series of numbers and the words Texas Parks and Wildlife and either Seabrook or Rockport.

Tags should be returned to the TPWD P.O. Box 8 Seabrook or P.O. Box 1707. Rockport. Biologists also ask anglers who catch tagged red drum to send in four scales from the fish along with the tag. Scales can be pulled off the side of the fish near the pectoral fin. The scales can provide valuable information on growth rates.

THE TWPD'S planned new hatchery at San Marcos will incooperate features of some of the most modern fresh water hatcheries in the nation. It will be constructed in 1984-85. The $4.8 million project will feature 30,000 square feet to house rainbow trout, small mouth bass and catfish.

The building will house eight raceways for the three species. A computer will control water flow rates and temperature and activate automatic fish feeders.

Hatchery Chief Bill Rutledge and biologist Pat Hutson toured the hatchery facilities in Illinois, Iowa, Indiana and Missouri to assure the Texas facility is equipped with the newest state-of-the-art culturing equipment.

"One of the most important features kof the raceway facility will be the control of the water temperature conditions," says Hutson, "By blending pond water with spring water from the San Marcos River, we should be able to keep the water at the optimum temperature for fish production all the time."

The San Marcos Hatchery was built in 1948 and today it remains exactly as it was then. The new facility will bring Texas into the current decade with some of the best fish culturing procedures anywhere.

Greenwood succumbs

From Staff Reports

BROWNFIELD—Anton took advantage of three Greenwood turnovers in the final minute to defeat the Rangers, 35-33, in Class A area basketball action Tuesday night.

The Bulldogs, 23-7, move on to the Region I tournament at Levelland Friday while the Rangers closed the season at 23-7.

Greenwood held a 33-32 lead with one minute left, but the Anton forced a turnover and Robby Mathis drove for the layup to put Anton ahead. Another tu rn over with 30 seconds left led to a free throw by Ronnie Cox and then with 16 seconds to go, Greenwood was guilty of a third turnover.

Cox was high scorer for Anton with 18 points while Gilliam's 11 paced Greenwood.

Two ways to pick national grid champ

"We had no problem with academics," Schnellenberger said. "We had seven weeks between the end of the regular season and the Orange Bowl. That's a lot of time for academics."

HERE'S WHAT some of the coaches had to say about the upcoming season:

Bobby Ross (Atlantic Coast Conference): "I've still got to go with North Carolina just because of their sheer talent, but Clemson has a chance if they're eligible. Georgia Tech returns 17 starters and I look for them and Virginia to be dark horses. The ACC is going from a quarterback league to a running back league. We'll have some of the top running backs in the country — Ethan Horton of North Carolina, Robert Lavette of Georgia Tech, Joe McIntosh of North Carolina State.""

Jimmy Johnson, Oklahoma State (Big Eight): "It will be more muddied up this year than it's ever been, but I've got to say Nebraska because of their tradition and the program they have."

Mike White, Illinois (Big Ten): "Ohio State. They have an established quarterback who'll be a senior and a real solid defense. But from top to bottom the gap has been closed and it's a very competitive conference."

Don James, Washington (Pac-10): "I don't think there's any clear-cut favorite. Call it a tossup among UCLA, Southern Cal, Arizona State and — hopefully — Washington. The Pac-10 had a great year in 1982, but last year we were down a little bit."

Charley Pell, Florida (Southeastern Conference): "Auburn." Why? "Bo Jackson. But," Pell added, "the SEC seems to be more balanced from top to bottom than at any time I can recall. We had seven bowl teams last year and LSU, one of the most talented teams in the country, wasn't one of them.

Jackie Sherrill, Texas A&M (Southwest Conference): "I have to go with Texas because of the number of players they still have."

LaVell Edwards, Brigham Young (Western Athletic Conference): "I'll pick BYU." Who not? The Cougars have won eight in a row.

Air Force fires basketball coach

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Hank Egan, completing his 13th season as head basketball coach at the Air Force Academy, was fired Tuesday, effective at the end of the season.

Egan, 46, has compiled an academy coaching record of 148-183, including an 8-17 mark this season. The Falcons have one regular season game left, followed by the Western Athletic Conference tournament.

Canucks, Caps battle to avoid Oilers in playoffs

By The Associated Press

The Vancouver Canucks and Washington Capitals are both fighting for post-season spoils. One just wants to make the playoffs and avoid facing the Edmonton Oilers; the other wants to finish first in its division and take the rewards that go with it.

"We're fighting to make the playoffs, and they're fighting for first place," Vancouver Coach Harry Neale said Tuesday after the Canucks defeated the Capitals 3-2 to snap Washington's seven-game home winning streak.

Patrik Sundstrom netted the game-winner on a 30-foot shot with 2:15 remaining in regulation time. The Canucks, playing without five injured regulars, had tied the game five minutes earlier when Jere Gillis scored on a deflection.

Cam Neely opened the scoring for Vancouver at 4:20 of the second period. Bobby Carpenter and Bob Gould gave the Capitals a 2-1 lead three minutes later with goals 34 seconds apart. Carpenter scored his goal eight seconds after he emerged from the penalty box.

The loss cost the Capitals a chance to gain ground in the tight Patrick Division race. Washington remains tied with Philadelphia in third place with 76 points, four behind the first-place New York Islanders and three behind the Rangers.

On the other hand, Vancouver moved within one point of the third-place Winnipeg Jets in the Smythe Division, and though the Jets have five games in hand, the Canucks feel they are within striking distance.

NHL

Rangers 3, Devils 3

Paul Gagne had given the Devils a 3-2 lead 1:06 into the third period. One minute later, the visitors' Mike Allison forced the overtime when he slipped a rebound past New Jersey goaltender Glenn Resch.

The Devils, who outshot the Rangers 4-1 in the extra period, now have a 1-6-6 record in overtime games.

Nordiques 6, Red Wings 2

Wilf Paiement and Peter Stastny each scored two goals for the Nordiques as the Red Wings saw a five-game winning streak come to an end.

Paiement's first goal was the 300th of his career and the second was his 36th of the season. Goaltender Mario Gosselin, who recently competed with Canadian Olympic team, won for the second time in two starts since signing with Quebec. The start of the game at the Colisee was delayed 30 minutes because of traffic problems caused by a snowstorm.

Blues 5, North Stars 2

Joey Mullen scored two goals in a six-minute span in the second period and Brian Sutter scored one goal and had three assists as the Blues won for the first time in eight games. Mullen now has 30 goals for the season.

Mark Napier and Steve Payne scored the goals for the visiting North Stars.

Flames 9, Kings 1

Kent Nilsson scored two goals and added three assists as the Flames extended their unbeaten streak at home to 13 games. Goaltender Rejean Lemelin extended his personal unbeaten streak to 18 games of which the Flames have won 11.

Reynolds keys Miners' success

EL PASO (AP) — The Texas-El Paso Miners have fashioned the school's most successful basketball season since its national championship year nearly two decades ago, and the cornerstone of it all has been 6-foot-6 forward Fred Reynolds.

Reynolds, one of those athletes who is at his best in the toughest of situations, has been the solidifying leader of a UTEP team that is 24-2 going into the final week of the regular season and assured of no less than a share of the Western Athletic Conference title.

With two games remaining in the regular season, UTEP is on its way to its winningest year since the 1965-66 squad that went 28-1 and beat Kentucky for the national title.

AS HE has been so often this season, Reynolds was the difference Saturday night when the Miners turned back New Mexico 75-66. He poured in 25 points, pulled down nine rebounds and deflated one Lobo rally after another with his clutch shooting inside.

Afterwards, Reynolds said this has been a dream season for the No. 9 ranked Miners, who now are 12-2 in the conference and virtually assured of a spot in the NCAA tournament field.

"It was our goal at the beginning of the season to enter the WAC undefeated, win the WAC, host the tournament, and go to the NCAA tournament," Reynolds said. "So far, everything has worked out."

At times in the second half of the WAC season UTEP seemingly has played just well enough to win. But Reynolds has been a picture of consistency. Over the last six games he has averaged 23 points a game and Saturday hit 8 of 14 field goals and 9 of 11 free throws against the Lobos.

Despite the loss, New Mexico held onto third place in the WAC. The Lobos are 21-8 overall and 9-5 in league play.

Saturday night's win gave UTEP the right to host the post-season league tournament, the first in the conference's history.

Reynolds scored 12 of his game-high 25 points in the first half, which ended with UTEP up 34-32.

THE LOBOS, paced by senior Phil Smith with 18 points, led by as many as six in the first period.

But it was the Miners' show in the second half. They never let New Mexico take the lead and after the Lobos tied the game at 56 with 4:31 left, UTEP ran off 10 straight points to go ahead 66-56.

Guard Luster Goodwin and center David Feitl backed Reynolds with 10 and 11 points respectively. For New Mexico, guard Nelson Franse had 14 points, while forwards Tim Garrett and Alan Dolensky scored 10 points apiece.

UTEP Coach Don Haskins attributed the win to the Miners' ability to hold off Smith and Garrett in the second half. Garrett, the Lobos' leading scorer, went scoreless in the second half and was in foul trouble through much of the game.

"The Lobos penetrated well with Smith and Garrett in the first half. But they didn't get inside the paint area in the second and were forced to throw up some bombs," Haskins said.

Hillery rally downs Fisher

HARLINGEN (AP) — Defending champion Bob Hillery of Houston overcame a jittery start to beat 1981 champion Lee Fisher of Harlingen 2 and 1 Tuesday in a first-round championship flight match of the 32nd annual Life Begins at Forty golf tournament.

Hillery, 55, a 5 and 4 winner over Fisher in last year's finals, evened the match by sinking a short putt for par on the 12th hole which Fisher bogeyed after hitting into a sand trap.

Court gives LA Raiders okay

FOOTBALL—The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals voted 2-1 in a case involving the Los Angeles Raiders that the NFL cannot block a franchise from moving from one city to another, thus upholding a ruling by a Los Angeles federal jury, that decided the NFL had violated U.S. antitrust laws by conspiring to block the Raiders' move from Oakland to Los Angeles in 1982. The court will rule at a later date on the jury's decision to award the Raiders and the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum more than $48 million in damages for conspiring to block the move.

The decision said: "The NFL is a unique business organization to which it is difficult to apply antitrust rules which were developed in the context of arrangements between actual competitors."...

TRACK—The field for the Oct. 28 New York City Marathon will be increased from 17,000 to 18,000. Last year, the New York Road Runners Club rejected more than 40,000 entries...

Mary Decker and Carl Lewis were named the amateur Pressure Proof Athletes of the Year for 1983 by members of the nation's sports media...

BASEBALL—Pitcher John Candelaria reportedly has asked the Pittsburgh Pirates to be traded, but he met with team officials Tuesday and said he will report for spring training on today. Candelaria met for 10 minutes with Pirates' executive veep Harding "Pete" Peterson, but neither he nor Peterson would reveal details of their discussion. Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner also sat in on the talks...

Jerry Martin, former Kansas City Royals' outfielder who Friday was released from a federal corrections institution in Fort Worth following a drug conviction, will join the New York Mets Thursday for a tryout. Martin, 34, was praised by Mets' Manager Davey Johnson as "a 'gamer.'...He was caught breaking the law, he has paid his debt to society and now he is trying to prove he can still play baseball."...

BOXING—Middleweight champion Marvin Hagler was honored as boxer of the year by the WBC. Also receiving awards from Jose Sulaiman, president of the WBC, were Hector "Macho" Camacho, Michael Spinks, Milton McCrory and Colin Jones. Camacho, the WBC super featherweight champ, was cited as honorable mention boxer of the year. Spinks, who successfully defended his light heavyweight title against Eddie Davis Saturday, was named champion of the year. McCrory and Jones were honored for the fight of the year, in which McCrory captured the welterweight championship...

'Parade' on CBS tonight

NEW YORK (AP) — In "The Parade," tonight's CBS movie, the producers and writers found four hearty characters, put them in the hands of four fine actors and then had them relate believably to each other.

Trouble is, they forgot the plot. Barbara Walters' interviews may thrive on the substance of one-on-one conversations, but that's not enough for drama.

This pat story is about a convict whose return to his family after seven years in prison complicates their lives and serves as a reminder of past failures and an omen of future realities. The small-town Kansas ambience is well captured by location shooting in Halstead, Hutchinson and Sterling, Kan.

Frederic Forrest ("The Rose") is the ex-con, Matt, whose crime is never comprehensibly explained, but it is clear that he didn't pull any triggers and has been protecting someone else. While Matt professes to want to prove he's a changed man, his past and his pride keep him unemployed. Everybody seems to be judging him on seven years ago — including him.

Michael Learned ("The Waltons" and "Nurse") is his wife, Rachel. She's been loyal to him throughout, rejecting the advances of a farm owner, who's played exasperatingly benignly by James Olson. At one point, he even tells Matt he's in love with Rachel. The sweetness must be contagious — Matt just smiles.

Rosanna Arquette ("The Executioner's Song") plays Rachel's and Matt's daughter, Tilda, who desperately wants to leave her hometown. "I like it," she says. "It's just that I know everything about it."

Tilda's mother and her tart-tongued, pragmatic grandmother, Sarah (Geraldine Page), oppose the relationship. A girl they knew — Rachel — once ran away for love and ended up with a convict.

"The Body Human: The Journey Within," also on CBS tonight, makes viewers wish for more — not because it's so good, but because it raises more questions than it answers.

There is some remarkable footage of our beginnings and insides, most notably a 40-day-old embryo and the swelling lungs of 20-year-old boxer Bobby Czyz, although this shot should have been slowed down so we could better see how the oxygen-intake process accelerates under stress.

The most fascinating segment is on Czyz, a former pre-med student who has radically changed fields. He says hearing an opponent's jaw break energizes him: "My gas tank jumped up to full."

DENNIS THE MENACE

"UNCLE CHARLIE ALWAYS SAYS HE WATERED THE HORSE. WELL, I JUST MILKED THE CAT!"

FAMILY CIRCUS

"I can't reach the brakes!"

HEATHCLIFF

"HE'S NEVER HIT THE PORCH YET!"

Here's a hand from the defensive play section of our home computer program, "Charles Goren: Learning Bridge Made Easy." It is now available for IBM, Apple II and Commodore 64 computers. See how you would fare against the computer.

The auction is straightforward. With eight playing tricks in his own hand, West tries his best to make life difficult for his opponents by jumping to four hearts at his second turn. However, North is too strong to be shut out of the auction, and his bid of four spades buys the hand.

West leads the king of hearts, and when dummy comes down he can see almost every high card in the pack. Obviously, he cannot expect a high-card trick from his partner. When East echoes in hearts by following first with the ten, West can count on two heart tricks and the ace of trumps. The most likely place for a setting trick is in trumps, and this can be accomplished if, among his collection of useless tickets, East has the jack of spades.

West continues with the queen of hearts and, despite all that he has been told about the evils of giving declarer a ruff-and-sluff, he plays a third round of the suit. Declarer must ruff high in dummy. His best plan is to come to hand with the queen of clubs to lead the ten of trumps toward the table.

Now West must continue with his excellent defense by rising with the ace of spades and leading a fourth heart, which gives declarer a second ruff-and-sluff. This one, however, declarer will not enjoy.

Declarer cannot afford to ruff high, for that concedes the setting trick to the jack of trumps. His only chance is to discard and hope that West holds the jack of trumps. Unfortunately, East has that card, and he ruffs with it to inflict a one-trick defeat.

Islanders add pair, so what?

An AP Sports Analysis
By BRUCE LOWITT

What could be better than to be a highly acclaimed Olympian joining a championship team?

In the case of Pat LaFontaine and Pat Flatley, the two newest of New York Islanders, it could be a lot better.

LaFontaine could be the next Bryan Trottier. Flatley could be the next Clark Gillies. The only problem is, the Islanders already have a Bryan Trottier and a Clark Gillies. In fact, they have the originals.

They also have a couple of dozen other players who make up the roster of the team which, in each of the past four seasons, has won the Stanley Cup, emblematic of the National Hockey League championship.

IN ONE RESPECT, LaFontaine and Flatley are the Ken Morrows of 1984 — but only obliquely.

Like Morrow, they are coming to the Isles fresh from a stint in the Winter Olympic Games.

That's where the similarity ends.

Morrow was a mini-hero (not quite on the same level as, say, Jim Craig or Mike Eruzione) on the 1980 United States Olympic team which won the gold medal at Lake Placid, N.Y.

LaFontaine and Flatley were considered premier players on Team USA and Team Canada, respectively. Neither team, however, managed a medal at Sarajevo, Yugoslavia.

Morrow was joining an Islanders' roster deemed by many to be the NHL's most talented — but which had thus far failed to win the Stanley Cup. The players were receptive to his arrival.

And Morrow was a defenseman — a defensive defenseman at that — rather than a flashy forward. He was a mature 23 years old, too, an All-American at Bowling Green who already had finished college. He had a quiet personality, willing to accept any role he might be given.

HE EXPECTED to head almost directly to the minor leagues. But General Manager Bill Torrey and Coach Al Arbour kept him around and he fit in so well that within a couple of weeks the suddenly expendable Dave Lewis was traded to the Los Angeles Kings for Butch Goring, whose arrival sparked the Islanders to their first title.

Now consider the just-turned-19 LaFontaine, a high-scoring center, and Flatley, a 20-year-old hard-working right wing. They are two ballyhooed players joining — so it might seem — the team that has everything except Montreal's record of five successive Stanley Cups.

There is, some observers say, a coolness toward them among the Islanders' players that is almost palpable. After all, something's got to give. If they're going to play tonight in Winnipeg, and Arbour says they will, then somebody's got to be scratched from the lineups.

"The Olympics was the greatest preparation there is, certainly better than junior, college or minor-league hockey," Arbour said, giving his two newcomers a boost. "LaFontaine is an electrifying player and Flatley is a hard worker, exceptional along the boards and around the net.

"The pressure for ice time could be a blessing for our club at this time."

Macho is Camacho

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

He is a neon sign coming down the street, flashing on and off, blinking its message loud and clear.

Hector "Macho" Camacho.

World Champion.

"It is my time," says Camacho. "It is macho time."

Just in case you don't recognize the World Boxing Council's super featherweight champion right away, he's the one with the gold chain around his neck and the word "Macho" spelled out in gold letters six inches big.

The one in the black leather pants and matching jacket, collar turned up.

The one with rings on his fingers and gold on his wrists.

The world champion.

"I've got all it takes to be great. I'm strong. I've got good moves. Good defense," he said.

Then he winked.

"And I'm good looking, too."

A philosopher once suggested that if you've got it, flaunt it. Hector Camacho is taking the advice. He lights up a room when he walks into it. The Macho Man is not shy. He is a pint-sized Muhammad Ali.

The World Boxing Council gathered some of its champions at Madison Square Garden Tuesday, honoring middleweight champion Marvelous Marvin Hagler as its fighter of the year and light heavyweight king Michael Spinks as champion of the year. The man who stole the show was Camacho.

"I am too quick, too smart for them," he said. "The kid is fresh. Now is macho time. This is happening. I love it. I'm for real. I'm the best fighter in the world right now."

Just then, Jose Sulaiman, president of the WBC, handed the fighter of the year award to Hagler. In the back of the room, Camacho never broke stride.

"I am the fighter of the year," he said. "I am cocky enough to say that. What time is it? It's macho time."

From the podium, Sulaiman continued with the introductions.

AP Laserphoto

"... And now, a young man with charisma, style and class ..."

Camacho grinned at the description. "They're talking about me," he said.

The Macho Man won his crown Aug. 7, 1983 when he stopped Bazooka Limon in five rounds. He defended it November 18, knocking out Rafael Solis. The title has not changed his life, he says.

Not much.

So he drives around in a Corvette with his name on the door. Doesn't everybody?

"Being champion is everything to me," he said. "I always dreamed of that. When you come down the street, everybody is looking at you. It's showtime. I love the image.

"This is my school. I'm just beginning. I'm not flying yet. But I will be. There are a lot of things I want to be. An actor. A dancer. I can be in commercials. I want to be comfortable. Happy. I will get it all."

Sampson claims team worn out

From Wire Reports

HOUSTON — The Houston Rockets have won only three of their last 11 games and rookie center Ralph Sampson thinks he knows why — he and his teammates are fatigued from marathon practice sessions under Coach Bill Fitch.

The Rockets defeated the Seattle Supersonics, 111-105, Tuesday night.

"We just aren't jumping and showing the quickness that was there a month ago," Sampson said. "I know that and you know that. The last two weeks, everybody has been going through the fatigue aspect.

"I know I have and I know Rodney (McCray) has. We've been talking about it. Hopefully, we can get back to where we were during that winning streak."

Fitch said the losses of Robert Reid and Phil Ford to injuries had more to do with Houston's current skid than long practice sessions.

"RALPH SAMPSON doesn't really have much to compare our workouts to since he is a rookie," Fitch said.

Fitch said he keeps accurate records of workouts for all of his teams and noted that his 1981 world champion Boston Celtics had longer workouts than this year's Rockets team. "That club hardly needed the practice time compared to this team," Fitch said in an interview with KODA radio.

Sampson said the Rockets' workouts have gotten longer with each loss.

"When we went on that five-game winning streak just before the All-Star break, it was great," Sampson said. "Our practices were short but served the purpose. We were having fun with shooting games and even Coach Fitch was kidding around at practice. That made things a lot better in the locker room.

"We were loose. We were feeling strong."

The Rockets were big losers to Golden State last Saturday, a team they defeated badly earlier in the season.

"I would have preferred a couple of days away from it when we were down and low, and I think the rest of the team would have too," Sampson said. "We could have had a team function or something for a mental break and them come back and said 'OK, this is what we need to do to make the playoffs.'"

Suns 113, Jazz 100

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Larry Nance poured in 26 points, James Edwards 25 and both triggered a third-period scoring flurry as the Phoenix Suns beat the Utah Jazz 113-100.

Phoenix, now 27-32 overall and 20-8 at home after winning for the 12th time in the past 14 games here, coasted through the fourth quarter — leading by as many as 26.

NBA

Mavs 116, Spurs 104

SAN ANTONIO — Mark Aguirre scored 33 points and Rolando Blackman added 30 to lead the Dallas Mavericks to a 116-104 win over the San Antonio Spurs.

The loss was the seventh straight at home for the Spurs, who were again without injured center Artis Gilmore.

Pistons 101, Hawks 96

ATLANTA — Bill Laimbeer hit six free throws in the final 38 seconds to complete a 27-point night and preserve the Detroit Pistons' 101-96 victory over the Atlanta Hawks.

The loss broke Atlanta's 11-game home winning streak. The Hawks, 31-29 overall, have the best home record in the NBA at 26-5.

Wilkins finished with 31 points. Davis had 26. Long scored 20 points for Detroit. Isiah Thomas added 15.

Bullets 100, Pacers 92

INDIANAPOLIS — Greg Ballard scored 23 points and Ricky Sobers had 22 to lead the Washington Bullets to a 100-92 victory over the Indiana Pacers.

After Jerry Sichting of the Pacers hit two straight jumpers to put Indiana ahead 90-89, Sobers made his second three-point shot of the game to give the Bullets the lead for good at 92-90 with 2:38 remaining.

Jeff Malone came off the bench to score 14 points for the Bullets.

Blazers 117, Clippers 99

Kings 142, Cavs 137

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Larry Drew scored eight points in the second overtime, and Eddie Johnson had 28 points as the Kansas City Kings posted a 142-137 win over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Blazers triumph

PORTLAND, Ore. — Jim Paxson scored 26 points and Kenny Carr added 22 as the Portland Trail Blazers defeated San Diego, 117-99.

Paxson scored 11 of his points in the first quarter as the Blaz-ers blew open a 34-24 lead. Portland extended the margin to 26 points in the second half before holding off a late San Diego rally.

Carr had 12 rebounds and provided effective defense against San Diego's Bill Walton. Walton, four inches taller than Carr, was held to seven points and forced into several turnovers by the quicker Blazer forward.

Basketball Report

Chris Mullin carries St. John's on his back

By DICK JOYCE
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Chris Mullin doesn't need to wear a T-shirt for fans tell him apart from the other St. John's University basketball players.

He's the guy pouring the ball through the hoop, almost single-handedly carrying the Redmen on his shoulders.

The 6-foot-6 junior is the Big East Conference's leading scorer with 24.7 and is among the nation's top point-producers with an overall 22.7 average.

"He's a sweetheart," is Coach Lou Carnesecca's way of describing the Brooklynite. "We may never get another one like him. Just watch him and enjoy him."

Mullin has been a starter since his freshman year, first as a guard and at forward since early this season. He was Big East Player of the Year last season.

His deadly touch has accounted for 1,648 points, fifth highest in St. John's history and only 80 points short of fourth. Barring injury he's certain to become No. 1, surpassing Bob Zawoluk who piled up 1,826 points in 1949-52 before freshmen were eligible for the varsity.

With St. John's hit hard by graduation after a 28-5 record last season, Mullin has carried the load despite being a marked man on an inexperienced team. The Redmen are 17-9 overall and 8-7 in the conference.

He piled up a career high of 33 points in an upset win over Georgetown last week and then had 35 in an 82-81 overtime loss to No.16 Syracuse Monday night.

"Mullin has to be the best offensive player in America considering all he does for himself and his teammates," said Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim. "He's just a great, great player."

Midland TradeShow opens today

TradeShow Midland 84, sponsored by the Small Business Council of the Midland Chamber of Commerce opended today at Midland Center.

About 45 Midland businesses have set up displays and demonstrations for the two-day business-to-business show which runs through Thursday. Midland Center will be opened from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. each day.

According to Jerry King, publicity chairman for the event, the purpose for the show is to better inform the community and area businesses of local products and services available and to encourage local businesses to "shop Midland first."

Among the participants in the show are wholesalers, service firms, equipment suppliers, professional agencies, financial institutions, and leasing agents.

"We want to help everybody who is a buyer in Midland and Odessa find out what is available in the local market," said Mark Kimball, TradeShow manager.

Kimball said the exposition is varied with everything from art for the office to the latest in computers to the "hot items" — telephone systems.

"This is a good time to see a product without having a lot of high pressured salespeople around — there is no selling allowed on the show floor. This is a teriffic opportunity to do some comparison shopping — what a person can expect to spend and what a person can expect to receive for his money," Kimball said.

The show is opened to the public and there is no admission charge.

Laura Manulik named Realtor of the Year

Laura Manulik, with Langston-Monarch Realtors, has been named Realtor of the Year, by the Midland Board of Realtors.

Mrs. Manulik was honored with the title at a recent awards banquet.

She assumed the position of president of the 400-plus member Midland Board of Realtors, following the unexpected death of then-president, Pat Knox in February 1983.

Mrs. Manulik was cited for her drive and problem-solving ability in receiving the award.

A veteran of 18 years in the real estate profession in Midland, Mrs.Manulik and her husband A.J., an independent geologist, have four grown children.

She says her real estate career and family have actually complimented each other, because having a family of young home buyers has helped her understand the fears and reservations of other young home buyers.

Mrs. Manulik is credited with guiding the Midland Board of Realtors though some of its toughest years when the market was declining, multiple listing costs were rising dramatically and computer technology was impacting real estate offices nationwide.

Manulik

She says 1984 will be a tough year for real estate, but she expects to see some improvement by the fourth quarter.

In making her acceptance speech, she praised the board of realtors for their action.

Leaded gas may be banned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is considering a ban on leaded gasoline, an EPA official said Tuesday night.

Joseph A. Cannon, head of the agency's air division, said the EPA is considering a ban because of mounting evidence of the danger of lead and recent surveys showing that nearly one-fifth of U.S. motorists improperly fuel their cars with leaded gas.

Studies justifying the proposal are under review in the EPA's policy office, but the formal proposal "might be some weeks away," said Cannon.

Current rules limit the amount of lead in gasoline to 1.1 grams per gallon.

The EPA official said that the use of lead in gasoline currently is being phased down, with increasing numbers of new vehicles taking unleaded gasoline only. He said that as a result, lead will effectively be phased out by the early 1990s and that one of the few remaining uses for leaded gasoline would be for motorists who improperly want to use the fuel, which is less expensive than unleaded gasoline.

In an interview in Wednesday editions of The Washington Post, EPA Administrator William D. Ruckelshaus said that the agency had built "a very strong case" that the benefits of banning lead would outweigh the economic effects of such a rule.

"We always knew it (lead) was bad at high levels," Ruckelshaus said. "We now know it builds up in children, primarily inner-city children" living where heavy traffic contributes to lead in the air.

"What it does is affect the IQ. It really lowers IQ," the Post quoted Ruckelshaus as saying.

ARCO prepares to bid on embattled Gulf

By The Los Angeles Times—Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Los Angeles-based Atlantic Richfield Co. is preparing to bid up to $12 billion for embattled Gulf Oil Corp., a move that could lead to the largest corporate takeover in U.S. history and reinforce a trend toward mammoth mergers in the oil industry, reliable sources said Tuesday.

Arco's move may touch off a spirited bidding battle for Gulf, which last week essentially posted a "for sale" sign. Wall Street sources said Tuesday that San Francisco-based Standard Oil Co. of California, California's largest oil company, is also considering an offer for Gulf.

Spokesmen for Gulf, Arco and Standard Oil of California declined comment.

A variety of knowledgeable sources, however, said Chase Manhattan Bank on Monday sent telex messages to about 75 major U.S. and foreign banks in an effort to assemble a loan of between $10 billion and $12 billion for Arco. That would allow Arco to bid about $72 a share for Gulf. Some Wall Street sources said that Gulf, the nation's fifth-largest oil company, may be sold for as much as $13 billion, or nearly $79 a share.

Chase Manhattan had no comment on the reports, but sources said the reaction contained in telex responses arriving Tuesday at the New York bank were favorable.

"I don't think Chase will have any problem lining it up, not for a company like Arco," a senior executive at one major bank contacted by Chase said.

Sources said that Standard Oil of California has hired Morgan Stanley & Co., the New York investment banking firm, to explore the merits of a Cal Standard bid for Gulf.

Dr Pepper stockholders agree to approve merger

DALLAS (AP) — Dr Pepper shareholders have agreed overwhelmingly with the soft drink company's assessment that a $647.8 million merger with Forstmann Little & Co. is in their best interests.

More than 71 percent of the company's shareholders approved the $22-a-share merger with the New York investment company at a Tuesday morning meeting.

W.W. Clements, chairman and chief executive officer of Dr Pepper, urged shareholders to approve the merger.

"The board of directors recommends that shareholders approve this merger," he told a crowd of about 500. "The board believes this is in the best interest of all shareholders."

The shareholders agreed, approving the measure 16,713,121 shares for and 652,596 against. Abstaining were 162,888 shares. The total number of shares eligible to vote was 23,296,217. The remaining shares did not participate.

"Instead of having 3,000 to 4,000 public shareholders, there are now 35 to 40 private shareholders," Ted Forstmann, a partner in the firm, said in explaining the new corporate structure.

The Dr Pepper purchase is five times bigger than any of Forstmann Little's previous purchases, which have included a pair of soda-bottling firms.

Forstmann Little & Co. was created in 1978 by Ted Forstmann, Nicholas Forstmann and Willian Brian Little, all of New York.

Forstmann said official transfer of the corporation would be completed late Tuesday and Dr Pepper shareholders would begin receiving checks within the next two weeks.

Clements said an organizational structure will be announced next Tuesday. Dick Armstrong, current president of Dr Pepper, is expected to leave the company, he said.

Clements and Forstmann agreed that the new company will not try new marketing or advertising gimmicks, instead concentrating on producing a good product to reap record profits.

"This means we are going to concentrate on the development of our domestic business," Clements said at a news conference. "All resources will be devoted to Dr Pepper.

"Nothing's different," Clements said. "What we're going to do is do what we know how to do best. We're going to make our advertising as effective and get the most mileage out of our money."

Forstmann Little has indicated it plans to sell Dr Pepper's Canada Dry unit, most recently valued at $160 million, and some bottling plants.

Last year, Dr Pepper's net sales were $21,590,000, compared with $12,474,000 in 1982.

Felipe M. Morales with American Securiy Life Insurance Co. has qualified for the million dollar round table awards(MDRT). In order to qualify for this award, a producer has to produce more than $2,310.00 of life insurance production. Felipe M. Morales is an independent agent who also represents several other insurance companies. He has been an insurance producer in Midland for the last 18 years.

Mark H. Fowler has joined the professional staff of Pate & Associates Architects-Planners.

A native of Midland, Fowler is a graduate of Robert E. Lee High School and a recent graduate of the University of Texas at Austin with a Bachelor of Architecture degree.

M.L. and Jackie Alexander, owners o Service Master Professional Building Maintenance by Alexander, 5601 Lamont Avenue, Odessa, have recently completed an extensive training course in "Professional Building Maintenance" at the fism home office in Downers Grove, Illinois. There were thirty-one trainees from fifteen states and England in attendance.

Eric Downward, a 22-year veteran with American Airlines, has been named American's general manager for Midland-Odessa, it was announced by Robert H. Phillips, the airline's southern division vice president.

Downward will be responsible for all of American's passenger and air freight services activities at Regional Airport, which serves the Midland-Odessa communities. He succeeds Jack McAdams, who has been appointed American's general manager at Denver.

Downward joined the airline in 1962 as a fleet service person at New York's Kennedy Airport. After holding a variety of positions there and at New York's LaGuardia Airport, he moved to the Dallas-Fort Worth area in 1973 with responsibilities involving budgets and costs.

Dollar mixed against key currencies in trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mixed against key currencies in early trading today after recovering from a downturn Tuesday. Gold prices eased.

Dealers reported European markets lacked any clear trend and apparently are waiting for direction from upcoming announcements of U.S. economic indicators.

The dollar fell Tuesday after Federal Reserve Board chairman Paul Volcker said the United States now increasingly relies on foreign funds to meet domestic needs, including the financing of big deficits.

The U.S. currency picked up after day-long reverses Tuesday amid expectations that interest rates will edge up. But European dealers reported lingering doubts about the U.S. economic recovery.

The British pound, boosted in recent days by fears Gulf oil supplies could be cut by the Iran-Iraq war, fell off today as the dollar rallied.

Sterling opened at $1.4914 but soon slipped to $1.4890, virtually unchanged from Tuesday's late rate.

In Tokyo earlier, the dollar closed at 233.28 yen, slightly up from Tuesday's late rate of 233.17 yen.

Other morning rates compared to Tuesday's late levels:

—8.0260 French francs, slightly down from 8.0275.

—2.6075 German marks, slightly up from 2.6035.

—2.1659 Swiss francs, slightly up from 2.1635.

—1,621.00 Italian lire, slightly up from 1,619.50.

—2.9435 Dutch guilders, slightly up from 2.9425.

—1.25215 Canadian dollars, slightly down from 1.25315.

The price of gold opened in quiet London trading at a bid price of $396.80 an ounce, 70 cents down on Tuesday's close.

The slippage continued as the center's five major bullion houses "fixed" the recommended morning trading price at $396.60.

Brokers said the downturn stemmed from profit-taking in New York late Tuesday amid expectations that higher U.S. interest rates will make the dollar more attractive.

In Zurich, the precious metal opened at a bid price of $396.40, down $3.35 from Tuesday's close.

Gold closed earlier in Hong Kong at a bid price $397.34, down $2.10 from Tuesday's close.

Silver shed 10 cents in London, opening at a bid price of $9.66 an ounce.

Drilling permits up slightly

DENVER——A total of 2,080 permits to drill wells for oil and gas were issued in the US during the week beginning February 13, according to Petroleum Information.

The number is up slightly from the previous week, when 1,994 permits were issued. The weekly total has climbed steadily for the past four weeks.

Book chronicles oil magnate

HOUSTON—The newly published book, Mr. Jim: The Biography of James Smither Abercrombie chronicles the exciting life of a dominant figure in the petroleum industry. The book describes the achievements and civic contributions of an extraordinary oilman.

Gas, coal mixture cleans air

WASHINGTON, DC—The American Gas Association has said that combusting a mixture of natural gas and coal is one of the least expensive and most efficient ways of reducing sulfur oxide emissions.

AGA President, George H. Lawrence told the Senate Environment and Public Works committee that the use of natural gas to reduce sulfur oxide emissions is a strategy now available at relatively low cost.

Texas gas production down

AUSTIN—Railroad Commission Chairman, Mack Wallace has announced that Texas oil and gas wells produced 462,474,761 Mcf of gas in November 1983, down 3.93 percent from field runs a year earlier.

That brings total production for the year through November to 5,091,765,615 Mcf of gas. Through November 1982, Texas had produced 5,639,221,018 Mcf of gas.

Texas gas production in November came from 237,281 oil and gas wells.

Congress urged to up gas fund

WASHINGTON—The American Gas Association has urged Congress to increase substantially the funding proposed by the Reagan Administration for natural gas research and development in the fiscal year 1985 budget.

In a statement before the House Interior and Related Agencies subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee, George H. Lawrence, president AGA, emphasized that increased federal esearch and development can add to the nation's natural gas reserves, increase the country's reliance on domestic energy sources, and improve the environment through greater utilization of cleaning burning natural gas.

Oil, gas tax burden higher

WASHINGTON—The 1980-82 federal tax burden of petroleum companies was higher than that of US corporations as a whole a new analysis of a congressional study reveals.

Moreover, the gap would be even greater if the crude oil windfall profit tax were factored in, according to the analysis by the American Petroleum Institute.

The analysis is of a study by the staff of Congress' Joint Committee on Taxation released November 14,1983. The committee staff study revealed that petroleum corporations paid 18.2 percent of their pre-tax income in federal income tax for 1982. The average for all corporations for the year was 16.1 percent.

The committee staff study compiled the effective income tax rates in 1982 for 213 US corporations drawn from 30 industries. Twenty-four petroleum firms were among those examined.

Britain stripped of status

HOUSTON—Major oil companies operating in the United Kingdom sector of the North Sea have lost their battle to have British National Oil Corp., Britain's state-run oil company, stripped of its status as the price-setter for the oil produced in the region, according to Petroleum Information.

Physicians may be barred from participating in prison executions

Houston Wade

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Medical Association is considering a law change that would bar Texas Department of Corrections officials from forcing prison doctors to participate in executions by lethal injection.

The change, if approved at the TMA's May convention and by legislators, would put into law the policy now used by Texas Department of Corrections Medical Director Armond Start, TMA lawyer Michael Young said Tuesday.

The proposal, approved by the TMA Board of Councilors this month, says no prison physician "shall be required as a condition of that employment...to be in attendance at or participate in executions." Prison doctors also would not be required, as part of their job, to participate in the "personal preparation of convicts and mechanisms for their execution" and also would be cleared of supervising non-physician staff members.

Texas has had the nation's only execution by lethal injection. Charles Brooks of Fort Worth was executed in Huntsville on Dec. 7, 1982. That execution sparked a complaint about a prison doctor's participation.

However, the Walker-Madison-Trinity County Medical Society said last week it found nothing wrong with then-TDC Medical Director Ralph Gray's efforts in the Brooks death. Gray said he checked Brooks' veins before the execution to satisfy "my own curiousity as a doctor" and to determine if whoever inserted the catheter might have difficulty.

Charles Sullivan, director of Citizens United for Rehabilitation of Errants, filed the complaint against Gray. Sullivan compared Gray's efforts to "fiddling" with an electric chair's wires.

Houston Wade, a San Antonio physician, who was with Sullivan at a Capitol news conference, said, "The integrity of our professions is not enhanced by their members being co-opted into participation in those murders."

"It is my own opinion that the resumption of executions feeds the collective lust for blood and diminishes the whole human race," Wade said.

CURE lawyer Barry Odell of Austin also complained about physicians' participation in lethal injection executions.

"I would want my executioner to be wearing leather wrist bands, have large hairy forearms and be wearing a mask," Odell said, adding that lethal injections have "made execution into such a clean, civilized sort of thing."

"I want the executioner to get a flavor of what the executioner is doing to me, none of this hiding behind drapes," he said.

'Candy Man' to get new execution date

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston judge is to set a new execution date today for Ronald Clark O'Bryan, a Deer Park, Texas, man convicted of killing his son in 1975 with poisoned Halloween trick-or-treat candy.

State District Judge Michael T. McSpadden said last week that he would set an execution date for O'Bryan of March 31 because that "is the earliest I can get it."

O'Bryan, nicknamed "the Candy Man" by other death row inmates, has received three earlier execution dates, but each one was stayed by appeals courts. In January, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear another appeal of the case. This vacated an earlier stay and made it possible to set a new date.

McSpadden said he thought O'Bryan had exhausted all appeals and that he thought the earlier appeals had been "an abuse" of the justice system.

In 1982, McSpadden set a Halloween execution date for O'Bryan and told the convicted man that "I picked this date especially for you."

O'Bryan received a stay, however, just four days before Halloween.

"I thought then that it (Halloween) would be appropriate," McSpadden said last week, "but March 31 will be just as appropriate if the sentence is carried out."

O'Bryan was convicted of giving his 8-year-old son, Timothy, Halloween candy that had been laced with cyanide. The boy died within a short time.

At O'Bryan's month-long trial in 1975, prosecutors claimed he killed his son in order to collect on $30,000 in insurance because he was then deeply in debt and was earning only $150 a week as an optician.

However, O'Bryan claims the poisoned candy was given him during a trick-or- treat outing with his children and those of a friend. He said the candy, a confection packaged in plastic staws, was handed to him by a shawdowy figure at a house in Pasadena. O'Bryan then distributed the candy to his son and daughter, Elizabeth, 6, and to three other children. Only Timothy ate the candy. The boy immediately went into convulsions and was pronounced dead at a nearby hospital.

Police, responding to a public outcery, conducted a quick and far-ranging investigation and finally charged O'Bryan.

O'Bryan has claimed that he was charged because the police were under pressure to solve the case. He emphatically denies that he poisoned the candy or that he killed his son to collect on the insurance.

Commission upholds firings of two policemen

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Civil Service Commission has upheld the firings of two policemen after hearing testimony from eight civilian witnesses who said the officers lied about the circumstances under which one shot a driver.

The decision against officers K.R. Patterson and Sgt. W.L. Brasher was announced Tuesday. The two were fired over the Oct. 14 shooting of Henry Pressey, 32.

The officers told investigators Patterson shot Pressey near an accident scene west of downtown Houston because he tried to run over Brasher.

But the civil service commission held with eight civilian witnesses who said Brasher was not in the path of the truck and was in no danger of being run down.

Patterson has been indicted on a charge of attempted murder. Brasher has been indicted on charges of lying to a grand jury investigating the shooting.

Pressey suffered permanent brain damage as a result of the shooting, attorney Robert Wallis said.

Capitol fire hero dies in accident

AUSTIN (AP) — Joel Vargas Quintanilla, one of four Capitol security guards praised as heroes after the 1983 fire in the Lt. Governor's apartment, died Tuesday morning in Mexico after being seriously injured in a traffic accident Monday afternoon near Mexico City.

Quintanilla, 57, who was injured trying to rescue Paul Hansen, a guest staying in Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's apartment, had been unable to work since the fire because his lungs were damaged by chemicals in the smoke from the fire, according to his sister, Sara Reyes.

City, counties to receive grants

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White's office announced Tuesday that a total of $500,000 in grants would go to the city of Lytle and Foard and Jim Wells counties.

Lytle will receive $100,000 to help the city redevelop a backup water well. The well has been out of service since crude oil began leaking into the water supply.

Foard County will receive $250,000 to repair and replace roads and bridges damaged by recent flooding; Jim Wells County will receive $150,000 to assist approximately 100 homeowners repair damage caused by a hailstorm in June 1983.

Report shows unusual number of traffic accidents

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

When the Midland City Council opted for one-way streets two years ago one of the reasons was a recommendation by a traffic consultant that there are fewer "contact points" at intersections involving one-way traffic flow.

Midland drivers last year apparently found all those contact points. The city traffic engineering department will be studying what caused an unusual number of accidents at four intersections — three of them involving one-way streets.

Fred Baker, director of public works, presented the 1983 Traffic Accident Report to the council during its Tuesday meeting.

The four intersections that will be eyed are Michigan and Mogford; Illinois and Marienfeld; Colorado and Michigan; and Loraine and Michigan. The last two involve only one-way streets. Illinois also is one-way while Marienfeld is two-way.

"A detailed study will be made to see if there's a common apparent cause," said Baker. He believes construction of a high-rise office building at Marienfeld and Illinois contributed to the high number of accidents at that location.

The report shows a slight increase in the total number of accidents, both injury and non-injury, in 1983. The number rose to 3,922 from 3,904 in 1982. There were fewer fatal accidents — nine instead of the previous 11.

But, Baker said, "We have more intersections and more miles of streets than we did last year."

While there were more non-injury accidents — 3,253 compared to 3,189 — there were fewer accidents involving injuries, 660 compared to 704.

The most common spot for accidents in 1983 was the intersection of Midkiff and Wall Street, with 18. In 1982, there were 23.

Baker blamed part of the problem on the paving and alignment of left turn lanes with Highway 80.

The previous year first place for accidents was held by Rankin Highway and Interstate 20 — 33. Last year the number had dropped to 15. Front and Terrell also saw a drop last year going from a high of 22 accidents in 1982 to 11.

The largest increase in accidents was seen at Loop 250 and Wadley Avenue with 17 last year compared to three in 1982. Midland Drive and Wadley ranked second with 17 accidents in relation to seven the previous year.

The council also approved using a cement stabilization subgrade on a portion of A Street that is being rebuilt. The clay and silt next to Wadley-Barron Park was unstable material for the street. "We rip up the unstable material, mix it with cement, put it down and allow it to harden," he said.

The city will be changing its policy toward rental car agencies at Midland Regional Airport by advertising the space for lease. Aviation Director Vic White proposed the change and said the idea had been approved by the Aiport Board.

Instead of renegotiating with the companies already in the Terminal Building, the city will advertise the spaces for bids and ask for a minimum of $3,500 per month income. White said of the five companies, four already surpass that amount, and he has had requests from other agencies to locate in the building.

A sixth space is being rented by Don Harvey Realtors, and the council suggested that company be moved and a sixth rental car agency be placed there.

In other action, the council approved putting in stop signs on Big Spring Street, allowed a new scoreboard to be placed in Cubs Stadium at no cost to the city and agreed to requests from Bennigan's restaurant for its St. Patrick's Day celebration.

Local LDS members ready for emergencies

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

Spurred by a Biblical admonition to be prepared, many local members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints have joined other LDS members in keeping emergency supply caches in homes and autos.

However, the LDS "preparedness" program goes beyond merely having the physical necessities with which to overcome adversity; it extends into preparedness in the economic, educational, emotional and spiritual realms.

"We just feel," said Newell Rigtrup, chairman of the local congregation's emergency preparedness committee, "that if we prepare and do all that we can do, then in the case of emergency those things that are out of our hands, that we have no control over, will be taken care of for us — not only in emergencies, but in any areas of our lives."

The local LDS Church has approximately 1,000 members, with perhaps 50 percent of the families adhering to the preparedness program, said Rigtrup.

The preparedness committee, he noted, researched LDS-promoted methods of preparedness and then adapted them "to our particular locality to fit our particular needs."

Rigtrup said his committee has indentified the most likely disasters to befall Midland:

— Tornadoes;
— Chemical spills which might force the evacuation of homes;
— Flooding.

"We've tried to anticipate the needs of our people and try to set up resouces to help them," he explained. "One is in the area of medical care. We have identified specialists in the areas of medicine, transportation, mass feeding and communications, and we have made plans to free those people from the family responsibilities so they can be freed up to render aid in those particular areas."

The committee also has made preparation to turn the local LDS facility into an emergency medical facility which would include an infirmary, first-aid station, isolation area, homeless division and temporary morgue.

The local LDS church, noted Rigtrup, also has established a system whereby all members can be accounted for.

"We have people that have been designated so that they are responsible for a certain amount of people, finding out in the case of an emergency first of all their location, then finding out what their needs are, and if they have no needs, what help they can render themselves."

"We just feel that if we prepare and do all that we can do, then in the case of emergency those things that are out of our hands, that we have no control over, will be taken care of for us — not only in emergencies, but in any areas of our lives."

—Newell Rigtrup
chairman of local preparedness committee

On the family level, the LDS church urges the acquisition of both a 72-hour and one-year emergency supply of food, clothing, water and sanitation products. Such a supply might be contained in a plastic can or a backpack.

The 72-hour kit, explained Rigtrup, is kept within the home or auto or close enough to be grabbed in case of a sudden emergency such as tornado or flood.

The year's supply, meanwhile, is intended to support a family during a long-term crisis such as a famine or a commerce strike.

"Part of the committee's responsibility is to find avenues and resources where storable goods can be obtained," said Rigtrup. "We sponsor seminars and displays that will show people how to store food and clothing for an extended period of time, and some of the basics that need to be stored. When you're doing this type of thing, you don't set up a menu of filet mignot; it's just basic needs such as salt, wheat, powdered milk, honey and, of course, a water supply."

The family preparedness program of the LDS Church is in its fourth decade now, said the committee chairman, and helps members become aware of the need for preparation in all areas of their lives.

"A lot of your fears is because you failed to prepare," noted Rigtrup. "If a person's prepared, then he has no reason to fear."

Former oil company executive sentenced to prison

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton has sentenced a former oil company executive and a roughneck to prison on unrelated charges and accepted guilty pleas in three other cases.

Rodger Lynn Edge, 37, who until last year was a vice president for PED Oil Corp. in Midland, was sentenced to five years in federal prison and ordered to make $14,000 in restitution on a company pumping unit he sold in Michigan in June 1980 for $2,000.

He pleaded guilty to the offense — interstate transportation of stolen property — on Jan. 30 and could have been sentenced up to 10 years in prison and fined $10,000.

Edge, who appeared in court with his attorney, Roy Bell, did not argue for a reduced sentence but he did cite hospitable treatment accorded him by federal agents and officers, including the Federal Bureau of Investigation agents, the U.S. deputy marshal, magistrate and probation officers.

"I DON'T THINK I have ever been dealt with more fairly," he told Bunton.

"I'm sure they appreciate those compliments," Bunton said. "I know I do."

Edge said those agents and officers had "bent over backward to be fair with me — not to put a feather in their cap."

His attorney noted that Edge, who is married and has three children — one in college, one in high school and another in junior high — has been unable to find a job since August. Bell said he felt that Edge's former employer would be compensated by the bonding company. Bunton said it didn't matter what the bonding company paid; Edge still owed the money.

"I really don't understand, Mr. Edge, why you found yourself in this particular predicament," the judge told him. "You had everything going your way — trusted employee, making good money."

In addition to the federal charge, Edge is under state indictments for theft of property and theft of services.

The roughneck, Charles Ralph Cobb, 32, of Midland was sentenced twice by Bunton. He was meted a five-year prison term for failure to appear in court to answer a charge of possession of a pistol by a felon and was given a concurrent two-year sentence for possessing the firearm.

COBB, WHO had pleaded guilty to the offenses on Jan. 30, said, "I wasn't aware I was breaking the law" when he purchased the .22-caliber pistol from Jack's Pawn Shop in Odessa in March 1981. Before that sale, he had been convicted in state court for a crime.

"I know now it was wrong," said Cobb. "I'm sorry I done it."

Cobb told the judge he "ran off" and failed to appear in court, because serving time in prison again "is something I couldn't handle, so I just ran off."

Cobb said he had a "pretty bad experience" in jail in New Mexico.

Shortly after Cobb had purchased the pistol in Odessa, he and two other men were involved in a capital murder offense in New Mexico. A restaurant manager was fatally shot and his wife was wounded.

According to court records, Cobb was tried for capital murder but was found innocent. He later was tried for robbery but that case ended in a hung jury. Finally, he pleaded guilty to attempted robbery and was sentenced to prison.

After his release, the federal government indicted him for the firearm offense even though the pistol was not connected to the shooting incident.

Parks department documents show 'suspicious' expenditures

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Documents released last week by Ector County show former Parks and Recreation Director Roland Hancock approved more than $72,000 in business with the same Odessa construction company over a 17-month period.

"It looks highly suspicious," said County Judge Jan Fisher. State law requires all expenditures of $3,000 or more by county government be put up for public bids.

No individual expenditure paid to Charlie Holcomb Construction exceeded this limit. But adding together related checks and invoices paid out separately for single projects totals more than $3,000 in several instances.

"Whether criminal intent is involved is up to the district attorney," said Ms. Fisher, who has met with District Attorney Mike Holmes on the legality of the expenditures without submitting the jobs for bids. She said Holmes had not felt there was any evidence of criminal activity, but had never studied the checks and invoices involved. Holmes is out of town until Friday.

"None of the parties involved have admitted any wrongdoing," said Ms. Fisher. Because none of the individual expenditures is for more than $3,000, prosecutors would need to prove the intent to work around the state bidding laws.

Hancock has pointed out none of the checks or invoices was for more than $3,000 and defended his actions. He was not in his office Tuesday and could not be reached at home.

Park Board Chairman Kelly Godwin, who has announced his resignation effective Thursday, supported Hancock using the same company for park construction projects.

"The reason (Holcomb) was used was he did a good job at a fair price," he said, recalling that other contractors sometimes had to be called back several times to complete work.

Ms. Fisher responded, "I think that's wonderful if it's true, but it still doesn't undo the suspicious nature of the whole thing."

Godwin resigned Feb. 22 after Commissioners Court dropped Hancock and his position at a Feb. 13 meeting, the same meeting commissioners approved Godwin's reappointment. While Hancock recommended this move in a letter to the commissioners, the board opposed it.

"There is absolutely no substance to it," said Godwin about questions of bidding law violations.

Godwin said Hancock is no longer with the county because of "personal and political friction" with members of Commissioners Court, not because he mismanaged his department.

"There were no politics involved whatsoever in the final decisions made," said Ms. Fisher. But Commissioner David Childers said he and Hancock had some personality conflicts.

Childers said, "Roland was a good man, but he just didn't work out. All of the little things added up into one." He cited one instance where Hancock submitted bids for playground repairs including the lowest one approved by commissioners. The low bid had been submitted and the work was done by a parks employee without the commissioners ever being informed, said Childers.

Copies of checks, invoices and memos collected during an investigation of the department were released by the county after KTPX-TV filed a written request for release of the documents under the state Open Records Act.

In addition to the checks and invoices related to work done for the parks department by Holcomb Construction, the documents showed that Hancock's assistant had questioned his not submitting Holcomb's jobs for bids, but had been told "not to worry about it," by Hancock.

Project to allow UTPB professors to teach in Midland schools

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

A cooperative teacher education project between Midland Independent School District and The University of Texas of the Permian Basin benefits both educators and potential teachers, MISD trustees learned at Tuesday's board meeting.

Part of the project allows UTPB professors who feel they are out of touch with the pre-college world a chance to teach in the district. The State Board of Education is considering a measure which would require professors to return periodically to the classroom.

In addition, a program begun this year allows education majors to use the district as a lab. They observe classroom techniques and listen to teacher presentations before they begin student teaching. Several MISD educators have volunteered for the project.

Trustees voted to allow a pilot program in juvenile justice education to be tried at South and Washington elementaries. The program was initiated by Gov. Mark White and will be funded by the state. About 30 schools across Texas will pilot the program, which is a 3½-hour presentation on the legal system, juvenile law and crime prevention.

The board accepted a $5,000 donation from Elcor Corp. toward a matching grant which will fund the district's computer program. The plan introduces computers in the elementary grades and expands secondary programs. Since the fund-raising drive began in December, the district has reached more than half its $200,000 goal.

Also accepted was a gift of playground equipment and a sand pit worth $4,000 from the Travis Elementary Parent-Teacher Association.

The board also:

—Denied a grievance request filed by Dorothy Johnston, a teacher at DeZavala Elementary. She had requested reimbursement for $250 worth of supplies she purchased for her classroom without authorization.

—Recognized four Midland students who, along with 13,500 others nationwide, were National Merit Finalists. They are Deirdre Bell and Karen Eggleston from Midland High and Michael Cornelius and Sharon Specht from Lee High.

—Approved a Partners-In-Reading handbook for the 70 full-time and 35 part-time volunteers who work with students to improve reading skills.

—Accepted a $40,000 bid to replace the lighting at Midland Memorial Stadium.

Device gives paraplegic mobility

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Broad-shouldered Keven Saunders, with the muscled arms that come from weight-lifting, stands as he moves slowly but surely across his back yard.

It is difficult to realize that only the use of a new device, Moto-Stand, makes his movement possible.

Saunders is a paraplegic, a victim of an explosion at the Corpus Christi Public Elevator in 1981.

Strapped to the battery-operated Moto-Stand, he can move around the house, maneuver down ramps into his back yard and go shopping at the local mall.

"I always make sure my rugby friends go with me to the malls because people have never seen one of these before and they think it is some kind of stunt or something and get too close," he said.

Saunders is no stuntman but he is a kind of pioneer.

He was the first South Texas customer to buy a Moto-Stand, according to a representative for Marshall Elevator Service, which distributes the machine. Another Moto-Stand has since been sold in Houston.

The device was invented by Don Ausmus, a motorcycle and boat racer who was injured and lost the use of his legs. Seeing a dolly being used in unloading equipment gave him the idea.

The Moto-Stand has been on the market for four years and Saunders learned of it watching the television show, "That's Incredible."

In that show, a young doctor was shown using the machine to make his hospital rounds and examine patients.

The stand was adjusted to fit Saunders and the first time he used it was a dizzying moment.

"After sitting for so long, I got dizzy the first time I stood in it," he said.

Saunders uses the stand, which has rechargeable batteries, about four hours a day. Cost of the machine is between $3,500 and $4,000.

The machine not only allows paraplegics new mobility, but it also solves other problems such as bed sores and pulmonary embolisms.

For Saunders, the stand is just another step on the long road to recovery and to a lifestyle that ended with the elevator blast. He was then 26, a graduate of the University of Kansas with two years' experience as a grain inspector with the U.S. Department of Agriculture. With Luci, his bride of less than a year, he was enjoying life in Corpus Christi.

Saunders always has been athletic. He played rugby, varsity football, tennis and soccer in college. After coming to Texas, he joined a racquetball club, the Corpus Christi rugby team and worked out at a local health club.

The blast on an April afternoon ended all that for Saunders and left nine others dead and 29 injured.

He was rushed to the hospital suffering multiple fractures of his spine, ribs and arm and was in a coma for several weeks.

Saunders spent six months at the Texas Institute of Research and Rehabilitation where he worked on regaining the use of his upper body.

Exercise is still a daily way of life for Saunders. In his back yard is an enclosed swimming pool, a small gym, sauna and hot tub. He lifts weights daily.

The back yard is his pet project. He designed the ramps, deck, gym, bar and game room. He is replacing the grass so that he may use his new stand, which can be used only on smooth surfaces.

Saunders, who is the father of a 2-year-old son, is working on a master's degree in business and hasn't given up hope that some day he may stand and walk on his own.

Builta campaigning to register voters

From Staff Reports

Elections Administrator Janeice Builta is on the campaign to get more and more citizens registered to vote in the upcoming elections.

"I just want them to come in and register to vote and change their addresses (if needed)," Ms. Builta said.

Until she recently mailed out the new 1984-86 blue voter registration certificates, approximately 45,500 names of Midlanders were on the list of voters. But 7,000 or so of those certificates were returned by the U.S. Postal Service. They were returned, she said, because voters had left town, had moved within the county or otherwise had not changed their addresses and did not notify Ms. Builta or her deputies to change their addresses on the list of voters. By law, the certificates are not forwardable by the USPS.

Since the mailing of the certificates, which are valid for two years, and the purging of some names from the list of voters, the number of eligible voters has increased from approximately 38,000 to 40,000, Ms. Builta said.

"Everybody who was registered to vote prior to Dec. 31, 1983, should have recieved their blue card," Ms. Builta said. "If not, they better find out why."

Her office may be reached by telephone at 687-0231 or 687-0232.

Those who wish to vote in the April 7 city-schools-college-hospital elections and who are not registered to vote have until March 8 to register at the Elections Administrator's Office at 709 W. Washington Ave. One must register to vote at least 30 days prior to an election.

Absentee voting in those elections is slated for March 19 through April 3. Four voting machines will be available for absentee vote-casting from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

After those elections, Ms. Builta will be gearing up for the May 5 Democratic Party and Republican Party primary elections. The general election will be held Nov. 6.

"Vote as you please, but please vote," exhorted Ms. Builta, who cited this saying: "In loud political discussion, this truism I frequently note: 'The one who has the perfect answers has never registered to vote.'"

She noted that "a husband, wife, mother, father, son, daughter can register for one another."

Though a citizen has to be at least 18 years old to vote, one may registered to vote as early as 17 years and 10 months old.

Ms. Builta said that 107 volunteers have been deputized to register voters.

"They (voters) should be satisfied with those in office," she said. "If not, vote them out. They should vote in every election."

Grand jury indicts six people

From Staff Reports

The federal grand jury in Midland on Tuesday returned six indictments, including three sealed ones. Three persons were indicted for making a false payroll statement, converting a carbine into a machine gun and forging a government check.

The grand jurors indicted:

—Gwendolyn Jean Clark, 21, of Odessa, for making a false payroll memorandum and misapplying more than $100 in funds on July 28, 1983, when she was an employee of Home Savings Association in Odessa. If convicted, she could be imprisioned up to five years and fined $10,000 for preparing the memorandum and imprisoned up to one year and fined $1,000 for misapplying the funds.

—Mark R. Dodd, 23, of Odessa, for possessing on Feb. 3 a Plainfield .30-caliber carbine which had been altered to fire automatically and which had not been registered to him in the National Firearms Registration and Transfer Record. Maximum punishment for possession of the unregistered firearm is a 10-year prison sentence and a $10,000 fine.

—Janell Lemon Shook, 47, of Fort Worth, for forging the endorsement "Kevin D. Allison" on a U.S. Treasury check made out for $1,633. Maximum punishment for that offense is a 10-year prison sentence and a $1,000 fine.

Personal recognizance and surety bonds in the cases were set by U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith.

When the defendants will be arraigned before U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton has not been set.

Editorials place second in contest

Five editorials from the Reporter-Telegram won second place in this year's Inland Daily Press Association Editorial Excellence Contest.

Announcement of winners in the contest, sponsored by the William Allen White Foundation at the University of Kansas at Lawrence, was made Monday.

The editorials submitted by the Reporter-Telegram included "Playing God," questioning the wisdom of governmental intervention in cases of infants born with life-threatening birth defects; "Our finest hour; perhaps Odessa's'," noting Odessa residents' support for a troubled Midland bank; "Driving concern," which addressed the deteriorating condition of Midland's streets and urged action to correct it; "Perot's fumble," which pointed out the absurdity of a recommendation put forward by a panel on public education led by H. Ross Perot of Dallas; and "Stopping brutality," which addressed a local case of alleged police brutality.

The editorials were written by either Reporter-Telegram Editor Jim Servatius or Editorial Page Editor Bill Modisett. They were entered in a category for newspapers with circulations of between 25,000 and 50,000. Winner in that circulation category was the Grand Island (Neb.) Independent.

The Inland Daily Press Association is the country's largest and oldest regional association of daily newspapers.

Pipeline explosion burns equipment operator

HURST (AP) — A concrete company employee was seriously burned when the front-end loader he was operating apparently struck a gas pipeline, creating an explosion that rocked this suburban community between Dallas and Fort Worth.

Steve Andrews, 22, was listed in fair condition at John Peter Smith Hospital in Fort Worth with third-degree burns on his head and lesser burns on his upper body after the Tuesday morning accident.

Andrews' co-workers said he ran into the drivers' room at Pioneer Concrete of Texas Inc., screaming for help. Witnesses said employees extinguished Andrews' blazing clothes with a water hose.

One of the drivers told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that Andrews said, "Tell me how bad I'm hurt. Tell me if I'm going to die."

Andrews was taken by CareFlite helicopter to the hospital.

Authorities at the scene said Andrews was digging up stones when the loader apparently ruptured the Mobil Oil pipeline, which contained either propane or natural gas. The line was later shut off from a remote office, police said.

The 10:30 a.m. explosion, in the suburb between Dallas and Fort Worth, "sounded like a bomb going off," said John Roulston, a Pioneer driver.

Another driver, Danny Duckworth, said: "We were all sitting in there (the drivers' room) and didn't know what it was, but the way it shook the windows, we knew it was bad."

The Rev. J.D. Wade of nearby Friendship Baptist Church said he thought the blast was a sonic boom.

Black smoke billowed from the hole in the pipeline and flames shot as high as 100 feet into the air, firefighters said.

DEATHS

D.L. Chambliss

Delbert L. Chambliss, 66, of 1100 Carroll died Tuesday evening in a Midland hospital after a lengthy illness.

Services were to be today at 3:30 p.m. in Ellis Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield, associate pastor of First Baptist Church, officiating. Burial was to be in Fairview Cemetery, directed by Ellis Funeral Home.

He was born May 26, 1917 in Childress, where he was raised. He lived in Hobbs, N.M., from 1930-1956 and was employed in the oilfields. He served in the Pacific Theater during World War II. He returned to Hobbs and moved to Midland in 1962. He was married to Bobbie Nall in Midland May 23, 1972. He was an oilfield truck driver.

Survivors include his wife; one son, Bob Moffett of Lamesa; three daughters, Linda Osborn of Fort Stockton, Roxianna Thompson of Sonora and Lois Ploxico of Odessa; two stepsons, Hank Veach of Midland and Randy Veach of Sterling City; one stepdaughter, Shirley Graham of Midland; three brothers, Jack Chambliss and Kenneth Chambliss, both of Amarillo, and Walter Chambliss of Midland; two sisters, Annie Bell Benson of Duncan, Okla., and Juanita Warren of Roswell, N.M.; 20 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Archaeological Society to meet

Dr. Eileen Johnson, director of the Lubbock Lake Site, will speak to the Midland Archaeological Society at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Planetarium of the Museum of the Southwest.

Dr. Johnson received her master's degree from Kansas University and her doctorate in zoology from Texas Tech University.

A zooarcnaeologist and director of the Lubbock Lake Site since 1973, she also teaches in the museum science program at Texas Tech and is an expert in bone technology. Her subject will be the Lubbock Lake Site.

The public is invited to attend the program.

Man reports pistol, jewelry taken

From Staff Reports

Two burglaries with losses totaling $2,900 were reported to police during the past 24 hours.

Greg Mayo, 2412 Emerson Court, told officers a .357 caliber pistol and assorted jewelry worth a total of $1,800 were taken from his residence after someone broke a bedroom window to gain entry sometime Tuesday.

And Loretta Pryor of 509 Delano said jewelry valued at $1,110 was stolen in a break-in of her home Tuesday.

In a theft complaint, an employee of Long John Silver's Restaurant at 900 Andrews Highway said $192 was missing from the cash register Tuesday. An investigation is continuing.

Former oil company executive sentenced

Willie Schmerler, Cobb's former attorney, had claimed that in bringing the indictment down on his client the federal government "acted as an agent for that (New Mexico) prosecutor's vindictiveness."

IN HIS appearance before Bunton, Cobb said he had "mental problems and suicidal tendencies," suffered from depression since he was in the Vietnam War and had seen a psychiatrist.

Cobb, who said "I'm not a criminal," said the love of a woman was the reason "I'm here today." He said he had been planning to turn himself over to federal agents when he was arrested.

"The court is sympathetic with your situtation," Bunton said. "Since you have returned from Vietnam, you haven't adjusted very well."

The judge ordered Cobb to undergo treatment for his depression and mental problems while in prison.

The judge also accepted guilty pleas from:

—Edgar Adkinson Jr., 31, of Midland for possession of stolen mail on April 2, 1982. He pleaded guilty to stealing a U.S. Treasury check made out for $570.06 to Espinola V. Taylor. He is to be sentenced March 19.

"I'm a little nervous about the whole thing," Adkinson told the judge.

"I would be, too, Mr. Adkinson," Bunton said.

—Oasea Jones Williams, 37, pleaded guilty to making a false statement in May 1981 to the Social Security Administration in order to continue receiving benefits due to the condition of a daughter. Mrs. Williams admitted that she did not report she was employed and married. She is to be sentenced March 19.

—Demetro Alaniz, 53, pleaded guilty to making a false statement on June 13, 1983, to the Social Security Administration to continue receiving benefits. Alaniz had told the Social Security Administration he was unemployed but he had a job. He said he made the false statement because "I was not sure I would keep working. I would be in a bind." Alaniz is to be sentenced March 19.

Documents show 'suspicious' expenditures

The county auditor's office had been aware of the department having an unauthorized bank account for the Odessa Senior Citizens Club. A Feb. 8, 1984 memo from County Auditor Dan Ramirez to Ms. Fisher said the account should be transferred to his or the county treasurer's office, because it was not authorized by state law. Hancock's position was voided by Commissiomers Court five days later.

Also an undated memo to Doug Kupper, former parks superintendent and new acting director of the department, from Hancock instructed Kupper to poison prairie dogs at Sherwood Park. The memo read: "Please get some poison grain and put in dog holes outside of fenced area in Sherwood Park. Make sure that people do not see this happening. Close holes after poison is in place. Roland."

In an ironic turn of events, Kupper has become acting director. He, along with Recreation Superintendent Becky Kucera, lost positions when commissioners voted in the Feb. 13 meeting to combine the two superintendent position along with dropping Hancock's position in favor of the temporary director. These moves came after investigation of the department by the park board and auditor's office.

But Kupper interviewed with Commissioners Court Monday and was hired during the meeting. Godwin said the park board also opposed Kupper's hiring.

The parks department may be taken over by the city of Odessa in the near future. An agreement has been discussed by Commissioners Court, but the county attorney's office is currently drawing up a legal contract.

The department lost 13 positions and $500,000 in November budget cuts. Three more positions were dropped after voters approved the tax rollback Jan. 21.

Strong winds cause low tides

GALVESTON (AP) — Strong northerly winds have pushed water out of Galveston Bay, causing the lowest tides in memory and leaving hundreds of boats sitting on the bottom.

Bill Blum, meteorologist in charge of the Galveston Weather Bureau, said unusually strong winds continuing over several days have "just pushed the water out of the bay."

He said coastal areas from Pensacola, Fla., to Galveston have been affected. He estimated that the tides at one point on Tuesday and today were about five feet below normal in the Galveston area.

Court rejects appeal of dead teen's family

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court today rejected an appeal by the family of a teen-ager who died after suffering cardiac and respiratory arrest while he was in a dentist chair.

Relatives of Vikram Bajaj, 18, petitioned the Supreme Court to get their hands on a transcribed interview an insurance agent had with defendants in the Tarrant County case.

The family sued Dr. Paul Edward Menton and his assistant, Terri Crawford, in the death of Bajaj, who was having four wisdom teeth removed by Menton. Bajaj, according to court records, was receiving an intravenous sedation when he suffered cardiac and respiratory arrest on June 26, 1981.

Bajaj died July 6 in Arlington Memorial Hospital.

Menton and others were interviewed on June 30, 1981, by an agent for Chubb's Lloyd's Insurance Co., which carried Menton's liability coverage.

The Bajaj family sought the taped interview, which State District Judge H.M. Lattimore had ordered transcribed, and Lattimore issued an order to release the tape to the Bajajs.

The 2nd Court of Appeals, however, instructed Lattimore to rescind his order. It said the interview was a "work product" and was privileged information.

The Bajajs alleged that the interview was not protected by law because Menton and others had made false statements at an inquest held by the Tarrant County Medical Examiner.

Jackson makes Grammy record

AP Laserphoto

Michael Jackson, the big winner in Tuesday night's 26th presentation of the Grammy Awards, holds six of the eight statuettes he received as he visits backstage at Los Angeles' Shrine Auditorium.

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — Superstar Michael Jackson made Grammy history Tuesday night by winning a record eight awards, including best record for smash hit "Beat It" and best album for the multi-million-selling "Thriller."

Jackson had been nominated for an unprecedented 12 prizes in 10 categories, and his showing at the televised ceremony eclipsed singer-songwriter Paul Simon's seven awards in 1970.

The 25-year-old Jackson was kept from his sweep by British rock group The Police, which beat him for pop group vocal with "Every Breath You Take," and Police lead singer-songwriter Sting, who won new song of the year for writing the single.

The Police also captured the laurel for group rock performance for the LP "Synchronicity" and Sting also won for rock instrumental for "Brimstone & Treacle."

"When something like this happens you want those who are dear to you up here with you," Jackson said in accepting the pop male vocalist award. His two sisters came to the stage.

The singer-songwriter also thanked his parents, "the girls in the balcony," deejays, his record company, Jones and his brothers.

He also thanked Lionel Ritchie, whose "All Night Long" competed with Jackson for pop vocalist and record of the year.

Jackson won pop male vocal for the "Thriller" album. Irene Cara won female vocalist for "Flashdance...What a Feeling."

Wearing a spangled uniform with epaulettes, dark glasses and his trademark sequined white glove, Jackson shared producer of the year with Quincy Jones, who ended up with a total of four Grammys for his work with Jackson on "Thriller" and "E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial," which won a children's recording Grammy

"Of all the awards I've won, I'm most proud of this one," Jackson said in accepting the "E.T." prize.

On winning his seventh Grammy for pop vocalist, Jackson kept a self-made promise to remove his glasses.

"Katharine Hepburn, who is a dear friend of mine, told me I should," he said.

The new artist prize went to Culture Club, the British group led by the androgynous Boy George.

"Thank you America," Boy George said via satellite from London. "You've got taste, style, and you know a good drag queen when you see one." He accepted the award wearing full feminine stage makeup, woman's dress and braided, beribboned hair.

Jackson also won rock male vocal for "Beat It," rhythm and blues male vocal and R&B song for "Billie Jean." Both were No. 1 hits from the record 25 million-selling album.

Backstage at the 26th annual awards presentation by the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences at the Shrine Auditorium, Jackson received praise from his fellow artists.

"I want him to do some more. I want him to do it over and over again," said Stevie Wonder, who has won 15 Grammys in his career.

Bob Dylan said Jackson's achievements were "amazing. He's good. He's a good songwriter. He's a great performer."

Pat Benatar won the best rock female performance for the fourth straight year in other pre-broadcast presentations.

Duran Duran picked up the video award for "Duran Duran," and video short form award for their single "Girls on Film — Hungry Like the Wolf."

In classical categories, Sir Georg Solti won four Grammys to pull ahead of songwriter Henry Mancini's record total of 20. Solti now has 23.

Besides Jackson's rhythm and blues awards, Chaka Khan won as female soloist, and, with longtime band Rufus, picked up the duo or group Grammy for the hit single "Ain't Nobody."

Miss Khan also shared vocal arrangement with Aris Mardin for "Be Bop Medley."

Anne Murray picked up her fourth Grammy in the ountry female category for "A Little Good News." Lee Greenwood won his first Grammy for the single "I Owe You" and The New South earned the instrumental country Grammy for "Fireball."

Jackson did not perform live, but danced on videotape for the CBS television audience during two Pepsi-Cola commercials set for the program. Jackson suffered scalp burns from special effect fireworks last month while filming one of the spots.

Jackson's 12 nominations reflected the breadth of his accomplishment with "Thriller," which has sold more than 25 million copies to become the best-selling album in history. "Thriller" is in its 31st week at the top of Billboard's album chart, a record equalled in the past 20 years only by Fleetwood Mac's "Rumours."

Preparing a gourmet meal can be easy for even the busiest grey flannel executive. A beautifully set table, with Villeroy & Boch's "Empress" bone china and "Avila" crystal, helps to set the mood for first-class entertaining.

the Grey Flannel Gourmet

The young executive doesn't have much time to prepare a balanced meal, and many an executive feels that the only way to eat well is to eat out.

Not so! With a little ingenuity, good ingredients and attractive china and crystal, an interesting meal is easy to prepare and you'll even have time for dessert! In fact, you may decide to make the dessert the center of attraction.

Buy a roast chicken, make a fresh garden salad, serve a sparkling, Bollini white wine spritzer, and spend a little time on the dessert, and you've made an elegant meal in just minutes.

"Don't be afraid to use your finest tableware and serving pieces, and don't feel as though you must wait for a special occasion to bring them out of the cabinet," advises Isabelle von Boch, an international hostess, etiquette expert and eighth generation member of the family who designs and manufactures Villeroy & Boch china and crystal. "Even the most basic, seemingly ordinary meal can be made more glamorous and appealing when it's beautifully presented."

With dinner show your sophisticated side and serve your guests a unique white wine — Bollini, an Italian Chardonnay. This chardonnay from the Trentino-Alto Adige region of Italy is an exceptionally likeable wine that is crisp and clean on the palate and a perfect accompaniment to the evening's menu. Serve chilled alone or mixed in equal parts with Perrier's natural sparkle to create a refreshing white wine spritzer.

Dessert is the menu highlight. Here are two cold gourmet chocolate desserts that are easy to make ahead of time. The Swiss Almond Parfait is unbeatable and looks exquisite served in crystal fluted champagne glasses. Another impressive, yet efficiently easy to make dessert is Lindt's Corporate Mold Mousse, a three tiered "upwardly mobile" dessert. Three different types of Lindt Chocolate are used, making this finale a conversation piece. The secret to success on both is using Lindt of Switzerland, an extraordinary chocolate and the choice of chefs the world over in preparing rich desserts.

Here are some other hints for the gourmet touch:

- Prepare ahead. If you're having company, there's no need to rush home early. Set your table the night before. Mix rather than match china and be sure to have attractive wine glasses — they're inexpensive and "dress up" any table.
- Make your mousse and parfait a day ahead. Each takes only minutes and they will set well overnight. Be sure to cover tightly to protect the rich chocolate flavor.
- Chop vegetables for your salad the day before the dinner and refrigerate in ice water.
- Chill the Bollini wine and place in an ice bucket near the table to remain chilled. Open a few minutes prior to serving to allow the wine to "breathe."
- Intermingle china and crystal patterns using colors and shapes as unifying themes and discover new multi-uses for your crystal. For example: champagne flutes make exquisite parfait glasses for chocolate mousse and other desserts.
- Set a special table with accessories such as ceramic figurines, paperweights or individual ceramic boxes filled with "goodies" such as nuts or after dinner candies.
- Be innovative with your table linens. Find fabric that will make a fun and festive backdrop for your china.
- Set up a serving table with foods, salads, and dessert dishes nearby, allowing you to remain seated while serving guests.

Swiss Almond Parfait or Swiss Hazelnut Parfait

6 oz. (2 bars) Lindt Surfin Swiss Dark Chocolate or Lindt Swiss Dark Hazelnut Bar
1/4 cup rum
1/4 cup orange juice
1/2 cup ground almonds (do not use for Hazelnut version)
2 egg yolks
2 whole eggs
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1 cup heavy cream, whipped

Melt the chocolate in rum and orange juice. Grind the almonds in the food processor or blender. Add almonds to the melted chocolate. Set aside to cool. Put the egg yolks, eggs and sugar in a mixer bowl and beat till light and fluffy. Add the chocolate mixture and fold in, then fold in the whipped cream. Pour into a glass bowl or individual parfait glasses and freeze for 4 hours. One half hour before serving, remove from freezer and refrigerate to soften slightly. Top with whipped cream and shaved chocolate or one Lindt Thin propped into the whipped cream topping. (Tip: Using a vegetable peeler, shave chilled chocolate bar lengthwise.) Yield: 4 servings. Preparation time: 30 minutes. Chill 4 hours or overnight.

Lindt's Corporate Mold Mousse

1 Tbsp. unflavored gelatin
1/4 cup cold water
5 egg yolks
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1/2 cup scalded light cream
3-1/2 oz. (1 bar) Lindt Blancor Crocant
3 oz. (1 bar) Lindt Milk Chocolate
3 oz. (1 bar) Lindt Surfin Swiss Dark Chocolate
1-3/4 cup heavy cream, whipped
1 six-cup mold or Pyrex bowl
Vegetable oil

Oil the mold well. In a food processor, chop the chocolates separately, beginning with the Lindt Blancor Crocant, then the Lindt Milk Chocolate and, lastly, the Lindt Surfin. Keep separate and set aside. Beat egg yolks with 1/2 cup sugar till very thick and fluffy and when the beaters are lifted a wide ribbon forms. Scald the light cream, being careful not to burn it. At low speed, slowly add the light cream to the egg mixture. Transfer to an enamelled saucepan and stirring constantly cook over low flame till mixture thickens and coats the back of a wooden spoon. Do not boil or the custard will curdle. This should take about 10 minutes. Remove from heat. In three separate bowls, measure out custard in three equal portions. Add the Lindt Blancor Crocant to the first bowl whisking it in quickly so chocolate is completely melted and blended. Cover with plastic wrap so wrap touches the custard mixture and chill 10 to 15 minutes, till the consistency of egg whites. Repeat the procedure with the Lindt Milk Chocolate in the second bowl and the Lindt Surfin Swiss Dark Chocolate in the third bowl. While custards are cooling, whip the cream. First add 1/3 of the whipped cream to the white chocolate custard and fold in. Pour into the mold; cover with plastic wrap and freeze 10 minutes till set, no longer. Mix second third of whipped cream with the Lindt Milk Chocolate mixture and pour over the set white chocolate layer. Freeze till set. Mix Surfin mixture with the remaining whipped cream and pour over the Milk Chocolate layer. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate four hours or overnight. Unmold when ready to serve. (Hint: Set mold in warm water for 30 seconds to facilitate unmolding.) Garnish creatively with chocolate curls and whipped cream. Preparation time: 1 hour. Yield: 6 servings.

Show off snow peas in entree, garnish

Hearst Feature Service

They're known by a variety of names — snowpea, sugar pea, pea pod, China pea — but California pea would be a more appropriate name for this edible flat and fleshy sweet pea pod.

SHRIMP AND SNOWPEAS WITH SHERRY VINAIGRETTE

Two tablespoons peanut (or vegetable) oil
One pound large (15 to 20) raw shrimp, peeled and deveined
One-half pound snow peas, stringed
One cup Sherry Vinaigrette (recipe follows)
Salt, to taste

Sherry Vinaigrette: In a small bowl, whisk one teaspoon prepared Dijon mustard with two tablespoons wine vinegar and two tablespoons sherry. Stir in salt and pepper to taste. Whisking continuously, dribble in one-half cup olive oil. Heat oil in a skillet. When hot, saute shrimp, tossing frequently, about three minutes or until shrimp are pink and firm (do not overcook). Remove shrimp to a bowl and pour one-half of the Sherry Vinaigrette over them. Let stand one hour.

Meanwhile, trim and string snowpeas and let stand in ice water. Bring about three cups water to a boil and, reserving the ice water, add the chilled snowpeas. Cook no more than two minutes (water need not return to a boil), then immediately drain snowpeas and plunge them back in the ice water.

When snowpeas are cool, drain them, pat dry and split along the seams, leaving halves joined at one end.

Remove shrimp and wrap a snowpea around each. Secure in place with a cocktail pick. Arrange on a platter, cover and refrigerate until ready to serve. Serve garnished with remaining snowpeas and remaining Sherry Vinaigrette on the side.

Dinner for two will long be remembered when this Shrimp and Pea Pod Casserole is the main course — it's the perfect dinner for celebrating leap year.

Bachelor's day: The only immunity from Leap Year

Bachelors beware — it is leap year, the traditional time when the tables are turned and women propose marriage to men. The only day of immunity is Feb. 29, Bachelor's Day. Because it occurs only once every four years, it is the perfect time for the bachelor to celebrate. What would be more appropriate than a quiet dinner for two?

SHRIMP AND PEA POD CASSEROLE

1 pckg. (6 oz.) frozen Chinese pea pods, rinsed and well drained
1 can (7-1/2 oz.) semi-condensed savory cream of mushroom soup
1/2 cup water
3 tablespoons dry white wine or water
1 tablespoon buttermilk baking mix
1/8 teaspoon garlic powder
1/2 cup shredded Swiss cheese (2 oz.)
1 can (4-1/4 oz.) small shrimp, drained or 1 package (6 oz.) frozen small shrimp, rinsed and drained
2/3 cup buttermilk baking mix
2 teaspoons parsley flakes, slightly crushed
2 tablespoons milk
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1/4 cup slivered almonds, slightly toasted

Heat oven to 400-F. Place pea pods in ungreased one-quart casserole. Mix soup, water, wine, one tablespoon baking mix and garlic powder in two-quart saucepan. Heat to boiling over medium-high heat, stirring constantly; reduce heat. Simmer, stirring constantly, five minutes. Stir in cheese until melted; stir in shrimp. Pour over pea pods.

Mix 2/3 cup baking mix, parsley flakes, milk and lemon juice until soft, sticky dough forms; beat vigorously 30 seconds. Drop dough by teaspoonsful onto shrimp mixture; sprinkle with almonds. Bake until biscuits are golden brown, 17-19 minutes.

Legends surround the year 'with something extra'

By The Washington Post-Los Angeles Times

For Evelena and David Lane of Long Beach, Calif., it is a fourth-coming event. Spelled just that way, and about time it got here.

Today, you may have noticed, is the 29th of February. For you, it may mean a 24-hour reprieve before the first-of-the-month bills.

For the Lanes and others like them, the leap day means they get to observe a genuine wedding anniversary.

They could have chosen any of the other 1,460 days during the quadrennium, but they said "I do" on Feb. 29, 1980.

"So up until now, we celebrated our anniversary on the 28th," she explained.

In the case of Joyce Uslaner of Los Angeles, the solution is not that cut and dried. She was born Feb. 29, 1928.

"In years other than leap years, my husband always says that I should observe the birthday on March 1, since I was born the day after the 28th," she said. "I insist the 28th is the proper day. So we compromise and celebrate the entire week."

Actually, as she pointed out, there could be legal implications. "What date does the Social Security Administration consider that I will have reached age 65?"

Life is full of unanswered questions, but this one has an explanation. A call to the Social Security people in Washington brought this response from spokesman Phil Gambino:

"For benefit purposes, you are deemed to have attained your age on the day before your actual birthday.

"This has a basis in English common law. You have completed 365 days before your birthday. There are other agencies that use the same yardstick."

In the comic opera "The Pirates of Penzance" by Gilbert and Sullivan, this legal point is of no use to Frederic, the pirate apprentice who was born on leap day. Not only was Frederic meant by his father to be a pilot (his nursemaid was a bit deaf), but when the son seeks release from his contract as an apprentice after 21 years of life, the technicality is raised that he has had only five birthdays.

You think this discussion of leap year isn't a shadow-caster? Consider an economic implication:

"That one extra day means that there will be 54,500 additional visitors here," said Lori Miller of the Greater Los Angeles Visitors & Convention Bureau. "This will mean an estimated $10 million in extra revenue."

Every silver lining, however, has a cloud. Workers on annual salaries put in an extra day.

In leap years when April 15 falls on a weekday, the additional day translates into more time for agonizing over income tax returns. This year, though, that extra 24 hours works against last-minute filers.

The tax deadline has to be on a weekday, according to Robert L. Giannangeli, public affairs officer with the Internal Revenue Service here. Without the Feb. 29 this year, April 15 would fall on a Saturday, and returns wouldn't be due until two days later. As it is, April 15 is a Sunday, and the deadline is the next day.

Pope Gregory XIII did not know entirely what he was getting us into when, in 1582, he refined a calendar introduced by Julius Caesar. For one thing, neither of them owned a digital watch-calendar.

Back in the dark ages of the 1970s when digitals first became popular, the day following Feb. 28 always became March 1, which also happened on many analog watch-calendars and clock-calendars, leap year be damned.

The programming technology had not yet arrived.

"In fact, I think some of the earliest digital models didn't even account for months with 30 days — all were 31 days," said Mario Sabatini, product planning manager for digital watches of Timex Inc. in Waterbury, Conn.

"This year, whether or not your timepiece adjusts automatically depends on how recent the model is," he said. "Some of the more advanced circuits have the built-in adjustment."

If your timepiece Wednesday reads March 1, the appropriate button should be depressed, to go along with your state of mind.

Consider, however, the plight of those born in the leap year 1896. The year 1900 didn't qualify as a leap year, meaning that such people had to wait until 1904 to blow out the first candle.

In fact, there once was an organization known as Eight Years Without a Birthday Club, and there still may be, although no members could be located.

This phenomenon came about because the only century years that are leap years are those that can be divided evenly by 400. Thus, 1700, 1800 and 1900 weren't, but 2000 will be.

Part of our calendar arrangement was the idea of Caesar, who adopted the assumption of an adviser that the year actually was 365 1-4 days long. The ruler decreed that to make everything neat and tidy, February would have an extra day every four years. He was eventually murdered.

Nearly eight centuries later a monk known as The Venerable Bede discovered that the 365 1-4-day Julian year was 11 minutes, 14 seconds too long. By 1582, according to the World Almanac, the accumulated error was estimated to have amounted to 10 days.

Pope Gregory XIII decreed that Oct. 4 of that year be called Oct. 15. Furthermore, three of every four years ending in 00 were to be common years, not leap years.

So much for today's history lesson.

Leap year also has its place in folklore. It was believed by the old Rhinelanders of Germany, according to Frances Tally of the University of California, Los Angeles Folklore and Mythology Center, that a Feb. 29 baby would be clairvoyant, but haunted by evil spirits for the rest of his or her life.

Sydney Omarr of Santa Monica, Calif., the syndicated astrologer, said that — with the stipulation that the background on such people is limited — a generalization may be made that they have highly developed intuition, are natural teachers and are excellent at vocational guidance.

AT WIT'S END

Son hasn't outgrown eating habits yet

By ERMA BOMBECK

There's a period in a child's growth where everything he picks up goes directly into his mouth.

It's a tense time for a mother who must appear miraculously at the right time to snatch whatever from his hands and save him from devouring a lampshade or the stair treads.

With most children, the phase is a temporary one. They will baste everything with saliva and reduce it to bite-size for a period of three years . . . tops. Then, they judiciously begin to examine the item, smell it, and determine whether or not it's edible.

Then, there is a group of children who never outgrow it. I am the mother of one of them. At the age of nine, he ate three soaps shaped like strawberries. At age 11, he ate a green apple and didn't even realize it was a candle until he spit out the wick. One evening in his 16th year, we were at a friend's house having dinner when I looked up to find him eating a cork coaster.

"What are you doing?" I asked.

"Eating a cookie," he said. "It's not too bad."

"I'll get her recipe," I said tiredly.

Ironically, children who hang onto this appetite for non-edibles never seem to suffer any ill effects. My son has consumed enough baking soda (stored in the refrigerator to combat odors) to turn him into a statue.

He came in the other night and like a magnet went to his free-throw line in front of the refrigerator and with both hands pulled both the freezer and the refrigerator doors open.

"Don't eat the film in the freezer," I said. "Your father is saving it for vacation."

His eyes caught the glass carafe filled with red liquid. In typical boy fashion, he whipped off the cap and hoisted it to his lips and began to drink. At the same time, his eyes went to a hummingbird feeder just outside our kitchen window. He stopped drinking. "Wait a minute," he said. "Is that hummingbird drinking the same stuff I'm drinking?"

I nodded.

"You could have told me it was nectar," he said, wiping the sticky liquid off his lips. He is 28 years old.

A friend of mine came by and when I told her the story she said, "That's nothing. I gave a party the other night and one of the guests dipped her hand in my potpourri and started popping it into her mouth. She thought it was Trail Mix."

"How old was she?" I asked anxiously.

"38."

Why me, God?

Red raspberry cream light

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

DINNER FOR SIX
Baked Chicken & Rice
Broccoli & Salad
Raspberry Cream & Coffee

RASPBERRY CREAM

Light in texture, attractive in color and with true raspberry flavor.

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
¼ cup cold water
10-ounce package red raspberries with syrup, thawed
¼ cup sugar
1 cup heavy cream

In a medium bowl sprinkle gelatin over water and let soften — about 5 minutes. In a 1-quart saucepan heat raspberries and their syrup until about to boil; add to gelatin mixture and stir until gelatin dissolves — don't worry if all the berries are not whole. Gently stir in sugar. Chill until partly thickened. In a small bowl whip cream until stiff; add to raspberry mixture and gently fold in until color is uniform. Ladle into six 6-ounce custard cups or molds; chill to set; cover. At serving time, unmold. (If you do not wish to unmold the dessert, ladle it into sherbet cups or individual dessert bowls.) Makes 6 servings.

Batter bread loaf has fine close texture

By CECILY BBOWNSTONE

LIGHT FARE
Soup & Salad
Cheese & Batter Bread

BATTER BREAD

Easy to make, close-textured loaf.

3½ cups all-purpose flour
1 envelope (¼-ounce) fast- rising yeast
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
2 tablespoons butter, soft or cut in tiny pieces
1¼ cups hot water (125 to 130 degrees)

In a large bowl with a wooden spoon stir together 2½ cups of the flour, the yeast, salt and sugar; stir in butter and water.

Stir in enough of the remaining flour to make a very thick batter.

Cover bowl with saran; let rise in a draftfree warm place (80 degrees) until doubled — about 40 minutes. Stir down.

Turn into a buttered 1½-quart loaf dish (8½ by 4½ by 2½ inches). With buttered fingers, smooth top; cover dish with buttered saran. Let rise as previously until doubled — about 40 minutes; uncover.

Bake on the rack below the center in a preheated 375-degree oven until golden brown and a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 40 minutes.

Turn out on a wire rack; turn right side up; cool completely.

Orange liqueur homemade

ORANGE LIQUEUR

Good to serve several ways.

1 large navel orange
3 cups brandy
1 cup sugar

With swivel-blade vegetable peeler, peel orange in continuous spirals. (Wrap orange and refrigerate for another use.)

Place peel and brandy in a jar that has a tight fitting lid. Let stand one week; shake occasionally.

Remove orange peel. Add sugar; shake until sugar dissolves. Let stand 7 days longer.

Serve as a drink straight or over crushed ice; or for dessert, serve over fresh fruits or vanilla ice cream.

Makes about 3½ cups. —(AP)

Lime chiffon pie creamy

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

LIME CHIFFON PIE

Lower in calories than creamy pies of this sort.

Sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
3 large eggs, separated
1 cup buttermilk
1 teaspoon grated lime rind
¼ cup lime juice
9-inch baked graham cracker crust

In a double-boiler top stir together gelatin, ½ cup sugar and salt. Beat egg yolks and buttermilk until blended; add to gelatin mixture. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly, until gelatin dissolves and mixture thickens — about 8 minutes. Cool; stir in lime rind and lime juice. Chill until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon. Beat egg whites until they hold soft peaks; gradually beat in 1-3rd cup sugar until stiff; fold into gelatin mixture. Turn into crumb crust; chill to set.

Banana recipes go microwave

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Following are several microwave recipes you'll go bananas over!

BANANA BOATS
Bananas
Chocolate chips
Miniature marshmallows
Salted peanuts

Peel banana skins back, leave skins attached at base. Split each banana lenthwise to make a pocket. Fill pocket with chocolate chips, marshmallows and peanuts. Replace skins, fasten with wooden picks.

Place bananas on serving plate, cook two banana boats about 4 minutes, four about 8 minutes.

BANANA CAKE
½ cup butter or margarine
1½ cups sugar
3 eggs
1 cup mashed bananas
1 tsp. baking soda
½ cup commercial sour cream
2 cups all-purpose flour
1 tsp. vanilla

Cream butter or margarine, stirring sugar in gradually.

Separate eggs. Beategg yolks and stir into sugar mixture. Mix bananas into sugar mixture.

Combine baking soda with sour cream. Stir sour cream mixture alternately with flour into banana mixture.

Beat egg whites until stiff. Fold in egg whites and vanilla.

Pour batter into two 9-inch round glass cake dishes. Bake each layer 6 minutes in microwave. Turn dish every minute. Cool.

Makes 2 layers.

FLAMING BANANAS
3 tbsps. butter or margarine
3 tbsps. firmly packed brown sugar
Dash ground nutmeg
½ tsp. grated orange peel
4 firm-ripe bananas, peeled and sliced ½-inch thick
2 tbsps. each rum and coffee-flavored liqueur
About 1½ pts. vanilla or coffee ice cream

In shallow 1½- to 2-quart serving dish, melt butter or margarine in microwve 1 to 2 minutes or until bubbly. Stir in sugar, nutmeg and orange peel.

Cook, uncovered, 2 minutes to dissolve sugar; stir well. Add bananas, stirring lightly to coat with butter mixture.

Cover and cook 2 minutes or until bananas begin to soften. Combine rum and liqueur in glass measuring cup; heat 25 seconds. Pour over bananas and ignite; then spoon flaming sauce over bananas until flames subside.

Serve bananas over scoops of ice cream.

Makes about 6 servings.

Recipes in this column are tested in 625- to 700-watt microwave ovens. Foods are cooked on HIGH (100 percent power) and uncovered unless otherwise specified.

Butterscotch sauce for ice cream

Midland horses win dressage medals

Bonnie, a 5-year-old Clydesdale-Thoroughbred Cross and Promesa, an 8-year-old Ecuadorian Thoroughbred, both owned, trained and shown by Emmy Detlof of Midland, won championships in the 1983 dressage show season.

At the New Mexico Dressage Society Gold Medal Finals in Albuquerque, N.M., Bonnie was named Reserve Champion at Training Leval and won the American Horse Shows Association Qualifying Class for the Champion Dressage Horse at First Level. Promesa won the Gold Medal Finals at both First and Second Levels. Both horses placed first and second in the Musical Kur, a free-style ride. At the New Mexico Horse Shows Association annual Championship Show in Roswell, N.M., Bonnie was again Reserve Training Champion and Promesa was Champion at First and Second Levels.

Owner Detlof, owner of The Tack Rack, is president of the West Texas Dressage Association, which sponsors the annual charity show benefiting Holy Trinity Church.

English prefer their 'claret'

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

In England, claret is king.

Americans may gurgle about wonderful bottles of Bordeaux, but the British refer to their favorite red wine as claret.

To an Englishman, claret is a red Bordeaux. But for more than a century in this country, claret is simply a generic designation for any blended red wine. In this country, it has never been as revered as it is along Fleet Street, where a glass of claret after work is a terribly civilized pastime.

Though American wine producers once used the term "claret" as a generic for any blended red wine, since about the turn of the century it has largely fallen into disuse — although Louis Martini and Charles Krug, two of the pioneer wineries in the Napa Valley, long have made a blended wine called Claret, and both wineries' Clarets are very good wines for the money.

In place of claret, in America, the generic term "burgundy" grew up and has taken hold. But about two or three years ago, some wine makers wanted to get away from the term burgundy, so they began looking for a clever substitute.

Haywood Winery in Sonoma called its generic red wine Spaghetti Red; Clos du Bois made a Vin Rouge; Whitehall Lane made a Fleur d'Helene; Trefethen calls its generic Eshcol Red, and Boeger in Placerville makes a Hangtown Red. But in the last couple years, U.S. wine makers, seeking a more exciting designation for the same wine, are switching to the term claret.

Two excellent wines designated Claret recently made their appearances on store shelves, and both are excellent wines.

A 1981 Ridge Claret ($9) from the Roffinella vineyard in the Hecker Pass area south of San Jose is a blend of 40 percent Petite Sirah, 40 percent Carignane and 20 percent Zinfandel. The wine is fairly coarse and rich, loaded with good acid and tannin, and yet offers an appealing fruitiness that with a year of bottle age should become a wonderful accompaniment to hearty foods.

One of the best values around in generic table wines is a 1982 Claret from Tepusquet Vineyards, the huge Santa Barbara County vineyard that long has produced some of the finest wines in California, but under other wineries' names.

Tepusquet grapes have been sold to such lofty wineries as Chateau Montelena, Chateau Chevalier, Zaca Mesa and others, and now the owners are making their own wine — a red and a white — and selling it under their own attractive label. (The white, designated Vin Blanc, is equally as vibrant a wine as the claret.)

The Tepusquet Claret ($5) is a blend of 54 percent Cabernet Sauvignon, 46 percent Merlot, and the character of the wine is very much like a Bordeaux — and, thus, is very much like the wine the British expect when they order claret.

The aroma is herbal, yet with a wood-spice character that's appealing, and it has a warm, fleshy mouth feel that matches well with meat or with cheese after dinner.

It was in the 12th century that the British discovered claret, after the marriage of Henry Plantagenet, later known as King Henry II, to Eleanor of Aquitaine.

This union brought the district of Gascony, in which Bordeaux was situated, under the British crown, and trade between the wine merchants of the district and London flourished.

For one thing, it was simple to ship to London straight up the Garonne River and out to the Bay of Biscay in the Atlantic, into the English Channel and right up the Thames. That was much easier than hauling barrels of wine overland from places such as Burgundy, and then across the channel.

In addition, because Gascony was ruled by Britain, merchants could trade on favorable terms.

The red wine of Bordeaux was called clairet by the French — pronounced clair-ray, — and was descriptive of a light wine that was clear, delicate and uncomplicated. But every now and then, some of the better claret — pronounced clare-et — would reach British shores, and soon English wine connoisseurs began to lust after the better clarets.

By the 15th century, as British rule ended in Gascony, English wine merchants began to range all over the continent to offer their constituents more and more intriguing wines ("hock," Alsace, Rhone, port, sherry and Madeira). But claret remained king.

Wine author Julian Street, in his esteemed 1933 book called "Wines," says of the British fascination with claret: "The use (of Rhine wines) in England increased, but the taste for "clairet" had been formed, and nothing ever displaced it; claret was Queen Victoria's favorite wine, and every good British wine list is strong in this department."

BETTER BUSINESS

Phone solicitor 'epidemic' underway

By LINDA TRUITT

Would you or an employee of your company go for a deal like this?

A telephone solicitor calls to say you have won a valuable prize. If you represent a business, the solicitor may want to sell you imprinted ball-point pens and give you a prize. If he calls you at home he may ask for your credit card number to "verify" you have a VISA or MasterCard account. Regardless of his purpose for calling, the solicitor gets what he wants because he offers free prizes that sounds attractive, such as trips to exotic resorts, grandfather clocks, motorboats and personal computers.

Telephone calls such as these are reaching epidemic proportions. The Better Business Bureau has received numerous calls from people who actually believe they will receive a valuable prize.

Don't be so eager to believe it! Companies from Los Angeles, Miami and Las Vegas are setting up boiler rooms with dozens of telephone solicitors anxious to take your money while giving little in return.

People who have given out their credit card numbers never receive a prize and later find unauthorized charges on their credit card accounts. One local resident had approximately $800 in unauthorized charges appear on his bill one month. By giving out your credit card number you are inviting the caller to make unauthorized charges or even duplicate the card.

Businesses buying the pens find they pay an enormous fee for a low-quality product. In order to receive the prize, costly shipping and handling charges must be paid C.O.D. And expected the prize turns out to be junk. A motorboat turns out to be a rubber raft, a free vacation is actually a vacation certificate and a personal computer is actually a hand-held calculator.

According to some local citizens, Transworld Marketing aka Marathon Marketing from Los Angeles recently called promising valuable prizes if they would give the solicitor a major credit card number. A number of people have called the BBB and reported unauthorized charges on their bills. One person was charged more than $300 for a Home Security System consisting of a first aid emergency kit, a fire extinguisher, a smoke detector and a door guard, probably not worth $50 total.

The bottom line is it is dangerous to deal with telephone solicitors you don't know. Don't give out your credit card numbers, and don't believe you are going to get a free prize. You may end up paying for something you probably don't want.

Pudding's history long

By The Associated Press

Today there are so many sweet puddings that the English who made them popular often use the word to mean dessert of any kind.

But such treats are of relatively recent origin, winning popularity only after sugar became widely available in the 18th century, although some honey and syrup desserts were made at an earlier date.

Originally, pudding referred to a variety of unsweetened baked, boiled or steamed soft foods often served as the main dinner dish, such as chicken and corn pudding.

The name pudding is believed to have derived from an old German word meaning sausage. German "blood pudding" is made from pig's blood, cooked with particles of fat pork and oatmeal and stuffed in a casing. Haggis, a savory Scottish sausage, consists of liver, lungs, heart and other parts of a calf or sheep, plus spices, oatmeal and beef suet, all boiled together in a sheep's stomach.

The early puddings were often mixed with suet like the ever-popular steak and kidney pie.

Americans inherited the British enjoyment of sweet puddings. Our early settlers liked such mixtures as Indian corn pudding and often ate it at the start of the meal, maple syrup and all. Another colonial favorite was hasty pudding made with corn or wheat flour and also sweetened with maple sugar.

Caviar used in egg salad

GUESTS FOR LUNCH
Caviar Egg Salad
Rolls
Three-fruit Sherbet

CAVIAR EGG SALAD
Salmon caviar is available in many supermarkets.
6 large eggs
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
2 teaspoons prepared Dijon mustard
4-ounce jar salmon caviar
Salad greens and French Dressing

Hard-cook eggs; shell; cut in half lengthwise. Remove yolks and mash with mayonnaise and mustard; spoon back into egg white cavities and smooth. In the center of each top make a small indentation and fill each with a scant teaspoon of caviar. Serve with salad greens tossed with French dressing. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Slaw made Missouri-style

MISSOURI SLAW
Patterned after a St. Louis cafeteria specialty.
4 cups tightly packed thinly shredded green cabbage
1 small onion (size of a walnut), finely chopped
2 to 3 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
1 tablespoon salad oil
1 teaspoon salt

Thoroughly toss together cabbage, onion, sugar, vinegar, oil and salt. Cover and chill a few hours before serving. Makes about 2 cups. (A 1½-pound head of cabbage minus large outer leaves will give the 4 cups needed if the coarse white parts near the core are not used.)

World population could double in next half-century

WASHINGTON (AP) — Imagine a world with 8 billion people, in which India has passed China as the most populous nation, Malaysia and Costa Rica have joined the ranks of industrial states and the United States has become a service and information society.

That is the vision of population expert Leon F. Bouvier, speculating on what the world might be like in the year 2034 in a report done for the Population Reference Bureau, a Washington based non-profit study group.

Bouvier, a senior researcher at the bureau, characterizes his conclusions as optimistic, noting that he assumes that the evolution of society will be generally orderly over the next half-century, that there will no nuclear war and that there will be sufficient food, water, mineral and energy resources for mankind.

If things do go that well, Bouvier anticipates a world population of just over 8 billion in the year 2034, double the 1976 figure.

India will have become the world's most populous nation with 1.3 billion people, he says, topping China, where efforts to reduce population growth have held the total to 1.2 billion.

The Soviet Union will remain third largest, he says, with 330 million people, and the United States fourth with 270 million.

As growth in less developed nations continues to top the more developed ones, migration will continue to be a problem as people seek better lives and jobs, Bouvier said.

Indeed, he suggests immigrants will become an increasing factor in the populations of some North American and European nations where native fertility rates have fallen below replacement levels, or will have done so by 2034.

Nations like Mexico may have to discourage arrival of people from other Central American states, he says, because of crowding and overpopulation in newly industrialized areas.

Mexico City, Bouvier says, could become the world's most populous city by 2034, at just under 40 million people.

He says the United States, along with Western Europe, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and Japan, will likely have passed beyond the era of industrialization to become information and service oriented societies. But such societies will contain only about 4 percent of the world's people.

The new industrial societies will have about 38 percent of the world's population, Bouvier anticipates.

These are nations that will take over the industrial production formerly done by nations moving toward service and information lifestyles. Included in the newly industrialized states will be China, Korea, Malaysia, Brazil, Argentina, Costa Rica, Mexico, Venezuela, the Soviet Union and some Eastern European nations.

It's very bad year for truffles

CAHORS, France (AP) — Gourmets are in a dark mood over this year's disastrous hunting season for truffles, the black, subterranean fungi that have graced French sauces, foie gras and other dishes since before the time of Louis XIV.

Truffles, once practically a staple for master chef Escoffier, these days are ever-scarcer and more costly — as high as $200 a pound. That's an increase of 50 percent over last year.

Truffles grow underground in southwestern France and are hunted with pigs and dogs trained to follow the piquant scent. Gourmet writer Brillat-Savarin dubbed them "black diamonds."

"It's the worst year in memory," said Jacques Pebeyre, head of the top French truffle buying and distributing firm in the southwest region of Quercy.

"Very sad," agreed the family patriarch, Alain, who at age 99 is the unofficial dean of truffles and can remember bumper crops before the turn of the century.

A total harvest of 12 tons of truffles is expected by early March, the end of the four-month hunting season — compared with about 45 tons unearthed last year.

The Pebeyres say this season is the nadir of a general downtrend in truffles that began in 1914, caused in part because farmhands lost in World War I weren't around to look after truffle-producing land and trees.

Jacques Pebeyre thinks the poverty of this year's crop is mainly due to a torrid July that killed off the truffles.

"But truffles are a mystery," said Pebeyre. "We only know they need our peculiar conditions such as poor, stony soil, scrubby oaks or hazelnut trees, weather that is warm and humid in the spring, dry and hot with some good thunderstorms in the summer. Extremes are out."

They've never been successfully cultivated, but must be hunted.

"In our region, pigs used to do all the hunting, but now we use at least as many dogs as pigs," said Pebeyre.

He sometimes hunts truffles on his own land near Cahors. The dogs can be anything from poodles to mutts and are taught to associate truffle scents with meat.

The advantage of dogs is that they don't eat the truffles and can be transported easily in cars.

"Pigs want to eat a truffle right away," said Janine Marty, owner of a truffle-hunting pig as she pulled her snuffling charge away from its quarry.

The Pebeyres say top-grade truffles, tinned or fresh, must be firm, dense, black and of a decent size.

DEAR ABBY

Old 'love letters' might be misread

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is in regard to the widow who discovered her late husband's "unfaithfulness" when his secretary brought her the contents of his desk drawers. Among his personal papers were some "love letters" from other women.

I am reminded of an incident that occurred in our circle of friends a number of years ago in Kansas. A man in his mid-40s died suddenly of a heart attack after being happily married for many years.

His widow grieved for an unusually long time, so finally a family friend, who had also been her late husband's accountant, asked her why she was still so unhappy. She replied, "Why didn't you tell me that my husband had been supporting another woman all these years? You surely must have known." The friend said, "Why, that can't be right. How do you know? And who was the woman?"

The widow replied, "When I took over his checkbook, I discovered monthly payments to a 'Marjorie Jones' — extending over many years."

My friend replied, "Good heavens! Marjorie Jones is the secretary at the country club. She handles the liquor pool in this dry state, and we all make monthly payments to her to settle our accounts." — LOOKING BEYOND THE OBVIOUS

DEAR LOOKING: Add to that this incident:

DEAR ABBY: About the widow who came into some "love letters" among her husband's belongings after his sudden death:

My husband also died suddenly, and all over his appointment book he had scribbled, "Call Val."

I was heartsick, until I found out that "Val" was "Valenti" — his bookie. — MARIA IN RHODE ISLAND

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for encouraging people to donate blood. Recently our 3½-year-old son was accidently run over by a riding lawn mower, and his arm and part of his face were mangled. We live 22 miles from the nearest hospital, and when we finally got there, the boy had nearly bled to death.

Thanks to donors, blood was available or we would have lost him. — GRATEFUL MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Your letter bears two equally important messages: (1) Donate blood; (2) parents, please protect your children from such accidents.

DEAR ABBY: We have a neighbor who borrows eggs, sugar, milk etc., but never pays back anything. She calls us when she's locked out of her house or her car, or when she's stuck somewhere and needs transportation. I think you get the picture.

Well, over the Christmas holidays, she asked our 13-year-old son if he would feed the cats and fish and bring in her mail while she and her family were out of town. She said she would pay him. He agreed. My son took care of her requests, but as of this writing, he hasn't been paid. It's not the money; it's the principle of the thing.

My question to you: Should we just forget about it, or should she be reminded of her promise? Our son is too shy to ask her himself, so I think I should say something to her. She has no financial hardships. How should I put it? — IRRITATED NEIGHBOR

DEAR NEIGHBOR: Put it this way: "You promised to pay my son for looking after your cats and fish and bringing in your mail while you were away last Christmas. It probably slipped your mind, so I'm reminding you."

CHILI CORNBREAD

A robust version that came to us from Texas.

2 large eggs
¼ cup corn oil
1 cup stoneground yellow cornmeal
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ cup sour cream
8-ounce can creamstyle corn
4-ounce can chopped green chilies, drained
6 ounces sharp cheddar cheese, grated medium-fine

Beat eggs until foamy; add oil, cornmeal, baking powder and sour cream; beat until smooth. Stir in corn, chilies and cheese. Turn into a buttered 8 by 8 by 2-inch baking dish. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 1 hour. Serve warm.

LIVING TODAY

Fabric care changing

By SHARON A. HILLIS

Economic conditions during the last few years have caused some consumers to buy lower priced and sometimes lower quality textiles. Many good-quality, good-value textiles are on the market, but when consumers buy clothes of poor-quality textiles or do not know how to care for the textiles, the result may be an increase in laundering problems.

For example the number of imported garments has increased dramatically the last 5-10 years. In some cases imported clothes are of lower quality construction and finishing than American-made garments. Dyes may be somewhat unstable, leading to problems with dye-bleeding during laundering.

Many people are also buying reverse blends in shirts without realizing these may require more care. Although the leading shirt fabric for men continues to be a 65 percent polyester/35 percent cotton blend, there is an increased demand for reverse blends of 35 percent polyester/65 percent cotton. Yet for a wrinkle-free look reverse blends require touch-up ironing, even when the appropriate washer and dryer cycles have been used.

Several new polypropylene fabrics are being used for garments such as thermal underwear, active sportswear, knit fleeces and women's lingerie. These fabrics must be air dryed because they are sensitive to dryer heat.

With the sharp increase in the use of silk in women's dresses, blouses, men's shirts and summer jackets, consumers are questioning how to care for the garments. Some silks are washable and others are labeled "dry clean only." Washable silks should be treated gently with a short wash, mild detergent and minimal agitation to avoid fiber damage. For wrinkle-free silks, press while damp.

The fabric used a few years ago primarily for sweatsuits is now a popular fabric for dresses, shirts, tunics and slacks. Composed of 100 percent acrylic or 50 percent acrylic/50 percent cotton fibers, it is definitely an easy-care choice. However, linting or pilling may occur because of fleeced backing. Other problems include dye bleeding and shrinkage depending on the quality of the textile manufacturer's processing.

Textiles and apparel on the market today can provide a laundering challenge. Wise consumers learn the fabric characteristics and read the care label before buying.

Bananas not always available

Copley News Service

We take the banana pretty much for granted. After all, they're available all year round and they're one of the least-expensive fruits in the supermarket.

But things haven't always been that way. Around the time of the Civil War a few blackened bananas might reach American markets, but there were no regular shipments from the tropics and the fruit was rarely seen. A single bedraggled banana, wrapped in tinfoil to mask its waning beauty, could sell for as much as $1, big bucks in those days.

Then, in the latter years of the 19th century, a New England sea captain named Lorenzo Baker began regular, and lucrative, shipments of the fruit. But it was not until the mid-1920s that bananas could be found in markets nationwide. It was then that refrigerated ships and railroad cars came into use — the banana became a commonplace sight and lost its exotic appeal.

While it may not be quite as exotic as it once was, the banana is still a great favorite with fruit-lovers. Sliced into a bowl of cereal, packed in a brown-bag lunch or nibbled as a snack, they're sweet and provide healthy amounts of vitamins C, A and B1. And ripe bananas are very easily digested.

When shopping, choose fruit which is firm and unblemished. Single bananas deteriorate more quickly, so if they're popular in your household, it's best to buy by the bunch. Bananas should ripen at room temperature — never in the refrigerator.

Fish baked in coconut

GLORIA OLSON'S BAKED FISH

The contributor of this recipe teaches cooking in Nashville, Tenn.

1½ cups light cream
1½ cups flaked coconut
2 tablespoons butter
1½ tablespoons cornstarch
1 teaspoon salt
6 fish fillets (cod, pompano, red snapper or turbot), about 2½ pounds

In a 2-quart saucepan stir together cream and coconut; bring to a boil over medium heat. Let stand off heat for 30 minutes; turn into a strainer to drain, pressing with back of spoon to extract as much liquid as possible. Discard coconut. In the clean dry saucepan melt butter over medium heat; stir in cornstarch and salt until blended. Off heat, gradually stir in coconut milk, keeping smooth. Over medium-low heat, stirring constantly, cook until sauce comes to a boil, thickens and boils 1 minute. Arrange fish in a buttered 13 by 9 by 2-inch baking dish; pour sauce over fillets. Bake in a preheated 350 degree oven 30 minutes or until golden and fish flakes easily. Makes 6 servings.

Alaska's Iditarod Sled Dog Race still 'Super Bowl of dog mushing'

By PAUL JENKINS
Associated Press Writer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Its distinction as the "Last Great Race on Earth" may be fading, but the punishing 1,200-mile Iditarod Sled Dog Race from Anchorage to Nome remains the Super Bowl of dog mushing.

On March 3, about 70 mushers, nine of them women, will start the grueling race to Front Street in Nome. They'll go through a thousand sled dogs and endure fatigue-enduced hallucinations, temperatures as low as 50 below and howling arctic winds — for 12 days and more — all for a $24,000 first prize and a shot at glory.

Nobody has ever died on the trail. Some say it's just luck.

For this 12th annual running of the dogs, racers will have paid $1,049 just to enter. Some people estimate, however, it costs $15,000 just to get equipped for such an ordeal. With prize money totaling only $100,000, the rewards may seem meager, but in Alaska, top dog mushers are superstars.

Just as more conventional sports heroes and heroines earn big bucks touting products in the Lower 48, Alaska dog drivers have endorsed everything from sleds, dog food and outdoor equipment to beer, instant drinks and oil companies.

Rick Swenson, an otherwise obscure gold miner, is a household name after winning the race four times.

Even the losers gain from taking part in the event. Canadian Larry "Cowboy" Smith is renowned for his blistering paces although he's never hit Nome first. Susan Butcher, always a top contender, inspires other women to dare as much.

The trail was etched into legend in 1925 when 20 mushers pushed for 127½ hours to relay diptheria vaccine 674 miles from Nenana to squelch an epidemic in Nome.

Barely a decade ago, the Iditarod was still seen by many as a extended camping trip. Now, says Rosemary Phillips, executive director for the Iditarod Trail Committee, "It's turned into a major competitive sporting event."

CBS is paying $55,000 for worldwide rights to film the frozen odyssey. Olympia Brewing Co. is paying at least $30,000 to have the name of its beer emblazoned on race banners and contestants' bibs.

At least 20 sponsors — including cities, airlines, banks, communications companies and real estate firms — have paid a minimum of $5,000 apiece in cash or services for the race, Ms. Phillips said.

The success of Iditarod has spawned at least one other long-distance race that this year begins in Fairbanks and ends at Whitehorse in Canada's Yukon Territory. Since Iditarod officials adopted rules requiring novice mushers to complete at least one 200-mile race before entering Iditarod, the mid-distance contests have been sprouting all over Alaska.

American film wins top Bear

From Wire Reports

WEST BERLIN — The American feature film "Love Streams" was awarded Tuesday the top Golden Bear prize of the 34th International West Berlin Film Festival.

The German feature film "Morgen in Alabama" (tomorrow in Alabama) directed by Norbert Kueckelmann was awarded a Silver Bear prize for "its successful cinematic portrayal of an acute problem of our times."

The jury also awarded a Silver Bear as a special prize to the Argentine feature film "Dirty War" directed by Hector Olivera.

Further Silver Bears were awarded to Italian director Ettore Scola for his film, "The Ball," and to Greek director Costas Ferris for his feature film, "Rembetiko." An actor's award went to the Italian actress Monica Vitti for her role in the film "Flirt," directed by the Italian Roberto Russo.

Albert Finney won a Silver Bear as best actor for his role in Peter Yates' British film, "The Dresser" while the best actress award went to the Soviet Union's Inna Churikova for her role in "Romance at the Front" directed by Pyotr Todorovsky.

The jury, chaired by Norwegian actress Liv Ullmann, awarded a special mention to Jean-Marie Straub and Daniele Huillet for their adaptation of Kafka's "Class Relations," which was a West German entry.

The Golden Bear for the best short film in the competition went to the Danish film "Bicycle Symphony" by Ake Sandgren.

A film from China, "The Fight Between the Snipe and the Mussel," directed by Hu Jinqing, won the Silver Bear in this category for its "extraordinary individual achievement."

Fonda makes appearance

NORTH MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Actress Jane Fonda says it was a "very personal decision" that prompted her to go to a department store that had canceled a promotional visit she planned.

Miss Fonda, 46, showed up Tuesday at a Burdines' outlet after the chain canceled appearances she had scheduled for today at two of its stores to promote her line of athletic wear.

Burdines acted in response to opposition from outspoken anti-communists and a weekend bomb scare at a south Miami store.

Spanish-language radio station WRHC urged its listeners to call Burdines and complain about appearances by a "reddish leftist" who visited Hanoi during the Vietnam War.

During her brief visit Tuesday, the actress said she was exercising "the right to free speech."

"I'm here because I want to promote support for my (exercise) clothing," said Miss Fonda, whose fitness books have sold in the millions worldwide.

Explorer undaunted by age, health problems

NORTH PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — For explorers, there are few hidden corners of the world unknown and unvisited by man, but Lewis Cotlow, the oldest of his breed, is making what he says may be his last journey into the unknown.

"At 86, every trip is my last trip," says the famous explorer who, for over 65 years, has traveled the seven continents in search of primitive cultures.

Wearing a pacemaker and despite one heart attack seven years ago and a cardiac arrest while playing golf in 1981, Cotlow is undaunted by his health problems and age as he plans this year's trek to eastern Malaysia. There, with members of the Circumnavigators Club of Singapore, he will visit the Dyaks, once a feared tribe of headhunters.

En route to this expedition, he will visit Greece, Sri Lanka, Andaman Island in the Bay of Bengal, Thailand, Singapore and Borneo.

He says, "I'm counting on the Cotlow luck," to carry him through the strenuous journey.

It was this "luck," says the retired New York insurance broker, that landed him a job with the U.S. Shipping Board in 1919, shortly after he was released from the U.S. Army, and started him on a life of travel and adventure.

"I didn't weigh much over 100 pounds and I became the government representative on a cargo vessel," he recalls. Thus began his first journey around the world.

Cotlow's good fortune carried him unscathed through 14 major expeditions including a 22,000-mile exploration of equatorial Africa. In 1978, at 80 years of age, he traveled to Antarctica.

He's carried the Explorers Club flag on 10 scientific missions — more than anyone else — and he's one of 40 men to win the club's prestigious Gold Medal. He shares that honor with such notables as astronaut Neil Armstrong and the late Lowell Thomas.

He has written five books, made five feature-length films and two shorts on his explorations. For years, he's lectured around the country.

Cotlow's affinity for people has earned him friendship with the Jivaro Indians of the Amazon, the small Pygmies and giant Watusis of Africa, the Colorado tribe of South America and primitive tribes of New Guinea.

"All my life, I've tried to reach the most primitive cultures in the world while they were pristine and before the 20th century caught up with them," he says. "There are so many beautiful things in this world, but there's nothing like a human being."

Cotlow has donated his artifacts collection, valued between $1 million and $3 million, to the Cincinnati Museum of Natural History, where Armstrong is board chairman.

When not traveling, he lives a sedate life here in an affluent area of Florida's Gold Coast with his wife, Charlotte, and their Himalayan cat.

Tax service brings in more business for diner owner

QUINCY, Mass. (AP) — Armand Guarante serves the eggs and Joseph J. Laprise specializes in the bacon at the Breakfast Nook, where customers are getting a two-in-one taxpayers' special through April 15.

Laprise is Guarante's accountant, and these days he's working on patrons' 1040 Forms while they eat.

"He's saving my customers a lot of money and bringing me extra business," Guarante, 72, the owner and short-order cook, said recently.

Skip Allen, 28, who works at the General Dynamics shipyard in Quincy, said he'll get an extra $200 tax refund this year after Laprise worked on his federal income tax return while he breakfasted in the diner.

Arthritis can go into remission

Dear Dr. Solomon: What is the possibility that a person who has rheumatoid arthritis will have it disappear? I have heard that this happens in some cases, and I would like to know how often. — Gil, Salem, Mass.

Dear Gil: The results of a study by Dr. Frederick Wolfe and Donna J. Hawley, of the University of Kansas School of Medicine in Wichita, should give you some idea of the possibility of remission. After reviewing the records of more than 500 patients with rheumatoid arthritis, they found that about 20 percent had remissions during a period of six and one-half years; the average length of remission was more than one year. The criteria for remission included such factors as the absence of joint pain, no joint tenderness or pain when moving, and morning stiffness lasting less than 15 minutes.

The age of the patient when he or she first experienced symptoms of rheumatoid arthritis was not an important factor affecting remission.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine has told me that what she hates most about her chemotherapy treatments is the fact that they cause her to lose some of her hair. This seems like a minor thing, but I'd like to know if there can't be something done about it. — Christine, Milton, Pa.

Dear Christine: I do not consider anything that affects the emotional well-being of any of my patients to be a "minor thing." Fortunately, at least some patients who must undergo chemotherapy can now be helped by either of two simple and relatively inexpensive methods of reducing hair loss. One involves decreasing the temperature of the scalp; the other is a form of scalp tourniquet.

Not all drugs used in the treatment of cancer cause hair loss. Since many patients receive combinations of drugs, however, the possibility of hair loss is increased.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Does sex have anything to do with whether a person gets rheumatoid arthritis? I'm not talking about sexual relations but does the fact that a person is a man or a woman make any difference in whether a person will get the disease? — Don, N.Y.C.

Dear Don: Women appear to be at a disadvatage when it comes to rheumatoid arthritis. According to Dr. Donald M. Mitchell and his associates at the Univesity of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, more than twice as many women as men develop rheumatoid arthritis. In addition, women are usually five years younger than men when the symptoms first appear, and they tend to have a more severe form of the disease.

For Leon, Schenectady, New York: According to Dr. John T. Sessions, Jr., of the University of North Carolina School of Medicine in Chapel Hill, about one-third of chronic abdominal pain has an emotional origin.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question write to Dr. Solomon, 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Laser used in detecting disease

From Wire Reports

HOUSTON — A device which uses lasers to take pictures of internal organs may help detect heart disease a decade before a patient is in danger of suffering a heart attack, an official at the University of Texas Health Science Center says.

Equipment at the Positron Diagnostic and Research Center is capable of showing doctors early stages of artery blockage, Dr. Lance Gould, the center's director, said.

"We hope to be able to detect heart disease five to 10 years ahead of time," Gould said in an interview. "All coronary disease can be reversed if we see it early enough. Most of the time, the ones we see now are advanced cases."

But with such early warning, doctors will be able to prescribe drugs to reverse heart disease "before something terrible happens," Gould said. "This is twice as sensitive as anything we currently have. We hope to make a major step forward in diagnosis."

The $10 million center is the only facility of its kind in Texas and the only one in the world capable of handling large numbers of patients, Gould said.

The center includes a cyclotron, tomographic camera and an imaging laboratory.

Although the three parts of the center rely on each other, the showpiece is the tomographic camera — a 6-foot-diameter doughnut-like circle of electronics that uses lasers to take pictures of a patient's organs, then feeds the images into a computer where doctors can view them in cross-section or from all sides just like holding the organ in one's hand.

A patient, injected with a cyclotron-produced tracer chemical to detect blood flow, lies on a belt-like platform that pulls him through the center of the "ring of detectors." The electronics literally shake up and down and from side to side, taking cross-section pictures of a heart or brain or kidney.

Wrong delivery fuels couple's anger

MAGNOLIA, N.J. (AP) — The number was right but the direction was wrong, and that left an elderly couple mopping up 85 gallons of fuel oil pumped into their cellar by mistake.

"The oil was supposed to go West and he came East," explained George Walton, who lives with his wife, Henrietta, at 122 E. Adams Ave. in Magnolia.

It was 122 W. Adams Ave. that the delivery man was seeking.

Mrs. Walton, 74, and her husband returned from a shopping trip Saturday to find the oily mess that saturated their cellar, front lawn and street. "They were going to evacuate the whole street," said Walton, 76.

The delivery man pumped the oil into an old pipe on the side of his home, said Walton,

Hart now in position to challenge Mondale

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Declaring "We have buried the label dark horse" in the New Hampshire presidential primary, Sen. Gary Hart is now in a race against time to overcome Walter F. Mondale's well-organized army of supporters in the South, Northeast and Midwest.

A confident and exhilarated Hart predicted late Tuesday that he will finish first or second in the flurry of presidential contests over the next two weeks where nearly a third of the delegates to the Democratic convention will be determined.

After that, Hart said, "I will go on to win this nomination."

Hart, appearing on NBC's "Today" show, said, "Instead of eight candidates going state to state, it is now two candidates going throughout the country."

Early this morning, Hart visited an electronics firm here, thanking workers for supporting him in New Hampshire. He was then flying to Denver where he scheduled a homecoming fund-raising rally.

To advance toward the nomination, Hart, 47, must challenge not only Mondale, but Sen. John Glenn in a series of critical primaries on Super Tuesday, March 13, in Florida, Georgia and Alabama, states where he has spent little time and has less organization.

AND IN BIG critical states like Florida, Pennsylvania and Illinois, he has been unable to sign up enough supporters to make him eligible to win a full slate of delegates.

In the Massachusetts primary he will battle not only Mondale but Sen. George McGovern, whose presidential campaign Hart managed in 1972.

Mondale is a sentimental favorite in Massachusetts, the only state to give its electoral votes to McGovern in 1972. Nonetheless, Hart and his campaign strategists believe that by pulling off a big upset in New Hampshire, they have punctured the belief that Mondale is the inevitable choice to challenge Ronald Reagan.

Whether they have or not, Hart is now facing the fruits of a change in Democratic Party rules under which primary elections and caucus selections are bunched up earlier than ever before.

In most states where Hart is short of delegate election slates, his supporters say that weakness will be overcome by going back later and picking up the delegates of other candidates who drop out, or by other end runs around state rules.

RECALLING HIS year as McGovern's campaign manager, Hart says, "We had all the same barriers in 1972 and we overcame all of them."

"This election is not going to be lost because of tactical ploys," he says.

Mondale has the endorsements of most of the major labor unions, including the AFL-CIO and National Education Association. Union members worked hard for the former vice president in New Hampshire.

Yet, exit polls take by NBC and other television networks showed that Mondale and Hart split the labor vote, with Hart winning a majority among younger union voters.

In the closing days before the election, Hart has hit hard at Mondale's role as former President Jimmy Carter's vice president.

"I will not have to defend the record of recent past Democratic administrations," Hart said.

Hart's goal now is to raise enough money to afford television advertising time in the South, and to move quickly to establish a sizable staff and volunteer force in Massachusetts and Washington state, where he hopes to appeal as a western senator interested in environmental issues.

AFTER HIS visit to Denver, Hart on Thursday will sweep through Florida, Georgia and Alabama in a direct challenge to Mondale's long-established campaign in those states.

A crowd of about 500 overjoyed supporters heard Hart say Tuesday night, "We do not have endorsements, we do not have the most money, we do not have standing in the national opinion polls, but that will come."

Although he finished first in New Hampshire, Hart said, "I am not ready to claim the position as the frontrunner, but I know we have buried the label dark horse."

Hart's victory in New Hampshire was the result of a converging number of factors.

His campaign was run by Jeanne Shaheen and Susan Casey, veteran political organizers who called in hundreds of volunteers, mainly college students who canvassed the state to build support for Hart.

Glenn's weak finish in the Iowa caucuses nine days ago gave Hart an opening which had not been anticipated.

"I am surpised at how quickly Glenn has fallen," Hart said earlier this week.

Sen. Alan Cranston announces his withdrawal from the presidential race in an early morning news conference today. He says that he will continue to battle against the threat of nuclear weapons, a main issue in his campaign.

Cranston quits race after poor showing in New Hampshire

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Sen. Alan Cranston quit the race for the Democratic presidential nomination today after a disappointing seventh place finish in the New Hampshire primary, claiming credit for raising "the nuclear consciousness of all the Democratic candidates and of the American people."

Cranston, the first man to enter the race more than a year ago, said, "I know the difference between reality and dreams. I know when to dream and how to count votes."

Cranston, whose campaign was conducted on a slogan of "peace and jobs," finished in fourth place in the lead-off Iowa caucuses last week before fizzling out to the next-to-the-last spot in New Hampshire Tuesday.

He told an early-morning news conference that he was about $1 million in debt from the campaign, but added that "it will not be a major problem" to pay off the debts.

At the news conference, attended by several aides and teary-eyed supporters, Cranston spoke not of defeat, but of shifting gears and a "change (in) tactics" on the peace issue.

"I believe I have helped raise the nuclear consciousness of all the Democratic candidates and of the American people," he said before flying home to California.

"And I have helped make the nuclear danger a centerpiece of the indictment against Ronald Reagan, which we Democrats will present to the American people this fall."

"I shall continue to push with all the force of my being the urgency of arms control and the defeat of Ronald Reagan. I shall not let up the pressure on either my fellow Democrats or on our adversary in the White House."

He declined to analyze his poor finishes and said he does not intend to make any immediate endorsement in the presidential race.

Cranston, 69 and the No. 2 Democrat in the Senate, said he would seek a new term when his third one expries in 1986. He scheduled news conferences later in the day in Los Angeles and San Francisco in what amounted to the beginning of that campaign.

He entered the presidential campaign early, and stunned the political pundits when he defeated former vice president Walter F. Mondale in a straw poll in Wisconsin in June. The poll itself was meaningless in terms of national convention delegates, but it created momentum for Cranston and his peace-oriented campaign.

But, by the time Iowans went to their caucuses, the momentum had long since dissipated and the Californian finished behind not only Mondale, but also Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, who won the New Hampshire primary, and former Sen. George McGovern.

Aides to Cranston said they believe McGovern's late entry into the race and his appeal to Iowans not to throw away their conscience damaged the Californian's showing in the state.

These aides said Cranston had considered withdrawing from the race a week ago, but decided to stay in until New Hampshire voted.

He had insisted even on Monday that he was in the race to stay no matter what, but his aides spread the word that a poor showing in New Hampshire would be the end.

Another candidate who fared poorly in New Hampshire, former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew, went to bed Tuesday night without declaring his intention to remain in the race.

Askew said he would fly home, adding that he would decide his plans by Friday.

Volcker: Deficits must decrease quickly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker pressed Congress today to reduce federal budget deficits quickly to avoid a risky "atmosphere of crisis" over the nation's economic future.

Volcker, testifying before the Senate Budget Committee, said decisions on how to reduce deficits projected at $200 billion or more a year "are not within the competence of the Federal Reserve."

"I can only urge that they be faced sooner rather than later before we are enveloped with an atmosphere of crisis in financial markets and elsewhere," he said.

He added, "Much has been achieved in these last few years to put the economy on a sounder footing — too much at too great a cost to see it all jeopardized now.

"The risks arise mainly from our own actions or inactions. The amounts required to make a real difference — to bring the trend of deficits under control are surely not beyond reach."

Earlier this week, Volcker had said deficit reductions of $50 billion a year might well be necessary to keep a balanced national recovery going for more than a relatively short period of time.

Barring deficit reduction action, he said, "at some unknown point the sustainability of the expansion itself would be jeopardized."

As Volcker spoke, the Senate Finance Committee was proceeding with its work to flesh out details of a plan to lop about $100 billion from the deficits over three years. It agreed Tuesday on about $12 billion of the package, including some $10 billion worth of tax increases on corporations and investors.

Across Capitol Hill, the House Ways and Means Committee was beginning its own deficit-cutting work, starting with a Democratic proposal to raise taxes by about $51 billion over three years.

Meanwhile, White House and congressional negotiators say they are not ready to end their talks despite a lack of progress in efforts to wash away about $100 billion of the deficit over three years.

The deficit hit a record $195.4 billion in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, a staggering amount that has prompted economists inside and outside government to issue warnings about the harm deficits of that magnitude pose for the economy.

The winning combination of spending cuts and tax increases has eluded the White House and congressional negotiators who made little, if any, progress Tuesday in putting together a deficit-reduction package.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the administration has "not yet abandoned hope," but he expressed disappointment that the Democrats were insisting on focusing on the most contentious budget issues.

House Democratic Leader Jim Wright said he, too, wasn't "willing to throw in the towel." But, he said, "I guess what it all comes down to is that anything that's done is going to have to be done by the Congress."

Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, said it might be a good to recess the sessions for a week or so and let the congressional process work. "We are not getting anywhere," he said.

The talks apparently have snagged over the touchy issues of defense spending cuts and tax increases.

The administration turned down a proposal put forth by Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., last week to pare the growth in military spending by 5 percent, after inflation, in the upcoming 1985 fiscal year, falling to smaller amounts in the next two years. Reagan's proposed budget recommends increases in defense spending authority of 9.2 percent in 1986 and 3.5 percent in 1987.

Governors oppose toxic wastes' burning

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Governors' Association says it is "unacceptable to states" for the federal government to allow the burning of toxic wastes in the Gulf of Mexico before regulations are developed to control such burning.

The association on Tuesday criticized as "inappropriate" an Environmental Protection Agency proposal to issue, without regulations, permits for two large incineration ships to operate about 200 miles off the Texas Gulf Coast.

The project would be the first large-scale commercial disposal on incineration ships of toxic wastes generated in the United States. The EPA is also considering approving ocean incineration sites in the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans.

In a policy position sponsored by Texas Gov. Mark White and adopted by a voice vote, the governors' association said that before issuing permits the EPA should adopt "comprehensive standards and criteria" for such incineration.

It also said the government should spell out the liability of ship operators for damage from accidents, conduct additional studies of the incineration process and develop comprehensive plans to deal with accidents involving incineration ships.

White said in an interview he was concerned about the "potential for poisoning" the Gulf of Mexico.

He said the NGA proposals "would make them be even more careful" about allowing such incineration and that "I think it's important that they not rush to pollute the Gulf of Mexico."

The EPA said last fall that it had tentatively decided to issue permits to Chemical Waste Management Inc. of Oak Brook, Ill., and Ocean Combustion Service BV of the Netherlands for two ships to begin incineration in the Gulf of toxic wastes, including PCBs and low concentrations of dioxin.

A Scandinavian Airlines DC-10 rests with its nose in a creek after skidding off a runway on landing Tuesday at New York's Kennedy International Airport. Nine out of the 177 people aboard sought medical treatment after the mishap, but no serious injuries were reported.

Jet's passengers 'didn't have time to be scared' after mishap

NEW YORK (AP) — Passengers on a Scandinavian Airlines jumbo jet that slid off a wet runway and into a 12-foot-deep creek say they "didn't have time to be scared" — so they calmly jumped out doors, slid down chutes and swam or rafted to safety.

"We just got in the life raft and paddled like crazy with our arms," said passenger John Marriage of Sydney, Australia, one of the 177 people evacuated from the plane Tuesday at Kennedy Airport.

Flight 901 was carrying 163 passengers and a crew of 14 from Stockholm, Sweden, via Oslo, Norway, when the DC-10 landed in drizzle and fog and skidded into the murky water up to its engines.

Despite the potential for disaster, only 10 minor injuries were reported, officials said.

Airline spokesman Herb Bauer said the cause of the accident "was most likely hydroplaning" — skidding on a wet surface. The National Transportation Safety Board was sending a team of investigators to the scene, and an airport official said the jet would not be pulled out of the muck for two or three days.

Some passengers said they jumped from a front door and swam to safety. Others escaped by sliding down rubber emergency chutes into life rafts, or walking on a wing and climbing down a ladder, said spokesman Tom Young of the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which operates the airport.

George Alther of Detroit said he noticed something was wrong just after the plane touched down. "He (the pilot) tried to brake. He tried harder and harder. We crashed. We saw water splashing at the windows," he said.

"Actually, it landed quite smoothly, but then there was a lot of confusion," said Solveig Sellstrom, 21, of Stockholm. "The flight attendants were yelling, 'Sit down, fasten your seat belts.' Other flight attendants were yelling, 'Get out of the plane, get out of the plane.'"

"The crew panicked more than the passengers," Marriage said. "We didn't have time to be scared."

Clayton Wentworth, 72, of Atherton, Calif., said he swam 20 feet, climbed up on a wing, then walked to a nearby pier.

Kentucky apartment fire kills seven, including five children

NEWPORT, Ky. (AP) — Fire swept through a three-story apartment building Tuesday night, killing seven people — including five children — in one of the worst blazes in city history, authorities said.

Three people were treated at St. Luke Hospital for smoke inhalation, shock and frostbite as they fled into the blowing snow with temperatures in the low 20s. The wind-chill factor at the time was zero degrees.

"In my 26 years as a firefighter, this is the largest number of people to die in a fire in Newport," said Fire Chief Ralph Quitter.

The dead were identified as Sarah Farmer, 32; her four children, Shawnda, 5; Michael, 3; Steven, 2; and Jamie, 1; Anna Lee Dean, 21; and her 8-month-old child, who was not identified.

The building had a fire escape that had been added to the building recently but the victims did not use it, Quitter said.

Convicted murderer executed

ANGOLA, La. (AP) — Convicted murderer Johnny Taylor Jr. was executed in Louisiana's electric chair early Wednesday, becoming the second prisoner to be put to death in the state in less than three months.

Taylor was pronounced dead at 12:16 a.m. CST by Dr. Alfred Gould, said Warden Ross Maggio Jr.

As the electricity surged through his body, two wisps of smoke curled from below Taylor's left knee, where the electrode was attached.

Judge upholds nudity law

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A judge has upheld the conviction of a 24-year-old woman who challenged the state's nude sunbathing laws after being charged with topless jogging.

Belinda McGuire was convicted of indecent exposure Jan. 6, 1983, after jogging topless at MacArthur State Park, and appealed on grounds that state laws are vague.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD WANT AD
1. IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your advertisement with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment or room for rent or property for sale, it's better to start your advertisement with the location.
2. BE CLEAR. Readers react more quickly and favorably when given complete or definite information. One of the most important considerations of any advertisement is to include the price.
3. MAKE IT EASY for the reader/prospect to reach you. ALWAYS INSERT your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time to have prospects contact you.
4. THE GREATEST READER RESPONSE can be secured for your advertisement by using consecutive insertions. Play safe. The thrifty 15 day plan is best and costs less per insertion. There are also special monthly rates for those who want to keep their name and offers before the public each and every day. Cancel when you get results, the charge will be the rate earned at the time of cancellation.
5. PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you would like to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good classified ad.
6. CLASSIFIED READERS ARE already interested in buying used or new merchandise. These people have the money and are in the market to buy. Give them every advantage you can with good ad copy.
7. WANT ADS THAT FAIL do so not through any lack of readership, but because they are often quickly worded and do not contain enough information to get prompt action.
8. TO PLACE YOUR ADVERTISEMENT in The Midland Reporter-Telegram, where you reach the active Classified market,
