Commissioners cancel vote on jail

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The $9.9 million Midland County Jail certificates-of-obligation election, set for Feb. 2, was cancelled Monday by the Midland County Commissioners' Court to "better inform" the electorate on the jail issues.

The commissioners did not re-set the election.

The cancellation came after Charlie Welch, a former commissioner and a member of the Committee of Concerned Voters, requested the postponement so that "all interested parties may be fully informed and shall have adequate time to further study the jail requirements" for Midland County.

"It is our opinion that the election should be delayed for approximately 90 days beyond the Feb. 2 date," said Welch, who was a stand-in for committee spokesman Bill Williams. Williams, a Midland businessman, was snowbound in Dallas.

Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig later said, "We (commissioners) concur" with the committee's request to give the electorate more time to be enlightened on the pros and cons of the jail proposals, "and we acceded to their request."

Welch, who served on the Commissioners' Court from 1969 until 1983, said the committee doesn't intend to alienate the commissioners.

"WE WANT TO RESOLVE this jail issue in a reasonable, cooperative manner that will please the voters of Midland County," he said.

In addition, Welch said he would request the Midland Chamber of Commerce chair a "work-study committee" to probe into the jail issues. He suggested the committee be composed of representatives of the Committee of Concerned Voters, the Commissioners' Court, the law enforcement community and the chamber.

"We hope they (the chamber's executive board) are going to accept the job," Welch said.

Were the jail election held Feb. 2, it would be defeated, Welch speculated.

"No one believes that the election would pass," he said, "because there's too much question that we need this new jail." Welch also said he didn't believe the cancellation of the Feb. 2 election "would kill" the impetus behind the proposed new jail. "I think it was stillborn anyway."

Any study of the jail should employ "1985 figures" in terms of costs, prisoners and other data. "We need to be sure that we're using 1985 figures and not prior years," he said.

Williams today said he hopes any chamber-led study would be "very productive for the taxpayers.

"The cancellation of the election didn't solve our problems," Williams noted. He said the jail issue has to be resolved in the best interest of the taxpayers and the Midland County Jail inmates.

"LET'S PUT IT behind us," Williams said of the jail issue, adding he would like to see recommendations from any chamber-led committee within 30 days.

Williams speculated that some of the commissioners are wary of passage of a jail election, although "they might believe in a $10 million jail."

The Committee of Concerned Voters has proposed the existing jail on the fifth floor of the 1929-30 vintage downtown courthouse be upgraded — if possible — to conform with rules and regulations of the Texas Commission on Jail Standards and with federal requirements.

Drilling fee hike proposal creating stir

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Oil/Business Editor

A proposed 10-fold increase in the drilling fee is not expected to curtail the number of wells actually drilled, but it does leave some oil and gas operators in a perturbed mood.

Gov. Mark White is expected today to propose to the State Legislature that the Texas Railroad Commission fee for drilling an oil or gas well be increased from $100 to $1,000.

"I don't think it should be done," said Ed Thompson, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. "It's just one more nail in the coffin — one less incentive to drill. We will not sit idly by and let this happen."

A source close to the governor said White was a friend of the oil industry, but the fee increase was being proposed to forestall pressure for an increase in the state severance tax.

Said the source, "I had much rather have a fee of this nature to help on the state budget than to have a severance tax, and I think the rest of the industry would too. There is tremendous pressure on the governor to enact a severance tax. Texas enjoys a rate of ¼ percent on its severance tax, but all around us it is much higher in other producing states."

White has repeatedly informed the legislature that he will veto any increase in the severance tax.

Randall Bailey, vice president of Alta Energy Corp., said he did not think the proposed increase would have any effect on the number of wells drilled, but could dramatically decrease the number of wells permitted.

Belgian leader waffles on NATO missile deployment

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — In the first test of allied unity following U.S.-Soviet arms talks in Geneva, President Reagan has failed to win a commitment from a hesitant West European ally on moving forward this spring with the deployment of a new generation of nuclear missiles.

Following two hours of talks with President Reagan on Monday, Belgian Prime Minister Wilfried Martens said his coalition government will wait until March to decide whether it will accept its share of the NATO missiles on Belgian soil.

Although the actual deployment was scheduled to begin in March, Martens told reporters "We will make a decision in March after consultation with our NATO allies."

The prime minister denied reports he had told President Reagan that he would delay the basing of the missiles until after the U.S.-Soviet arms negotiations are begun. "We never declared that," Martens said.

The first of Belgium's share of the 572 NATO medium-range missiles were scheduled to be deployed by mid-March. A delay of Belgium's decision to base the missiles signals a possible erosion in allied solidarity that the United States had not counted upon.

"You can deploy in two days if that's the problem. But that's not the problem. The problem is what the timetable will be," Martens told reporters at a briefing Monday night.

Martens said that it was a misunderstanding to think that Belgium is committed to begin deployment in March. "There is no automatism," he said, adding that he had made the situation plain to Reagan.

Martens would not say if Reagan had shared the "misunderstanding."

"I explained it very clearly - in English," he said.

Reagan reportedly told Martens a united NATO is needed to strengthen America's hand in the upcoming U.S.-Soviet arms talks and that the United States expects Belgium will keep its promise to uphold the 1979 NATO agreement to put a new generation of missiles in Western Europe.

The new weapons are part of an arsenal being deployed in five NATO countries to counter Soviet medium-range SS-20s aimed at Western Europe. The alliance decided to go ahead with basing the weapons unless the superpowers reached an arms control settlement.

Earlier this month, the United States and the Soviet Union agreed to resume arms talks.

The issue has become a political hot potato in Belgium with some arguing that the deployment should be delayed to await the outcome of the talks. Because Martens faces new elections by December, he has been urged to delay the basing decision until then in order to help his re-election chances.

When asked whether Belgium's failure to deploy on schedule would hurt U.S. negotiations with Soviets, a senior Reagan administration official replied: "Of course it would."

Wilfried Nartus, the political counselor of the Belgian Embassy in Washington, said the Belgium government had made "no decision to delay deployment."

He said Belgian officials were looking at "different timetables" and that their share of the missiles might be deployed after March. That position was laid out in Martens' session with Reagan, Nartus said.

Leftists claim car bombing of U.S. Army building in Brussels

Associated Press

BRUSSELS, Belgium — An extreme leftist group claimed responsibility for a car bomb explosion today that heavily damaged a U.S. Army support building less than a mile from NATO headquarters.

Police said two U.S. military police guards were slightly injured by flying glass from the bombing, the eighth in Belgium in four months.

In a communique received by the Brussels daily Le Soir, the Cellules Communistes Combattantes (Fighting Communist Cells) linked itself a West Germany terrorist group and warned of further actions that could "wound or kill Yankee military and their accomplices."

The 3,300-word French-language statement said: "We dedicate our attack to the fighters of the (West German terrorist group) Red Army Faction who struggle today, by means of a collective hunger strike, against the detention-extermination conditions in special jails" in West Germany.

In recent months, the two groups have claimed responsibility for a series of bomb attacks against NATO-related targets in Belgium and West Germany. These attacks caused significant property damage but no serious injuries.

Police said today's car bomb exploded at 3:30 a.m. inside a small passenger car parked in front of the three-story building, on the eastern edge of Brussels. The blast blew out all the windows in the building, wrecked its entrance hall and shattered windows in a 300-foot radius.

A U.S. official at NATO said the building served as a "a support facility run by the U.S. Army and provides social facilities for U.S. Armed forces personnel."

It also houses offices of the NATO-SHAPE Support Group which administers social programs for U.S. military personnel and their dependents throughout Belgium. SHAPE stands for Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers in Europe, NATO's chief European military command.

The building included classrooms, a basketball court, a library, a cafetria and a small commissary.

In addition, it houses the offices of the U.S. Benelux Contracting Directorate, which handles contracts for services and goods the U.S. Army obtains locally, and the U.S. Defense Investigative Service, which provides security clearance for outsiders involved in military contracts and who need to see classified documents.

Earlier Belgian bombing targets included the offices of Western defense contractors, a conservative party study center, the regional office of Prime Minister Wilfried Martens' Christian Democratic Party in Ghent, a NATO transmission tower and the alliance's emergency fuel pipeline system in Belgium.

Former Texas governor Allan Shivers dies

By RUTH RENDON
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Allan Shivers, who was governor of Texas longer than anyone and was one of the state's most influential and respected politicians, has died of a heart attack at the age of 77.

Shivers, who was governor from 1949 to 1957, was taken from his downtown office to Seton Medical Center about 5:30 p.m. CDT Monday and died an hour later, said Diana Resnik, director of community affairs for the hospital.

A daughter-in-law, Robin Shivers, said the former Democratic governor was in good physical condition and had not had previous heart ailments or other illnesses.

Shivers, who led the "Shivercrats" in backing Republican Dwight D. Eisenhower for president three decades ago, was praised by present and former state leaders for his strides in mental health, education and highway programs.

A senior chairman of InterFirst Bank in Austin, Shivers had attended a late-afternoon board meeting before he was stricken, said George Christian, a political consultant and friend of Shivers.

"Texas has lost one of its most dedicated public servants, respected by friends and adversaries alike. I will miss contact with the good friend I had in Allan Shivers," Gov. Mark White said.

Shivers, a Lufkin native, was elected to the Texas Senate at the age of 26, the youngest ever to hold that office. As senator, he represented Jefferson, Hardin, Liberty and Orange counties.

His political career was interrupted by service in the Army in Europe during World War II.

In 1946, Shivers was elected lieutenant governor and succeeded Gov. Beauford Jester, who died in July 1949 after both began that second terms.

Texas voters then elected Shivers to three straight terms in 1950, 1952 and 1954. He was the first to be elected for three full terms. Price Daniel (1956, 1958, 1960) and John Connally (1962, 1964, 1966) also were elected to three terms.

The National Weather Service forecast includes precipitation in most areas of the country.

Temperatures in 30s, 40s keep wintry feel in Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

Winter will continue to be felt in the Midland area as forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport are calling for partly cloudy skies and lows in the mid-30s tonight warming to highs in the middle 40s Wednesday. Winds tonight are expected to be from the southwest at five to 15 mph, shifting to the northwest at midnight and continuing through Wednesday at 20 to 25 mph and gusty.

Monday's high of 42 was 37 degrees below the record set in 1953. This morning's low was 17 degrees above the record of 6 set in 1972.

STATE

A few thundershowers in far South Texas were the state's only inclement weather early today, but a few reminders from last weekend's snowstorm still remained.

A travelers' advisory was issued for the Permian Basin around Midland, because of roads that remained icy.

A few thundershowers moved into the lower valley from northern Mexico this morning. Clouds blanketed the southern tip of the state and extended northeastward through the coastal plains to the middle Texas coast.

Scattered high cloudiness streaked the skies of Central Texas while the northern half of the state was mostly clear.

A ridge of high pressure extended from eastern Oklahoma southwestward into Central Texas. The ridge was shifting slowly eastward as a low pressure trough developed across Northwest Texas and eastern New Mexico.

Light north winds were reported across the eastern half of Texas while the developing low pressure trough produced southwest winds of 5 to 15 miles an hour in West Texas. Temperatures early this morning were in the 20s across the north with 30s in the central section and 40s in the south.

The extremes were 23 degrees at Amarillo and 45 degrees at McAllen.

For today, the National Weather Service said far South Texas would be cloudy with a chance of showers. Elsewhere, it should be partly cloudy and not quite as cool elsewhere. Afternoon temperatures were expected to range from the upper 40s to the upper 50s.

NATION

Warnings of bitter cold, with wind chills of 60 below zero, and foot-deep snow were posted today for parts of the Great Lakes and Ohio Valley regions.

A heavy snow warning for 8 inches to a foot of snow was in effect across extreme northeast Ohio and northwest Pennsylvania.

A travelers' warning for up to 3 inches of snow was posted for the western two-thirds of Pennsylvania. Snow-prompted travelers' warnings also were issued in Indiana, Michigan and New York.

Brazilian electors choose Neves

By BRUCE HANDLER
Associated Press Writer

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Opposition leader Tancredo Neves, a 74-year-old centrist politician who has pledged to "change Brazil," today was elected the nation's first civilian president in 21 years.

The Electoral College gave Neves, an opposition party leader, the 344th of its 686 votes after nearly two hours of voting, guaranteeing his victory. News media predicted Neves' final total would be close to 500.

Neves, who in 50 years of politics has held offices ranging from city councilman to prime minister, defeated Congressman Paulo Maluf, 53, candidate of the military-backed party.

Celebrations immediately began in South America's most populous country. Outside the twin-domed Congress building where the election took place, thousands of Neves backers cheered, ignited firecrackers and honked car horns. They waved green-and-yellow Brazilian flags and chanted "Tancredo, Tancredo, Tancredo!"

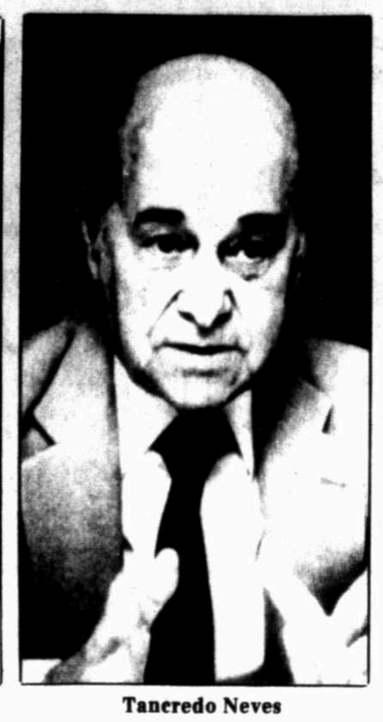

Neves watched the election on a special television screen in a congressional meeting room and prepared his acceptance speech.

Even before the voting started, Maluf made a conciliatory statement. He said he felt "victorious," because "my candidacy helped redemocratize Brazil."

President Gen. Joao Figueiredo, 67, author of a plan to gradually phase out military rule in Brazil, followed the voting from a hospital bed in Rio de Janeiro, where he was recovering from a back operation.

Paulo Salim Maluf

Tancredo Neves

The presidential press office said Figueiredo would come Wednesday to Brasilia, the capital, "to congratulate the winner."

Neves is to take office March 15, for a six-year term, ending a string of generals who have ruled Brazil since a right-wing military coup in 1964. The president-elect has promised to promote direct elections for his successor.

Both candidates promised to restore presidential elections by popular vote of the nation's 134 million people. Among the staggering problems facing the winner are a foreign debt of more than $100 billion, inflation running at about 220 percent annually and high unemployment.

Pro-Neves committees set up large television screens in downtown plazas in major cities such as Rio de Janeiro, Sao Paulo and Belo Horizonte so people in the street could watch electors step forward to a microphone in the Congress building and announce their vote.

The Electoral College consists of federal senators and congressmen elected in open voting in 1962, plus representatives of the majority party in each of Brazil's 23 states.

Today is not a holiday, but neighborhood clubs and bars throughout the country advertised celebrations, including "Tancre-dances" and samba festivals called "Good Morning, Democracy" parties.

Neves was the candidate of the Brazilian Democratic Movement Party, but had strong support from dissidents from Maluf's Social Democratic Party, the government's party.

Maluf's party holds a 35-seat majority in the Electoral College, but those disenchanted with their standard bearer helped put Neves over the top.

Neves appeared briefly on Monday at his Brasilia campaign headquarters where he was hugged by staff members.

Maluf told his supporters as the campaign drew to a close: "There's no use crying over spilled milk. I'd do everything the same way again."

In the halls of Congress, where the Electoral College votes, politicians on Monday wore Neves lapel buttons, Neves campaign workers sold "Tancredo Now" T-shirts and feminist groups carried Neves banners.There was no Maluf campaign material in sight.

Neves has promised to "change Brazil," and special interest groups from all oalks of Brazilian life looked toward him to come through on his pledges.

Cancellation prompts health inquiries

MOSCOW — A meeting of Soviet bloc leaders scheduled for this week in Bulgaria has been postponed, fueling speculation about the health of Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko.

The 73-year-old Chernenko, who is believed to suffer from emphysema, was to have presided over the Warsaw Pact meeting in Sofia. The visit to the Bulgarian capital would have been his first trip abroad since becoming Soviet leader in February 1984.

The surprise announcement of the postponement was made by the official Soviet news agency Tass and carried in Moscow newspapers today. It said: "By mutual agreement, the regular meeting of the political consultative committee of Warsaw Treaty member states, scheduled for mid-January 1985, has been postponed till a later date which is to be agreed."

No further explanation was given.

Western diplomats in Moscow had expected the Warsaw Pact leaders to review last week's U.S.-Soviet meeting in Geneva and discuss the Soviet stand in planned arms control talks with the United States.

Chernenko, who during recent speeches has appeared to have breathing difficulties, was last seen in public Dec. 27 in a television broadcast showing him presenting awards to Soviet writers. On Dec. 22, he appeared to have difficulty walking while viewing the body of Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov.

Chernenko did not attend Ustinov's funeral in Red Square on Dec. 24, a day of bitter sub-zero cold.

A Soviet official said then that Chernenko "seems to have taken ill." Western diplomats speculated Chernenko's doctors had advised him not to attend the funeral.

In Sofia, officials of Bulgaria's Foreign Ministry had set up a press center at a hotel to issue accreditations to dozens of foreign journalists who arrived Monday for the summit, but they refused to discuss whether or when it would take place.

Bulgarian's state-run BTA news agency had announced the meeting in a dispatch Dec. 27. It did not specify a date, but the summit was widely expected to be held today and Wednesday.

A Western diplomat in Moscow who spoke on condition he not be identified said he knew of no reason for the sudden postponement of the meeting.

"All I can give you is speculation to do with somebody's health or with some kind of Warsaw Pact disagreement, but that would be anybody's guess," the diplomat said.

Another Western diplomat said, "I haven't heard anything explicit about Chernenko being ill. It seems illness could be defined as whether one can make a trip or not."

The lead item on the national evening television news Monday was about a foreword written by Chernenko to a book of his writings just published in Poland.

U.S. Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., is scheduled to visit Moscow this week and has reportedly asked to meet with Chernenko, but there has been no word on how his request was received. Hart was a contender for the Democratic presidential nomination and a strong supporter of a nuclear freeze.

Judge won't cry foul over cries from fowl

By JOEL SIEGEL

HARRISBURG, Pa. — A dissonant opera of cackling geese, crowing roosters and testy leghorns sounded good to Bruno Bortner, a judge at the 69th Pennsylvania State Farm Show.

It meant the return of live poultry to the annual fair following a devastatng avian flu outbreak that forced the destruction of more than 15 million turkeys and chickens in Pennsylvania.

"You didn't hear the crowing" last year, Bortner said Monday, the second day of the fair. "I watched the cattle judging and the draft-horse judging. But it all seemed rather empty without the chickens."

Although the East Exhibition Hall at the Farm Show's sprawling 11-acre complex is again filled with feathers, the flu continues to be a source of concern among poultry producers, especially since the disease reappeared in a flock of Maryland birds less than three weeks ago.

"Sure they're uneasy; you'd expect them to be," said Herbert Siegel, professor of poultry science at Penn State University. "They had a pretty rough go last year."

"We thought we were out of the woods, but now we have this to contend with. Hopefully, it can be contained," said Bortner, a York County poultry producer.

The federal government spent $63 million fighting the disease, which also required the destruction of 1.9 million birds in New Jersey, Maryland and Virginia.

A series of quarantines, eventually covering 5,500 square miles, limited the movement of poultry and forced officials to cancel last year's live poultry exhibits at the Farm Show right down to the chicks hatching in an incubator and the tiny ducklings splashing in a small pond.

Poultry featured in the Farm Show, billed as the largest indoor agricultural exposition in the United States, usually are show birds rather than egg-producers or birds raised for the dinner table.

While the specialty producers lost few birds to the outbreak, their flocks were under the same quarantine and they faced the same worries.

At this year's fair, officials have taken special precautions with the more than 1,700 live birds on display.

The state Agriculture Department required blood tests for all birds in the show and urged farmers to keep away from one other's flocks.

As always, a state veterinarian has been on duty, ready to remove any bird showing signs of sickness, said David Kradel, the state's chief of avian health.

"If we had felt there was a significant risk, we wouldn't have given the public a poultry show," Kradel said.

"I don't think it's a coincidence that this year we had the poultry back and the biggest attendance ever for an opening day," Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell said Monday. Agriculture officials expect 500,000 people at the fair before it closes Friday.

"The poultry industry represents something like $600 million or $700 million (in business). The avian flu had the potential to wipe out the entire industry, to wipe out our export markets," Hallowell said. "It is important to let everyone know that the poultry industry is back again."

JAIL

Among other proposals, Williams has suggested the jail's northwest quadrant (the bull-pen area) be converted to cell space and that a fenced-in exercise area be built on the top of the courthouse.

The proposed new jail, which would be designed to hold up to 300 inmates, would be constructed on a seven-acre tract near the Midland County Exhibit Building. The existing jail, added to the courthouse in the early 1970s under a $1.95 million bond election, has room for 101 inmates but, due to classification of prisoners, legally can hold about 85 inmates.

IN OTHER BUSINESS, the commissioners:

—Noted the Midland County Public Library would be closed for repairs of natural gas leaks. The library is to be reopened Wednesday.

—Considered Sheriff Gary Painter's request for approval of a volunteer Reserve Deputy Force. "It would be very beneficial," Painter said. "You would have additional manpower yet you would not incur the cost" of hiring deputies. He said those on the force, which likely would include former law enforcement officers, would be made up of "civic-minded and civic-spirited" people who would serve at the will of the sheriff.

The reserve force would be state-certified as law enforcement officers. Painter said the reserve deputies, who would serve at his call and usually in concert with regular deputies, would buy their own uniforms and weapons, would not be paid and would be schooled and trained at a "minimal" expense to the county.

"It's going to be minimal," noted Commissioner Durward Wright, who suggested that no expense would be better.

"I'm sure receptive to the idea," said Craig.

Commissioner Win Brown suggested the county get an Attorney General's opinion on any liability the county might incur in sanctioning a reserve deputy force.

—Discussed again the proposal that a storefront library be set up in Midland Park Mall but took no action.

—Approved a resolution which commended the National League of Families for its "untiring efforts to learn the truth about our brave men whose fate remains unknown" in the Vietnam War.

The resolution asked the people of Midland County to write letters to the President, their congressmen and representatives of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam at the United Nations" in "seeking an accounting of our MIAs and the return of any who remain alive.

OIL

"Many firms will permit far more wells than they intend to drill for promotional reasons," said Bailey. "They stake the wells then go and try to raise the money to drill them. We may see less of that, but I don't think it will keep a well that needs to be drilled from being drilled.

Texas Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace has gone on record as saying he is opposed to the increased fee. "The oil and gas industry is already a heavily burdened industry," he said.

Snowstorm costly for South

AUSTIN (AP) — While the weekend's snow fall may have been fun for some, the snow left Austin and 10 surrounding counties with a bill of about $150,000.

Jimmy Hefner, an administrative assistant for the state highway department, said crews worked 3,965 hours overtime at a cost of $45,000 to clear roads of the 4 inches of snow that hit Central Texas over the weekend.

The storm was the second of its kind in 10 days.

"We don't have any figures yet on how much fuel — gasoline and diesel — was used," he said. "But that will mount up, too."

In Travis County, the highway department used 20 crews to spread 1,100 tons of sand and salt on slick bridges, overpasses and streets. The cost of the sand and salt totalled $10,000, Hefner said.

Leon Barba, spokesman for the city's Street and Bridge Department, said the costs for his department were still being added but expected the figure to be between $20,000 and $50,000.

Cold wave kills at least 12 in Monterrey

By CAM ROSSIE
Associated Press Writer

MONTERREY, Mexico — A major cold wave that swept through northern Mexico Saturday has been blamed for at least 12 deaths in Monterrey alone, most of them children. But authorities on Monday predicted a break in the chill.

The northern states of Tamaulipas, Nuevo Leon, Coahuila and Chihuahua were hit hardest by the rare freeze, which sent temperatures plummeting to a low of 7 degrees Fahrenheit (-14 Celsius).

Nuevo Leon, a citrus-producing state, was hit hard last year by a similar cold wave. Temperatures fell to 28 degrees Fahrenheit (-2 Celsius) and destroyed millions of fruit trees.

With the exception of mountainous Chihuahua state, winter temperatures in northern Mexico rarely drop below 40 degrees Fahrenheit (4.5 Celsius), and many homes are without heat of any kind. Some families make do with gas or electric space heaters.

Commander Jose de la Torre of the Monterrey Green Cross said Monday that "the streets are full" of people without homes or protection from the cold.

"We are giving them medical attention, a little food and warm overcoats," he said.

He said most of those who died were babies of poor families or indigents without homes.

Snow fell in many parts of the north Saturday evening, leaving from ½ to 4 inches (1.3 to 10 centimeters) on the ground.

The ice interrupted telephone and electric service and froze water pipes in many northern cities, authorities reported.

The accumulated ice and snow forced the federal highway police to close seven highways in Coahuila, Chihuahua and Sonora states. Some roads were closely briefly in Tamaulipas state.

Wife: Husband killed himself because of job-related stress

ARLINGTON (AP) — Tommy Dobbs is convinced her husband shot himself because of unearned remorse he felt after a freak accident killed one young motorcyclist and badly injured another.

She feels so certain that she has filed a claim with the city, saying her husband, Jim Bob Dobbs, shot himself two days after Thanksgiving because of job-related stress.

Co-workers say Dobbs, a welder who worked for the city parks department, was only doing his job when he led a crew that stretched a cable across a city-owned lot. The cable was designed to keep bikers out of the area.

But after one youth died and others were critically injured from hitting the cable, those who knew the 45-year-old man believe he took the accidents to heart and never recovered from the shock.

On Nov. 24, Dobbs' wife found his body in their bed with a single gunshot wound in the head. The Johnson County medical examiner ruled the wound was self-inflicted.

Mrs. Dobbs has filed an insurance claim with the city, saying job stress caused her husband's death even though he left no note behind.

"She knows that (the accident) is what did it," said Burleson lawyer Robert Wilson, who is representing Mrs. Dobbs. "There's no doubt about it in her mind. She said he never had any emotional problems in his life until after that boy got killed."

Wilson said he and the city's insurance company have exchanged letters, but the parties may end up in court. Arlington City Attorney Tom Todd declined comment.

Co-workers said Dobbs' good nature made him well-liked by others. He and his wife owned a three-acre tract near Burleson where they built a house. Friends said Dobbs kept goats, but found it difficult to sell them for fear they would be mistreated or slaughtered.

In the fall of 1982, Dobbs supervised construction of a cable across a piece of vacant city property near Sam Houston High School. The cable was designed to discourage teen-agers from riding motorcycles and bikes through the field.

Shortly after the crew finished the job on Oct. 25, Thomas William Birchman, 12, was riding his motorcycle across the field and struck the cable. The youth suffered back injuries.

Thirty minutes later, Gregory Patterson, 13, and Jerry M. Shinn, 12, were riding a motorcycle across the same field when they struck the cable. Patterson was killed, and Shinn suffered brain damage that left him with impaired speech and thought processes.

Valley growers say last weekend's freeze not as bad as December '83

STATE

HARLINGEN (AP) — Rio Grande Valley growers, teased by an overnight freeze, say it will be a few days before they know the damage, but say it's not nearly as bad as the one last winter.

Larry Hobbs, spokesman for the Rio Grande Valley Sugar Growers Inc., said some sugar cane was damaged, but growers he talked to said they had not fully assessed the damage.

"But we don't think there was significant damage," Hobbs said. "To have significant damage we need a temperature of 28 degrees or colder for five or more hours and we did not see the low temperatures or the duration."

Temperatures in the Valley overnight Saturday ranged from 29 to 32 degrees.

Some roads were closed and air service was halted because of icy conditions. Some Valley residents temporarily were without water and electricity.

The mercury, however, began to climb Sunday and throughout the day Monday.

Other growers said that the drizzle before the freeze helped protect some of the crops.

"There's no doubt about it. If we have a damp cold, it's much better than a crystal clear cold," said Bill Weeks, executive vice president of the Texas Citrus and Vegetable Association. Weeks said that the first vegetables to be damaged in a freeze would be lettuce, onions, cabbages and broccoli.

Death row inmate waits for execution

Skillern

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Doyle Edward Skillern, convicted in the slaying of a narcotics officer, was moved from death row today to a holding cell outside the Texas death chamber to await his scheduled execution after midnight.

Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Phil Guthrie said Skillern was taken from his cell at the Ellis II Unit and transported the some 15 miles to the Walls Unit in downtown Huntsville. He arrived at 9:02 a.m., Guthrie said.

The 48-year-old Skillern was to be put to death between midnight and dawn for the Oct. 24, 1974, shooting death of Patrick Randel, a narcotics officer with the Texas Department of Public Safety.

On Monday, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rejected an appeal that Skillern's execution be delayed until the U.S. Supreme Court decides a case in which Skillern is a party.

Skillern's lawyer, Shannon Salyer of Corpus Christi, said Monday evening he was filing an appeal with the Supreme Court, but said if the high court turns him down, he doubts he will take further steps.

"I can't think of anything else, no," he said. "Besides, if they turn us down tomorrow, that won't leave us much time."

Salyer said he doubts Skillern will escape execution.

"I think he's going to die Wednesday morning," Salyer said. "We've been on appeal for 10 years and we haven't won yet. Why should we be optimistic?"

He said there is still the possibility that Gov. Mark White will step in to grant a 30-day reprieve, but said he was not optimistic "based on the governor's previous conduct."

White did not grant stays for any of the three executions carried out since he took office.

The Supreme Court has agreed to review a case in which Skillern and other death row inmates are challenging the failure of the Food and Drug Administration to certify the use of the lethal drugs for executions.

The circuit court panel on Monday said it denied the stay for the same reason given Jan. 11 by the U.S. District Court, which said Skillern failed to show he had a substantial legal issue.

Salyer said the Supreme Court heard oral arguments in the case Dec. 3 and will likely hand down a decision before its term ends June 30.

Skillern was convicted under the "law of parties."

On the night of Oct. 24, 1974, Skillern and 51-year-old Charles Sanne negotiated to sell drugs to Randel in a Beeville motel room, suspecting Randel was a police informant. Randel, five days past his 40th birthday, was a Department of Public Safety undercover agent working out of Austin. He had a wife and three children.

Randel's body, found in his car, had been shot six times at close range. Sanne testified he shot Randel in self-defense.

Skillern was in a stolen car nearby when Randel was killed, the records show. Skillern and Sanne fled with Randel's diamond ring and $850 in state money intended for the drug buy. They were captured the next day in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Sanne, who is serving a life sentence for the incident, testified at a joint trial that he fired the six shots that killed Randel.

GOP: Social Security freeze unlikely

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top House Republicans are shunning a Senate GOP plan to freeze Social Security benefits, claiming a "congressional mandate" for so harsh a step seems unlikely this year, especially with continued economic growth.

In fact, the No. 1 Republican in the House, Minority Leader Robert Michel of Illinois, says deficits may not be as all-consuming a problem for the nation as often portrayed.

"We'd all like that utopian balanced budget, but if it isn't there, you ask yourself — how much of a deficit can you absorb?" Michel said.

Michel and other GOP House leaders said they are still uncertain whether they'll embrace President Reagan's budget plan, adopt portions of the still-emerging Senate one, or develop one of their own.

They plan to meet Wednesday with Budget Director David Stockman and the following day with Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger to help formulate their plans.

"I'm not real comfortable with a White House budget, a Senate (Republican) budget, a House (Republican) budget — all among Republicans even before we get to the Democratic Party," said Michel said at a news conference Monday.

House Democratic leaders have voiced opposition to any across-the-board spending freeze that would include scheduled Social Security benefit increases.

Senate Republicans, under the leadership of Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., are forging a deficit-reduction plan that would freeze all federal spending — including the defense budget and Social Security and other government benefit programs.

At Monday's news conference, GOP officials voiced skepticism toward the efforts of their Senate counterparts.

"I don't favor a freeze on Social Security...I personally believe that Social Security and its trust fund should be set aside" and not put on the cutting board with other programs, said Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., chairman of the House GOP Conference and an expected 1988 presidential contender.

And Michel suggested that too much attention may have been paid in recent weeks to the issue of national deficits in the vicinity of $200 billion.

"Frankly, as the economy grows and interest rates continue to decline, you will find that some of the skeptics out there will change their mind...and I think more and more of our members are inclined to think that maybe it (the effect of high deficits on the economy) hasn't been that drastic," Michel said.

Reagan has opposed any alteration in the formula for cost-of-living benefits for the nation's 65 million Social Security recipients, but said in a nationally broadcast news conference last week that he would consider a freeze if there were a "congressional mandate" for it.

GOP House leaders suggested that, despite the efforts of their Senate colleagues, such a mandate from Congress seems unlikely.

Although the overall freeze concept enjoys broad support on Capitol Hill, efforts are likely to be made to exempt Social Security, "and once you begin making exceptions to a total freeze, then it opens itself up to other exceptions and then the whole concept before long goes down," Michel said.

Republican leaders held the news conference to unveil a 70-page volume of proposed initiatives on domestic and foreign policy, a proposal that makes only passing reference to reducing deficits.

"Not everybody is so possessed with this deficit that every document that is published has to have a bearing on deficit-reduction," Michel said.

The GOP plan, called "Ideas for Tomorrow, Choices for Today," calls for tax-code simplification, curbs on the independence of the Federal Reserve system to "allow greater public scrutiny," and a variety of domestic-policy initiatives.

The GOP document offers 252 suggestions "for Congress to consider as it deals with President Reagan's budget," but some of them are contradictory.

For instance, at the same time it advocates a flat tax system with an elimination of all current deductions and credits and proposes a batch of new tax breaks.

It advocates "tax credits for home care of elderly relatives who would otherwise be institutionalized" as well as "tax deductions for home care of elderly relatives suffering from disabling ailments such as Alzheimer's Disease."

And it calls for "increasing the tax credit for dependent care services for low and moderate-income taxpayers, or providing modest tax incentives to firms for offering day care as an employee benefit."

"If we achieved a flat tax, we'd have to put a lot of these proposals on the shelf," conceded Rep. Jerry Lewis, R-Calif., author of the study.

Sen. Weicker arrested for joining in anti-apartheid demonstrations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., the first Republican lawmaker to be arrested in anti-apartheid protests here, says the racial policies of white-ruled South Africa are remniscent of Nazi Germany.

"The principles that South Africa espouses are no different from the principles that Nazi Germany espoused and against which many Americans died," Weicker said shortly before he was arrested Monday outside the South African Embassy.

Weicker's arrest came as the protests against South Africa's policies of racial separation entered their ninth week. Several big city mayors and 16 congressmen had been arrested previously during the demonstrations in front of the South African embassy.

Weicker and five others were charged with violating a city law that requires protesters to stay 500 feet away from the embassy they are picketing.

The Connecticut Republican was arrested after he joined the group in singing "We Shall Overcome" on the embassy steps.

Andrew McLeod, Weicker's spokesman, said the senator was released after being booked at the police station. Weicker was ordered to appear Wednesday in District of Columbia Superior Court.

"The silence that envelops today's black South African is no different than that which wasted yesterday's European Jew," Weicker said before his arrest. "The ally of our silence shall no longer be available to the South African government."

Weicker said he and several other senators planned to meet with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., to discuss legislation to place economic sanctions against South Africa. Kennedy has been visiting South Africa to learn first-hand about the situation there.

"I hope before this Congress adjourns, a clear signal will be sent," Weicker said.

Bills already have been introduced to curb U.S. exports to South Africa and to ban the importation of South African gold coins known as Krugerrands.

Ducking an issue

The U.S. Supreme Court closed its eyes to state-sanctioned racism last week when the justices let stand a lower-court ruling that condones reverse discrimination. That was a mistake because discrimination — even in the interest of righting an earlier wrong — is dangerous.

The case involved a group of 15 white New York state correctional officers who lost ground on a job-promotion list when the state civil-service commission "adjusted" test results to give more minority candidates passing grades. In 1982, a federal district judge ruled the state's action violated the plaintiffs' civil rights inasmuch as there was no court finding of previous discrimination against minority correctional officers. But a federal appellate court reversed the ruling last year saying that the disproportionate impact of the test on minorities was sufficient for the state to "score the examination in some race-conscious fashion."

By refusing to hear the case, the Supreme Court sidestepped its constitutional responsibility to prevent the abuse of one group's civil rights solely for the benefit of another group. The court's refusal is even more perplexing because seven months ago the justices struck down a court order requiring the city of Memphis, Tenn., to rehire minority firefighters who had been laid off instead of non-minorities with greater seniority. In so doing, the court cited the intent of the 1964 Civil Rights Act to prohibit preferential treatment on the basis of race, color, religion, sex or national origin.

Yet New York State, facing the likelihood of a lawsuit, gave preferential treatment to minority correctional officers by doubling their "pass" rate on the test. It's ironic that the state was not under any court order to initiate the affirmative action plan. Nor had the high court ruled that such an action was permissible for government employees.

There is no doubt that states should be prevented from practicing racial discrimination under the pretense of affirmative action. The New York civil service commission's action was wrong on two counts: It penalized whites who deserved to be promoted, and it implied that blacks and Hispanics aren't able to make the grade on their own merit.

Furthermore, the Supreme Court compounded the damage by failing to take this opportunity to reaffirm an obvious truth — all Americans are best served by a color-blind system that considers ability and performance as the major criteria for hiring and job-advancement.

Balancing scales

For a number of years the scales of the American judicial system appeared to be tipped a bit against those charged with enforcing the law and in favor of criminals or suspected criminals. During the Reagan Administration the trend has been to put those scales back in balance.

The latest evidence of this was a Supreme Court decision the other day decreeing that police in one city do not need a warrant to stop and detain a person known to be under investigation by law enforcement officials in another community. The court unanimously overruled an opposite decision by the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Police must, of course, have reason for a brief detention of a suspect, but what the nine justices said was that the hands of police should not be tied when they know someone is under investigation.

The high court's opinion was written by Associate Justice Sandra Day O'Connor. She explained it as follows:

"In an era when criminal suspects are increasingly mobile, and increasingly likely to flee across jurisdictional boundaries, this rule is a matter of common sense: It minimizes the volume of information concerning suspects that must be transmitted to other jurisdictions and enables police in one jurisdiction to act promptly in reliance on information from another jurisdiction."

As Justice O'Connor noted, the rule does make sense, and helps tip those judicial scales in the right direction. It's long past time.

Another View:

Losing proposition

The question before the Federal Trade Commission goes like this: Is the regulation forcing supermarkets to have an ample supply of advertised specials on hand helping or hurting shoppers?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't done your homework on government red tape and the cost it adds to the price of just about every consumer item.

Take that regulation on grocery sales. It was adopted in 1971, no doubt after some criticism about supermarkets that didn't have advertised items or didn't have them at the advertised price. The criticism could not have been all that fervid or the regulation all that necessary. Since 1971, the FTC has issued only 10 legal complaints, the last one in 1978.

The cost of a store's complying with the regulation — in record-keeping, inventory spoilage, reporting, etc. — is huge, however, and it is passed on to the consumer in higher overall prices.

Using its own estimates, the FTC concluded that the rule causes shoppers to pay over $200 million a year to obtain benefits worth, at most, $125 million. In anybody's book that is a losing proposition.

The FTC is now considering dropping the regulation and has asked for public reaction. The reaction ought to be what took the FTC so long to recognize the obvious.

JACK ANDERSON

Polish leader man in middle

WASHINGTON — An investigative reporter must expect (though of course he does not) to be widely reviled, especially by authorities with a low tolerance for dissent.

Jack Anderson

My writings have become so intolerable to some rulers that they cannot bear my presence.

Last year, the Mexican authorities took offense at some columns I wrote about their corrupt ways and introduced legislation barring me from Mexico for life. Now I seem to be even more loathsome to the Polish authorities who have barred me from their unhappy land.

For a while they teetered on the awful brink of admitting me to Poland despite my shortcomings. They first rejected my application for a visa; then a Polish diplomat turned up in my office to assure me that no inhospitality was intended and that I would be welcome if only I would apply again.

I did so and was rejected again. When I sought an explanation from the Polish Embassy, a less agreeable diplomat made it quite clear that I am as popular in Poland as a polecat at a lawn party.

The best conclusion that I can draw from the conflicting comments of the Polish emissaries is that they don't want me to get together with Solidarity leader Lech Walesa. I have news for the Polish authorities: Through underground contacts, I have concluded the arrangements I wanted to make in person.

I have helped arrange for Hollywood producers Ralph Andrews and Tom Voiss to bring to the screen the gallant story of Lech Walesa. The script will be written by veteran screenwriter Lionel Chetwynd, who can also expect to be barred from Poland hereafter. Incidentally, the Polish patriot won't get a dime for the rights; all royalties will be paid to the Solidarity movement.

Had I been allowed to visit Poland, I would also have sought an interview with the Polish general who rules the country, Wojciech Jaruzelski. Now I must rely instead on intelligence reports.

There is no question that Jaruzelski runs a military dictatorship, maintains concentration camps for political foes and employs all the ugly arts of the police state. As defense minister in the late 1960s, he reportedly had a hand in the anti-Semitic purges that drove many of the few remaining Jews out of Poland.

Certainly a free press has no place in his domestic schemes; he has helped liquidate free expression in Poland. Only last month, his riot police assailed demonstrators in Gdansk and Wroclaw; they also blocked Walesa from laying a wreath at a workers' monument.

Yet Jaruzelski is hobbled by vulnerabilities inherited from a bleak history. He is the son of Polish aristocrats who were executed by the Soviets during World War II. Spared, he retreated from Poland with the Red Army and was virtually raised by the Russians.

He marched back into his homeland as the Nazis cleared out. Despite his noble lineage, he rose through the ranks in the Soviet-sponsored Polish regimes. Apparently, he is trusted by the Soviet military but distrusted by the Soviet secret police.

Our own intelligence analysts tend to see Jaruzelski as a man in a tight corner who played along with the Russians rather than risk the fate of his parents — as a leader who now threads his way between the demands of the Kremlin and the needs of the Polish people.

Still, the general — who wears dark glasses because of weak eyes and a back brace because of back problems — remains an enigma to U.S. analysts. They aren't quite sure whether he's a clever Soviet stooge or a cautious Polish patriot.

OUTRAGE OF THE WEEK: What does the Bureau of Land Management have to hide?

Few Americans have even heard of this agency, let alone know its function. And BLM officials apparently want to keep it that way. They've just proposed a secret system for designating memos they don't want Congress or the public to know about.

According to an internal memo on the proposal, the new system will be designated SAM, for Special Action Memorandum (or, as employees have already reinterpreted the acronym, Secret Administration Memorandum). It will cover all memos "which solicit data, information, opinions, comment, estimates or response from any bureau office" — in other words, any memo that might give Congress or the public a clue as to what's really going on.

To make this point perfectly clear, the memo states: "SAMs will NOT be routinely available to the public unless they are released in response to a request after appropriate review and approval."

What could BLM have to hide? Possibly an agreement to let the Environmental Protection Agency dump toxic wastes on BLM-administered land, or permission for the Pentagon or Energy Department to test "Star Wars" weapons on BLM land in secrecy.

EXPLOITING DISASTER: No human tragedy is too ghastly to serve as grist for the propaganda mills of anyone with a political point to make. The Union Carbide poisonous gas leak at Bhopal, India, was no exception.

Radio Moscow has been telling its listeners that the pesticide plant was actually a center for "poison gas experiments" and "chemical weaponry." It suggested that NATO and the Pentagon were considering use of "similar killer gases in Afghanistan or somewhere in Central America."

Ethiopian story needs explanation

People who are excited to an emotional pitch of compassion about the famine in Ethiopia should increase their inventory of compassion — and donation money. The current famine is only the beginning.

Personally, I think sending money to Africa is a waste of money. Lest anyone think I am an unrepentant reincarnation of Ebenezer Scrooge, let me put the matter in perspective.

Charley Reese

The present Ethiopian government has, by some estimates, killed close to 1 million Ethiopians since it has been in power. Some of the worst famine areas are in rebel-controlled territory and there, the Ethiopian government has zero interest in preserving life. Moreover, according to the Heritage Foundation, most relief agencies are so fearful of offending the Marxist government that they make no effort to get food into those areas.

Grain has rotted in Red Sea ports because of the combination of indifference and incopetence of Ethiopian officials. The Ethiopian relief agency provides no accounting of any aid it gets its paws on. One man who defected reported the theft of 15,000 tons of grain. Some of the government's soldiers are paid in grain and all donated grain shipments are taxed and assessed handling charges by this despotic government.

In short, the Ethiopian govenent is a great deal less concerned about the lives of the Ethiopian people than it wishes Americans to be.

Finally, even when donated food gets through to hungry people, as surely some does, the cruel truth is that a child saved from death this week will very likely die next week.

Moreover Ethiopia is only the publcized tip of the iceberg. Except for white-ruled South Africa and Arab-ruled countries on the north, the African Continent is sinking into an economic morass of catastrophic proportions. Since the African countries gained their independence, population has been exploding and food production has been declining.

In the last 20 years, Western nations have pumped $80 billion of aid into Africa. It has had the same effect as a flock of hummingbirds spitting on a forest fire. Western aid is simply no match for the corruption and incompetence of the African governments.

In just 20 years, these characters have taken a continent where people lived successfully for centuries and messed it up so badly that even African intellectuals are in a state of despair. The situation is so bad that if you've a mind to do it, you can spend the next 20 years organizing "emergency" relief programs.

I do not wish to disparage anyone's charitable impulses, but I think Americans are being manipulated not only by the Ethiopian government but also by some of the professional charity outfits who handle the bulk of international aid.

One such outfit recently flew some wives of American Congressmen to Africa, trotted them out to a poor village, and plopped starving babies in their laps. These middle-class American ladies became distraught with pity, as the trip sponsors well knew they would be, and have come back determined to "save Africa."

That's kind but naive. The American people cannot save Africa. The American government cannot save Africa. The American people cannot feed the people of Africa. The only people who can save Africa are the Africans. Whether they will choose to do so is their business, not ours. We cannot force them to save themselves.

It is simplisitic thinking to believe the defeating hunger is as easy as moving food from point A and poking it into a mouth at point B. The African Continent is capable of supporting the African population. Periodic droughts are normal in Africa. The problems in Africa are political, not climatic. It has been government policies, not lack of rain, which has driven down food production. The current drought only aggravated the problem. With decent governments, Africans would have coped with the drought just as they have coped with droughts for centuries.

What you are seeing is just one more exhibit in the museum of socialist failures. Tanzania, which is a favorite of European socialists, has received more aid per capita than any other nation on earth. It's economy is a disaster. Nigeria has been awash in OPEC oil money. It deserves a Nobel Prize for corruption. While you are being asked to save Ethiopia children, the United Nations is building a $73 million office building in Ethiopia for its overpaid bureaucrats. While you are being asked to help the African people, the African dictators are murdering and robbing them.

Parade questioned

Midland, are we seriously supporting this trip by the Rebel Band to Washington, D.C.? Let's get real! Ninety-two thousand dollars more you need to go to this parade? Come on! And you're asking for donations, too!

I have never heard of such a frivolous, hair-brained, selfish thing! There are people starving in Africa, the U.S.A., Midland even!

There is a little girl here in the Permian Basin who needs a liver transplant. You could donate the $50,000 or more you already have to this cause to defray medical costs. Why didn't you adopt a few families (quite a few with that much money!) this past Christmas. How many children went without Christmas presents, thinking Santa didn't come because they were bad?

Midland is possibly the richest town of its size in the Southwest and this seems to be the most serious issue we have this month! I can't believe this!

I know this is supposed to be a great opportunity — a once-in-a-lifetime thing, but who cares! Marching in a parade and paying for the "privilege!" If President Reagan wants you there so bad, let him pay for it!

And who cares if Texas won't be represented in the parade? It will show that we have better, more worthwhile things to spend our money on!

There are, no doubt, kids right there in your own school whose families really and truly need help financially and this could make you feel so satisfied if you did something good with that money.

Don't get me wrong, this has nothing to with the fact that I went to Permian or that we never had the same chance to go. It hasn't been that long since I was a teen-ager and I know I would have liked to go to something like this, but even at 17 years of age my priorities were not so self-centered.

I don't know how many people $50,000 will feed or for how long, but it will sure help the children in drought-stricken countries.

When you grow up and if you have kids, you will know what it's like to worry about their welfare. I pray you won't have to hold a hungry baby and tell it that there's no food that day.

I promise you'll get so much more satisfaction if you do something else with that money and I'm sure your parents will agree.

My Lai page disgusting

I have begun to wonder why we Americans are continually being subjected to seeing articles written about Vietnam. I'm speaking of an article, full page with pictures and story, entitled "My Lai: victim's remember massacre" in the Jan. 7 edition of the Reporter-Telegram.

I, for one, become disgusted when I read about an incident that occurred 16 years ago. I'm tired of the American soldier always being made to look like the "bad guy." Were we there because we wanted to be? Is any serviceman really ready to take another life? Aren't there always circumstances during a war where innocents are killed? Do situations such as My Lai have to be written about over and over?

Too few words are written about the soldiers who were killed by the Vietnamese in seemingly innocent circumstances. Why haven't there been articles on the bravery of the men who lost their lives in Lebanon?

Please, no more poor Vietnamese, but more praise for the servicemen who serve our country.

Please show some compassion for the parents, wives, and loved ones who lost sons, husbands, family and friends in Vietnam.

Maybe I feel concern because my husband and I have a son serving in the Army and I am fearful how quickly another Vietnam might occur somewhere else. I pray not.

Other bands travel world

If El Paso, one of the poorest cities, not only in Texas but in the country can send one of its high school jazz bands to Paris, France in 1983, and one of its high school orchestras to Vienna, Austria in 1984, surely we in Midland — third richest city per capita in the United States — can send one of its two bands to Washington, D.C. to participate in the 1985 Presidential Inaugural Parade.

Go for it, Midland!

Commission to plan first holiday honoring King

ATLANTA (AP) — Singer Stevie Wonder and civil rights leader the Rev. Ralph Abernathy were among 300 people at a ceremony empowering a commission to plan the first federal holiday honoring a black American, Martin Luther King Jr., who would have been 56 today.

In New York, where Mayor Edward Koch refused to make today a city holiday, blacks were asked to boycott public transportation in protest, while in Florida a green ribbon signifying life graced an oak tree planted in King's memory near the state capitol.

A judge once barred from law school because he is black gave the oath of office Monday to commissioners in Atlanta who will plan observance of Martin Luther King Jr. day, a federal holiday beginning Jan. 20, 1986.

King was born in Atlanta in 1929.

U.S. District Judge Horace Ward swore in members of the Martin Luther King Jr. Federal Holiday Commission during a ceremony in the auditorium of the Freedom Hall complex, built in memory of the slain civil rights leader.

King's widow, Coretta Scott King, will serve as chairman of the commission, which will go out of existence next year after planning and staging the first observance of the King holiday.

"We must see that Martin's day is a holiday to honor, through him, the achievements of all black people of this nation who have struggled over the years for racial and social and political justice," Mrs. King told the crowd of about 300.

Twenty-one of the 31 commission members, including Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., Illinois Gov. James Thompson, Wonder and Abernathy, were on hand for the ceremony.

Legislation establishing the third Monday in January as a national holiday honoring King was passed by Congress last year and signed into law in November by President Reagan.

Black New Yorkers were urged to take a leaf from King's book today and boycott public transportation in memory of the successful boycott of buses in Montgomery, Ala., during the 1960s.

The boycott was led by the Rev. Calvin Butts, executive director of the Abyssinian Baptist Church, who said 85 percent of the city's blacks and Hispanics use mass transit.

Boycott leaders said the protest would demonstrate "not only the black community's political unity, but also our economic power in the face of Koch's insensitivity toward the life and death of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr."

In Tallahassee, Fla., King was likened to an oak tree planted last year between the old and new capitols. "He never murmured nor complained," the Rev. R.N. Gooden of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference said Monday. "Like a tree, he was that kind of man."

King's daughter, Bernice, appeared in Washington on Monday to speak at a special service at the Department of Health and Human Services, while entertainer Harry Belefonte addressed a group in Baltimore about the need to continue in King's footsteps.

"There are those who believed that if they killed the dreamer, that they would kill the dream," Ms. King said. "But I am here to tell you that the dream lives on, as long as there are those who are willing to stand up for freedom."

King was "the only person I've ever known personally that I'm sure is in heaven," said Belefonte.

Proposal to merge agencies on hold

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy and Interior departments apparently will remain separate at least until there is somebody at the helm of each agency.

Energy Secretary Donald Hodel, nominated to head Interior, said a proposal to merge the two departments won't be studied until after the Senate holds confirmation hearings on himself and White House personnel director John Herrington, nominated to replace him as energy secretary.

Reagan said last Thursday he intended to move Hodel to Interior and Herrington to Energy, and directed the two men to look at "reorganization options" as part of the administration's longtime goal of eliminating the Energy Department as a Cabinet-level agency.

Veteran: Policy increases tensions in Central America

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A member of a Veterans of Foreign Wars chapter that criticized U.S. policy in Central America said he hoped the resolution would help prevent another Vietnam.

The statement by Bill Motto Post 5888 in Santa Cruz accusing President Reagan of increasing tensions in Central America was the first break by a post with the national organization on foreign policy, VFW spokesman Wayne LaDue said in Kansas City, Mo.

Dean Metcalf, one of 50 Vietnam veterans in the post, said, "I want the lesson that we paid for in blood to be learned."

Alleged molester still jailed

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A judge set a bail hearing next week for a 55-year-old man charged with sexual abuse of a 13-year-old boy he allegedly kidnapped in California almost two years ago.

David Roger Collins pleaded innocent Monday to nine felony counts of first-degree child molestation and kidnapping. He was ordered held without bail pending a hearing Monday on the state's request for $100,000 bail.

Police found Bobby Smith, missing from his home in Long Beach, Calif., since April 1983, living in a squalid South Providence apartment Jan. 7.

Woman to be sentenced

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A fundamentalist Christian woman cleared of criminal child-stealing charges for taking her son from his homosexual father can start a new life now that the court case is over, her lawyer said.

Betty Lou Batey is scheduled to be sentenced Feb. 15 on a charge of civil contempt for violating a court order placing the boy, Brian, in legal custody of his father, Frank. She faces a possible 15 days in jail and $3,000 fine.

"This will help Betty resume a normal life," Mrs. Batey's lawyer, Michael Farris, said of Monday's decision. "She can get a job. She won't have to be in court essentially all the time."

Costa Rican airline fined

MIAMI (AP) — A federal official said $40,000 in fines paid by a Costa Rican airline for flying 11 Cubans with false passports to the United States was not as important as the good faith and the example it set.

The crew of the LASCA Airlines' Boeing 727 was charged with transporting the Cubans from Cancun, Mexico, to New Orleans Thursday.

Ed O'Connor, regional commissioner with the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Dallas, said LASCA promised to take steps to see that last week's incident was not repeated.

Doctor skies to work

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Cardiologist Dr. Charles Roeth didn't let 13 inches of snow stop him from seeing his patients.

He donned his cross-country skis and skimmed two miles from his home to Humana Hospital Sunday.

"It was really just a lark. I could have gone by car," said Roeth, 43.

San Antonio was hit by a freak winter storm Sunday that dropped a record 13 inches of snow.

Tall City girls end first half with victories

Lee completes 7-0 start

From Staff Reports

The Midland Lee Rebels turned the first half corner of District 4-5A girl's basketball play Monday night with a perfect 7-0 record, 14-6 overall, by defeating Abilene High 50-43 at AHS Gym.

The victory leaves Lee alone atop the 4-5A standings, 1½ games better than Odessa Permian. The Panthers and San Angelo Bobcats postponed their game because of weather and will play a makeup tonight at 8 p.m. at Permian.

Elsewhere in 4-5A action, Midland High held onto third place with a 56-36 victory over Abilene Cooper while Big Spring downed Odessa High, 55-50. Midland High, 5-2, could move into a tie with Permian, 5-1, depending on the outcome of tonight's contest.

THE REBELS had a lot of trouble with Abilene High as the Eagles cut Lee's fourth quarter lead to just two points in the final minutes of play but couldn't quite get over the hump.

Abilene High held the lead at the end of the first two quarters, 10-8 after one and 23-22 at the half, but lost control of the game in the third when the Rebels went up by a 38-32 count. Lee also outscored AHS 12-11 in the final frame despite the late run the Eagles made.

Typically, Lee had only one shooter break into double digits, Denise Hatch with 10 points. Valencia Wallace was next at seven while Megan Pace added six.

For AHS, Jennifer Wolfe led all scorers with 16 points while teammate Trina Jackson chipped in another 13.

The loss drops AHS to 2-5, 6-13 on the year.

On Friday, the Rebels will try to make it eight 4-5A victories in a row when they travel to Odessa to take on the 0-7, 3-19 Bronchos at 8 p.m. at OHS Gym.

IN BIG SPRING, the Bronchos made a valiant effort toward claiming their first 4-5A victory but didn't have enough as the Steers took the five-point win.

Big Spring took control of the game in the first quarter, 14-12, and increased the margin to 35-25 at the half. OHS fought back in the third to cut the lead to 45-40 but could only match Big Spring's 10 fourth quarter points.

For the Steers, Sheri Myrick had a big night with 17 points while teammate Trell Clemmons added 10. Odessa's Bunny Smith matched Myrick's 17-point effort to be the only Broncho in double digits.

MHS runs streak to five

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland High wasted little time in disposing of Abilene Cooper Monday night as the Bulldogs ran their way to a 56-36 District 4-5A girl's basketball victory at MHS gym.

Denise Lanz helped spark the Bulldogs' first quarter 15-4 surge, scoring 10 of her game-high 21 points, including a span of eight straight points. She added eight more to her total in the second quarter as Midland High took a commanding 33-14 lead at the half.

The victory gives Midland High a 5-2 4-5A and 12-2 overall records and improves their winning streak to five straight games for sole possession of third place midway through the league season. Midland Lee, 7-0, and Odessa Permian, 5-1 (with a makeup game to play tonight), have control of the top two spots.

Defensively, not only did Midland High hold Cooper to a mere four points in the first quarter, but also kept the Cougars from scoring anything for the first 3:58 of the game. The Bulldogs didn't allow the second bucket until 7:40 had elapsed from the game clock. They also held Cooper scoreless for the first two minutes of the second quarter, building up a 23-4 advantage.

Had it not been for free throws, which accounted for six of Cooper's second quarter 10 points, the game would have been over by halftime.

"Our press played very well tonight and I think we shot pretty good," said MHS coach Jane Young. "I know we shot well from the line. This was a team victory for us. The girls on the bench came in and did a good job. Everybody played well."

From the field, the Bulldogs hit 23-of-52 field goals (44 percent) while Lanz was just above the team average at 9-of-18 (50 percent). From the line, the Bulldogs were 10-of-14 (71 percent) led by Tina Knight, nine points in the game, with 5-of-6.

On the other side of the court, Cooper wasn't shooting nearly as good from the field, hitting 11-of-35 two-pointers (31 percent) but was respectable at the line, 14-of-21 (67 percent).

Both teams ended up with 14 turnovers but Midland High dominated the boards, 35-23. Even so, Cougar Leisa King had a strong performance, hauling down 10 rebounds to go with her 11 points and five steals. The Bulldogs spread around their rebounds with Tina Knight grabbing seven and Lanz and Deidra Knapp collecting five each. Knapp also led MHS in steals with four.

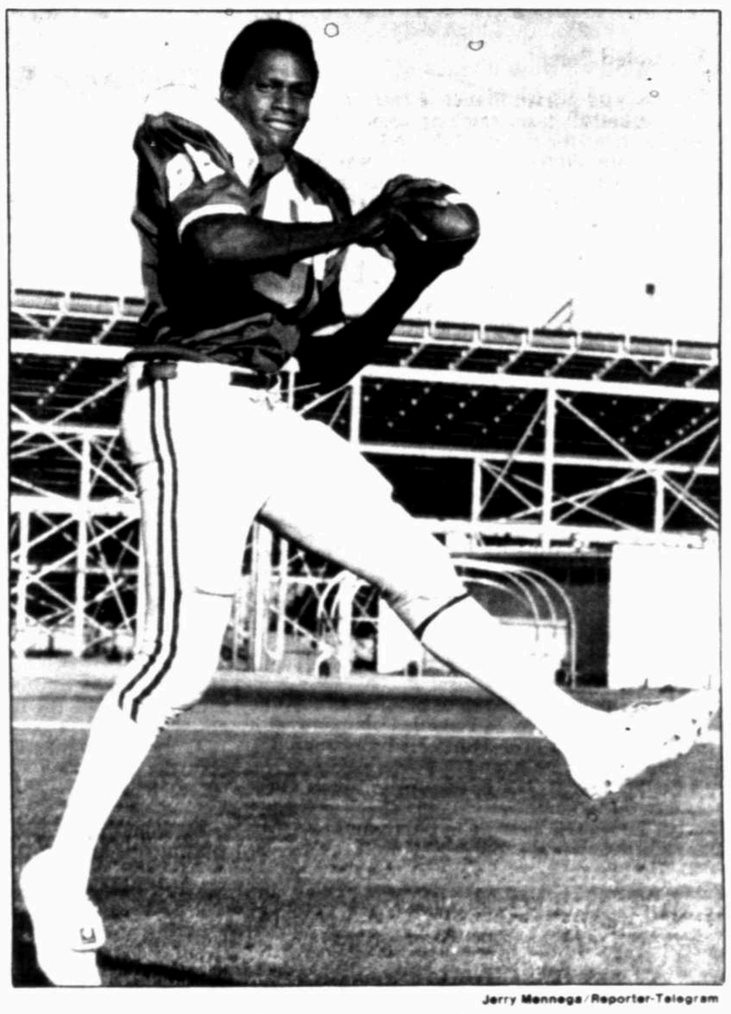

Now that the first half of the season has come to a close, the Bulldogs are looking for a chance to avenge one of their earlier losses. Friday night, the Bulldogs host Permian at MHS Gym at 8 p.m.

Chaps survive Badgers in OT

From Staff Reports

AMARILLO — Midland College point guard Pookey Wigington went from potential goat to a game winning hero here Monday night as the Chaparrals survived the Amarillo College Badgers in overtime, 69-68.

Wigington missed the front end of a one-and-one charity attempt with 37 seconds left in regulation play with the score tied at 62-62, but Amarillo's Steve Dailey missed a 17-foot jump shot at the buzzer as the game went into overtime, giving Wigington a chance to make amends.

He did just that when he hit a 15-foot jump shot from the wing with one second left to give the Chaps the important Western Junior College Athletic Conference victory. It was Wigington's only field goal of the night.

In the overtime period, Amarillo's All-American Andrew Kennedy hit a 15-foot shot with 1:30 left to give the Badgers a 68-67 lead. The Chaps ran down the clock to 15 seconds before calling a timeout and a last shot attempt.

Wigington, who could not find anyone open underneath, tossed up his winner with one second left, forcing the Badgers to try a long pass downcourt, which was knocked away by Teviin Binns.

Binns led the Chaps' scoring attack with 18 points while Vernon Coleman had 13 and Chuckie Graves 12. AC's Dailey led all scorers with 23 points and teammate Greg Merriott had 22.

The victory kept the Chaps at the head of the class in the WJCAC race with a perfect 5-0 mark, the same as Odessa College, who defeated South Plains Monday by a narrow 56-52 margin.

The victory also snapped a big six-game losing streak to the Badgers. MC is now 14-2 on the season. AC is 3-2 in conference play, with both losses coming at home. Odessa College also beat the Badgers in Amarillo this season.

The Chaps return to Midland and Chaparral Center Thursday for an 8 p.m. conference encounter with rival Howard College of Big Spring. The Chaps will then hit the road for Odessa College next Monday for a key conference shootout.

Against the Badgers Monday, the Chaps had to overcome a six-point, 31-25, defecit at the half. MC used a full-court pressure defense to gain some easy second half baskets and turned the defecit into a 59-54 lead with 5:31 left in the game.

That lead, however, fell and the Chaps ended up winning on Wigington's last shot in overtime.

Davis earns second team All-State

From Staff and Wire Reports

FORT WORTH — Midland High tight end Darrell Davis was named here Monday as a second team offensive selection to the 1984 Class 5A All-State team, which was picked by the Texas Sports Writers Association.

Davis, who was the only player in District 4-5A to be named to the league's offensive and defensive team, caught 35 passes for 569 yards and two touchdowns. He also rushed 10 times for 70 yards.

First team honors at tight end went to Beaumont French's Melvin Turner while playing on a team that shared the state championship with Odessa Permian in a 21-21 tie in the final game of the year.

Davis, who was credited with 72 first hit tackles, 68 assisted tackles, two quarterback sacks and an interception return of 57 yards that won a game, was not picked on the defensive squad.

Midland High finished its season at 5-5.

The Midland Lee Rebels, who dominated the 5A selections a year ago with its first trip to the state finals, was ignored by the elite team this year. Lee posted a 12-2 record, gaining the quarterfinals and losing only to Permian during the season. Lee had five All-State picks last year.

Permian had two offensive picks in quarterback Alton Holloway and guard Alfred Clark. Permian's John Fuller was also a first team defensive selection at end.

Abilene Cooper defensive tackle David Newman was the only other member of District 4-5A to gain first team honors.

Permian junior wide receiver Greg Anderson and fullback Dal Watson gained second team recognition.

Permian posted a 15-0-1 record on its way to the co-championship, beating Lee twice during the year.

Super Bowl talk begins

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Coach Bill Walsh of San Francisco believes that, with offenses like his own 49ers' and Miami's, it'll take about four touchdowns to win the Super Bowl.

Don Shula, his counterpart with the Dolphins, doesn't go in for such numbers games. And Walsh's own defense thinks more of itself than to surrender even one point to Mimai quarterback Dan Marino before Sunday's kickoff.

"We're not conceding anything," linebacker Keena Turner said Monday as the weeklong blitz of national Super Bowl attention began mushrooming in and around San Francisco.

WALSH'S 49ERS, behind the quarterbacking of Joe Montana, posted a 15-1 National Conference record during the season. They're a four-point favorite over the Dolphins, 14-2 in the AFC under the record-setting passing of Marino.

"It could be a game in which 24 to 28 points will win it. I think that many points would be needed to win it," Walsh said.

When the Dolphins' flight from Miami arrived Monday night, Shula told a news conference in neighboring Oakland, "I don't get into those kinds of assessments. I'm not the kind of coach that goes out and tells my football team, 'OK, if we score three touchdowns and hold them to two touchdowns and a field goal, we're gonna win.' "

Walsh said he believes San Francisco is capable to playing as good a defense as the Dolphins have seen this season, "but I certainly don't think we can shut anybody out."

"The guys on our defense feel differently," safety Dwight Hicks said. Then he hedged a bit. "I don't say we can shut 'em down completely. They've got a very good offense — very sophisticated, much like our own.

"So we're just going to try and keep the gains to a minimum, try and keep the big plays to a minimum, and hopefully we'll keep the score to a minimum."

Walsh said he wasn't conceding points so much as yards "because they throw the ball so much. The hope is that as they get toward the goal line, they'll be forced into field goals." Then, with a shrug of resignation, the San Francisco coach added: "That's pretty hollow talk because generally every time they get near the goal line, Marino throws a touchdown pass."

He threw 48 of them during the season, 12 more than the previous National Football League record, and seven in the playoffs including a record four (three of them bombs of 40, 41 and 36 yards) in the AFC title game against Pittsburgh.

"He's going to have to work for everything he gets," Turner said. "You can't go into a game conceding anything as a defense. You do and you're defeating your whole purpose.

"FOR A defense, you'd much rather have an offense working for 75 yards — working, working, working for everything they get, and looking for a turnover, rather than having them throw one long pass 75 yards for a touchdown. The odds are in the defense's favor if they have to grind it out."

Dwaine Board, too, hopes to at least rein in the Miami quarterback, if not silence him. "Nobody's shut Marino down this year," the 49ers' defensive end said. "We'd like to, but we know he'll probably get off one big one on us."

The Marino Corps landed Monday on the Pacific front. They were met by legions and legions.

Of reporters, that is.

Before Dan Marino and the Miami Dolphins get their shot at the 49ers, they must cope with something more pressing than anything they'll get from Fred Dean and Ronnie Lott. There are roughly 2,700 reporters in the Bay Area, most of whom are weary of Forty-Niner angles and thus have anxiously awaited the Dolphins' arrival.

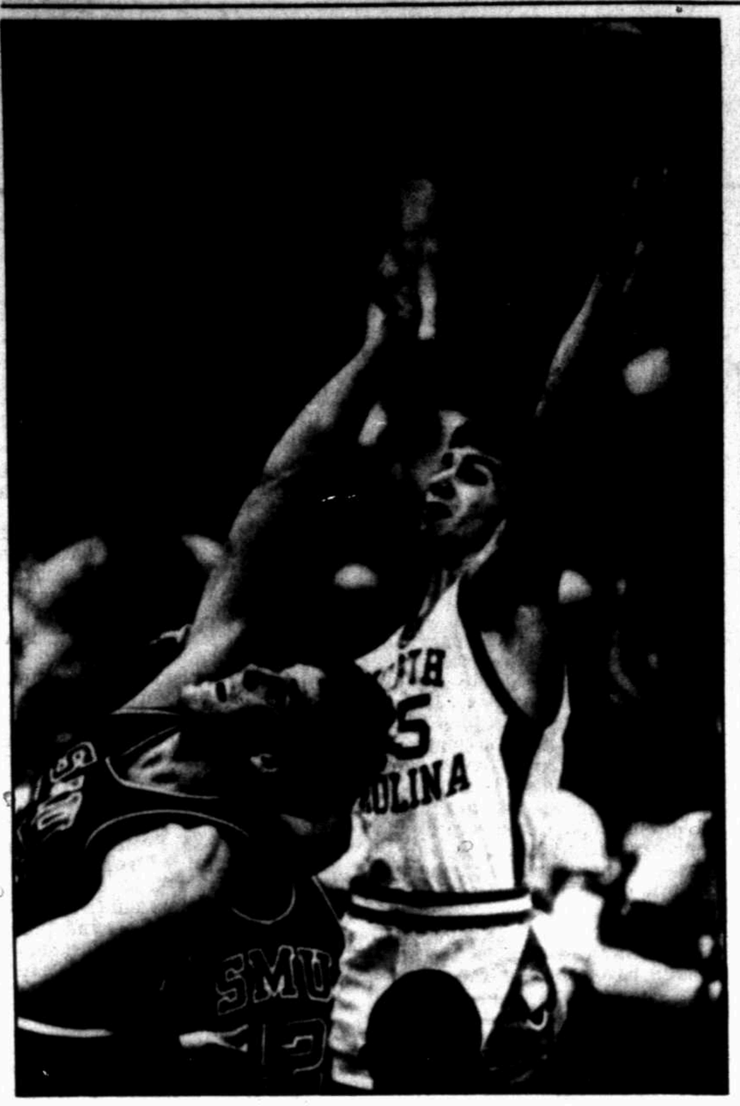

Of course, Marino is the focal point of the Dolphins, just as he is their force. But he's a lot more comfortable in the face of a pass rush than he is when surrounded by media.

"It won't be a distraction," Marino said . "It's what you make of it. I'm going to try to enjoy it and not get frustrated."

Entrapment blamed in Edwin Moses arrest

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two-time Olympic gold medalist Edwin Moses was the victim of police entrapment and will plead innocent to misdemeanor charges of soliciting a prostitute and possession of a small amount of marijuana, his attorney says.

Moses' attorney, Harold Lipton, said Monday the world-record-holding hurdler never intended to engage in sex with a prostitute and that police targeted him after they saw his 1985 Mercedes that carries "OLYMPYN" license plates.

"My feeling is that someone checked the license plates, found out that Edwin owned the car and though he would be a good catch," Lipton said.

POLICE ARRESTED Moses during a Hollywood prostitution sweep early Sunday morning. Officers reported 82 men were arrested during the weekend crackdown on prostitution and solicitation.

The 29-year-old hurdler, who won gold medals in the 400-meter hurdles in the 1976 and 1984 Olympics, was charged Monday with one count of soliciting prostitution and one count of possession of less than an ounce of marijuana, said Deputy City Attorney Mike Wilkinson.

Moses was released on his own recognizance and is scheduled to be arraigned Jan. 29.

Meanwhile, the Congress for Racial Equality said Monday that its chairman, Roy Innis, has been trying to reach Moses to offer him legal assistance. The civil rights group recently offered such assistance to Bernhard Goetz, the man accused of shooting four youths in a New York subway train.

"We're really disgusted by the fact that when we really need police resources in our city, this is what they're doing — entrapping athletes," CORE spokesman Cyril Boynes Jr. said in New York. "Certainly, one thing is clear, that it's a waste of resources."

Moses' agent Gordon Baskin said Monday that his client may be guilty of a bad joke but not of the two charges brought against him for what occurred at Sunset Boulevard and Genesee Avenue in Hollywood.

Baskin said Moses was in Los Angeles on Saturday for a meeting of a division of the United States Olympic Committee and was driving back to his hotel from a discotheque when the incident occurred. Moses was at a stop sign when a woman across the street waved at him and walked to the window on the passenger side of his car, Baskin said.

THE VICE officer posing as a prostitute asked Moses what he was doing, Baskin said. Moses replied that he was out to have some fun and when the woman asked if he had money, Moses said yes and jokingly mentioned $100, Baskin said.

She then directed Moses to pick her up "over there," pointing to a spot, Baskin said, and Moses laughed and drove off.

"Had he picked her up and taken her, then someone would say yes . . . But to him it was a joke," Baskin said. "What happened in my opinion was that they ran a make on the car and saw that it was Edwin Moses and decided that this was a nice fish to fry."

Los Angeles police spokesman Sergio Diaz had a different version of the incident.

"After the conversation took place between Moses and the female officer, they apparently came to an agreement and she directed him to go around the corner," Diaz said. "And when he went around the corner he was stopped by a motorcycle officer and a (male) vice officer."

Baskin said the marijuana allegedly discovered in Moses' car could have belonged to a number of people who have been in the automobile recently, including parking attendants.

"He does not smoke marijuna. He does not use any drugs," Baskin said.

Maryland rally spills No. 2 Duke

Associated Press

College Basketball

It was, said Adrian Branch, a case of the Maryland basketball team catching some of the fire spewing from the mouth of Coach Lefty Driesell.

"We were blessed by the coach," was Branch's way of describing Driesell's blistering tirade after the Terrapins fell behind second-ranked Duke 40-26 at intermission.

"At the half, I screamed that they weren't playing well, not like Maryland players can," Driesell said. "I broke two clipboards, kicked the wall and sent them back on the court early."

Driesell must have struck a few nerves, because Maryland roared back to nip the previously unbeaten Blue Devils 78-76 in overtime Monday night. Branch scored 14 of his 20 points in the second half, including a basket to force the overtime and two free throws that decided it.

DUKE'S FIRST loss in 13 games left top-ranked Georgetown, 15-0, as the only unbeaten major-college team in the country.

Six other ranked teams escaped unscathed. Bill Wennington and Walter Berry paced a balanced attack with 15 points each as No. 4 St. John's ripped Pittsburgh 87-56; Andre Turner scored 17 points to give No. 5 Memphis State a 56-52 squeaker over Tulane; and No. 10 DePaul won its 35th consecutive home game by shaking off rugged Old Dominion 64-58.

Calvin Duncan scored 15 of his 19 points in the first half to boost No. 16 Virginia Commonwealth to a 65-52 verdict over James Madison; John Salley and Mark Price scored 23 points apiece in No. 17 Georgia Tech's 86-68 romp over North Carolina-Charlotte; and Steve Harris shook off some early foul trouble to score 31 points and pace No. 20 Tulsa to a 71-61 victory over cross-town rival Oral Roberts.

Duke's status as an unbeaten appeared safe after the Blue Devils rolled to a 15-point lead early in the second half. But there was no stopping the Maryland comeback.

"We played as good a second half as I've had in 16 years," Driesell said. "The first half was one of the worst."

Maryland trailed 45-30, but used a 21-6 spurt to take a brief lead with about two minutes left in regulation. The clubs traded the lead until Branch canned a 10-foot jumper with three seconds to go to force the overtime.

LEN BIAS, who led Maryland with 24 points, hit a pair of free throws to give the Terps, 12-4, a 76-72 edge with 25 seconds to go. But Duke's Johnny Dawkins, who had 30 points, hit a jumper with 12 seconds remaining to set the stage for Branch's telling free throws.

"We never made a big thing about rankings or being undefeated," said Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski. "We're still trying to develop as a team."

"It will really improve our confidence by beating the No. 2 team in the country when they were undefeated," Driesell said.

St. John's, victimized at Pitt the last two seasons, never gave the usually vocal home crowd a chance to play a role this time. The Redmen, 12-1, opened up a 38-25 halftime advantage, then blew the game open with a 14-4 romp opening the second half.

"We came out tonight and took the crowd away from them," said All-American guard Chris Mullin, who added 14 points for St. John's. "I heard them last year. I didn't hear them tonight."

Ron Rowan also scored 14 points for St. John's, which connected on 65 percent of its field goal attempts in what Coach Lou Carnesecca called "our best performance."

"We didn't play very well defensively," said Pitt Coach Roy Chipman. "We were tired, playing our second game in three days while St. John's had a week off."

The Panthers, 9-4, got 15 points from Charles Smith, Pitt's only double-figure scorer.

Memphis State's 6-foot-10 meal ticket, All-American forward Keith Lee, was held to six points, and that should have spelled doom for the Tigers. But Turner, nicknamed "The General," came through with his top scoring performance of the season.

"I've heard that generals come through . . . It was a little general that came through for us," said Memphis State Coach Dana Kirk.

Turner — at 5-10, a foot shorter than Lee — got his biggest points on two free throws with 11 seconds remaining as the Tigers staved off a Tulane rally from 16 points down. The Green Wave cut a 43-27 deficit to 52-50 before Turner connected. He added two more free throws with time expired to provide the final margin.

THE ARCHITECTS of Tulane's comeback, John Williams and Clyde Eads, each finished with 14 points.

DePaul, 11-3, never could breathe easy against Old Dominion, although it controlled matters after Tyrone Corbin scored seven straight points for a 46-44 lead. Dallas Comegys, who came off the bench to lead the Blue Demons with 14 points, kept things going with a dunk and Tony Jackson scored the next six points to finally silence the Monarchs, 9-5.

Dave Bliss made 'Wright' choice

DALLAS (AP) - Southern Methodist Coach Dave Bliss is glad Georgetown and North Carolina didn't want Carl Wright.

Wright applied for basketball scholarships at both schools but was turned down.

So he just traveled across town to SMU where Bliss welcomed him with open arms.

Wright scored 18 points in SMU's 84-82 victory over North Carolina on Sunday in Greensboro.

"Carl was overlooked and we're happy about it," said Bliss.

Bliss dubbed his team "The Road Warriors" after the victory over the Atlantic Coast Conference team.

"They have amazed me how cool they can be in places where 17,000 people are against them," Bliss said on Monday.

"Maybe it's the ham in them or whatever but they handled the pressure in two mighty tough places over the weekend, College Station and Greensboro."

SMU, now 14-1, defeated Texas A&M 73-60 in G. Rollie White Coliseum on Friday night then took the long plane ride East before beating the Tarheels of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"They say it was the first time in 22 years that North Carolina had lost a non-conference game in Greensboro," Bliss said."This game gave us the most national exposure that we've had.

"We didn't get this much when we lost to (national champion) Georgetown by a point last year. That loss was a kick in the shins to the public. It made them ask 'who is that team?' Of course, the win over North Carolina helps us a great deal."

Asked if the victory over highly respected North Carolina made the Mustangs an elite team, Bliss replied "We might be closer today than we were yesterday at this time."

"The elite is such a fluctuating thing," Bliss said. "Players are so much better than they have ever been across the country."

Wright was a talented player in the Dallas high school ranks but had an undisciplined tag.

"Carl played hard and that's what we liked about him." Bliss said. "There are still occasions where somebody comes out of the woodwork like Carl and makes it. That's the fun of coaching - turning underdogs into winners."

Georgetown came to Texas and watched Wright play in an all-star game at Waco before turning him down. North Carolina didn't bite.

"There are probably 5,000 kids across country that have the aspiration to play at North Carolina," said Bliss. "It's a classy basketball setting."

Bliss said he'll never forget beating North Carolina in Tarheel country.

"It was a neat feeling," Bliss said. "We caught a quick plane out of there and didn't even change uniforms."

CBS hauls in ACC football

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Atlantic Coast Conference, miffed because only one of its games was televised in last year's College Football Association package, has gone its separate way.

ACC Commissioner Bob James announced Monday his eight-team league had signed a two-year agreement with CBS. An industry source said the conract guarantees the ACC 14 appearances for $3.5 million.

The 63-member CFA will thus begin negotiations with ABC this month without being able to offer one of its five conferences. CBS had already signed a two-year, $18.5-million deal with the Big Ten and Pac-10 conferences.

James said all eight conference schools will continue as active members of the CFA and that he did not believe the CFA's bargaining strength would necessarily be harmed by the ACC's defection.

"I don't see how losing that small number of appearances could hurt them," he said, adding that no decision was made on the CBS offer until after the CFA meeting in Nashville on Sunday prior to the NCAA convention.

"There is just not enough opportunities for 63 schools to appear," he said. "I'm not sure that what we're doing is not really in some measure helping their situation. They have eight fewer schools to satisfy."

James said the ACC was not pressured to hang with the CFA.

"They've been straight up with us and we have no complaints with them," he said. "We hope they have none with us."

Generals make Flutie pitch

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Doug Flutie flew back home to Natick, Mass., Monday prepared to listen to an offer from the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League that could make him a millionaire before he graduates from college.

Boston College's Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback was among the "Today's Top Five" college athletes featured at the NCAA's 20th annual honors luncheon.

Flutie, who played his final game as a collegian Saturday night in the Japan Bowl, again expressed his preference for the National Football League but said he would "like to get some feedback from the NFL," adding: "I'd like to wait for the NFL draft (April 30), but I don't know if it will work out that way. I know now the USFL is serious."

The Generals, who own Flutie's USFL rights, reportedly have made him a non-deferred offer of $5 million for four years.

"I'm only vaguely familiar with the offer," said Flutie, who played in all-star games in Honolulu and Tokyo the past two weekends. "I don't know the details. I've read more in the papers than I've heard on the phone. I've really been out of contact with (agent Bob) Woolf. Tomorrow (Tuesday), I'll sit down and find out what's going on.

"I'll look at both (the NFL and USFL) and see where I'll be happier. If I feel the NFL is not very interested . . . if there are still questions in their minds whether I can play . . . I can't say for sure that I'll wait for the NFL draft. I may make a decision within a week, I may make a decision within a month."

Asked about his geographical preference, Flutie said:

"I'd like to stay close to home or I'd also like to play where it's warm. If I could play in New England it would be beautiful. Los Angeles or Miami would be nice. But I'm not able to pick and choose."

NFL 1984 Salaries

DALLAS (AP) — The top 1984 salaries, by position, for National Football League players, according to a listing published Sunday by the Dallas Morning News.

Figures reflect 1984 base salary, reporting and roster bonuses and signing bonus pro-rated over the length of the contract. For example: Detroit's Billy Sims signed a 5-year contract with a $1 million bonus. His 1984 salary was $600,000; his pro-rated signing bonus is $200,000 a year. In the listing, his salary is listed at $800,000. Many of the contracts contain large sums of deferred money, which reduces the present value.

Bulls continue 'Jordan show'

Associated Press

Chicago Bulls Coach Kevin Loughery isn't one to mince words . . . or comparisons.

"Michael Jordan not only had his finest game as a professional, but in my mind, has all of the ability that made Jerry West one of the greatest players in the history of the National Basketball Association," Loughery said Monday night after another 'Michael Jordan Show,' in which the Bulls' No. 1 draft pick scored the first triple-double of his career.

Jordan turned in a 35-point performance with 14 rebounds and 15 assists as he and his teammates hounded Denver 122-113 to enable the Bulls to even their season mark at 19-19.

Denver fell to 22-17. The Nuggets are now .004 points behind first-place Houston in the Midwest Division.

The Bulls triumph, according to Loughery, "was really a solid win when you consider we had two starters, Orlando Woolridge and Caldwell Jones, out of the lineup. But Jordan's play showed me how well one player can control a game, especially when you consider how well defensively he played and got rebounds when we needed them."

JORDAN'S performance was noted by Denver Coach Doug Moe, who recalled that "We let them score inside too damn easy."

According to Moe, "We had to turn our defense around and Jordan went crazy."

"The key to this game was not just Jordan," Moe added, "but their inside play. That really goofed us up. You know, Jordan is going to make some great plays and it was even fun for me watching him from the other side."

It was Jordan's deception that helped the Bulls achieve their success.

"When I played in Denver (on Nov. 1) and was guarded by T.R. Dunn," Jordan recalled, "I had my worst game of the season. He shadowed me all over the court.

"Tonight, I knew Dunn would guard me again and would play me tough and even hold onto me. This enabled me to make a lot of passes to open players under the basket. More often than not, a big man would help Dunn out."

But in the second half, Jordan said he realized it was time for "the real Michael Jordan to take over because the fans were screaming for me to score."

The rest was easy because, according to Dunn, Denver's 6-foot-4 guard:

"Starting in the third quarter, we were backing off their outside guys to help out inside. It took us completely out of our defense. It had a purpose.

"I would like to see Jordan score 60 points — as long as we win — rather than me holding him under 20 and us losing the game."

The Bulls, after grabbing a 54-48 halftime advantage, soared to a 72-63 lead midway in the third quarter. But the Nuggests, led by Alex English, who scored 12 of his 25 points, outscored the Bulls 24-14 to grab an 87-86 lead entering the final quarter.

The Bulls built up a 105-97 bulge behind Jordan and Steve Johnson, who had 22 points, but with 6:02 remaining, Denver cut the deficit to 105-102. In the next 3½ minutes, Denver was outscored 10-4 as Jordan collected six points and Dave Corzine and Rod Higgins had two points apiece to put the game out of reach.

Bullets 101, Cavaliers 91

Greg Ballard scored 28 points as the Bullets sanapped Cleveland's four-game home winning streak. Jeff Malone added 21 points, including nine in the fourth quarter to keep Washington on top.

World B. Free led the Cavs with 21 points, including four three-point bombs.

Landry, White meeting still several weeks off

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry said it will be several weeks before he talks to Danny White about his future as the team's quarterback.

"It will be awhile," said Landry who will be an expert commentator for ABC-TV at the Super Bowl on Sunday.

Landry won't be able to meet with White immediately after the Super Bowl because of National Football League tryouts in Phoenix.

"I'll go to Phoenix for the scouting combine so it will be several weeks before Danny comes to the office," said Landry.

Landry, who picked the San Francisco 49ers to win, has already met with quarterback Gary Hogeboom.

Landry said "it wouldn't be fair" to speculate on what might happen during the off-season.

"Danny indicated he wanted to talk when the season was over," said Landry.

Landry said he might also talk to third string quarterback Steve Pelleur before the quarterback training camp begins in May.

Hurricanes gain Top 20 status

Associated Press

University of Tulsa basketball coach Nolan Richardson says he has believed for some time that his club belongs in the Top Twenty. And having to wait a while before seeing it happen is something he has come to expect.

"Last year I think we were 14-0 before we got into the Top Twenty," said Richardson. "I like to say our team is like Avis — we try harder, but the Hertz's are always there ahead of us. There are other teams there that are always in the Top 20."

TULSA IS ranked No. 20 this week in the Associated Press' college basketball poll which was announced Monday. And, like last year, the Golden Hurricane had to wait a while — they played their 14th game Monday night, a 71-61 victory over Oral Roberts University. Tulsa is now 12-2.

Georgetown, a 52-50 winner in overtime Saturday against Villanova, remained the solid choice for the top spot in the poll. The Hoyas, 15-0, received 61 of 62 first-place votes and 1,239 points in the balloting of a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Duke received the other first-place vote and 1,174 points to remain in second place. A few hours after the poll was announced, the Blue Devils were knocked from the unbeaten ranks, a 78-76 loser to Maryland in overtime, leaving Georgetown as the only ranked club with an unblemished record. Southern Methodist, which defeated North Carolina 84-82 on Sunday, moved from fourth to third with 1,075 points. St. John's dropped to fourth with 1,062, and Memphis State was fifth with 950.

Rounding out the Top Ten were North Carolina, which was fifth last week, followed by Syracuse, Indiana, Kansas and DePaul.

Illinois was 15th last week but jumped to 11th after victories over Michigan and Michigan State. Louisiana Tech was 12th, followed by Oklahoma, Oregon State, Boston College, Virginia Commonwealth, Georgia Tech, Villanova, Michigan State and Tulsa.

Oregon State made the biggest jump in the poll, improving six places from last week after victories over Oregon and Kansas State.

"I think we're a Top 20 team and a Top 20 program," Richardson said of his Tulsa team, which finished No. 12 in the final poll last season. "But year in and year out we've got to prove ourselves."

Richardson is in his fifth season at Tulsa, and in the four previous years he has directed the Golden Hurricane to postseason tournaments. This year he had to rebuild after losing two of his top players — Bruce Vanley and Ricky Ross — from last year's 27-4 club, but Tulsa has hardly missed a beat.

"Sometimes you get good athletes and sometimes you get good players," he said. "We go for the good athletes, and hope to make them into good players that fit our system."

He's got one in guard Steve Harris, a 6-5 senior who is averaging 22.3 points per game. He scored 31 against Oral Roberts, and had 35 last week in a victory over then-No. 8 Oklahoma.

FORMER MHS star Herbert Johnson, a 6-10 senior, has averaged more than 18 points per game and 9.8 rebounds per game, and has combined with Harris to give Tulsa a solid inside-ouside punch.

Richardson said cracking the Top 20 is a credit to the players and the program, but that he wasn't going to get too excited about it.

"The Top 20 in basketball is kind of like a report card," he said. "It's nice to see you're doing well, but it's how you do at the end of the semester that counts."

The Top Twenty teams in the Associated Press' college basketball poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, total points based on 20-19-18-17-16-15-14-13-12-11-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1, record through Sunday, Jan. 13 and last week's ranking.

Crenshaw, Kite enter PGA Tour with goals

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin golfers Ben Crenshaw and Tom Kite are heading into the PGA tour for this year with different outlooks and similar objectives — winning.

Crenshaw, 33, wants to leave behind the dual distractions of being defending Masters champion and a divorce from his wife, Polly.

"I feel at ease now," Crenshaw said while preparing for his first tournament of the year in Phoenix this week. "That was 1984. I'm ready to go out and work again."

Kite, 35, will be taking along more than his golf clubs and the requisite colorful wardrobe. He'll be taking wife Christy, daughter Stephanie, 3, and twin sons David and Paul, who were born in September.

"Since the twins were born, I haven't played much. But Christy's always traveled with me, and Stephanie went out on the tour when she was 3 months old. There's nothing worse than coming home to an empty hotel room. And I don't want to miss my kids growing up," Kite said.

FOR CRENSHAW, 1984 was a bittersweet year. He ended 12 years of frustration by winning the Masters, his first major tournament win. The victory capped a 1½-year comeback after his earnings had slipped to $54,000 in 1982, and it removed a heavy burden from his psyche. No longer can critics say Crenshaw can't win the big one.

But soon, his game started to suffer again, victim of failing concentration caused by the divorce and demands on his time after winning that prestigious tournament.

"I was so relieved by winning the Masters, but then I couldn't concentrate after that. Between the divorce and the Masters ... Sometimes you get keyed up too much. It got to be too much of a battle," he said.

Crenshaw's plan for winning again is to start strong.

"They key is to be consistent on the tour for the first six months and after that I can do a better job of preparing for big tournaments without playing (in tournaments). I always look forward to the first part of the year."

He also has learned how important concentration is to a golfer. It's a new year, and he wants a fresh start devoid of distractions.

"I know when I play well I can beat anyone. Like most golfers, I'm never satisfied. That's the nature of the game."

KITE SAYS his long-term goal is to improve.

"Last year, I won two tournaments (Doral and Atlanta) for the first time in the same year. I haven't reached my prime. I want to stay in the top 10."

Last year, Kite finished fifth on the PGA money list with $348,640, increasing his earnings to more than $2.2 million since turning pro in 1972.

"I just started playing again this week after a month layoff. I'm pleased with the practice sessions. I think I'll have a better year than last year. The last four years have been very good," he said of seasons which saw him first, third, ninth and fifth on the money list.

Last year, Kite said, "I really came close to a phenomenal year."

But by July, his concentration began to slip.

"I was in great shape through June. But toward the end of the year I was building a new house to get ready for the twins and I had River Place going," he said.

Pound firms, dollar surges

LONDON (AP) — The British pound firmed early today, a day after the Bank of England hiked interest rates to defend it. But a surging dollar took the wind out of the recovery and went on to shatter records against the Italian lira and French franc.

The pound, which hit an all-time low of $1.10 in Hong Kong early Monday, recovered two cents in London shortly after the Bank of England reintroduced its minimum lending rate and put it at 12 percent, effectively boosting all British interest rates by 1½ points. But sterling then began falling and continued the drop in New York, where it closed at $1.1125.

When trading opened today in the Far East, a modest recovery began which carried the pound above $1.1200 after London markets opened. But a strong dollar began to overtake sterling, and by late morning it was back down to $1.1140, just a shade above its all-time London closing low of $1.1137, set Monday.

David Morrison, chief economist at the stockbroker firm Simon and Coates, said sterling was still "in extremely treacherous waters."

"We have stabilized a bit, and it is so far, so good. (But) I don't think that interest rates can ease in the slightest without putting pressure on the pound."

The dollar was being stiffened by predictions of favorable U.S. retail sales and industrial production figures, due out later this week.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Monday:

–3.1845 West German marks, a 12-year high, up from 3.1710.

–2.6800 Swiss francs, a 9-year high, up from 2.6735.

–9.7725 French francs, an all-time high, up from 9.7575.

–3.5960 Dutch guilders, a 13-year high, up from 3.5910.

–1,957.50 Italian lire, an all-time high, up from 1,946.25.

–1.32385 Canadian dollars, down from 1.32425.

Tokyo markets were closed for a holiday. But in London, the dollar was quoted at 255.25 yen, compared with a closing 254.55 yen in Tokyo on Monday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $302.80 a troy ounce, compared with late Monday's $301. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $302.50.

Yields mixed on treasury bills

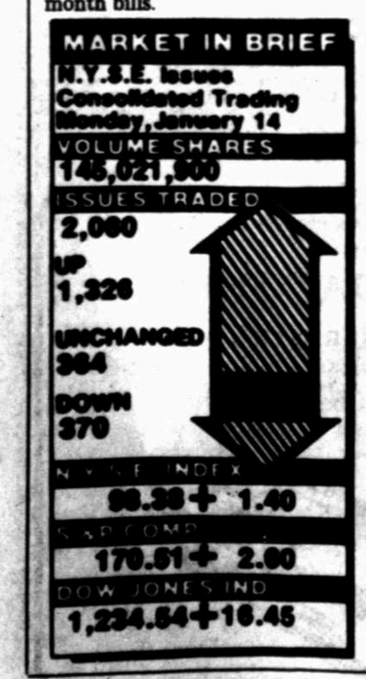

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on short-term securities were mixed in Monday's auctions with interest rates on three-month bills declining while rates on six-month bills edged up slightly.

The Treasury Department sold $7 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.74 percent, down from 7.78 percent last week. Another $7 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 8.05 percent, up from 8.02 percent last week.

The decline put three-month bills at their lowest rate since 7.62 percent on Jan. 17, 1983, while it was the highest rate on six-month bills since 8.19 percent on Dec. 28 of last year.

Interest rates have generally been dropping since early September when they reached peaks of 10.63 percent for three-month bills and 10.75 percent for six-month bills.

The new discount rates understate the actual return to investors — 8 percent for three-month bills and 8.51 percent for six-month bills.

Major bank cuts prime rate to 10.5 percent

NEW YORK (AP) — Chase Manhattan Bank cut its prime rate a quarter point to 10.5 percent today, the second large bank to drop the business lending rate to its lowest level in 17 months.

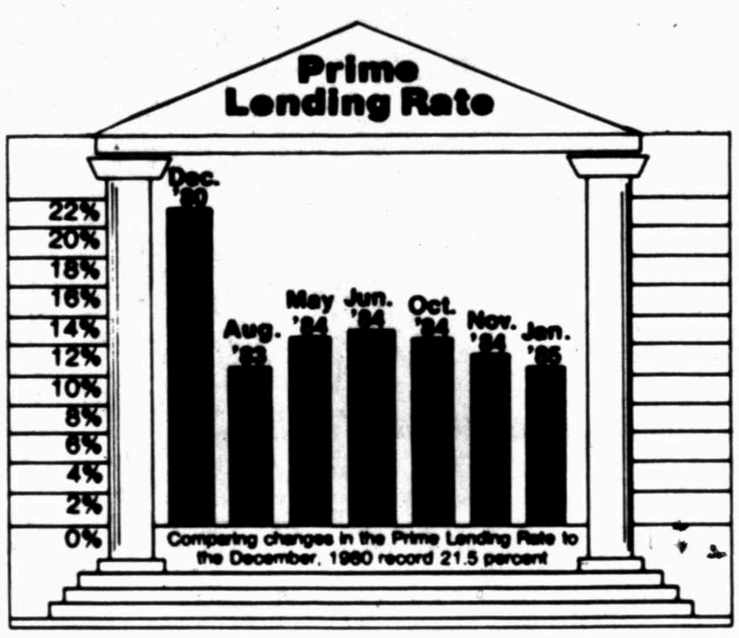

Manufacturers Hanover Trust, the nation's fourth largest bank, announced Monday that it was lowering its prime from the 10.75 percent level that had prevailed for about a month. Chase, the No. 3 commercial bank, followed suit at the opening of business today.

The last time a major bank had a prime rate as low as 10.5 percent rate was for about five months ending in early August 1983. The last time the prime rate was below 10.5 percent was October 1978.

The latest reduction follows a steady decline in money-market interest rates, which determine how much banks must pay to borrow funds for lending.

The prime rate is the base upon which banks compute interest charges on short-term business loans. Their most creditworthy customers frequently pay less than the prime, while smaller businesses typically pay more.

Manufacturers Hanover was the leader among the big banks in the last round of cutting the closely watched rate, trimming its prime by half a percentage point to 10.75 percent on Dec. 17. That reduction was matched over the next several days by other major banks.

The latest reduction was the eighth decline in the prime since Sept. 27, when it was cut a full percentage point to 12 percent from the 13 percent rate that had prevailed since late June.

Coming an hour from the close of trading on Wall Street, the prime rate reduction Monday sent stock prices soaring for a one-day gain in the Dow Jones industrial average of 16.45 points, the highest closing level since Nov. 6.

Meanwhile, there was further evidence of increased competition between major oil producers as Norway's government-owned oil monopoly said it was abandoning official oil prices, at least temporarily.

"The reason for the new rate is we feel it more accurately reflects our current lower cost of funds," said John Meyers, a spokesman for Manufacturers Hanover.

On Wall Street, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which was up 8.50 points with an hour left in the session, surged to finish the session up 16.45 at 1,234.54. It was the highest close for the well-known market barometer since it stood at 1,244.15 on Election Day last Nov. 6.

In Norway, the government monopoly Statoil said Monday it would be negotiating "spot-market" related oil prices for its contract customers, abandoning official oil prices for the time being.

Although it said its prices would be a secret, at current open market levels of $27.10 a barrel the country's North Sea Brent blend oil is selling for nearly $2 a barrel below Norway's most recent official price and more than $1.50 below Britain's last announced official price.

In other economic developments Monday:

—Japan recorded a trade surplus of $33.11 billion with the United States last year, up from $18.1 billion a year earlier, the Japanese Finance Ministry reported. Japan exported $59.94 billion worth of goods to the U.S. while importing $26.83 billion worth from it.

—New York investor Asher B. Edelman said he has no immediate plans to change his $416 million bid to acquire Datapoint Corp. despite the computer maker's rejecting the offer. Sources said Continental Telecom Inc. of Atlanta was discussing with Edelman the possibility of helping him purchase Datapoint, and Continental confirmed it was talking to Edelman but declined comment.

—Yields on three-month bills declined while rates on six-month bills edged up slightly.

Former House Speaker Bill Clayton, left, and Commissioner of Agriculture Jim Hightower discussed farmers seeking regulation of irrigation gas at a press conference on Monday.

Hightower seeks state gas control

AUSTIN (AP) — There is a need for state control of natural gas sold to fuel irrigation pumps, which now costs some farmers up to $40,000 a month, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower says.

The 1923 law that set up Texas Railroad Commission regulation of most natural gas left out irrigation gas. The omission now haunts some farmers, Hightower said Monday.

"Texas farmers are spending some $450 million a year to pay this piper. Yet the tune being played by these gas utilities is right out of a horror movie, as any farm irrigator will attest," he said.

About 40 percent of Texas farmers depend on irrigation. Hightower said they must deal with uncertain prices that sometimes change in the middle of irrigation season. The price of irrigation gas has increased up to 400 percent over the past decade. Farmers pay up to $40,000 a month for the gas, Hightower said.

"Our legislation asks for absolutely no special breaks for farmers, no privileged rates, no extra procedural protection. All we seek is to be treated equally with other consumer and industrial users of natural gas," he told a Capitol news conference.

An official for Amarillo-based Energas said her company opposes state regulation of irrigation gas "because we do not feel it is in the interest of the customer group using natural gas for irrigation."

Judith Kerr, an Energas vice president, said irrigation gas demand is a "fluctuating market" and it is best for prices to remain unregulated.

Diamond Shamrock spokeswoman Kathy Stanchek said, "We are really not in a position yet to say anything."

A Texas Department of Agriculture report said the lack of regulation has left farmers in an untenable situation.

"Some utilities have even gone so far as to raise their rates, unannounced, after the crops were planted and when they knew the farmers were helpless to do anything about it," the report said.

The legislative push for regulation will be led by former House Speaker Billy Clayton who was hired by the new Texas Agricultural Energy Users Association.

Hightower said the problem is more than "just a farmer issue."

"All Texans must be concerned since these ever-higher gas prices are threatening the survival of farmers whom we count on to provide a substantial amount of our food, our jobs and our economic activity," he said.

A Department of Agriculture release quoted farmers who "sweat" the arrival of the monthly gas bill.

Bennie Claunch, a High Plains cotton farmer, said, "If we don't get some help pretty soon on the price of energy for irrigation, there are going to be a lot of farmers going out of business. The slack has gone out of the rope."

IPAA says tax could cripple oil exploration

HOUSTON (AP) — A bill that would eliminate some income tax incentives for independent oil operators shows Washington officials still don't understand how the oil business works, said the president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

Jon Rex Jones, also president of Jones Exploration Co. of Houston, said Monday an IPAA study shows operators will do at least 25 percent less drilling as a result of tax changes proposed by the Department of Treasury.

"I think they simply don't understand the formation of capital in the oil business," he said.

Jones said the proposed tax law change would eliminate a number of business deductions that now make it possible for small operators to explore for oil and develop new petroleum reserves.

The tax bill, he said, will discourage investors from risking capital with oil exploration, making it more difficult for small operators to raise the money needed to drill.

In addition, said Jones, the tax bill provides a disincentive for wildcat drilling because operators cannot get tax deductions for dry holes as they have in the past.

He said that if an operator drills a new well in an old lease containing an operating well, he will not be able to deduct the drilling expense if the new well is dry unless he abandons the operating well.

"Often an operator could plug the producing well, expense the dry hole costs and come out ahead," he said.

Jones said the plan to do away with the percentage depletion deduction, which enables oil operators to reduce their tax bill by a set amount as reserves in an oil well are used up, would cause hundreds of stripper wells to be plugged and abandoned.

A stripper well is one that produces oil at the rate of 10 barrels or less a day. Such wells provide about 10 percent of the nation's oil.

"Once you plug those wells, they'll never be re-entered," said Jones "That's oil that will be lost forever."

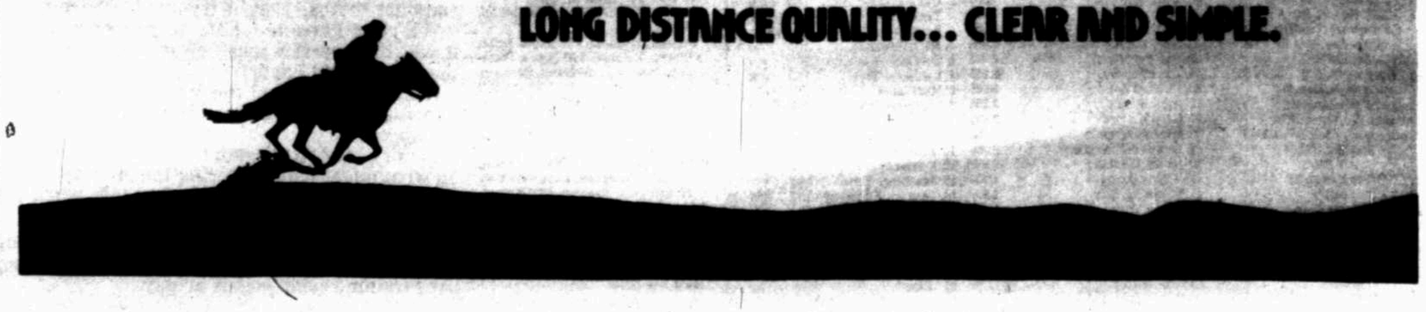

Often, he said, it is only the tax deduction that makes the wells profitable. If that deduction is eliminated, as proposed by the Treasury tax bill, then those stripper wells will be closed.

Another tax proposal would eliminate the current system of expensing intangible drilling costs, a system that now enables operators to deduct from profits over half of the cost of drilling a well. The plan also would forbid deductions for dry holes, unless the operator abandons the whole lease.

Why Should ClayDesta Communications Be Your Long Distance Company?

- No sign-up or minimum monthly billing charges.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Prolific well flows 262 barrels

Staff Reports

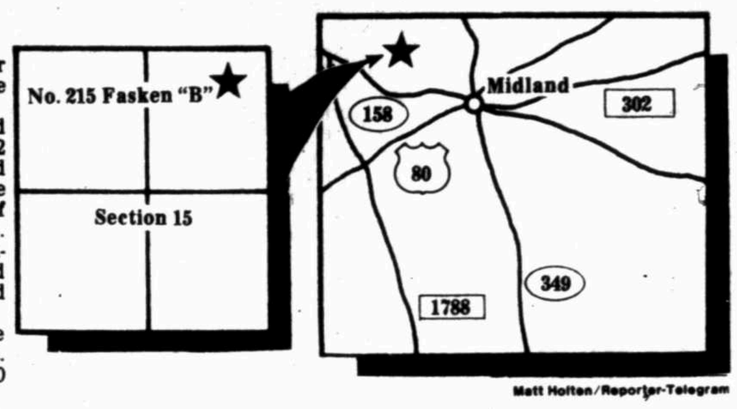

A prolific Mississippian producer has been completed to extend the Moonlight field of Midland County.

THE ANSCHUTZ CORP. tested the No. 215 Fasken "B" to flow 262 bopd of 46 gravity crude, 630 Mcfpd and no water on a 8/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 4,200 psi. Gas-oil ratio was 2,405:1. The well is flowing from perforations 11,526 to 11,545 ft., which had been treated with 1,500 barrels and 75,000 lbs. 10/20 sand.

Drilled to a depth of 11,950 ft., the Fasken is plugged back to 11,798 ft. A five inch liner was set from 10,950 to 11,950 ft.

On a ground elevation of 2,860 ft., formation tops chosen were the Yates, 3,004; Grayburg, 4,524; Spraberry, 8,134; Strawn, 10,625; the Upper Mississippian Lime, 11,387; and the Lower Mississippian Lime at 11,903 ft.

The well is located 660 ft. from north and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 15, Block 40, T-1-S, T&P survey, six miles northwest of Midland.

Fusselman gas well flows 15.6 Mmcf

A prolific gas well has been finaled in the Fusselman zone of the Nine Mile Draw field of Reeves County.

TEXACO, INC. tested the No. 1 Reeves "BG" Fee for a calculated absolute open flow of 15,644 Mcfpd with a flowing tubing pressure of 3,003 psi. The well is flowing from perforations 13,374 to 14,006 ft., which had beenacidized with 2,000 gallons of 20 percent NeFe acid.

The Reeves was drilled to a total depth of 14,300 ft. and plugged back

On an elevation of 2,866.5 ft. kb, formation tops are the Lasse 4,505; Devonian, 13,336; the Fusselman, 13,404; and the Montoya at 13,617 ft.

Location of the well is 1,980 ft. from north and 1,980 ft. from east lines of Section 19, Block 54, T-7, T&P survey, nine miles southeast of Toyah.

Culberson workover produces 4.7 Mmcf

A recompletion has resulted in a prolific Morrow gas producer in the Covington field of Culberson County.

ARCO OIL & GAS CO. completed the No. 1 Covington State for a calculted absolute open flow of 4,700 Mcfpd with a flowing tubing pressure of 3,341 psi. The well is flowing from perforations 12,078 to 12,089 ft., which had been acidized with 17,250 gallons of 20 percent NeFe acid.

Total depth of the well is 13,146 ft., plugged back to 13,040 ft. A 7 5/8 inch liner was hung from 8,100 to 13,090 ft.

On a ground elevation of 3,748 ft., formation tops are Bell Canyon, 1,365; Cherry Canyon, 2,282; Brushy Canyon, 3,502; Barnett, 12,614; Woodford, 13,015; and the Silurian, 13,060 ft.

Location of the site is 1,320 ft. from north and 1,320 ft. from east lines of Section 7, Block 114, PSL, 22.5 miles southwest of Orla.

The well was plugged back to 10,671 ft. and sidetrack drilled to 13,146 ft. The operator plugged back the well from the Covington (Atoka) zone.

Spraberry Trend sees flurry of activity

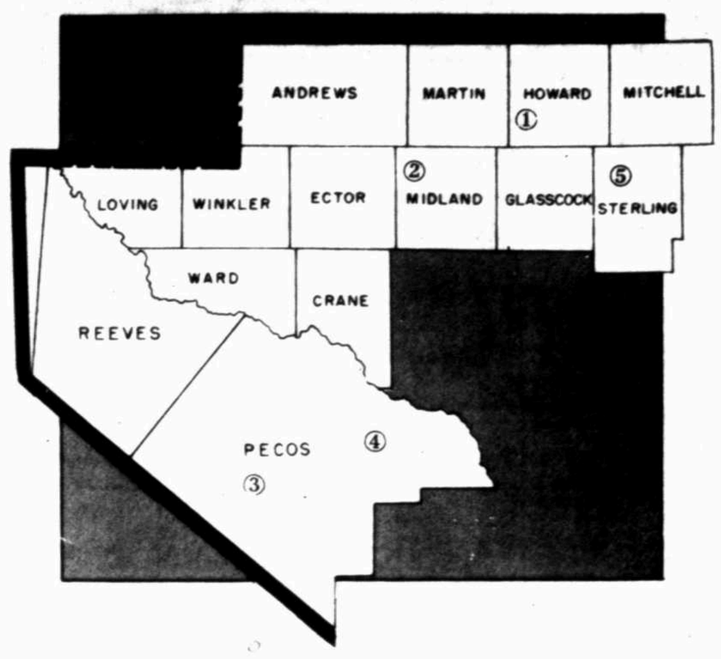

The Spraberry (Trend Area) has seen a flurry of activity recently.

A spokesman for Adobe Oil &Gas Corp. said his company is drilling some infield wells on an 80 acre spacing to see if the reserves warrant drilling more wells. He said the company has drilled about 30 wells so far, and have received good results, about what the company was expecting. Adobe expects to drill more wells during the year.

Another company active in the Spraberry (Trend Area) is Parker & Parsley, Inc. Jim Moring with the company said, though, that his company has no extra plans fo the field. "We actually drilled fewer wells in 1984 than in 1983, he noted. He said the Spraberry is a field that "we can drill - a good area for development-type drilling." Parker & Parsley, he said, plans to remain about as active in the field as they are presently.

Other companies developing the Spraberry area are Tiburon Petroleu, UNESCO, and Brazos Petroleum.

Stock market gains

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks extended their rally in heavy trading today as the banking industry cut its prime lending rate to 10½ percent.

Blue chips turned mixed after an early advance, however.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials — up 16.45 Monday to its highest level since Nov. 6 — slipped 1.77 to 1,232.77 after two hours today.

But advances held a 2-1 lead over declines on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index rose 0.30 to 98.68.

Big Board volume surged to 76.61 million shares at noon EST, against 41.96 million at that hour Monday.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Don't invest lump payment in hasty, ill-advised schemes

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My husband was killed in an accident and I came into his insurance money, which exceeds $400,000. I do not work. My two children are six and nine. The payments on my home mortgage are $225 a month and I have 15 more years to pay it off. I have no other debts.

What advice can you give me as to know to handle this money? I have never had any large amount before and need help.

A. By this time, I'm sure you've had lots of different advice — some good, some bad — from salespeople and other types who descend on widows who have received large insurance sums.

Doyle

My standard advice to someone in your situation is to make no major long-term investment decisions in a hurry. Instead, get your money into a safe place where it earns interest. Short-term U.S. Treasury bills, which come in 13-, 26- and 52-week maturities and can be purchased through a bank, are about the most logical thing.

Keep enough money in an interest-paying checking account to meet your bills and other needs. If any characters come calling and say you have to act fast and turn your money over to them or lose out on good deals, show them out and lock the door.

There are a multitude of places you can put your money for the long term. Neither I nor anyone else can tell you which will work out best. You have to make the final decisions.

If I were in a situation like yours, I might put about $200,000 into U.S. Treasury notes with maturities of five to 10 years, a bit less than $100,000 in bank certificates of deposit with maturities of no more than five years, about $20,000 in a bank or S&L money market deposit account.

Then I'd consider investing the remaining $80,000 or so someplace where it stands a chance to grow in value to offset inflation. A good choice there could be common stocks or mutual funds holding common stocks. Be advised, however, that stocks and common stock mutual funds entail risk because their values can go down as well as up.

Q. I have three "whole" life insurance policies, with total death benefits of $80,000. I have borrowed the loan values of these policies at the 6 percent interest. The insurance company is offering to amend the policies by reducing the monthly premiums I pay and increasing the interest rate on my policy loans. What do you think of this?

A. Unless the reductions in the premiums are substantial and-or other terms of the policy amendments are very favorable to you, the insurance company's proposal doesn't seem to bear any similiarity to "The Godfather's offer" you can't refuse.

Study all terms of that offer carefully. There may be terms in it that make it worth your while. On the surface, however, it seems to be little more than the insurance company's effort to get out from under a 6 percent loan commmitment.

Many old whole life policies allow borrowing at that rate of even lower. When you have one of those policies, it's just plain foolish not to borrow to the hilt and invest the borrowed money at the higher rates available at banks and elsewhere.

• • •

Q. My employer proveds me with $200,000 of term life insurance. My wife's employer provides her with $100,000 of the same type of insurance. An insurance agent says that's not enough and wants us to buy whole life insurance. He says the surviving spouse will need the money to pay federal estate taxes after one of us dies. What do you say?

A. The kindest thing I can say is that the insurance agent's recommendation is badly out of date. Since January 1, 1982, one spouse can leave to the other spouse everything he or she owns — free of federal estate tax. That's one of the provisions of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1981.

An unkind thought might be that the insurance agent is looking for the fat commissions on whole life policies.

• • •

Q. A $100 face value Series EE U.S. Savings Bond can be purchased for $50. It is my understanding that the bond builds up interest based on the rate U.S. Treasury bonds pay and is never less than 7.5 percent. How many years does it take for the EE bond to mature at face value?

A. Reaching maturity and being worth face value don't necessarily match. Most likely, an EE bond will be worth more than its face value at the time it matures.

The EE bonds issued since Nov. 1, 1982, have an "original maturity" of exactly 10 years. Uncle Sam promises that interest will accumulate on those bonds for that length of time. Whether or not those bonds will be granted "extended maturities," so that interest will continue to build up on them after that time, has not been announced.

Interest accumulates on those bonds, as well as on E and EE bonds and on "Savings Notes," at a rate equal to 85 percent of the average yield on five-year U.S. Treasury Securities and never below 7.5 percent — only if the bonds are held for five years after Nov. 1, 1982, or for five years past their first interest accrual date following Nov. 1, 1982.

That variable rate of interest changes every six months. For the period from Nov. 1, 1984, through April 30, 1985, it is 10.94 percent. In the time since the variable rate arrangement went into effect, it has averaged 10 percent.

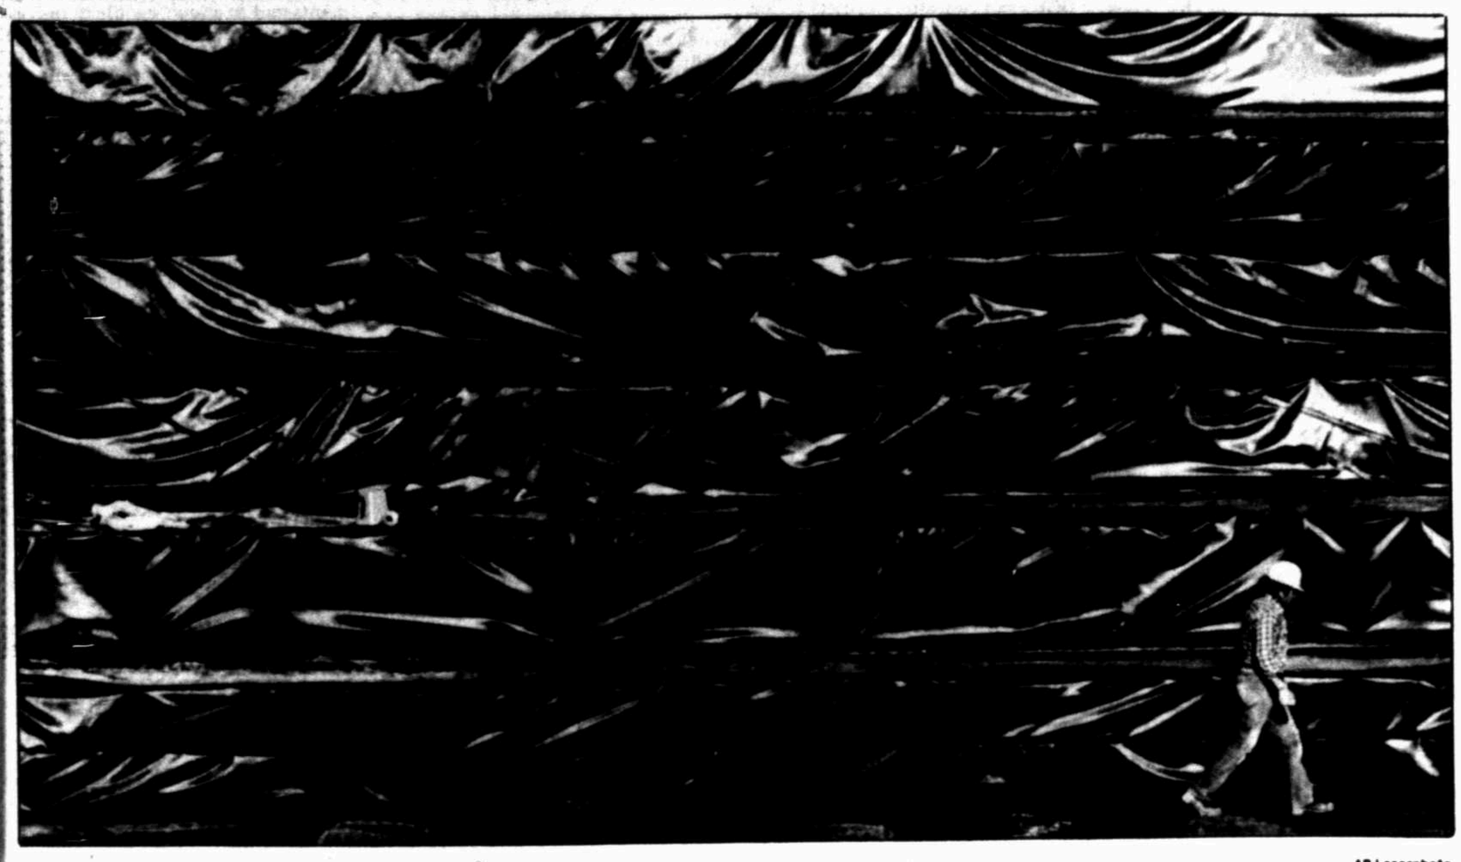

So, if you buy an EE bond now and the variable rate stays above the 7.5 percent guaranteed minimum, that bond will be worth more than its face value long before its maturity date.

How much sooner? That depends on what the variable rate will be in the future. And nobody can predict that with accuracy.

Confusing? Indeed it is. Here's the important point to remember. If you buy an EE bond now, you must hold it for at least five years to get the variable rate. Owners of E and EE bonds and Saving Notes issued before Nov. 1, 1982, must hold them at least five years past that date to get that higher rate.

Local students' livestock will be auctioned

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Just what "quality in livestock" in Midland County means in terms of money will be indicated tonight when 120 calves, swine and lambs will be auctioned in the 36th annual Midland County Livestock Show.

The premium livestock will be exhibited by Midland and Greenwood 4-H Club members and Future Farmers of America (FFA) chapter members when the auction begins at 7 p.m. today in the Midland County Exhibit Building.

"The quality is as good as it has ever been," Charles W. Green, retired Midland County agricultural agent, said of the steers in the show. "I wouldn't say it was the best ever. I didn't see anything out there that would be sifted (culled) anywhere."

Farmer Rusty Jones, president of the livestock association, described the quality of the show lambs "as high as it's ever been."

"We've had a real good quality barrow show," said Midland County Agent Earnest Kiker.

"What really counts," noted Green, "is the kids, and they weren't down (in numbers)."

Approximately 200 4-H'ers and FFA members showed the steers, swine, lambs, chickens and rabbits in the judging of the animals last weekend.

"There were a few of them (younger exhibiters) crying when the lambs were dragging them around," said Green. "They were unhappy with themselves and the lambs."

If there are any tears shed tonight, they may be over the youngsters' parting with their auctioned animals or the thrill of making some money from selling their finished-out and groomed projects.

The 7 p.m. auction will be preceded by a 5 p.m. barbecue supper and the 6:30 p.m. presentation of awards.

The show's grand champion calf, a 1,225-pound white-faced Chianina-cross named Baldy, will be exhibited tonight by Stephanie Smith, a 15-year-old Greenwood 4-H'er.

"It's my first grand champion," Stephanie said, "and I've been showing calves for four years. We've placed pretty high but never got a champion." The steer judge, Stanley Young of Tahoka, said the June 1983 championship calf had "good muscle and was best all-around," she noted.

"I was very thrilled," Stephanie said.

Forty-two steers, more than 150 lambs and 111 hogs were in the show.

In the 1984 auction, the grand champion calf sold for $2.85 a pound, and in 1983, the grand champion steer was auctioned off for $3.05 a pound.

The grand champion hog sold for $5.75 a pound last year, and the three champion lambs sold for $6.50, $5.75 and $5.35 a pound.

Chris White, a 16-year-old Midland High School FFA member, showed the 1985 reserve grand champion calf, a black Angus.

"I couldn't believe he made it," Chris said of his 1,140-pound calf.

Julie Driver, a 12-year-old Greenwood 4-H'er, exhibited the champion medium-wool lamb, a heavyweight lamb which weighed in at 120 pounds. "I was excited," she said.

Her older sister, Michelle Driver, a 17-year-old Greenwood 4-H'er, showed the champion cross-bred lamb, a 101-pound lightweight animal. "It's a big deal," she said, "but I've had other champions."

Nine-year-old Clay Garner showed the champion finewool lamb, a 111-pound heavyweight creature.

"This is the first-time I've showed," said the Midland 4-H Club member. "Well," he said of his championship, "I felt happy. I felt proud."

Stacey Bryant, 15, of the MHS FFA Chapter, showed the reserve champion crossbred lamb.

"This is my first year to have a champion lamb," said Stacey, who has been showing animals since age 9 when he first went into 4-H Club work. "I kind of felt a little cheated," he said, since his 125-pound heavyweight lamb was beat out of the championship by Michelle Driver's 101-pound lightweight lamb. But Stacey, who noted that heavier lambs usually win the show, said the judge reasoned that the lighter lamb would "dress out with a better carcass" than would his lamb and that "nothing would be wasted."

"I didn't think anything would be wasted on mine," he said, "but it's the judge's opinion (that counts)."

Annette Beier, 16, of the Midland Lee High School FFA chapter, exhibited the grand champion hog, a barrow.

"(I felt) pretty good, since it was my first year in ag," Annette said. "It was the first time I had shown pigs."

Pam Adams, 15, of Midland showed the reserve grand champion hog.

"I was a little bit scared," she said. "I was nervous. I was happy I won it."

Devices 'handy' for handicapped people

By RON GILMORE

It may look like a normally buttoned shirt, but all is not what it appears. One strip of Velcro sewed to the length of the hem, some buttons sewed on the wrong side and presto — a shirt easy enough for a handicapped person to put on that looks like it has been buttoned.

The shirt is but one of hundreds of devices that are available to people needing help in the normal daily activities that are no longer quite so easy.

"We stress what they can do, not what they can't do," said Mary Piette, director of physical and occupational therapy at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Ms. Piette stood next to a wall rack containing numerous devices that are used in therapy with patients.

"They can buy them here also to take home," said Laura McQueen,an occupational therapist at MMH. "These devices are not just limited to quadriplegics and paraplegics," she said.

"They can be very useful to elderly people who may be weak in the hands, legs or arms, people suffering from arthritis and anyone who has a weakness which makes the daily activities difficult."

Taking a cloth band with a hooped wire attached to one end and a curved wire on the other, Ms. Peitte began demonstrating the devices.

"This one can be used for people who have difficulty buttoning clothes," she said. Putting the band on her hand, she deftly looped the hooped wire over the button of her jacket, and pulled it through the button hole.

Quadriplegic has learned to adapt

She can type with her thumb. At 25 words per minute, Joyce Lynde, quadraplegic since a car accident two years ago, can spit out a term paper faster than most beginning college students who have the use of both hands.

Before purchasing an electronic typewriter with an automatic advance that allowed her to put the paper in with only one hand, Ms. Lynde was unable to type.

"Everything on it is done by pushing buttons," said Ms. Lynde. "There are no knobs to turn or levers to pull."

The ambitious 27-year-old is enrolled at Midland College and not sure what she wants to study yet.

"I was a respiratory therapist before my accident," she said. "But I am unable to continue in the area that I was trained in."

One thing is certain — she wants to work in the medical field.

More than 2,800 MC students start classes

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The late surge of prospective students who registered for the spring semester late last week and early this week pushed the enrollment count at Midland College to 2,874 for opening day classes Monday.

Late registration, which also began Monday, is expected to bring in another 500 to 600 students, equaling the number enrolled at the beginning of the fall semester, a spokesman for the college reported. The record, set in the spring 1983, was 3,266 students.

"We had a tremendous surge of students during the last two hours of registration Thursday evening," according to Dee Windsor, associate dean of students and registrar. "All of them were processed before the 8 p.m. closing time.

MC President Dr. Jess Parrish reported past increased enrollment figures formerly aided in the college's efforts to collect additional money from the state.

This year, however, "it's too early to tell," Parrish said. "Community colleges are funded according to a formula basis. Under the present funding formula, we're scheduled to receive about $600,000 less than we did last year. So the late enrollment totals will really make a difference."

Parrish noted that school administrators already are considering which areas could see cuts in light of a $600,000 loss in state aid.

Exhibit chronicles role of Texas women

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Since Indian squaws toted tribal teepees across Texas as their warrior mates watched, women have carried a large part of the load in the development of the state.

Reading like a game of Trivial Pursuits: Texas Women's Edition, an exhibit entitled "Texas Women — A Celebration of History" opens today at the Presidential Museum in Odessa.

It chronicles the role played by women in Texas history, noting the contributions made in areas ranging from politics to construction and arts to education.

Much has been made of Indian tribal chiefs. Less attention has been paid to their squaws, who early in the state's history assembled and dismabtled entire camps, which enabled the chiefs to conserve their strength.

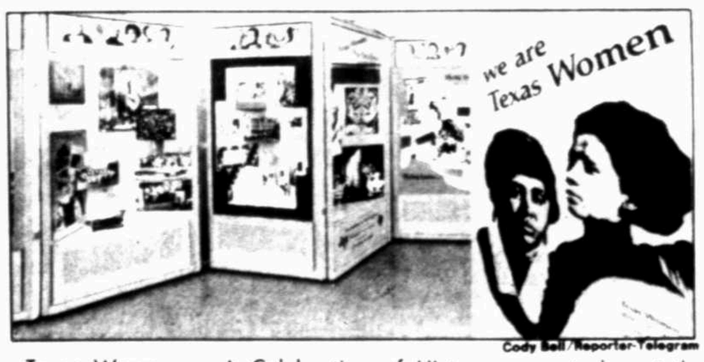

The exhibit notes the teepees the women carried between tribal grounds weighed up to 300 pounds, but could be put up and down in 30 minutes.

Moving through history, the exhibit traces significant strides women have made and focuses on the varied personalities behind the achievements.

How the "Yellow Rose of Texas" was actually a black woman who sent word to Sam Houston of Santa Ana's whereabouts, aiding victory at the battle of San Jacinto.

In the 17 days between the passage of the state's women's voting act and the 1918 primary, 386,000 women registered and elected the first woman ever to a statewide office — Annie Webb Blanton as State Superintendent of Public Education.

Spirit of Martin Luther King didn't die in 1968

It was April 5, 1968, and clouds of smoke from blocks of burning buildings obscured Capitol Hill in Washington, D.C. Hundreds of years of blacks' frustrated hopes and dreams had finally ignited in a racial holocaust.

Martin Luther King Jr. was dead, a victim the day before of the hatred which he had fought all his life.

I was 15, a high school sophomore living in McLean, Va., a suburb of Washington, where my father was employed. My family and I had just moved to McLean from Austin the preceding January.

At my high school, which out of an enrollment of 2,000 had less than 50 black students, rumors were flying that "the blacks" were going to take over the school. (None of the rumors explained just how 50 students would take control of 1,950 others.)

In my neighborhood, the people next door were buying guns and ammunition to protect themselves from "the blacks" in Washington, should they decide to burn the more affluent sections of northern Virginia. Of course there weren't any blacks living in our subdivision; only since the mid-1960s had Jews been allowed to live there.

By April 7, 10 people had died in Washington. Fires continued to break out in the poorer sections of the city. Riots had erupted in 109 other cities, killing 29 people. Most of the victims were black.

I felt sad, frustrated and angry, both at the black rioters and the paranoid whites around me. It seemed that all the good King had done in his life would be consumed by the violent reaction to his death.

I remember the South before the mid-1960s, before King and thousands of other Americans stood up — or sat down — for their rights. Bigotry reigned supreme and segregation was the law of the land.

I remember the "Whites Only" and "Coloreds Only" signs on the water fountains at the Capitol in Austin. I remember when the nicest cafe in my grandparents' home town in East Texas closed rather than have to serve blacks.

I felt the injustice of Jim Crow, too. I was raised to take the "all men are created equal" rhetoric of the Declaration of Independence seriously. How could one race or ethnic group somehow be more equal than another?

My first memories of King date from the spring of 1963, when he was organizing sit-ins to integrate restaurants in Birmingham, Ala. Television captured the brutality of the segregationists' response; it was difficult to ignore police clubbing peaceful protesters while streams of water from fire hoses knocked others down as they tried to flee.

And then here was this man who wouldn't be cowed by the violence. He daily risked his life for what he believed in. He was willing to go to jail for breaking laws which he considered unjust. He had the power to inspire others, black and white, rich and poor, to risk their lives for justice.

And, wonder of wonders, he couldn't be seduced by a desire for revenge; he refused to adopt the methods of his enemies. His commitment to non-violent resistance never wavered, even when his house was repeatedly bombed. He was a true Christian in the best sense of the word; he loved his enemies.

King stirred your emotions. People felt, and continue to feel, strongly about him.

Many whites saw him as a threat to the established order of things, which was true, as long as segregation was part of that established order. They tried to discredit him and his followers. Some claimed he was a communist or fellow traveler, although there was no evidence to support this accusation.

In early writings, King called communism "cold atheism wrapped in the garments of materialism." He also rejected the Communist tenet that the end justified the means. To King, the end never justified the means. Violence could not be used to achieve justice.

My last memory of King was of the final speech he gave on the night before he was killed, his "I've been to the mountaintop" speech. Again it is a television memory; the networks kept replaying parts of the speech after King was killed.

I was stunned. I couldn't believe he was dead. What had happened to the high hopes and dreams of the civil rights movement's march on Washington in 1963?

And now it's 1985. Almost 17 years have passed since that catastrophic day in Memphis. Martin Luther King Jr. would have been 56 years old today. Beginning next year, Jan. 15 will be a national holiday.

But is this belated recognition of King's achievements a meaningless honor? Common wisdom says the ideals of the '60s are no more, strangled by the materialism and narrow-mindedness of the '70s and '80s.

I say not. In 1968, even in the Democratic Party, the idea of a black man being a serious presidential candidate was so unlikely it was ludicrous. The idea of a black woman presiding as Texas secretary of state was even more absurd. Both of these impossibilities became reality in 1984 and it is inconceivable to imagine them happening without King and the civil rights movement.

King's spirit walks with those protesting apartheid outside the South African embassy in Washington. It can even be found in Midland, most recently with citizens' groups who were willing to demand their rights to equal representation in city council elections.

No, the loving and courageous spirit of Martin Luther King Jr. didn't die in 1968. It continues to motivate those who fight for justice and peace.

DOE officials think briefings 'necessary, helpful'

TULIA (AP) — Department of Energy officials say that despite what opponents say, informational briefings they're holding this week on proposed sites for the nation's first high-level radioactive waste dump are necessary and helpful.

"Even if we have only a handful of people learning something they didn't know before, I feel that's worth our time and efforts," said Linda McClain, project manager for Texas institutional relations in the DOE's salt repository project office.

To aid people in understanding DOE documents and to answer questions about the Texas location that has been recommended as a "preferred site" for the controversial dump, nearly 30 DOE officials and agency contractors held an informational briefing in this small town south of Amarillo Monday night.

But of a small group of area residents who attended, most agreed the briefing didn't change their opposition to the dump being placed in Texas.

Monday's briefing, the first of three to be held in Texas this week, was called to aid the public in decifering DOE environmental documents and to allow "people to participate more effectively in the process," said Bill Bennett, deputy director of the office of geologic repositories at DOE's Washington, D.C., office of civilian radioactive waste management.

Second Midland patrol car found with bullet holes

From Staff Reports

A second Midland patrol car was discovered full of bullet holes early Saturday morning.

Officer Dale Seago of 3701 Anetta reported he was awakened at about 2 a.m. when he thought he heard someone knocking on his door. After investigating, however, he discovered his patrol car had seven bullet holes. Police believe they were made with more than one gun.

Officer Rickey Benton, 4500 Wilshire, reported his patrol car also had been shot during the weekend. Officers think the incident occurred sometime Friday night while he was away from his residence.

Damage to Seago's car was placed at $650 while Benton's car sustained $415 worth of damage.

A 1968 Chevrolet flatbed truck valued at $5,000, was reported stolen from the truck yard of Broadwater Cathodic, 1900 Rankin Highway. According to Tom Briscoe, who filed the complaint, suspects crawled over a south fence and drove the truck through a fence and gate, causing $500 worth of damage. The keys were left in the truck, reports indicated.

A gold and stainless steel Rolex watch valued at $1,795 was reported stolen from the Jo Ellen Picciano residence, 3805 Sunshine Parkway. According to reports, the watch which was on a table in either the dining or living rooms, was taken between Friday and Monday.

Russel Wortham, 1120 E. Jax, told police a $500 video cassette recorder and a $300 television set were taken from his bedroom between midnight and 10 a.m. Saturday. According to reports, Wortham keeps four dogs chained throughout his house while he is gone. He does not keep, however, a dog in the bedroom.

Morgan Ray Roark reported a burglary of his home in the rear of 1001 W. Lousiana. According to reports, entry was gained through an unlocked door between 4 p.m. and 7 p.m. Monday. Taken were two television sets valued at a total of $200 and a $400 AM/FM cassette stereo amplifier.

Catherine Warren of 2438 Whitmire No. 14C told police she discovered $500 in cash missing from a purse she kept in a bedroom closet. The theft was discovered at 4:30 a.m. Monday.

Mona Gale Gibson, of 3520 Shell, reported her purse was stolen from her desk at Carver Cultural Center, where she works as a speech therapist. The $250 Gucchi purse, which contained a $100 calculator, $100 leather wallet, credit cards and checks, was taken at about 3:45 p.m. Monday.

Robert Laucher, 4307 Trevino, reported a $400 air compressor and a $75 small tool box were stolen from his garage between 3:40 p.m. Sunday and 4:15 p.m. Monday. According to reports, the garage door was left unopen.

DEVICES

"These are handy for putting on socks," she said, pointing to a set of plastic pieces that resembled boot shapers. "You put the sock over the top and pull up.

"The sock aid is really handy for people who cannot bend their hip, such as arthritics and people who have had hip imp'ants."

Other devices for "starting the morning" included an extra-long shoe horn, a denture brush that sits on suction cups, special one-handed hair rollers with Velcro and a "universal cuff" used to hold a toothbrush. The universal cuff is merely a cloth band that goes over the hand and has a narrow pocket on the bottom which holds the toothbrush.

"But it can also be used for many other things such as a comb and pen or pencil," said Ms. Piette.

Once they're up and around, a handicappd person faces yet another obstacle — the kitchen.

Plates with a guard on one side enables a one-handed diner to "scoop" the food to the guard without spilling it off the plate. "Rocker" knives — kitchen knives that have an exaggerated curve in the blade, can be used to cut food with one hand.

"The 'cool plastic' that we use in molding splints is also great for building up the handles on utensils so that they can be used more easily," said Ms. McQueen.

Light weight utensils are also used by people who have little strength in the hands. Double-handed drinking cups, jar openers, pop can tab pullers, nail boards (a normal cutting board with nails sticking up through it to secure slippery potatoes and vegetables), mixing bowls anchored on a hoop with handles on the sides....the handicapped devices market is large.

"Here is a special magazine just for ordering aid devices," said Ms. McQueen, thumbing through an issue of "Comfortably Yours."

Other publications put out by Accent Special Publications addresses areas of difficulty for the handicapped person from income and sex to wheelchair maintenance and a buyer's guide on products for the disabled.

Buyer's guides, while offering the handicapped person hope in handling daily activities can be just like any other mail order catalogue.

"Some of those things don't work," said Ms. McQueen.

JOYCE

"I am thinking about counseling handicapped people," she said.

Perhaps one of the ways in which she may be counseling other handicapped persons is in adapting to their new situation.

Adaptation is a daily way of life for Ms. Lynde. Using special devices which help her brush her teeth, comb her hair, cut up vegetables and write letters, she manages to do quite nicely in her apartment in north Midland.

"I still have to have someone come by in the morning and evening to get me up and put me to bed," she said. "Some things I just cannot do. I hire someone who comes by seven days a week. She gives me a bath, shampoos my hair and dresses me."

Still, Ms. Lynde has adapted to her handicap — one that is shared by her brother, who broke his neck in a diving accident.

While she has bought many of the devices including hand straps with special pockets to hold her toothbrush and comb, knives with molded plastic handles that fit over her hand and a finger attachment that has a pincer for holding pens, Ms. Lynde also uses her imagination and everyday objects to perform the things one must do.

"Here's what I use for picking up things off the floor," she said proudly, pointing to a ingenious piece of engineering — a coat hanger.

MC

Although he declined to mention specific areas, Parrish said various education programs, personnel and equipment are among those which could possibly see a substantial reduction in funding.

Parrish reportedly will further discuss changes in state funding today during a regularly scheduled meeting of the MC Board of Trustees.

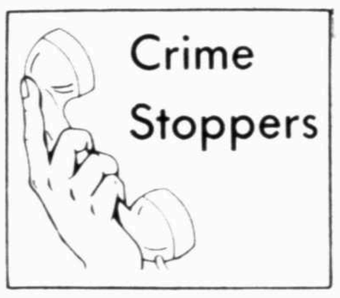

H.A Tuck, director of public relations, explained that college officials will begin preparing a preliminary budget in March "based on the assumption that we'll be cut $600,000. If there are changes in state funding, we can make some adjustments before we adopt a final budget in August.

"For now, everything is up in the air because they (state legislators) don't know how they're going to spread this thing around," Tuck added.

Windsor emphasized that students should register as soon as possible. "Classes are closing right now and students who wait until the last minute may not be able to get in the courses they want...and they could have difficulty in catching up on assignments if they wait too long."

Persons wishing to register for credit courses should visit the Office of Student Services between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday; and from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday. Those who want to sign up for as many as five courses must do so prior to Jan. 21. Persons enrolling for one to three classes may do so until Jan. 29.

Burglary information sought

Crime Stoppers this week is seeking information about a burglary at Christmas of Colbert's JoAnn Shop, 521 N. Grant in Odessa.

Clara McLain closed the business at 6 p.m. Dec. 24 and returned at 8 a.m. Dec. 26 to find the store had been burglarized.

The burglars had entered the store through the roof. Once inside the attic, they worked their way down to a glass showcase in the center of the store.

Eleven mink and fox fur coats, valued at about $24,000, were stolen.

Persons with information on the burglary could be paid up to a $1,000 cash reward for information given this week that results in the arrest and indictments of persons responsible.

Crime Stoppers pays cash rewards for information on other felony crimes and all callers can remain anonymous.

To contact Midland Crime Stoppers, call 694-TIPS; in Odessa, call 333-TIPS.

Man arraigned for drug possession

From Staff Reports

A 57-year-old Midland man, arrested Friday after police executed a search warrant at his residence, was arraigned Monday on charges of possession of a phenmetrazine, a controlled substance, with intent to deliver.

Milton Goosby Jr., 103 N. Tyler, remained in city jail this morning on a $10,000 bond, set by Justice of the Peace Bob Pine.

He was arrested by Midland Police Department narcotics officers who also confiscated 13 Prelude tablets, police said.

A 35-year-old Big Spring woman was arrested on misdemeanor charges of unlawful carrying of a weapon at the same time.

WOMEN

In a field not associated with women, Sarah Cockrell built the first iron bridge across the Trinity River in 1872. She used her business sense so that by her death she had gained ownership of what is now Dallas' central business district.

The state flower would have been the cactus, rather than the bluebonnet, if not for the efforts of the Colonial Dames of America, who lobbied successfully in 1903 against the prickly plant gaining the honor.

In the 1920s, Texas Federation of Women's Clubs organized the collection and planting of seeds of the state flower along Texas highways. Lady Bird Johnson continued this tradition in the 1970s by pushing highway beautification.

Fighting the feeling that women should be kept from studying certain subjects, temperance leader Helen Stoddard authored legislation forming the Girls Industrial College — now Texas Women's University — in 1903.

Children's Medical Center Hospital in Dallas started in 1903 as a collection of Red Cross tents on the grounds of Parkland Hospital. May Smith convinced Tom Bradford to donate $100,000 that financed the permanent facility in 1929.

While brother Stanley is known as the mind behind Neiman-Marcus, Carrie Nieman Marcus was responsible for the store's line of fashions, according to the display.

The ingenuity of Anna Dupree, a black woman who used money she had invested in opening the first Texas orphanage for black children, is profiled.

That Ms. Dupree made the money by combing and styling Anglo women's hair during the Depression makes the accomplishment more unusual.

Mabel Day Lea (1854-1906) owned the first fenced ranch in Texas and lobbied for legislation protecting fenced lands.

The list continues through sports, movies and politics.

A series of education programs will be running in conjunction with the exhibit.

Texas' delegate to the United Women's Conference in 1984 will be speaking Jan. 21. Ector County women in history will be the subject of a Jan. 28 lecture. And a Women's Forum on Women's Issues in the 1980s will feature eight panel members from various segments of the Permian Basin community.

Nancy Reagan will wear an Adolfo electric blue wool crepe dress, above left, with epaulettes for the presidential inaugural on Monday. Over the dress she will wear an Adolfo electric blue, melton coat, above right, trimmed with gold buttons and a gold chain belt.

First lady's inaugural wear revealed

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The White House has announced three of the designs Nancy Reagan will wear at inauguration festivities.

The first lady chose styles by her favorite designers. When her husband takes the oath of office on the steps of the Capitol next Monday, she will wear an electric-blue outfit by Adolfo. When she attends the inaugural balls that night she will wear a slender, jeweled dress by James Galanos. And at the presidential gala Saturday night, she will wear a red sheath designed by Bill Blass.

The simply designed melton cloth coat by Adolfo for the daytime events is brightened with gold buttons and a gold chain belt. It will be worn over a matching collarless wool crepe dress with epaulets and with an off-the-face breton hat.

Adolfo said Mrs. Reagan has chosen a design in red to wear when she holds the Bible at a private swearing-in Sunday at the White House.

Her long evening dress, a Galanos design with a bolero top, is embroidered in multicolor stones. The skirt is beaded in a vermicelli pattern studded with crystals.

The Blass design, a sheath of red silk crepe, has long sleeves.

Retailers: Inaugural gowns not selling well this year

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Bill Blass couldn't keep from laughing.

"Do you mean to tell me," asked the designer, "that I have stepped out of the shower, dripping soapy water on my rug, so I can tell you that I have not sold one gown that I know has been bought to be worn to the inaugural ball?"

He hung up the phone, and called back minutes later. "I have the funniest feeling," he said. "The gals that I know are going down (to Washington) will get done up in the clothes they already own."

In spite of a dampened carpet, Blass could afford to laugh about the lack of business so far in new gowns to wear to the inaugural balls. A key participant, Nancy Reagan, has ordered a number of new things to be delivered in time for the festivities.

But elsewhere, retailers and designers fear they will take a bath on the long dresses now on the racks awaiting customers with tickets to the inaugural events.

"Don't quote me, but can you imagine that even with drastic markdowns and near giveaway prices, we haven't sold one gown for the inaugural?" said a despondent manager of Washington specialty stores. "I think many customers started buying clothes when prices were cut drastically before Christmas. They don't seem much interested in buying anything else."

For many of those returning for the second go-round of inaugural balls saluting the presidency of Ronald Reagan, the previous experience of crowded spaces with little room for strutting and showing off new gowns seems to have curbed shopping enthusiasm. "No one saw what I wore the first time. Why would I bother buying something new for no one else to see again?" said one Washingtonian.

Store windows displaying formal dresses and tuxedos will, retailers hope, lure out-of-town visitors to buy new evening duds when they arrive next week for the inaugural festivities. "A lot of people can't buy this kind of dress in their home town, and will splurge when they get to Washington," said Kert Rosenkoetter, general manager of Saks Fifth Avenue in Chevy Chase.

'Berrenger's' fits 'Dynasty' fashion mold

New York Times News Service

What's new in fashion on television? One thing to keep at least one eye on is the new NBC TV series "Berrenger's," about the behind-the-scenes dramas of a family that owns a big-time department store.

It's pure nighttime soap opera, and for those who like their lily very painted, just as overdressed as "Dynasty." In the day scenes, the actresses wear such simple apparel as suits with fox lapels and enormous shoulders.

The costumes were designed by Bill Travilla, who was Marilyn Monroe's exclusive designer for years, and who designed the famous white dress she wore when she stood over a subway grating and shocked a still shockable public.

DEAR ABBY

A.A. praised

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for printing the letter from "Optimistic," the female college student who said she felt as though she had really accomplished something that day even though all she did was go to the mailbox. She said, "I didn't have the guts to go to a meeting of Alcoholics Anonymous, so I wrote and asked for some literature. I just read it, and I feel better already."

Abby, please print this message for "Optimistic": I, too, am a female. I'm now 43 and was in your shoes for eight long, wet, miserable years. I also sent for the Alcoholics Anonymous literature and prayed a lot. I even found the guts to attend a meeting about once a year, but I always arrived late, hid in a corner and left early, afraid of being recognized — then complained (to myself) that it was an "unfriendly" organization.

Last year I became so depressed that it was either treatment or suicide. Even in that state of mind I knew that treatment offered me more of a future.

I contacted the Jefferson Alcohol and Drug Abuse Center here in Louisville, and went into its 35-day treatment program last February. It's been slow. Twenty-five years of drinking takes its toll, mentally and physically, but today I know I am a survivor. Eleven months of sobriety is nothing to brag about, but I feel better now than I have felt in years.

Contact A.A. again and tell them you don't have the guts to attend a meeting yet, and they'll send someone to take you, or have someone meet you outside the meeting place. (It's always easier to walk into a large group of people with someone else.) Go early and hang around the coffee pot and just smile. You'll meet a lot of nice friendly people who have been in your shoes. Once you make the commitment to try to work the program, your life will improve.

I know this can be said better, but never more from the heart. I'm still not strong enough to go public, so if you print this, sign me ... RECOVERING IN LOUISVILLE

DEAR RECOVERING: No one could have said it better. Bravo to you, my friend.

DEAR ABBY: College son dating pushy, possessive girl with a lot of hang-ups. What's best way to discourage this relationship? — CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: Keep mouth shut until college son feels sufficiently pushed and possessed to discourage relationship himself. Given enough rope, pushy girl's hang-ups will become apparent.

DEAR ABBY: After 12 years of marriage, my husband and I realized that our sex life was practically dead, so we went to a marriage counselor.

The counselor (a woman) told us that a good way to put a little pep in our marriage would be to tell each other about our sexual fantasies.

Should I tell him about mine? He's not in any of them. — WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Sharing an occasional fantasy can be stimulating. But if you can't give your husband star billing, you'd better not mention the cast.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, January 16, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Singer Marilyn Horne, country music's Ronnie Milsap, multi-talented Debbie Allen, Kansas City Royals slugger Steve Balboni and Detroit Tiger Marty Castillo celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: the late baseball great Dizzy Dean and actor-comic Andy Kaufman of TV's "Taxi." Stick to familiar ground and business will prosper. Events take a dramatic turn to your advantage in April. An older relative or longtime associate plays a role in your success. Careful budgeting makes financial worries a thing of the past. With prudence and perseverance, you are able to build a tidy fortune!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You can improve your skills by taking a special class or seminar. Be reliable and you move up quickly at place of employment. Your concern about someone is put to rest.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Getting the job done on time is more important than doing it with flourishes. Effect a reconciliation with someone you may have slighted recently. No gesture of good will is ever wasted.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Learn to be less defensive with an old friend. Insist that others keep their commitments. A family member who monopolizes your time needs to be set straight. Know your priorities.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A chance meeting leads to a rare business opportunity. Others work behind the scenes on your behalf. A romance with someone from a distant land could result in a permanent alliance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The pieces of a puzzle begin to fall into place following an investigation. A loan comes through, reducing tension. Feelings of anger could hinder your efforts to cement a personal relationship.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take full advantage of a chance encounter with a business associate. Diversification helps your finances. Working overtime could be the best answer to a temporary cash shortage. Consult higher-ups.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your intensity can make you difficult to get along with. Loosen up and enjoy the camaraderie of your peers. You already have a lot to be thankful for. Count your blessings!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Trust your instincts and you will go far in the days just ahead. If you suspect someone of deceiving you, launch a quiet investigation. You cannot afford to ignore the situation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get expert advice regarding a large investment or real estate transaction. Guessing about your legal rights could prove costly. Encourage a child to follow a course he/she feels comfortable with.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be discriminating in your choice of friends and associates. Others judge you by the company you keep. Soft-pedal any differences you have had with your peers. A child does you proud.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Playing games with a loved one could backfire. A special attraction brings you and a childhood friend closer together. Encourage a teenager to stand on his/her own feet.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Financial progress depends on your ability to show sound judgment when under fire. A positive attitude helps you find lasting success. Put your ideas forward with confidence. Higher-ups must be convinced.

The U.S. team—Betty Ann Kennedy, Shreveport, La.; Jacqui Mitchell, Gail Moss, Judi Radin, Kathie Wei, all New York City; and Carol Sanders, Nashville, Tenn.—won the World Women's Team Olympiad, held recently in Seattle. In an exciting and close final, they held off a rally by Britain.

This deal is from a preliminary round match against Mexico. Judi Radin, South, opened a 13-15 no trump, and her partner's sequence was invitational and showed a five-card heart suit. With a maximum and "soft" points, South elected to play three no trump rather than four hearts.

East won the opening club lead with the ace of clubs and returned the six. Declarer's jack lost to the queen and West knocked out declarer's stopper. On this trick East made the delicate error of sluffing a spade.

Declarer led a spade to the jack and ace and East made the good shift to a diamond in an attempt to knock out dummy's ace. Declarer inserted the queen and captured West's king with the ace. Since West could not be allowed to gain the lead, declarer had to tackle hearts in such a way that East would have to win a heart trick.

A spade to the queen provided the entry for a low heart lead. Had West produced the five, declarer would have covered with the six and been safe on any 3-2 heart division. But when West produced an honor, declarer had to hope that she held only two hearts. Declarer rose with dummy's ace, cashed the king of hearts and king of spades, then exited with a heart.

Fortunately, this trick was won by East, who was down to nothing but diamonds. Her lead away from the ten was run to the nine, and dummy suddenly had an entry to the good hearts.

In the other room the Mexicans reached four hearts. They lost a trick in each suit, so the U.S. gained 10 International Match Points.

Blackjack tournaments drawing patrons to bars?

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA — Blackjack tournaments touting cash prizes are beginning to draw customers to Pennsylvania bars under a new state law that critics claim "opens the door to organized crime" but boosters say promotes business.

"We're entertaining our customers, creating jobs and generating revenue," said Bill Pawliczyk, owner of Cavanaugh's Bar and Restaurant, where a card game opened Monday night.

"It's no different than hiring a band or putting on a show to bring people into my establishment. Only this isn't a piano player, it's a blackjack tournament," Pawliczyk said.

Eight shiny new blackjack tables were set up in a back room at Cavanaugh's, where 16 extra workers were hired for the first weekly tournament.

Players paid $25 for 60 chips to enter the tournament, and the player with the most chips at the end of 45 minutes won $100. The runnerup got $20.

Other bars run variations of the tournament under a law that allows any place with a state liquor license to stage tournaments featuring an entry fee and cash awards. Games can include blackjack, poker, darts, billiards, bowling, shuffleboard and rings.

The provisions were contained in an amendment to a bill signed May 9 by Gov. Dick Thornburgh that extended tavern hours on Sunday. Regulations for the games were defined in December, and the first tournaments began this month, officials said.

Opponents of legalized gambling note that no state agency controls the games. Bar owners keep whatever percentage of the take they want, and the state gets nothing from the games.

"The danger is we're going to have legalized gambling without proper policing, which opens the door to fraud and opens the door to organized crime to take over these games," said Philadelphia District Attorney Edward Rendell.

"There's no one overseeing the games to see if they're on the up and up. And there are no tax benefits. We don't get a penny for revenues," said Rendell, who favors a repeal of the law.

Pennsylvania runs a state lottery, permits betting on horse races and allows bingo. But casino gambling is forbidden.

In 1950, contests and tournaments in bars, except with special permits, were outlawed by the state Liquor Control Board, which licenses taverns and regulates the sale of liquor. The new law sets aside the regulation.

State officials favoring the new law say safeguards were included. For example, no money can be bet on an individual hand of cards or a single game, and a prize is awarded only after a tournament ends.

"I don't consider this gambling," said Gary DiVito, chief counsel for the Liquor Control Board.

But Rendell, a Democrat considered a prime gubernatorial candidate in 1986, disagreed.

Kalb describes his job in Geneva

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former network television correspondent Bernard Kalb, a longtime critic of government secrecy, tongue-in-cheekly described his role in Geneva as a spokesman for Secretary of State George P. Shultz as "high visibility, easy access...and silence."

Kalb began his new assignment Monday as State Department spokesman, greeting reporters with characteristic wit. "It is a very, very large step for me," he said of his new duties, "and I trust that it will not jeopardize the future of the world."

Kalb had served as State Department correspondent for NBC News since 1980 after performing the same task for CBS.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — For one of the few times in his life, Philadelphia 76ers star basketball forward Julius Erving was stuffed on a drive down the lane. Only this time, "Dr. J" was in his 1983 Maserati and the lane was a busy southwest Philadelphia street.

Neither Erving nor his passenger, former Pittsburgh Steelers wide receiver and television broadcaster Lynn Swann, was injured in the crash on Monday.

"It was really nothing," Erving said later of the accident. "I saw him coming. There was nothing I could do about it."

Police said John McGrory, 19, tried to make an illegal turn and cut off Erving's car in the curb lane. McGrory was charged with making an illegal turn and driving a truck on the parkway.

Walker

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Whether Alice Walker's controversial Pulitzer Prize-winning novel "The Color Purple" can be read by students in Oakland public high schools remains undecided after a year-long debate.

A year ago, the disgruntled mother of a student in an advanced high school English class assigned to read the novel began lobbying the Board of Education to ban the story about a young black girl growing up in Georgia. The book graphically depicts rape, incest and lesbianism.

The board asked a special panel of high school and college educators to review the issue, and last week voted 3-2 to adopt the group's recommendation that the book is appropriate school reading.

JASPER, Ind. (AP) — Dr. William DeVries has scheduled a rare speech in the hometown of artificial heart recipient William Schroeder to benefit the Dubois County Heart Association.

DeVries will speak Feb. 7 at an association dinner to kick off plans for the group's annual Heart Day fund-raiser, said association president Bill Schuler.

"He doesn't often do this sort of thing," Schuler said. "But he has a rather special patient from here."

Schroeder, a Jasper native, became the world's second artificial heart recipient on Nov. 25. He is in stable condition at the Humana Heart Institute in Lousville, Ky.

Couple receives giant rock for wedding gift

EDWARDSVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Brad and Marilyn Halford would have a hard time exchanging this wedding gift, even if they wanted to. In fact, they can't even move it.

So the 6½-ton slab of limestone remains in their front yard, drawing the stares of passers-by and helpful suggestions from neighbors.

The rock was a present from Rick Sanderson, a longtime friend of Halford who told the couple he wanted to give them a unique gift for their Dec. 29 wedding.

Halford, 30, found out what the present was on the day before the wedding, when he returned home from work at the Norfolk and Western Railway Co.

"When I first saw it in my yard, it looked like some kind of sack or something over a statue," he said. "When I got closer to it, then I knew it was a rock."

Mrs. Halford, 26, was pleased with the gift, but Halford said he considered hiring someone to haul the stone away until he decided the effort would be too much trouble.

"Besides, I'm starting to get used to it — a little," he said.

Among ideas offered by neighbors are painting the rock, using it as a planter and building a flower garden around it.

"People say that they like the rock," Halford said. "My parents, my neighbors and my friends say it looks nice. But I'm the only one who has a rock."

She fought the British

During the American Revolution one Deborah Sampson served as a soldier and later received a military pension.

Woman upset because words missing

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — When Violet Drummond got into a quarrel with her 13-year-old daughter Cheryl several weeks ago, she told the girl to show some respect.

To emphasize the point, she told her daughter to find the word in the dictionary and study the definition. But the dictionary had no respect.

The word was one of quite a few Mrs. Drummond was upset to find missing from Webster's Dictionary of the English Language.

She promptly fired off a letter to Modern Promotions and Publishers in New York asking for a $2.95 refund.

"On page 270 the words go from 'seventeen' to 'sharper,'" she wrote. "What happened to words such as 'shade' and 'shame' (which you should feel)?

"I bought this book in good faith that it would help my school-age children learn and it has 'failed' (also not in your dictionary)."

The president of the New York publishing house, Lawrence Steinberg, said Ms. Drummond would get her refund.

Megan McClay (far left), Ross McClure, Heather McGinley, and Graciela Lake (far right) enjoy playing music together on electronic pianos while their teacher, Linda Baxter, looks on. At Midland School of Piano group work makes developing muscial skills a lot more fun. Registration for the spring semester is now in progress. Call Linda Baxter, director of Midland School of Piano, at 689-7339.

Piano is a fun experience

One minute, one might see a group of children, each seated at his own individual electronic piano, playing 12 bar blues patterns and taking turns improvising a solo part. A few minutes later, there might be a game of "I Spy," in which musical symbols strategically placed around the room are "spied" and gathered by the children. Another game might be a relay race that takes place over a gigantic musical staff on the floor.

These are all typical scenes from a piano class at the Midland School of Piano. The Midland School of Piano was established by Nancy Young and Linda Cody, both certified, degreed teachers with considerable expertise in the musical field.

Where did they get the idea for a piano school? "The concept of teaching piano in a class is relatively new in this area but actually has been a very popular, established method throughout the United States for 15 years," says Ms. Cody. "The success of class piano is partly due to the social interaction of the students. Learning to play the piano is not such a lonely experience in a group. Musical concepts can be taught in a more enjoyable way with the use of creative group activities," adds Ms. Young.

What happens when a child outgrows his class? "Each student is very important to us, and we give careful attention to each child. We continue to regroup the children as they grow, so that each child is placed in the best possible class for him. Developing each sutdent's potential is what our teaching is all about."

Classes will be taught by Linda Baxter, director of Midland School of Piano. Ms. Baxter comes to West Texas from Erie, Pennsylvania. She graduated cum laude from Houghton College in Houghton, New York, with a Bachelor of Music degree. Her experience has included teaching group piano for elementary age children through adults, teaching music to hearing impaired children, and teaching piano at Texas Tech University. Her many talents have also been in demand at various children's summer camps, where she has planned music programs and counseled with teenagers.

Classes are available for ages 4-adult. The most recent addition to the curriculum is the Kinder-Piano classes for pre-schoolers. Special classes are also offered for adults and teenagers. Private study is available by audition.

Registration for the spring semester is still taking place. If you are interested in this exciting way of learning to play the piano, call the Midland School of Piano, 689-7339.

Recently Permian Basin High School students, their parents, and the faculty enjoyed a party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Nolen. The Nolen's daughter, Laurie, is attends Permian Basin High School, where a high percentage of students participate in special school functions such as this. A full slate of activities is being planned for the spring semester.

Students at Permian Basin High School plan busy spring semester

As Permian Basin High School students are getting ready to start a new semester on January 16th, a full agenda is before them. Both new and old activities will make the spring semester an exciting one which will be remembered for years to come.

The year book staff will have their hands full recording the events that close out the year at Permian Basin High School, where a high percentage of the students participate in the many school activities.

The Student Council, the hub of student involvement in the school and in the community, will be particularly busy. This Student Council is a member of the National Association of Student Councils and is comprised of ten students which were elected last spring. All students are welcome to attend council meetings and are encouraged to be involved in the social functions, fund-raising activities, and community volunteer work which the council sponsors.

A prom is planned for April or May so fund raising will be one of the first items on the agenda for the spring semester.

While the seniors' mothers are planning a school wide party in honor of the 1985 graduates, the eleven seniors will be doing some planning of their own on a senior trip.

Though the seniors are looking forward to the trip, a nice prom, and other activities, graduation will be the highlight of their semester. Their red letter day for 1985 will be on May 23rd when commencement will be held at Midland Country Club.

With such a busy social schedule to accompany the students' spring academic endeavors, spring break and Easter vacation will be well deserved and enjoyed by all students.

Acting Administrator, John Banfill, says that it is time to register for the spring semester. The enrollment process takes a number of days because it involves the teachers, the prospective student, and his or her parents getting to know each other. To determine the student's needs entrance testing is also required.

Because the school is based on a one-to-one teaching program, students who have not completed the enrollment process by January 16th may start a little later. Call Permian Basin High School at 683-4448 for more information.

French accused in island slaying

WORLD

Associated Press

NOUMEA, New Caledonia — The leader of the pro-independence movement in this French island territory today accused French authorities of involvement in the slaying of his military chief.

Jean-Marie Tjibaou, head of the Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front, said the group's defense chief, Eloi Machoro, was "murdered with the agreement of" French government envoy Edgard Pisani and gendarmerie commander Gen. Jean Deibero.

Machoro was killed along with his aide Marcel Nonnaro in what police described as a shootout last Saturday. He was the security chief of the provisional government declared by the Kanak front late last year after it boycotted territorial elections in the Pacific island chain.

The native Kanak, or Melanesian, population is about 40 percent of New Caledonia's population of about 140,000, and the rest are European, Polynesian and Asian immigrants. The settlers generally oppose the Kanak demand for independence from France.

Tjibaou issued a seven-page statement demanding a parliamentary inquiry and judicial proceedings against "those who gave the order to fire, and those who carry the responsibility."

On Monday, French territorial authorities charged 37 Melanesians with rebellion. They were arrested in the confrontation in which Machoro was killed.

Conviction on the charge of involvement in a "rebellion committed by more than 20 armed people" could lead to a sentence of 10 to 20 years in prison.

Machoro was buried today near the town of Thio in a ceremony attended by about 600 people and an armed honor guard.

AP Laserphoto

Weeping over the coffin of his brother, slain New Caledonian separatist Eloi Machoro, is Louis Machoro.

Late Monday, four fishing boats were dynamited at a nearby port. The boats were owned by Thio's European, rightwing mayor and had been "requisitioned" by the independence movement since last November.

A small boat was seen leaving the harbor shortly before the explosions, police sources said. The official report on the confrontation at a remote farmhouse occupied by Machoro and some 40 followers said marksmen of a special gendarmerie intervention squad had been told to aim only to wound them in the shoulder.

Tjiobaou's statement did not reject negotiations over the future of the island, but said the front "will remain inflexible on the return of the sovereignty of the Kanak people in its land."

Tjibaou said Pisani's recent plan for a referendum on independence in association with France was "compromised by the fact its author has a smell of blood on his hands."

Before Tjibaou's statement, Pisani's office had denied an earlier claim by independence supporters that Pisani had promised the anti-independence party that Machoro would be arrested to compensate for the murder last week of a 17-year-old white.

Pisani ordered a curfew and state of emergency Saturday in response to the rioting that followed the killing of the teen-ager and the two Melanesians. Today, he eased the curfew hours to 9 p.m. to 5 a.m., from 7 p.m. to 6 a.m. in response to complaints of hotel and restaurant owners of poor business.

In a New Caledonia court Monday, a judge ruled that the state of emergency was illegal. The court then freed four of 10 people arrested during the disturbances.

In Paris a few hours later, Premier Laurent Fabius' office announced that the highest administrative court, the Council of State, had upheld the legality of the decree.

Pisani's independence plan would increase land-holdings and power of Melanesians while safeguarding the interests of those choosing to remain French citizens.

Jacques Lafleur, leader of the anti-independence Rally for Caledonia in the Republic party that controls the Territorial Assembly, said in a radio interview that things should not be pushed too fast.

"There is another solution besides the Pisani plan," he said, without elaborating.

Yang Dezhi, left, Chief of General Staff, People's Liberation Army, and Gen. John W. Vessey Jr., chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, toast in American corn liquor.

Vessey begins tour of Chinese army bases

PEKING (AP) — U.S. Gen. John W. Vessey Jr., the first chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to visit Communist China, began a tour of People's Liberation Army bases today after three days of talks in Peking.

After Vessey's delegation left for the northeast city and regional army command of Shenyang, a U.S. Embassy statement said his Peking negotiations with military leaders and Premier Zhao Ziyang "were conducted in a friendly atmosphere of mutual respect and were informative and productive."

It added: "The visit laid a solid foundation for friendly relations and cooperation between the armed forces of the two countries, including future exchanges of visits."

Vessey spent more than three hours with his Chinese counterpart, Chief of General Staff Yang Dezhi. Details of their talks were not disclosed and Vessey's aides canceled a news briefing without explanation.

The delegation was apparently embarrassed by weekend leaks from the Pentagon which said tentative agreement was reached on the sale of anti-submarine equipment to the Chinese navy. If confirmed, it would be the first sale of U.S. weapons to China.

State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb said Monday that China and the United States have held talks on the equipment but no contracts have been signed. Kalb said Assistant Secretary of the Navy Melvyn Paisley will lead a U.s. delegation to China later this month to continue the negotiations.

In a banquet toast Monday, Vessey noted: "As Premier Zhao said today, it is important that our military contacts be integrated with our military technology cooperation."

Officials with Vessey said his talks were likely to cover plans for courtesy visits by three U.S. Navy warships to Shanghai this spring, the first such visits in 36 years.

Israeli withdrawal plan still drawing some fire

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Shimon Peres said today that all Israeli troops will be out of Lebanon this summer. But his deputy premier and chief rival in the bipartisan government said the plan failed to protect northern Israel against guerrilla attacks.

The Cabinet abandoned hopes of a negotiated settlement with the Lebanese government and approved a three-stage unilateral withdrawal by a 16-6 vote Monday. Deputy Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who also is foreign minister, led the unsuccessful opposition.

Peres' defense minister, Yitzhak Rabin, said: "I believe that after more than 2¼ years in Lebanon we have learned the hard way that Israel should not attempt to be the policemen in settling the wars between various groups in Lebanon."

The first stage of the withdrawal is to begin in five weeks, and Peres said succeeding stages would be "played by ear." Asked on Israel radio if the troops would be out of Lebanon this summer, Peres replied: "Yes, that is the basic plan."

Shamir told the radio the plan did "not make minimal security provisions for the northern settlements," and he vowed to do all he could before the pullout "to make sure that all that is possible will be rectified and the safety of the northern settlements ensured as much as is possible."

Rabin told reporters that the first phase would see Israeli troops retreat 17 miles from their current positions along the Awali River. The new line will parallel the Litani River from the Mediterranean coast inland to the Shiite Moslem town of Nabatiyeh.

Israeli troops, currently estimated to number 20,000, would leave the port city of Sidon and a large number of Shiite village.

Shiite militants have inflicted almost daily casualties in guerrilla attacks on the Israelis in southern Lebanon. The Israelis have lost 608 men since the June 1982 invasion of Lebanon.

The second phase of withdrawal was expected to come in the eastern sector where Israel now faces the Syrian army in the Bekaa valley. The final stage would see Israeli forces return to the international boundary.

The Cabinet decision was a political victory for Peres, leader of the leftist Labor Party who had made pledges to bring home troops.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Indian Parliament opens

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — India's new Parliament opened today with the smallest opposition presence since independence in 1947, but Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi promised he would not force his political will on the nation.

Addressing legislators of his Congress Party before the session began, Gandhi sought to ease fears that his government might abuse its overwhelming mandate in last month's general election.

"Democratic ideals will never be sacrificed," he said. "We cannot force or suppress anything."

The Congress Party won a record 401 seats in the 544-seat Lok Sabha, the governing lower house of Parliament. The election gave a five-year term to Gandhi, who succeeded his mother Indira Gandhi after her assassination Oct. 31.

Train derailment probed

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ethiopia's transport minister took charge of an investigation today into the derailment of a passenger train which plunged into a 40-foot ravine, reportedly killing at least 392 people.

Rescue workers said all of the dead and injured have been removed from the site in central Ethiopia where the disaster occurred on Sunday.

Traffic on the line was suspended after the derailment near Awash, about 125 miles east of the Ethiopian capital, Addis Ababa, and normal operations on the line were not expected to resume for up to a week.

The diesel engine was intact but all four passenger coaches were reported badly damaged.

Train fire investigated

BHERAMARA, Bangladesh (AP) — The government today began an investigation of the deadly fire which raced through three cars on a crowded express train. Area residents said 42 bodies have been recovered and many more people were still missing.

Although the official government death toll remained at 27, residents said 35 bodies had been recovered Sunday, the day of the fire, and seven more were found Monday, including the remains of five people who leaped from the burning train while it moving between Puradaha and Bheramara stations.

Scores of people were roaming along the railway track between the two stations in search of their relatives.

Refugees leave embassy

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The last five East German refugees waiting in West Germany's embassy in Czechoslovakia for permission to go to the West left the mission today and returned home by train, an embassy spokesman said.

The official, who was reached in Prague by telephone from Vienna, said two East Germans left early in the morning. Later the last three departed and took a train back to East Germany.

The West German diplomat, who asked not to be identified, said it was the first time since last spring that no East Germans were inside the Embassy.

Jewish definition debated

JERUSALEM (AP) — Parliament is scheduled to open debate Wednesday on a controversial bill to amend the legal definition of who is a Jew, and Prime Minister Shimon Peres says passage could create a serious split between Israeli and foreign Jews.

Peres said the chances were "half and half" that a bill — sponsored by four religious parties — would pass a first vote in Parliament. If it did pass, it would be sent to committee and would need three additional Parliament votes before becoming law.

In a speech Monday, Peres said the issue was not likely to threaten the survival of his four-month-old coalition government.But he added, "the problem that worries me really is the division in Jewish life between the diaspora and Israel."

Teen killed in Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — British soldiers opened fire on a stolen car that crashed through a roadblock in Belfast early today, killing a teen-ager and injuring four others, police said.

Paul Gerard Kelly, 17, died instantly, a police spokesman said. The spokesman said Kelly was at the wheel of a stolen car which slammed through the roadblock at a traffic circle on the outskirts of the city.

"The car approached a vehicle checkpoint and after crashing into a number of vehicles and injuring three soldiers sped off. Shots were then fired at the car, which then crashed," said the spokesman for the Royal Ulster Constabulary Police force. He spoke only on condition he not be identified.

Fires rage in Australia

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Bushfires raged in several areas in three states today, destroying hundreds of homes and forcing evacuation of remote towns.

At least three people — a man and his two grandsons — were reported killed.

Authorities said at least seven firefighters and two civilians were injured as they battled fires in southern Australia's bush country.

Hundreds of residents were evacuated from three towns in Victoria state as fires came dangerously close, and the inhabitants of several other communities were warned to be ready to leave on short notice.

Winds as strong as 60 mph fueled the firestorms.

Frenchmen convicted

PARIS (AP) — Four Frenchmen convicted of trying to export banned equipment from the United States to the Soviet Union have been sentenced to prison terms.

The attempt to export equipment of possible use in missile guidance was foiled by U.S. Customs officials at New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport in December 1981. The equipment was said to be worth more than $2 million.

Robert Almori was sentenced to three years in prison, while Marcel Goldfarb, Jean-Michel Didat and Maurice Bocquet each received two years. All were charged with forgery or complicity in forgery, and all were fined the equivalent of $11,000 in addition to the prison terms.

400 protesters evicted

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Police and troops evicted about 400 protesting former public employees from the Metropolitan Cathedral and arrested six of the demonstrators.

The discharged employees of the Public Works Ministry occupied the cathedral Monday, demanding that the government pay them benefits and wages they claim are long overdue.

BEFORE YOU BUY A GERMAN IMPORT, TAKE A LOOK AT THE IMPORT GERMANS LIKE BEST.

Every year, West Germany's leading automotive journal, Auto Motor und Sport, invites its readers to vote for the world's best cars.

For each of the last three years, they've named the Saab 900 Turbo "the best imported car . . . under 2,500 cc." Each year, Saab's margin over the nearest competitor has been enormous.

We're deeply gratified at such high praise from drivers who constantly deal with high-speed autobahns, alpine switchbacks and $2.00-a-gallon gasoline. And we're pleased to be so highly regarded in a country that produces some of our nearest competitors.

So, if you're considering buying one of the cars that Germany exports, you should have a look first at one of the best cars Germany imports.
