Ford To Propose Economic Cures

VAIL, Colo. (UPI) — President Ford will propose "hard and tough" cures for the nation's economic ills in his State of the Union message next month, but "it won't mean a big reduction in the standard of living of the average American," his chief spokesman said Saturday.

Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford's proposals "will deal with the fundamental ailments with the economy and getting back stability in a long term sense, not to just patch things together."

Reporting on a 4½ hour conference between Ford and his top economic advisers, Nessen also said the President had found

"across the board unanimity" that there would be an upturn in the economy during the last half of 1975.

He said everyone at the meeting agreed that the economy, whipsawed between simultaneous recession and inflation, "faces serious problems."

The President also was quoted by Nessen as telling his economic experts that he wanted "no gimmicks," which the press secretary described as "quick cures" which would not have a lasting effect.

"He said he wanted a hard and tough State of the Union (address)," Nessen said. "What this whole program is aimed at is to get the economy back to stability."

"It was a consensus that this was a watershed period as far as the economy goes. It needs more than a gimmick to get out."

In an apparent reference to the forces of recession, Nessen also said: "This is the moment when fundamental changes are needed to avoid consequences down the road."

Nessen indicated Ford will basically scrap the 31-point economic program he presented to Congress last October on grounds that the picture has changed.

But, he said, "that is not to say that some of it won't be used" in the new proposals.

Nessen declined to discuss specifics on the direction of Ford's new program. He said the President had cautioned his advisers again "not to discuss publicly ideas and proposals under discussion."

He quoted Ford as telling the advisers "you've been patient and constructive, but not always unanimous. It's been very helpful."

After the conference was over, Ford went skiing and told reporters it had been "a very very good meeting."

Nessen said that the meeting dealt with the 1975 and 1976 federal budgets. It apparently covered projected dollar estimates, their effects on the President's economic program and the effect of Ford's future economic proposals on the budget.

Ford's new economic program and his anticipated energy proposals are closely linked, Nessen said. He said the advisers also studied "forecasts of future factors affecting the economy."

The press secretary said part of the meeting was "freewheeling," involving a philosophical discussion of the basic causes behind the current illness in the American economy.

Nessen stressed that no final decisions had been made by Ford, but he said the President had indicated the general direction he wants his new economic program to take.

Nessen said Ford was getting ideas from a variety of sources, including outside economic experts, members of Congress, labor and management.

In another area, Nessen said Ford and top aides will go over a special report on alleged illegal domestic spying by the Central Intelligence Agency soon after his return to Washington next week and will issue a statement a few days afterward.

Nessen refused to discuss a published report that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger had urged Ford to set up a special citizen's committee to investigate charges that the CIA spied on thousands of anti-war protesters and other dissidents during the Nixon years.

Amy Vanderbilt's Death Cause Called Uncertain

NEW YORK (UPI) — An autopsy performed on Amy Vanderbilt, America's First Lady of Etiquette, showed she suffered from hypertension but gave no clue to the cause of her death in a plunge from a second-story window of her Manhattan apartment.

Police initially labeled Miss Vanderbilt's death an "apparent suicide," but no note was left and a police spokesman later said it would be impossible to be certain if she jumped or fell.

Dr. Yung Rho, the city's deputy chief medical examiner, said Miss Vanderbilt, who was 66, died "strictly as a result of the fall" from a window in her brownstone East Side apartment.

Her body was found on the sidewalk in front of the building by a passerby at about 7:55 p.m. yesterday. Miss Vanderbilt was taken to nearby Metropolitan Hospital, where she was pronounced dead on arrival.

Miss Vanderbilt's husband, Curtis Kellar, who was in the apartment at the time of the plunge, told reporters his wife had been suffering from hypertension, a condition involving high cholesterol deposits in the circulatory system.

Kellar said he noticed his wife was missing when he walked into their living room and saw the window open. He said Miss Vanderbilt had been suffering dizzy spells because of the hypertension and the drugs she was taking for its treatment.

Rho said he found evidence of hypertension in the autopsy but added there was no sign of brain damage. However, he said dizzy spells sometimes occur in hypertensive patients without brain damage.

A personal friend of the etiquette expert, asking not to be identified, said Miss Vanderbilt was "a little harried preparing for Christmas" but added that she seemed otherwise in good spirits.

Miss Vanderbilt was born on July 2, 1908, in Staten Island. Her writing career began in 1927 as a society writer for the Staten Island Advance. She moved two years later to the advertising and public relations fields and finally as the business manager of "The American Spectator," a literary magazine.

It was in the late 40s that Doubleday, Inc., asked her to write a book on etiquette.

"I knew that it was going to be a four-year job," she said at the time, "but I also knew that I wasn't going to let the prospect of that much steady writing and research get me down."

So she retired to "Daisy-fields," her farm in Westport, Conn., and began to write the 700-page "The Complete Book of Etiquette," completed in 1952. It was destined to make her a nationally known authority on the subject.

Senators Viewing Openings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A coveted opening on the Senate Judiciary Committee in the 94th Congress has triggered a battle between three liberal and two conservative Democrats.

The liberals are Sen. Lee Metcalf of Montana, a third-term; Sen. James Abourezk of South Dakota, a first-term; and Senator-elect Patrick Leahy of Vermont.

The conservatives are Sen. James B. Allen of Alabama, who has just won a second term; and Senator-elect Robert Morgan of North Carolina.

The committee, now nearly evenly divided along ideological lines, may consider such sensitive issues as constitutional amendments on abortion, school prayer, and busing; possible changes in the amendment dealing with selection of a new vice president; and extension of the voting rights act.

The single vacancy on the Democratic side was created by the retirement of Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. of North Carolina. It is probable, however, that the Democratic Steering Committee, headed by Senate leader Mike Mansfield, will recommend enlargement of the panel to reflect Democratic gains in the Nov. 5 elections.

A number of other Democratic incumbents are also seeking new committees.

First term Sens. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana and Walter Huddleston of Kentucky have requested the Appropriations Committee.

Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia has requested the Budget Committee, and Sen. Dick Clark of Iowa wants the Foreign Relations and Armed Services Committees, in that order of preference.

Sen. Adlai Stevenson III of Illinois has asked for seats on the Democratic Policy Committee, the Legislative Review Committee and the Joint Atomic Committee.

Sens. Floyd K. Haskell of Colorado and William Hathaway of Maine have asked for the Finance Committee; Sens. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts and Thomas F. Eagleton of Missouri want on the Joint Economic Committee; Sens. John Tunney of California and Mike Gravel of Alaska would like the Joint Atomic Committee; and Joseph Biden of Delaware, Foreign Relations.

Girls Hurt In Accident

A hoax call to the Pampa police department advising officers a bomb was set to explode at Harvester Bowl resulted in an accident which sent two Pampa teenagers to Highland General Hospital Friday night.

Rene Hopkins, 2231 N. Banks, and Polly Gowdy, 1806 N. Banks, were among over 100 teenagers evacuated from the building by Gray County officers following the alert.

A search failed to turn up any explosive device described by the unidentified caller.

According to witnesses at the accident scene, the girls ran west onto the highway and were struck by a vehicle driven by Larry Franks, Lefors. Department of Public Safety officer Phil Altman said investigation revealed the accident was unavoidable and Franks was not cited. The officer said the car was traveling about 30 miles per hour when the accident occurred.

Investigators said the parking lot was crowded with excited teenagers after the evacuation began.

Identity of the caller was unknown late Saturday.

Hospital officials said Saturday the girls were in satisfactory condition. They are being treated for cuts and bruises.

'EXCHANGE OF OPINIONS'

Egyptian Group Opens Talks In Soviet Capital

United Press International

A high-level Egyptian delegation opened talks in Moscow Saturday amid Western diplomatic speculation that a hitch has developed in plans for next month's Cairo visit by Communist party General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev.

The Moscow talks took place as President Ford told UPI in an interview he firmly believes another Middle East war is highly probable unless the United States can get Israel and the Arabs to negotiate further military disengagements.

Western newsmen were turned away from Moscow's Vnukovo airport when they tried to cover the arrival of Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmi and the newly appointed war minister, Gen. Mohammed Gamassy.

Moscow radio said Fahmi and Gamassy came for "an exchange of opinions on problems of interest" but did not mention Brezhnev's Egyptian visit scheduled for Jan. 14-18.

Lack of similar mention of Brezhnev's previously announced visit in an article on the Middle East by Communist party newspaper Pravda stirred speculation that last minute problems may have developed.

Western diplomats noted there has been no mention of Brezhnev's trip in the Soviet press since Tuesday after having been the subject of much public comment earlier in the month.

In Vail, Colo., President Ford told UPI:

"I firmly believe, unless there is some movement on a step-by-step basis (toward) peace in the Middle East, there's a high degree, there's a high likelihood of war. If we keep working on it, and get some success, I think we can prevent another bloody conflict."

"I think all parties recognize another war would be a real tragedy, both in lives lost and the financial cost," Ford said. "I think its consequences could be very serious."

All are charged with conspiracy to obstruct justice and defraud the United States—the heart of the government's case.

Red Forces Preparing For Upsurge In Battles

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist forces have moved tanks and truckloads of fresh supplies to key battlefields in South Vietnam, military sources said Saturday. The sources predicted intense battles early in 1975.

At the same time, the Saigon command estimated that 30,000 soldiers on both sides have been killed, wounded or captured in the current three-week upsurge in fighting in the southern half of South Vietnam.

Reports reaching Saigon Saturday said government warplanes destroyed a North Vietnamese tank and eight Russian-made supply trucks Friday almost within sight of Tay Ninh provincial capital, 55 miles northwest of Saigon.

Other fighter-bombers knocked out another eight North Vietnamese trucks in a convoy near threatened Kontum provincial capital in the Central Highlands, 260 miles north of Saigon, the reports said.

Both Tay Ninh and Kontum are believed to be key targets of an expected Communist "high point" of attacks sometime within the next two weeks.

In the past, North Vietnamese forces have used tanks only during battles

Watergate Jury To Decide On Cover-Up Case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Since October the jurors at the Watergate cover-up trial have sat silent and inscrutable, a mute testament to a judicial system that can and does call to account even the most powerful men in the land.

When they finally speak, probably later this week, it will be with a single voice—to convict or acquit each of five defendants who once served President Richard M. Nixon and now stand charged with plotting to hush up the bugging scandal that drove Nixon from office.

U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica will deliver his instructions to the jurors Monday, probably including a charge that they should not let the Nixon's full pardon enter into their decisions. Then he will send them to their windowless jury room to deliberate.

Veteran courthouse observers are guessing the nine women and three men who comprised the jury may be out for two or three days. But they see little likelihood of "a hung jury"—so hopelessly divided it cannot make up its mind.

"I've never seen such a strong-minded, independent group in my life," one defense attorney said privately last week.

The jurors must consider the testimony of 85 witnesses; more than 12,000 pages of transcript; nearly three dozen White House tapes; several score of documentary exhibits; and final arguments from eight lawyers that ran 21 hours.

They must determine the guilt or innocence of John N. Mitchell, the former attorney general and Nixon's campaign manager; H.R. Haldeman, the former White House chief of staff; John D. Ehrlichman, once Nixon's No. 2 aide; Robert C. Mardian, a former assistant attorney general and official of the Nixon re-election committee; and Kenneth W. Parkinson, a Washington lawyer hired to defend the committee after Watergate.

All are charged with conspiracy to obstruct justice and defraud the United States—the heart of the government's case.

they were confident of winning. Spokesmen said the radio relay base on Black Virgin Mountain near Tay Ninh was shelled Friday and attacked by a relatively small force of Communist commandos who were driven off.

Three militiamen were wounded, while Communist casualties were unknown, headquarters said.

Viet Cong frogmen blew up part of a Saigon river bridge at Phu Cuong, only 15 miles north of Saigon, early Saturday, stopping traffic on a much-used provincial road, headquarters said.

Military sources said the bridge probably could be repaired in a day or two.

In Cambodia, thousands of persons demonstrated in the streets of Kompong Som, 114 miles southwest of Phnom Penh, demanding that United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim visit their country to help restore peace.

Last Monday Communist forces shelled Kompong Som, the country's only deepwater port, and then staged a ground attack, killing six people and wiping out the radio relay station, military sources said.

Mobil Answers 'Scoop'

On - again, off - again presidential candidate Senator Henry ("Scoop") Jackson's recent blast at the oil industry received widespread coverage in both the printed and electronic press. Coverage devoted to the industry's defense against the senator's politically-oriented charges was spotty at best.

As a means of helping to redress that imbalance, we are going to reproduce here the text of a news release mailed out to the media by the Mobil Oil Corporation from its headquarters in New York, the contents of which we failed to see or hear publicized. The text follows:

New York, Dec. 6 - Mobil Oil Corporation today characterized as "massive distortion" Senator Henry Jackson's comments on taxes paid by U.S. oil companies. The Senator is wrong, Mobil said. "As a matter of fact, the oil industry's total average tax burden is as high as, or greater than, that of all U.S. mining and manufacturing corporations."

Moreover, as the Senator must be aware, taxation is only one source of revenue for the U.S.

government. And the oil industry generates more revenue for the U.S. than virtually any other industry. This year alone, in addition to taxes, Mobil has paid to the federal government almost a half-billion dollars in offshore bonuses, which is more than the company's U.S. earnings last year.

Contrary to what Senator Jackson said, oil companies are carrying their fair share of America's fiscal burdens. He should be reminded that it has not been the oil companies but the federal government that have caused us to become overly dependent on high-priced insecure foreign oil.

All of which motivates us to leave a question with the media:

If governmental news "handouts" are sought, accepted and publicized, why are "handouts" from industry not given at least equal treatment? The former (government) taxes and regulates, and would take over the media if it dared. The latter (industry), with its advertising outlays, provides the lifeblood for the publishing trade.

A bear hug for a choking victim

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: If you were in a restaurant (or in your own home) and someone started to choke on a piece of meat would you know what to do? Well, neither would I—until my friend Casey gave me the following information which I want to share with you:

After reading that 2,600 Americans choked to death last year on food or other objects, Dr. Henry Heimlich, a Cincinnati surgeon, worked out a procedure for saving choking victims, which I think bears remembering. It goes like this:

Standing behind the victim, place your arms around his waist, slightly above the waist. Allow the victim's head and torso to bend forward. Then tightly grasp your own wrist with your other hand and press into the victim's abdomen forcefully and rapidly, repeating several times. This will push up the diaphragm, compress the air into the lungs and expel the object that is blocking the air passage.

Until now, choking victims have often died unless a doctor was handy to cut an air passage into the throat, or use a special instrument to remove the block.

Reports received by Dr. Heimlich indicate that 40 lives have been saved with this procedure since it was published in a medical journal.

DEAR ABBY: The late John Barrymore, who was reputed to have been one of the world's greatest lovers, said "Sex is the thing that takes up the least amount of time, and causes the most amount of trouble."

The longer I read your column, Dear Abby, the more convinced am I that Barrymore was right.

ANOTHER LOVER

DEAR LOVER: If Barrymore really said that, he couldn't have been much of a lover.

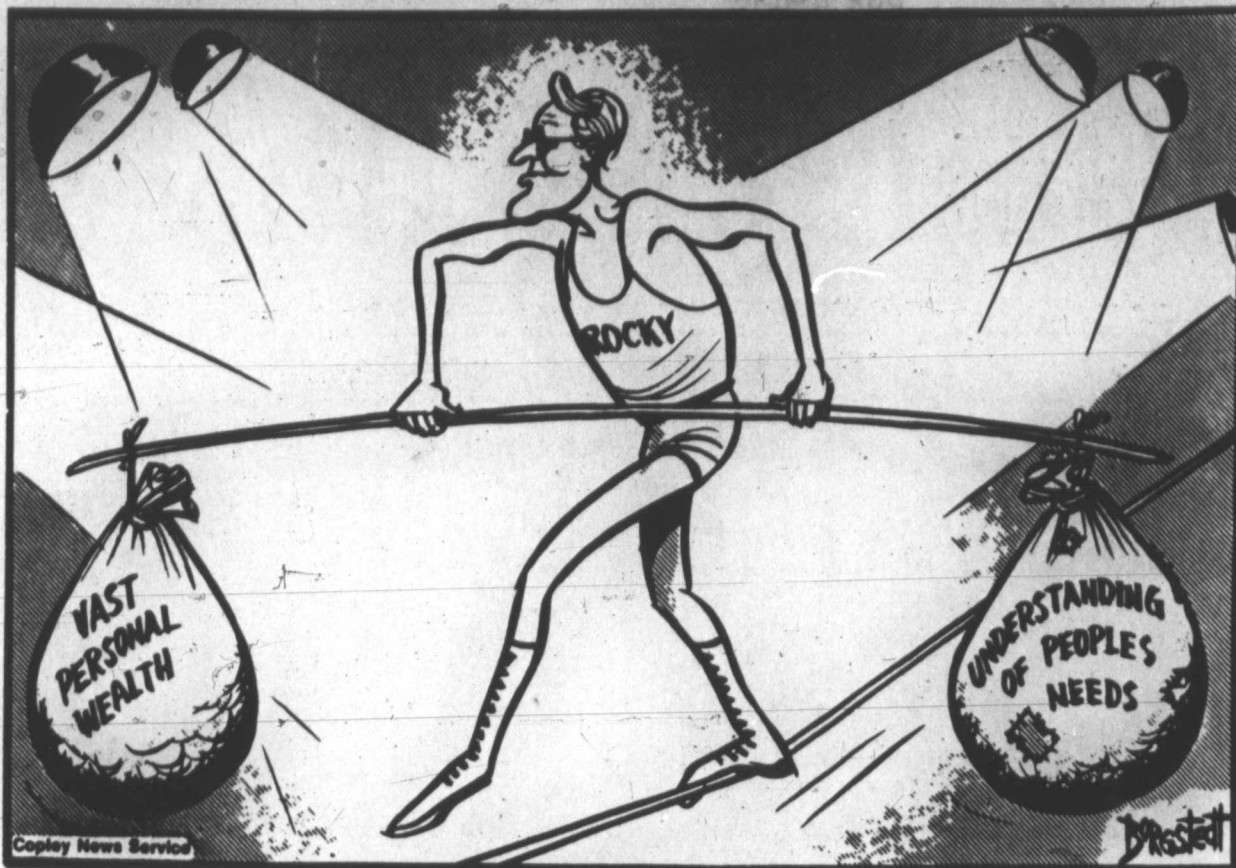

DEAR ABBY: After 25 years of marriage and a nice family, I found out my husband was unfaithful to me. Because of a death in my family in another state, we were apart for two months. During that time my husband said he got lonely and found this divorcee who was also lonely, so they became good friends and went out to dinner together several nights a week, to the movies, Sunday afternoon drives, etc.

He claims there was nothing more than a few kisses exchanged between them. He says he loves me and needs me but wants to continue being friends with this other woman. He says there is no reason why the three of us can't be friends and go out to dinner occasionally. He wants to be able to stop at her house to "just talk" when he feels like it.

I finally met her, and she told me she had no intentions of interfering with my marriage. She just wants to be friends. Abby, I love my husband, but I can't go along with this threesome.

We are financially comfortable, our children are married, and now we could enjoy life, but I don't want to share my husband with another woman. The sound of her name just tears me up. Help me before I crack up. I suggested counseling and he said it isn't necessary. CRACKING UP

DEAR CRACKING: Hang in there, you're on the right track. There is no way you can be "friends" with this woman. Counseling IS necessary. If he won't go, go without him and learn how to handle this born-again Casanova.

Tough balancing act

AMONG NEW CONGRESSMEN

Support For U.N. Waning

By ROBERTS. ALLEN
WASHINGTON, Dec. 29—There is little New Year cheer for the United Nations in the new Congress.

Disillusionment and hostility are widespread and intense among the legislators. Particularly significant is the pronounced disapproval evident among the 73 new Congressmen, many of them military veterans and an average of 40 years old.

Privately, a number have already been caustically critical of the General Assembly and its "irresponsible" control by the Arab-African-Communist bloc.

Still unclear is what form this extensive resentment will take in the session that gets underway the middle of next month. There will definitely be a crackdown, but just what is still in the making.

Few lawmakers go so far as to openly advocate withdrawal from the UN, although some are making no secret of bluntly favoring that.

Illustrative is the explicit statement of Rep. Edward Koch, D.-N.Y., World War II combat infantryman, influential member of the Banking and Currency Committee, and previously a consistent UN supporter. But during the House debate over the multi-billion dollar foreign aid authorization bill, Koch vigorously backed an amendment to reject a proposed $27 million increase in U.S. payments to the UN.

"There will be surprise. I am sure," said Koch "that I advocate this proposal to cut U.S. funding of the UN to the $127.8 million authorized for the current fiscal year. But my vote for this is predicated on the immoral and illegal action taken by the General Assembly."

"I think Ambassador Scali's blistering condemnation requires an emphatic supporting message from Congress. One way to convey that message is to reduce U.S. funding. And I want to add frankly that I also believe the U.S. should consider withdrawal from the General Assembly."

SURPRISING CRITIC
Most unexpected denunciation, and in some respects the most damaging to the UN, was the blast from Sen. Hubert Humphrey—long-time dedicated internationalist and zealous UN champion.

In the closing hours of the recent session, the Minnesota took the Senate floor and while his colleagues listened in astonishment, denounced the General Assembly as lawless and irresponsible. While the former Vice President didn't go so far as to expressly advocate breaking ties with that body, he made it clear he feels the assembly is on trial with American public opinion.

"At this critical time when inflation and recession prevail throughout the world," said Humphrey, "the United Nations has been seriously weakened by a series of actions by the General Assembly. Its suspension of South Africa, the curtailment of Israel's right to speak, the infamous support for the PLO's claims violated the rules by which the UN must function, and the spirit of the UN Charter itself."

"Both the major powers and the smaller countries must recognize that actions of this kind weakened the UN, and that a strong UN is in the interest of all members. Any weakening of the UN affects all members, large and small, and is to the disadvantage of all, particularly the weaker ones. It must be remembered that the assembly can do little to enforce its resolutions, especially if they violate the interests of a significant minority. And that is what has happened in recent months, to the incalculable loss of the UN."

Significantly, not one member of the Senate rose to contradict Humphrey or to say a word in defense of the UN.

CALLING THE TURN
On the contrary, Sen. Harry Byrd detailed a bill of indictment against the UN which was as scathing as it was explicit.

Noting that he had enthusiastically favored establishment of the world organization, that as a World War II Navy veteran he had high hopes for it and "had supported it for years," the Virginian declared he could no longer do that.

"The UN has been a dismal disappointment," said Byrd. "Originally with a membership of 51 countries, all with long established records of government, it now has 138 members, most of them admitted in recent years. And to cap that, the UN now is dominated by the African, Asian and Communist nations, which have 64 per cent of UN membership."

"As a consequence, the U.S., which puts up most of the money to run the UN, has received nothing in return but contempt, derision and impotence."

Specifically pinpointing UN failings, Byrd cited the following: "Of the 138 member nations, 92 are in arrears on dues and other payments. Foremost among them are Russia and two of its so-called 'republics'—Byelorussia and the Ukraine—which owe a total of $110 million."

The African country of Chad—in the forefront of the ouster of South Africa, granting "illegal" privileges to the PLO and the silencing of Israel—is known to commit atrocities, such as "burying Christians alive in ant hills."

A militant, unreasonable majority is running roughshod over the principles and Charter of the United Nations. This autocratic majority has repeatedly violated the UN Charter, which prohibits interference in the domestic affairs of member nations.

"The UN has forfeited world respect," asserted Byrd, "even to the point that the Washington Post, a liberal and internationalist publication, has suggested the U.S. should suspend participation until there is a change of policy. I couldn't agree more with that view."

High-Handed Debiors
Virtually all members of the Arab-African-Communist bloc now flagrantly dominating and manipulating the UN are in arrears in dues and other assessments. Examples:

Russia—$24,726,935; Ukraine—$2,385,599; Poland—$1,428,821; Rumania—$504,402; Czechoslovakia—$1,016,827; Hungary—$1,157,855; Cuba—$470,667; Syria—$189,774; Bulgaria—$572,573; Central African Republic—$182,335; Equatorial Guinea—$133,518; India—$187,575; Mali—$144,688; Senegal—$110,431; Yemen—$108,482.

Since the creation of the UN, the U.S. contributions in one year. But all UN members have the same voting rights—one country, one vote.

But it is the U.S. that pays and pays!

DUNAGIN'S PEOPLE

"THE WE'RE NUMBER 37 CHANT IS A GREAT IDEA, WILBUR! NOBODY'S GOING TO CHALLENGE THAT!"

Rearview Mirror

By TEX DeWEESE

THE HOLIDAY season still is here. Christmas 1974 with its rejoicing and merriment is behind us. Just ahead is a diaphanous young 1975 peeking around the corner.

At midnight Tuesday the youngster will step into full view and set the pace for us with all his good and bad points for the next 12 months.

The young fellow who replaces the Old Man with the scythe will be ushered onto the 1975 stage with a lot of ceremony on New Year's Eve.

Now, without any intention of being a killjoy, let's repeat the warning of the safety experts about drinking and driving.

So, a few suggestions are in order for the guys and gals who feel they must have their libations in order to "properly" ring out the old and ring in the new year, and who then will be taking to the streets and highways in their motor cars.

IT IS possible to drink and survive.

One tip: take a dose of B-complex vitamins before the party. The vitamins will help speed the break-down of alcohol in the body, we are told.

Another suggestion is to eat before drinking. Dr. Julian A. Waller of the University college of medicine is quoted as saying serving food before drinks can reduce blood-alcohol concentration by as much as one-half. Dr. James Ray Adams of Columbia University, offers some tips to party hosts. He suggests that a host should always respect a guest's wishes when he refuses a drink; never insist that he take "one for the road"; close the bar about an hour before guests are likely to leave; offer coffee, fruit juice or soft drinks instead of that final cocktail.

And if a guest has already passed the "point of no return," the host should suggest that the guest be taken home by a sober guest, or by taxicab.

We understand you can even call Pampa police if you feel you shouldn't be driving—and they will pick you up and take you home safely.

ABOUT YOUR New Year's resolutions. One wonders if you are among those who like to make them and see how long they can be kept—or are you one who likes to make resolutions for the fun of breaking them?

And, of course, there are those who just plain refuse to make any New Year's resolutions and as a result do not have any to worry about breaking!

However, if we were to make New Year's resolutions, they probably would include one to give the City Hall Cat more license to snoop. Ditto for The Court House Cat and School House Kitty.

It appears that School House Kitty especially will be busy. The school board still is wrestling with whether candidates for the new 7-man board should be voted on under the same at-large system as has been in force for many years or whether they should be elected under the "place system" with a run-off provision.

From what we can learn, School House Kitty will suggest that board members leave the voting system just as it is and has been—at least delay any action until further study is made.

SCHOOL HOUSE Kitty also reports some Pampa teachers were a bit uptight about the in-service days they have to put in during the Christmas-New Year holidays.

They were called back on Saturday after the vacation started and will have to come in again Thursday and Friday, Jan. 2 and 3, which will interrupt the end of the vacation.

It is understood some wonder why the school superintendent didn't do something about it. Well, the current superintendent didn't have anything to do with setting the in-service days on the 1974-75 school calendar and under state law he cannot change them. The days were set by the superintendent who resigned and is no longer here. Suffice it to say there will be no in-service school days for teachers during the next Christmas holiday season of 1975-76.

LOOKS LIKE there's just room enough left here to extend the annual wish that you all have a happy and prosperous New Year.

MARKET MANIPULATION Politicians Blamed For Farmer's Ills

DENVER (UPI) — Henry Linker Jr., who raises corn, sugarbeets, alfalfa hay and cattle in Northeast Colorado, didn't do too well in 1974 and he blames people he's never seen for keeping prices down and costs up.

"Personally, I think politics has a lot to do with it," said Linker, 49, who has farmed northeast of Brush, Colo., since 1942. "I feel there are people (middlemen) at the other end who ... manipulate the market."

Linker was hit hardest in 1974 by cattle prices.

He sold 200 head for 31 cents a pound after building them up from a purchase weight of 400 to 450 pounds to the sale weight of 700 pounds each. Linker drove home from the sale barn with $7 more than he paid for the cattle.

"That doesn't include the feed, expense, our equipment and labor," he said. "With expenses the way they are and at the present price, there was no way to make money."

Linker and his brother, Clarence, operate the farm as a partnership. They did well on sugarbeets, primarily because of the rising market, but corn was different. Linker said the $1.20 government price support was inadequate.

The corn he had to buy to feed the cattle varied in cost from $6.20 to $6.35, a jump of more than $3 compared to the price in years past.

Linker's woes are not unusual in Colorado. The cost of machinery climbs steadily each year as does the bill for seed and grain. But the markets for farm products have seen-sawed and it isn't unusual for farmers, like Linker, to be shortchanged. They spend more growing than they get back selling.

Planes Shuttle City Residents

DARWIN (UPI) — The Australian government Saturday turned to the $1 billion task of rebuilding its northern gateway while speeding up the mass evacuation of residents in a 40-plane air shuttle from the cyclone-devastated city.

Prime Minister E. Gough Whitlam said 16,000 people had been flown out of the city by Saturday night and plans were to reduce Darwin's population to about 10,000 from the usual 45,000 by New Year's Day.

Maj. Gen. Alan B. Stretton, chief of the government's Natural Disasters Organization, said, "The only people we want left in Darwin are servicemen, police, medical teams, able-bodied men and those too sick to travel."

The official death toll from Tracy's Christmas Day onslaught rose to 49 Saturday when police discovered two bodies washed ashore on a Darwin beach. A police spokesman said the figure could reach 150 as the rubble of homes is cleared.

Whitlam, who cut short a European tour to fly back to Australia, was driven Saturday on a 58-minute, 60 mile-an-hour dash through the city which is without water, electric power and sewers. About 20,000 persons were made homeless in by the cyclone.

Standing amid overturned autos and debris of homes, he likened the cyclone damage to the 1940 Japanese bombing of this tropical harbor city, 2,000 miles north of Sydney.

"There are now no more people that can live in Darwin in present conditions, than were able to live here during the war," Whitlam said.

Help Sought For Darwin

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Texans who want to aid cyclone victims in Darwin, Australia, should do so with cash contributions to either the American Red Cross or Salvation Army. Gov. Dolph Briscoe said.

"I have been advised by the state department that thousands of Americans have already responded to this tragedy with gifts of food and clothing that have exceeded the needs requested by the Australian government," the governor said.

"The Australian embassy in Washington has asked that the American Red Cross and Salvation Army dispense with further collection of these goods."

Consumerism also has stepped in during the past year with housewives' boycotts of meat that did affect the cattle industry and small stockmen such as Linker. Similar boycotts on other goods could be disastrous.

"The consumers are in the position of being able to cut the guts out of certain segments of the agriculture economy," said Myron Schober of the Rocky Mountain Farmers Union. "Everybody has to work at least halfway to develop a system of goals in production."

Schober said the problems of the Linkers were those of other farmers in New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming and Kansas — instability of prices and markets.

Schober said producers and consumers have to realize the day of the domestic market is gone and that current prices on supermarket food shelves won't swing back to those of preinflation days.

"The farmer is getting a world market price for his product and the consumer is paying one," Schober said. "What we're finding now is that food consumers are paying a more realistic price in world terms. It is hard getting used to."

Melvin Munn Gives Talk At Kiwanis Club

"The Three Little Bigs" was the topic of an address by Melvin Munn, former Pampa, at Friday's weekly luncheon of the Pampa Kiwanis Club in First United Methodist Church.

Munn, now president of Life-Line, Inc., of Washington, D.C., which produces a daily 15-minute nationwide radio show, as one of the organizers of the Pampa High School Key Club. He began his radio series in 1964.

Munn described the "three little bigs" as Big Government, Big Business and Big Labor.

"None of the three little bigs has a magic formula to supersede individual responsibility, individual initiative and individual moral religious requirements needed to retain our democratic form of government as intended by the original Constitution," Munn said.

He said "bigness in and of itself is not necessarily bad. It is when bigness becomes ineffectiveness and inefficiency that it is bad for the individual and the masses."

The speaker related the nation's founding history to individual responsibility in society.

"Our founding fathers trusted God and each other and individual freedom, individual responsibility and putting God first made the United States great," he added.

The speaker was introduced by Warren Hasse of Radio Station KPDM, which carries Munn's Life-Line broadcasts.

DPS Releases Accident Totals

The Texas Highway Patrol investigated 13 accidents on rural highways in Gray County during the month of November, according to Sergeant D.E. Womack, Highway Patrol supervisor of this area.

These crashes resulted in one person killed and nine persons injured.

The rural traffic accident summary for this county during the first 11 months of 1974 shows a total of 150 accidents resulting in seven persons killed and 81 persons injured.

The rural traffic accident summary for the 60 counties of the Lubbock Department of Public Safety Region for November shows a total of 497 accidents resulting in ten persons killed and 229 persons injured as compared to November, 1973, with 606 accidents resulting in 25 persons killed and 349 persons injured. This was 109 less accidents, 15 less killed, and 120 less injured in 1974 at the same period of time.

The ten traffic deaths for the month of November, 1974, occurred in the following counties: two in Hansford, one each in Cochran, Crosby, Dickens, Gray, Haskell, Hutchinson, Montague and Throckmorton.

FROM SHOW BUSINESS TO POLITICS

Celebrities To Bury Jack Benny

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The body of Jack Benny, America's comedian emeritus, will be borne to the grave today by a host of celebrities from show business, music and politics.

From President Ford to Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, from Bob Hope to the mayor of his constantly kidded home town of Waukegan, Ill., came laments Friday at the death of the great comic.

"It was more than just being an employee or a member of the cast," said Anderson, a fixture on Benny's 35-year radio and television series as the irreverent gravel-voiced butler. "There was love there between us."

"If laughter is the music of the soul, Jack and his violin and his good humor have made life better for all men," Ford said in a telegram to Benny's widow, Mary Livingston, his comic partner for most of his career and wife of 47 years.

"I just can't believe he's gone," she said Friday. Benny succumbed to an unexpected cancer, only a week after doctors detected it and told Benny he would soon die. He was 80.

Benny was scheduled to be buried at noon (3 p.m. EST) Sunday at Hillside Memorial Park in Culver City, with two lifelong friends and fellow comedians, George Burns and Bob Hope, delivering the eulogy.

The pallbearers include Gregory Peck, Frank Sinatra, Milton Berle, and Billy Wilder.

Honorary pallbearers included the supporting cast of his series—Anderson, singer Dennis Day, Mel Blanc, band leader Phil Harris, announcer Don Wilson—and political figures including Gov. Ronald Reagan, Mayor Tom Bradley, Sen. John Tunney and former Senator and entertainer George Murphy.

Benny made his supposed ineptitude with the violin a standard comic prop but he was actually a fairly accomplished player, raising large sums for retired musicians in benefit concerts and working tirelessly at promoting the violin.

Classical violinists Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky and Los Angeles Symphony conductor Zubin Mehta volunteered to march as honorary pallbearers. Benny played a concert with Stern once to raise funds to save Carnegie Hall.

Others included Danny Kaye, Jack Lemmon, Walter Matthau, James Stewart, Johnny Carson and George Jessel, and entertainment industry moguls and television network chiefs Lew Wasserman, Jules Stein, Robert Sarnoff and William S. Paley.

"As a comedian, as a performer, I don't think anyone will ever see the like of him again," said Hope.

It was a mark of Benny's life that his fame was built on a comic image of himself that was the reverse of the truth. Just as the shrieking strains of his comedy violin playing hid a musician who could win applause in Carnegie Hall, his legendary miserliness, which drew laughs for half a century, hid a man who had raised or given away $1 million to his favorite causes, his friends estimated.

Although he constantly made jokes at the expense of Waukegan, "he was an institution around here," mourned Mayor Robert Sabonjian in the Illinois town Friday. He recalled the many times that Benny raised funds for civic projects, and Benny's pride in "The Jack Benny Junior High School" as "the greatest honor of his life."

Benny opened bank accounts for all children born on the day in 1961 when the school was dedicated, depositing $39 in them—symbolic of his running gag that "I'm only 39." He stipulated that the recipients could not withdraw the money until they reach age 39.

Due to an unusually heavy influx of births that day—the average was four but it doubled—the project wound up costing Benny over $300, but the recipients will collect hundreds apiece from the accumulated interest by the year 2000.

Pampa city commissioners will be confronted with a 5-item agenda when they meet at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in City Hall.

The meeting will take up business scheduled at the regular meeting postponed from Christmas Eve.

Included in the considerations will be the following:

Purchase of $64,000 of investments by the Street Improvement Bond Fund from the Governmental Trust Fund.

Increase in longevity payments to police and fire personnel as required by state law.

IN NEW MEXICO Lost Youth Survives Sub-Freezing Weather

TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES, N.M. (UPI) — Faith in his father helped a 14-year-old boy survive three days and two nights wandering lost in subfreezing temperatures on snowcovered southern New Mexico plains.

"I knew you'd find me, Dad. I knew you'd come," Joseph Cordova said from his bed at St. Anne's Hospital, where he was in fair condition, recovering from exposure.

"The miracle of miracles has happened," his father, David Cordova, said following the successful conclusion of a search involving 100 men with 75 four-wheel drive vehicles, 40 horses, several spotter aircraft and rescue dogs.

Before the rescue, authorities said they did not expect to find the boy alive.

The boy withstood the elements and menacing coyotes with nothing to eat since Christmas dinner and a .22-caliber rifle until the specially trained search dogs found him at mid-morning Friday. Against temperatures that dipped to 12 degrees he was dressed only in a windbreaker, sweatshirt, trousers and insulated underwear.

The father said the scent of rabbits Joseph shot attracted coyotes. The boy drove the coyotes off by shooting and throwing the rabbits at them.

"It was a warm day, a beautiful day," the elder Cordova said, when he and Joseph went hunting for rabbits with another son, Eugene, 16, in the Jornada Del Muerte area Christmas day. But a sudden storm blew up with snow "so thick we couldn't see each other," the father said.

Instead, the boy wandered away and failed to see the bonfire his father lit for him. Eugene was sent for help and the search was begun by Sierra County Sheriff Charles Cox.

Cordova said his lost son kept walking most of the time, except for a few hours early Friday when he covered himself with brush for protection against the cold and slept for a couple of hours.

The boy was found near the town of Cutter in an area that had been searched extensively Thursday.

Leftists Hold Party Guests

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Nicaragua declared martial law Saturday to deal with leftist guerrillas who shot their way into a diplomatic party given in honor of the American ambassador, killing two national guardsmen and wounding several guests, and seizing about 25 hostages.

U.S. Ambassador Turner Shelton had left the party a few minutes earlier and was safe at home when the attack occurred at about 11 p.m. Friday. The hostages included the mayor of Managua, the Nicaraguan ambassador to the United States and the Nicaraguan consul in New York.

Msr. Miguel Ovando Bravo, archbishop of Managua, was negotiating with the guerrillas, police said. But the demands of the guerrillas were not known.

Army patrols surrounded the private residence where the raid occurred and where the hostages were being held.

Several women hostages were released Saturday morning. But at least one, Mrs. Luisa Marina Teran, wife of the Nicaraguan consul in New York, was still being held.

Other hostages included Nicaraguan Ambassador Guillermo Sevilla Sacasa, dean of the Washington diplomatic corps and brother-in-law of President Anastasio Somoza; Noel Payals, the president's cousin; Guillermo Lang, chief of the Nicaraguan mission in New York; and Jose Maria Castillo, the party host and former minister of agriculture.

The Nicaraguan government said it was "trying every possible means to dissuade the assailants."

It gave no immediate details about any guerrilla demands. The guerrillas numbered an estimated 8 to 12 persons, diplomatic sources said.

The Nicaraguan government said the guerrillas belong to the so-called Sandinista Liberation Front.

Young Socialist Alliance Holds Annual Convention

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — With self-proclaimed Nazis and Ku Klux Klanners protesting outside, and undercover FBI agents supposedly lurking inside, the annual convention of the Young Socialist Alliance was called to order Saturday by national chairman Andrew Pulley.

Pulley told the alliance's "real" members: "There is but one thing I know of that is below the stature of the CIA, and that is the FBI."

About 600 members sat beneath banners reading "Stop Boston Lynch Mob," "Halt the U.S. War Drive in Arab East," "Equal Rights for Women," "Stop Racism," and others while Pulley berated the FBI for its surveillance and "harassment" of the alliance's gatherings.

"I want to tell all of you undercover men seated out there that we're not going to rest until we get a decision barring you from our conventions," Pulley said. "It's still possible we may get a favorable ruling before this convention is over."

The alliance won a court order barring the surveillance Dec. 13 when U.S. District Judge Thomas P. Griesa of New York issued a restraining order. However, the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Tuesday overturned Griesa's order and the alliance appealed to Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall.

Marshall, with Justice Lewis Powell concurring, denied an application to reinstate the injunction barring the FBI monitoring. The alliance said its attorneys would appeal to Justice William O. Douglas but the efforts appear futile.

as the 14th annual convention opened with agents apparently in attendance.

The five-day convention also attracted four brown-shirted men who said they were American Nazis. They carried placards saying "Commie Traitors Here in America" and were joined by two other men, wearing what looked like old blue police uniforms and carrying signs reading "Death to Red Traitors—KKK."

Cathy Perkus of New York City, a member of the alliance's political rights defense fund which filed the suit against the surveillance, said the alliance became aware that the FBI was planning to monitor the convention through an employee of the Jefferson Hotel, where the convention was being held.

"She told us FBI agents visited the hotel in September and asked questions about the convention, they told her the FBI would be on the premises to keep an eye on us," Ms. Perkus said.

Nan Bailey of Washington, D.C., another member of the fund, told a news conference the FBI has "a blank check to use information compiled on young people of this country whose ideas aren't the same as the government's."

"We feel we would have gotten a much larger turnout at the convention if the FBI hadn't announced its intention to be here," she added. "We did gain a victory in that the agreed the FBI had no right to use information collected to harass or intimidate us."

Antiwar activist Peter Camejo, whose selection to head the Socialist Workers party 1976 presidential ticket was announced Friday, said in an interview that the FBI wrongly lists his party and the alliance, the party's youth affiliate, as subversive.

"If the word subversive means an organization which carries out illegal activities the answer is no," the 35-year-old Camejo said. "They have positively no evidence that we have ever supported any illegal activities despite the constant surveillance."

"The Republicans had a president kicked out of office and a vice president caught taking money under the table. Why don't they surveil them," Camejo asked. "They don't simply because they agree with their views. What we have established is a secret political police."

TAC Rejects Request For Airline Route

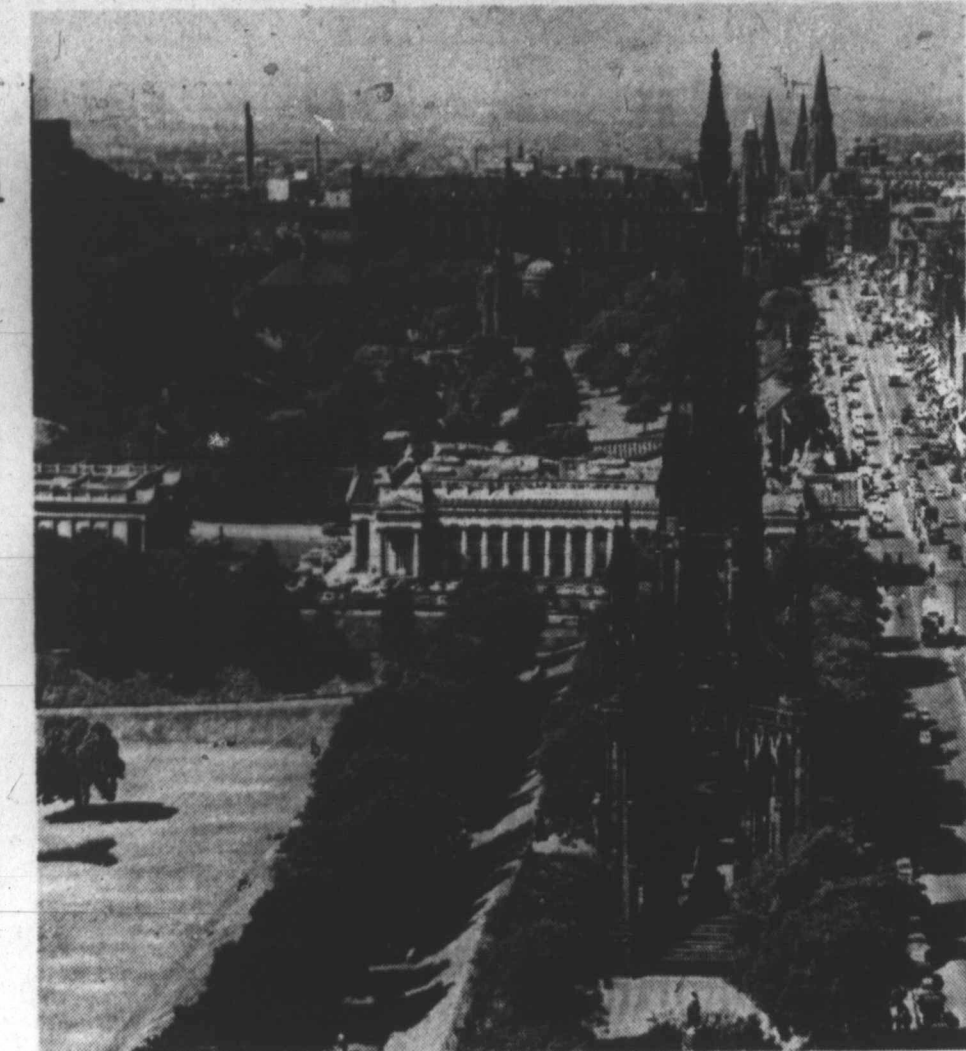

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The Texas Aeronautics Commission has denied Texas International Airlines more time to prepare its protests to a recommendation that Southwest Airlines be licensed to fly into the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Examiner Joan Holloway recommended Dec. 23 that Southwest be authorized to make three flights daily into and out of Harlingen, linking the Valley city to Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio, Texas International, which immediately threatened to cancel its nine daily flights to Harlingen if Southwest's service is approved, was given until Jan. 7 to file exceptions to the recommendation.

TIA asked for more time to prepare its written protests, but Aeronautics Commission Director Charles Murphy said Saturday the firm had not given sufficient reason for such a delay.

Southwest proposed to fly the Valley routes at fares 15 to 60 per cent lower than those charged by Texas International. The dispute over the proposed Southwest Flights to the Valley has been going on for more than a year.

Southwest now serves only three major cities with a commuter service, utilizing a fleet of four Boeing 737 jets.

DECLARES EMERGENCY

Bangladesh Starts Fight On Internal Disturbances

DACCA (UPI) — Bangladesh was declared a state of emergency Saturday in a harsh crackdown on "internal disturbances" the government said threatened the nation that is barely three years old.

The decree from the government of Prime Minister Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, who has led the country since its break from Pakistan in December, 1971, gives authorities sweeping powers to "make such rules as it deems necessary to combat subversion."

Some constitutional rights were suspended by the proclamation which provides for arrest and detention of any person "acting in a manner prejudicial to Bangladesh's relations with foreign powers or to the security, public safety or interest of Bangladesh."

The announcement came shortly after the arrival for a three-day visit of 19-year-old King Jigme Singye Wangchuk of Bhutan, an Indian protectorate. He was met on arrival by Rahman and President Mohammadullah.

The decree did not spell out the alleged threats to the country. An accompanying government statement spoke, however, of "persons notorious for their anti-national crimes, extremists and enemy agents in the pay of foreign powers" and referred to "some collaborators of the Pakistani army."

Pro-Pakistan elements were blamed by the government for a series of bomb blasts that rocked the country on the eve of National Day celebrations 12 days ago.

Bangladesh, with a population of about 75 million, was created as an independent state from Pakistan's former eastern wing in the Dec. 3-16 war with India.

Since then the country has suffered severe droughts and monsoon flooding and much of its population is reported near starvation. Recent reports from Dacca quoted reliable sources as estimating at least 3,000 politicians have been assassinated in the past three years.

Rahman, a slight, bespectacled nationalist who was acclaimed prime minister after the 1971 war following 10 months in a Pakistan prison, led his Awami League to easy victory one year ago in Bangladesh's first national election.

AT SUMMIT MEETING

Attitude Could Affect Russian Commitments

MOSCOW (UPI) — In what seemed to be the first hint of Soviet retaliation in its trade and emigration dispute with the United States, a high official said Saturday the American attitude could affect Russian commitments made at the 1972 summit meeting of the two superpowers.

Leonid Zamyatin, chief of the official Tass news agency, who periodically acts as spokesman for Communist party General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev, said also that the quarrel could hurt U.S. trade.

Writing in the newspaper Sovetskaya Rossiya, Zamyatin said that when former President Richard M. Nixon met Brezhnev in Moscow in May, 1972, each government undertook to grant the other "most favored nation" trade status unconditionally.

OF TWO ADDICTS Authorities Study Methadone Deaths

WACO, Tex. (UPI) — State and county authorities plan separate investigations into the Christmas Day deaths of two heroin addicts, who took overdoses of methadone supplied to help them stop their drug habits.

Arthur Joe Williams, 32, and Robert Lee Spratt, 33, received their first methadone treatments Christmas Eve from the new program run by the Mental Health-Mental Retardation center.

Williams and Spratt were found dead Christmas Day and Dr. Walter Krohn, who is conducting the autopsies, said they both died of respiratory depression.

Mental Health-Mental Retardation Center officials said the two dead men and a third patient still hospitalized "may have been (given) higher than intended" doses of methadone Christmas Eve.

A 10-milligram sample of the methadone used Tuesday was being analyzed by the Department of Public Safety.

McLennan County District Attorney Martin Eichelberger said the county will investigate the deaths and officials from the State Department of Health said the agency's food and drug division will begin its own investigation Monday.

Eichelberger said he has assigned chief felony prosecutor Felipe Reyna to begin an investigation of the deaths and of the recently opened state facility where the methadone was administered. Eichelberger would not say if he planned to file any criminal charges in the case.

Reyna said Friday he was trying to get treatment program records "to find out what in fact did happen out there. We just don't lose two people and not do anything about it."

Thai Students Protest Return Of Kittikachorn

BANGKOK (UPI) — Thousands of demonstrating students Saturday led mounting public opposition to the return from American exile of ousted military strongman Thanom Kittikachorn less than a month before the first election of a Thai civilian government in more than a quarter-century.

About 10,000 students rallied at Thammasat University to denounce Thanom.

The students, many of whom led 10 days of street riots 14 months ago in which 71 persons died and which led to the fall of the military regime, demanded a swift trial and stiff punishment of Thanom for the way he ran the nation's affairs for a decade. Some demanded execution of Thanom.

The army was on general alert in case of trouble, but demonstrations were orderly in the country where about 25,000 American servicemen are stationed. Thanom, 63, arrived in Bangkok early Friday after flying half-way around the world from Boston where he had lived in seclusion, since King Bhumibol Adulyadej ordered him into exile.

After visiting his 90-year-old dying father, Thanom was arrested and reportedly taken to an army base in central Thailand for safekeeping.

The king, Prime Minister Sanya Dharmasakti and army commander-in-chief Kris Sivara were all out of the capital when Thanom returned. Sanya returned from his country vacation home and Kris cut short his visit to the Philippines to fly home.

"I guarantee there will be no coup at all," Kris said in Manila.

"But there will be some problems. People don't like him."

Many politicians, in the midst of a campaign for Jan. 26 elections for the first popularly elected government since 1948, favored sending Thanom back into exile.

"We are afraid the elections will never be held if Thanom is still around," one leading politician said.

Northern Tourists Flock To Florida

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Tourists from the North smiled in the face of a gloomy economy this week and followed Santa to Florida in record numbers, causing turnstile-watchers to shake their heads in wonder.

A surprising surge of holiday travelers forced the gates closed for four hours at Walt Disney World Friday when a capacity crowd of 74,597 was counted, surpassing the old attendance record of 73,168 set on April 17, 1973—before gas ran short and money got tight.

Bright weather at the week's end portended more banner business for Central Florida's tourist attraction, while Miami Beach's towering hotels were 95 per cent full.

"We more than doubled our attendance record yesterday and they're still coming," said Dick Weaver, spokesman for another attraction, Sea World.

Joe Fincher, general manager of Busch Gardens in Tampa, said his park had 20,000 visitors Friday for the biggest single day in almost two years. "Since Monday the influx of tourists has been phenomenal," he said. Fincher said he expects a continued crush through Sunday, then a gradual easing off.

Record crowds were also reported at Cypress Gardens and Circus World Showcase.

In view of tight economic situation, no one was entirely sure why there had been the heavy influx of out-of-state visitors, which accounted for about 70 per cent of the crowds at Disney World and "at least 95 per

The irony here is that whatever the sugar refiners may have done to soak the American sugar buyer, the government has done infinitely more by enacting, year after year, the Sugar Act. This divided the American sugar market up among favored producers, foreign and domestic, and prohibited marketings in excess of the authorized quota. For years, therefore, it forced American consumers to pay prices far higher than prevailed in the rest of the world.

Now that Congress has killed the Sugar Act (effective next week) and prices are soaring all over the world, the government apparently feels that it can go after the sugar refiners with a clear conscience.

Clovis (N.M.) News-Journal:

There's a move in Congress to put the lawmakers on a three week legislative schedule, which would give them the fourth week of every month to tend to business at home.

The plan is hailed by its proponents as a constructive alternative to the "Tuesday-Thursday club," which is a sly acknowledgement of frequent Monday and Friday absences of congressional members from the distant districts.

But the goal of a more effective Congress, it seems, would be achieved more certainly by exploring methods of keeping our representatives on the job instead of seeking to legitimize their escapes from Washington.

Jacksonville (Tex.) Daily Progress:

If, as it now appears, the Congress will not be burdened with any more Watergates, impeachments or research into the qualifications of nominees for the vice presidency, much can be accomplished come 1975. Partly due to executive failures, the country is in need of vibrant, forceful leadership. If the White House is incapable of this leadership, the mantle passes to the Congress. Better still a Congress and the executive working together to bring this country back to normal, healthy growth and prosperity.

Lubbock (Tex.) Avalanche- Journal:

In its lack of wisdom, the 93rd Congress did not see fit to pass strong legislation forbidding use of federal funds for forced school busing.

But, in its wisdom, Congress did see fit to pass legislation to curb overzealous bureaucrats in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare who have been insisting that the sexes should be mixed in such groups as the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Campfire Girls, YMCA, YWCA and fraternities and sororities.

But then, abandoning wisdom, Congress has amended the Little League charter to give girls the same chance to play baseball as boys.

... what happens if the Little League files a suit contending that it is discriminated against because the Boy Scouts and the other organizations are exempt while it is not.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch:

Israel's reluctance to accept nuclear aid from the United States is all for the better inasmuch as the White House now has an opportunity to bow out of a commitment made by Richard M. Nixon when he was President. The commitment was to provide such assistance to Israel and to Egypt provided both countries agreed to strict international inspection procedures. It was an unwise offer which never should have been made.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat:

The more than 100,000 tons of food stockpiled and in danger of spoiling in American fallout shelters should be distributed without delay to ease the suffering of the needy and victims of hunger.

The food, scattered in 99,000 places across the country, belongs to the people in the local communities involved. Many had forgotten it existed. The high nutrient biscuits and carbohydrate supplements were stored largely in the period 1962-64 as a precaution against the threat of nuclear attack. It is calculated the food is plentiful enough and nutritious enough to feed 10 million people for 60 days... The solution is fairly simple: What goes into a fallout shelter can come out. And it's about time it came out.

Minneapolis Tribune:

Bit by bit, it seems, Mr. Ford and Secretary of State Kissinger are putting together a European policy in which compromise—and recognition of difference—is the key. At the same time, the Europeans—the French, especially—seem to be more willing to listen to Washington. This change of tone in Atlantic relations is welcome after several years of what a former senior U.S. diplomat once called a "dialogue of the deaf."

India devours American ambassadors. Attorney General William Saxbe was confirmed last week as the new U.S. Ambassador. He would appear to be a good choice—that rarity among American politicians, a man who traveled frequently to India as a senator and knows its leaders.

St. Paul Pioneer Press:

If the history of American government is taken as a guide, Vice President Nelson Rockefeller will enjoy a short period of official acclaim and public attention in his new office, then fade into frustrated acceptance of the role of a high titled official without power or influence. There is just a chance the Rockefeller story may be different. We hope this proves to be the case. President Ford nominated Rockefeller because of his qualifications.

Memphis Commercial Appeal:

... It (the record of the 93rd Congress) was a record not only of some reforms that long have been needed, but also of recognition of its own role in national affairs. It marked what appears now to have been a turning point, away from the tendency of congresses to give their constitutional powers to the executive.

Memphis Press-Scimitar:

In another example of bias against the west, the U. N. General Assembly before adjournment rammed through a so-called 'Charter of Economic Rights and Duties of States.'

This mischievous document gives all the rights to the underdeveloped nations and all the duties to the industrialized states.

San Francisco Chronicle:

"The Shah's logic is indeed curious. It holds that a rise in gold prices would 'diminish the purchasing power' of the oil countries. It ignores the fact that the oil producing countries increased their purchasing power fourfold by their 1973 hike in oil prices that is pumping untold billions into the overstuffed coffers of Iran and other oil producers and has already sent the purchasing power of the rest of the world into a nosedive.

Boston Herald-American:

If history remembers the 93rd Congress, it will remember it chiefly as the session which was preoccupied with the Watergate scandal and the fall of the Nixon-Agnew administration.

Its handling of that difficult crisis was by no means perfect, but on the whole it was exemplary. The major criticism that has been voiced is that the agony was unnecessarily prolonged because Congress had a tendency to drag its feet.

It's greatest shortcoming was its failure to deal swiftly and firmly with critical economic and energy matters.

St. Petersburg Times:

Outraged, we are. Surprised, we are not. And we doubt that it comes out of the blue to any old CIA-watcher that our government's spooks have been up to their dirty tricks not just aboard but at home. Sure, it is against the law for the Central Intelligence Agency to deal in any way with the 'internal security' of the United States. That's the FBI's job.

But with a blank check from Congress to hire, spend, travel, bribe, lie, eavesdrop, wiretap, house-break, and by inference, even to kill without any public accounting—so long as it's all done in some other country—CIA couldn't help getting in trouble here, too.

The Women's View

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dorothy Lee, 24, loved the excitement and competition of the roller derby rink. But going around in circles simply was not travel enough.

So the Oakland, Calif., beauty traded her skates for wings, became an airlines stewardess, and is the reigning Miss Airlines International.

"I'm not the type to sit at one thing," said the stewardess who also models, studies transcendental meditation and Zen, and has some strong thoughts on the women's liberation movement.

"If we're doing the same job as a man, we should have the same pay," she said.

"But I like to be treated like a lady. I like men opening doors for me. I don't want to go dutch treat. I don't think we can think only in terms of get, get, get."

Nor does Miss Lee fret about the "coffee, tea or me" image that some people have projected about the stewardess job. "What problems stewardesses may have brought on themselves," she said.

"On the plane, I just do my job and think about what I'm going to do when I get off."

"Most people are nice and friendly and just want to talk. If there is a troublesome passenger, she has a little talk with him—I figure someone's not going to treat me like a bunch of nothing and expect me to treat him nice."

Neither does Miss Lee consider sexist the stewardess being used by some airlines advertising—than "I'm (girl's name), fly me" slogan of one carrier and the "We really move our tail for you" slogan of her own employer, Continental Airlines, for instance, she said. "And that's what advertising is all about."

"Besides," she said, "if you're serving cocktails and meals to 100 or so passengers on a one-hour flight from Portland to San Jose, you do just what our slogan says."

The stewardess grew up in Oakland, Calif., one of five children of Mr. and Mrs. George Lee. Her father, foreman with an industrial firm, loved the sport of roller derby and encouraged her to enroll at the Alameda, Calif., Roller Derby School, Derby School.

She was 14 when she made her debut with the San Francisco Bombers, skating with them for six years while she finished high school and two years at Merritt College in Oakland. She was named roller derby's rookie of the year in 1965.

"It's not all the burly sport some people think, she said. Mostly, it's endurance."

She kept her weight at 130—"all muscle"—while skating but for the airlines job trimmed her 5-foot-5 inch frame down to 115 pounds, mostly by a diet of grapes all day.

She joined Continental three years ago "because I wanted to do more travel than I could do with the derby." Most of her flights are on the West Coast from her current base in Seattle.

She models through the Florence Humble Agency in Seattle. She also serves as a consultant on pageants and one year was Miss Washington International and another year a runner-up in the Miss World contest.

Last spring she won the international airlines title in Miami, competing against girls from 17 other carriers.

Pinching Pennies

More than half of the three million people now engaged in in-home selling are women. These figures come from The Direct Selling Association (DSA), which represents over 100 firms that sell in the home. This trade group feels in-home selling, or personal selling, as they choose to call it, offers a valuable alternative to the pennypinching of the last few months. And that's the reason why more and more women are entering this field.

In today's economy, many families need extra cash which their current income sources do not provide. Many find that they are the primary support of their households but have family obligations which make holding a fulltime job difficult, if not impossible. Others simply have more leisure time today and are anxious to use it productively.

Personal selling offers an alternative to pennypinching by providing a viable source of extra income. Women have found they can make extra money while enjoying a pleasant social activity, visiting homes of friends and neighbors and bringing with them new and exciting products.

According to DSA, you may devote your full-time to this new vocation or may prefer to give it only a few of your leisure hours. Personal selling offers you the opportunity to schedule working hours to meet your needs. In fact, many women sell in areas surrounding their immediate neighborhood.

It is interesting to note that most women use their extra income from personal selling to raise their family standard of living. According to the Direct Selling Association, appliances, automobiles and new home furnishings are typical of the products women purchase with this new source of revenue. In fact, many personal selling companies offer these items as incentives for sales in addition to cash commissions.

If you are interested in finding which firms offer you this opportunity, write DSA for a free copy of "Who's Who In Direct Selling," which lists DSA's 100-plus member companies at: Direct Selling Association, Dept. M-4, 1730 M Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped business-size envelope for quickest response.

The marriage of Christy Rogene Tyler and Lawrence Donald Marlar was solemnized at 7 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 21 in the parlor of Central Baptist Church.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Ralph F. Tyler, 1823 Chestnut, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald B. Marlar, Snyder.

THE CEREMONY

The Rev. Ted Savage, pastor, officiated at the double-ring ceremony before a background of two seven-branched candelabra entwined with greenery in front of the mirror, flanked by basket arrangements of red carnations.

Mrs. Don Payne, Big Spring, organist, accompanied Miss Lydia Hayworth, Big Spring, as she sang "Twelfth of Never" and "Whither Thou Goest."

THE BRIDE

The bride, presented in marriage by her father with the "her mother and I" avowal, wore a formal gown of silk organza over bridal taffeta designed with a fitted empire bodice, Victorian neckline and long sheer full sleeves caught at the wrists by deep lace cuffs ending in flares over the wrists. Tiny tucks of organza accented the bodice front which was enhanced by rows of Cluny and Venice lace. Miniature buttons traced a pattern down the center front bodice. Satin ribbon overlaid with lace encircled the waistline ending in a bow at the center back. The softly gathered skirt fell to a Cluny lace flounce and cascaded into a full chapel train. She wore a matching Camelot cap of Cluny lace accented by a satin ribbon bow. Her lace edged veil fell to finger tip length, and she carried a cascade of white roses and white carnations.

ATTENDANTS

Miss Julie Tyler, Pampa, served her sister as maid of honor and bridesmaid was Miss Deborah Bray, Pampa. They wore identical floor length red velvet dresses with V-necklines and the long sleeves were trimmed with white feathered fur. They wore matching Juliet caps and carried nosegays of white carnations.

Lou Ann Fulcher, candle lighter, was dressed identically to the other attendants.

David Marlar, Groom, served his brother as best man and Micky Richardson, Pampa, was groomsmen. Scott Marlar, brother of the bridegroom, seated wedding guests.

MOTHERS

The bride's mother wore a light blue floor length dress with a pink cymbidium orchid corsage.

The bridegroom's mother wore a light green floor length dress with a pink cymbidium orchid corsage.

RECEPTION

A wedding reception was held in the parlor immediately following the ceremony. The serving table was covered with a white satin cloth overlaid with white net gathered skirt trimmed with narrow satin ribbon. The centerpiece was red carnations in a crystal bowl.

The three-tiered white cake was decorated with white roses and red leaves and was topped with white doves.

Miss Zindi Epperson assisted at the punch bowl and Mrs. Jerry Sims, Amarillo, served cake. Miss Della Hewitt, Odessa, attended the guest register.

For the wedding trip, the bride wore a red double knit pant suit trimmed with white lace.

The couple will be at home at 1706 8th Ave. Canyon, Tex.

Opening lead: Three of ♠.

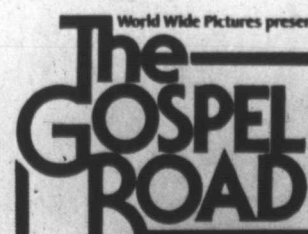

On West's opening lead of the three of clubs, dummy's queen was put up, and East unhesitatingly played the king ("always cover an honor with an honor"). Declarer won the trick with his ace. It now became a routine matter for declarer to romp home with his contract. He led a spade, driving out East's ace. With the jack of clubs serving as an entry to dummy, declarer now brought in four spade tricks, plus three diamonds, one heart, and two clubs. Thus he made an overtrick.

East's unhesitating play of the king of clubs at trick one must be classified as an error of the first magnitude, and as a mechanical play made without thought and without imagination. East should have recognized that declarer was going to develop the spade suit, and that the only entry to dummy to cash that suit had to be in clubs. Of course, it was rather apparent that declarer did not have the spade ace, there being only one ace of spades in the deck.

All East had to do was to play the six of clubs on dummy's queen at trick one — and declarer could never get to dummy to cash the to-be-established spade suit, for East would retain the K-10 of clubs over dummy's remaining J-2. But East, from force of habit in all probability, "covered an honor with an honor."

Even if West had possessed the ace of clubs in theory, the play of the six of clubs on dummy's queen at trick one could not have cost anything. In this presumed set-up, dummy would always have a club winner whether East put up the king or didn't.

Hints from Heloise

Heloise

Dear Heloise:

I am an African Violet lover. I have several nice plants that bloom nearly year round. Pink, white, light and dark blue, blue with white trim and even a red one.

Recently, I felt it was a shame that no one but me enjoyed seeing my lovely blooms. So I hit on an idea: I make gifts for my friends and, at times, for people in the hospital.

I use a small rose bowl or a brandy snifter. I place a round, pale green, plastic doily inside. A little larger one ruffles more and is very pretty. Then I fill the bowl with water to the top of the doily, select three nice leaves from the plants and lay them in the water.

I cut enough blooms from my violets to make a little bouquet (as long stems as possible) and place them in the center. They will float on the water. Around the stem of the brandy snifter I tie a matching ribbon.

The blooms last for weeks. Best of all, clipping the blooms causes my violets to bloom more.

An Average Homemaker

Dear Heloise:

One morning after just arriving at work, one of my buttons popped off my pant suit jacket. I found a needle right away, but could not find any thread with which to sew on the button.

I didn't want to look tacky all day long, so I put my little brain to work. I had to find something and did just that.

I pulled a single strand of hair from my head (my hair is of medium length) and proceeded to use it in place of the missing thread.

Needless to say, my button stayed in place the rest of the day. I felt better knowing that I looked neat again and no one even noticed the button had been sewed on with a stand of hair.

BOOKS

Too Proud to Fight, by Patrick Devlin. (Oxford, $19.50)

When the world's nations chose up sides before World War I, the United States did not automatically favor Great Britain and the Allies, a fact that grows obscure with the passing of years.

This sharply written, engrossing study traces the events that logically led Woodrow Wilson, the highly principled president of the United States, to reach the decision against Germany.

Lord Devlin, a prominent British jurist with a deep knowledge of the United States, focuses on the tactics used by Britain and Germany to win over this country as they worked upon Wilson.

Wilson was a pious, scholarly man unlike many of his predecessors and successors. He personally was in charge at the White House, and in charge in an oddly parochial fashion. He might almost have been running a parish with the help of his wife and a curate and a portable typewriter.

The battle, then, was for the mind of Woodrow Wilson and it "was fought with moral and legal forces." With Wilson neither side won morally, and "on the legal side the British never captured the mind of Wilson but Germany eventually lost altogether."

Devlin has captured a man in the throes of a decision about a course of action that would alter the state of mankind. Into the skeleton of lawful precedents, he tried to breathe "the spirit of justice."

The Dream of Troy, by Arnold C. Brackman. (Mason and Lipscomb, $10) This is a biography of Heinrich Schliemann, the German-American millionaire who quit the business life to devote his fortune to archaeology. Brackman's book concentrates on Schliemann's fulfillment of a boyhood ambition to prove the Trojan war was no myth. It is a rags-to-riches story without hero worship. Brackman says Schliemann made his millions as a 19th century war profiteer; he was a vain, pompous and sometimes destructive scientist, but when he unearthed Troy "modern archaeology was born."

He admires the steeplejack's courage, the persistence of young actors trying out for a Broadway role, an old restaurant about to die. He even finds redeeming qualities in the filth of Brooklyn's Gowanus Canal and on the shabby streets off Broadway. An evocative compendium of the beauties, eccentricities and ugliness of America's most famous cities.

Badmen of the West, by Robert Elman. (Ridge Press, $14.95) Subtitled the "first complete book of the American outlaw," this splendid collection of pictures and stories of the Old West professes to give the true picture of such stalwarts as Billy the Kid and Wyatt Earp. Certainly Elman writes with authenticity and apparent knowledge. The book crackles with violence and excitement enough to satisfy anyone's taste for action and bloodshed.

Ford Advised To Consider Beef Import Limitations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford is being advised to adopt a compromise 1975 meat import control plan that would limit beef imports to slightly above this year's depressed level without formally invoking federal import quotas, an administration source indicated today.

The source said the plan, which was among several options drawn up for Ford's consideration, would be aimed at limiting 1975 beef imports to 1.150 billion pounds. That is 35 million pounds more than this year's predicted imports but substantially less than officials believe will come in unless Ford restores the import restraints suspended since mid-1972.

The strategy many administration officials favor would call for an official announcement, possibly as early as next Monday, that the Agriculture Department estimates 1975 imports will not exceed the 1.150 billion pound level.

That would be 30 million pounds below the 1.180 billion pound "trigger point" level at which Ford would be required to invoke formal beef import quotas. If quotas were invoked, imports of fresh, frozen and chilled beef and mutton would have to be limited next year to about 1.074 billion pounds.

Sources said the 1.150 billion pound estimate could be announced together with a publicized announcement that the United States expects to reach voluntary shipping restraint agreements with major producing nations like Australia and New Zealand to hold actual imports to the predicted figure.

If the agreements cannot be reached within 90 days, it was pointed out, the United States could revise its estimate of 1975 imports to above the "trigger" level in March and impose formal quotas at the 1.074 billion pound level.

The key to the procedure currently favored by many administration advisers is that it would bypass formal use of beef import quotas at a time when the United States is preparing to press other countries for trade liberalization in international negotiations.

The administration is not willing to allow completely unrestrained imports, however, because U.S. cattle prices are depressed because of heavy supplies and many cattle industry groups have been demanding formal quotas or even temporary outright embargoes on imports.

Imports declined this year because U.S. prices were too low to be attractive to shippers. But with herds backing up on Australian ranges and other international markets closed by restrictions of various kinds, experts feel Australian producers could be forced to unload a heavy volume of beef on the already-depressed U.S. market in 1975.

Expert Claims U.S. Cannot Feed The World

Canyon, Texas — The world food shortage should be the concern of every American farmer, but not his sole responsibility, according to Dr. Ron Thomason, plant science professor at West Texas State University.

"Even if the American farmer didn't have to worry about markets, fertilizer supply and weather, and if all the land in the U.S. was in full production, he still could not feed the world," Thomason said.

"The government officials of all the developed countries should be sending more people from their countries to the undeveloped countries," Thomason said.

Reduction in the surplus of food will help in the long run instead of hurting the world. This will make the underdeveloped countries more dependent on themselves instead of looking for hand-outs, the professor stated.

"The developed countries need to supply the work with three things and the actual food stuff is not one of them," the professor said. "We need to supply the knowledge of technology, marketing and transportation."

If Americans were to start eating less to save more food for the world, this would be a drastic mistake, Thomason noted. The underdeveloped countries are now buying all of the food they can purchase.

Ag Picture Shows Ups, Downs For The Year

COLLEGE STATION — What goes up must come down, or so the story goes. And that's how the agricultural situation shapes up. Lead by declines in agricultural production the United States, world production of food and fiber will be down during the current fiscal year after record levels a year ago.

A decline in grain production will be the main reason for this world situation although livestock and cotton production are expected to be up slightly, points out Charles Baker, economist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

In the United States grain and cotton production will be down sharply while livestock production will generally hold steady. Due to the reduced production levels, crop prices for 1974 should average about 31 per cent higher than in 1973. But livestock prices will average 6 per cent lower. Prices received for all farm products in the U.S. are expected to average about 8 per cent higher than last year, notes Baker.

However, he hastens to point out that net farm income in the U.S. is expected to decrease just over $5 billion from the record $32.3 billion of last year, due mainly to an expected $12 billion increase in production expenses.

"Although cash receipts from agricultural products will be up about $7.5 billion in the U.S., it's another story in Texas," says Baker.

Cash receipts are expected to be down more than $1.5 billion from the record $6.5 billion last year. Almost all of that drops due to price declines in the livestock industry.

Taking a look at the export situation, the economist points out that the total volume of agricultural exports by value is down 25 per cent during the current fiscal year. This is due mainly to anticipated declines in exports of wheat, feed grains and cotton. The total value of U.S. agricultural exports is expected to be about $20 billion compared to the record level of $21.3 billion last year.

Where does all this leave the farmer and the consumer?

The average increase in prices to the farmer for food products will be only 5.5 per cent while the increase in the farm - retail spread will be 21 per cent higher than last year. Consequently, the consumer will face about a 15 per cent average increase in the over all food bill although this is one per cent less than last year.

Feedlot Source For Fertilizer

COLLEGE STATION — Not only is it cheaper to fertilize your land with feedlot manure, it is also a good way to save energy, believe Dr. John Sweeten, agricultural engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Use of manure as a fertilizer can save energy used in the manufacture and distribution of Commercial fertilizer," says the Texas A&M University System specialist.

It takes 5.6 million BTU's (British Thermal Units) of energy per acre to manufacture, distribute and apply commercial fertilizer at the rate of 180 - 60 - 0, while the energy needed to collect, haul and apply feedlot manure at 10 tons per acre is only 1.2 million BTU's, says Sweeten. "This is an energy savings of 4.4 million BTU's per acre of 44 million BTU's per ton of manure."

Another way of conserving energy from feedlot manure is to refeed it in beef cattle rations, says Sweeten. "The energy saved by refeeding one ton of feedlot manure would equal the amount of energy needed to produce one ton of alfalfa in the Texas High Plains, 4.2 million BTU's."

Energy can also be saved in producing anhydrous ammonia by using a process to convert manure, air and water into hydrogen and nitrogen. "This process would require little or no additional fuel to produce ammonia," says Sweeten, "and would save more energy than any other process using feedlot manure. Some 39 million BTU's of energy are now required to produce a ton of anhydrous ammonia."

Panhandle Water

By FELIX W. RYALS

Last week this column began outlining the goals and objectives and basic considerations recommended for the Canadian River Basin by Robert Lord, the Regional Engineer of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission. The Panhandle Regional Planning Commission was designated by Governor Dolph Briscoe as the planning agency for the Canadian River.

The goals and objectives being suggested are not final, but are going to be reviewed by the necessary committees of the Regional Planning Commission and by the elected Board of Directors of the Commission before final adoption. Today we continue the objectives and goals suggested by Robert Lord.

The goals for the immediate future in 1975 are threefold. The individuals, communities, municipalities and industries within the Basin will be encouraged to become fully cognizant to the State's annual Water Quality Management Programs and to fully support the programs and participate therein. The holders of waste control orders, registrations, and permits issued by the Texas Water Quality Board will be encouraged to continue operating and maintaining and or improving their waste disposal facilities to comply with established effluent and stream standards for present and anticipated future conditions of development. Investigations are already underway to define the point and or non-point source of geological, chemical pollution of the Canadian above Lake Meredith. The investigation agencies will be urged to intensify such work to the limit of available funds and manpower.

The goals for 1977 will embrace and enlarge upon the goals set for 1975. All publicly owned and know, privately owned sewage treatment facilities discharging directly, or indirectly, into surface waters of the Canadian River Basin, will be expected to be utilizing such primary and secondary processes as may be required to meet established effluent and stream standards. Similarly, industries discharging effluents into surface waters will also be expected to utilizing the best practical waste control technology necessary to meet the established standards.

Definition of the source of geological, chemical pollution of the Canadian River above Lake Meredith should be accomplished by 1977 and feasibility grade investigations of plans of abatement should be initiated. Two additional pollution control investigations should be initiated by 1977. Studies should be underway to develop plans for the eradication and control of phreatic vegetation in the flood plains of the Canadian River and its tributaries and of the North Canadian River tributaries that will minimize the degradation of the quality of surface and subsurface flows and maximize habitat for wildlife preservation and enhancement. Studies should be initiated to determine the optimum methods of irrigation reuse of effluent from playas to preclude any adverse effects upon soils, crops, and wildlife.

The period between 1977 and 1983 will be a time of monitoring, planning, and implementation of additional abatement programs. All publicly owned and known, privately owned sewage treatment facilities discharging directly, or indirectly, into surface waters of the Canadian River Basin will be expected to upgrade their facilities and operations by utilizing the best practical waste control technology found to be necessary by self-monitoring programs to comply with established effluents and stream standards. Similarly, industries will be expected to upgrade their waste disposal facilities as necessary through the utilization of the best available waste treatment technology. The plans for abatement of the geological, chemical pollution of the Canadian River are expected to have been finalized and substantially advanced toward the completion of implementation and the beginning of operation. The plans for the eradication and control of phreatic vegetation are expected to have progressed to the same state of development. The studies of the disposal of effluents from playa storage are expected to have been completed and guidelines furnished to the public for voluntary implementation. The goal for 1985 is to have accomplished all of the intermediate goals so that the waters originating in the Canadian River Basin in Texas, and used by Texas and Oklahoma, are fully protected against any preventable degradation of quality.

Sugar Price Eyed By Valley Growers

HILLSBORO, N.D. (UPI) — The high price of sugar has brought checks totaling nearly $8 million to beet growers in the Red River Valley of North Dakota and Minnesota.

In their first payment on the 1974 crop, the nation's first cooperative beet and sugar refiner mailed checks to member-growers totaling $7,992,957. This represents a price of $15 a ton of sugar beets.

John E. Brunsdale, president of Red River Valley Cooperative, Inc., headquartered here, said second and third installments will be paid in January and February.

In October, American Crystal Sugar Co. of Moorhead, Minn., mailed final payments to its member-growers for the 1973 crop which resulted in a total of $25.79 per ton. Total payment per ton for the 1972 American Crystal crop was $16.24.

Red River Valley Cooperative, Inc., was formed by the 293 members who bought stock in the cooperative to have the factory built and the right to grow sugar beets for the factory. Fifty thousand acres were planted by the area member-growers.

College Sports Have Reached Crossroads

By BOB ORTMAN
Copley News Service

The pulse is weak, the brow fevered. College athletics are sick.

It's a lingering illness — actually, it has been hanging around several years. The diagnosis was confirmed some time ago by a committee, headed by George H. Sanford, which conducted a six-month study for the National Council on Education. However, only recently did coaches and educators take note of the fact in a special issue of Phi Delta Kappan, national publication of Phi Delta Kappa, professional fraternity for education.

"College sports are at a crossroads," the Sanford committee warned, citing widespread recruiting violations, overcommercialization of sports, excessive pressure to win on coaches and players, classroom favoritism to athletes and discrimination against blacks and women.

Symptoms of the ailment, as detailed in its 156-page report, include the altering of high school academic transcripts, threats against a high school principal who refused to alter transcripts, changing admission test scores, having substitutes take admission tests, offering jobs to parents or other relatives of a prospect, getting grades for athletes in courses they never attended, using federal work-study funds to pay athletes for questionable or nonexistent jobs and providing a quarterback with a new car every year.

The committee's conclusion, substantiated by the Kappan contributors, is that most of the problems stem from the emphasis on victory, typified by the Vince Lombardi philosophy of "winning isn't everything; it's the only thing."

"There is moral decay in the 'win at all costs' or 'the end justifies the means' philosophy," lamented Indiana's Jack Daugherty.

"The preoccupation with 'winning only' and being No. 1 is a sick preoccupation for scholastic sports," echoed Darrell Crase of Memphis State. "It's very painful to think of all the youngsters who love sports but who are being eliminated at every stage because they aren't going to be 'winners' — because they are too short or too slow or too weak."

"Parents have been duped into thinking that (athletics) are 'good' and 'healthy' and 'character building.' But when they look at the end results, the professionals, can they honestly believe that? We are building characters, not character."

"The present structure should be modified so athletics will again be self-initiated, fun-oriented and player-controlled. Athletics should be reclaimed from public control and brought under strict academic control."

Collaborationists Robert T. Blackburn of Michigan and Michael S. Nyikos of Fort Lewis College wrote: "The big-time programs are rank professionalism."

Cowboys Fiesta Champions

TEMPE, Ariz. (UPI) — Oklahoma State converted an intercepted pass into one touchdown and added another score on a halfback pass from Leonard Thompson to Gerald Bain in the final moments Saturday for a 16-6 victory over Brigham Young in the fourth annual fiesta bowl Saturday.

Thompson's throw to Bain of 40 yards with 1:14 remaining wrapped up the game for the Cowboys, who had threatened time and again to break the game open.

The OSU victory ended Western Athletic Conference domination of the bowl, won by Arizona State in its initial three years.

BYU's hopes were dashed when senior quarterback

Gary Sheide, the nation's No. 2 passer, suffered a shoulder separation with 2:50 left in the first quarter. Sheide was dumped by Phil Dokes and injured his right throwing arm.

The game turned into a defensive struggle between two teams which finished among the nation's leaders in defensive statistics—Oklahoma State 10th in total defense and BYU fourth in rushing defense.

The Cougars' only scores came on field goals of 30 and 43 yards by Mark Uselman in the first quarter.

Kenny Walker took a pitchout from Charlie Weatherbie 12 yards around left end into the end zone for the game's first touchdown, set up by Tony Buck's interception midway in the second quarter.

Buck picked off a pass by Mark Giles. Sheide's replacement, and returned it to the BYU 27. A penalty against the Cougars for a late hit gave OSU a first down on the 12.

Abby Daigle added a 42-yard field goal for the Cowboys in the third quarter when they were unable to capitalize on two more breaks and twice were held on fourth downs inside the BYU 10.

The final touchdown by Bain climaxed the only sustained drive of the game, 72 yards, after Oklahoma State had ended a BYU threat by holding at the Cowboys' 34.

Oklahoma State, its ground attack stymied by BYU's huge defensive line, tried early in the game to go to the air, but the Cowboys, who had thrown an average of only 10 times a game all season, found their receiver with butter fingers. Three on-target passes slipped through the hands of receivers who had a clear field to paydirt.

Sheide completed three passes during a Cougar drive from their own 35 to the OSU 13, setting up the 30-yarder with 9:34 left in the quarter. Nine minutes later, with Sheide sidelined, the Cougars bogged down at the 26 and Uselman split the uprights from 43 yards out little Central Michigan, who missed the try for the extra point that would have tied the score early in the fourth quarter, booted a 32-yard field goal with 4:34 left to play Saturday to give the underdog East a 16-14 victory in the 50th anniversary Shrine East-West Classic.

Last-Quarter Field Goal Pushes East Past West

The West, favored by a touchdown, opened up a 14-0 halftime lead but the East bounced back on West mistakes for all its points in the second half and its second consecutive victory.

Linebacker Terry McClowry of Michigan State picked up a blocked punt and ran 16 yards for the East's initial touchdown early in the third quarter and Brad Davis of UC Davis went 10 yards for the East's second touchdown in the second minute of the final period.

All-America defensive back David Brown of Michigan intercepted a deflected pass by California All-America quarterback Steve Bartkowski to set up the East's second touchdown, but Franckowiak missed the point after that would have tied the score.

Then, in the final quarter, defensive end Mark Petersen of Illinois intercepted another pass by Bartkowski and Franckowiak followed six plays later with his winning field goal.

The West scored its first touchdown on a 34-yard pass from Bartkowski to Morris Owens of Arizona State and the second score came on a 10-yard pass from Jim McMillan of Boise State to Oscar Roan of Southern Methodist.

FOR SUN CROWN

Mississippi State Noses NCS, 26-24

By PETE HERRERA

EL PASO, Tex. (UPI) — Super sophomore Walter Packer ran for two touchdowns and rushed for a record 183 yards to spark Mississippi State to a 26-24 victory Saturday over North Carolina in the 40th annual Sun Bowl.

Packer, the leading rusher in the Southeast Conference this year with 994 yards, led the fleet of bulldog runners who riddled North Carolina's defense for 455 yards on the ground.

Packer, in erasing the old Sun Bowl rushing mark of 172 yards Texas Tech's George Smith in 1972 against the Tar Heels, ran for touchdowns of 1 and 16 yards. Bulldog Freshman fullback Terry Vitranos, whose best performance was 65 yards against William & Mary, bulled his way for 164 yards on 20 carries and a touchdown run of 2 yards with only 3:41 left in the game to win the bowl's most valuable player award.

Other Mississippi State scores came on field goals of 24 and 32 yards by senior Nick Nichols.

North Carolina, which suffered from a leaky defense through most of its 7-4 season, took a 24-0 lakerly in the fourth quarter on a 26-yard field goal by Ellis Alexander after the two teams had traded the lead throughout the third period.

The Tar Heels, who were making their fourth bowl appearance in five years, got touchdown runs of 1 and 6 yards from tailback James Betterson and a 29-yard Chris Kuepc-to-Jimmy Jerome pass.

Mississippi State, making its first bowl trip in 11 years, started its winning drive with 10:32 left in the game after Alexander had given the Tar Heels a four-point cushion.

With quarterback Rocky Felker directing the drive, the Bulldogs moved 80 yards in 16 plays with a 15-yard run by Felker on a fourth-and-two situation to the North Carolina 10 being the key play in the march.

Felker, the Southeastern Conference's most valuable player this season, kept it again from the 10 and rambled to the two on the next play. Vitranos plunged in from there to give the Bulldogs their first bowl victory since they beat North Carolina State, 16-12, in the 1963 Liberty Bowl.

Huskers Practice Through Holidays

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Florida Coach Doug Dickey said Saturday his Gators don't expect too many surprises from Nebraska in their Sugar Bowl game New Year's Eve.

"Nebraska does a lot of things well, and we feel like they will rely on the things that worked for them throughout the season against us. Although with that extra practice time they might throw in a new wrinkle or two."

Dickey referred to the fact that Nebraska skipped the Christmas holiday to practice, while the Gators had four days off.

Both No. 7 Nebraska and No. 14 Florida worked out in Tulane Stadium Saturday, tuning up for their meeting New Year's Eve in the 41st annual Sugar Bowl.

"We have had good and enthusiastic practice sessions back home and we're coming into this game relatively free of injuries," said Dickey, "only a couple of reserves have some muscle pull problems."

Both Nebraska, the Big Eight conference champion, and Florida, of the southeast conference, finished regular season play with 8-3 records.

"We just hope we can make our wishbone go. We know we won't catch Nebraska napping because they have done such a fine job of defending the wishbone. In fact, very few teams are unfamiliar with the offense now," Dickey said.

"We throw more off of ours. Perhaps we'll have to move the ball that way."

Nebraska quarterback Dave Humm said he thought Florida, "is probably one of the better bowl teams we've played. They're probably one of the best I can think of."

"Our philosophy has always been that if we win and we do well, it's going to be good for everybody, so it's a whole team attitude — a team thing. We set team goals and then go along with it."

View From The Plains

By J.D. PEER
LUBBOCK — The 1974-75 Texas fur-bearing season is in full swing and some prime pelts are being collected.

The legal dates for taking pelts for sale lists mink season, Nov. 15 through Jan. 15, muskrat, Nov. 15 through March 15, and all other fur-bearing animals, Dec. 1 through Jan. 31, 1975.

For new trappers not familiar with fur-bearing regulations, badger, beaver, fox, mink, muskrat, opossum, otter, raccoon, ring-tailed cat, skunk and wild civet are on the designated list.

A person taking these listed animal pelts for sale must have a trappers license. The resident license fee is $5.00 and the non-resident $20.00.

Many landowners have trouble every winter from marauding skunks and other chicken thieves. Those fur bearers that are destroying crops or livestock can be killed without a trappers license if they are left in the field or destroyed.

You will notice that coyotes and bobcats are not on this list and these animals may be taken year around.

There are no firearms or trap restrictions for taking fur-bearing animals. However, a pelt full of holes will naturally not bring a premium price. In fact, a pelt collected by a shotgun may be refused by the fur dealer.

Many fur dealers are buying coyote pelts and the average price for an unskinned carcass is $10.00 and cased pelts are worth $12.00. Raccoon pelt prices are running $4.50 and $6.00 respectively.

The fur-bearing license is required for the sale of pelts only and a Texas hunting license must be obtained when hunting out of your resident county if you are 17 years of age or older and not over 65 years of age.

Hunting regulations apply to both hunters and trappers alike.

For more information contact your county game warden or call Amarillo (806) 355-9246, Lubbock (806) 744-0213 or Abilene (915) 673-3333.

Vandy, Tech Deadlock

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Vanderbilt Commodores and Texas Tech Red Raiders both played sterling goalline defense Saturday and wound up with each scoring only a pair of field goals for a 6-6 tie in the 7th annual Peach Bowl.

The final and tying field goal was a 35-yard kick by Texas Tech's Brian Hall with 2:21 left in the contest.

The Commodores had taken the lead less than three minutes earlier on a 26-yard field goal by Mark Adams after Vanderbilt failed to advance following a fumble recovery at the Texans' seven yard line.

Vanderbilt, 7-3-1 in regular season play, drew first blood four minutes into the second period on a 30-yard field goal by Adams, and Texas Tech tied the score at 3-3 with 3:11 left in the third period on a 26-yard field goal by Hall.

Texas Tech, 6-4-1 in the regular season, actually dominated play with runningbacks Cliff Hoskins and Larry Isaac rushing for 118 and 112 yards, respectively.

But the Vanderbilt defense held on three consecutive plays from the Commodore one yard line at the end of the first half, blocked a 33-yard Hall field goal attempt midway through the final period and recovered two Red Raider fumbles in the closing minutes of play.

Neither team threatened in the first period, but Vanderbilt drove 71 yards to reach the Texas Tech 12 yard line early in the second period.

The Commodores appeared to have a first down there, but a remeasurement showed they were inches short and when the third down play lost two yards, Adams kicked his first field goal.

A 41-yard pass interception return by Vanderbilt's Jay Chesley and a 14-yard facemask penalty gave the Commodores a first down at the Texas Tech 14 with five minutes left in the half, but defensive back Randy Olson made an end zone interception to end that threat.

Texas Tech then drove 79 yards to the Vanderbilt one with 47 seconds remaining in the half, but three straight plays gained no yardage and time ran out before the Red Raiders could get off their fourth play.

Tech started from its seven yard line midway in the third period and drove all the way to the Vanderbilt 10 before calling on Hall for his first field goal.

The Raiders got down to the Vanderbilt seven early in the final period but then were pushed back to the 17 and Dennis Harrison, a 265-pound freshman, broke through to block Hall's field goal attempt.

After Adams' second field goal put Vanderbilt ahead 6-3 with 5:06 left in the game, Lawrence Williams got off a Peach Bowl record 54-yard kickoff return and the Raiders then drove inside the Vanderbilt 20 before calling on Hall for the game-tying field goal.

Vanderbilt had a last-second chance to break the tie when Harrison recovered a Hoskins fumble at the Tech 37, but there was time for only one more play and that was a pass that gained only a yard as the game ended.

BAYLOR TOP SUCCESS STORY

1974 Good Year For Texas Sports

United Press International

The afternoon of Nov. 9 was growing late in Waco, Tex., and that old feeling of futility seldom runs higher than it was running right then in Baylor Stadium.

The Texas Longhorns owned a 24-7 lead over Baylor's Bears en route to what appeared to be another easy triumph — one which would likely set up a showdown between Texas and Texas A&M for the Southwest Conference title.

Suddenly, however, there was Johnny Greene dashing in to block a Longhorn punt deep in Texas territory touching off a rush of excellence that not only brought Baylor a startling upset victory but started the Bears on the way to their first conference title in 50 years and their first trip to the Cotton Bowl ever.

The developments of Nov. 9 not only made Baylor the sweetheart of sports fans across Texas, but also symbolized the entire sports year in the state.

Everywhere there were have nots becoming haves. And it was also easy to find folks falling from their accustomed perches.

Those going up not only included Baylor, but the Texas Rangers, Houston Oilers, San Antonio Spurs, the Texas A&I football club and a young soccer player whose name became a household word for reasons other than the fact that his father was Kyle Rote.

Other than the Longhorns, the Dallas Cowboys stepped on the wrong elevator and found George Foreman was on there, too.

Texas had to make only a 100-mile trip to Waco to fall from power, but Foreman, the Houston-raised heavyweight champion, had to go all the way to Africa to lose his title to Muhammad Ali.

The Longhorns had won the Southwest Conference title six straight years before being dethroned by Baylor, but that was two years short of the NFL playoff string that Dallas owned until a four-game losing streak snuffed out the Cowboy Super Bowl hopes for this season.

While the Cowboys slipped a little the Houston Oilers won back a lot of their fans by winning six more games in 1974 than they did in 1973 and breaking even for the first time in five years under coach Sid Gillman.

On the baseball front, however, the North Texas South Texas roles were reversed.

The Houston Astros suffered through another bland season while the Texas Rangers were the surprise team of major league baseball. Manager Billy Martin guided the Rangers to a second place finish behind three-time world champion Oakland and a host of individual honors went to pitcher Ferguson Jenkins, rightfielder Jeff Burroughs and first baseman Mike Hargrove.

Another success story took root in San Antonio, where the American Basketball League franchise gained popularity with the fans and respect among other teams. Coach Tom Nissalke took the Spurs into the playoffs last season and had his team in second place in the ABA West this season before being fired.

At the end of the year Nissalke was threatening legal action to get his job back.

As remarkable as Baylor's turnaround was this season, it was no less spectacular than that turned in by Texas A&I, which went from a 2-8 1973 season to a 13-0 record in 1974 and the NAIA championship.

And fitting nicely into the comeback category was the Texas basketball team, which, after losing 13 of 14 nonconference games last season, stormed back to become the Southwest Conference champion. Unfortunately for the Longhorns, however, their 1974-75 season started about like the 1973-74 one.

Texas lost its first six games before finally coming up with a victory.

One of the most publicized individual efforts from a Texan in 1974 was that of Kyle Rote, Jr., a member of the Dallas Tornado soccer team. Rote was given a chance to compete against stars from all majors sports in a television inspired intermarital contest.

Rote found himself to be the best tennis player, the best swimmer and the best bowler of the bunch and did other things well enough to win the "Superstars" contest.

In the golf world the PGA held its first "designated tournament" at Fort Worth's Colonial Country Club and it was won by little known Rod Curl.

Texas Ben Crenshaw spent his first full year on the golf tour and although he easily stayed in the top 60 money list that exempts him from qualifying in 1975, Crenshaw's performance was a bit disappointing. Among those who finished ahead of Crenshaw on the money winning list was his former Texas Longhorn teammate, Tom Kite.

Next Move Is Hunter's

AHOSKIE, N.C. (UPI) — The first bids are all in, but Jim "Catfish" Hunter says he still has some thinking to do before deciding which team to bless with his pitching services—and which in turn will bless him with one of baseball's fattest contracts ever.

Hunter, the American League's Cy Young Award winner, said Friday he will probably wait at least until Jan. 8, and perhaps visit some cities to check on living conditions, before making up his mind which million-dollar offer to accept.

But he wasn't ready to say which cities or when he would visit.

If persistence pays off, then the Texas Rangers, the Montreal Expos and the New York Yankees may be the frontrunners. All three teams have twice sent representatives to call on Hunter at the offices of his Ahoskie law firm.

The Rangers had the last formal appointment Friday, sending an eight-member delegation headed by General Manager Daniel O'Brien on the return visit.

The Pittsburgh Pirates sent a delegation Friday also, becoming the 14th team to personally negotiate with the former Oakland A's hurler. Other teams have made "some very serious offers" over the telephone, according to Ernest L. Evans, a member of Hunter's law firm.

The Cincinnati Reds and the Houston Astros Friday became the fifth and sixth teams to drop out of the bidding for the 28-year-old righthander and Hunter revealed that he ate dinner Thursday night with Alvin Dark, manager of the A's.

Hunter said he and Dark had a "friendly conversation," but declined to discuss specifics, saying

Dark was passing through on his way to a speaking engagement at Greenville, N.C. Hunter said he did not intend to sign with Oakland so long as Charles O. Finley is the owner.

O'Brien and other Ranger representatives passed out 10-gallon hats, including one that Hunter donned for a moment, and told reporters that with Hunter's services the Rangers would "definitely" win the pennant, considering they already have another topnotch pitcher in Ferguson Jenkins.

The Pirates were represented Friday by General Manager Joe L. Brown and President Dan Galbreath, who said Hunter was baseball's "finest pitcher."

Hunter was freed from his contract with Oakland Dec. 14 in a historic ruling after Finley failed to pay $50,000 due Hunter under terms of the contract.

LA To Freeze, May Be Factor

United Press International

Don't underestimate the weather as an important factor in today's National Football League semifinals playoffs.

Despite the mystique that pro football players are immune to such things as the bitter cold of winter, the fact is most would rather play in warmer climates any day.

But a team used to playing in colder weather very often has an advantage over a team that is used to warm temperatures.

Los Angeles, for example, has won only one game in its last 10 trips to Minnesota, and that is no small reason why the Vikings have been made a 4½-point pick over the Rams in today's National Conference championship game.

The Rams, of course, are taking precautions against the possibility of snow and the probability of sub-zero weather. In preparation for whatever develops they are bringing with them to Bloomington foul weather gear.

Escaping from the wintry East Coast may have a pleasing effect on the Pittsburgh Steelers, who will find Oakland a lot more palatable, weatherwise at least, to the skin. The Steelers, who will be meeting the Raiders for the AFC championship, are a 6-point underdog, having been beaten 17-0 by Oakland earlier this year at Pittsburgh.

However, Coach Chuck Noll believes his club is vastly improved since that game and given good weather conditions in which to operate. Steelers' quarterback Terry Bradshaw can throw with the best of them.

The playing field itself is considered a plus for the Dolphins since it is made of artificial turf whereas Pittsburgh is used to regular grass. Then, too, there is the home field advantage which many oddsmakers feel is worth at least three points to the host club.

Oakland Coach John Madden, though doesn't see it exactly that way.

"Neither an off field nor who the fans are rooting for makes that much difference," he said. "There is too much at stake for anyone to be looking for an excuse. All the players are fired up, which is the way it should be, and I think we are going to see one helluva game."

Texas Has 5 All-Americans

NEW YORK (UPI) — The state of California placed seven players on the 12th annual All-American High School football team announced Saturday by Parade Magazine with Texas and Illinois each placing five.

Tony Nathan, who scored 24 touchdowns and a pair of two-point conversions for Woodlawn High School in Birmingham, Ala., led the voting among the backs while Willie Young of Lincoln High School in Jersey City, N.J., was an overwhelming selection as the top lineman in the nation.

Only three juniors were selected on the 50 player squad, which was chosen by high school and college coaches and sportswriters and radio and television announcers. The juniors are quarterback Tony Capozzoli of St. Dominic's in Oyster Bay, N.Y., and running backs Vegas Ferguson of Richmond High School in Richmond, Ind., and Matt Suhey of State College in State College, Pa.

Freckles Brown Glorified In Painting

Bob French, brother of Mrs. R.W. Fritzemeyer of Skellytown, has eternally glorified former rodeo great Freckles Brown, who became the first bull rider to conquer the fabled Tornado.

French, owner of the Cattleman's Cafe in Freedom, Okla., and a long-time friend of Brown, saw a dream come true when an original oil painting of Brown's historic ride was recently completed.

The painting by Delbert L. Jackson of Tulsa, Okla., was created after much promotion by French. Persons interested in obtaining a reproduction of the painting which is expected to be one of the most sought-after pictures in rodeo history, can do so by sending $6.95 to French.

The color reproductions are 16x20 in size. It was the first time in 221 attempts anyone had successfully ridden Tornado, a 2,000-pound Braford (Brahma and Hereford) owned by Jim Shoulders.

Stram Leaving Chiefs

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Hank Stram, the man who was once credited with developing "the offense of the '70s," now is a coach without a job. But the 51-year-old Stram does have the option of drawing a salary of an estimated $100,000 for the next seven years if he chooses.

The Kansas City coach was fired Friday by Chiefs' owner Lamar Hunt.

Teaff In 2nd Bowl Tilt

DALLAS (UPI) — Baylor coach Grant Teaff Saturday scoffed at the idea his ball club would be at a disadvantage at next week's Cotton Bowl game because none of his players have ever participated in a post season contest.

"Whoever we played, won," he said. "I got knocked out on the last play of the game and spent the night in the hospital while the rest of the team went to a party. I trust this year's experience will not compare with that."

Paterno was almost as surprised as Teaff was about his team's success this year.

Executive Vice President and General Manager Jack Steadman once again was given control of the team. Hunt outlined Steadman's new duties as (1) seek out and employ the best qualified coach available; (2) review and update the Chiefs' college scouting program; (3) direct the financial affairs of the club, including the negotiating of player contracts; and (4) revitalize the promotional program to insure strong community involvement with the team.

"By the end of the week we will have made a bowl trip too," said Teaff, whose Bears will meet Penn State New Year's Day.

The Baylor excursion to the Cotton Bowl is the first trip ever for the Bears to the Dallas affair and it is the first experience Teaff has had with a bowl game since 1954.

"I'm as surprised as anyone that I'm sitting here," he said during a combined news conference with Nittany Lion coach Joe Paterno. "We had not had a winning season in 11 years at Baylor. Before this year the concept was simply to have a winning season. The problem was in the past that every time Baylor got two first downs everybody started yelling about the Cotton Bowl."

Teaff reiterated the adjustment it takes to be a bowl participant.

"We've been so busy we haven't had much time to contemplate what all this means," he said. "But there is a magical aspect to it."

Steadman has been general manager in name only the past three years since Stram signed a 10-year contract after the 1971 season. At that time, Stram undertook the signing of the players and was a one-man committee in the Chiefs' drafting procedures.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

SUNDAY, DEC. 29
Your birthday today: This year, you learn to capitalize on your natural abilities and, to some extent, your limitations. Meditation brings inspiration and the serenity to get you through intensely competitive experience. Relationships bloom because you find it necessary to discover what other people are really like. Today's natives are logical and persistent in their search for order.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Leave business aside altogether and make this a family-at-home sort of Sunday despite an oversensitive mood. Share favorite pastimes, good music or a show.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Social activity is somewhat formal, but it's just as well that way. Don't expect anything from relatives or associates. Keep travel to a minimum.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: There's no reason to talk about money questions you must solve soon. Avoid quarrelsome people. Think over recent developments in later hours.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Do as much of what's expected of you as conditions permit. It's unlikely that you can persuade many people to go along with your plans. Romance only dimly glows—patience!

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: It's time you listened to good music or looked at something outside of your usual surroundings. Skip work if possible and concentrate on self-improvement activities or health.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Be realistic; accept people as they are rather than what you think they ought to be. Express your views candidly. Don't promise anything.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: You spend time and effort on preparations and even more on decisions or bickering over the welfare of older people. Put business out of your mind.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Stick close to home and watch closely how others get along. Ease any conflicts among those you love. Take time out for reflection and new plans.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Self-discipline is a key factor in your prosperity while temptations to squander arise on all sides. Give romance a breathing spell to redevelop.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Let well enough alone as you pace your way through local customs. Friends take off on tangents in all directions; don't follow any of them very far.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Accept your natural limitations and conserve energy, time and space. A complete rest costs less than entertainment and brings benefits and a chance to pray.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Each to his own today. Choose your favorite companions and stay with them to learn from their actions. Young people get ahead of themselves.

MONDAY, DEC. 30
Your birthday today: Use the first half of this year for bringing enterprises to perfection, settling old obligations, discarding bad habits and clearing the way for major developments or changes of vocation. A line of continuity with the past may break suddenly. Be prepared to go ahead on your own. Today's natives make every effort to protect those they love.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Today is better than tomorrow for year-end financial moves. Be sure of figures and your records. There's no such thing as normal schedules this week. Relax and keep a sense of humor.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Make only absolutely necessary rearrangements of cash and reserves. Surprise enhances romantic interests. Express your deeper feelings symbolically.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Somebody has to carry out routine and keep the situation together, and that person might be you. If so, do a good job and don't complain. You'll get through it if you go slowly and thoroughly.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Experiments are subject to unanticipated confusion. You react far too emotionally. Routine matters need continuity, which only you can provide.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Upsets and unusual happenings are natural today. Hasty changes turn out to be pointless. Quick decisions are valid only on long-studied problems.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Pace yourself to avoid hurry and waste. You make a definite break with methods of the past and begin to look ahead. Be ready for the transition.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Planned changes bring sufficiently intense emotional response. Don't be rushed into impromptu or unfamiliar adventures. Stay with your budgets; use supplies already on hand.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: No matter what faults you find with the present state of affairs, it's still worth saving. If you must look for a better deal, make a clean break of it.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Impulsive is the word for you now. Legal or technical advisors are beyond reach or unsympathetic. Do your own thinking; go ahead with planned moves that avoid speculation.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Minding your own business is the most productive approach this week. Conditions and moves of your associates make any fixed schedules difficult or improbable.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: A flurry of last minute incidents shouldn't distract you from long-set plans. If you have none, just have fun and celebrate.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Take care of your responsibilities in whatever sequence is most convenient. There's no cause for worry if you use common sense. Play it safe, with equipment.

Star Recalls Radio Days Of Grand Ole Opry

By DON RHODES
Copyright 1974 Country Music Magazine

"When I was seven or eight years old, I used to listen to the Grand Ole Opry on the radio every Saturday night. I wouldn't miss it for the world — just like I wouldn't miss 'The Shadow.' I remember loving to hear all those people like Grandpa Jones, Roy Acuff, Ernest Tubb and Minnie Pearl. I thought she was so funny. Any kind of music you like becomes a part of you, leaving a scar...or rather a beauty mark. That's exactly what it is...a beauty mark."

The genius of the blues, Charles Robinson, spoke with the voice of authority during a recent interview in Augusta, Georgia, talking about his deep love for country music that stretches back to his birth in Albany, Georgia, and his early boyhood years in Florida.

So it was in 1962 that he became one of the first pop singers to broaden the scope and listening audience for country music by recording his now historic "Modern Sounds in Country And Western Music" album, which sold more than a million copies to an audience that may never have heard that side of America's musical culture.

It wasn't only the public — country and pop fans alike — who profited. Country songwriters earned long overdue exposure. Don Gibson's "I Can't Stop Loving You" was lifted from the album and released as a single. It sold nearly three million copies. The album also featured Ted Daffan's memorable "Born to Lose," which became a Charles' standard.

Although the release of the album was hailed by critics and public, Charles recently recalled in another interview a few months back how friends and business associates had warned him that if he recorded a country album he stood the risk of losing his own fans, much the way country singers are warned about becoming too "pop."

Nevertheless, Charles decided to follow his own instincts and try what he liked. Since then, Charles has recorded two more country albums. Both enjoyed large sales and were credited with promoting country music to previously non-country music lovers.

Since 1962 Charles has shot to the top of the pop and rock music charts with versions of Buck Owens' "Crin Time" and "Together Again," Gov. Jimmie Davis' "Worried Mind" and "You Are My Sunshine," Cindy Walker and Eddy Arnold's "You Don't Know Me," Harlan Howard's "Busted," and

My Williams' "Take These Chains From My Heart." He recently recorded the Roy Clark hit, "Come Live With Me."

He speaks of his selection of country songs saying, "I'm not a country singer, I just like to take country songs and sing them my way." Charles said the first country song he recorded was in 1959 when he did Hank Snow's "Movin' On" for the flip of "I Believe to My Soul."

Charles has appeared on the "Haw, Johnny Cash and Glen Campbell" television shows and notes of these appearances, "People in the country music field seem to think I've done a lot for country music. They've given me all the praise and credit I could possibly want."

Among his personal favorites he lists Buck Owens, Ernest Tubb, Johnny Cash, Roy Acuff, Gene Austin ("I thought he had a pretty voice"), and Hank Williams ("He was a creator. He had a style of his own. He was a true talent...a born talent.")

Pausing a moment, Charles commented, "If you really want to know who I like, it's George Jones. Does that surprise you?" For two or three months in 1946, Charles toured with a white country music band from Tampa, Florida, called "The Florida Playboys." He wore a cowboy outfit. "That's when I learned to yodel. I was the only colored singing cowboy," he said. He conceded that his famous wail heard on many of his recordings "might be an offshoot" of his early yodeling.

"The difference is that in my fassetto, I may use several notes, but yodeling is generally going back and forth on two notes."

I mentioned to Charles that Merle Haggard once told me in an interview that there is a close resemblance between country music and black soul music.

"Both are played by the ear and from the heart," Haggard had said. "I think a better name for country music might be 'white soul music.'"

Then, I asked if he thought the reverse might be true — that "soul music might be classified as 'black country music.'"

"To tell you the truth, if you wanted to give it a title like that, I think it is true," Charles replied. "Both are about plain, everyday people...about the commonplace. The words to country music songs are very earthy like blues. Both types of songs tell it like it is. They're not glossy, and you don't have to be a scholar to understand it."

"I think people who love country music love the blues, and that people who love the blues love country music."

LET'S TALK Getting at root of neurosis

By REV. W. LEE TRUMAN
Copley News Service

A pastor should have a very basic and thorough training in healthy living, because he is constantly going to meet people who are neurotic in various degrees.

What a neurosis is can be explained more by example than it can by definition. A young lady, 23, who was an only child and whose father had died when she was quite young, is also very much the center of her mother's world.

A week before Debbie was to be married, her mother had a severe heart attack, and the wedding was postponed. In time, Mama got better, and another date was set. Within a week, mother had another attack and was back in the hospital.

The son-in-law-to-be suggested a heart specialist. The doctor, after a very thorough examination, said there was nothing wrong with mom's heart. Of course, Debbie's mother did not want to hear this and refused to have the doctor treat her at all.

The third time Debbie scheduled her marriage, and her mother began to have chest pains, she asked her what she should do. I told her to get married and to expect her mother to get worse. No doubt you have already understood that the mother wanted to be the center of Debbie's life because Debbie was the center of her world. She could not put off the marriage by anything she said, and she certainly did not have her attacks by choice.

Rather, the mother had solved her problem subconsciously, which is another name for neuroses. Mom was trying to keep her world together and it was unbearable for her to think about sharing her daughter's life and interest with anyone beyond herself.

A second way this can work is illustrated by George, an airline pilot in my congregation. He developed a numbness in his right hand and righty was afraid of his flying career. He had just passed his physical and was still capable of performing his duties, but he was scared, and he knew another physical check was coming in six months.

Coverup Attempt Alleged In University Investigation

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The failure of the deputy chancellor of the University of Texas System to investigate charges of mismanagement at UT Permian Basin has raised questions of a possible coverup attempt.

Retired Marine Corps Gen. H. W. Hise, the former director of development at the Odessa campus, said he told Deputy Chancellor E. D. Walker in late September he feared the school's president, Dr. B. H. Amstede, had misled a legislative committee in 1973 when he said no state funds were spent on construction of a $100,000 golf course and duck pond.

No action was taken on Hise's charges until the matter had become controversial enough to prompt an investigation by the Legislative Budget Board in early December. Then UT System Chancellor Charles A. Lemaistre conducted a quick investigation which resulted in Amstede's resignation, although Lemaistre cleared him of any wrongdoing.

In the two month period between the time Hise said he first raised the question of improprieties and Lemaistre's investigation, Hise was demoted and then fired by Amstede.

Hise told Houston Post columnist Lynn Ashby Walker attempted to mollify him when he told Walker on Sept. 28 of his suspicions about Amstede's 1973 testimony before the House Appropriations Committee.

"He told me how corrupt the Marine Corps was, and that didn't score too many points with me," Hise said. Two state representatives closely involved with the Permian Basin matter said they had serious questions about why no action was immediately taken on Hise's allegations, and why Lemaistre's investigation — which cleared Amstede — failed to mention Hise's dismissal.

"If what Gen. Hise said is true, then what Walker did is comparable to committing perjury," said Rep. Neil Caldwell, D-Alvin, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee. "It's really discouraging that people like this in high places have that attitude."

"And when all is said and done the man tells the truth and his reward is to be canned, that has ramifications beyond his own life. It tells every other state employee 'see there, don't go making waves.'"

Rep. John Hoestenbach, D-Odessa, said he was pleased that Lemaistre did finally investigate the matter and is satisfied with the report. But he said he is not satisfied with Walker's two-month period of inaction on the allegations and the dismissal of Hise.

"One of the members of (Lemaistre's) investigating team was Walker," Hoestenbach said. "And I expressed my concern that Walker was aware of it two months ago and he did nothing about it. But Chancellor Lemaistre assured me he was in complete control of the investigation and I was very satisfied with his answer."

"If Gen. Hise was fired strictly as a punitive measure because he made a report to the system, I would say there's some grave questions to be answered."

Lemaistre's report on the Permian Basin matter said other questions were raised by the inquiry, presumably Hise's dismissal. Hoestenbach said he hoped a further report would be made.

Both legislators said they would await the report of the Legislative Budget Board's investigation before recommending any further action on the Permian Basin affair.

It is expected shortly before the legislature convenes Jan. 14.

Unanswered in Lemaistre's initial report is why Amstede resigned if he had been cleared of any wrongdoing.

Premie Thriving

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Linda Engel will have to wait until March to take her seventh child home from the hospital. The month-old girl weighs only one pound and six ounces.

Mrs. Engel said today she considers Hope Elizabeth Engel "miracle of God."

The child was born Nov. 30 at University Hospital, in Mrs. Engel's 25th week of pregnancy. She weighed one pound and nine ounces at birth and lost four ounces before beginning to gain.

"They count her weight by grams," Mrs. Engel said. Mrs. Engel, whose other six children averaged seven to eight pounds at birth, was in labor three days with her latest offspring.

"At one point in labor the baby stopped kicking," she said. "I was in shock and the doctor said the baby didn't have much chance."

Fifteen minutes before doctors were scheduled to begin a Caesarean operation on Mrs. Engel, the baby was born.

"There were no complications," Mrs. Engel said. "She squaled when they spanked her, and she is eating well."

Mrs. Engel said the baby has hair and toenails and "is normal in every way" except for weight.

The Engel children selected the name "Hope" because they had been waiting at home, hoping their mother and sister would be okay.
