Stage set for summit drama

Negotiators struggle with troops, tanks

By Barry Schweid
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — Lagging U.S.-Soviet talks to cut troops and tanks in Europe got a pre-summit boost Tuesday but a half-dozen tough strategic weapons issues remained unsettled as negotiators pressed against a fast-approaching deadline.

The talks, held for a third day under tight secrecy at the State Department, focused on the two main arms control areas — U.S. and Soviet conventional forces in Europe and the two superpowers' arsenals of globe-girdling nuclear missiles, bombers and submarines.

Two days before opening his summit with Mikhail S. Gorbachev, President Bush met with leaders of the Pentagon, State Department and CIA for an update on deep economic and political troubles in the Soviet Union.

The only non-summit appointment on Bush's schedule was the presentation of diplomatic credentials from new ambassadors, including Aleksandr Bessmertnykh of the Soviet Union.

Gorbachev, meanwhile, arrived in Ottawa for a 29-hour visit and talks with Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney. "This is a time of dramatic change in the world," the Soviet president said after escorting his wife, Raisa, from their Ilyushin 62 aircraft.

Commenting on political developments back home, Gorbachev told reporters he was "somewhat concerned" by Boris N. Yeltsin's victory over Gorbachev's own candidate in parliamentary elections for the presidency of Russia. But he also said Yeltsin had had to "adjust his position quite seriously over the

Gorbachev stops over in Ottawa

OTTAWA — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev left behind worsening domestic problems and arrived Tuesday for an overnight visit on his way to Washington for his second summit meeting with President Bush.

"This is a time of dramatic change in the world," Gorbachev said after being welcomed with a military honor guard and a 21-gun salute.

He noted that he and Prime Minister Brian Mulroney would discuss a wide range of subjects in their four hours of talks, and added: "It is our hope that this Soviet-Canadian summit will bring us to a new level of cooperation."

Gorbachev told reporters he was "somewhat concerned" by the election Tuesday of radical reformer Boris N. Yeltsin as president of Russia, the largest of the Soviet Union's 15 republics.

The victory gives one of Gorbachev's most vociferous critics a new platform from which to criticize his economic reforms, which Yeltsin contends have not gone far enough to salvage the country from severe economic decline.

Gorbachev called the protracted voting that Yeltsin won "a kind of faceoff, a kind of confrontation." He said Yeltsin had been forced to "adjust his position quite seriously over the past few days and has adjusted to the better."

The usually buoyant Gorbachev, looking tired with deep creases in his brow, arrived at the Uplands Canadian Forces Base just outside Ottawa and was greeted by Governor General Ray Hnatyshn and Mulroney, who has some domestic problems of his own with a separatist

House ends special session after education override fails

■ Midland's Rep. Tom Craddick sides with Gov. Bill Clements as the Texas House of Representatives adjourns after letting stand a veto of school finance legislation.

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas House ended its third special session on school finance Tuesday after failing to override a veto from Gov. Bill Clements, action some members said increases the chances of a court-imposed "Robin Hood" plan.

"We fought to the bitter end," said House Speaker Gib Lewis, who had lost one override vote on a 92-55 tally, scheduled a second vote for later in the day and then did not follow through.

Ten of the chamber's 60 Republican members voted to override the Republican governor, while eight of 90 Democrats voted to sustain his veto.

Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland and chairman of the House Republican Caucus, voted with Clements. He said the argument he found most successful in persuading other members to do likewise was that the legislation was simply a bad bill.

Clements has said it would lead to higher local property taxes and an income tax, arguments bill supporters had denied. They said the governor's plan cost only about $300 million less over five years, a small sum when the Legislature will appropriated more than $100 billion in funds.

Lewis said some members' votes were committed to Clements on the first ballot but not on the second. When counting heads for the later tally, "We got up to the mid-nineties but couldn't bust them loose," he said.

In a prepared statement afterward, Clements urged the House and Senate to work with him without partisanship. "As far as I'm concerned, the slate has now been wiped clean," he said.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur and sponsor of the legislation the govenor vetoed, said he will wait for Clements and other Republicans to take the lead on the issue.

"It's so much easier to be a critic than a builder, so let them run something up the flagpole," he said.

The Senate had successfully overridden Clements' veto on a 23-8 vote this past week.

Lewis, who is meeting with Clements for breakfast this morning, said he will ask the governor to call a new session for noon today.

But Clements gave no indication when he will start the new session, a record-breaking sixth gathering of legislators in one biennium.

Saralee Tiede, a spokesman for Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, said senators must ratify a series of nominations today before ending their session, but they could finish their work during an 11 a.m. meeting and be ready to start anew by noon.

Lewis said he will ask Clements that education, human service agency short-

Council tables action on impact fees

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Council councilmen, after facing a roomful of Midland developers opposing a proposed plan to recoup costs for extending city services to new developments, voted Tuesday to defer a decision on the issue until next month.

Councilmen instructed city officials to develop a contract system to be considered June 12 along with the existing "impact fee" proposal.

Under an impact fee system, which city officials have been studying since last November, a developer would pay the city a per-unit fee for the extension of streets and water and sewer lines to a new project.

They now pay a pro rata share for their developments. That method is similar to a contract system being pushed by developers.

Developers who addressed the council said impact fees would stifle construction, industrial expansion and overall growth in Midland.

"All the developers are concerned with the city and its health and its growth," said Neil McClung, Midland Developers Association president. "One of the bright spots in our economy has been residential development."

Impact fees would pose an economic gauntlet not only to developers but businesses which either want to expand or move here, McClung said.

Under the city's proposal, a developer would be charged $500 per unit, which is either a house, apartment or 1.3 acres of commercial property. State law allows a maximum $2,000-per-unit impact fee. Under the current pro rata system, developers pay an average $250 per unit.

McClung said developers would prefer a contract system, where initial develop-

Incinerator project rejected

■ In a 3-2 vote, Martin County commissioners reject All-American Environmental Corp.'s proposal to build a hazardous waste incinerator in Stanton.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

STANTON — Martin County commissioners voted 3-2 Tuesday to reject a proposal to build a hazardous waste incinerator in their community, County Judge Bob Deavenport said.

Deavenport was one of the three who voted against entering into a "host agreement" with All-American Environmental Corp.

"There's a number of reasons (for the vote)," Deavenport said. "My particular reason is that these people (the company) don't have a track record with this type of processing. ... It's one of those things where I just didn't have a good gut feeling."

All-American representatives could not be reached for comment Tuesday evening.

E.D. Holcomb, Precinct 4 commissioner, said he voted in favor of the incinerator because he felt it was too early to reject All-American's proposal.

"I felt like we should explore all of the issues in question further

Launch delayed

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA scrubbed Columbia's launch Tuesday when an apparent leak in a hydrogen system was detected as workers were pumping a half-million gallons of propellant into the shuttle.

The postponement came about six hours before the scheduled launch at 12:38 a.m. EDT Wednesday. No new date was set immediately, and engineers evaluated the problem through the night.

Deputy killed

IRAAN (AP) — A 62-year-old Pecos County sheriff's deputy was killed Tuesday morning when a driver on the wrong side of the road struck his patrol car, a Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman said.

The accident occurred at 11 a.m. on the outskirts of the West Texas town of Iraan on U.S. 190, DPS spokesman David Wells said.

Deputy Willie Ward Christian of Iraan was pronounced dead at the scene following the head-on collision, Wells said.

The other driver, 17-year-old Jason Lee Holifield of Iraan, was in good condition Tuesday at Iraan General Hospital. He sustained cuts, bruises and a broken finger, Wells said.

Wells said Holifield's pickup truck was traveling in the wrong lane. Christian attempted to swerve, but was unable to avoid the collision, he said.

Well explodes

HEIDELBERG, Miss. (AP) — An explosion blasted a natural gas well Tuesday in southeastern Mississippi, killing at least one worker and critically burning four others, authorities said.

A two-mile area around the well was evacuated, affecting about 145 people.

Teresa

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Mother Teresa on Tuesday was presented with the keys to a former army villa as a gift of the state, the official CTK news agency reported.

The report did not say what the Prague villa would be used for, but stated it would "be available to those who need help ... whether the old and the helpless, sick children or other disadvantaged groups."

Mother Teresa, a winner of the Nobel Peace Prize, met with President Vaclav Havel earlier this month. During that tour she established the order of the Daughters of Christian Love.

Sunny skies due today

Staff Report

The Permian Basin was under a series of tornado and severe thunderstorm warnings Tuesday afternoon, but there were no confirmed tornado sightings, National Weather Service officials said.

Officials said radar indicated the possibility of tornadoes near Seminole around 2:30 p.m. and in Midland County about 25 miles south of the city about 3:15 p.m.

Severe thunderstorm warnings were issued for Midland, Ector, Gaines, Crane and Howard counties Tuesday afternoon, officials said. There were no official reports of damage, but residents of Midland's Saddle Club subdivision said winds damaged fences and lightpoles.

Officials said three-quarter-inch to one-inch hail was reported in West Odessa and west Ector County, north Crane County and 15 miles west of Midkiff.

Forecasters are calling for sunny skies today with a high in the low 90s and gusty west winds at 15 to 20 mph. The overnight low will be near 60, and Thursday should be fair with a high in the low 90s.

Tuesday's high was 94, compared with a record of 104 set in 1938. The low Tuesday was 70. The record low for today is 46, set in 1937.

Man, woman killed in Van Horn

VAN HORN, Texas (AP) — A motel owner remained jailed Tuesday on two charges of capital murder in the shooting deaths of a man and woman gunned down in front of a hardware store on this tiny West Texas town's main street.

A sheriff's deputy in El Paso Tuesday awaiting autopsy results on the victims refused to comment on the shootings. Sheriff's officials in Van Horn also would not comment.

Heradio Luna, 36, and Laura Marie Nielson, age unavailable, of Boise, Idaho, were shot to death Monday night, the Van Horn Advocate reported. Luna was pronounced dead on arrival at Culberson County Hospital and Ms. Nielson died at the scene.

Lupe Alvarado, owner of two motels in the town, was arrested at the scene. He was charged with two counts of capital murder and jailed on a total $200,000 bond in the Culberson County jail.

Authorities say Alvarado was arrested as he was trying to flee in a pickup.

Van Horn is a town of about 2,500, located about 120 miles southwest of El Paso.

Authorities told Van Horn Advocate editor Jeff McCoy that Luna was recently paroled to Presidio County. Terms of Luna's parole required him to remain in Presidio County, officials told the weekly newspaper.

ers would be reimbursed by subsequent developers who connect their streets and water sewer lines to existing services.

The city would pay a maximum 30 percent of the cost for extending the original lines but would not receive compensation for the burden newcomer developers put on the existing services, officials have said.

Councilman voted 3-2 to table action on the impact fee proposal so that a contract system proposal could be developed. Councilmen J.D. Faircloth and Bill Williams were the opposing voters.

Faircloth said councilman should throw out the impact fee proposal. "In my mind, an impact fee is not the way to go," he said.

Mayor Carroll Thomas, though, said that although he opposed impact fee, city officials and developers should have time to analyze other options.

"I think that we may, somewhere down the road, have to go to impact fees," Thomas said, adding that there is not enough development in Midland to warrant the system anytime soon.

McClung applauded the council's move to further research the options.

"My feeling is that it will take some pretty thorough dialogue between the City Council and the developers association to achieve a workable contract," he said. "It's going to have to be broad scoped in nature.

"I highly commend the City Council. They've had a tough job with researching this legislation."

The impact fee concept was approved by state legislators in 1987. State law requires that cities abandon their pro rata systems by June 20 or risk losing compensation for service extensions.

Councilman Jose Cuevas said developers may not like a contract system proposed by the city and may wind up preferring impact fees.

"Basically what we're saying today is that if we're going contract, let's sit down and hammer it out," Cuevas said. "Right now we're playing a fairy tale scenario. We've never taken in the pros and cons of contract development."

ARRIVAL: Gorbachev appears tired movement in Quebec.

Several hundred schoolchildren looked on, cheering and waving small Canadian and Soviet flags. Snipers were posted on rooftops at the airport and security was tight along Gorbachev's route to downtown Ottawa.

One house along the route proudly displayed a large homemade sign in Russian: "Hello, Mr. President. Come and have a beer."

Hnatyshn, Queen Elizabeth II's personal representative in Canada, welcomed Gorbachev with words of reassurance.

"Even our schoolchildren know such words as glasnost and perestroika, which promise a better future for your country," said Hnatyshn, a Canadian of Ukrainian descent.

Mulroney visited Moscow last November and signed 14 agreements to expand cooperation and trade between the two northern neighbors, whose vast territories are linked by the Arctic Ocean ice cap. It was the first official visit of a Canadian prime minister to the Soviet Union in 18 years.

For Gorbachev, the 29-hour stopover marked his second trip to Canada, which he first visited in 1983, when he was in charge of Soviet agriculture policy and was gaining notice as a rising star in the Communist Party hierarchy.

Gorbachev returned as a revolutionary leader viewed as a hero by much of Canada and the West for ending the Cold War and implementing democratic reforms.

He was accompanied by his wife, Raisa, and several key advisers, including Foreign Ministry Eduard A. Shevardnadze. However, remaining behind in Moscow was Alexander Yakovlev, a former ambassador to Canada who now advises Gorbachev on international affairs and has accompanied Gorbachev on other trips to the West.

Yakovlev's absence was seen as an indication Gorbachev felt compelled to leave at least one member of his inner circle in Moscow to oversee events in the troubled country during his travels.

In recent weeks, Gorbachev has wrestled with attempts by the three Baltic republics of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia to secede from the Soviet Union, and domestic tensions have increased markedly in recent days with the government's announcement of sharply increased food prices in the first stage of a long-awaiting move toward institution of a market-oriented economy. Disclosure of the plan touched off a wave of panic buying across the country and prompted authorities in Moscow and elsewhere to clamp restrictions on food sales. Gorbachev, addressing the nation on television, appealed for calm.

On Sunday, fighting erupted in the south between Armenian militants and Soviet troops.

Mulroney has been dealing with his own domestic problems, primarily the separatist movement in the province of Quebec.

past few days and has adjusted to the better."

On Capitol Hill in Washington, Senate Republican leader Bob Dole said Gorbachev was in a much weaker position than when he last visited, 2½ years ago.

"Bush has 1,000 points of light, and Gorbachev has 1,000 problems," Dole said, alluding to shortages of consumer goods, ethnic unrest and Yeltsin's political ascent. "We'll be watching closely," Dole quipped. "If Gorbachev brings more than two bags, he may be staying."

Gorbachev will arrive in Washington Wednesday evening and begin three days of talks on Thursday.

Thousands of demonstrators already are on hand, ready to express anger over Soviet coercion of Lithuania and to voice demands for causes ranging from a Palestinian homeland and democracy in Vietnam to a unified Korea and a cure for AIDS.

Security forces were beefed up to keep control.

"No days off and extended shifts," said Maj. Carl Holmberg of the U.S. Park Police. The number of security agents was kept secret, but Soviet spokesman Vladimir Ustimenko said, "It will be a big bunch of people with big guns."

While there was no announcement from the arms negotiations, U.S. officials reported progress on one front and continuing difficulties on the other.

The "good news," a U.S. official told The Associated Press, was that the two sides had agreed on definitions for such conventional weapons as tanks and armored personnel carriers. The issue is one of several holding up a treaty to cut most weapons by at least 50 percent and to set new and lower ceilings on U.S. and Soviet troops.

The Bush administration had accused the Soviets of foot-dragging before Gorbachev sent Deputy Prime Minister Viktor P. Karpov and other experienced negotiators here for pre-summit talks that began on Sunday.

The agreement on defining the weapons not only will facilitate cutting weapons stockpiles but will make it easier to verify that terms of the treaty are carried out, the officials said.

On the other hand, the two sides remained in disagreement over several long-range nuclear weapons. The officials said those weapons may be excluded from a declaration Bush and Gorbachev are expected to make.

The issues include whether to ban ballistic missiles with multiple warheads and the number of flight tests the Soviets could conduct of their heavy SS-18 missiles. The arsenal of such missiles is to be halved, from 308 to 154, but there is no agreement restricting improvement in the missiles that remain.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III, in talks two weeks ago in Moscow, proposed two flight tests a year. But the Soviet negotiators led by Karpov did not accept the quota in their talks with the U.S. group headed by Under Secretary Reginald Bartholomew, the U.S. officials said.

The lack of progress in the current talks will not keep Bush and Gorbachev from a declaration at the summit pledging wholesale cutbacks in long-range nuclear arms.

Baker's trip to Moscow produced a breakthrough on sea and air-launched cruise missiles, setting the stage for a summit announcement that most major issues had been resolved.

Yet, a senior administration official played down the importance of arms agreements, saying the real significance of the meeting would be face-to-face discussions on disputes over Germany unity and Soviet action against Lithuania.

"I'd urge you ... to put away your scorecard on this one about who's winning and who's losing, about what agreements are signed and trying to enumerate them," the official told a standing-room-only briefing at the White House. He commented only on condition of anonymity.

There were conflicting signals about movement toward the signing of a U.S.-Soviet agreement on trade.

instead of taking action on the issue of whether to support it (the incinerator) at this time," Holcomb said. "I felt like we needed to get more information on the process itself. I felt like there were a lot of unanswered questions."

Donald Tollison, Precinct 2 commissioner, said he voted in favor of the incinerator proposal to show his support for similar projects, but said he was not impressed with All-American's credentials.

"You need to have a great deal of confidence in the company that's running that particular operation," Tollison said.

He said Tuesday's vote was not intended to "close the door" on other industries — including incinerators — interested in locating in Martin County.

Deavenport said All-American first approached county and Stanton officials in April about building the $8 million incinerator. The incinerator would have burned hazardous waste — including oil-contaminated soil — and hospital waste shipped to West Texas.

All-American had asked Martin County for assistance in locating a suitable site for the incinerator and were seeking a tax abatement from the county, Deavenport said.

Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis gavels voting to a close as lawmakers fail to override a veto of their school finance reform bill.

SESSION: Lewis may ask Clements for fourth call falls and lawmaker ethics reforms be included among topics the Legislature may consider.

Lawmakers have estimated the human service agency shortfalls at $162 million or more. They are deemed critical in the Department of Humam Services, Department of Health and Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

Lewis said the House will "fast track" approval of money for the agencies so that services won't need curtailing.

The speaker had predicted this past week he would muster the required 100 votes to override the governor, but on Tuesday he did not blame Clements for obstructing the legislative process.

"I think we'll all get the blame if a court master takes over — and we'll all deserve it," said Lewis.

On Friday, Special Master Bill Kilgarlin, a former Texas Supreme Court justice, will release his plan for satisfying a high court decision that found the current school finance system illegal.

Even before seeing it, lawmakers have labeled Kilgarlin's program a "Robin Hood" approach because he will have to redirect state aid from wealthier districts to poorer ones.

Since he is unable to cushion the effect of redistribution with additional money, as lawmakers are attempting, the plan will mean million-dollar losses in some districts.

The Dallas ISD could lose $1[illegible] million if Kilgarlin follows through with the redistribution, said Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi.

Administrative remedies Kilgarlin is considering include caps on the amount of money wealthy districts may spend on students, said the state attorney defending the case, Kevin O'Hanlon.

O'Hanlon said the court plan also may include county-wide tax base consolidations, a system in which school districts for taxing purposes only become part of a larger taxing district within county lines.

"It's going to be a circus, because everybody who's ox is gored — and there will be many — is going to come storming in screaming foul, bloody murder," O'Hanlon said.

Districts that have the most to lose, he said, are those with wealthy tax bases and those which have maintained tax rates substantially below the state average of 95 cents per $100 of property valuation.

Berlanga said the hand of minority lawmakers will become stronger after Kilgarlin releases his plan on Friday.

Reformer Yeltsin wins presidency of Russian republic

Waving a bouquet of flowers as he thanks supporters is Boris Yeltsin, elected Tuesday as president of large Soviet republic.

MOSCOW (AP) — Populist reformer Boris N. Yeltsin won the presidency of the largest Soviet republic Tuesday, overcoming opposition by Mikhail S. Gorbachev and declaring the start of "Russia's social, economic and spiritual rebirth."

Yeltsin's election, after three hard-fought ballots in the Congress of People's Deputies of the Russian Federation, poses a substantial challenge to Gorbachev and may spur more radical reforms across the country.

Gorbachev, who arrives Wednesday in Washington for a summit, retains the two most powerful jobs in the country: president of the Soviet Union and General Secretary of the Soviet Communist Party.

But as president of the largest of 15 Soviet republics, Yeltsin will have a highly visible platform from which to wage his campaign for more radical reforms.

Gorbachev told reporters he was was "somewhat concerned" by his one-time protege's victory but encouraged by Yeltin's statements that he would try to avoid confrontation with the Soviet leader.

"If, however, he is playing a political game, then we may be in for a difficult time," Gorbachev said in Ottawa, where he stopped en route to Washington. He called the protracted voting process "a kind of faceoff, a kind of confrontation," and said Yeltsin was forced to "adjust his position quite seriously over the past few days, and has adjusted to the better."

Yeltsin said: "At first, President Gorbachev will react very unhappily, but then he'll gradually get used to this inevitability."

The strapping, white-haired Yeltsin told reporters that he would seek reconciliation with Gorbachev and avoid confrontation with him, so long as it did not hurt Russia's interests.

Gorbachev had brought Yeltsin to Moscow to head the city's Communist Party, but the two men had a falling out in 1987 after Yeltsin publicly criticized the pace of Kremlin reforms. They have been at odds since then.

After the vote result was announced in the Grand Kremlin Palace, Yeltsin strode to the podium to warm applause and pledged to "spare nothing — health or time — to get out of this crisis and lead Russia to better times."

His bass voice echoing through the hall, he called the day "the beginning of the road to Russia's social, economic and spiritual rebirth, the way out of the crisis and toward the blossoming of Russia as a sovereign, independent government in the framework of our union."

He left through the Kremlin gates later to the tumultuous cheers of a small crowd of well-wishers chanting "Victory! Victory!" One man yelled, "Thank you, thank you for the future!"

Gorbachev strongly opposed Yeltsin's election. He told the Russian Congress last week that Yeltsin's platform of moving political and economic power from central to local authorities would lead to a "breakup of the union."

The Russian Federation stretches from the Baltic Sea in the west to the Pacific Ocean in the East. It is home to half the country's 285 million people and includes Moscow, the Soviet capital.

As president of the Russian Congress, a newly created body that holds the Russian Federation's highest government authority, Yeltsin acts as chief executive of the republic and took office immediately. As the first president of a newly reorganized legislature, he will play a major role in shaping his powers and duties, which as yet are unclear.

Russian Premier Alexander Vlasov received 467 votes. Valentin Tsoy, a little-known businessman from the Soviet Far East, received 11 votes.

Lawmakers said Tuesday they believed Yeltsin gained the last few votes he needed by offering to form a coalition government with members of the conservative Communist Party bloc and other groups.

Yeltsin said he believed he gained several votes because of a last-minute push by Gorbachev to block his election.

Arkansas' Clinton ahead; Sloane wins in Kentucky

Associated Press

Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton took a wide lead in his quest for the Democratic nomination for a fifth term Tuesday, while a sheriff-turned-congressman battled a former utility chief in a rancorous Republican gubernatorial primary.

In Kentucky, former Louisville mayor Harvey Sloane defeated state schools Superintendent John Brock in a Democratic primary for Senate. Sloane will compete in November against Republican Sen. Mitch McConnell, who easily won his party's endorsement for a second term.

Long-time Democratic congressmen in both states faced spirited challenges.

In the Louisville area, Rep. Romano Mazzoli, who made a point of refusing money from political action committees, won nomination for an 11th term, but polled less than 50 percent of the vote in a three-way race. With all precincts reporting, Mazzoli had 28,094 votes or 45 percent, former television newsman Jeffrey Hutter had 20,139 votes or 32 percent, and Alderman Paul Bather had 13,760 votes or 22 percent.

In the 1st District of northeast Arkansas, Rep. Bill Alexander, a 22-year veteran of Congress, was ahead of Osceola attorney Mike Gibson, a political newcomer with strong business backing. With 29 percent of precincts reporting, Alexander had 21,423 votes or 55 percent and Gibson had 17,805 votes or 45 percent.

Clinton's main challenger in a six-way race, Tom McRae, former president of the Winthrop Rockefeller Foundation, lagged in public polls, and the governor hoped to gain a majority vote and avoid a June 12 runoff.

With 36 percent of precincts reporting, Clinton had 84,056 votes or 54 percent, McRae had 62,124 votes or 40 percent, and the four other candidates divided the remaining 6 percent.

The GOP primary featured a bitter rivalry between Rep. Tommy Robinson, former police chief and sheriff from Pulaski County, and Sheffield Nelson, former head of Arkla Inc., the major natural gas utility in Arkansas. Both were Democrats until last year. With 27 percent of the vote counted, Nelson had 14,694 votes or 51 percent and Robinson had 14,253 votes or 49 percent.

In Kentucky's Democratic Senate primary, with all precincts reporting, Sloane had 183,629 votes or 59 percent and Brock had 125,496 votes or 41 percent.

Brock promptly pledged unity for the fall campaign.

"It takes two to tango and the last six months we've been tangling a little bit," he said. "But tonight we're going to tango and be together."

McConnell swamped his only opponent in the GOP primary, racking up 89 percent of the vote against perennial candidate Tommy Klein.

Sen. David Pryor, an Arkansas Democrat, had no primary opposition and will face only a write-in foe in November.

Arkansas' Republican campaign for governor focused on a business deal between Arkla Inc. and Arkoma Production Co., owned by Nelson's friend Jerry Jones, the Dallas Cowboys owner who grew up with Robinson in North Little Rock.

In 1982, Arkla sold a half-interest in gas drilling leases to Arkoma for $15 million. After Arkoma spent $35 million more on drilling and other costs, Arkla bought back its leases in 1986 along with the rest of Arkoma for $174.8 million.

Robinson, 48, called the deal sleazy and severed his financial ties and friendship with Jones. Jones' 22-year-old daughter, Charlotte, quit her $60,000 a year job as administrator of Robinson's congressional office after Robinson began criticizing her father.

Nelson's feud with his mentor at Arkla, W.R. "Witt" Stephens, spilled over into the campaign. Stephens' sister-in-law, Mary Anne Stephens, managed Robinson's campaign. Her husband, Jack Stephens, and Stephens Inc., the investment firm run by the brothers, were major contributors to Robinson's campaign.

Clinton, 43, was the nation's youngest governor when he was first elected in 1978. He lost his bid for re-election in 1980, but was elected again in 1982, 1984 and 1986, when the two-year term for governor was doubled.

High court will review clinic ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court said Tuesday it will decide whether a ban on government-financed family planning clinics counseling patients about abortion violates free-speech and abortion rights.

At stake is the future scope of a federal program with a $200 million annual budget. The program funds more than 4,000 clinics serving about 5 million low-income women nationwide.

A federal appeals court in New York upheld the counseling ban, but other federal courts ruled it is unconstitutional. The high court's decision, expected sometime in 1991, should resolve the conflicting rulings.

In other action Tuesday, the court:

—Said it will decide whether states may impose mandatory life sentences without parole for people convicted of possessing large amounts of drugs.

—Gave criminal defendants new "double jeopardy" protection against multiple prosecutions as it voted 5-4 to bar homicide charges against a drunken driver in New York.

—Ruled, 7-2, in a Pennsylvania case that convicted criminals may avoid making restitution to their victims by declaring bankruptcy.

—Ruled, 7-2, in a case from Arizona that Indian tribes may not prosecute any member of another tribe for crimes committed on their reservations.

—Let stand a ruling in an Illinois case that shields public officials from being sued in federal court for placing children in foster homes where they are sexually abused.

—Rejected an appeal by two Ku Klux Klan groups and four men ordered to pay more than $800,000 for organizing a demonstration that turned into a violent attack on civil rights marchers in Georgia three years ago.

Political system suffers shortage

Congress, like the Marines, could use a few good men — and women.

Unfortunately, more and more men and women are deciding they do not want to run for office. The result is that a growing number of incumbents in the House of Representatives are being re-elected without any opposition.

This is a dangerous trend. Senior Writer Rhodes Cook of the Congressional Quarterly, a Washington, D.C., publication that closely monitors the activities in Congress, did some research and found that in 1960, in the election in which Ronald Reagan became president, the incumbents in 51 of the 435 House districts did not have an opponent. By 1966 the number of unopposed House members rose to 72 and then climbed to 77 in 1988 when President Bush was elected to the White House. Mr. Cook said indications are that the number of unopposed House members will be about the same this year as in 1988.

At a time when candidates are eager to run for office in the Soviet Union and various Eastern European nations where democracy is gaining a foothold, it is ironic — in fact tragic — that in the United States, the home of modern democracy, people are turning their backs on the opportunity to seek public office.

And while an incredible 77 House members had no opposition in 1988, scores of additional Congress members had only token opposition. Voters in only a handful of districts throughout the United States decided the outcome of truly contested races.

Two primary factors would appear to account for the lack of congressional candidates: Reapportionment and money.

Reapportionment is at once both non-partisan and highly partisan. The party that happens to be in power in a state when new district lines are drawn every 10 years does as much as it can to put the opposing party out of business.

The primary losers in this political game are the voters. The voters are best served if the people they elect to office are in competitive districts and have to keep looking over their shoulders — and have to continue to be responsive to the needs and wishes of their constituents. Most state and federal lawmakers do not have to be as responsive as they should be as a result of reapportionment.

The second factor, money, reflects the power of being an incumbent. The cost of running for office even in congressional and legislative districts has become staggering — costing hundreds of thousands of dollars and sometimes millions. All kinds of special interests give money to incumbents — both Republicans and Democrats. Legislators let this money accumulate in large war chests, even in non-election years, to discourage anyone from running against them.

With decreased voter participation and a lack of candidates, two trends that have become more pronounced in recent years, the old joke about "what if they gave an election and nobody came" does not seem as funny as it once did.

Give CRMWD directors right to bestow honor

In your editorial, "New lake's name should echo past," Midland Reporter-Telegram May 23, a great deal is said about heritage of Stacy. The family whose name this bears on the map gave up on the place 70 years ago and moved away. All that remains is the hulk of a long-abandoned schoolhouse.

Moreover, the spot is 15 river miles downstream from the dam. The only connection is that the U.S. Corps of Engineers attached it more than two score years ago to a potential dam site, which lay undeveloped until the Colorado River Municipal Water District (CRMWD), in cooperation with contract cities of Midland, Abilene and San Angelo, invested upwards of $70 million of non-tax funds to develop it.

Leaday, in the lake basin area, had dwindled to a residence and a church. Both were moved; the latter was given a new site and materials by the CRMWD, which had paid for the structure and the site. The only family with a direct name connection graciously sent the district its congratulations along with a handsome planter.

People have the right to voice their opinions and to call anything by whatever name they wish. While staunchly defending this right, I suggest the same right should be accorded to the CRMWD directors, who are sensitive, unselfish and far-sighted men.

Finally, aren't our priorities somewhat askew when you devoted 80 percent of your story to a few protestors and less than 20 percent to what the occasion was all about? Which will be more significant to the ultimate history of this area — water security for Midland and the region for the next 40 years or the clamor of a few who have no personal ties to or stake in the project?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, May 30, the 150th day of 1990. There are 215 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 30, 1431, Joan of Arc, condemned as a heretic, was burned at the stake in Rouen, France.

On this date:

In 1854, the territories of Nebraska and Kansas were established.

In 1883, 12 people were trampled to death when a rumor that the recently opened Brooklyn Bridge was in imminent danger of collapsing triggered a stampede.

In 1937, 10 people were killed when police fired on steelworkers demonstrating near the Republic Steel plant in South Chicago.

In 1958, unidentified soldiers killed in World War II and the Korean conflict were buried at Arlington National Cemetery.

In 1982, Spain became "NATO's" 16th member.

Military doctors can't be sued

WASHINGTON — Robert Longo should sue the doctors who told him that the softball-sized tumor in his leg was a muscle tear. The cancer spread to his lungs during the months that Longo tried to convince the doctors that they were wrong. But he can't sue because Longo's doctors were in the Army and so was he.

Anderson

Victims of medical malpractice by military doctors could fill a book with their painful experiences, but they can't file so much as a single lawsuit because a federal law called the Feres Doctrine prohibits military personnel from suing military doctors.

Longo, of Onset, Mass., first felt the pain in his left thigh while he was on duty Dec. 21, 1983. He tolerated it for a few days and then went to an Army aid station and got pain pills. Then for the next three months, doctor after doctor at the Army hospital in Fort Hood, Texas, told Longo he had a torn muscle.

They prescribed pain pills, physical therapy, heat packs, crutches and rest while Longo watched with horror as the lump in his thigh grew. Finally he asked one doctor if it could be a tumor. "I was told that I was too young to have a tumor," Longo recalled.

Finally, a doctor sent the complaining Longo to a bigger Army hospital at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. "The doctors could not believe what they saw," Longo recalled. They cut out a malignant tumor the size of a softball.

Some members of Congress think that people like Longo should be able to call their doctors to account through the courts. Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., is spearheading the drive to legalize malpractice suits in the military. He says it is unfair that federal prisoners can sue the government, but GIs can't.

Our associates Melinda Maas and Scott Sleek turned up several cases in which military personnel claim to have suffered at the hands of military doctors.

Marine Sgt. Lori Jolley entered the Balboa Naval Hospital in Long Beach, Calif., in 1986 for an appendectomy. For months after the surgery, she continued to feel the same symptoms of appendicitis. Eventually she went to the emergency room of a civilian hospital. Doctors there told her that she still had her appendix, but that she was missing an ovary and her fallopian tubes.

At 27, Jolley is sterile and owes $60,000 in medical bills. She can't find a lawyer to take her case because none wants to take on the U.S. government.

E. Christian Gremlich III of Broomall, Pa., became impotent at the age of 23. But it was 30 years before he discovered that an Army doctor may have been responsible. Military doctors told him he was impotent because of abdominal injuries he received in a car accident. Three years ago, Gremlich reviewed old medical records and pieced together a different story.

He had undergone initial surgery after the accident at a civilian hospital, and then the Army insisted that he be moved to a military hospital. Gremlich's records show that the military doctors didn't follow the post-operative instructions from the civilian doctors. Gremlich's original physician claims his urethra wasn't allowed to heal completely, resulting in impotence.

Gremlich is now bucking the rules by suing the government for compensation for his three decades of suffering. His case, if successful, could overturn the Feres Doctrine.

Men and women in the military know they may have to risk their lives, but they shouldn't face that risk because of incompetence in a hospital.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Taking its cue from the National Rifle Association, the tobacco industry is making a constitutional issue out of smoking. In a series of ads, Philip Morris Co. uses Lech Walesa as a pitchman, extolling the virtues of the Bill of Rights. Nowhere the ads mention cigarettes, but the message is clear that people have a Constitutional right to smoke. Can bumper stickers be far behind — "When cigarettes are outlawed, only outlaws will have cigarettes."

Art of rejection: 'It doesn't match drapes'

This summer it's very possible that you will run into people who'll ask, "Why didn't you buy Van Gogh's Dr. Gachet for $82.5 million or Renoir's Moulin de la Galette for $78.1 million?"

Buchwald

"We don't have the wall space for the Van Gogh because our children wouldn't let us take down their Mother's Day drawings."

"I intended to bid, but the Japanese had their heart set on the pictures, and they have so little of anything as it is."

"Renoir's colors didn't go with our drapes."

"Do you know what it costs to frame an Impressionist painting these days?"

"We would have bought the Moulin de la Galette but it wouldn't fit into our Volkswagen."

"I have a friend, Bill Morice, who told me that I didn't have to go to the auction as he would take me to Van Gogh's studio to meet him personally."

"My wife might have been persuaded to buy the Renoir, but she can't stand Mrs. Renoir."

"I'd rather have new patio furniture than an old French painting that has hung on God knows how many people's walls."

"I started to collect Van Goghs the day he cut off his ear."

"We don't have $82.5 million for a picture, but if we did, we'd buy a Mapplethorpe photo instead."

"Renoir's Moulin de la Galette isn't a bad painting, but unfortunately it has too many people in it for our taste."

"Years ago we had a choice of either collecting Rembrandts or baseball cards. Thank God, we chose the baseball cards."

"Lucy Scott asked me not to bid on the Renoir so that she could have it. Then she stopped raising her hand when it reached $330."

"We'll probably buy both works this summer when the Japanese businessman, Ryoei Saito, has his annual garage sale."

"My wife was about to purchase the Dr. Gachet when I pointed out to her that we would then be stuck with two Van Goghs in the rec room."

"Because we are favored customers, we have reserved seats at Sotheby's for any softball game on their schedule."

"I hate the role money is playing in the art game. The halcyon days of paying a lousy $5 million for a White Rock calendar are over."

"I would have bought Renoir's Moulin de la Galette, but the artist refused to retouch it to make it more American."

"The reason we don't buy anything is because the auctioneer at Christie's never looks our way when we're bidding."

"He may have talent but Van Gogh is no friend of the farmer."

"Someday the Japanese are going to come back to New York on their hands and knees and beg us to buy back their paintings."

"Picasso makes me smile, but Norman Rockwell makes me think."

"Ralph went to the auction with me but lost interest when he found out that Van Gogh never painted any landscapes of the Augusta National Golf Course."

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Smoke may not be only secondhand woe

Everybody is worrying about secondhand smoke, which — studies now show — can kill you.

What I want to know is, how far away? If somebody smokes a cigarette in Michigan, could the smoke get blown to, say, Florida, and Clarence P. Woodley, a retired hog farmer from Arkansas, get a whiff of it and leave Mrs. Woodley, the former Hattie Jane Haines of Red Rooster, Texas, a premature widow?

Grizzard

OK, so previously owned smoke is no danger at 900 miles. What about down the street then?

What if Arnold Smortz of 117 Mesopotamia goes out in his backyard and cracks open a cold one and lights a Marlboro? Is Freda Gilmire at 110 in any sort of danger?

If so, will smokers be drummed out of neighborhoods?

And allow me to ask this question as well: If secondhand smoke is dangerous to our health, what about secondhand other stuff?

I've got some examples:

Secondhand Booze Breath: What if you're sitting next to a hardware salesman from Keokuk on a flight from Denver to Chicago.

It's been a bad month for screwdrivers and this guy is belting down the scotches, one after another.

Are you going to breathe in Mr. Lug Wrench's scotch-ladened exhales and show up at the recital reeking of drink?

Try explaining that to your wife.

"I can't believe you got drunk on the plane before your own daughter's dance recital," your wife will say.

You reply, "I haven't been drinking. I was sitting next to this guy who drank 15 scotches during the flight, and I was the innocent victim of Secondhand Booze Breath."

If that flies, Greyhound buses will soon have wings.

Secondhand Stupidity: The guy who sits next to you at work hasn't had a decent brain wave in years.

He thinks pro wrestling is real, gives half his salary to Oral Roberts, thinks the Atlanta Falcons will have a great team next year and loaded up on junk bonds.

You sit right there next to him for eight hours a day. What if some of that stupidity rubs off on you?

What if one day you start believing the Rev. Al Sharpton is legit?

Previously Owned Bimbosity: It's sort of like secondhand stupidity, except only women get it. You hang out a couple of weeks with Maria Maples and you think Donald Trump is going to give you a hotel, too.

Secondhand Bad Taste: Your neighbor wears belts that match his shoes and socks, belches a lot, forgets to put the toilet seat down, and makes a sucking, slurping sound when he eats soup.

Next thing you know you could be ordering your music collection from TV, wearing black socks with your shorts, calling everybody you meet, "dude," and picking up your steak and gnawing on the bone at Waffle House.

Secondhand Liberalism: You are driving through Massachusetts and suddenly you break into a chant, "Run, Teddy, run!"

Previously Owned Disregard for the Environment: You go visit your brother-in-law, who doesn't know the first thing about recycling or global warming. Two days later, you take a job with Exxon.

The message here is clear: You can run, but you can't hide from the habits and flaws of others. You use Dial. If everybody else did, there would be no such thing as Secondhand B.O.

Judge declines to overturn Poindexter's convictions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A judge refused Tuesday to overturn John M. Poindexter's five Iran-Contra convictions, ruling that the former national security adviser had presented a weak defense against strong evidence.

U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene denied defense motions for a judgment of acquittal on the five felony convictions of then-President Reagan's national security adviser.

"A review of this evidence reveals that proof of defendant's guilt of the charges is compelling," Greene said of the conspiracy, obstruction of Congress and false statement convictions that were returned April 7 by the jury in the case.

Jurors found Poindexter guilty of lying to Congress and destroying documents to conceal covert Reagan administration assistance of the Nicaraguan rebels and the U.S. role in a 1985 Israeli shipment of Hawk missiles to Iran.

The judge, rejecting defense arguments that prosecutors did not prove their case against the retired Navy rear admiral, found that Poindexter's defense "was neither broad nor particularly convincing."

"Other than to attempt to weaken the testimony of the government's witnesses through cross-examination, Poindexter simply did not have a defense of his own," the judge said.

Poindexter, who did not testify at his trial, is scheduled to be sentenced June 11, when he could be given up to 25 years in prison and fined as much as $1.25 million.

The judge noted that neither Reagan, who gave a videotaped deposition that was played to the jury, nor former National Security Council aide Oliver L. North, was "willing to relieve defendant of culpability" in their testimony.

The judge found that Reagan "may have helped generate an atmosphere at the White House which led subordinate officials to conclude they were carrying out the president's wishes" by repeatedly stressing his commitment to freeing U.S. hostages in Lebanon and helping the Nicaraguan rebels after Congress cut off aid.

But Greene said "there is no evidence to contradict the former president's testimony that he warned his subordinates against acting outside the law."

The judge also dismissed a defense contention that Iran-Contra prosecutor Dan Webb improperly argued to jurors in his final summation that Reagan had lied to the American public when he denied selling arms to Iran for hostages.

Poindexter's lawyers argued this was an improper expression of personal opinion not based on the facts.

"While the language regarding a former president of the United States should perhaps have been more delicate, the prosecutor's assertion was nevertheless a fair inference from the evidence," Greene said.

Media encourages hysteria over emergence of cicadas

There are nightly updates on the TV news, recipes in the newspaper, even a special hot line heralding not the coming of the apocalypse, but the emergence of inch-long critters called cicadas.

The noisy devils unearth themselves every 17 years to mate, shriek incessantly, and drive homeowners crazy.

Millions of the winged creatures are expected to emerge in parts of Illinois, Iowa, Indiana and Wisconsin during the next few days, covering back yards and forests with their brownish, crunchy bodies.

After mating and laying eggs that will remain underground for another 17 years, the cicadas will die. The orgy should be over by early July, and experts say the creatures are harmless.

But that hasn't calmed the hysteria.

"It's completely unfounded," said Field Museum entomologist Phil Parrillo. "People are going out and getting insecticide to spray on them, but they're only going to be here for a few weeks. Gee whiz, don't worry about it."

The males produce a large shrill sound; the females are mute.

"They may be a nuisance in terms of the sound that they make," he said Tuesday. And they can damage young trees where they lay their eggs.

"Other than that, they're really not going to cause a problem," he said.

"The cicadas have reached Elmhurst," a broadcaster announced in a teaser for a recent television newscast.

WLS-TV news has run five or six reports "saying that they're on their way, and also a story on what people can do to protect their young trees," said Jim Lichtenstein, assignment editor.

The cover of a recent Chicago Tribune Sunday magazine featured the warning: "Get Ready! The 17-year itch of the cicada is about to begin."

The Chicago Sun-Times last week set up a hot line, which has received at least 60 calls a day from curious or horrified homeowners with questions about the bugs, said Jim Martinez, metropolitan editor. The newspaper even printed recipes for readers brave enough to eat the creatures.

Michael Kendall, a Chicago attorney, tested one of the recipes with some cicadas he found Monday night in his brother's suburban back yard.

"We parboiled them and then sauteed them in butter and garlic and ate them sort of like shrimp," Kendall said. "They taste like sort of a starchy potato. They had a sort of scallop-like consistency."

AP Laserphoto

Robbie Graves, 3, of Elmhurst, Ill, eyes a cicada as it emerges from its shell Tuesday. The Chicago area is going bonkers over the bugs, with regular newspaper articles, nightly updates on local television enws, and even a special hotline hearlding the emergence of the cicadas in a 17-year cycle.

Family attends dedication of JFK statue

BOSTON (AP) — John F. Kennedy's relatives observed what would have been his 73rd birthday Tuesday by unveiling an 8-foot bronze that depicts him striding forward.

"My brother would have a sense of wry humility, to find himself standing in this hallowed place, at the top of this city on the hill, looking out over the great Common he loved, " U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy told hundreds who gathered for the ceremony.

The statue, financed by $175,000 in donations from citizens groups and schoolchildren, stands outside Boston's gold-domed Statehouse overlooking Boston Common.

"By showing President Kennedy on the move, this remarkable statue not only represents my brother, it also symbolizes what he stood for and lived for — America on the move," Kennedy said as a light rain began to fall.

Designed by Concord-based sculptor Isabel McIlvain, the statue shows Kennedy in stride, with one hand tucked in his suit pocket.

The slain president's brother praised the work for its realism. But he joked: "I can tell from Jack's expression ... that he is already feeling uncomfortable on his pedestal. If we could manage to catch his words, he is probably muttering now, 'Tell Teddy to cut his speech in half.'"

Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, the former first lady, smiled broadly throughout the ceremony, applauding at times but turning solemn as her daughter, Caroline Kennedy Schlossberg, removed the dark shroud covering the bronze statue.

Kennedy's mother, Rose, who turns 100 years old this summer, could not attend.

Gov. Michael S. Dukakis was one of several politicians who credited Kennedy with inspiring him to go into politics. The Democratic governor recalled his days at Harvard Law School, where he saw Kennedy deliver a speech.

"How he challenged us that afternoon to meet high standards," said Dukakis, who made a failed Democratic bid for the presidency in 1988.

Cardinal Bernard Law gave the invocation, saying, "We thank you for the memory of one who served this commonwealth, served this nation, as patriot and as president."

After the ceremony, members of the public were invited to the Statehouse for a reception.

Kennedy's legacy also was celebrated earlier Tuesday at a separate ceremony in which the inaugural John F. Kennedy Profile in Courage Award was given to former Alabama Rep. Carl A. Elliott.

Elliott, 76, was honored for risking his 16-year congressional career by choosing to raise his voice on behalf of racial equity in the South at a time when Jim Crow laws were still in effect.

Violence troubles a once-classy Georgetown

By Wendy Benjaminson

WASHINGTON (AP) — Violent crime in Georgetown, the city's most exclusive neighborhood, has increased to the point where shopkeepers say they spend more time protecting their customers than selling them goods.

District of Columbia police warned visitors this week to stay away from Georgetown on weekend nights because, with reduced budgets, they could not promise to prevent the violence that rocked the trendy nightclub strip over the weekend.

Police said there was one incident two weekends ago in which a crowd of men attacked an officer trying to make an arrest, and a police spokesman said five officers in all were hurt in confrontations.

Fifty officers, instead of the usual six, were supposed to have been patrolling the area and a mobile headquarters was to have been set up as part of a special summer anti-crime effort. But police, citing budget cuts, said there wasn't enough money.

Police Chief Isaac Fulwood has reinstated the weekend summer anti-crime patrols. But shopkeepers said extra police will not repair the changing nature of Georgetown.

"It's not just police that are needed," one shoe store owner said. "It's a whole different kind of person than the kind that used to shop here. It's too many young kids with nothing to do."

Area residents say robberies and muggings have been on the increase for some time. And shopkeepers and residents said they are mourning the loss of the neighborhood they sought out for its history, vibrancy and elegance.

Georgetown, once a separate city, still has cobblestone streets, small row houses and sprawling mansions. It has been populated by Kennedys, Cabinet members and the city's most famed socialites and diplomats, and is home to the city's most prestigious university.

But the old antique and rare book shops are gradually being replaced with national chain clothing stores, and the nightclub and restaurant strip is thriving.

With those changes have come increasing numbers of youths either too young or too broke to shop or dine. Shopkeepers say those people have begun preying on the customers.

"We're definitely getting a security guard," said William Myers, manager of Hats in the Belfry

Housing authority chief to stay with ship

Midland County commissioners on Tuesday were updated on the status of the local housing authority office which, among other things, revealed some problems.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

The Midland County Housing Authority on the surface appears to be a leaky boat bobbing in a stormy sea of resigning board members and violations found by U.S. Housing and Urban Development inspectors.

However, housing authority officials said it should take only about a month to patch the holes.

The five-member board, which manages federal funds for area housing programs, has recently seen one member resign and two members express their intent to resign next month.

David Thurbon, who gave a housing authority status report to Midland County commissioners Tuesday, said he initially intended to not seek another term as board chairman, a two-year term which expired for him last week.

But Thurbon told commissioners that, if necessary, he would be willing to serve another term in order to "maintain continuity on the board."

Board member Carmin Eiker, a Midland attorney, gave no reason for her resignation, Thurbon said. Meanwhile, board members Elizabeth Robinette and Pam Howell said they no longer planned to serve on the board because of business reasons, he said.

Thurbon, though, said the board should have a list of proposed replacements after a June 11 meeting. The appointees must then be approved by county commissioners.

However, filling holes on the board will only be one of the problems to address, Thurbon said.

After a February review of the housing authority, HUD listed five violations in its May 14 report.

"Most of them had to do with paperwork and reporting requirements," he said. "The board feels these are relatively minor and can be corrected in a couple of weeks."

The violations stemmed from improper paperwork procedures related to two housing authority programs, each of which deal with rental assistance for low-income families, Thurbon said.

The problems included improper record keeping and untimely submission of reports, he said.

"It (HUD report) should not affect the programs at all," Thurbon said. "They stated there were no major problems. I don't feel there's any danger of us losing HUD money."

Jerri Westmoreland, housing authority executive director, said the findings listed by HUD should be easy to correct.

"All we need to do is address the findings and go about our business," Ms. Westmoreland said.

The $600,000 rental assistance program helps about 325 families a year, she said.

Ms. Westmoreland said she was not alarmed by the HUD review and findings.

"This is a normal, routine procedure," Ms. Westmoreland said. "It is not an investigation."

Commissioner Durward Wright also said the housing authority did not appear to be in a state of crisis.

"We are definitely concerned with anything that comes up like this," Wright said. "But after hearing Mr. Thurbon's presentation, we feel a whole lot better about it."

In other action Tuesday, commissioners:

- awarded a $13,943 contract to the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens for landscaping at the county's courthouse, annex and library.
- awarded a $64,618 contract to Turf Specialties of Midland for landscaping at the county's cemetery and Culver Youth Home.
- awarded a $13,500 contract to Sun Horticultural Services of Midland for landscaping at the Museum of the Southwest.
- approved allowing the Midland Industrial Development Corp. to pay off $4.25 million in bonds issued for the development of Tuboscope Inc. The bonds were issued in 1982.

JA group gets timely advice

At a Junior Achievement luncheon Tuesday, an economics expert spoke of the need for the oilpatch to keep abreast of global trends.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The Permian Basin, striving to diversify its oil-dependent economy, got some advice from a nationally-respected business expert Tuesday.

Dr. George Kozmetsky, executive associate for economic affairs for the University of Texas System and director of the IC2 Institute, offered his advice at a Junior Achievement luncheon at the Petroleum Club. The luncheon honored administrators, teachers and businesses that have helped the 2,634 students enrolled in JA courses in Midland, Odessa and Big Spring.

He said 1990 was especially significant — marking the beginning and the end of two decades.

"Historically it is during such beginnings and endings that dramatic changes, upheavals and events pose unforeseen and unexpected challenges," he said.

One such challenge facing the Permian Basin, he said, is how this area will cope in a global economy. There are five significant global trends that will impact the Permian Basin's ability to compete, he said.

- Expansion of market-driven economies: Kozmetsky predicted that the world will see an era of "regional federalism" — a global grouping of nations rather than the one world seen by Wendell Wilkes.

Williams, Mosbacher top TARAL 'hit list'

Candidates Clayton Williams, left, and Robert Mosbacher Jr. rank first and second, respectively, on the Texas Abortion Rights Action League's "hit list."

AUSTIN (AP) — Ten Republicans were placed on an election-year hit list Tuesday by the Texas Abortion Rights Action League, which promised that anti-abortion candidates would "feel the heat" come November.

"Now more than ever the pro-choice majority here in Texas is determined to use their votes, their dollars and their time to elect pro-choice candidates," said Phyllis Dunham, TARAL executive director.

GOP candidates blasted the group, saying it favors Democrats.

"This group will be supporting liberal Democrats and opposing conservative Republicans. I'm afraid they will find on election day that they are out of step with the mainstream of Texas," said Mark Sanders, spokesman for GOP lieutenant governor candidate Rob Mosbacher Jr., No. 2 on the TARAL list.

TARAL last month placed GOP gubernatorial hopeful Clayton Williams atop a "TARAL 10" list of candidates it is targeting for defeat.

Added to that list Tuesday were nine more Republicans, including Mosbacher, attorney general hopeful J.E. "Buster" Brown and seven candidates for the Legislature.

Ms. Dunham said the abortion issue offers clear differences between candidates in many races and will be a significant factor in Texas and nationally.

"We're being watched by the nation. This is George Bush's home state," she said. "What happens in Texas on the issue of choice is very significant for what happens in the rest of the nation.

"Those candidates targeted for defeat on the TARAL 10 list will feel the heat. The elections on every level are critical in protecting

850 expected to attend Project Graduation party

With $40,000 to spend, host 'Project Graduation' will throw a fun-and-games bash for the city's high school seniors — sans alcohol or drugs.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Commencement is Thursday, but organizers of Midland's drug- and alcohol-free graduation party say they're prepared to face the onslaught of seniors eager to vent 12 years' worth of school-related steam.

"We're ready to fly," said Cheri Hill, Project Graduation Parent Committee co-chairperson. "We're budgeted for $40,000 and we're not quite there, but we're well on our way."

The party, scheduled for midnight to 5 a.m. at The Midlander health club following graduation, will feature cash giveaways, a casino, and sports tournaments.

Ms. Hill said party fund-raising received a boost this year from the Midland Independent School District, which signed on as an official Project Graduation sponsor.

"When a foundation or business understands that MISD is supporting this, I think they are willing perhaps to give us their ear as well as maybe some bucks," she said. "I think it's (MISD sponsorship) given credibility to Project Graduation. It's only in its second year in Midland."

MISD Superintendent Joe Baressi said the district agreed to sponsor Project Graduation to ensure that party donors can deduct contributions from their taxes.

"This was to ensure that everybody's donation to that would be tax deductible," Baressi said. "The parent organization does not have the Internal Revenue Service standing that the school district does."

Baressi said MISD has not contributed any money to Project Graduation. The district did not assume any insurance liability by sponsoring the party, he said.

Ricardo Torres, MISD executive director of secondary operations, said Project Graduation is worthy of official district support.

"It's a good activity for kids," Torres said, adding that MISD has helped publicize the party on the Midland and Lee high school campuses. "If we can become involved in an alcohol- and drug-free type of activity that the kids will enjoy, then we want to do that."

Torres said the school district supplied party organizers with a mailing list of seniors and their

Preas to make network TV appearance

Staff Report

A Midland high school girl, who escaped death two years ago thanks to a bone marrow transplant, is scheduled to appear with her donor on Good Morning America today.

Heather Preas, 18, and Joan Aldcroft, 44, are being interviewed live via satellite at KMID Channel 2 in Midland for the nationally broadcast television show, said Deann Holcomb, news director for Channel 2.

The segment with Miss Preas and Ms. Aldcroft is set to air about 7:18 a.m., Ms. Holcomb said.

Ms. Aldcroft, who is from Sale, England, a small town just outside of Manchester, arrived in Midland on Sunday so she could attend Miss Preas' graduation from Midland High School on Thursday evening.

This is the first time the two have met.

The chance of finding a compatible donor is roughly 1 in 20,000.

Wilson tops Texas' congressional travel list

DALLAS (AP) — Rep. Charles Wilson, one of the most traveled members of the U.S. House of Representatives, led the Texas congressional delegation in official foreign trips last year.

The Lufkin Democrat, who ranked fourth among his House colleagues in days traveled, spent 46 days overseas in 1989, the Dallas Morning News and Thomas' Roll Call Report Syndicate said.

Wilson took four tax-supported trips in 1989 to the Persian Gulf, Scandinavia, Pakistan and Europe. His staff confirmed only 42 days in foreign travel.

"It comes with the territory," said Wilson, a member of the House Defense Appropriations Subcommittee and the Program and Budget Authorization Subcommittee of the House Intelligence Committee.

"To do your job on these committees, you need to go visit. You can't really make proper decisions without seeing these places. And generally, they're not the garden spots of the world," he said.

The second most traveled Texas congressman in 1989 was Rep. Solomon Ortiz, D-Corpus Christi, who took four overseas trips totaling 37 days, the Morning News reported Tuesday.

Ortiz' staff confirmed only two trips and 28 days in travel to Morocco, Egypt, Portugal, Taiwan, Japan, Korea and the Philippines.

Wilson tied for second among House members for votes missed while traveling, with seven votes missed. Ortiz did not miss a House vote.

A dozen of Texas' 12 House members did not report any foreign business travel last year. Democrat Mickey Leland of Houston died in a plane crash last summer while on an official trip to Ethiopia.

Texas' senators, Democrat Lloyd Bentsen and Republican Phil Gramm, each took one foreign trip last year.

Bentsen led a delegation from the Senate Finance Committee, which he chairs, on a 13-day European tour.

Grand Praire police quick to crack kidnapping caper

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — Quick detective work, an alert merchant and cooperation between police departments helped officers locate a missing 3-month-girl in less than an hour after she was allegedly abducted from a flea market.

Forty-two minutes after Crystal Lee Grau of Arlington was taken from a booth at Trader's Village Monday, she was in the hands of law enforcement officials, Grand Prairie Police Lt. James M. Gatlin said Tuesday.

Two Dallas teen-agers were arrested.

"It's all over but the shouting," Gatlin said. "I think that may be the fastest one."

The infant was recovered unharmed by Dallas police who stopped a pickup truck matching the description of one seen leaving the flea market with two girls, the infant, a man and five teen-age boys.

A merchant who saw the group leaving, identified as Pat York of Arlington, took down the license number of the pickup truck because she had noticed the girls earlier in the day.

"I said, 'Something's not right. Those girls didn't have a baby when they came in,' " Ms. York told The Dallas Morning News.

The infant's mother, Tammy Brown, said she had left her child in the care of her boss at the booth where she worked while she walked to a nearby stall. She said she noticed the girls carrying an infant carrier on her way back.

"I was halfway back to my booth when I seen those girls," Ms. Brown said. "All I could see was the carrier and the top of Crystal's head. I didn't know right away that it was my baby."

When she realized her daughter was gone, she tried to find the girls but lost them in the crowd, she said. She notified security guards. Ms. York turned over the license number to the guards and police.

The two girls, one 14 and the other 15, were transferred Tuesday to the custody of Dallas County authorities, said Lyn Willis, deputy assistant director of the Tarrant County juvenile services division. No formal charges had been filed against them as of late Tuesday afternoon, Gatlin said.

The girls had been held in Tarrant County, where the flea market is located. They live in Dallas County.

A 21-year-old Dallas man who drove the girls to the flea market was questioned by police, as were the five boys. All were released.

PUC puts off cost-overrun ruling

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission postponed Tuesday deciding how much utility owners of the South Texas nuclear project can charge ratepayers for cost overruns at the controversial power plant.

The commission gave cities that would be affected by the decision until Friday to submit written arguments on why the case should be kicked back for further study.

But Commission Chairman Paul Meek indicated he was tired of the delays.

Talking to Mark Davis, an attorney for the city of Houston, Meek said, "Give me something that's concrete, that is worth me staying up all night reading."

"What irritates me is this is more and more of something without any substance. I'm tired of just reading legal jumbo," Meek said.

But Commissioner Jo Campbell defended the cities saying that an administrative law judge's decision in the case was not backed up by the facts.

CHALLENGE: 'Can-do' spirit nurtures growth

(From 1B)

■ Movement toward democracy and individual freedom: This movement heralds an increasing global trend toward entrepreneurship, according to Kozmetsky. These individuals must be encouraged and supported, he added.

■ Creation of new infrastructures: Kozmetsky observed that business services and productivity in the future will depend on lower cost, easy and rapid access to local, national and foreign markets, and instantaneous communication.

He cautioned that, to compete in a global economy, small and medium-sized cities will need to join forces to build regional infrastructures that provide the best possible transportation and immediate communication.

■ Emergence of revolutionary techniques: Developments in such fields as superconductors, lasers, and new materials, are occurring rapidly, and are revolutionary because they reflect fundamental advances in science and are widely diffused.

These new discoveries let nations, regions and individuals develop and utilize them for their own purposes. They also spur new industries and regenerate traditional industries, and create new types of institutional alliances among academia, business and government.

■ Accountable developments: No longer does the government have a "laissez faire" attitude toward new developments. New developments must show concern and respect for the environment and must also contribute to the quality of life.

To absorb these changes in the global market and compete, the Permian Basin needs innovative leadership — not just in government but in business and among educators and volunteers, he said.

There are, he said, four factors needed in the Basin to develop a community technology-based economy:

■ Talent — local entrepreneurs who want to build or expand firms and live in the Permian Basin.

■ Ideas — The region must decide which ideas, or technology, will be the prime movers of the Permian Basin.

■ Capital — The Permian Basin should look to the new Texas Seed Capital Fund, which matches entrepreneurs with business angels, and the Texas Growth Fund, among other sources, for start-up capital.

■ Know-how — Utilize the pool of engineering, legal, accounting, marketing, manufacturing and financial expertise that exists in the Permian Basin to help technology entrepreneurship grow and prosper.

Noting how Texans pride themselves on their "can-do" spirit, Kozmetsky said that should be the foundation for Texans to rethink, reshape and restructure the economy, and they should no longer wait for action from Washington D.C. or Austin.

"During the past five or six years, it has become more and more clear to most of us that Texas and its communities must build their own futures. We know our future lies in the education of our youth, and that we must rethink how to add value to our agriculture, cotton and cattle resources and restructure our oil and gas resources.

"We need to reshape our economic structure through science and technology, thereby improving our educational system at all levels."

That, he said, is why he congratulated Junior Achievement and its supporters and volunteers, because they were investing in the future of the community, state and nation by investing in young leadership.

High winds whip Plains

SUDAN (AP) — A tornado touched down briefly near Earth and winds ripping up to 100 mph shredded barns, knocked over power lines and shattered windows here as severe weather dominated much of the South Plains Tuesday.

No injuries were reported, authorities said.

A resident called police after seeing a tornado on the ground six miles west of Earth at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday and Lubbock National Weather Service radar confirmed the twister moving northeast at 30 mph.

Bill Lacy, a spokesman for the NWS in Lubbock, said his bureau received no other sightings of the funnel cloud and speculated it climbed back into the sky. There were no immediate reports of the twister's damage, authorities said.

Reports of tornado sightings in Sudan and south of Midland could not be confirmed by NWS officials.

More than 20 high-line electricity poles in Sudan were knocked over and a house had all its westward-facing windows blown out by winds gusting up to 100 mph, said Rick Hill, assistant chief of the Sudan Fire Department.

David DeBusk, a spokesman for Lamb County Electric Cooperative said 400 to 500 homes in Sudan were without power Tuesday.

"Don't know if it was a tornado or high winds or what," DeBusk said late Tuesday. "We have a number of people working on it. We are hoping we can restore power before midnight."

Tornado watches were in effect Tuesday for most of the eastern Texas Panhandle and thundershowers and hail blasted Lynn, Lamb, King, Kent, Floyd, Midland and Ector counties.

Staff Report

GREENWOOD — Greenwood's junior high school gifted class has spent May compiling material for inclusion in a time capsule, Greenwood Middle School pupils and teachers recently announced.

The time capsule contains artifacts that class members believe will represent today's culture to the class of the next generation. Also included are predictions of the future, creative projects, photographs and interviews on various subjects.

In a ceremony today, class members will present an envelope to Principal Don Dulan containing the secret location of the time capsule.

The capsule is scheduled to be opened in the year 2020 in the presence of the junior high school gifted students from both generations.

About 850 seniors have signed up to attend the party, which was held last year without official MISD sponsorship. About 600 students attended last year's party, Ms. Hill said.

She said more than $9,000 will be given away at the party, in addition to gift certificates and discount coupons from local businesses.

the right to choose," Ms. Dunham said.

Mosbacher spokesman Sanders said the TARAL list isn't representative of the attitudes of most Texas voters and charged that the group is an ally of Democratic gubernatorial nominee Ann Richards.

"It's certainly not a surprise. TARAL should probably be renamed the Ann Richards Fan Club," he said.

"Rob endorses the plan that the Republicans outlined earlier this spring, which essentially calls for banning sex-selection abortions and requiring parental consent for minors. He is opposed to abortion on demand, but realizes that that position may not be reflected by everyone in the state, and therefore has endorsed these limited restrictions," Sanders said.

Attorney general candidate Brown also criticized TARAL's failure to endorse Republicans. "In my opinion, this issue is way too sensitive of an issue to be used like that for partisan political gains," he said.

Mona Palmer, spokeswoman for GOP gubernatorial candidate Williams, said the campaign had no immediate response.

In releasing the hit list, Ms. Dunham said her group looked for pro-choice Republicans to endorse but couldn't find any in "critical" races. "That does not mean that we will not be endorsing Republicans in other races," she said.

Senate confirmation list shorter by 2

AUSTIN (AP) — McAllen Mayor Othal Brand asked the governor's office on Tuesday to withdraw his controversial appointment to the Agricultural Resources Protection Authority, a spokesman for Gov. Bill Clements said.

Brand touched off criticism in March when, referring to the pesticide chlordane, he said, "Sure, it's going to kill a lot of people, but they may be dying of something else anyway."

Clements' appointments secretary, James Huffines, said Brand asked that his appointment be withdrawn because "he did not want to have a facedown" in the Senate without the support of Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville.

Huffines said Uribe had only recently informed him that he would not support Brand, who lives in Uribe's district.

"We will honor his decision," Huffines said of Brand.

Senate tradition allows members to single-handedly block appointments of nominees who live in their districts by invoking "senatorial courtesy."

Environmental groups had objected to the appointment of Brand, who told a Senate committee he regretted making the remark while attending his first meeting of the new pesticide regulatory board.

Earlier Tuesday, the Senate accepted a request by Clements to withdraw yet another appointee to the Agriculture Resources Protection Authority — Elvin Caraway of Tarrant County.

Senators also confirmed 63 nominees to state positions.

Huffines said Caraway, too, had decided to withdraw rather "than go in and have a floor fight" led by Sen. Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth.

Huffines said Parmer thought Caraway, a lawyer, had a conflict of interest because Caraway's firm had represented an insurance subsidiary of the Texas Farm Bureau.

"Mr. Caraway never handled the account personally, wasn't the least bit familiar with it," Huffines said.

Parmer aide Mike Kelly acknowledged that Parmer originally had cleared Caraway's appointment but consumer groups pointed out that Caraway's law firm had insurance cases with the Farm Bureau.

Nominees confirmed by a 26-0 Senate vote included, by county:

Texas Air Control Board — Calvin Parnell, Brazos; William Quortrup, Collin; Warren Roberts, Tarrant.

State Property Tax Board — Jim Nugent, Potter.

Board of Pardons and Paroles — Hubert Bechtol, Travis; Ken Casner, McLennan; Kenneth Coleman, Walker; Daniel Downs, Harris; Frank Eikenburg, Dallas; Bennie Elmore, Walker; John Escobedo, Walker; Troy Fox, Williamson; Gerald Garrett, Brazoria; Gloria Gibney, Nueces; Ron Givens, Lubbock; James Granberry, Lubbock; Henry Keene, Dallas; Peggy McAdams, Walker; Winona Miles, Travis; Stennett Posey, Williamson; Donn Woolery, Randall; Esther Yao, Harris.

Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse — Mary Parsons, Ector; Joe Ratliff, Harris; Kenneth Anderson Jr., Dallas; Roy English, Tarrant; J. David Nelson, Lubbock; Florence Shapiro, Collin.

Residents of Midland County:

We would like to remind you that Saturday, May 26th is Law Enforcement Appreciation Day at Midland Park Mall. Representatives from the Sheriff's Department will be there to answer your questions about Home and Business Security and to provide information about Crime Prevention.

The Midland County Sheriff's Department SWAT Team will also be there to display tactical equipment and to answer questions about the special purposes of this unit.

We want to encourage everyone to attend and to come by and see us that day. Many Law Enforcement Agencies will be represented and it should be very interesting.

In this high-tech age of electronic media there are many ways to stay informed.

Why then, do so many people still turn to their newspaper as the medium of choice for news and information?

Consider this:

- Newspapers are always ready when you are and fit easily into your schedule.
- Newspapers travel light and allow you to digest information at your own pace.
- Newspapers provide more in-depth coverage and freedom of choice - you select what is important to you.
- And lastly, newspapers give you so much more. Like advice, movies, comics, puzzles, coupons and sales. It's no wonder people from all walks of life love

WEDNESDAY, MAY 30, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Rapid career advancement is indicated. An old friend provides extra assistance in August. Although your workload increases in the fall, so should your income. Do what you can to build savings. Your personal finances require more careful handling than usual. Guard against deception. Marital differences could get 1991 off to a bumpy start. Put your relationship back on track by being more attentive.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: halfback Gale Sayers, actor Clint Walker, actress Meredith McRae, jazz great Benny Goodman.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Payments and collections dominate your thoughts today. An employment situation shows steady improvement. New financial gains are indicated. You find a way to express your feelings for a loved one.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The financial picture comes into focus. A romantic interest is very much on your mind. You see a situation much more clearly now; analyze why something happened. Get your ideas down on paper.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Major changes at work could send profits soaring. Influential people are willing to help you achieve your goals. Do not be afraid to take calculated risks. Financial pressures gradually subside.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Take advantage of a unique opportunity to move closer to a cherished goal. A new approach can increase profits greatly. Engaging in strenuous exercise may not be advisable.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An attorney can help you negotiate an agreement that could mean extra income.. A mystery is solved, thanks to a casual remark from a stranger. A platonic relationship could turn romantic soon.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Inside information can help you make new profits. An older person will become your mentor. A disturbing story may cloud your day. Do everything possible to be of assistance, but first verify the facts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Work harder to attain your goals. Opposition from your mate could cause a showdown. Someone corrects you for your own good. Your finances require careful handling if you are to achieve long-term security.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Distant affairs generate new interest. The support of influential officials is the key to your continued success. Keep up with the latest developments in your field. Special knowledge impresses higher-ups.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An aggressive approach is effective in boosting profits. Encouragement from your romantic partner means the world to you! Show your feelings. A diet may be lacking in nutrients. Check with your doctor.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your creative talents will serve you well today. Make sure your ideas get a fair hearing. Money pressures subside. A social invitation may lead to important new business contacts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Sort out the practical from the impractical. By getting better organized, you will accomplish twice as much. A quarrel may end friendship. Eventually, you will patch things up.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take a conservative approach to spending. Think things through and set your own goals. Others may try to influence you. Family members want to help but do not know what you need.

TODAY'S CHILDREN will be obedient as youngsters but may become rebellious in adolescence. Do not be surprised if these Geminis have an imaginary playmate or two. Later in life, these children may write about their earlier fantasies. Highly sensitive and easily hurt, they need loving reassurance from their parents when they express fear and anxiety.

There may be more to bridge than Talleyrand thought when he remarked to someone who admitted he did not play whist, the ancestor of bridge: "Then you are doomed to a lonely old age, my son." There's a weekly game in Palm Beach, Fla., during the winter season where the average age is over 80. The standard of play, however, remains remarkably proficient.

Witness this gem by Percy Klingenstein, a 94-year-old retired surgeon who still attends weekly conferences at Mt. Sinai Hospital in New York. He held the South cards on this hand and reached a sound contract of four spades.

West led the nine of clubs to East's ace, and the club return was taken by the king. Declarer cashed the king of diamonds, came to hand with a high trump and ruffed a diamond. He returned to hand with the remaining high trump and ruffed another diamond. East overuffed, but was endplayed. Since East did not open the bidding, West surely held the king of hearts, so had East returned a heart, declarer would have played low and held his losers to one trick in each suit except for hearts.

Instead, East returned a club. Declarer ruffed, cashed the ace of diamonds and exited with a diamond. Now West had to lead away from the king of hearts to South's queen and the contract was home.

East thought he could have defeated the contract by refusing to overruff. Klingenstein disagreed. Declarer came to hand with a club ruff and led the ace of diamonds, which East still couldn't ruff. So declarer crossed to the ace of hearts and ruffed another club for his 10th trick!

Glasgow names new hospice for Prince, Princess of Wales

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP) — There's nothing fashionable about being this late, but no one seemed offended.

Prince Charles and Princess Diana finally received a wedding gift from Glasgow, nearly nine years after they were married. The present: naming a hospice after them.

It's named the Prince and Princess of Wales Hospice and took several years to finance and construct.

The royal couple — married July 21, 1981 — officially opened the hospice Tuesday, and spent an hour touring the building and chatting to patients.

Fitzgerald

The jazz singing great was named Commander of Arts and Letters. Culture Minister Jack Lang presented her with a bronze medal attached to a green and white striped ribbon that he placed around her neck.

"I only hope I will continue to make people happy," said Miss Fitzgerald, 72, scheduled to give a concert in Paris on Wednesday.

One of her most popular songs is "I Love Paris" and Fitzgerald has long enjoyed immense popularity in France, which boasts countless jazz buffs, radio programs and small jazz clubs.

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (AP) — Personal memorabilia belonging to Grand Ole Opry star Del Reeves has been stolen from a convention center where he is performing, the singer said Tuesday.

Reeves said the items, stolen last week, included a box of photos and movie posters for two films in which he appeared. The photos reappeared Friday backstage but the posters remain missing, he said.

"The posters were priceless to me," he said. "They can never be replaced."

He said no questions would be asked if the posters are returned. The posters are for the movies "Second Fiddle to a Steel Guitar" and "Las Vegas Hillbillies."

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS, trying to battle back from three seasons as third in evening TV ratings, said Tuesday it will have nine new series next fall. Fox Broadcasting said it'll go to a five-night-a-week schedule.

Fox also said it is moving the hit "The Simpsons" to head-on Thursday competition with NBC's "The Cosby Show."

And Fox's shows will air on Thursdays-through Mondays. It had been expected to add Wednesdays and Fridays to its current Saturday-through-Monday lineup.

Fox, which also said it would air a new Sunday sitcom about an interracial marriage called "True Colors," announced nine new series. To make room, it axed one of its original series, "21 Jump Street," and such others as "Alien Nation," "Booker," and "The Outsiders."

CBS' new lineup, which includes a comic-book hero and an action series whose heroes fight polluters, was described by CBS Entertainment president Jeff Sagansky as a starting move in the network's road to ratings recovery.

It also gives CBS four nights of comedies.

CBS' roster includes five new hour-long series; four new sitcoms and a comedy once on NBC, "The Hogan Family." It also has a pre-cable movie package of such hits as "Born on the Fourth of July" and "Do The Right Thing."

The low-rated "Saturday Night With Connie Chung" will move to Mondays with a different format and name — "Face to Face With Connie Chung." Two test runs of the new version got high ratings during the May ratings sweeps.

But CBS axed the Vietnam War series "Tour of Duty," the venerable "Falcon Crest," whose demise was announced last week, and such far newer ones as "The Famous Teddy Z," "City" and "Sydney."

However, Sagansky said "Paradise" may be renewed and "Wiseguy" is in backup status.

CBS' new sitcoms are the movie spinoff "Uncle Buck," the blue-collar "Lenny," "Four Alarm Family," about a widowed firefighter with four kids, and "Evening Shade," starring Burt Reynolds as an ex-football star who moves his family back to the small Arkansas town of his boyhood.

Edward Woodward of CBS' late "The Equalizer" will return in the hour-long "Over My Dead Body" as a burnt-out novelist paired with a young obituary writer played by Jessica Lundy.

CBS' other new hour-long entries are "The Flash," based on the comic book crime-fighter; "WIOU," about the cutthroat world of local TV, and "The Hammersmiths," a family drama with Lucie Arnaz.

There also will be "The Green Machine," the first network drama in which the good guys battle those who would harm planet Earth.

In addition to "True Colors," Fox's other sitcoms are "Parker Lewis Can't Lose," about high school life; "Get a Life," starring Chris Elliott as a 30-year-old newspaper delivery boy; "Good Grief," about undertaking; and "Babes," about three sisters in a cramped New York apartment.

As nutrition, children's cereals controversial

By Rena Coyle
Copley News Service

To me, cereals are a big area of controversy in the area of kids' nutrition.

Children's television programming is overrun with cartoon-style commercials that easily sell youngsters on the various brands of cereal. Then it is left to the parent to contend with a whining child at the supermarket's cereal aisle.

Behind many of these catchy cereal names is little else. Chock-full of sugars and made into cunning shapes, the products are hard for your 4- or 5-year-old to pass by.

In all fairness to the cereal manufacturers, they haven't just fooled the kids, they have fooled the adults as well. Hidden behind all the cereal with healthy-sounding names lies nutritional information that tells a different story.

Not long ago I taught a cooking class with nutritionist Pat Messing of the Boston area. The objective was to show the kids and their parents what is behind a label.

We started our supermarket tour on the cereal aisle. After locating the ingredient lists of the kids' favorite cereals, we realized very quickly that most of the cereals with those funny names or catchy shapes had little more to offer than great illustrations. Many of these cereals were full of sugar and little else.

Before your children begin cooking, be sure to discuss these safety hints with them.

- Read the recipe thoroughly with your children, and discuss any steps or directions they may not understand. Decide on the best time for them to cook in the kitchen.
- Place all utensils and ingredients on the counter before starting to cook.
- Always keep oven mitts and pot holders by the side of the stove. Always wear oven mitts when lifting a hot pan off the burner or removing one from the oven.
- Turn pot handles inward toward center of the stove.
- Tie back long hair, wear old clothes and roll up loose sleeves.
- The last step in cooking is cleaning up!

THE NEXT surprise for the parents was granola-type cereals, bearing those wholesome-sounding names. Granola hit the charts long before the oat-bran craze and was thought to be a healthier alternative to other cereals. It didn't take long before the cereal section was full of brands whose titles claimed health and fiber were hidden in their boxes.

Take a careful look at the ingredient lists, and you will find that many of these granola-type cereals contain a large amount of sugar. Now the word sugar may not appear first on the list, but it may appear three times under different names. And if you added the sweetening categories together, sugar indeed would be the first ingredient.

Making your own cereals is not the only answer. There are commercial brands that are good. But you really must take a good long look at what is out on the market and make your own good decision.

In fact, Pat suggests eating the Frosted Mini Wheat cereal as a good alternative to cookies or other sweets as an after-school snack. And as for commercial granolas, Mueslix is a good choice.

By getting your kids involved with making their own cereal, you may have a better chance in steering them away from the sugary commercial brands.

Here is a recipe for a granola cereal that your children can get their hands into. By making your own hearty granola, you can change the ingredients to fit your own family's personal favorites.

Also included are recipes for a granola bar and for a breakfast cookie. Both can use either a commercial granola or your own. Next time you're in the store, compare these recipes with the ingredient lists provided on the commercial cereal brands.

HOMEMADE GRANOLA

5 cups old-fashioned rolled oats
1 cup wheat germ
1 cup grated coconut
1 tablespoon ground cinnamon
1 cup slivered almonds
⅓ cup vegetable oil
⅔ cup honey
1 cup raisins
½ cup dried apricots, cut into thin strips

Preheat oven to 300 degrees.

Combine oil and honey in mixing bowl and whisk together. Pour mixture over oat mixture and toss with wooden spoon until all of the oat mixture is coated.

Put oven mitts on and carefully place baking pan in oven and bake 30 minutes, or until mixture turns a golden brown color. When ready, put oven mitts on and carefully remove pan from oven and place on heat-proof surface. Turn oven off.

Stir granola mixture with wooden spoon until it has cooled; add raisins and apricots, then toss. Place granola in airtight container and use as desired. This makes a great dry snack as well as cereal.

GRANOLA BREAKFAST COOKIES

6 tablespoons margarine
1 cup brown sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
2 cups granola
½ cup wheat germ

Turn oven on to 350 degrees.

Place margarine and sugar in bowl. Cream with electric mixer until blended. Stop mixer and add eggs and vanilla. Turn mixer on low speed and begin to blend. It will look soupy, but that's OK.

Add half the flour and blend, then add remaining flour and baking soda, then blend until smooth.

Using a tablespoon, spoon mixture out of bowl and drop onto cookie sheets.

Put oven mitts on and carefully place one of the cookie sheets in oven and bake 10 to 12 minutes, or until cookies turn golden brown. Put oven mitts on and carefully place cookie sheet on cooling rack, and place other cookie sheet in oven and bake.

GRANOLA BARS

2 tablespoons oil
½ cup (1 stick) butter
⅓ cup brown sugar
¼ cup all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon vanilla
5 cups granola

Using paper towel, dab oil and rub evenly over sides and bottom of baking pan.

Put butter in saucepan and place on stove over medium heat. Let butter melt. Turn heat off and carefully remove saucepan from stove.

Add granola and stir very well to coat granola with butter mixture. When you think it is completely coated, check bottom of bowl one more time.

Spoon granola into prepared baking pan. Press flat using back of spoon or your hands.

Put oven mitts on and carefully place baking pan in oven to bake 15 to 20 minutes, until top is golden brown.

Wearing oven mitts, carefully transfer pan to cooling rack and let cool completely (at least 30 minutes) before cutting.

Using your knife, cut granola into 4 strips lengthwise and 4 strips crosswise. Remove bars from pan with metal spatula. If you like crispier bars, let them bake an additional 5 minutes.

NEW YORK (AP) — Sick of oat bran, but worried about eating "healthy?"

Nancy Wellman, president of the American Dietetic Association in Chicago, says Americans want to believe they have entered the age of hyper-nutrition. However, she says, there no quick fixes — and no magic foods.

A recent Gallup survey commissioned by the American Dietetic Association and the Food Information Council, a non-profit organization based in Washington, D.C., says 95 percent of Americans believe balance, variety and moderation are the keys to healthy eating.

"The poll shows Americans know about nutrition and health," Wellman said, "but when it comes to translating facts into food choices, most still opt for quick fixes and the latest health fads."

For example, 52 percent of adults reported increasing consumption of oat bran, and 48 percent said they were using more vitamin supplements.

Yet when asked if they were increasing anything else in their diet due to health concerns, only 8 percent reported eating more vegetables, and only 6 percent said they were consuming more fruits or fruit juices.

Results of the Gallup survey were announced at a press conference here. The survey results were based on telephone interviews with a randomly selected national sample of 772 adults, 18 years of age and older.

Sixty-seven percent of the survey respondents said they believe there are "good" and "bad" foods.

Thomas Stenzel, executive director of the Food Information Council, says the perception of "good" and "bad" food leads consumers to "needlessly eliminate" foods they perceive as bad — including red meat and dairy products.

Wellman says red meat is a valuable source of iron; dairy foods are an important source of calcium.

"In searching for the 'perfect' food, many people lose sight of the big picture," Wellman says. "What's important is the nutritional adequacy of the total diet over time, not whether individual foods are 'good' or 'bad' in terms of fat or other nutrients."

DEAR ABBY

Woman's obesity long time load to bear

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: So "Slim and Satisfied" thinks no one would tell an obese person, "Gee, you're fat! Why don't you go on a diet?" Well, it's happened to me dozens of times. Total strangers have stopped me on the street and said, "You have such a pretty face, have you ever tried — (Weight Watchers, Optifast, Nutri-System, Overeaters Anonymous, TOPS, Diet Center, Jenny Craig, hypnosis, or that wonderful doctor who does stomach-stapling surgery)?"

Van Buren

I've had people come up to me in restaurants and say, "Do you really think you should be eating that?" (The "that" could be anything from a salad to dessert; they don't think a fat person should be eating anything, period.)

Hairdressers and makeup specialists have told me that it's pointless to bother about my hair or makeup, weighing as much as I do. And buying clothes is a nightmare. I either order mine by mail or have them made by a seamstress. If I enter a clothing store to buy a gift for someone, a salesperson is sure to approach me and say, "Sorry, we don't carry your size here."

I broke my arm in a car accident two years ago, and while waiting in the emergency room, a doctor appeared and said, "Boy, you really should lose some weight!" As if my weight had caused my broken arm! Most physicians believe that all fat people are lazy, weak-willed and undisciplined, rather than people who could be suffering from a genetic or metabolic problem.

I am 36 years old, and have been on more diets than I can count. A pediatrician put me on Metrecal when I was 8; another doctor gave me a 600-calorie-per-day diet when I was 11; still another put me in the hospital for a medically supervised fast when I was 13.

For the past year, I've been working with a great counselor who understands obesity. She has helped me more than all the diet doctors and weight-loss groups combined. I am learning to understand the connection between eating and hunger, which was lost in all those years of bingeing and dieting.

I know I'll never be thin because I'm genetically programmed to be fat — but I hope to find my natural weight through a program of learning to eat from hunger.

I hate exercising, but I do it every day, because I know it's important (for both fat and thin people) for health reasons.

Abby, you've done a terrific job in educating the public about obesity and discrimination against fat people. You have helped fat people stop hating themselves and to understand that they have a physical problem — not a lack of willpower. I know this is too long for your column and you'll have to trim it, but please try to print some of it. I speak for so many people. — LOOKING BEYOND LOOKS

DEAR LOOKING: I haven't trimmed a word, because every word you've written is essential to your message. Please write again when your mission has been accomplished — as I know it will be. I want to print your success story as an inspiration to others who are also "Looking Beyond Looks."

DEAR ABBY: Years ago, you had a piece in your column about "children's little hands" — I can't remember all of it, but it contained some wonderful advice for parents who are raising small children. It said, "Never remake a bed after a child has done his best to make it — no matter how bad the job is."

I just loved that piece, but I can't find it anywhere. Will you please run it again? It was one of your best. — LOU HARMON, HAZELTON, IDAHO

DEAR LOU: That piece ran in 1981. It was titled:

A CHILD'S TEN COMMANDMENTS
TO PARENTS

1. My hands are small; please don't expect perfection whenever I make a bed, draw a picture or throw a ball. My legs are short; please slow down so that I can keep up with you.

2. My eyes have not seen the world as yours have; please let me explore safely. Don't restrict me unnecessarily.

3. Housework will always be there. I'm only little for a short time — please take time to explain things to me about this wonderful world, and do so willingly.

4. My feelings are tender; please be sensitive to my needs. Don't nag me all day long. (You wouldn't want to be nagged for your inquisitiveness.) Treat me as you would like to be treated.

5. I am a special gift from God; please treasure me as God intended you to do, holding me accountable for my actions, giving me guidelines to live by and disciplining me in a loving manner.

6. I need your encouragement to grow. Please go easy on the criticism; remember, you can criticize the things I do without criticizing me.

7. Please give me the freedom to make decisions concerning myself. Permit me to fail, so that I can learn from my mistakes. Then someday I'll be prepared to make the kinds of decisions life requires of me.

8. Please don't do things over for me. Somehow that makes me feel that my efforts didn't quite measure up to your expectations. I know it's hard, but please don't try to compare me with my brother or my sister.

9. Please don't be afraid to leave for a weekend together. Kids need vacations from parents, just as parents need vacations from kids. Besides, it's a great way to show us kids that your marriage is very special.

10. Please take me to Sunday school and church regularly, setting a good example for me to follow. I enjoy learning more about God.

— DR. KEVIN LEMAN

DEAR ABBY: I am also a twin, born on Dec. 22. If we didn't hear, "This is for your birthday and Christmas, too," we heard, "This is for both of you."

Sound familiar, twins? — JIM DENSMORE

DEAR JIM: Sounds familiar.

Consumers give 'thumbs up' to new veggie burger

DECATUR, Ill. (AP) — Residents of this central Illinois city known for its soybean industry are getting a chance to taste new soybean burgers — and the reviews have been good.

"The taste is excellent and there's no cholesterol, so you have an unbeatable combination," says Linda Bates, who arranges in-store tasting demonstrations for the local Cub Foods grocery store. "With ketchup, onion and mustard, you'd think you're eating a real hamburger."

The Archer Daniels Midland Co. is the firm that is marketing the soybean product that can be formed into hamburger-like patties. Company officials hope that test-market results in Decatur will help set the example for other potential markets.

"If everyone in America wants a veggie burger, we can deliver it," says Ron Ferrari, sales manager in ADM's protein specialties division. A facility to make the product is already operating, and distribution to a chain of Soviet restaurants called Pettina has begun, he said.

"The response has been overwhelming, first in the Soviet Union and now here," Ferrari said.

In Decatur, cafeterias at ADM and a Caterpillar Inc. factory, as well as the Cub Foods store and a hospital, have been serving the patties.

Bates says she doesn't think the fact that Decatur is known as "the soybean capital of the world" is affecting people's responses.

"You can't in all fairness compare this to a nice, juicy burger, but it is really very, very good-tasting," she said.

The product is sold in 1-pound packages of five pre-formed patties and in dry mix, Bates said. The dry veggie burger mix needs addition of water to make it resemble ground beef.

Chris Cutler, food and nutrition services director at Decatur Memorial Hospital, said the veggie burger cooks a little faster and doesn't shrink like hamburger because there is much less fat. "In eight days we went through 858 veggie burgers," she said.

According to ADM and the U.S. Department of Agriculture: a veggie burger has no cholesterol, 4.5 grams of fat, 140 calories and four grams of fiber, while an 80 percent lean hamburger has 77 milligrams of cholesterol, 17 grams of fat, 245 calories and no fiber.

The new veggie burgers are different from earlier meat substitutes made from texturized vegetable protein, says Ferrari, and do not have the objectionable beany taste of the earlier product.

ADM makes veggie burgers by crushing soybeans, removing the oil and forming high-protein flakes. Some vegetable fat and flavorings are added to give the product its texture and taste.

The company says it believes the veggie burger mix will be a popular protein source in countries where meat is expensive or difficult to obtain, or anywhere people are concerned about health or are vegetarians.

'Dolphin Safe' symbol displayed

Staff Report

Watch for new "Dolphin Safe" symbols on all H.J. Heinz Company products in stores this summer. The latest Heinz product to sport the new symbol is 9-Lives tuna products sold by Heinz Pet Products Co.

This upholds the announcement April 12, in which Hienz — including the StarKist Seafood Company — became the first major company to adopt a "Dolphin Safe" tuna policy. The sweeping new policy has taken the lead in saving dolphin lives and protecting dolphins from injury or harassment in association with tuna fishing.

The policy implemented states: "H.J. Heinz refuses to purchase any tuna caught in association with dolphins. In addition, it will not buy any fish caught with gill or drift nets, which are recognized by the government and environmental groups as dangerous to marine life."

April 13, the American Humane Association applauded "Heinz' historic new policy and commendable step in corporate environmentalism" and encouraged other companies to follow suit.

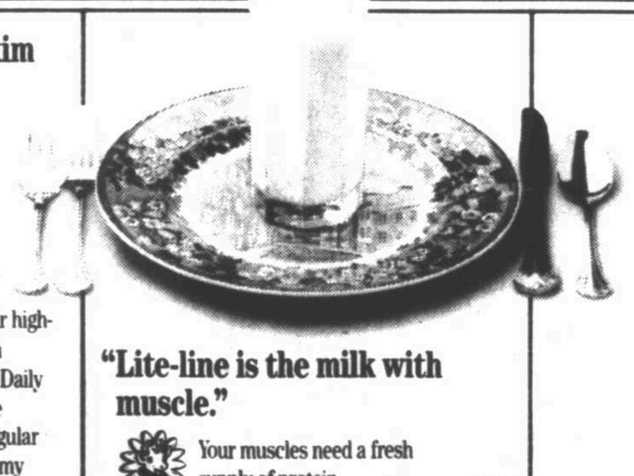
"MY LITE-LINE® SKIM MILK IS ENERGIZED FOR ENERGETIC PEOPLE."

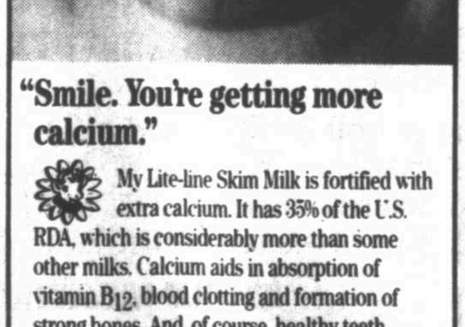
"Good nutrition. Good taste."

By adding extra protein to Lite-line, Borden has made a skim milk that tastes better than any other skim milk. And even though it has 33% fewer calories and 87% less fat than regular milk, it's still perfect for cooking. What more could you ask for? Good for your body, good for cooking, and just plain good!

"Lite-line. The fortified skim that doesn't skimp on nutrients."

Everybody knows that all Borden Milk is loaded with good nutrients for your body. But my Lite-line Protein Fortified Skim Milk was specially developed for active people who need more nutrients for their high-energy lifestyle. There's 25% more protein — a full 25% of your U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance (U.S. RDA). There is 20% more riboflavin and 16% more calcium than regular milk. So if you're really on the go, go for my Borden Lite-line Protein Fortified Skim Milk.





"Smile. You're getting more calcium."

My Lite-line Skim Milk is fortified with extra calcium. It has 35% of the U.S. RDA, which is considerably more than some other milks. Calcium aids in absorption of vitamin B_{12}, blood clotting and formation of strong bones. And, of course, healthy teeth, which make for a beautiful smile.

"Lite-line is the milk with muscle."

Your muscles need a fresh supply of protein every day for growth and maintenance. And protein is needed to help the body resist disease and for transporting nutrients to your cells. That's why my Lite-line Skim Milk is fortified with 25% more protein than regular milk.

"I'm your guarantee of quality."

Since the 1930s, I've been Borden's symbol of premium quality dairy products. You can only be sure you're getting the best if you see my picture on the carton. So pick up some Borden Milk and I'll see you at breakfast.

Elsie

"Get to know B12 and his friends."

Lite-line Protein Fortified Skim Milk has 15% of the U.S. RDA of B_{12}, which is responsible for a healthy nervous system. But there are some lesser-known, but just as important, nutrients in milk, too. There's 10% of the U.S. RDA of vitamin A for good vision, and 30% of the U.S. RDA of riboflavin for obtaining energy from food. There's more of them all in Lite-line Skim Milk. So drink to your good health.

Cowboy cuts

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys of the NFL got their roster down to 85 players on Tuesday by cutting two free agents.

The released players included Greg Stumon, linebacker, from Southern Arkansas, who played in the Canadian Football League the last four seasons, and Karl Burnice, an offensive lineman from Oregon Tech, who was on the developmental roster last year.

The Cowboys will take 80 players to training camp.

Rozier arrested

DICKINSON (AP) — Houston Oilers running back Mike Rozier remained free on a personal recognizance bond Tuesday after an early morning freeway shooting.

Rozier

Rozier, 29, was charged with unlawful possession of a weapon, while a friend, Brent Flowers, 26, was charged with reckless conduct after shots were fired from the Nissan truck in which they were traveling on Interstate 45.

Off-duty Dickinson Police Officer Phil Tracy reported seeing a shot fired from the truck as it passed the officer on the freeway at 12:30 a.m.

Fellow Oilers running back Alonzo Highsmith was driving the truck. He was not arrested, officials said.

Police recovered a 9-mm revolver under the back seat of the truck where Rozier was sitting. Rozier told Tracy he owned the gun, Ms. Campbell said.

Struggling Mets boot Johnson

■ The New York Mets, mired in fourth place, fired manager Davey Johnson who guided the club to a 20-22 season this spring.

Associated Press

CINCINNATI (AP) — Davey Johnson, who led the New York Mets to the 1986 World Series championship and was one of the winningest managers in baseball, was fired Tuesday as his talented team struggled below .500.

Bud Harrelson, the third base coach, was named as Johnson's replacement.

"I thought the club was underachieveing and needed to go in a new direction," general manager Frank Cashen said at a news conference prior to the Mets' game against the Cincinnati Reds. "Part of the blame is certainly mine. Part of the blame has to be with the organization and part of the blame has to be with the team. It's not all Davey's."

"I have very little experience in letting managers go," he said, speaking in a low, somber tone. "If I had to let Davey go, it's great to have somebody of Bud Harrelson's stripe in the organization."

The Reds spoiled Harrelson's debut, beating the Mets 2-1.

The Mets, projected by many to win the National League East, were 20-22 and six games behind Pittsburgh when Johnson became the first major league manager to be fired this season.

"Davey seemed a little bit relieved when I told him," Cashen said. "It was kind of like he knew it was coming."

Johnson immediately left for his Winter Park, Fla., home. Reached at Orlando International Airport, he said: "I wasn't given a reason for my dismissal ... and I didn't ask for one."

"I would have liked to have met with the ballplayers to say goodbye but they (management) didn't want me to stay around," he told Larry Guest of the Orlando Sentinel. "I knew this was coming since last year. It was just a matter of when. I have no regrets."

The Mets, he said, "will get everything turned around. I'm sorry I won't be part of it. I'm not comfortable about what happened today. ... But I am comfortable about coming home. I was beginning to like New York, even though I'm still just a cracker boy."

Three hours before the start of Tuesday night's game, Harrelson was sitting in the manager's chair at Riverfront Stadium making out the lineup card.

"I just had a meeting with the players," he said. "We discussed the (team) rules that have been in existence since 1984, which I think players really didn't pay attention to this season.

"I think they agree they have been abusing the set-down rules for a while," he said. "I think they agree it was in the best interest of the club to start living up to those rules."

The 47-year-old Johnson was selected Mets manager during the 1983 World Series and led them longer than anyone else in team history.

He inherited a club that had not finished above fifth-place for seven straight years and turned them around to average 96 victories a year; they never finished worse than second during his tenure.

Johnson led the team to the 1986 World Series championship in seven games over Boston and to a division championship in 1988, where the Mets lost in seven games to Los Angeles in the playoffs.

But rumors of his dismissal began late last year when the favored Mets failed to win the division despite stars such as Dwight Gooden, Darryl Strawberry and Howard Johnson.

Only Cashen, who has known Johnson since their Baltimore days, was able to keep him as manager after 1989.

Johnson was known, and often criticized, for being a laid-back manager who pretty much left his players alone. But with the Mets not performing up to expectations, there was talk that the team needed more of a hands-on, motivator.

"We wanted to give Davey every chance to turn it around. Unfortunately, he didn't. Things were the same," Harazin said.

In Harrelson, the Mets get someone who is best known as the former player who fought with Pete Rose in the 1973 playoffs against Cincinnati. He was a two-time All-Star and a spirited shortstop and the Mets hoped he could again spark the team.

Cashen held a team meeting and said he told his players, "I still feel we can win this thing."

"We talked a little about underachieveing, we talked a little bit about fire in the belly, and we talked about some other things," he said. "Principally, we tried to refocus this team on winning, because winning is what this is all about."

Portland win good for 3-2 series edge

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — Clyde Drexler emerged from a playoff shooting slump to score 32 points, including the go-ahead free throws with 34 seconds left, and the Portland Trail Blazers beat the Phoenix Suns 120-114 Tuesday night for a 3-2 lead in the Western Conference finals.

The Blazers, who increased their homecourt record to 9-0 in the playoffs, will advance to the NBA championship series for the first time in 13 years with a victory Thursday night in Phoenix.

Phoenix, which lost for the 20th straight time in Portland, trailed by as many as 12 points in the first half before rallying to take a 106-101 lead with 6:23 left. A four-point play — a 3-pointer by Drexler and a free throw by Kevin Duckworth on the play — helped bring Portland back.

The Trail Blazers tied it 109-109 on a short jumper by Terry Porter with 4:59 to go. Phoenix had four chances to regain the lead before Jerome Kersey's two free throws put Portland ahead with 2:54 left.

After Kevin Johnson's missed shot, Drexler's dunk on a fastbreak made it 113-109 with 2:30 to play.

Mark West made one of two free throws with 1:53 to go before Dan Majerle scored inside to make it 113-112 with 1:16 left.

Buck Williams missed a shot for Portland before Tom Chambers made two free throws for a 114-113 Phoenix lead with 47 seconds to play.

The Trail Blazers regained the lead when Drexler was fouled by Majerle and made both free throws.

After Majerle missed a shot for Phoenix, Jeff Hornacek grabbed the rebound, but lost the ball in a scramble. Williams was fouled on the play and gave Portland a 117-114 lead with 15 seconds left.

Heavens! Angels win again

■ Midland's two-run ninth sent Arkansas to its third straight slip-from-ahead loss here.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland's recipe for success? Simple.

One part hot Jim Aylward, one part lazy Arkansas forkball. And that serves up three wins in a row.

Aylward has put things together at the plate this week. His two-out single in the bottom of the ninth provided for a 6-5 come-from-behind win for the Angels, winners of five of eight this season against the Travelers.

As has been the case in recent games, all the credit cannot be given to just one man.

Aylward's game winning single would not have been made possible had it not been for a dramatic home run by Steve DeAngelis.

With the Angels down 5-4 going into the bottom of the ninth, Wiley Lee opened the inning by striking out against Arkansas reliever Jose Vargas.

BILL PRICE

Real major league season has begun

Price

■ Nolan Ryan is on the disabled list for at least another six days. Jeff Russell tells Bobby Valentine he thinks maybe surgeons ought to cut open his right elbow to remove a few bone chips.

Harold Baines' knees are wobbly, Scott Coolbaugh is sent down to Oklahoma City after Steve Buechele returns from the 21-day DL, Kevin Brown doesn't think he's throwing well (we know he's not), Bobby Witt is still in the rotation and the Texas Rangers are 13 games out of first place at the end of May.

All Rangers fans need to see now is that Texas has called pitcher Brad Arnsberg up from OKC. Oops, they did and we're dead.

The only thing that could be possibly be worse is being forced to work with a Pittsburgh Pirates fan right now, while my cherished St. Louis Cardinals are mired in the cellar of the National League East. One such personality roams these offices and methinks his life expectancy is short if he doesn't quit rubbing it in that the Bucs are in first place.

■ "Baseball the way it ought to be." Once upon a time that was the New York Mets' slogan. After guiding the Mets to the 1986 World Series championship, manager Davey Johnson got the axe Tuesday.

Alright, so New York entered last night's game in Cincinnati sporting a 20-22 record, good for fourth place. But it should be considered that the Mets had 45 errors going into last night, worst in the National League.

I suppose the Mets front office has started subscribing to George Steinbrenner's school of though — when all else fails, fire the manager.

Apparently, Mets officials figure to appease fans by replacing Johnson with Bud Harrelson. The fans loved Harrelson when he played shortstop for New York from 1966 to 1977, even though he has yet to manage a big league game. Johnson's overall managerial record with the Mets was 575-395, and he averaged more than 90 wins a season in each of his six full years at the New York helm.

The general train of thought must be to protect that gate receipt, no matter what.

■ Speaking of managers, it seems the umpires have lost no love for Baltimore's Frank Robinson, the Cubs' Don Zimmer and Milwaukee's Tom Trebelhorn.

Both Robinson and Zimmer said after the games that the individuals umps who were responsible for the ejections were "liars." Both should expect to receive nice little letters from their respective league offices in the next day or two, outlining payment schedules for what will probably be big fines.

■ And while we're on the subject of fines, it seems that the Los Angeles Dodgers and Pirates decided to recite a little chin music to each other Monday.

In the fifth inning Pittsburgh's Bob Walk decided Hubie Brooks needed a HBP by his name in the box score, and in the bottom half Tim Belcher brushed Don Slaught back just enough to anger the Buccaneer dugout. Buc releiver Randy Kramer nearly hit Belcher when he came up in the sixth, resulting in a bench-clearing near-brawl and ejections for both Kramer and Pittsburgh manager Jim Leyland.

And Sunday saw the San Diego Padres and the Mets play army, as former Ranger Greg Harris nailed Met Kevin Elster with a pitch. The pile-up that resulted at the mound after Elster charged Harris was highlighted by the teams' bullpen staffs running single file to join the fun.

■ Collectively, what does it all mean? That the real baseball season is at hand.

For starters, Texas fans won't be forced to suffer the agony of the obligatory terrible second half the Rangers are notorious for playing. Texas followers may rest assured that the team will be out of the race by the All-Star Game, and can try to find a winner to root on to the Series.

As for ejections and brawls, it only means that the contenders are pulling away from the pretenders, and everyone involved is suddenly taking things a little more seriously. And Johnson? Well it's quite possible that the Rangers will have an opening sometime in the near future.

ANGELS: Hero again Alyward

From 1C

Ruben Amaro, who finished with an 0-for-4 performance at the plate, grounded out to second. The Angels were down to their last batter.

But when you're last batter is Steve DeAngelis, you don't sweat too much. The Angel designated hitter tagged a Vargas pitch over the right field fence to knot the game up at 5-5. Ironically, right about the time of DeAngelis' blast, lightning struck from a thunderstorm south of town.

The stage had been set for Aylward.

Almost.

Before Aylward arrived at the plate for his turn at being hero, Mark Howie hit a sharp grounder to third. Arkansas' Scott Melvin's throw to first was short and Howie was safe.

Kevin Flora came in to run for Howie and promptly stole second. Again, lightning.

Then Aylward nailed a Vargas forkball for the single that brought in Flora for the winning run.

Young, Connell take experience to the classroom

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Thirty-two more years of experience will be missing from Midland Independent School District athletics this autumn as the changing of the guard among local prep programs continues.

Midland High girl's basketball coach Jane Young will take her 14 years of MHS courtside experience into the classroom this fall.

And Midland Lee tennis coach Bobby Connell is also headed toward a strict classroom assignment, his 18 years as Rebel net coach in tow.

Neither move was announced in an official public forum. Young, who has already been replaced as head girl's coach at MHS by boy's junior varsity basketball coach Jim Raughton, was announced to be stepping down only as recently as the Bulldog athletic banquet, May 21.

Connell made his departure from the tennis post known during the Region I tennis tournament the last week in April. His replacement has not yet been announced.

Along with Lee coaches Ernie Johnson (baseball) and Paul Stuckler (boy's basketball) who each retired this spring after 29 years coaching in the MISD, it brings the total years of MHS coaching experience that will be missing come fall to 90.

However, both Connell and Young say there may still be coaching in their futures.

"Definitely," said Young. "I haven't sat down and looked at the possibilities, but there very easily could be some coaching in my future."

"But I've coached for 14 years at Midland High, and I felt like I was ready to do more things in my life at this time. It was very difficult to make that decision to step down," she said.

"It's the values and the standards I've held that have been so important to me. I never tried to be anything but myself as a coach. And I put a lot of myself into coaching."

Young said she was not certain whether she would continue on as a health and physical education teacher within the MISD.

Connell, who said he is still "supposed to be teaching health at Midland Lee", admitted he was not sure whether confinement to the classroom would be to his liking.

"I think it will be hard leaving my coaching duties after having done it so long," Connell said. "But there could certainly be more coaching in my future.

"It just depends how much I find I like straight teaching," he said. "Then I'll decide which direction to go."

N.Y. Times News Service

PARIS — Boris Becker went out without answering the bang of his opponent's backhand and Stefan Edberg provided little more than a whimper, as the top two seeds, neither of them clay-court afficionados, were ambushed Tuesday by teen-agers in the opening round of the French Open.

The mis-events of the day struck a double blow to traditional Grand Slam hierarchy: never before had both the No. 1 and No. 2 seeds been eliminated in the first round of a Grand Slam event.

The indignities dealt Edberg and Becker were especially punishing because either man, had he won this tournament, could have supplanted the absent Ivan Lendl, who is off preparing for Wimbledon, as the world's top player.

Edberg made the wrong sort of history in his woeful performance against Sergi Bruguera, a wispy teen-ager from Barcelona, Spain.

Edberg faltered and fumbled to a 6-4, 6-2, 6-1 loss on center court and wrote himself into the French Open record book as the first top seed in tournament history to suffer defeat in a first-round match.

Becker's play Tuesday was just as fractured as Edberg's, and although he won the first set, he was thoroughly neutralized thereafter by the multitude of aces and lightning groundstrokes from 18-year-old Goran Ivanisevic of Yugoslavia in their 5-7, 6-4, 7-5, 6-2 encounter.

Becker tends to develop feet of clay on this surface that most tests his shallow reserve of patience.

Becker has a disaffection for early rounds, and he felt his inability to raise the level of his game to equal Ivanisevic's fever pitch cost him the match.

"For him every round is like a final," said Becker, who has yet to collect a title on clay. "But for me, it's impossible to play my best in the first round."

Although Becker was convinced the match would have had a different outcome had it happened later in the tournament, he didn't think Ivanisevic had merely been lucky.

"He had two aces every service game and by the fourth set nobody in this draw could stop him," said Becker, who had hoped the youngster's participation in Yugoslavia's victory at last week's World Team Cup competition would cause fatigue problems Tuesday.

Instead, the longer the 3 hour 3 minute match went, the better Ivanisevic played.

"Today I concentrated for all four sets and I surprised myself," said Ivanisevic.

Ranger spiral reaches nine

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers suffered a club record ninth consecutive home setback Tuesday night, losing to the Boston Red Sox 2-1 as Roger Clemens scattered seven hits in eight innings and Carlos Quintana doubled home the winning run with two out in the eighth.

Dwight Evans opened the inning with a single off Charlie Hough (5-3), who yielded seven hits. Tony Pena, who homered in the fourth for Boston's first run, forced him and Ellis Burks flied out before Quintana doubled off the top of the wall in left-center. It was his 14th RBI of the season, nine of them coming with two out.

Clemens (8-2) struck out eight and walked two in winning his fourth consecutive start. He boosted his American League-leading strikeout total to 69. Jeff Reardon pitched the ninth for his fifth save.

Texas, which has lost its last five games overall, took a 1-0 lead in the second inning when Julio Franco doubled and scored on Harold Baines' single.

The Rangers threatened in the sixth when Ruben Sierra singled but was thrown out when he tried to score on Franco's double. Texas squandered another opportunity in the seventh when the Red Sox pitched out on an attempted suicide squeeze and pinch-runner Cecil Espy was tagged out.

The Red Sox wasted bases-loaded situations in the first and third before Pena's leadoff homer in the fourth, his fourth of the season, tied the game.

AL Roundup

Orioles 5, Twins 1

Randy Milligan reached base for the 10th consecutive time with the first of his two home runs and also had an RBI double as Baltimore ended Minnesota's five-game winning.

Milligan's on-base string included seven walks, two home runs and a single. It ended with a fourth-inning strikeout but he doubled a run home in the sixth and homered off Terry Leach in the ninth.

Bob Milacki (2-3), working on two days' rest for the first time in his career, scattered seven hits in 6⅓ innings for the victory. Mark Williamson pitched 1⅔ innings and Gregg Olson worked the ninth. Loser Allan Anderson (2-6) gave up four runs and seven hits in seven innings. It was his first career loss against the Orioles after six victories.

White Sox 5, Yankees 4

After the Yankees tied the score in the top of the ninth on Mel Hall's leadoff homer, his fourth, off Chicago relief ace Bobby Thigpen, Ozzie Guillen drew a walk from Jeff Robinson (1-2) with one out in the bottom of the ninth.

Royals 5, Tigers 3

Jim Eisenreich singled home the go-ahead run as Kansas City rallied for four runs in the eighth inning and beat Detroit.

The Tigers, who have lost nine straight at Royals Stadium, had scored twice in the top of the eighth to take a 3-1 lead.

But Kurt Stillwell doubled off Detroit starter Frank Tanana to open the Royals' eighth and took third on a groundout. Detroit relief ace Mike Henneman (1-4) took over and walked Danny Tartabull walked before giving up an RBI single to George Brett.

Fighting Irish kickers capture tourney title

Staff Report

LUBBOCK — Midland's Fighting Irish under 12 boy's soccer team won its second consecutive tournament championship here over the weekend by carrying away the championship trophy in the Soccer Magic West Texas Cup Invitational.

The Irish won the Puma-/Caysa Invitational tournament in Austin two weeks ago.

In Lubbock, the Midland squad blasted the Lubbock Jedis and the Pampa Sting by consecutive 8-0 and 9-0 scores before edging the Lubbock Cobras, 3-1, in the Final Four qualifying game.

In the semifinal game, the Irish fought back from a 1-0 halftime deficit to defeat the Dallas Oak Cliff Hot Spurs, 2-1, in the best overall game of the tournament. That put the Irish in the finals.

In the past two tournaments, the Irish have defeated its 10 opponents by a combined score of 69-2. They scored 41 goals to the opponent's none in the Austin tournament.

The tournament victory gives the Irish the West Texas Cup championship for the second time in three years.

The team is coached by Mana Ratanasavetavadhana. The Irish are scheduled to compete in two more tournaments this summer — the Dr. Pepper Invitational, June 15-17, in Dallas; and the El Paso Invitational, June 29-July 1.

Mets play same old way under new manager

Associated Press

CINCINNATI (AP) — The New York Mets had a new manager, but played the way they had under the old one.

Bud Harrelson came up a loser in his managerial debut for the Mets on Tuesday night. Eric Davis and Chris Sabo hit solo homers to give the Cincinnati Reds a 2-1 victory two hours after the Mets announced the firing of Davey Johnson.

Harrelson didn't have much to do as he watched the Mets (20-23) lose for the ninth time in 13 games. The Mets failed to get a base runner after the sixth inning, and stranded three runners in scoring position overall.

"That wasn't the way I wanted the script to read," Harrelson said. "I thought our spirit was good. They played the same today as if Davey was still here, with a little more aggression. It just didn't work out."

The result was the same as under Johnson. The Mets' season-long problems were on display again against Tom Browning (4-4).

They failed to get anything out of two threats and failed to hold an early lead. The Mets had at least one hit in four of the first five innings, twice stranding two runners.

"We played an aggressive, good game tonight," said Tim Teufel, whose solo homer provided all the offense. "But we were outmanned by Browning."

Browning allowed six hits, struck out three and walked one in eight innings. Rob Dibble struck out Kevin McReynolds to start the ninth, then gave way to Randy Myers, who fanned Darryl Strawberry and Mike Marshall for his 10th save.

Cardinals 3, Astros 2

John Tudor broke a St. Louis losing streak for the fifth time this season, winning for the first time since April 28.

Ozzie Smith, Pedro Guerrero and Terry Pendlton drove in third-inning runs as Tudor won for the fifth time in seven decisions. He allowed one run on five hits, struck out three and walked none in seven innings.

NL Roundup

St. Louis took the lead against Dan Schatzeder (1-3) in the third. With one out, Vince Coleman singled to center, stole second and scored on a single by Smith.

McGee singled Smith to second and Guerrero had an RBI single which sent McGee to third. Pendleton added a sacrifice fly.

Pirates 9, Dodgers 5

Pittsburgh took a 7-0 lead as Bob Patterson pitched six shutout innings in his first start of the season, then held on to beat Los Angeles for a fourth consecutive victory.

Andy Van Slyke's two-run single keyed Pittsburgh's four-run second inning against Fernando Valenzuela (4-4) and Don Slaught had two run-scoring doubles as the Pirates won for the 12th time in their last 14 home games.

Patterson, who had a 12.00 ERA in two previous appearances against Los Angeles, limited the Dodgers to three hits over six innings until Kal Daniels and Eddie Murray singled to start the seventh. Patterson departed when left fielder R.J. Reynolds misplayed Rick Dempsey's sinking line-drive single for an error, scoring Daniels.

Giants 6, Cubs 2

Don Robinson won his first game of the season and contributed an RBI single as San Francisco broke a three-game losing streak.

Robinson (1-0) gave up two runs and five hits in 6⅔ innings before leaving with back spasms. Making his second 1990 start after recovering from a knee operation, he was activated from the disabled list May 24.

Loser Kevin Blankenship gave up three runs and six hits in his first major-league appearance of the season after the Cubs recalled him from Triple-A Iowa on Monday. Blankenship retired the last 13 batters before he was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the seventh.

The Giants took a 1-0 lead in the second when Terry Kennedy walked with one out, moved to third on a single by Jose Uribe and scored on Robinson's single.

Prices rise

Energy futures prices rose Tuesday, led by a strong jump in unleaded gasoline due to what analysts said were internal market factors and concerns about future gas supplies.

The July contract for West Texas Intermediate rose 18 cents to $17.98 a 42-gallon barrel on the Mercantile Exchange following a 3-cent drop Friday.

Stocks surge

Prices surged Tuesday as the Dow Jones Industrial Average climbed 49.57 points to close at 2,870.49, a new record high. Analysts credited the gain to technology stocks, which rebounded from Friday's sharp declines.

Dollar lower

The dollar's trading day began in Tokyo where the currency closed at 150.70 Japanese yen, up from 149.45 yen late Monday.

Selected late dollar rates in New York, compared with Friday's late quotes, included: 1.6740 West German marks, down from 1.68235; 1.4105 Swiss francs, down from 1.4235; 5.6380 French francs, down from 5.6615; 1,229.50 Italian lire, down from 1,235.50; and 1.17945 Canadian dollar, down from 1.1830.

Energy low on economic summit list

■ Energy is very low on the agenda of July's economic summit meeting between leaders of seven nations in Houston, and discussed only as it relates to the environment.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Energy, an essential element to Houston's economic health, won't be much a topic among delegates from seven nations during July's Economic Summit.

The U.S. State Department has not announced an official agenda for the July 9-11 summit, but officials say it's likely the only energy-related topic will involve environmental concerns.

"Energy and environment are so interrelated, it's a little hard to pull one out from the other," said Penny Adams, Department of Energy spokeswoman. She said her office listed global warming, the need for more efficient energy use and security for energy supplies as DOE concerns for the summit.

"You're not going to have a summit in Houston and not have oil remarked on," said Daniel Yergin of the Cambridge Energy Research Associates in Cambridge, Mass. But he said it will not be a pressing issue for European delegates.

In the late '70s and early '80s, oil price controls and shipments were major topics at the annual summits. But analysts said it disappeared from the summit worry list in 1985.

"Until then, energy had been a major issue, and at one point, it was by far the most contentious," Yergin said.

Since then, supplies and prices for the most part stabilized internationally, although Texas was struck with a devastating oil bust that has taken nearly five years for recovery.

Conservation and alternative fuels have reduced demand for oil in Europe, while oil prices have rebounded to $15 to $20 a barrel, said Philip Verleger of the Institute for International Economics in Washington.

The development of coal and natural gas reserves in much of Europe also has helped cut dependence on foreign oil. In addition, France now obtains two-thirds of its electricity from nuclear power.

Analysts say that while the Europeans might not be interested in talking supplies, they may push the United States on environmental issues.

"There may be some lecturing at the United States by the Europeans," said Marion Stewart of National Economic Research Associates in White Plains, N.Y.

Some European officials say the general view in Europe is that the United States has not done enough to encourage conservation of fossil fuels. One senior official said Europe would like to see Americans increase their energy taxes to discourage consumption.

Houston, Denver duel for new jobs

■ Houston and Denver are the frontrunners in a 13-city competition to attract two new aircraft repair facilities by Continental Airlines, and the prize is 5,000 jobs.

By David Ivanovich
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON – Houston and Denver may soon be vying for a prize worth 5,000 jobs.

The two cities are considered by many observers to be the front-runners in a 13-city competition to attract two new aircraft repair facilities planned by Continental Airlines.

Other cities facing a June 8 deadline for submitting initial bids are: Beaumont; San Antonio; Austin; Corpus Christi; El Paso; Texarkana, Ark.; Shreveport, La.; Phoenix; Tucson, Ariz.; Albuquerque, N.M.; and Tampa, Fla.

While all of the communities plan to trumpet their advantages, some city leaders in smaller towns question the seriousness of Continental's interest.

"We wanted to pick those cities that had the greatest likelihood for winning the bid for the new facilities, and the least likelihood for having any of their time and resources wasted," said Lewis Jordan, Continental's executive vice president and chief operating officer.

"I wouldn't rule out anything altogether, but you'd have to think the leading places would be Houston and Denver," said Ray Neidl, an analyst with New York's Dillon Read & Co., voicing a commonly held perception.

Continental is searching for 150 acres to build a $175 million aircraft maintenance facility that ultimately will employ 4,000 and have an annual payroll of $150 million. The airline also needs an additional 35 to 50 acres for a $75 million engine overhaul complex, which will provide 1,000 jobs with a $35 million annual payroll.

The new maintenance facilities will replace a hangar at Denver's Stapleton Airport, which is slated to close in 1993. The airline also is getting ready to handle 100 new 737s and 40 huge Airbuses that are to join the Continental fleet by 1997.

The facilities also represent an opportunity for major savings for Continental. The airline pays other companies $150 million annually to overhaul its engines.

All of the communities in the race will have to propose a package chock-full of financial incentives.

Continental has said it will be sensitive to offers that include tax abatements, construction grants and financial assistance for employee relocations.

Jovanovich quits publishing company

NEW YORK (AP) — William Jovanovich has resigned as chairman of Harcourt Brace Jovanovich Inc. and his successor at the publishing company is former U.S. Energy Secretary John S. Herrington.

"Forty-three years is enough, especially since I now can devote my time to editing books and writing them," Jovanovich, 70, said in a statement issued today by the Orlando, Fla.-based company.

Jovanovich is the author of several novels and one is scheduled for release in the fall. He edited Mary McCarthy until her death last November and currently edits Diana Trilling.

During Jovanovich's tenure, the company's revenue grew from $8 million in the 1950s to $1.3 billion. The company's authors include Alice Walker, Umberto Eco, Mark Helprin and Charles Simic, who won the 1990 Pulitzer Prize for poetry. The company also publishes scientific and medical books and journals and operates a large insurance business as well.

Jovanovich arranged an infusion of capital in 1987 that enabled the company to avoid a takeover by British media baron Robert Maxwell. But the resulting heavy debt prompted the company to sell its six theme parks, including four Sea World parks.

Herrington has served as a member of the Harcourt board since May 1989. He called Jovanovich "an American publishing legend, a pioneer in educational technology and an industry giant who built the best independent publishing house in America."

Mexicana places $1.1 billion jet order

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexicana de Aviacion has agreed to buy 30 Airbus A320-200 jets for $1.1 billion.

Airbus also signed a technical agreement with the airline that calls for construction of a maintenance base in Guadalajara, 360 miles northwest of the capital.

Airbus will begin delivering the new passenger jets next year, and the two parties will negotiate for possible purchase of another 20 planes, according to a statement by the airline. The A320-200 seats from 130 to 179 passengers.

Among the 30 new planes being purchased, 16 are considered sold and another 14 are being purchased on option, depending on need, the statement said.

Abedrop said the company has gone through a major restructuring to improve service. "Now we are beginning the second important task: updating our fleet."

Mexicana's present fleet is comprised of 42 Boeing 727-200's and six DC-10s. The airline has said it plans to sell some of its older planes.

Mexicana previously announced that it plans to expand domestic and foreign routes next year. Mexicana presently flies to the United States and Latin America.

Odessan opens auto detail shop in Midland

By Mella McEwen

McEwen

Opening this Friday at 2903 W. Wall is ODYSSEY GRAPHICS, owned by Odessan David Adams.

Odyssey offers custom car detailing such as window tinting, pinstriping and other detailing, GTS bug shields, headlight covers and ground effects.

He offers a 100 percent guarantee on his company's work, even on work guaranteed by the manufacturer. He also notes that his employees all have several years experience in car detailing and that he himself has management experience gained by managing his father's asphalt business.

Settled into its new location at 11900 E. Highway 80, east of Water Wonderland, is McCLAIN'S TRUCK SERVICE, which moved to Midland-Odessa from Monahans.

Owned by Tommy McClain, the company is an oil and fuel wholesaler that hauls primarily Texaco fuels, but also other brands such as Conoco, Fina, Shamrock and Shell.

New to Midland is CASH AMERICA, which opened recently at 3600 W. Wall. The two Big State Pawn and Bargan Centers in Odessa have been renamed Cash America after the parent company, Cash America Investments.

Cash America is a chain of 137 pawnshops in six states with plans to expand nationwide, according to West Texas Area Supervisor Royce Mitchell Sr. Shares are publicly traded on the American Stock Exchange.

Customers pawn or tender merchandise in exchange for a cash loan, good for one month. This is then followed by a 60-day grace period during which the goods are held for the customer. Service charges are regulated by the state and set on a sliding scale — the bigger the loan, the smaller the charge. Merchandise is returned after the customer repays the loan.

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices surged higher on Wall Street Tuesday and the Dow Jones industrial average reached another new closing high as technology issues recovered from Friday's losses and took the rest of the stock market along for the ride.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials jumped 49.57 to 2,870.49, surpassing the blue chip barometer's previous closing high of 2,856.26, set just last Wednesday.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by a margin of about 11 to 4 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 1,107 up, 434 down and 462 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to a relatively light 137.41 million shares, up from 120.25 million in the previous session.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 167.06 million shares.

Technology issues, which pulled the market sharply lower on Friday, reversed course Tuesday after a Barron's article said International Business Machines was on an upward course after several laggard years. Investors snapped up IBM, bidding the stock up 3½ to 119¾.

Friday's decline had been triggered by an announcement by the computer software manufacturer Adobe Systems that its earnings for the second quarter and full fiscal year were likely to fall short of analysts' estimates. But Adobe was another winner Tuesday, gaining 2⅝ to close at 37⅛ in over-the-counter trading.

Other high-tech gainers included Digital Equipment, up 2¼ to 94¾, and Tandy, which gained 1⅛ to 35½. Both stocks were traded on the NYSE.

On the over-the-counter market, Apple Computer rose 1 to 41 and Intel was up 1⅛ to 48⅝.

The most actively traded issue on the NYSE was Varity, which rose ⅛ to 3⅛.

DUEL: Smaller cities doubt airline's intent

(From 5C)

they are hubs – primary links in Continental's route system.

By placing repair facilities next to a hub, an airline can save the time and money it would take to ferry planes to an out-of-the-way city like Texarkana.

Of the two hubs, Houston has some definite advantages. Planes flying in and out of a maintenance facility in Houston won't be caught in snow storms. And Houston is Continental's headquarters and Chairman Frank Lorenzo's hometown.

Denver has a cost advantage – the 1,100 maintenance workers there now. Moving them to another city could cost up to $30,000 per employee.

To compete against Denver and Houston, the other communities will have to present packages attractive enough to offset the added cost of ferrying aircraft to their cities. But flying aircraft to other locations for maintenance is not unheard of in the industry.

Some smaller communities have strong selling points in Continental's competition.

Shreveport enjoys an experienced labor force, thanks to nearby Barksdale Air Force Base. It also recently attracted two other aviation-related operations.

But many of the other communities face daunting odds.

Albuquerque doesn't have the necessary space at its main airport, and the runway at its secondary airport is too short, conceded Jim Covell, executive vice president for economic development in Albuquerque.

Austin is considering building an airport and closing the current one, creating a dilemma for community leaders who must propose a particular site.

Texarkana is not even served by Continental.

A few communities complained that they only learned about Continental's plans 10 days ago, while Houston and Denver officials have been talking with the airline for more than a year.

Some development officials are wondering just how serious Continental is about bids from their communities.

"I think it's Denver," said one economic development official, who asked not to be named. "I think it's an attempt to squeeze the Denver airport people into giving them a better deal. I don't think they're being competitive. Frank Lorenzo doesn't want the same deal everybody else gets. He wants it cheaper."

Jordan insisted all 13 communities have a good shot. "We made a specific point of narrowing the list, at the outset, to only those cities that had a genuine, serious opportunity to win this bid."

World's largest hotel targets family

By Robert Macy

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The company that carved a niche for low-rollers in the nation's high-stakes gambling capital now presents the world's largest hotel in the form of a castle.

The June 19 opening of the $290 million, 4,032-room Excalibur Hotel will mark a milestone for Circus Circus Enterprises Inc.

The company, which started with a struggling Strip hotel-casino 16 years ago and now values itself at $1.6 billion, has become the envy of the gaming industry with a strategy focusing on family entertainment.

The giant castle at the south end of the glitzy Las Vegas Strip is the brainchild of gaming executive William Bennett, who amassed a personal fortune of $500 million catering to Middle America's gambling tastes.

The Excalibur is anchored by four, 28-story towers and covers more than 70 acres. It will replace two other Las Vegas properties that have held the title of the world's largest hotel.

The Las Vegas Hilton held the record with 3,174 rooms, according to the Guinness Book of World Records. That figure was eclipsed in recent weeks when the Flamingo Hilton opened a new wing, giving that Strip resort 3,530 rooms — and brief claim to the title. The new Mirage Hotel here just missed the mark with 3,054 rooms.

Bennett and a former partner, William Pennington, bought the Circus Circus hotel-casino in 1974 after the late billionaire Howard Hughes kept raising the ante on their first choice, the Landmark Hotel. Today, the Landmark is struggling, while Circus Circus has become an industry giant.

"At the time, I thought the Landmark was the best of the two properties," Bennett said in a rare interview recently. "I think I was wrong. I lucked out."

The 65-year-old Bennett owns 18.2 percent of the public company, which had revenues of $522 million last year.

When the Excalibur opens, parent Circus Circus will have a total of 11,320 rooms in Nevada, including two hotels in Las Vegas, one in Reno and two in Laughlin. By comparison, Atlantic City's 12 major hotels total 8,100 rooms.

The Excalibur will give Las Vegas 75,000 hotel rooms.

"The new room count will give Las Vegas almost twice that of Manhattan's 47,000 rooms, with Circus Circus-owned properties offering 11 percent of the total room base in Las Vegas," said Excalibur general manager Bill Paulos.

Even Bennett's vivid imagination couldn't have dreamed up the scenario that evolved from his purchase of Circus Circus. He was forced, because of the nature of his original property, to target families rather than high-stakes gamblers.

When Bennett bought the Circus Circus hotel-casino, it was a gaming mishmash — catering to high-rollers as well as families with kids.

"It was awful," Bennett recalled. "They had children's things mixed in with the gaming. They had bumper cars where we now have the keno lounge."

Bennett and Pennington wanted the Landmark, but the eccentric Hughes, who owned several Las Vegas hotels at the time, raised the price from $15 million to $16 million, then jumped it to $20 million.

Bennett and Pennington passed.

The success of Circus Circus has nudged Las Vegas toward other family-oriented features, transforming the gaming capital into what local promoters like to call a "total resort destination."

"The Excalibur will not be as family-oriented, but there will be plenty of things for everybody," Bennett said. "The rooms will be more expensive (an average $45 per night, compared to $33 at his other properties). It will be a more ostentatious setting. It's a definite upgrade."

The Excalibur casino will offer gamblers higher limits and may provide gaming credit — something that's taboo at Circus Circus.

The castle's 500,000 square feet of entertainment space includes a Renaissance-era village, 12 food outlets and a casino the size of four football fields, with 2,630 slot machines. Shows will feature a medieval flair, with live jousting. Diners in the Great Hall, a 900-seat amphitheater for floor shows, will feast without utensils.

Other attractions include an arcade with archery and other themed game booths, strolling minstrels and a Sherwood Forest-inspired wedding chapel.

Off the theme will be a pair of motion-simulator theaters recreating an Olympic bobsled ride, roller coaster, runaway train and a frantic ride down an icy mountain road.

Keeping the enterprise moving will require a staff of 4,300.

The giant castle with its towering spires is in contrast to most of the glitzy showplaces along the Strip.

"I've had in my mind for six or seven years to build a castle," Bennett said. "I had decided our presence in Las Vegas was just not big enough. I thought the only way to build a successful property was to build a big property."

Bennett studied old renderings of castles, then made several visits to castles in England and Germany with staff members to soak in the architectural and environmental detail.

"We came up with more than 20 ideas that wouldn't step on the toes of the Disney people," he said.

The Excalibur was built mainly with cash the company had on hand. It sits on 37 acres of a 117-acre tract the company bought several years ago. Bennett says the company may end up building on the remaining 40 acres.

"We're already thinking about what's next," he said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Delaying interest payments unethical

By Bill Doyle

Q. I own six different municipal bonds. All are "registered" bonds with my name on the bonds, on the record books of the issuers and their agents. All six pay interest semiannually and all the interest checks are dated on the payment dates.

Interest checks from two of my bonds arrive by mail on the payment dates — the very next day, at the latest. Checks from the other four reach me anywhere from three to seven days late.

Obviously, the issuers of those four bonds and/or their interest paying agent banks benefit from the delayed checks. Is this common practice and is it ethical?

A. "Common" might be too strong a word, because there is no way to get a fix on the actual percentage of late interest checks. But a continuing flow of letters such as yours to this column indicates it happens far too often. It demonstrates ethics lower than those of an Eighth Avenue hooker.

Doyle

As a bond owner, you are a creditor of the bond issuer — a state, city, school board or other pole.

The paying agent bank cannot send out interest checks until it is authorized to do so by the bond issuer, after the necessary money has been placed in the interest disbursement account.

In some cases, interest checks are mailed late because the bond issuers provide the money to the paying agent banks at the close of business on the interest payment date — or even a day or two later. By the time bond owners' checks arrive in the mail, more time elapses. The fault there is with the issuers.

In other cases, the paying agent banks are slow mailing out the checks. Remember that the banks have use of the money until the checks are cashed.

Q. To whom should I complain when interest checks for both municipal and corporate bonds I own arrive in the mail late — sometimes as much as a week after the payment dates?

A. Take your gripe to the bond issuers, the interest paying agent banks and the bond trustees?

The financial officer of the issuer should be one of your targets. In the case of a municipal bond issued by a city, that's the city treasurer. With a corporate bond, it's the company treasurer. Send a copy of your letter to the company chief executive officer — CEO, for short — the president or chairman of the board. And write to the CEOs of the paying agent bank and bond trustee.

The latter might be your best hope. The trustee — usually a bank — is supposed to look after the interest of bondholders. The kicker is that the trustee and the interest paying agent often are one and the same bank.

Remind the trustee CEO that the bank has a fiduciary responsibility to bondholders. That might jolt the CEO into speeding future interest check deliveries. Note I wrote "might." I don't hold out great hope you will be successful. Complaints from small bondholders often are brushed aside.

Q. All the companies in which I own stock mail dividend checks so that they arrive on or a day or two before the dividend payment dates. Why can't issuers of bonds I own do the same thing?

A. Let's be realistic. As a bond owner, you are a creditor. As a stockholder, you are a part-owner of a company. Creditors seldom get the same treatment as owners.

Corporate officers naturally want to keep stockholders happy. One way of doing that is by making sure dividend checks arrive on time — even a bit ahead of time, so the checks can be cashed on the dividend payment dates.

Stockholders would be screaming mad if dividend checks arrived late. At the next stockholders' meeting, members of the board of directors might be voted out and a new board elected, which could fire the company's officers.

QUITS: CEO wants time to write, edit

(From 5C)

The company issued a statement that Jovanovich also had submitted his resignation as chairman of the company's executive committee.

He will be replaced in that position by his son, Peter Jovanovich, 41, who was named chief executive and president of the company last December.

Herrington, 51, served as energy secretary in the Reagan administration from February 1985 to January 1989. He had been assistant secretary of the Navy from 1981 to 1983.

Parks chief wants alcohol ban

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's parks director called for tougher controls on glass bottles and alcohol in city parks Tuesday after a Memorial Day melee at a rap concert that started with bottle-throwing and reports of gunshots.

At least 11 people were treated for cuts and bruises after panicked concertgoers tried to flee flying bottles and gunshots at a concert by Special Treat at the Hermann Park Miller Outdoor Theater. About 25,000 people showed up for the concert, about 18,000 more than predicted.

Witnesses said the trouble started at about 4 p.m. when someone in a hillside audience area began throwing beer bottles at permanent seats near the stage.

"The people in the pit started throwing them back," said witness Mark Kinsler. "It was just a barrage."

When people believed they heard gunshots, the crowd panicked.

"It all happened so fast," said Melinda Thomas, 34, who was sitting on the grass a few hundred feet from the theater.

"Lots of people just ran up on stage to get away," Olson said. "The vast majority of the people were trying to get out of the way of the rock and beer-bottling throwing. Most people were innocent bystanders who just couldn't get out of there fast enough."

The concert was canceled after the disturbance began, sending hundreds running for parking lots and snarling traffic. Scores of officers on foot and horseback and in helicopters evacuated the area, making more than two dozen arrests.

AP Laserphoto

Houston police arrest a man at Herman Park on Monday following a bottle-throwing incident that led to the near-riot of about 25,000 concertgoers.

Most of the arrests were for public intoxication but at least two involved possession of firearms.

City parks director Don Olson said the city will have to find better ways to enforce glass bottle and alcohol bans at city parks.

"Glass containers have been banned in city parks for years but enforcement is difficult," Olson said. "Continually, injuries that occur in parks have a lot to do with broken glass."

"The other problem we face is people who bring beer into the park for a concert and come in with cases of it, which is well beyond their ability to handle it. We're going to have to look at some ways to curb the amount of beer brought in," Olson said.

The theater is built into the side of a hill at the 380-acre park adjacent to Houston's Texas Medical Center. It is just a small section of the park, which also includes a golf course and the city zoo.

Special Treat was the first of five bands scheduled to perform at the free Mega Jam concert sponsored by radio station KHYS-FM. The star attraction was to have been a Miami-based rap group known as 2 Live Crew.

STATE IN BRIEF

Divers' search leads to find

CLAYTON (AP) — The body of a second game warden missing and feared drowned was recovered Tuesday afternoon from an East Texas lake.

The body of Bruce Hill was pulled from Lake Murvaul around 1:30 p.m. Tuesday. The body of 44-year-old Barry Decker of Henderson was found the night before.

"Both are veteran officers and this is just one of those things that happened," Texas Parks and Wildlife Capt. Larry Willford said Tuesday.

Game wardens from other districts, as well as divers from Dallas, Fort Worth and Caddo Parish, La., had helped in the search, which began at about 2 a.m. Sunday and continued almost nonstop.

Fireman dies of burns

GILMER (AP) — Funeral services were scheduled Wednesday for the first Texas Forest Service employee to die from fire-related injuries in the agency's 75-year history.

Firefighter Roland D. Lambert of Big Sandy died Sunday in a Dallas hospital after a five-month struggle to survive critical burns received last Christmas. He was 62.

Clerk's sleep costly

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Thieves had a field day when a clerk at a convenience store fell asleep on the job.

The nap cost the store roughly $11,000.

Police said the robbers took off with candy and sunglass displays, adult magazines, 64 cartons of cigarettes and an $8,000 cash register from a Stop-N-Go store early Monday. The clerk on duty told police he fell asleep in a back room after serving a customer at about 1 a.m.

Police arrested one woman after an officer on patrol spotted a car behind the store that drove off without lights on. The woman, Janie Gonzales, 33, of San Antonio, was found crouching behind the store and was charged with theft. She remained in the Bexar County jail Tuesday on $15,000 bond.

Police found the 21-year-old store clerk asleep in a back room.

Hobby off to N.Y.

AUSTIN (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby on June 6 in New York will represent his mother, one of three surviving Cabinet members of the Dwight Eisenhower administration, in ceremonies honoring the late president.

The ceremony aboard the U.S.S. Intrepid, an aircraft carrier that has been converted into a naval military museum, will recognize the 100th anniversary of Eisenhower's birth in Denison, Texas, and also the 46th anniversary of D-Day, Hobby said.

Tax revenues up in 1989

AUSTIN (AP) — A $546 million increase in state tax revenue for the fiscal year ending Aug. 31 shows that the Texas economy is continuing to improve, according to a report by the Texas Research League.

State tax receipts totaled $13.97 billion in fiscal 1989, compared with $13.4 billion for the previous fiscal year.

The 4.1 percent increase was achieved without any increase in tax rates.

Economic improvement is shown most by the 10.8 percent increase in general sales tax revenue, which grew by $672 million to $6.9 billion in 1989 and offset significant decreases in other areas, the privately financed Research League reported Tuesday.

The biggest decline — $253 million (26.5 percent) — was in the franchise tax revenue as corporate capital continued to contract," the report said.

The Research League noted that oil and gas production continued to decline in 1989. But oil production tax revenue increased slightly to $500.2 million, or 0.3 percent, as the price per barrel of oil moved upward, the report said.

Natural gas price increases also caused production taxes to rise by $110.9 million, or 20 percent.

Houston woman shoots husband, self at posh condo

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston socialite apparently shot her husband then turned the gun on herself, killing both of them at the couple's condominium near President Bush's Houston hotel residence, police said.

Arlene Frances Dennis, 35, was pronounced dead at the scene, while her husband, William Charles Dennis, 45, died more than an hour later at Ben Taub Hospital, officials said.

"She apparently shot him in the back and then shot herself in the chest," said police spokesman J.C. Mosier. "He was able to call the police and both were found lying in their bed. He was still breathing when police arrived."

The shooting occurred at the couple's home on the 22nd floor of the Houstonian Estates Condominium, which is located in the same complex as the Houstonian Hotel where Bush stays while in his adopted hometown.

Mosier said the couple's 2-year-old daughter and a live-in maid were asleep at the time of the shootings, but did not hear the disturbance.

Police recovered a .38-caliber Colt revolver at the scene.

"They believe there were some marital problems and for whatever reason, she decided to shoot her husband and then herself," Mosier said.

Mrs. Dennis was the socialite daughter of Houston public relations and advertising executive Ted Roggen and his wife, Sydney. This was her second marriage.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Arab leaders won't have word

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Arab Leaders Tuesday decided against sending a memorandum on the Middle East conflict to the superpower summit after moderates failed to temper criticism of Washington in the draft.

The memorandum, mostly on the influx of Soviet Jews to israel, had become a focus of discord on how hard a line the Arab League summit should take against the United States.

"There will be no letter," Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz said as he emerged from a closed-door meeting. He refused to elaborate.

The conference was called as a show of Arab unity against what President Saddam Hussein has said is a Western and Israeli campaign against Iraq. It also sought ways to stem the emigration of Soviet Jews to Israel.

Little unity, however, has been apparent so far in the summit. Syria and Lebanon boycotted the meeting, and Morocco, Algeria and Oman sent senior government officials.

Square to be cleared

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — The mayor of Bucharest announced Tuesday that authorities would clear the city's main square of anti-Communist protesters by morning. One demonstrator urged friends and relatives to come to the square.

About 150 protesters remained in University Square on a cold and rainy night, continuing a 38-day-old protest that demands former high-ranking Communists be banned from holding public office for 10 years.

The government, led by President Ion Iliescu, a former Communist official, has rejected the demand.

In a statement read on state television, Mayor Dan Predescu said his office decided "to take due measures to open traffic" in University Square because the lengthy blocade has blocked one of the city's main thoroughfares and because of the numerous requests from local people.

He said the area would be cleared by morning.

Rare bird sighted

BIDEFORD, England (AP) — An ancient murrelet is drawing hundreds of birdwatchers to the Bristol Channel in southwest England, far from its normal habitat.

"This bird has never been recorded outside the northern Pacific Ocean before, and its appearance in Britain is likely to be the bird sighting of 1990," Richard Millington, who runs an information service on rare bird visitors, said Tuesday.

The visitor was first sighted in Jenny's Cove on Lundy Island in the Bristol Channel.

Millington's telephone service, Birdline, provided details of boats for hire in the north Devon coastal town of Bideford to ferry birdwatchers out to the island. One boat alone wa hired to take 250 people to the scene.

The ancient murrelet is a small member of the auk family of diving birds. Its main breeding grounds are on the Aleutians and other islands off western Alaska. In winter it flies south as far as Korea.

Indian dinghy capsizes

BOMBAY, India (AP) — An overcrowded dinghy sailing between two villages capsized and killed 23 people, authorities said Tuesday.

The boat was in the Bhima River in the eastern state of Maharashtra when the accident occurred Monday afternoon.

Local authorities said the small craft was carrying 36 people to Takli village when it overturned. Thirteen people swam to shore. Ten were pulled out of the river and another 13 people were missing and believed dead, they said.

Rebels claim routing

NAIROBI, Kenya — Ethiopian rebels said Tuesday they "completely routed" government troops southeast of Asmara, the besieged capital of Ethiopia's northernmost province.

The Eritrean People's Liberation Front said in a clandestine radio broadcast that it began an offensive Monday along what it called the Segeneyti Front, 30 miles from Asmara.

The broadcast gave no details, referring only to a "strong offensive" that "also routed enemy soldiers who arrived in support."

Police arms questioned

PARIS (AP) — Evoking the image of London's bobbies, the interior minister has suggested that most French police officers do not need to carry guns. Police unions are aghast, saying French crooks don't share the English sense of fair play.

"Why not demand the disarmament of the whole planet?" asked Bernard Deleplace, leader of the largest police union, at a news conference Tuesday.

More skeletons found

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico (AP) — The weekend discovery of two more human skeletons has brought to 22 the number found on property belonging to a convicted drug trafficker, the Chihuahua state prosecutor said.

The government newspaper El Nacional quoted prosecutor Raul Ramirez Aguirre as saying the remains were partially buried on land belonging to Gilberto Ontiveros Lucero, currently in prison on marijuana charges.

Ramirez Aguirre said 11 of the bodies were found earlier in a hidden well on the property.

Eton celebrates its 550-year anniversary

By Robert Barr

ETON, England (AP) — Old Etonians thronged "ye distant spires, ye antique towers, that crown the wat'ry glade," and Queen Elizabeth II came for lunch Tuesday to mark the 550th anniversary of Eton College.

The queen praised the school as "second to none," though she sent her three sons to Gordonstoun in Scotland. She told students she had asked the headmaster to give them an extra holiday each October.

Why October? Because the actual 550th anniversary of the foundation of Eton College by King Henry VI falls on Oct. 11.

Eton celebrated Tuesday, a school official explained, because it was the day before the annual June 4 holiday in honor of King George III — which Eton chose to celebrate on May 30.

The school long ago disposed of top hats, flogging, and the humiliating "bum freezer" jackets for its shortest boys, but it remains its own world.

Masters are still "beaks," classes are "divs," rowers are "wet bobs," cricketers are "dry bobs" and students are either "tugs" (King's Scholars) or "oppidans" (fee-paying students). Students wear long-tailed black coats, white ties and stiff collars in class.

The myth of Eton is that the school, nestled in the shadow of Windsor Castle, inculcates superiority of mind, grace and social status.

"The thing Eton majors in is arrogance — so deep-rooted it is totally unselfconscious. It's ugly and unappealing, and I've spent the past 30 years trying to unlearn it," said Mark Fisher, a Labor Party lawmaker.

Lord Longford says he once was interrogated by King George VI about why he, an old Etonian, became a socialist. It came down to "the conviction that we are all equal in the sight of God," Longford said. "Well, I think Eton stands for something far removed from that."

New Columbia chief keeps an open ear

NEW YORK (AP) — The youngest president of the one of the world's largest record companies has an itchy ear for alternative music and is pushing those bands harder than such superstar staples as Michael Jackson and Bruce Springsteen.

Don Ienner, 36, became president of Columbia Records a year ago, after being lured from Arista Records, where he was executive vice president and general manager. While at Arista, he helped launch singer Whitney Houston into popstardom.

But within just 48 hours at Columbia, Ienner seized upon the sound of Poi Dog Pondering, an eclectic folk-ethnic-rock band from Hawaii and Texas who had two EPs out on the tiny label of Texas Hotel Records.

The idea, Ienner said in an interview, was to get alternative bands and work with them over the years to create a mainstream following.

"We had Bruce Springsteen covered," Ienner said. "The previous regime had no idea what we were doing with alternative music. They didn't break the Psychedelic Furs, they didn't break so many great bands. ... Nothing, nobody. The philosophy before was, if you can't sell 2 million albums don't work it."

CBS Records, which owns Columbia Records, in the past rode high with mainstream successes such as Jackson's "Thriller," and mega-hits from Springsteen, George Michael, Barbra Streisand, Billy Joel, Neil Diamond and James Taylor.

But Columbia Records was in a slump after Sony Corp. bought the parent company in 1988.

"We needed to change direction," Ienner said. "There was nothing, just retreading the superstars, just one after another after another. That's why we were losing market share; that's why we were losing people; that's why we weren't getting any new bands."

Ienner speaks in a booming staccato about his professional passion: music.

"I'm not a Harvard MBA," he said. "I'm not an accountant and I never even finished high school. Music has been my life and that's the thing I love the most."

"I'm not a Harvard MBA. I'm not an accountant ... Music has been my life and that's the thing I love the most.'

— Don Ienner, president Columbia Records

He started his career as a teen-ager working in the Capitol Records mailroom in 1969. From 1972-77, he was in partnership with his brother, Jimmy Ienner, in a publishing, management and production company. He went to Arista from Millennium Records, a label he co-founded in 1977.

Besides Poi Dog Pondering, the first band he signed as president after a heated battle with almost every other major record label, he picked a young band called Toad the Wet Sprocket from Santa Barbara, Calif.

Poi Dog has befuddled music critics trying to describe its peculiar sound. The ensemble plays everything from the standard guitar, bass, drums to the not-so-standard accordian, flugelhorn, tin whistle, wood block, congas, banjo and somebody's used frying pan.

Toad the Wet Sprocket relies heavily on an accoustic guitar, has a sound in the vein of the Smiths and fuzzy, resonant vocals similar to R.E.M.'s Michael Stipe.

"It was important that we get and use Poi Dog Pondering as our signature band," Ienner said. Poi Dog and Toad would "show our musical sensitivity."

It would also help Columbia cater to a huge audience carved out in large part by college radio stations looking for an alternative to Top 40 music.

The hope is also that the smaller, dormant bands will blossom into big hits further down the line.

"If you work the baby bands as hard as you work the big bands or maybe work the baby bands more than you work the big bands ... you'll have something that you'll be proud of in the next five years," said Ienner.

Robert F. Kennedy was shot by Sirhan Sirhan on June 5, 1968, as he left the Los Angeles hotel where his California presidential primary victory celebration had been held; he died the following day.

'Capt. Planet' presses on, Cruise or no

By Jay Sharbutt

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Cruise, who last month urged Earth Day celebrants in Washington to help save the planet, has dropped out as television's Capt. Planet. A star-name setback, but noooo problem.

"Capt. Planet and the Planeteers," Ted Turner's cartoon eco-series, is pressing on, says Barbara V. Pyle, the executive in charge of the 26-episode, $7.8 million project to alert kids to dangers to the environment.

Cruise was to be the voice of Capt. Planet, a green-haired eco-hero who can be summoned by five youngsters of different races and nations to fight various villains ruining the Earth.

Alas, the star's busy film schedule "just does not permit him to be involved in a series production," says Pyle. "He was putting us too far behind, and so we lovingly and sadly parted ways."

But production continues, as does a search for the star's replacement.

Previously announced stars such as Sting, Martin Sheen and Meg Ryan still remain as the voices of such eco-villains as Zarm, Sly Sludge and Dr. Blight.

And Whoopi Goldberg, a show spokeswoman says, still is on as the voice of a central character, Gaia, the Mother Earth who gives the kids on the show magic rings containing the powers of earth, wind, fire, water and heart.

The shows are "going to start popping off the cookie sheet in July," says Pyle, a breezy Oklahoman and former free-lance photographer who joined Turner's Atlanta-based cable empire when it was just a small one back in 1980.

The half-hour series, whose basic idea was conceived by Turner and developed by Pyle and seven others, will premiere, with commercials, on two fronts — on local stations and Turner's TBS SuperStation.

Turner officials say the show has been sold to more than 100 stations for broadcast during kid-cartoon hours on Saturday mornings. TBS, serving more than 50 million homes by cable, will air it Sunday mornings.

Pyle met Turner while working for Time magazine, covering the 1980 America's Cup races in which he and his sailing boat participated.

He hired her, she says, upon learning that she shared his feelings on environmental issues, even though she knew nothing about TV. Thanks to him, she now may now be the only environmental executive at a television network.

Since January, she has been TBS's vice president of environmental policy. Before that, she made more than 16 documentaries for TBS on various global issues, many of them on the problems posed by overpopulation.

"It was a tough road," says Pyle, who entered the often-illogical world of TV armed with a master's degree in logic from New York University.

"For a long time, people thought I was a real nut," she says. "And they thought that my programming was going to bury the station, with all this do-gooder stuff nobody wanted to see."

She isn't bothered that some cynics may say the same of "Capt. Planet," that it may not get the urchin audience at which it is aimed and that messages disguised as cartoon entertainment just won't lure the kids.

She submits that the show will work, a motion seconded by a veteran critic of the networks' Saturday morning kid shows — Peggy Charren, founder and president of the watchdog group Action for Children's Television.

"I think it's a nifty idea," Charren says of "Capt. Planet."

Pyle grumbles good-naturedly when asked what it's like going from documentaries to the world of cartoons.

"I've got chronic back pains from being a desk jockey and flying back and forth from L.A.," she says.

"Give me the bush any day. But it's a sacrifice worth making."

Cuba: A country with an uncertain future

This night, about 50,000 students await him outside the presidential palace.

In the minutes before Castro steps to the podium, he can hardly keep still. He glances around and shifts his feet. He seems hardly to notice when the throng beneath him chants "Fidel! Fidel!"

It is an extraordinarily difficult period for him and his country. Not since the 1960s, when the Cold War raged and U.S. hostility seemed irrepressible, has Cuba faced such uncertainty.

How different things are from that day in 1974 when Castro predicted confidently, while host to President Leonid I. Brezhnev of the Soviet Union, that communism eventually would triumph in the world.

"Can anyone doubt it?" he asked.

Those were heady days for the revolution. The United States seemed shaken to its roots by the Watergate scandal and skyrocketing oil prices. American troops had been forced from Vietnam a year earlier; the Communist conquest of Indochina was imminent.

But the world has turned upside down.

Communism appears to have failed in Indochina and has collapsed in Eastern Europe. There are predictions of cataclysmic internal upheaval in the Soviet Union, and Moscow's future economic support for Cuba is uncertain.

Someone shouted: "Anyone who doesn't jump is a Yankee!" Everyone jumped. Castro smiled and jumped, too.

His message was simple: There is no reason to fear because "the ideals of our country are immortal."

"Not only will the revolution not fall, it will rise," he said.

Castro spoke for 90 minutes and was interrupted dozens of times by chants and applause.

His commitment to Communist fundamentalism is enshrined in the slogan he now uses at the end of every speech — "Socialism or Death" — and huge numbers of Cubans seem prepared to stick with him.

In that sense, Cuba is not comparable to the countries of Eastern Europe, where the leaders who fell last year were often hated by their people.

Five years ago, the average number of Cubans fleeing by boat to Florida, 90 miles away, was one a month. According to U.S. figures, the monthly average has reached 40, despite the threat of prison terms ranging from one to three years. A resourceful teen-ager recently made the trip on a surfboard.

Jorge Luis Pichardo, a 26-year-old safety inspector who fled to Miami on a raft last August, said pay in Cuba allows people "to subsist but not to live."

A friend who accompanied him, Gustavo Brugues, son of Cuba's ambassador to Bolivia, said he once spent two days in a food line to buy pork for a family celebration. "Sometimes, you have to wait in line and there's nothing at the end of it," he said.

On the other side are people like Juan Aizpura Rodriguez. He was a 15-year-old dropout at the time of the revolution in 1959, a poor, black youngster from one of Havana's many tough neighborhoods.

Aizpura now has a college degree in social science and is on the national board that governs neighborhood watchdog groups called Committees for the Defense of the Revolution. The groups provide social services and keep an eye out for anti-government activity.

"If it weren't for the revolution, the broadest majorities of our population ... would still be suffering," Aizpura said.

Perhaps the most pampered Cubans are the children. The amount spent on their health care and education is unusually high for a Third World country.

At a school for slow learners, one of 14 in the capital, the emphasis is on individual attention. It has 47 staff members, one for each 4½ students. Buses take the students from home to school and back.

All education has a high priority in Cuba. The number of schools 30 years ago was a small fraction of those functioning today.

Nationwide vaccination has sharply reduced childhood diseases like measles and whooping cough. Polio was wiped out in 1963.

The official infant mortality rate is 11.1 per thousand, putting Cuba almost on a par with industrialized countries. Before the revolution, the rate was 60.

"We think we can still reduce it more," said Dr. Evilio Cabezas of the Public Health Ministry. He credited extensive prenatal and postnatal care, and added: "It's all absolutely free."

What kind of lives do these literate, healthy Cubans have? They are certainly better off than an estimated 175 million Latin Americans living in poverty, which Castro says is a byproduct of capitalism.

Cuba has hardly any beggars. Begging is illegal.

Unemployment is much lower than elsewhere in Latin America and drugs are far less of a problem than in the United States. Prostitution has been outlawed, but not eradicated.

A U.S. official who is an expert on Cuba said the revolution had improved life for one-third to one-half of Cuba's people.

Lack of freedom is a prime reason why Cubans leave home. The current political uncertainty has brought harsh repression of human rights activists and the number of detentions has increased sharply.

Twice in recent weeks, pro-government mobs have formed outside the homes of dissidents.

One of those homes belonged to Gustavo Arcos, who has spent a total of 12 years in prison since breaking with Castro in 1965. "The rules of the game have changed," he said. "They are not going to permit any more dissidents."

Daily life can be demoralizing.

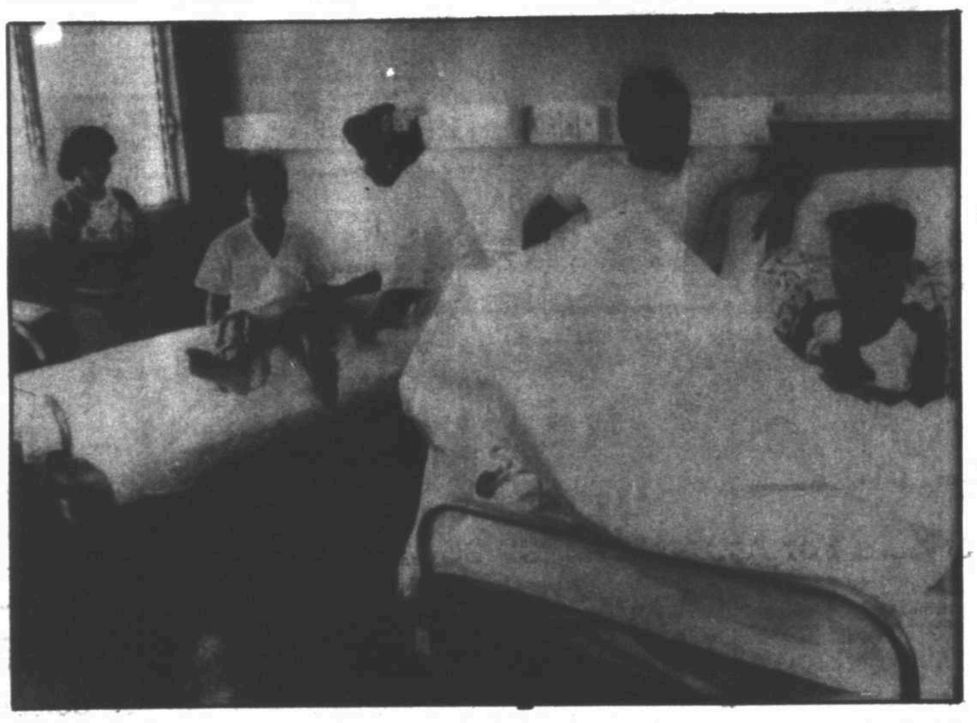
Television often is dull. Comparatively few Cubans have their own cars and a trip across town on the erratic bus system can take hours.

Some medicines are unobtainable and decent housing is in acutely short supply. Some residential areas of Havana are in such disrepair they resemble war zones.

Can Castro survive? His political thinking is out of line with the democratic trend among Moscow's allies, but Castro points out adversaries have underestimated him before.

He expresses confidence the revolution will survive without the Soviets, but many experts claim severe hardship would cause an uprising.



Uniformed school children line up outside their Havana school, above. The most pampered people in Cuba may be the children since the amount of resources spent on health care and education of children is unusually high for a Third World nation. The Castro revolution is proud of the health care for its children, as evidenced by the Juan Manuel Marquez children's hospital in Havana, left.

Cubans wait to buy food at a poorly stocked and dingy food market in Havana, left. The trappings of daily life in Cuba can be demoralizing and thousands of people leave the country each year. Scaffolding supports buildings in Old Havana, right. Some areas in Havana are in such disrepair they look more like war zones.

NATION IN BRIEF

'Wildman' quits city park job

NEW YORK (AP) — "Wildman" Steve Brill spent the '80s chewing weeds, seeds and leaves in city parks, but he won't swallow his pride.

The self-proclaimed "Man Who Ate Central Park" quit his Parks Department job Tuesday rather than change his dining tours of the great outdoors.

Brill's departure ends four years of peace between him and the Parks Department, which had him arrested in 1986 before a deal was cut to make him a city employee.

He blames his departure on Betsy Gotbaum, who took over as parks commissioner two months ago.

"She is sadly ignorant about the environment, and she is trying to force her ideas down my throat," Brill said before a news conference announcing his resignation.

Since 1981, Brill has led an estimated 15,000 people on walking-dining tours of city parks, encouraging people to sample the edible flora growing wild there.

Fire investigated

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A surgical tool capable of releasing a spark was in use when fire and smoke engulfed a car accident victim on an operating table at UCLA Medical Center, the Fire Department said Tuesday.

An autopsy was scheduled to determine if 26-year-old Angela Hernandez of Los Angeles died of the injuries for which she had just undergone surgery, or from the fire that started early Monday in the bedclothes covering her, said coroner's spokesman Scott Carrier.

Among other things, doctors planned to check if she had inhaled smoke.

The surgical tool, a penlike cauterizer used to stop bleeding from an incision, was present in the operating room along with pure oxygen, which raises the danger of fire, said Fire Department Inspector Ed Reed.

Finalists named

WASHINGTON (AP) — New Orleans and New York are the finalists in the competition to host the 1992 Democratic National Convention, party sources said Tuesday.

The 46-member site selection committee will recommend the two cities Wednesday to party Chairman Ronald H. Brown, who will make the final decision, the sources said.

Brown plans to visit both cities, possibly as early as next week, and announce his decision in mid-June.

HOW TO PLACE A GARAGE SALE AD

(1) Decide the address and dates where the sale will be held.

(2) Compile a list of the major items you want to advertise (furniture, appliances, speciality items, specific sizes or types of clothes) along with a few smaller items (pictures, kitchen utensils, etc.) If more than one family will be participating in the sale, ask each family to write out a list of the items they want to sell.

(3) Combine the lists of items to be sold, the complete address, the day and times the sale will be held. Remember, the best days to advertise for your sale will be at least the day before and each day of the sale. The deadline for placing your ad will be before 5:00 the day before you need your ad to appear, Monday - Friday.

(4) NOW - Call Classified at 682-6222 with the days of the sale and the items you want to list.
We offer two types of ads: word ads and space ads.
EXAMPLE WORD AD:

1234 MAIN Street. Saturday 9:00 - 4:00. Kids' clothes: boys 2T-4T, girls 6x-14, dining room set and lots of miscellaneous.
