SAN DIEGO (AP) — The tanker Exxon Valdez, source of the nation's worst oil spill, is headed back to sea after repairs to its shredded hull. But it won't be going back to Alaska and its name will be changed, officials said Friday.

The vessel that spilled nearly 11 million gallons in Alaska's Prince William Sound will be called the Exxon Mediterranean when it returns to duty, due next month, said Exxon Shipping Co. President Gus Elmer.

A joyride?

Coleman

BERNALILLO, N.M. (AP) — School's out, and it looked suspiciously like a summer joyride to Undersheriff Santos Baca when he pulled a child-like motorist over, but it was only actor Gary Coleman driving from Dallas to Denver to see his parents.

"He was so small," said Baca. "He had a pillow he was sitting on."

Coleman, 22, who is only about 4-foot-7, starred for years in the "Diff'rent Strokes" television series on NBC.

Baca of the Sandoval County Sheriff's Department saw the diminutive actor behind the wheel of a new Chevrolet heading north Thursday morning on Interstate 25 just north of Albuquerque.

The undersheriff said Coleman was polite and explained he was heading from Dallas to Denver in a rented car to visit his parents. He showed Baca a Colorado driver's license that listed his occupation as actor.

Weather watch

For the first time in 22 days there was moisture in the air in Midland.

On Friday afternoon a brief shower fell over portions of the Permian Basin. But it wasn't much and it didn't last long.

In fact, the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport recorded only "a trace of rain" during the past 24 hours.

And today's forecast calls for more dry conditions. The high is expected to reach the mid 90s and no rain is predicted.

Beechcraft may operate fuel facility

■ The old Tiger Charter facilities at Midland International Airport could again play a role in local aviation, with Cutter Beechcraft Inc. negotiating to open an aircraft operation at that location.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Cutter Beechcraft Inc. will create up to 25 jobs when its regional aircraft operations get started at Midland International Airport in about a month, company spokesman Ron Sanders said Friday.

Midland City Council on Friday unanimously approved a 30-year lease with Cutter Beechcraft, granting the company rights to sell fuel and lease city property.

The company's opening here still hinges on approval of an agreement with Rich-Air Co. for the sale of the former Tiger Charter facilities, where Cutter Beechcraft officials hope to open their business.

If the deal goes through, Cutter Beechcraft, a national aircraft manufacturing and distributing company, will sell fuel and airplanes, lease hangar space and provide repair services, Sanders said.

Negotiations with Rich-Air for the purchase of Tiger Charter facilities, located at the airport's south end and along State Highway 80, should be finalized by the end of next week, he said.

Rich-Air has owned the 63,700 square feet of Tiger Charter buildings for about two years.

Sanders, who has been a locally based sales representative for Cutter Beechcraft for about 13 years, said a majority of the up to 25 jobs created here would be filled locally.

The move would represent a substantial expansion of main Cutter Beechcraft operations in El Paso, Phoenix, Ariz., and Albuquerque, N.M., he said.

"Midland is centrally located," Sanders said of his company's reasons for opening offices here. "And the airplane population is such to warrant this kind of facility.

"It's also a very aviation-minded area."

Sanders said his company has planned between $500,000 and $750,000 in renovations at the Tiger Charter property, including resurfacing and restriping taxi ways and refurbishing buildings.

Cutter Beechcraft also is expected to stock the facilities with about $300,000 in spare parts needed to repair Beechcraft products, he said.

Victor White, airport director, said Cutter Beechcraft has agreed to rent the 9.2 acres of land for 8 cents per square foot annually for the first five years. After that, the rate could fluctuate based on property value changes, White added.

The company also has agreed to pay the city 4 cents for every gallon of gas sold at the site, he said.

White said the agreement represents almost two years of negotiations between Rich-Air, Cutter Beechcraft and airport officials.

Rich-Air is expected to sell the Tiger Charter facilities to Cutter Beechcraft for about $700,000, he said.

Richard Henderson, Rich-Air president, would not comment on the negotiations with Cutter Beechcraft but said his company has no use for the Tiger Charter buildings.

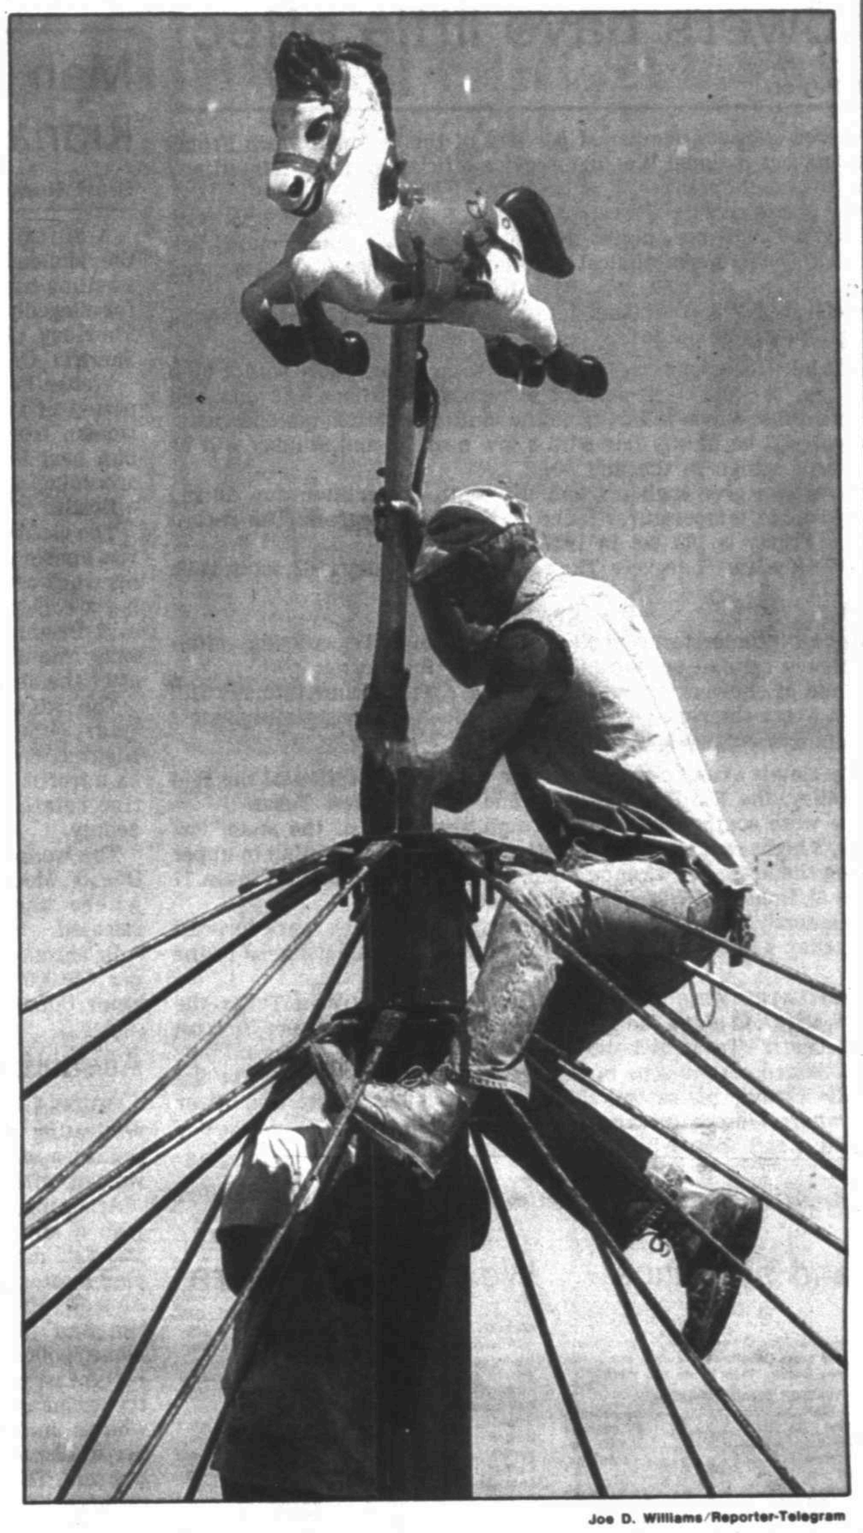

Rich-Air's acquisition of Tiger Charter in August 1988 made the company at that time the largest single fixed-base operation between Dallas and Los Angeles.

Rich-Air sells fuel and airplanes, leases hangar space and repairs private, corporate and even military aircraft.

Henderson said that although the Tiger Charter sale would mean stiffer competition, the facilities were in excess of his company's needs.

Marcy Blauvelt, supervisor of airport administration, said Cutter Beechcraft will be a welcomed addition to the local aircraft industry.

Woman claims Barry regular crack customer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An admitted cocaine addict testified in Marion Barry's drug and perjury trial Friday that she supplied crack cocaine to the mayor "about 25 times" in three months and brought it to him once along with a job application.

Lydia Pearson, testifying with immunity from prosecution, said she delivered cocaine to Barry once at the office of Barry campaign manager Anita Bonds.

"He gave me the money" for the crack and "I gave him the" application, she testified.

Bonds was not there at the time. Pearson eventually did get a city job as a contract representative in public housing, but said she recently left it.

Pearson, supporting statements by Rasheeda Moore, the former model who cooperated in the FBI undercover sting against Barry, said she supplied cocaine to the mayor from July-September of 1988 and lent the mayor her home for drug-smoking trysts.

She said Barry would usually phone ahead from his official limousine to say he was coming.

"I would let him in the house," she said, I would give him a bag and he

City hopes to reach compromise with MMH on sales tax proposals

■ Local voters may have a say on half-cent sales tax proposals, with both the city of Midland and the Midland County Hospital District vying for the funding.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Still hoping to avoid making a political wishbone out of the last half cent in available sales tax money, Midland city councilmen Friday tentatively approved putting the issue before voters Aug. 11.

City officials and Midland County Hospital District directors, who voted June 28 to put their half-cent sales tax proposal on the same ballot, have until Monday afternoon to work out a compromise.

State law allows only one entity to win the half cent, with the city taking precedence should voters approve both proposals.

"There's going to be a lot of closed-door politics going on," Councilman Jose Cuevas said after the council's decision. "We're hoping we can avoid a confrontation between the hospital and the city and put the issue aside until next January."

Friday's unanimous council vote was only the first reading for the city proposal. Councilmen are not expected to give final reading to the issue until Tuesday, a day after hospital directors are scheduled to decide whether to back off their proposal. Wednesday is the deadline for getting an item on the Aug. 11 ballot.

City officials want to stimulate business growth using the estimated $4 million generated annually by a half-cent sales tax.

Hospital officials want to use sales tax revenues for paying indigent care bills at Midland Memorial Hospital. The hospital district is expected to have a $1.2 million shortfall when the 1989-90 fiscal year ends, MMH officials have said.

Cuevas said that if hospital directors remove the issue from the Aug. 11 ballot, city councilmen also will back off for now.

Mayor Carroll Thomas said city officials would prefer a compromise where-

NATO offers Gorbachev hand of friendship

By Barry Schweid
AP Diplomatic Writer

LONDON — The NATO allies pledged Friday to sharply reduce both nuclear and conventional defenses in Europe, extending "the hand of friendship" to Mikhail S. Gorbachev and the rest of Eastern Europe.

Solemnly, President Bush and his 15 Western alliance partners assured the Soviet leader, who is under attack from left and right at the 28th Communist Party Congress in Moscow, that they hold "no aggressive intentions" and "will never in any circumstance be the first to use force."

■ Second summit starting/7C

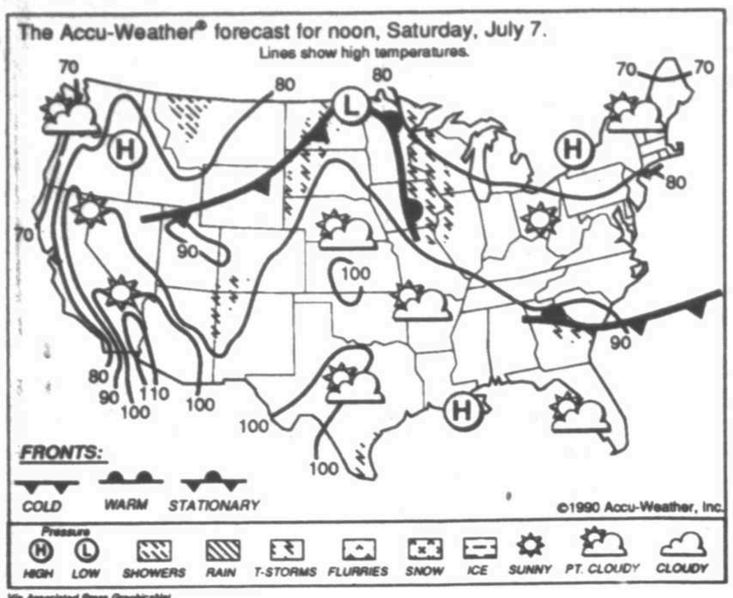

In Moscow, Gorbachev said he was ready to accept the leaders' invitation to address a meeting of the Western alliance, probably in December. And Soviet foreign ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov said, "We welcome the results of the (NATO) session."

But Gorbachev could take little comfort from Bush's comment that he had "big problems" with the idea of direct Western economic aid to the Soviet Union — a subject likely to dominate the Houston economic summit where Bush and many of the other Western leaders were flying after the NATO meeting.

In London, the allies agreed to shrink their arsenal of battlefield nuclear weap-

Showers have little effect

Staff Report

Scattered showers dampened portions of the Permian Basin Friday afternoon, but national Weather Service officials said the rainfall was hardly a drought-breaker.

"Some places may have received a tenth of an inch or so, but it's very, very isolated and most places did get much of anything," said Rick Davis, an NWS meteoroligical technician at Midland International Airport.

Meanwhile, forecasters are calling for sunny skies today with a high in the mid 90s and a 20 percent chance of afternoon showers and thunderstorms. Winds will be from the south at 10 to 20 mph and gusty.

Tonight will be mostly fair with a low near 70, and Sunday will be sunny with a high in the mid 90s.

Friday's 96-degree high marked the ninth consecutive day during which Midland temperatures failed to reach 100 degrees. The record high for Friday is 102, set in 1947.

Friday's low was 71 degrees. The record low for today is 62, set in 1958.

STATE

Scattered thunderstorms cooled East and South Texas Friday afternoon. Heavy rainfall accompanied many of the storms.

The line of showers extended from the coastal plains into the Hill Country. Other showers developed across the low rolling plains along a line from San Angelo to Wichita Falls.

Mostly cloudy skies covered the state with the exception of the Red River valley, the Rio Grande valley and parts of West Texas.

Winds were southerly at 5 to 15 mph over most of the state.

Friday's highs ranged from the upper 70s in areas of rainfall to upper 90s along the lower Rio Grande plain. Extremes at 3 p.m. CDT were 77 degrees at Hondo and 99 degrees at Beeville.

The National Weather Service said partly cloudy skies were forecast for Saturday with widely scattered showers and thunderstorms in the south.

Thunderstorms were possible for North Texas, Far West Texas, the Concho valley and along the Rio Grande. Stronger storms were forecast in south-central Texas and the Hill County.

Highs Saturday should be in the 90s across the state, except for the lower Rio Grande plains and the western portions of the Red River valley, where temperatures in the 100s were likely.

The Big Bend should be 104, forecasters said.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

She also delivered crack to Barry at two hotels after the mayor called her, she said.

She said she usually brought three $30 bags, because "that was his usual."

"He would give me $100, a lot of times he would give me the $10 change," she said.

"What did you do with the change?" asked Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Roberts asked.

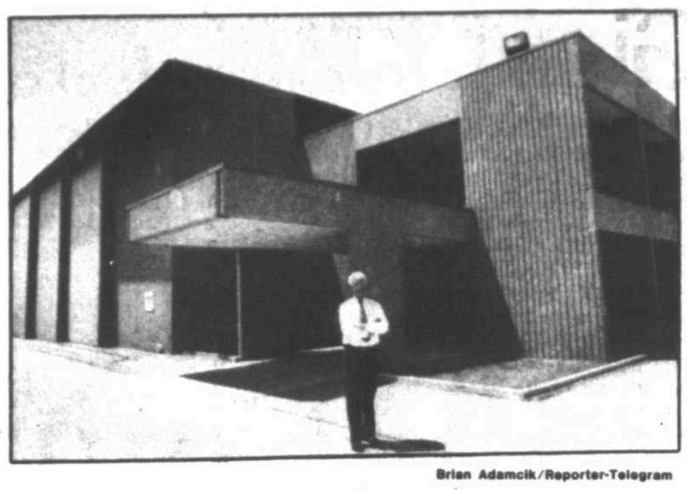

"Buy some crack," said the witness, who described herself as a recovering drug addict.

Pearson said she never saw Barry using drugs.

Moore testified earlier in the trial she and Barry used drugs more than 100 times, and that she got cocaine from Pearson for the mayor.

Barry, 54, is facing trial on 10 charges of cocaine possession, one count of conspiracy and three felony charges of perjury.

In another development, U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson reversed his earlier ruling and said Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan and Bishop George Stallings may attend the trial as long as they "observe the proprieties of the court."

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Man jailed in kidnapping

Staff Report

A 31-year-old man remained in the Midland County Jail Friday awaiting transfer to Ector County for allegedly kidnapping a woman Thursday night, Midland County Sheriff's Office officials said.

Walter Perry Brightman is suspected of abducting a 24-year-old woman from an apartment complex near Pueblo Road in Odessa, according to Midland and Odessa officials.

The victim said the suspect, who was known to her, forced her into his truck after getting angry during a conversation, Odessa police said. Brightman reportedly physically assaulted the woman twice after the abduction, officials said.

The two were stopped by a Midland County sheriff's deputy on Highway 80 early Friday morning on a traffic charge, when the victim related her story to the deputy.

The woman was transported to Odessa Medical Center Hospital where she was treated and released.

Brightman remained in jail under $50,000 set by authorities in Ector County, officials said.

Assault investigated

ODESSA — Odessa police are investigating a Thursday morning sexual assault of a 19-year-old woman, officials said.

According to the victim, a man with a knife grabbed her about 1:30 a.m. near an apartment complex located in the 9100 block of Andrews Highway, where the victim had just walked a friend home, police said.

The suspect, threatening to kill the woman, allegedly forced the woman into an apartment, told her to disrobe and raped her, police said. The woman was allowed to leave following the assault.

The incident was not reported to police until about noon Friday because the victim said she was frightened, police said. The woman was taken to a local hospital for testing.

The suspect was described as a white male, age unknown, about 5 feet 10 inches tall, about 200 pounds, unshaven with shoulder-length wavy hair. He was wearing a dark T-shirt and blue jeans.

Missing man found

PECOS (AP) — A wheelchair-bound man reported missing last week has turned up in El Paso.

Police called off the search for Donald James Costa, who was reported missing by his wife on June 26. Officials had feared Costa had fallen victim to the 100-plus degree heat that lingered in the city for 19 days.

But on Monday, Costa applied for aid from the Department of Human Services in El Paso. He told the agency he had received aid in Reeves County. Police learned he was in El Paso when the Reeves County DHS was contacted by the El Paso office.

"He's an adult. He knows his physical condition and apparently he left here of his own will," said police Lt. Dave Montgomery.

When Costa applied for aid he said he was living beneath a downtown bridge in El Paso.

Costa disappeared from the Christian Home, a shelter for transients in Pecos. He and his wife were operating the home for the director, who was on vacation.

Wreck probe continues

Department of Public Safety troopers continued the investigation Friday of a Thursday night car accident on Interstate 20 which claimed the life of a Crane woman.

The woman, 40-year-old Deanna Jo Russell, was killed when her westbound Nissan Sentra collided with an eastbound tanker truck which had crossed the median into westbound traffic lanes, DPS reports show.

The truck's driver, Marvin Luther Anderson of Odessa, was not injured in the accident. DPS troopers said Ms. Russell was the only person in the Sentra, which struck the right rear section of the tanker trailer.

The accident occurred around 10 p.m. Thursday, reports show. Investigators said Anderson apparently lost control of his truck when he swerved onto the median to avoid a vehicle which pulled in front of him.

Fire spreads to houses

ODESSA — Firefighters responded to a grass fire Friday that turned into a battle against five house fires, Odessa fire officials said.

The West Odessa Volunteer Fire Department was called out to the blaze at Lillard and 16th Street about 1 p.m., officials said. Odessa Fire Department aided fighting the fire.

The houses that caught fire were all abondoned homes, officials said. Two sustained total loss, one received heavy damage and two received "some damage," volunteer fire officials said.

Witnesses said they saw children running from the fire and beleived it was started by fireworks, volunteer fire officials said.

Man released on bond

A Midland man was released from jail Friday after he posted a $1,500 bond following his arrest for "injury to a child" on Thursday, police officials said.

Garrie Levert Samuels, 20, was arrested for injury to a child, a felony charge, after police officers were called to a residence in southeast Midland.

The child, 12, suffered large whelps and bruises on the chest, abdomen and back caused by a leather belt, police said. Reportedly, the child was being punished, the police report said.

NATO: Allies will reduce their defenses in Europe ons — in tandem with Soviet action — and relegate them to highly unlikely last-resort use.

They also said, in their windup communique, that "once negotiations begin on short-range nuclear forces, the alliance will propose, in return for reciprocal action by the Soviet Union, the elimination of all its nuclear artillery shells from Europe."

They also decided to field smaller and restructured ground forces, in the newest sign that NATO's 40-year job of containing potential Soviet-bloc aggression was nearing a successful end.

One shift in NATO doctrine, away from a quarter-century threat to use nuclear weapons promptly if attacked, drew most of the notice. More subtle but also significant was the decision to abandon the strategy of massing troops up against the East-West frontier, switching to smaller mobile units further back.

"Allied leaders will have maximum flexibility in deciding how to respond to a crisis," the communique said.

And, in a surprise move designed to allay one of Gorbachev's deepest concerns, the NATO allies agreed to set a limit on the size of Germany's military forces. That could mean a cut of more than 160,000 soldiers from the combined troops of East and West Germany after merger.

However, despite Gorbachev's still-unsuccessful effort to pump life into the Soviet economy, Bush distanced himself from a plan devised by West Germany and France to provide Moscow with a bountiful package of direct financial assistance that could run into billions of dollars.

"I have big problems with that one," Bush said. "I think the American people do," because of the Soviet Union's financial support of Cuba and because of its military spending at home. But the president said he would consider credits or technical help.

The economic summit next week, bringing together leaders from the seven richest democracies in the world, will have Gorbachev's economic restructuring program at the top of the agenda.

Bush said he hoped his resistance to direct U.S. assistance would not impede Gorbachev, who this week gave himself a two-year deadline to succeed.

"I have spoken very fondly and enthusiastically about what he's trying to do in terms of reform," Bush said at a news conference after the allied leaders adopted their history-making "Declaration on a Transformed North Atlantic Alliance."

The document's many concessions to Moscow, which won support even from cautious British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, reflected a joint judgment that "the Soviet Union has embarked on the long journey to a free society."

Together, the allies offered a pledge of non-aggression to each of the seven members of the Warsaw Pact.

CITY: Compromise still possible

(From 1A)

by each entity would split the half cent.

However, that would take an act by the Texas Legislature, which does not reconvene until January 1991, Thomas said. If approved by the Legislature, the city and hospital district could put unconflicting quarter-cent proposals on an August 1991 ballot, he said.

"The two entities need to work something out and not go against each other," Thomas said.

With the recently approved quarter-cent sales tax hike by the state, the county's overall rate would be raised to 8⅛ cents if voters approve both the city's and hospital district's quarter-cent proposals.

Hospital district Director David Porter said the board is considering the compromise, but he would not venture a guess as to what would happen during Monday's directors' meeting.

"There's a lot of discussion going on right now," Porter said. "I don't think everybody has made up their minds yet. I wouldn't be surprised at anything that comes out of that Monday meeting.

"I'm opposed to raising taxes, period."

Cuevas pointed out that an Aug. 11 sales tax battle between the city and hospital district would create an unhealthy political situation.

"You have the danger of losing both issues," Cuevas said. "If they both fail, you haven't accomplished anything."

Thomas said that when and if the city gets approval for a sales tax increase, a five-member board would be appointed to oversee the distribution of money to assist business growth.

Giant Old Glory stored in warehouse

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Hundreds of politicians could wrap themselves in it. Thousands of schoolchildren could salute it. But the U.S. government apparently has no use for the world's largest flag.

The 7.7-ton Old Glory was presented to President Reagan in front of the White House on Flag Day in 1983. The president said it would be unfurled once a year.

Instead, the Washington bureaucracy gobbled up the Great American Flag without even a burp.

"It's just tucked away in a big old building that's pretty much unused," said Ted Leininger, in charge of storing the flag for the General Services Administration.

That doesn't fly with Len Silverfine, the man who conceived the big banner and persuaded an Evansville tent maker to stitch together 2 acres of super-strong red, white and blue polyester.

The flag's stripes are 16 feet wide and 411 feet long. Each star is 15 feet in diameter.

Silverfine and the corporate sponsors he lined up gave the flag to the White House on the condition it be unfurled each Flag Day at the Washington Monument.

"I promise you your government will keep it and treasure it and use it as a reminder of the greatness that is America," Reagan said before he recited the Pledge of Allegiance in front of the flag.

The next year, the Great American Flag was shunted to the less glamorous East Potomac Park. Then the banner was dumped in a dark warehouse in a remote corner of Washington. It's been there ever since.

"Here we have the flag always in the news, people thinking of ways to legislate respect for the flag," Silverfine said. "And here we have the biggest American flag, which because of its sheer size has the power to uplift the spirits. And it's sitting in this big, almost empty warehouse."

Silverfine, who runs an advertising agency in New York, said a few months ago a friend asked whatever happened to the big banner. Silverfine tracked the flag to the warehouse.

Now he's begun a campaign to liberate the flag. He's called congressmen, business leaders and friends, urging them to write to President Bush.

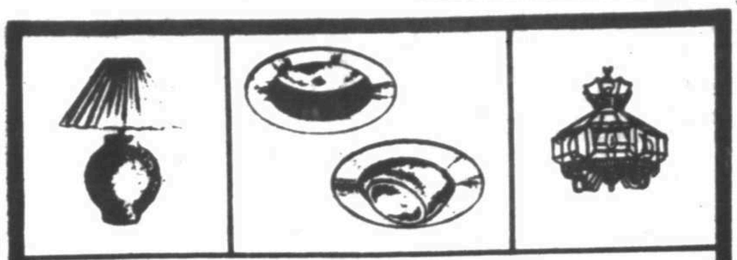

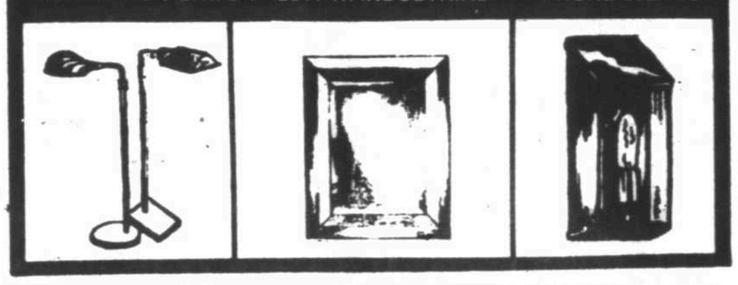

The White House is looking into the matter but believes that displaying the flag is the Interior Department's responsibility, said an official in the White House press office who would give only his first name, Howard.

Picture tubes getting new wide look

Not just bigger but stretched out sideways so they look more like movie theater screens.

These new tubes being developed for the much-ballyhooed high-definition televisions of the future will have screens nearly twice as wide as they are tall.

They'll also have higher-quality pictures — and breathtaking prices.

An international standards-setting group, the International Radio Consultative Committee, last month adopted the new wide-screen tubes as the world standard for HDTV, whenever it finally arrives.

The future cathode ray tubes will have a 16 by 9 "aspect ratio," or screen width versus height.

TV sets incorporating wide-screen CRTs will be available in Europe this fall for use in a new TV system that is an interim step towards the crystal-clear pictures promised by HDTV. Wide-screen sets should be available in the United States by 1993.

But they won't be cheap.

Estimates of the initial prices of these sets generally range from $3,000 to $5,000. As with other modern electronic gadgets, though, prices are expected to fall dramatically once a mass market develops.

Cleared priest still waiting for assignment

DALLAS (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest said he has been told it is divine intervention bringing him another assignment, but he will wait to see what happens.

The Rev. Justin Lucio was removed from the St. James Catholic Church last spring amid allegations of homosexuality and embezzlement that later were determined to be unsubstantiated. For a year, he has said Sunday Mass in a sweltering garage, waiting for a new assignment.

Supporters of the priest raised a stir when two priests in Plano were removed from their ministry following charges of alcoholism but were quickly reinstated.

"A friend of mine says God sent me the Plano situation," Lucio said. "The Plano situation was resolved in three weeks and we'd been asking for over a year."

But Lucio said he won't get too excited yet.

"My hopes have been raised once before," he said. "I certainly have some reservations, but this time there is a sense of positiveness and hope that everything will work out."

Lucio has been conducting a weekly mass from the garage of Casita Maria, an Hispanic center in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas.

Baylor returns donated body

HOUSTON (AP) — When 19-year-old heart patient Karen Seamans died last month, her family honored her last wish and donated her body to science.

They were devastated again last week when the body was returned.

"It was as if she had died a second time," said her mother, Barbara Seamans. "Except this time, we weren't prepared... We were sick."

Miss Seamans died June 7 of pneumonia at Ben Taub Hospital. At her request and with the encouragement of her doctors, the Pasadena family consigned Miss Seamans' body to Baylor College of Medicine in hopes others could learn from her death.

But on June 29, when the family called the hospital for a copy of the death certificate, they were told to send someone for the body because no one wanted it.

Baylor officials declined the offer because of a surplus of cadavers. Baylor officials said they were not told of the gift of Miss Seamans' body until last Friday, more than three weeks after her death.

The Sam Rayburn High School senior's body had decomposed too much to donate elsewhere, even though it had been refrigerated at the hospital.

"Karen couldn't even die with dignity," Barbara Seamans said. "There was no need to be disrespectful to her body. It had been though so much."

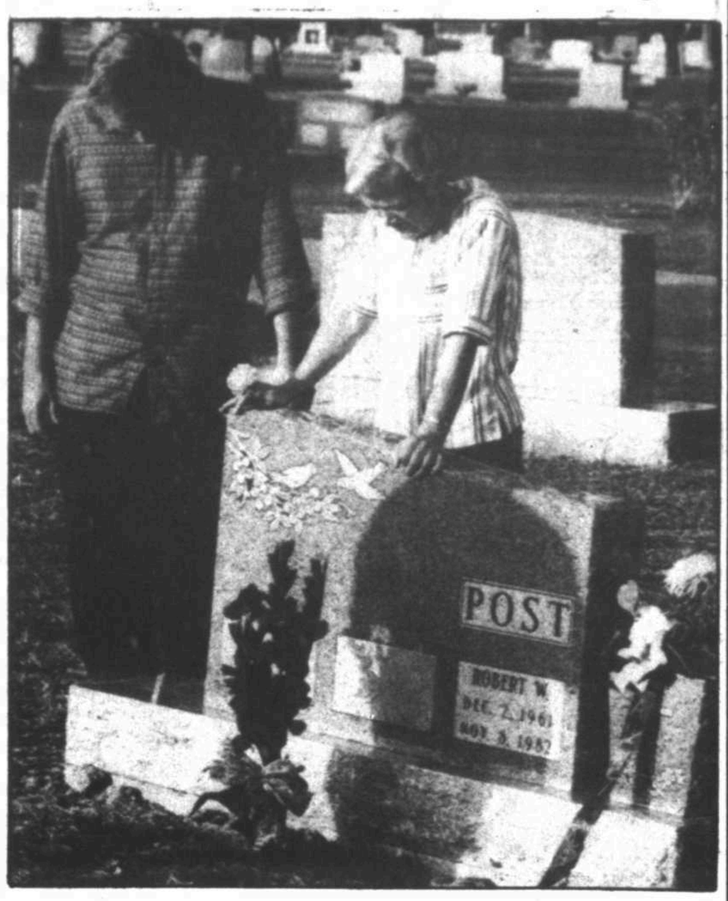

Karen Seamans was born with a restricted aorta — the main artery leaving the heart — clogging blood flow to the rest of the body. She underwent open-heart surgery twice by famed surgeon Denton Cooley, but still suffered from breathing problems that limited her activities.

Mrs. Seamans said her daughter was insistent about donating her body.

"That's what she really wanted, up to the end," Mrs. Seamans said. "When she was not able to speak, I even asked her, and she blinked twice, meaning 'yes.' I said, 'Are you sure, baby?' She squeezed her eyes hard and blinked twice again."

Baylor officials had notified Ben Taub and other area hospitals in May that it had 110 cadavers on hand and could not handle any others until further notice, said Baylor spokesman Claire Bassett.

"There has been a surplus (statewide) since about 1985, although we're not sure why," Ms. Bassett said. "At Baylor, we also reached capacity last year.

Steelhead is a trout, not a salmon

SEATTLE (AP) — Something's fishy with the steelhead trout. It's not a trout after all, it's really a salmon.

It's not a decision anyone's been waiting for with baited breath. Researchers say the fish that generations of Northwest fishermen have called steelhead trout really belongs to the genus of Pacific salmon.

And the name change was not announced on any great scale. Rather, it was quietly noted by officials in Washington state, where one agency governs trout and another governs salmon. It's been accepted by the conservation group Trout Unlimited, but not without some grumbling.

"There's been some dispute by a number of folks out in the Northwest who don't agree with the scientists who count the DNA and all," said Jerry Pavletich, West Coast representative of Trout Unlimited in Olympia.

Pavletich said he personally questions the need for the name change but "the scientific community calls the shots on these critters."

Steelhead are rainbows that migrate from streams to salt water, where they grow huge and acquire a steely blue color. They're highly prized by fishermen for their fight and flavor. They're also a favorite of sea lions.

Steelhead and salmon are anadromous fish, meaning they return to freshwater streams to spawn. But unlike the other Pacific salmon — and like its former close relative the Atlantic salmon — steelhead don't die after spawning.

Other native trouts, including cutthroat, golden, Mexican golden, Gila and Apache, also fall in the Pacific salmon classification.

Bracelets, rings glow in the dark from firefly tails

N.Y. Times News Service

Lightning bugs, those mild-mannered, airborne critters with the light-bulb butts, are a summer staple.

Since male lightning bugs neither sting nor bite and their slow flight makes them easy to catch, they provide an opportunity for a backyard nature lesson.

They can be kept in a jar, with a ventilated lid to provide air. Of course, there are all sorts of ooey-gooey variations, because their "tails" glow continuously once separated from the body, which results in the death of the beetle. Glow-bracelets and glow-rings are among the more popular, if perverse, uses for the bugs' bright end.

Fireflies are actually "good guys" in the garden: The adults and larvae prey on plant-eating slugs, snails and other small insects.

They have several common names — firefly, lightning bug, glow worm — the latter term used to describe either the wingless female or the larvae of several species of insect that also luminesce.

Rebel attack nears Doe's mansion

EDITORS: The following is based on a pool report filed by reporters in Monrovia and reports from Ivory Coast and Washington. Associated Press Correspondent Michelle Faul was among the Liberia pool reporters.

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Rebels firing heavy artillery attacked the capital's port Friday near the fortified mansion where President Samuel Doe tried to cling to power with a crumbling army.

Plumes of smoke from explosions rose from the city outskirts, and automatic rifle and artillery fire echoed across the besieged capital from dawn until noon.

A rebel fishing trawler fired at a coast guard cutter about five miles offshore. The trawler then gave chase, firing again before disappearing over the horizon.

A cannon from Doe's Israeli-built mansion fired two shells into the ocean to deter rebel boats.

A few soldiers raced in pickup trucks toward the port, but most of them abandoned the checkpoints they had manned since the rebel onslaught began Monday.

Witnesses said the rebels later withdrew from the port.

Doe, who seized power in a bloody coup in 1980, was in the executive mansion with troops of his minority Krahn tribe who have remained loyal. His top commanders and advisers fled last week.

U.S. Marines guarded a tanker carrying U.S.-supplied water to the president's mansion early Friday morning, a witness said.

In Abidjan, Ivory Coast, diplomatic sources said Doe had asked the United States to ferry him and 100 troops to his home region of Grand Gedeh County. The United States refused the request, which would have enabled Doe to continue the war, the sources said.

A senior U.S. government source in Washington said Doe had mentioned a desire to visit his home region, but did not ask for assistance to get there.

The United States has offered to help Doe leave Liberia, a condition set by rebels before they will accept a cease-fire. Doe reportedly has offered to resign on condition his safety and that of his minority Krahn tribe is guaranteed.

Renewed talks to end the war stalled Friday because a rebel delegation had not reached the negotiating site in neighboring Freetown, Sierra Leone.

A senior rebel official, based in the United States, rejected a reported plan for the six West African nations that were leading the negotiations to send a peacekeeping force to Liberia to oversee new elections.

But the rebel official, Tom Woewiyu, said he would go to Freetown for the talks.

When the rebels arrived at the port at dawn, they told troops less than two miles from Doe's Atlantic beach fortress to surrender, residents said.

The troops appeared demoralized and disorganized, and some said they were running short of ammunition and fuel.

Witnesses said soldiers had abandoned the main checkpoint on the capital's western approach road over the Saint Paul River Bridge.

After the port attack began, people living around the presidential palace bundled their belongings on their heads and moved into the diplomatic enclave of Mamba Point on the tip of the Monrovia Peninsula.

Soldiers continued to loot in the city under cover of a dusk-to-dawn curfew, but residents said the looting was less widespread than during the previous night.

Many of the city's 500,000 residents searched for food and carried buckets of water from rapidly depleting wells.

Monrovia has been without water for nine days and without electricity for one week. Most shops and markets have been closed all week, and some people have been begging for food or collecting leaves to eat.

The rebels began attacking the capital on Monday, but their offense has moved slowly.

The rebels invaded Dec. 24 from Ivory Coast, accusing Doe's government of corruption.

Doe's forces then killed hundreds of civilian members of the Gio and Mano tribes, seen as the main support base for the rebels. The rebels sought revenge by killing members of Doe's Krahn tribe and the Mandingo people who have supported him.

Yeltsin tells leaders party must accept democratic reforms

By T. Elaine Carey
N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — Bogged down in recriminations halfway through a watershed Soviet Communist Party congress, party leaders Friday appeared deaf to warnings that they were destroying what had once been this country's titanic political machine.

Russian Republic President Boris Yeltsin, who has more grass roots popularity than anyone else here, Friday told his fellow Communist leaders that they should quickly vote for democratic reforms or face a historical defeat.

Yeltsin bluntly told the more than 4,500 party leaders that they were missing the point. The congress was not to decide the fate of perestroika, but to decide the fate of the party itself, he said.

"This question (perestroika) is being decided by people outside the walls of this building," Yeltsin said. "It is decided in the Congress of People's Deputies (parliament). This congress is deciding the fate of the Soviet Communist Party itself."

Yeltsin said the party must hustle to adopt sweeping reforms, including changing such sacred traditions as the party's name. Otherwise, the party will split and "sooner or later it will be dropped from the ranks of real political forces in the country," the party maverick predicted.

The party will quickly find the people have turned against it, he warned. He doubted the party could beat other political parties if change wasn't immediate and radical.

As if to prove that Yeltsin was correctly reading the pulse of the people, coal miners brushed aside both the congress and its appeal Wednesday for them to cancel a one-day strike set for next week.

Addressing the conservatives who have been so outspoken during the congress, Yeltsin used Eastern Europe to drive home his point about reform.

"Those who think about other variants should look at the fate of the communist parties in Eastern Europe. They were separated from the people ... and found themselves sidetracked."

He suggested the party rename itself the Party of Democratic Socialism and that party committees operating in such key government bodies as the military and KGB be disbanded. Many congressional delegates consider such suggestions heresy.

Coal miners were no less blunt in telling the party leaders that they and their congress were out of touch. "We have nothing in common with the party congress," said a spokesman for the Arctic city of Vorkuta's coal mining strike committee.

Numerous conservative party leaders have won applause at the congress by saying they were speaking for the workers when they denounced perestroika's reforms.

Party General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev backed up the congress' appeal by asking miners to abandon the strike planned for Wednesday. The strike was expected to hit the country's major coal fields in Siberia and the Ukraine.

A coal miners' strike last summer cost more than a billion dollars and was settled when the government gave in to virtually every demand.

Bulgarian president resigning

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — Socialist President Petar Mladenov submitted his resignation Friday, bowing to mounting pressure from striking students and the political opposition.

Mladenov's letter of resignation was read on television news at 8 p.m., meeting a deadline set by the students in an ultimatum issued earlier in the day.

They demanded Mladenov's resignation after he suggested that tanks be used to stop anti-government demonstrators in December.

The students chanted "Victory! Victory!" when they heard the news, the state BTA news agency reported.

They have been conducting a sit-in for 26 days to push their demands for democratic change after the former Communists won last month's parliamentary elections, the first free balloting in Bulgaria in 58 years.

Atanas Kirchev, a student leader, said the students would probably declare an end to their strike, BTA reported.

Mladenov, who was instrumental in ousting Bulgaria's longtime strongman Todor Zhivkov, said he was resigning because he did not want "to become the cause for an escalation of tensions in the country," BTA reported.

"That is why I request the Grand National Assembly to accept my resignation," Mladenov's letter was quoted as saying. The news agency said the TV announcer's hands shook as he read the statement.

Students, teachers and parents from across the country joined in the student strike in Sofia, and the growing split in public opinion led to fears of violence similar to that which has rocked Romania in recent months.

Premier Andrei Lukanov, the head of the government, appeared on national TV shortly after Mladenov's resignation was announced and appealed for order so parliament could meet Tuesday for its first session in a calm atmosphere.

About 1,000 of the student strikers had gathered in front of the presidential building since Wednesday to press their demands for Mladenov's resignation.

They had called for a 30-minute warning strike if Mladenov did not step down Friday night and a general strike on Monday if he had not resigned by then.

The Union of Democratic Forces issued a statement also urging Mladenov to resign. Trade unions, other opposition groups and the mainstream Agrarian Party also backed the students' demands, BTA reported.

Mladenov, in a nationwide television address on Wednesday, implicitly admitted having called for the use of tanks during the December demonstrations. He commented after experts authenticated a videotape in which he was heard to say "Let the tanks come." He had earlier said the video had been doctored.

The videotape was broadcast on a TV election program by the main opposition alliance, the 16-party Union of Democratic Forces, three days before the June 17 parliamentary runoff elections.

The film was made Dec. 14, when about 50,000 angry demonstrators converged on Parliament to demand that the Communist Party give up its monopoly on power. The protesters later dispersed peacefully and tanks were not called in.

Mladenov came to prominence in November when he and other reform-minded party members ousted hard-liner Zhivkov after 34 years.

Mladenov, who had served as foreign minister for 18 years, replaced Zhivkov as Communist Party leader and president. He immediately began taking cautious steps toward reform and opened a dialogue with opposition groups that quickly organized.

In April, the Communists changed their name to the Socialist Party and won 211 of the 400 seats in parliament in the June elections. The Union of Democratic Forces won 144 seats.

Mladenov was to have served until the parliament drew up a new democratic constitution, in about 18 months.

Most of the original demands of the students, on strike since June 11, have been fulfilled, including the resignation of the TV director and publication of alleged election irregularities.

But according to BTA, the students drew up a new list of demands Friday. They have demanded that a date be set for a public trial of Zhivkov, 78, who is in detention. He has been charged with misappropriation of state property, inciting ethnic hostility and grave abuse of power.

They also demand the removal of parliamentary deputies associated with the former Communist regime's decisions, such as setting up harsh prison camps and agreeing to take part in the 1968 Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia.

They (students) have been conducting a sit-in for 26 days to push their demands for democratic change...

Cheney to tour bases in Greece

ATHENS, Greece (NYT) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney arrived in Greece Friday for a four-day visit to inspect U.S. military bases and to sign an agreement for an eight-year extension of base rights.

Unlike years past, when the visit of any American official provoked demonstrations and even terrorism, Cheney's arrival on Crete caused no reaction and little criticism.

The visit is part of a tour of Greece, Spain, Turkey, Norway and Portugal. Cheney will spend two days inspecting two American bases on Crete before signing the new accord in Athens on Sunday.

On Monday, he is to confer with Prime Minister Constantine Mitsotakis, a recently elected conservative.

Earlier this year, the American government announced that it would close two bases at Athens as part of its military cutbacks in Europe.

But it will keep the bases on Crete, which is close to Libya and the Middle East, and a number of smaller installations in the country.

Art sells for $8.6 million

LONDON (AP) — A diptych by 16th century master Lucas Cranach fetched $8.6 million, a record for a German painting, Christie's auction house said Friday.

The painting was purchased by an anonymous bidder who participated in the auction by telephone, Christie's said.

The two panels bore portraits of two Electors of Saxony, 6-year-old John Frederick the Magnanimous and his father John the Steadfast. The diptych was part of a group of art works from a castle at Wildenstein in Switzerland.

The previous high price for a German painting was $2.7 million for a winter landscape by Caspar David Freidrich, sold at Christie's Monaco in 1987.

The previous high for a Cranach was $638,000 for a portrait of a girl, sold in New York in 1983, Christie's said.

260,000 firebombs used

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Demonstrators have hurled about 260,000 firebombs in the past year, injuring 383 policemen and destroying 32 vehicles, police said Friday.

No comparable figures were given, but police said radical students, dissidents and other demonstrators used more firebombs despite a law that took effect July 7, 1989, to punish firebomb users.

Of 1,001 people arrested for hurling firebombs since the law took effect, at least 32 were given sentences and imprisoned, police said. They said the others were released or were on trial.

In South Korea, firebomb throwers can be sentenced to less than three years in prison. Government officials said firebomb users would be punished sternly to end violent demonstrations.

Fisherman nets ship

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A fisherman's net snagged a sunken wooden ship filled with 300-year-old porcelain pieces off Vietnam's Con Dao island, the official Vietnam News Agency reported Friday.

The 31-year-old fisherman discovered the ship in water about 40 yards deep and about 125 miles southeast of Ho Chi Minh City, it said. It did not say when that happened.

The report said the 1,719 articles aboard included table sets, flower vases, plates and pans worth millions of dollars.

Archeologists have not yet identified the ship, it said.

More escapees caught

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico (AP) — Chihuahua state attorney general Jose Miller said authorities have located six more escaped convicts and their arrest is expected soon, the Excelsior newspaper reported Friday.

A total of 34 convicts escaped, four people were killed and eight others injured during a bloody jailbreak and riot Tuesday in Chihuahua, 225 miles south of El Paso, Texas.

Twenty-six of the escapees were found Tuesday and Wednesday, according to Gabriel Nahas, director of Chihuahua state's 14 prisons.

Miller also said three of four prison guards who had been detained on suspicion of being involved in the escape and riot were freed for lack of evidence.

He said the fourth guard confessed to having sold an Uzi submachine gun to convicted drug trafficker Juan de Dios Levario Quiroz, who allegedly led the jailbreak and who was killed while trying to escape.

The 1,500-inmate prison is the largest in the state.

Protected turtles seized

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The slaughter of sea turtles continues on Mexico's coasts despite a decree barring the killing, the navy said.

In the past week, navy patrols have seized more than five tons of turtles and other protected marine species, the government newspaper El Nacional Friday quoted the navy as saying.

The confiscations were from 58 Mexican and eight foreign boats, the newspaper said. One person was arrested, it said.

Tenors to forget their egos for charity

By Frances D'Emilio

ROME (AP) — The world's three greatest tenors — "they each have a Stradivarius in their throat," says maestro Zubin Mehta — have set aside egos to sing together for the first time.

Jose Carreras, Placido Domingo and Luciano Pavarotti — in alphabetical order, please — will sing tonight under the stars and amid the ruins of the Baths of Caracalla in a charity sendoff to the World Cup soccer championship.

"Music and sport are the most universal things in the world," Domingo said at a news conference Friday.

The concert is scheduled to follow the consolation match between the national squads of host team Italy and England to determine third place in the monthlong competition. The champion will be the winner of Sunday's game in Rome between Argentina and West Germany.

The three tenors, who will be accompanied by two orchestras led by Mehta, made a big show of their camaraderie at the news conference at a Rome hotel near the Pantheon.

"It's a great challenge for each of us to sing near the other two," Carreras said. "I don't think it's a competition. On the contrary, it's an honor."

With photographers and camera crews stumbling over each other to capture the three together, Domingo extended a hand, and the other two tenors and Mehta put a hand on top of the others. The stout Pavarotti wiped sweat off his forehead with a handkerchief, poured a glass of mineral water for Carreras, sitting at his side, and affectionately patted him on the head at one point.

'It's a great challenge for each of us to sing near the other two. I don't think it's a competition. On the contrary, it's an honor.'

— Tenor Jose Carreras

After an opening orchestral rendition of Giuseppe Verdi's "I Vespri Siciliani," the tenors will each get a turn, appearing first in alphabetical order to avoid possible offense to egos, then alternating the order. Each man has four solos, with Pavarotti getting the final turn with Nessun Dorma (Nobody Sleep!), from Giacomo Puccini's "Turandot."

Nessun Dorma ends with a crescendo of "vincero, vincero, vincero," (I shall win), which Pavarotti sang in a commercial for Italian state television's coverage of the World Cup and in a concert in Milan in late May to inaugurate the competition.

For the concert's promoters, the winning moment will be the show's last 20 minutes, when the three tenors will sing together a medley of popular songs, including "O Sole Mio."

"How do you think I feel?" leading the three tenors, Mehta asked. "It's a dream."

The three tenors agreed to sing without pay and will donate to charity their share of revenues — from television showings, ticket sales as well as sales of videos, cassettes and albums from the concert, which will be recorded.

"Our pay is being together in this marvelous musical — and human — circumstance," Pavarotti said.

Domingo, born in Spain but raised in Mexico, said four Mexican villages devastated by an earthquake in 1985 will benefit from his share. Carreras, who battled back from leukemia, said he'll donate his proceeds to foundations fighting the disease. Pavarotti's share will help benefit sufferers of a variety of diseases as well as a marrow transplant center in Pesaro, Italy.

Pavarotti said the three agreed to do it in part because Carreras, back to the stage after his illness, "is so exceptional, and because the soccer championship is such an important moment."

American vocalists sweep gold medals in Tchaikovsky contest

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviets dominated the piano section of the ninth international Tchaikovsky music competition, while Americans swept the gold medals in the vocal division, officials announced Friday.

Akiko Suwanai of Japan took first place in the violin section of the contest, and West Germany's Gustav Rivinius won the gold medal for cello.

In the piano division, Soviets Boris Berezovski took the gold medal and Vladimir Mishchuk won the silver. Three competitors shared the bronze medals: Anton Mordasov of the Soviet Union; Kevin Kenner, an American living in West Germany, and Johan Schmidt of Belgium.

Deborah Voigt of New York City won the gold in the female vocalist division and Hans Choi, of Flushing, N.Y., won the gold in the men's division.

Alyssa Park, a 16-year-old violinist from Lexington, Ky., who charmed Soviet audiences and won a huge ovation in the finals, took the bronze medal, and also was honored with two more medals: most talented and most artistic.

The competition, which began June 14, drew 335 competitors from 51 countries. It took on special significance because this year is the 150th anniversary of Tchaikovsky's birth.

The gold medalists will perform at a special concert today night, and the runners-up will play on Sunday.

"I feel totally exhausted," Voigt, 29, said Friday. "It was a grueling and grinding experience."

The soprano and former apprentice with the San Francisco Opera Company celebrated with champagne, and plans a U.S. concert tour starting in Chicago.

Choi, a baritone and former student at the La Scala opera company of Milan, Italy, had said his biggest problem was language. "I must sing in six languages, and I must sing perfectly in six languanges, because the judges come from so many countries."

Suwanai, 18, of Tokyo, told the Tass news agency she was happy to win a first prize after coming in second at contests in Genoa, Brussels and Japan.

She said some credit for her victory had to go to Tchaikovsky. "He is not just my most favorite composer. Possibly, there is no other composer who is so close to me spiritually."

Park, a junior in high school who also studied at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, won the bronze for her renditions of works by Tchaikovsky, Paganini, Mozart and Bartok.

In an interview after the winners were announced, she said: "I was very honored, but also very puzzled," because the international jury awarded her the medals for the most artistic and most talented, but only ranked her third overall.

Park, the youngest of the 65 violinists who entered the competition, admitted feeling some tension, "but I just tried to treat it as a concert and play."

Berezovsky, a 22-year-old student of the Moscow Conservatory, won for his performance of works by Tchaikovsky, Chopin and Liszt.

The international jury also awarded two fourth prizes to pianists Rolf Plagge of West Germany and Stephen Prutsman, of Los Angeles.

Ten Americans were among the 48 finalists who competed Thursday night.

For the first time since the competition began in 1958, foreign funding was used for organizing the contest. The hard-pressed Soviet hosts turned to Pioneer Electronics of Japan to contribute a $4,000 stereo set for each category winner as well as subsidizing hotels and transportation for visiting musicians.

Each winner also wins 5,000 rubles, a non-convertible currency that cannot be taken from the Soviet Union.

Wimbledon's big weekend arrives

■ Ivan Lendl is denied once again, and for the first time in nearly 100 years, the Wimbledon men's final will feature the same two competitors for the third consecutive summer.

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Boris Becker barely escaped the clutches of a teen-age monster server, and Stefan Edberg left Ivan Lendl still prisoner to his Wimbledon obsession.

Becker, desperately swatting balls while lying on his back and leaping through the air, had to play one of his finest matches to get by 18-year-old Goran Ivanisevic 4-6, 7-6 (7-4), 6-0, 7-6 (7-5) and reach the finals against Edberg.

Becker and Ivanisevic electrified the Centre Court crowd, including royal sisters-in-law Princess Diana and the Duchess of York, with 2½ hours of power tennis and diving volleys that will rank among the most glorious in Wimbledon's history.

Edberg played almost as brilliantly in a 6-1, 7-6 (7-2), 6-3 triumph but wasn't challenged. He beat a stunningly flat Lendl, who crept away glumly from the scene of his annual summer torment.

Lendl had used a Czech word, "zazrany," to describe his yearning to win Wimbledon. No one asked him the Czech word for choke.

Yet that is exactly what the top-seeded Lendl seemed to do. He looked tight, wooden, mechanical, while Edberg appeared fluid, relaxed and light on his feet.

■ Close friends Zina Garrison and Martina Navratilova battle today in what the 33-year-old Navratilova is calling a 'foot race to the net.'

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — The oddsmakers aren't taking Houston's Zina Garrison very seriously as she prepares to challenge Martina Navratilova for tennis' top honor.

That's okay with her. "That just makes me work harder," she said.

Garrison faces Martina Navratilova in the women's finals at Wimbledon. It is her first time; Navratilova's 11th.

"I'm here," the 33-year-old Navratilova said after beating Gabriela Sabatini 6-3, 6-4, to reach the final. "That's what I've been working for."

What Navratilova wants most is to come away from Saturday's final with a record ninth Wimbledon singles title. She is currently tied with Helen Wills Moody at eight.

"I'm sweating already just thinking about it," she said.

George given 10 day pass

Associated Press

NEW YORK — New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner finished testifying in front of Commissioner Fay Vincent on Friday and was given 10 days to submit any additional evidence he wants considered.

Steinbrenner

Neither Steinbrenner nor Vincent would reveal what was discussed during nine hours of questioning over two days at a Manhattan law firm.

Vincent is investigating Steinbrenner's tumultuous relationship with former Yankees outfielder Dave Winfield and a New York City gambler. Vincent also is reportedly taking a wider look at the way Steinbrenner has run the team he bought in 1973.

"His testimony was helpful to me in evaluating his situation and his cooperation was complete," Vincent said during a sidewalk news conference. "I will try, depending on the state of the record in front of me on the 16th, to make a decision reasonably quickly."

Vincent, who has authority to do anything "in the best interests of baseball" and the power to issue any penalty up to a lifetime ban, was asked whether he had preliminary opinions in the case.

"Well, I do," he said.

But when asked what opinions he had become to form, Vincent said: "I'm not going to tell you."

Vincent said that he, alone, would judge the case, but that "I've got very good people who will give me advice."

Embarrassed Herzog quits

■ With his team floundering, red-faced Whitey Herzog, no longer able to hold his head up high, takes the blame for the Cardinals' demise and resigns as St. Louis manager.

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — The White Rat deserted the St. Louis Cardinals' sinking ship.

Whitey Herzog, whose team won three pennants in the 1980s, couldn't stomach losing in the 1990s. So he resigned as manager on Friday.

"I made up my mind in San Francisco," he said. "I was totally embarrassed by the way our team played. I just feel very badly for the ballclub, the organization and the fans."

The Cardinals lost a three-game series in San Francisco last weekend by scores of 3-2, 4-0 and 9-2. St. Louis, in San Diego for a game Friday night, is 33-47 and in last place in the National League East, 14½ games behind Pittsburgh.

Coach Red Schoendienst, the only man who won more games as Cardinals manager than Herzog, replaced him on

Gadzooks! The gall of some golfers

Golfers against drinking and driving (GADD) were organizing more than ever before. Why? Because tee shots were dropping in all the wrong places.

Wyatt

It was an evil that had to be dealt with, of course, but hasty judgments on the part of GADD ultimately provoked the innocent majority — those oh-so-sober hackers who believed a handicap to be water within eyesight — into a somewhat unexpected position.

"Gee, I didn't mean anything by it," exclaimed one fellow, who sailed a lofty drive into the parking lot, denting several cars. This fellow had obviously had one too many before taking the swing. His bag was filled with empties.

Yet some golfers simply and unequivocally stink up the course no matter the state of their sobriety and these poor souls, intent on improvement, were caught in the middle of GADD's expectations. Before long GADD began flying off the handle with accusations against each and every erratic golfer.

At a GADD convention in Jackson Hole, Wyo., the organization's chairman, Chip Shotts, shed some light on the dilemma.

"We set out to cleanse the game of golf," Shotts addressed the throng, "and we've nearly succeeded in getting these carousers off our courses.

"But we're living in a time when almost everyone plays golf, and all of a sudden, the game is overflowing with hackers. It's getting more and more difficult to pinpoint the wrongdoers, the ones who are drinking and driving.

"We've got to do something immediately that will keep our greens, our tee boxes and our traps shut to all the evils that plague our sport," he waved his fist in finality.

After the uproar of the crowd settled to a murmur, an elderly gentleman hoisted himself up with the help of a multicolored umbrella.

"We're ducking and dodging from these ruffians more and more," he bellowed. "Even if we eliminate the ones who are drinking and driving — a singularly difficult task — we'll still have to put up with these hackers. Are you aware that some of these yokels haven't learned to replace divots?

"Half of them refuse to take lessons before terrorizing our courses, and I saw one perfectly sober player putt with the flag still in the cup," he stammered in obvious astonishment at his own conclusion.

"My advice is that we kick these amateurs off the courses altogether, the whole kit'n kaboodle!"

The umbrella waved and the crowd erupted in agreement.

Chairman Shotts motioned for silence and got it.

"Then it's settled," he said. "We scratch GADD and go another direction.

"How about Golfers Against Lousy Linksters?"

The cheers that greeted his suggestion signaled the birth of GALL.

GALL had a lot to do with the way the nation's beginning golfers were treated in the days that followed. Only those golfers associated with GALL were being admitted to courses across the land. Avid hackers out to improve their fundamentals were turned away by the thousands.

It took a march on Washington with signs that read: 'A slice is nice' and 'Common folks use Pennzoil, too' before action was taken. Taken it was, however, and from it stemmed the idea to let Anheuser Busch conduct a PGA event, letting no-names such as Greg Hickman and Brian Clear take the early-round leads.

And since it was not played at Birmingham's Shoal Creek Country Club, where blacks never rise above the rank of caddy, there wasn't anybody with GALL at the event.

Soccer fans rabid all over — except in America

Associated Press

■ World Cup Final: Italy-England, 1 p.m. CDT

NEW YORK — There's nothing else like it and nothing else even comes close. The passion, the exuberance, the patriot fervor that grips the entire world except for the United States.

Soccer's nothing in America. And because of that, it's almost impossible for people here to comprehend how BIG it is in the rest of the world.

From kids playing barefoot in Trinidad, to the asphalt soccer fields of Hong Kong playgrounds, to the marshland fields of the Seychelles, they've been waiting for Sunday's World Cup final for four years.

And when it's over, the streets of Argentina and West Germany will erupt in either celebration or violence — very possibly both. The World Cup is war without weapons and on Sunday four years of battles come to a climax.

It's not like the World Series. It's not like the Super Bowl. Those are merely championships contested by clubs comprised of hired guns, players whose allegiance is to the team with the largest pile of cash.

The World Cup is country, patria, fatherland. All of us against all of them. Our system against their system. Our people against their people. If the team wins, then we all triumph.

That's why it's different. Each time Italy won a game, the streets of Rome filled with deleriously happy fans. They clogged the Via del Corso and the Piazza Venezia, waving gigantic flags. They chanted "Viva Italia!" and "Viva Schillaci!"

A month ago, Salvatore Schillaci was barely known. With five goals, he became an Italian hero, more popular than any politician or movie star. People ran down streets chanting his name. It must have been the same way two thousand years ago when Roman warriors returned from victorious battles.

In the rest of the world, soccer is not a sport, it's a craze. In Singapore, newspapers publish special editions that have stories about the matches. Since many of the games began at 3 a.m. local time, there was no way they could make the regular papers.

In Hong Kong, kids wearing replicas of West German uniforms dive for balls across asphalt fields painted on urban playgrounds, oblivious to any skin that's scraping off their legs.

In the Seychelles, a thousand miles from anywhere, this year's World Cup is the first live sporting event ever telecast. The islands have only had television since 1983 and, up until now, all games have been shown on videotape.

In the Netherlands, the fans become a sea of orange — orange shirts, orange pants, orange socks, orange hats, orange jackets and orange banners. And the really dedicated paint their faces orange, too. The hero there is Ruud Gullit, who keeps his hair in dreadlocks. So, naturally, you can buy Ruud Gullit baseball caps. The color, of course, is orange.

In England, the specialty is chanting. "Ing-ga-land, Ing-ga-land, Ing-ga-land" they sing to the tune of "The Stars & Stripes Forever." "Come On England!" is popular when they are behind. The travelling fans put up Union Jacks with the names of their hometowns. The travelling fans — the army, as they call it — take over public parks and stretch out in the daytime to catch some rays. Britain, after all, is still damp and cloudy, even in the summer.

In Brazil, the fans beat their drums and dance the samba. Soccer there is usually a celebration, a combination of freedom rally and rock concert. Fans dance in the aisles at games, with some women tossing off their tops as their emotional level rises. And after the Brazil team lost in the second round, Coach Sebastiao Lazaroni was treated like some sort of mass murderer.

In Argentina, they can't believe their team is in the final. The team was too old, it was playing too badly, the odds were too great, Diego Maradona was too hurt. And now, when shockingly they advance to the final, the country erupts in celebration and violence.

Crazy things happen in soccer. When Italy beat Ireland, trains came to a halt outside Rome's central train station. They were just a quarter mile from the platform, but they stayed stuck for 45 minutes while the great national victory was celebrated.

When West Germany beat the Netherlands, two dozen West German fans found the only restaurant open in Milan at 2 a.m. For two hours they ate, drank and chanted German beer-drinking songs. There are a lot of German beer-drinking songs, and they don't even do "99 Bottles of Beer on the Wall."

When Cameroon beat Costa Rica, a dozen fans of the Indomitable Lions started an impromptu rally in Milan, marching with their flags to the Piazza Duomo. "Forza Cameroon!" they chanted, pumping their fists in the air. A soccer game had put them, put their entire country, on the top of the world.

That doesn't happen here. The country is too big. The people are too diverse. There's too much to do, nothing big enough to gain the focus. Even if the U.S. team were good, few would care. Yo, dude, gotta head to the beach. Bring the volleyball and the boombox and we'll catch some tunes.

It's a different world out there, once you go over the border. For the rest of the globe, this is as important as things get.

Morris throws one-hitter for Detroit

Associated Press

Jack Morris, retiring 25 consecutive batters during one stretch, pitched a one-hitter and Cecil Fielder hit his 28th home run as the Detroit Tigers earned a 4-0 victory over Kansas City, snapping the Royals' four-game winning streak.

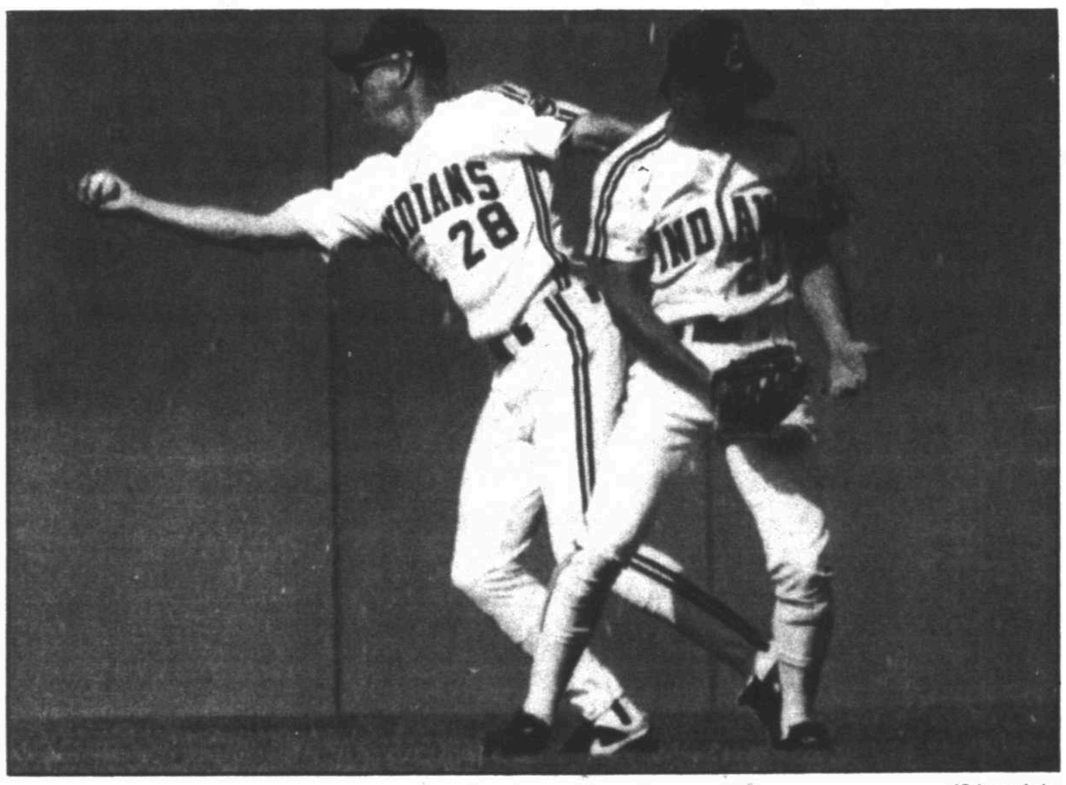

Morris (8-9), who beat Tom Gordon in Kansas City last Sunday, gave up a one-out single up the middle to Kurt Stillwell in the first inning. But the next batter, George Brett, hit into a double play and Morris retired the next 24 batters.

Morris struck out six, giving him 21 strikeouts in his last three starts and 86 for the season. The one-hitter was the third of his career.

Morris is 6-2 in his last eight starts after enduring a career-high eight-start winless streak from April 22 through May 27 when his record dropped from 2-1 to 2-7.

Gordon (5-6), who is 0-3 in his three starts against Detroit this season, gave up four runs on nine hits in 6 2-3 innings. He walked four and struck out six.

Fielder, leading off the fourth, hit the first pitch off the facing of the second deck in left field.

Five days after tossing a no-hitter and losing, Andy Hawkins pitched 11 shutout innings against Minnesota. He still came away a loser.

Brian Harper's run-scoring two-out single snapped a scoreless tie in the 12th inning to help Minnesota beat New York 2-0 in the first game of a doubleheader. The Yankees came back for a 5-3 victory in the second game, snapping a five-game losing streak.

Last Sunday at Chicago, Hawkins became only the second major leaguer ever to lose a complete-game no-hitter when the White Sox scored four runs in the eighth inning with the help of three errors and two walks for a 4-0 victory.

Like Dave Stewart and Fernando Valenzuela on Wednesday, Hawkins was trying to match Johnny Vander Meer's record of two consecutive no-hitters for Cincinnati in 1938. Hawkins didn't do it, but he continued his remarkable rejuvenation.

"That's the way it goes," Hawkins said. "I've had games where I've gotten a lot of runs but gave up a lot, too. I'm just happy to be throwing good again."

Indians 6, Athletics 1
Athletics 12, Indians 1

Rickey Henderson and Mark McGwire each hit two home runs and Jose Canseco hit his first in a month as the Oakland Athletics set a team record with seven home runs and beat the Cleveland Indians, gaining a split of their twi-night doubleheader.

Jamie Quirk, who had four RBIs in the second game, hit one of the home runs.

Oakland starter Mike Moore (7-7) needed far less. He pitched four-hit ball over seven innings, allowing one run, walking four and striking out two.

Blue Jays 1, Mariners 0

John Olerud homered in the sixth inning and David Wells pitched seven-hit ball over eight innings as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Seattle Mariners for their fourth straight victory.

Olerud's homer, to deep right field, was his 10th of the season and second in as many games.

Wells (6-2) struck out seven and didn't walk a batter to improve to 5-1 as a starter. Tom Henke pitched the ninth for his 16th save.

White Sox 4, Orioles 2

Lance Johnson broke a tie with a two-run triple in the seventh, lifting the Chicago White Sox over the Baltimore Orioles.

Johnson's hit made a winner of Melido Perez (7-7), who pitched seven innings and gave up five hits while striking out eight. Perez won for the first time since June 11 and raised his career record against the Orioles to 4-0.

Rangers 4, Red Sox 0

Texas right-hander Kevin Brown, shelled by Boston for nine runs and seven hits over 1⅔ innings in his previous start last Sunday, beat the Red Sox with a seven-hitter.

Brown, 10-6, blamed the 15-4 pounding by the Red Sox for his snubbing by AL All-Star manager Tony LaRussa when pitchers and reserves were announced Thursday.

Brown fired his second shutout of the season and of his career and completed his fourth game of the year. Brown didn't allow a runner past second base, striking out two with three walks and had 13 groundouts over the first seven innings.

The Rangers added a run in the seventh on Jack Daugherty's RBI single off reliever Tom Bolton.

Astros thrashed again on road

Associated Press

Jerry Goff and Andres Galarraga had RBI singles as the Montreal Expos scored two eighth-inning runs then held off Houston, 3-2, handing the Astros their sixth straight loss.

With the game tied at 1-1, Junior Noboa drew a leadoff walk from reliever Juan Agosto (4-3). After Larry Walker sacrificed, Tim Wallach was given an intentional walk and Agosto was relieved by Larry Andersen.

Goff, pinch-hitting for Nelson Santovenia, who was pinch-hitting for reliever Bill Sampen (7-1), singled to right to score Noboa. Galarraga, who had two doubles, followed with his third hit to score Wallach.

Dave Schmidt, the fourth Montreal pitcher, worked the ninth for his 11th save. He allowed an RBI single by Franklin Stubbs, scoring Javier Ortiz, a pinch-runner for Rafael Ramirez, who led off the inning with a double.

Stubbs gave the Astros a 1-0 lead when he led off the second against Oil Can Boyd with his 12th homer.

After getting the leadoff man aboard with a double in the first two innings and failing to score against Danny Darwin, the Expos tied the game in the fourth when Larry Walker hit his ninth homer.

Boyd, who left with his eighth no-decision in 16 starts, pitched six innings, allowing one run on two hits, striking out four and walking one.

Darwin, making his second start since replacing Jim Clancy in the Houston rotation, allowed one run on five hits in 6 1-3 innings, striking out four and walking one.

Mets 10, Braves 7

Kevin Elster doubled to break a tie as the New York Mets rallied for six runs with two out in the eighth inning and won for the 16th time in 17 games, over the Atlanta Braves.

Mackey Sasser hit a three-run homer and drove in four runs to match a career high as New York won its fifth straight game and 23rd in 26. The victory was the sixth straight and 10th in the Mets' last 11 road games.

NL Roundup

David Cone (5-4), allowed seven hits, struck out 10 and walked three in 7 1-3 innings for his fourth straight victory.

The Braves led 2-1 behind rookie left-hander Steve Avery when Dave Magadan started the eighth by reaching on second baseman Jeff Treadway's error. Kevin McReynolds walked with two outs and Mark Carreon singled to tie the game.

Elster's double scored McReynolds and Carreon, and Sasser followed with a run-scoring single to chase Avery (1-3).

Cone greeted reliever Joe Boever with a single and Howard Johnson walked to load the bases. Magadan followed with a two-run single, scoring Sasser and Cone.

Sasser hit his third homer in the ninth, off rookie Rusty Richards.

Tommy Gregg hit his second homer, a three-run shot off reliever Ron Darling, in the Atlanta ninth. The Braves added a run on an error by Elster, a double by Ron Gant and a wild pitch by Darling.

Reds 4, Phillies 1

Danny Jackson pitched another strong game, getting home runs from Barry Larkin, Billy Hatcher and Hal Morris as the Cincinnati Reds beat the Philadelphia Phillies.

Jackson (3-2), who has allowed two earned runs or less in nine of his last 10 starts, gave up five hits, struck out six and walked five in 7 2-3 innings. Randy Myers, the third pitcher, got the last three outs for his National League-leading 17th save as the Reds won for the third time in four games.

Jackson, on the disabled list with a shoulder problem most of last season, was trying for his first shutout since Sept. 4, 1988, but lost it when Carmelo Martinez hit his seventh homer in the eighth.

Rookie Jose DeJesus (0-2) pitched into the seventh inning, allowing nine hits, while striking out six and walking none as the Phillies ropped their third straight game.

GEORGE: All smiles after meeting

From 1B

Howard R. Tyler Jr., a former prosecutor, deputy attorney general and federal judge, was retained by Vincent as special counsel. In addition, Vincent said he would discuss the case with investigator John M. Dowd and deputy commissioner Stephen Greenberg.

Steinbrenner, who snuck out of the building on Thursday in freight elevators, went out a side entrance on Friday. The owner was smiling as he got into the front seat of a station wagon. He said he didn't know what to expect.

"You can't really tell in these things," he said.

As Steinbrenner left the building, several truck drivers cheered, "Go Steinbrenner!"

"At least I've got the truck drivers on my side," the Yankees owner said.

Vincent said that Steinbrenner could submit testimony by additional witnesses in affidavit form by July 16. He gave the owners' lawyers until Wednesday to suggest any changes in procedure.

Dowd, who led the Pete Rose inquiry last year, compiled a secret report on Steinbrenner that has been seen only by Vincent and the commissioner's aides. The two-day hearing consisted of Vincent questioning Steinbrenner, presumably about the subject matter of the Dowd report.

"The person who knows the facts on this case best is Mr. Steinbrenner," Vincent said. "He's testified for a day and a half and his testimony is the essential testimony. I feel other testimony would be at the option of Mr. Steinbrenner's lawyers and I'm asking them to submit it in affidavit form."

Vincent said the hearing was more informal than a judicial proceeding and that he would be focusing on Steinbrenner's answers.

"Obviously the testimony by Mr. Steinbrenner over the last two days is much more relevant to me than the information in Mr. Dow'ds report," Vincent said.

Stephen E. Kaufman, Steinbrenner's lead lawyer, confirmed the deadlines Vincent had given but did not wish to say what his client would do next.

"I don't think we have any comment to make," Kaufman said.

Midland clay shooter to compete in France

Staff Report

Midlander Ralph Cramer will be one of 15 shooters representing the United States at the World Sporting Clays Championships, next week near Paris, France.

Cramer, one of two shooters in the U.S. senior delegation is considered one of the best in the country in his age bracket.

The United States Sporting Clays Association will send representatives from eight different divisions to compete against their counterparts from 45 different countries.

Sporting clays, referred to as "golf with a shotgun" by USSCA president Bob L. Davis, of Houston, is a relatively new clay target sport in the States. Sporting clays enthusiasts shoot clay targets thrown in a manner which simulates the flight pattern of various game bird and game animals.

Sporting clays have been in the United States for a mere five years, according to Cramer.

The Team USA shooting delegation consists of 15 participants, the top five of which comprise the U.S. team. Other Team USA participants include the Class A, B, C and D qualifiers, as well as the top two qualifiers in the ladies, seniors and youth.

Joining Cramer in the senior division is Illinoisan Waren Woody.

Angels win squeaker

Staff Report

SAN ANTONIO — Howard Nichols hit two home runs and Brandy Vann quashed a win-threatening rally in the ninth inning to pace the Midland Angels to a 6-5 win over the San Antonio Missions in Texas League action here Friday.

The Angels snapped a two-game losing streak and evened their current series at two games apiece.

Nichols made himself a thorn in the side of Mission starter Dan Opperman, 7-4, with a two-run homer in the first and a three-run shot in the third. Vann picked up his fourth save in less than a month by inducing Luis Martinez and Henry Rodriguez to ground out with two runners on in the ninth.

Both Nichols homers were against a stiff wind at V.J. Keefe Memorial Stadium. The veteran third baseman has now hit five homers in his first 10 games as an M-Angel.

San Antonio took a 4-3 lead in the second on a grand-slam homer by Homar Rojas off Don Vidmar, who was making his first Class AA start after being promoted from Class A Palm Springs earlier this week. Vidmar lasted four innings before David Martinez was sent out to open the fifth.

Martinez, 2-0, picked up the win with two-plus innings of solid relief, striking out five during his brief stint.

The Missions made it 6-5 with an unearned run off Martinez in the seventh.

Tim Meeks followed Martinez with 2⅓ innings of one-hit relief, but needed help in the ninth after hitting Rojas with one out on a 1-2 pitch.

Lefthander Mike Hook was sent in to pitch to lefty-batting Tom Goodwin, but walked the Mission speedster on five pitches, bringing on Vann.

The Angels gained a full game on the TL West-leading Missions, but are still five games back going into tonight's game. Joe Grahe, 5-5, will start for Midland, while Jamie McAndrew, 1-0, will toe the rubber for San Antonio.

WHITEY: Made up his mind to resign last week

From 1B

an interim basis. Herzog, in his 11th year as manager, has 822 victories; Schoendienst won 1,028 games in 12 years in the 1960s, '70s and briefly in 1980.

"I don't think that I have done a good job as a manager this year," Herzog said. "I just can't get the guys to play and I think anybody could do a better job than me.

"I'm not going to single out any players. My players are all trying. The effort is there, but sometimes I don't know if the minds are there."

First baseman Pedro Guerrero said he and his teammates were partly to blame for Herzog's resignation.

"I'm kind of shocked about it," said Guerrero, who attended the news conference. "I feel kind of responsible. I know that I haven't done the job that I did last year at this point."

While Guerrero is signed for next year, several Cardinals stars are eligible for free agency at the end of the season. Vince Coleman, Willie McGee and Terry Pendleton are among the others who will cost the Cardinals big money to keep.

"When Whitey brought up the subject of resigning several weeks ago, we said 'no,'" Cardinals president Fred Kuhlmann said at the news conference. "But everybody feels it's in the best interests of the team to make a change now."

The Cardinals won the World Series under Herzog in 1982 and were NL champions in 1985 and 1987.

"I guess in his heart he felt it was time to step down, and maybe somebody else could light a fire under the team," said Philadelphia manager Nick Leyva, who coached under Herzog.

"To me he's a baseball genius. I've never seen a man who could adjust so quickly. His concentration is unbelievable. His memory is unbelievable. He never forgets a thing. Whitey will be back," he said.

Only Tommy Lasorda, who has managed the Los Angeles Dodgers since 1977, has been with the same team longer than Herzog among active managers.

The team's top officials — Kuhlmann, general manager Dal Maxvill and executive vice president Mark Sauer — flew to California for the announcement.

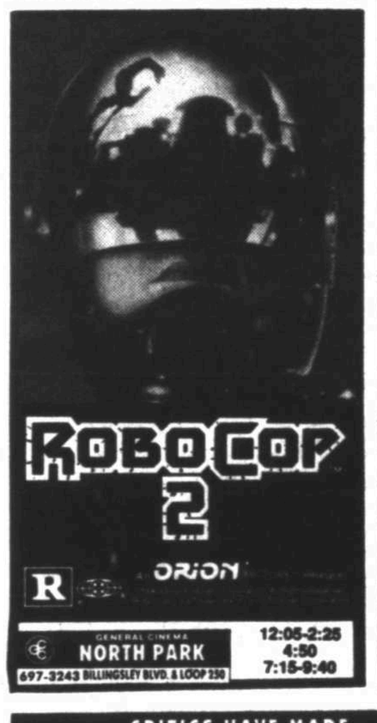

They gave no indication when they would name a permanent replacement. Kuhlmann said Herzog would remain with the club as a vice president, although the exact nature of his position was not outlined.

Schoendienst last managed the Cardinals in 1980, taking over briefly for Herzog when he moved from the field to the front office as general manager. Schoendienst was a Cardinals player for 14 years.

Strictly Creative too much for field

Staff Report

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. — Strictly Creative, sitting just off the pacesetters for a quarter of a mile, took the lead at the top of the turn and drew off to a convincing 3-length victory in Friday's feature race.

The race, which was reserved for New Mexico-bred 3-year-olds, carried a purse of $5,500.

Under a patient ride by veteran Carlos Rivas, Stricity Creative stalked the early pace of dueling speedsters Evelyn's Blade and Catonie Choke. Rivas asked his filly to run on the turn, and she circled the leaders and pulled away down the lane.

The daughter of Dawn Of Creation, who had finished second in the Road Runner Handicap on May 13, improved her career record to two wins from nine starts.

Strictly Creative, who was trained by Ralph Black, covered the 5½ furlongs in a quick 1:04.3.

LENDL: Was well aware he was slow

From 1B

"I didn't move well today. ... I felt a half-step slower," Lendl conceded after his worst loss in games since his first Wimbledon match in 1979.

Lendl, who has tilted at Wimbledon's windmills for 11 years, said he will pursue his quixotic dream again next year. He rejected any notion that his months of training on grass and his avoidance of the clay courts of the French Open had been for nought.

"I knew that was always a possibility, that I would take lots of time, prepare well and may not win," he said. "I was willing to take the chance, and I'm probably going to do it again."

Edberg scorched Lendl in 23 minutes in the first set, winning the last five games while allowing Lendl only 10 points. Both players held service throughout the second set, but that merely set up a one-sided tie-breaker that Edberg polished off with two blazing returns past a startled Lendl.

Lendl, broken in the sixth game of the third set and obviously headed toward defeat, couldn't help but smile at his cruel fate two games later when a mis-hit forehand cross-court return landed safely out of his reach.

"Under the circumstances, I don't think you can play much better," Edberg said of his performance. "Of course, there are no limits in tennis, but it was as good as it could be today."

Sunday's final between Edberg, the 1988 champion, and Becker, the winner in 1985, 1986 and 1989, marks the first time since the early 1890s that Wimbledon had the same two finalists three years in a row. In those days, the defending champion went right to the final.

The women's championship will be decided Saturday, with Martina Navratilova trying for a record ninth singles title against Zina Garrison, playing her first Grand Slam final. It will be the first all-American women's final at Wimbledon since Navratilova beat Chris Evert in 1985.

Becker, who stunned Wimbledon when he roared to the championship as a 17-year-old, was on the receiving end this time against a youngster who appears on the verge of greatness.

Ivanisevic, the second-most popular player in Yugoslavia after Monica Seles, is a skinny, 6-foot-4 left-hander with the wingspread of a vulture. He hit 14 aces — one less than Becker — and 10 service winners.

But Ivanisevic was more than just a big server. He showed a flair for the dramatic at the net, a deft touch on volleys, solid groundstrokes and speed all over the court.

He did not lack for theatrics, either, hamming it up by bouncing a ball off his head, flipping his racket at a persistent pied wagtail that had flown onto the court, and stretching out on the lawn after missing a dive for a shot.

It was all refreshingly youthful and honest — he said he wasn't sorry he missed the bird — but most of all it was wonderful tennis.

Becker called it "one of the best grass-court matches I've ever played. ... During the match I thought about somebody who was 17 who was playing like that. He's got the hardest serve and the best serve of anybody I've ever played."

Ivanisevic broke Becker in the first game of the match with strong returns, backhand and forehand, on the last two points, then came back from 15-40 on his first service to hold with two aces and two service winners.

Ivanisevic had seven aces in the first set and wasn't broken until the 11th game of second set when, at deuce, a forehand slid along the net cord and rolled back and a backhand volley fell short.

Becker, who played well in the first set, lifted his game to an even higher level as he sensed his opportunity in the tie-break. He won the last four points by blending power and finesse.

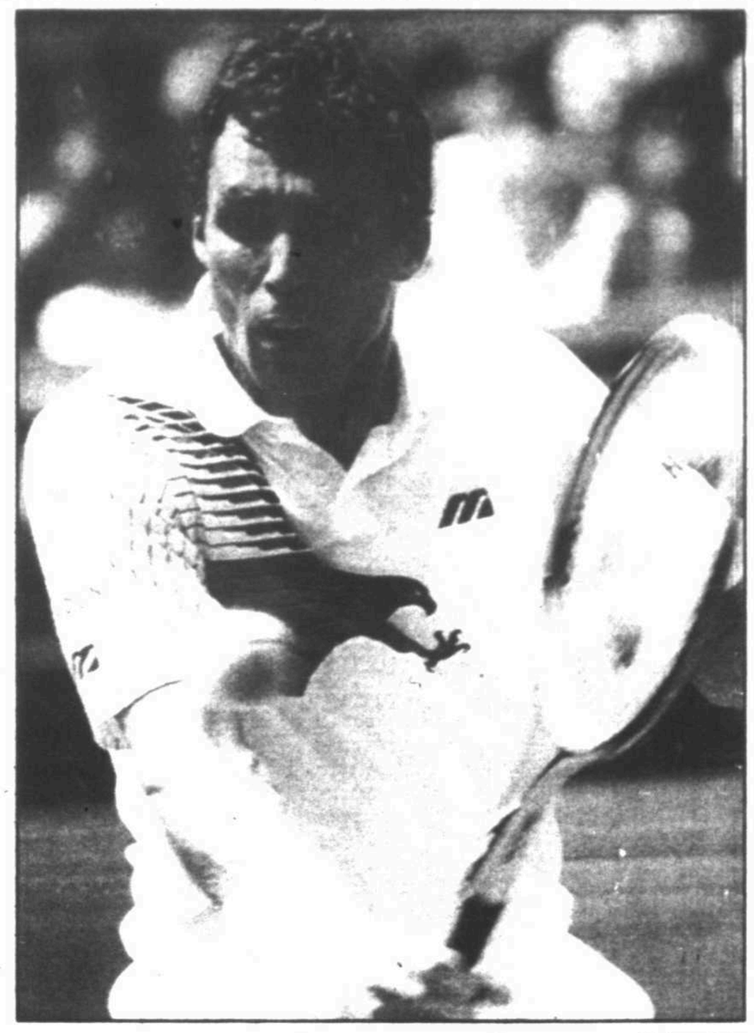

Becker lofted a lovely lob that landed on the baseline, out of Ivanisevic's huge reach, to go up 6-4, then clinched the set with a forehand return down the line that again kicked up chalk on the baseline.

Becker played perhaps his best tennis of the year in the third set, while Ivanisevic weakened a bit. Becker complemented his three aces with powerful groundstrokes, especially on the backhand, and allowed Ivanisevic only seven points in the 18-minute set.

But Ivanisevic fought back gallantly in the fourth set, holding his first service with an ace and not yielding again until the tie-break. Even then, Ivanisevic did not go timidly. He fought back from a 4-2 deficit to take the next three points. Becker then smacked a pair of service winners to move within a point of victory.

The end came quickly on Ivanisevic's next serve as Becker shot a fierce backhand that Ivanisevic flicked back short of the net.

The crowd roared in a long, standing ovation for both players as they wrapped their arms around each other's shoulders in recognition of the splendor of their efforts.

Ivan Lendl failed again in a try to win Wimbledon — the only Grand Slam tournament he has yet to conquer.

ZINA: Houstonian made underdog by bookmakers

From 1B

This year, Steffi Graf is not standing in Navratilova's path. The top-seeded West German was knocked out 6-3, 3-6, 6-4 in the semifinals by No. 5 Zina Garrison.

Garrison, a 26-year-old serve-and-volleyer, has never played in a Grand Slam final and has beaten Navratilova only once in 28 tries. No wonder London bookmakers have made Navratilova an overwhelming favorite — even Graf predicted that "it's Martina's tournament."

Garrison, the first black Wimbledon women's finalist since Althea Gibson won the title in 1957 and 1958, doesn't appreciate being taken lightly.

"That just makes me work harder," she said. "I've played her close in a lot of situations. And when you get to a final, a final like this on grass, anything can happen."

Navratilova, who is one of Garrison's best friends on the tour, agreed.

"She has beaten Steffi, so she can certainly beat me," she said. "It's going to be a foot race to the net. Whoever does it better will win."

Both finalists have had to overcome mental demons to get this far — Navratilova fighting through burn-out, and Garrison shedding her history of losing in the clutch.

Navratilova said she felt "about as low as you can get" in the spring of 1989 after a loss to Natalia Zvereva in Hilton Head, S.C. That's when she turned to Billie Jean King, who told her, "You're in good shape, you're just as fast as you used to be. You're just not there mentally."

Navratilova, who hadn't taken an extended break from the game for 15 years, followed King's advice and relaxed by the pool for a week.

"I got a tan on my stomach for the first time in 12 years," she said. "Then I was able to get started from scratch with Billie Jean. I was ready to go, and I made the commitment. She said then, 'It's not really for this year, this is for next year's Wimbledon. We don't have enough time.'

"I had no idea how much work that was going to be."

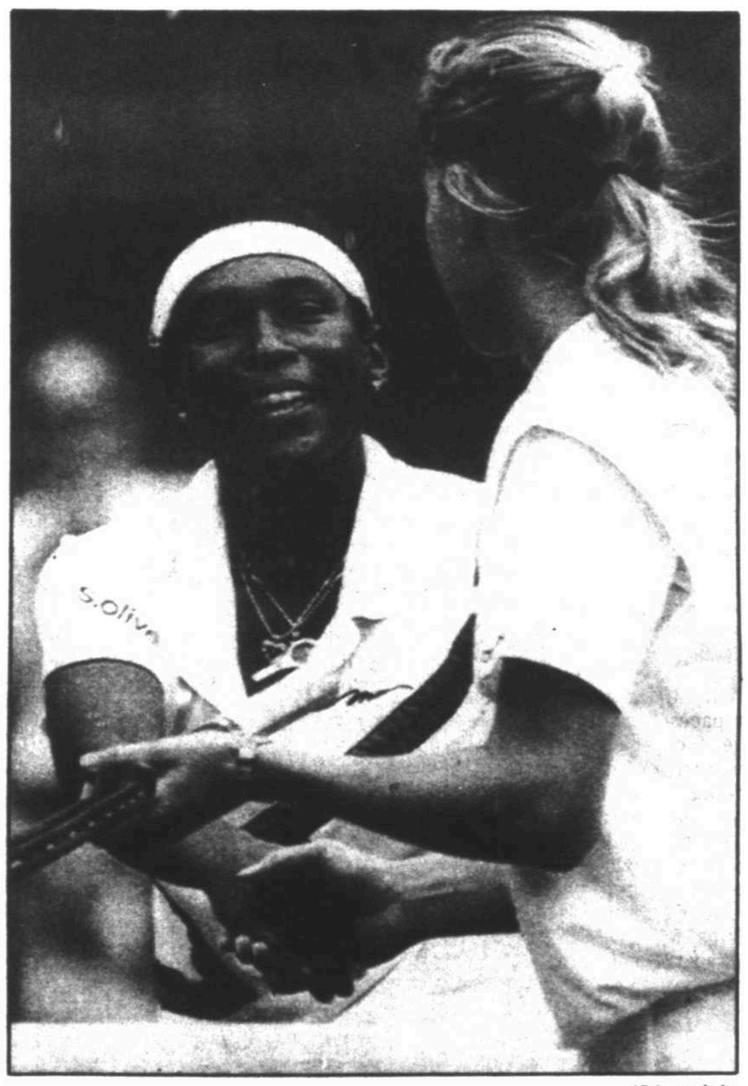

Garrison, meanwhile, was a steady top 10 player who never managed to win the big one and got tagged as a choker. She hit bottom last month when she blew a match point and lost in the first round of the French Open to unheralded Wiltrud Probst of West Germany.

But she wrote that loss off to lack of preparation on clay. Wimbledon was the tournament she had been working toward for months.

Garrison said she drew inspiration from 30-year-old Andres Gomez's victory in the French Open men's final. And she credited her husband, Willard Jackson, with helping her relax, and her coach, Sherwood Stewart, with honing her game.

Now Garrison is looking for the ultimate reward.

"One more match," she said. "That would be a dream come true."

Edberg uses grass-court savvy to score easy win

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Playing grass-court tennis is where Stefan Edberg shines and he was brilliant at Wimbledon on Friday.

Edberg reached his third consecutive Winmbledon final, taking just 1 hour, 47 minutes to end Ivan Lendl's latest quest for the title, 6-1, 7-6, 6-3.

"Under the circumstances, I don't think you can play much better," Edberg said. "Of course, there is no limits in tennis, but it was as good as it could be today."

Performing better would indeed be difficult. Edberg sacrificed only 20 points in 15 service games against Lendl. Edberg allowed Lendl but one break point in the match, in the eighth game of the second set, and he saved that with an exquisite forehand volley.

Edberg is a natural on the fast surface, while Lendl has had to work hard to get to the level of having a chance against the top grass-court players.

This year, Lendl skipped the French Open, which is played on clay, and worked for almost three months honing his game on lawns from Australia to London. It was a commitment that Edberg appreciated.

"He has put his aim on this one and he tried everything he could do and obviously, he must be feeling a little bit sad," the Swede said. "But, on the other hand, I've got to do my job as well, and I wanted to win this one and I'm still in contention to do it."

Edberg outplayed Lendl all over the court but especially at the net. He won 79 percent of his volleys, compared with 57 percent for Lendl, who looked wooden and reluctant to leave the baseline in the early stages.

In Sunday's championship match, Edberg will play second-seeded Boris Becker, the defending champion. It will be the third conseutive year that the two have played for the men's title, the first time that has happened since the early 1890s, when the defending champion automatically played in the final.

It will be the 24th time Becker and Edberg have played, with the West German holding a 15-8 lead.

Star of the future emerges in Ivanisevic

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — A cocky newcomer with an unpronounceable name and an unplayable serve gave the defending champion a taste of his own medicine Friday and Wimbledon a taste of the future.

Unseeded Goran Ivanisevic, an 18-year-old Yugoslav playing in his first Grand Slam semifinal, provided Centre Court with some of its greatest thrills of the tournament in a shootout with Boris Becker.

The West German said he needed "one of the best grass-court matches I've ever played" to win.

In the end, experience prevailed as Becker shook off a first-set loss and settled down for a 4-6, 7-6 (7-4), 6-0, 7-6 victory, advancing to the final for the fourth time.

The two put on a powerful display of serving. Becker had 15 aces and 54 service winners, while Ivanisevic had 14 aces and 53 serve winners.

In his five-set quarterfinal victory over Kevin Curren, the 6-foot-4 left-handed Yugoslav pounded out 25 aces.

"He's got the hardest serve and the best serve of anyone I've ever played," Becker said.

The West German was quick to annoint Ivanisevic as an heir apparent. Asked if Ivanisevic was a Wimbledon champion of the future, Becker replied: "It's a very good chance."

"During the match, I thought about somebody who was 17 and played like that," Becker said, referring to himself when he burst onto the scene to win Wimbledon in 1985.

Blaming his loss on "a little bad luck and maybe inexperience," Ivanisevic served notice that this was just the beginning.

"I needed to play more semifinals like this one," he said. "I think now I can learn something. Next time I will do better."

Perhaps by then people will know how to pronounce his name: Ee-vahn-EE'-suh-vich. Stefan Edberg, who reached the final by beating Ivan Lendl, repeatedly referred to him as Iwanavich, Ivanivich and Ivano.

Ivanesevic had upset Becker in the first round of the French Open last month. That match was played on clay, considered Becker's weakest surface.

O'Meara yields to Wadkins

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Mark O'Meara soiled an otherwise steady round with a double-bogey on the 18th hole that handed Lanny Wadkins a one-shot lead after Friday's second round of the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

"I played the round I wanted to. I was only displeased with one shot," said O'Meara, the first-round co-leader who finished two tours of Kingsmill Golf Club's 6,790-yard layout in 10-under-par 132.

O'Meara had been on track to shoot a 5-under 66 that would have put him a shot ahead of Wadkins, whose 66 earlier in the day left him at 131.

Instead, O'Meara hooked his drive on the 438-yard 18th hole into a pond and wound up with a six and a 68.

"It was pretty ugly, truthfully," O'Meara said of the offending tee shot. "But it was the only really bad shot I hit all day."

Curtis Strange, who lives on the grounds at Kingsmill, and Scott Verplank were at 9-under 133. Verplank shot a 7-under 64 and Strange a 67.

Bob Wolcott shot a 65 to lead the group at 134, which also included Chris Perry, Brian Claar and Jim Gallagher Jr. Perry carded a 67, Gallagher a 68 and Claar a 69.

Greg Hickman, the 35-year-old rookie who shared the first-round lead with O'Meara, slipped to a 2-over 73 Friday and was at 5-under 137.

"Obviously I could have played better," said Hickman, who said he nonetheless accomplished his goal of making the cut. It was just the fifth time in 14 events this season that Hickman, who is 202nd on the money list, has survived to play on the weekend.

Mike Sullivan shot a 9-under 62, one shot better than the previous course record held by several players. Because Sullivan opened with a 79 on Thursday, he had to wait until the last group had finished to be assured of making the cut, which came at 1-under 141.

Wadkins, playing in the morning, put together a bogey-free round.

"I've driven it real well the last two days, and that's been the big key," said Wadkins, who is playing in his first tournament after a five-week layoff.

Wadkins opened with a 65 Thursday.

"I screwed up my 65's," he said. "I thought I might keep my string going."

Among the morning players, the closest to Wadkins were Strange and Verplank.

Strange said he was becoming increasingly frustrated with a putting stroke problem that has cost him a number of good birdie opportunities in recent weeks.

"I make a few but I miss some that I shouldn't," he said. "I miss some that you need to make to win golf tournaments. It's hard. You feel like you leave something out there on the course."

Penguins' star may have to endure surgery

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Penguins center Mario Lemieux may undergo back surgery here next week to correct a painful herniated disc, a television station reported Friday.

Station KDKA, quoting unnamed sources, said Lemieux left Pittsburgh Friday to visit Dr. Robert Watkins, the Los Angeles spine specialist who earlier this year treated Lemieux's back problems in one month of therapy.

Lemieux could undergo surgery as early as Monday and the surgery will take place in Pittsburgh, KDKA said.

Dr. Charles Burke, Lemieux's doctor in Pittsburgh, declined to comment on KDKA's reported when contacted Friday by The Associated Press.

Burke did say he, Lemieux and Penguins general manager Craig Patrick met Friday, "decisions were made," and an announcement regarding Lemieux's health would be made next week.

"My policy is to release information to all media organizations at the same time to make sure it is accurate," Burke said.

Golf fans spotted Lemieux at several Pittsburgh-area celebrity tournaments this summer wearing a back brace as he played.

The injury cut short Lemieux's scoring streak at 46 games in February, when he pulled himself from a game with the New York Rangers. After a six-week absence, he returned for the Penguins' last game of the season, a loss to the Buffalo Sabres that cost the Pens a playoff spot.

The injury, complicated by arthritis in Lemieux's back, caused so much pain the center at times couldn't tie his skates.

Former minor leaguer now looks for respect on oval

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Five months after winning the Daytona 500, Derrike Cope is still trying to win respect.

The pursuit continues Saturday at speeds of up to 200 mph. Cope's Chevrolet will start 18th in the Pepsi 400.

"There's no reason to think we can't win here again," Cope said. "We feel like we're a better team coming back here than we were in February."

Some observers regard Cope's victory in the 500 as the biggest upset in NASCAR history. Many also regard it as a fluke. The former minor league baseball player from Spanaway, Wash., earned his first Winston Cup win after Dale Earnhardt's Chevy blew a tire and dropped out of the lead with a mile to go.

Since then, Cope's results have been mixed. He finished worse than 20th six times in an eight-race stretch, placed a respectable ninth at the Coca-Cola 600 in Charlotte, N.C., and then won the Budweiser 500 at Dover, Del.

"People are starting to look at me now like I've got some credibility," Cope said. "We've won on two pretty tough race tracks."

Among Cope's most formidable competition Saturday will be another driver familiar with Hollywood endings, pole-sitter Greg Sacks. He was technical advisor for the movie "Days of Thunder," filmed in part at Daytona International Speedway earlier this year.

Gary Player leads Senior LI Classic

JERICHO, N.Y. (AP) — Gary Player, calling his game very suspect, shot a 5-under-par 67 Friday for the first-round lead in the Northville Long Island Classic seniors tournament at the Meadow Brook Club.

Player, 54, who won the inaugural Northville in 1987 when it was an unofficial stop on the Senior PGA Tour, held a one-stroke lead over Charles Coody, Jim Dent and Joe Jimenez, who lost his share of the lead by bogeying the final hole.

Don Massengale, Homero Blancas, George Archer and Frank Beard had 69's and Jim O'Hern shot 70.

Butch Baird, the defending champion, was at 71 with eight others. Lee Trevino, who has dominated the tour in his rookie year with six victories and earnings of $598,633, was in a group at 72.

"I wish I had this round last Sunday," said Player, who had five birdies on the 6,655-yard course. "I was totally embarassed with my final round of 72."

Carner's comeback highlights Farr

SYLVANIA, Ohio (AP) — JoAnne Carner, winner of 42 LPGA events but none in the last five years, shot a 4-under-par 67 to share the lead with non-winner Tina Tombs Purtzer after Friday's first round of the Jamie Farr Toledo Classic.

U.S. Women's Open champion Betsy King and Chris Johnson were a shot back after 3-under 68's on the 6,270-yard Highland Meadows Golf Club.

The 67 equaled Carner's best round of the year and matched the best of Purtzer's career.

"It was fun. I could have really made a lot more birdies," said Carner, who had five birdies and a bogey. "I hit an awful lot of good shots. I burned the hole all day, really."

Carner, an LPGA Hall of Famer whose last victory was the Safeco Classic in 1985, birdied the first hole and got to 5-under before bogeying the 16th hole.

"Count on me to provide the best Homeowners insurance value in town."

Louisiana lawmakers override abortion bill veto

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The Louisiana House on Friday night voted to override Gov. Buddy Roemer's veto of the nation's strongest state abortion bill, which contains no exceptions for rape or incest.

The vote was 73-31, three more votes than were needed for a House veto override.

The state Senate still had to deal with the veto Roemer issued earlier in the day. Senators were debating the state budget and leaders were unsure whether they would take up the override debate later Friday night.

If the Senate also voted to override, it would be the first time a Louisiana governor has had a veto overridden this century.

The measure would send doctors who perform abortions to jail for up to 10 years and fine them up to $100,000. It was written for the purpose of challenging the 1973 Supreme Court decision that legalized abortion.

Also Friday, anti-abortion activists in Michigan filed petitions with more than 330,000 signatures to initiate a bill that would require girls to have a parent's consent before obtaining an abortion.

Roemer signed the veto Friday morning, according to his staff attorney, John Kennedy.

In his veto message, Roemer called the issue "one of the most wrenching and divisive issues to be faced by this Legislature."

He also responded to charges by backers of the bill that he has changed his position on abortion since he was a congressman, running for governor, in 1987.

"As a member of Congress, I consistently voted to curb abortion on demand and to protect the life of a fetus," Roemer wrote in the veto message. "I initially voted for the exception to save the life of a mother, but over the years of struggling with this issue I became acutely aware of the need to except those instances where conception occurred because of rape or incest.

"Women cannot and should not be forced to bear the consequences of these traumatic, illegal acts."

Roemer has repeatedly said he sides with anti-abortion forces but cannot allow a bill without rape and incest exceptions to become law.

At an afternoon news conference, the bill's author, state Rep. Woody Jenkins, cited statistics showing that of more than 15,000 abortions performed in Louisiana in 1987, only one was done to end a pregnancy that resulted from rape.

"He's for killing 15,000 unborn children a year in Louisiana just to make sure that one child conceived in rape is also killed," said Jenkins.

Robin Rothrock, leader of an abortion rights coalition, said earlier she remained confident that the Senate would sustain Roemer's veto.

"In the Senate we believe that we still have the 15," Rothrock said, referring to 15 senators who voted against the measure when it passed the Senate with 24 votes. An override requires a two-thirds vote in each chamber — 26 in the Senate and 70 in the House.

The House passed the bill last week with 74 votes.

In Michigan, the Legislature will have 40 days to pass the veto-proof measure, once the petition signatures are validated. Failure of the measure would put the issue on the November 1992 statewide ballot as a public referendum.

Lawmakers passed a similar measure earlier this year but couldn't override Democratic Gov. James Blanchard's veto.

A majority of House and Senate members signed the petitions, said Michigan Right to Life president Barbara Listing.

The bill would require girls 17 and younger to have a parent's consent for an abortion or to ask a judge for a waiver on the grounds that she is mature enough to make her own decision or the abortion would be in her best interest.

NATION

The measure would send doctors who perform abortions to jail for up to 10 years and fine them up to $100,000.

100 S&Ls selected for closest scrutiny

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Stung by criticism that it has moved tentatively and ineffectively to prosecute savings and loan fraud, the Bush administration has selected 100 savings institutions for priority investigation, government officials disclosed Friday.

The move seems intended to give President Bush further leverage in his continuing political struggle with Democrats in Congress over who is to blame for the most costly scandal in the history of the United States.

Each of the savings and loans on what Justice Department officials are calling "the top 100" list will be subject to stepped-up enforcement action.

The cases will receive closer, more centralized supervision by department officials and financial regulators in Washington.

"If the Justice Department is successful in a large number of these cases, I would think it would have a strong positive impact," said T. Timothy Ryan Jr., who, as director of the Office of Thrift Supervision, is the chief financial regulator overseeing the country's 2,500 savings and loan institutions.

Justice Department officials plan to use the list, which was compiled at a secret three-day meeting in Indianapolis two weeks ago, as a national battle plan to shift teams of prosecutors and investigators into jurisdictions with a large number of priority cases.

In one example, the department has already decided to move more people to Oklahoma to help federal prosecutors handle the heavy caseload there.

ADMINISTRATION OFFICIALS declined to disclose the names of the institutions on the priority list because some are still in business. Many are already under scrutiny by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

One administration official said the list includes a group of 20 institutions designated in early May as the highest priority cases.

Investigations of those savings institutions have already produced some indictments. Two weeks ago, the former chairman and three top executives at one of the top 20, Midwest Federal Savings and Loan, were indicted in Minneapolis on federal fraud and conspiracy charges involving financial losses sustained by the failed institution.

Although Justice Department officials were reluctant to discuss the politics of their move, it seems intended to dampen congressional criticism over what some lawmakers have said is the administration's tepid response to the crisis that began in the Reagan administration and seems to have been aggravated by the deregulation campaign endorsed by Bush, who was vice president at the time.

In response to critics in Congress, the White House has warned that it will try to show that Democrats who took contributions from savings and loan executives helped create the problem.

Two weeks ago, President Bush visited the Justice Department for a campaign-style rally where he urged federal prosecutors to hunt down people who had committed savings and loan fraud.

"AND SO, if we have to look under rocks to find these white-collar criminals, then we will leave no stone unturned," he said. The speech followed news reports of a backlog of thousands of languishing cases that might qualify for further investigation.

But the new prosecution strategy also appears to reflect a serious effort to come to grips with the vast caseload of fraud in the savings and loan industry.

"These cases are the lions's share of the problem," one official said. "These are the significant cases, the big cases."

"If we have to look under rocks to find these white-collar criminals, then we will leave no stone unturned.'

— President Bush, in a recent speech to Justice Department

The action comes at a critical moment, when pressure from Congress to take stronger action against wrongdoing has focused attention on the administration's enforcement effort, making it a central reference point for gauging the administration's overall performance in the crisis.

"It's a start, but it's not going to do the whole job," said Rep. Charles E. Schumer, D-N.Y., a member of the Judiciary Committee who has been critical of the administration's enforcement effort. "The bottom line is that they need more personnel to do the job adequately."

SCHUMER'S COMMENTS reflect the criticism of those lawmakers who suggest that the department, by choosing 100 institutions for priority prosecution, is tacitly admitting that it can handle only a small part of the caseload and is forced to resort to the legal version of triage, tackling only the most serious cases.

But department officials insist that the priority list represents a management tool, enabling them to devote the necessary personnel to the most important cases. They said that in time, all significant cases would be prosecuted if the evidence warranted.

On Thursday, Ryan, who prepared the list in a cooperative arrangement with federal prosecutors, turned over the ranking to Justice Department officials.

William P. Barr, acting deputy attorney general, said the top 100 list "will help us target resources with greater precision and enable us to insure that priority cases are handled with dispatch and are not delayed by lack of resources."

The priority prosecutions will be coordinated by James G. Richmond, the U.S. attorney for the Northern District of Indiana who has been assigned to the new position of special counsel for financial institutions.

"Now there's some person in the form of the special counsel who can be the clearing house and can address with a minimum bureaucratic delay the problems of the U.S. attorneys and of the regulators," Richmond said in an interview.

Prosecutors, investigators and financial regulators from around the country chose the cases on the basis of a ranking system that incorporated a variety of factors, including high losses, the weakening or failure of the institution or insider fraud.

Lawmakers who have criticized the administration's performance cite FBI statistics to show that the backlog of cases is huge.

The figures show that as of last February, the investigative agency had more than 654 pending investigations involving savings and loans and more than 7,000 pending inquiries into all types of bank fraud and embezzlement cases.

Justice Department officials, however, counter with other statistics, showing that their efforts have already yielded a significant return.

Since October 1988, these figures show that the department obtained 182 indictments involving 237 savings and loans. The scorecard: 200 convictions and three acquittals.

FINDING YOURSELF

Do you ever feel like just giving up and running away . . . driving faster and faster, mile after mile, with no destination? Do you think that if you flee far enough and fast enough from everyone and everything, you will feel better? Unfortunately, this is fruitless, because you can never run away from yourself, no matter how far or how fast you run.

In this "life in the fast lane," there is so much turmoil. We read each day of domestic disputes, crime, and corruption. It is enough to make you want to run and hide, but you do not have to do that.

Instead, try to find yourself again. God is waiting to help you discover a new self. You will find Him to be an ever present source of comfort, protection, and ever present love.

Visit your church or synagogue this week. God will help you find yourself again. You will like what you discover.

Greek Orthodox group wants action

By George W. Cornell
AP Religion Writer

An impressively orchestrated series of receptions, speeches, awards, concerts, dinners and other social events usually characterize national conventions of the Greek Orthodox Church in the Americas.

But this time, something different is in the offing and it may jar the customarily graceful protocol.

A recently organized group of lay members plans to challenge operations of the church's biennial Lay-Clergy Congress July 9-12 in Washington, demanding more representative participation.

"The laity has been pretty much regulated, controlled and stifled and authority has become more centralized," said George D. Karcazes, a Chicago attorney and president of Orthodox Christian Laity.

"We want to restore the participatory process in the tradition of our faith."

Such democratic-style procedures in which both clergy and laity take part in church decision-making, including the choosing of bishops, is part of the Eastern Orthodox heritage.

But the lay organization says that policy has been eroded in the orderly running of the 2 million-member U.S. church.

Unlike the Roman Catholic systen, "Orthodoxy has a long tradition way back from the beginning of the church of lay participation and democratic processes," Karcazes said in an interview.

"But that has been eliminated. The laity has become totally subservient and blind followers. It's a trend over the past years with ever-increasing centralization and less lay participation.

"We want to energize the laity into more responsibile involvement. It's a necessary role. We're not doing something against the interest of the church, but are coming to its aid."

He said the complaint is not aimed at Archbishop Iakovos, the widely esteemed head of the church for 30 years, but is a matter of revising representative methods and spurring the laity into rightful responsibilities.

"We love and respect him as our spiritual leader, and he's largely in agreement with what we've proposed," Karcazes said of the archbishop. "He's a charismatic individual, with an international reputation.

"But he would get more objective advice if he had elected laity around him (instead of a mostly appointed council)."

Iakovos, asked his view of the lay group, said "the movement may have some merit." He has met with its leaders, and said he supported possible steps to "improve our system."

He suggested that instead of a "separate organization," the group may accept assignment of questions it has raised to a special church task force.

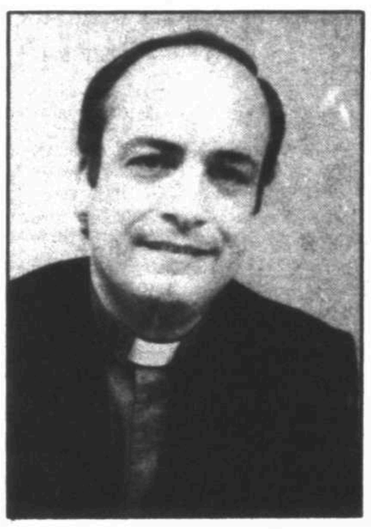

St. Luke's has new staff member

The Rev. David Floyd-Harp has been appointed associate pastor of St. Luke's United Methodist Church it was announced by the church's pastor, the Rev. Jarrell Sharp.

In making the announcement, Sharp indicated that, in addition to the pastoral functions of preaching, teaching and visitation, Floyd-Harp would be taking responsibility for the on-going ministries of the church to young married and single adults, as well as providing leadership with regard to the church's social concerns and outreach endeavors.

St. Luke's UMC was established in 1952 and is a congregation of the Northwest Texas Conference of the UMC. Floyd-Harp joins Sharp and the Rev. Cletus Beights on the pastoral ministry team of the 1,800-member congregation.

Floyd-Harp and his wife, Phyllis, are natives of Abernathy and graduates of Abernathy High School. Coming with them to Midland are their two children, Shirley, who will attend Midland Freshman High School, and Michael, who will be in the fourth grade at Lamar Elementary. Mrs.

David Floyd-Harp

Floyd-Harp comes to St. Luke's UMC from pastoring Kirk UMC, Kirk, Colo. He previously served as director of community services for catholic family Service, Inc., Amarillo. He is a probationary member of the Northwest Texas Annual Conference of the UMC and was ordained a deacon by that body in 1989.

A 1975 graduate of Wayland Baptist University, Floyd-Harp did graduate study in philosophy at Texas Christian University, Fort Worth, and recently received a master of divinity degree with distinction from Iliff School of Theology, Denver.

While at Iliff, Floyd-Harp also was awarded the Harvey H. Potthoff Award for excellence in ministry, the Charles H. Tadlock Scholarship by the board of higher education of the UMC and was named in "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities" in 1989 and 1990.

Concerning his appointment to St. Luke's UMC, Floyd-Harp said, "I am excited both by the accomplishments of this church and its potential. It has a long tradition of care and concern for its community and a promising vision for its future. I look forward to working with Dr. Sharp, Rev. Beights, the staff and the members at St. Luke's. Our family is very happy to be moving to Midland."

Vietnamese translation work continues

Translators for the Vietnamese Bible, Inc., have completed the Gospel of Mark and are nearing completion of the gospel of Matthew.

"Over 88 percent of the New Testament has been drafted from the Greek and the rest should be complete this year," says a release from the VBI, a local non-profit organization established to develop a modern translation of the Bible into Vietnamese.

"The editing of the New Testament requires much work and interchange. Our editing team spends many hours, so accuracy is maintained in conveying the original message from the Greek to the Vietnamese reader in a easy to understand language."

To date, more than 15,000 copies of the gospel of John have been printed through the VTI by the United Bibles Societies. The translation committee reports that Vietnamese Christians who have read the gospel, say that it is easy to understand.

"The positive reports we continue to receive have been encouraging for our translators," says Leon O. Taylor, a members of the board of directors.

The United Bible Societies plans to print several thousands gospels for distribution to Vietnamese refugees in Hong King.

Dr. Spencer Sutherland, a member of the VBI board, recently returned from a short trip to East and West Germany where around 110,000 North vietnamese live and work. While there, he and his group dispensed 5,000 copies of the Gospel of John.

"About 70 turned to the Lord and various others were serious inquirers," Taylor says. "These Vietnamese in Germany are living in fear of being sent back to Hanoi, because Vietnam is so depressed. The merger of the two Germanys will create a large contingent of unemployed Germans, and there will be few jobs for Vietnamese.

"To help pay Vietnam's war debt to Moscow, the Vietnamese Communist government has assigned many of its citizens to work in Eastern Bloc countries. One source tells us that there are 500,000 Vietnamese in Eastern europe, including students. Because of that door opening, we are seeking ways to get John's gospel into the hands of those who will be evangelizing the Vietnamese."

Baptist newspaper editors gather

DALLAS (AP) — Baptist newspaper editors were to meet Friday over what they call an attempt by fundamentalists to control the flow of information to their readers.

The editors of Baptist state newspapers say they are angry about the threatened firings of two top staffers at the Southern Baptist news service.

They said they will consider other options for gathering news for their publications at the meeting today.

The purpose of the meeting is to "ensure the free flow of information to the Baptist people," said Dr. Presnall Wood, editor of the Dallas-based Baptist Standard, a weekly newspaper for Texas Baptists.

Fundamentalist Baptists last week asked for the resignations of news director Al Shackleford and news editor Dan Martin of the Baptist Press, the denomination's news service. They accused the two newsmen of bias against the fundamentalists.

Editors of state newspapers, which are not owned by the denomination but rely on its news service, have accused the fundamentalists of seeking to control the news.

Shackleford and Martin "have come under fire from some who would desire to control Baptist Press," Wood said in an editorial in the current issue of the "Baptist Standard." The "Standard" is owned by the Baptist General Convention of Texas.

Fundamentalist and moderate Southern Baptists have been in a political battle for control of the 14.9 million-member denomination for more than a decade.

Fundamentalists, who now control the offices and agencies of the denomination, have vowed to purge its staff and institutions of staff members who do not proclaim belief in biblical inerrancy, the doctrine that the entire Bible is the literal word of God.

Members of the denomination's executive committee, who sought the resignations, have called "an emergency meeting" July 17 in Nashville, Tenn., where the Baptist Press is based, to discuss the firings of Shackleford and Martin. The two were given until Sept. 1 to resign.

Snyder remembered as 'man of justice'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mitch Snyder, whose personal demons apparently overwhelmed his fierce commitment to the nation's homeless, was remembered Friday as "a man of justice" who worked tirelessly to assist the downtrodden.

Jesse Jackson told a memorial service at Bible Way Church that Snyder was a man who heard and answered a "moral call" to help the homeless.

"The fact that birds have a home, foxes have a home, and yet men and women, veterans of foreign wars, mothers and fathers, working poor people, have no place to lay their head — he found that to be a moral disgrace," Jackson told about 600 mourners.

Snyder's body was discovered Thursday hanging from an electrical cord in his private room at the Washington shelter he founded. A police statement called the death "an apparent suicide."

Dr. Georges Benjamin, the city's public health commissioner, said Snyder's death was the result of "asphyxiation by hanging."

Benjamin said investigators cannot pinpoint when Snyder died. The death has not yet been ruled a suicide, but Benjamin said there is no evidence of foul play.

Police said a note containing "suicidal references" was found near Snyder's body, and law enforcement sources said the note outlined personal problems Snyder was having in his 15-year relationship with fellow homeless advocate Carol Fennelly.

The two had said last month that they would be married in September.

At the memorial service, Jackson described Snyder's dramatic efforts to draw attention to homelessness, which included hunger strikes and sit-ins.

Terry Southwick, left, Carol Fennelly, seated, and Nancy Wyatt attend a memorial for homeless advocate Mitch Snyder in a Washington church Friday. Fennelly was Snyder's companion of 15 years.

"Mitch was a little eccentric, Mitch was a little off," Jackson said to appreciative laughs from the mourners, many of whom live at Snyder's shelter. "But he was a man of justice. There's something to be said about being a little off."

A close friend of Snyder's who spoke with him Tuesday described him as "very down, very despondent."

"We talked for about an hour," said the friend, who asked not to be named. "He was very upset about his relationship with Carol, very down in the dumps."

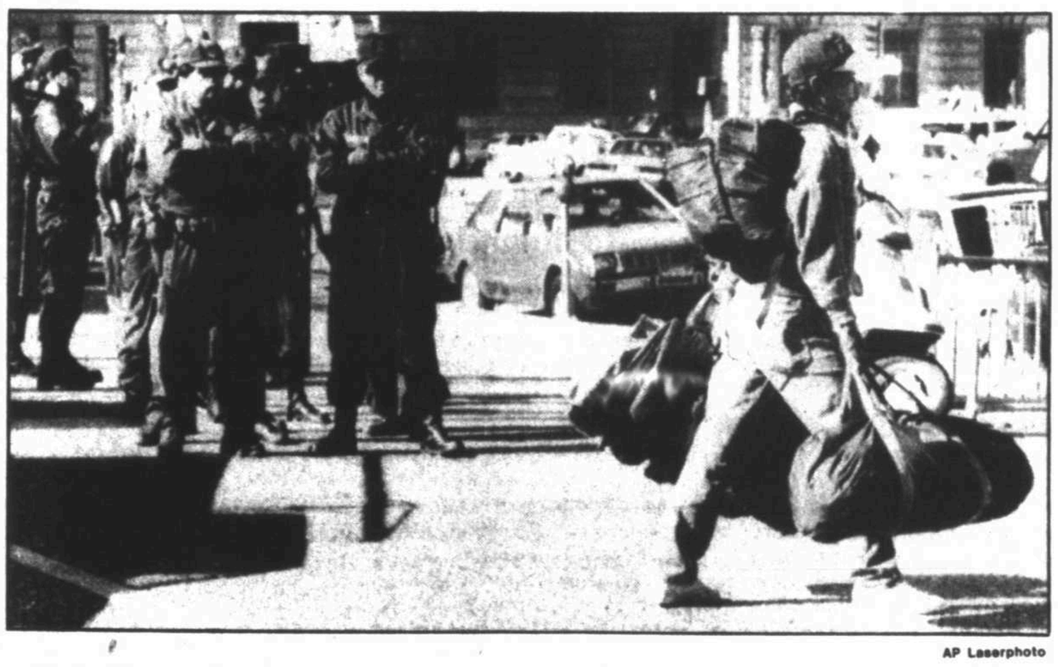

Snyder's friend reflected on their conversation and then repeatedly called Snyder back to invite him to dinner.

"He didn't return calls Tuesday, or then on Wednesday, which I found strange," the friend said.

Fennelly declined to discuss the situation after the memorial service. "This just isn't the time," she said.

A funeral is scheduled for Tuesday outside the shelter, which is located in a run-down neighborhood just half a mile from the U.S. Capitol.

Jackson will preach at the service, and organizers said they are hoping that the Rev. Phillip Berrigan also will attend.

Under the watchful eye of San Francisco police, homeless Oscar, right, leaves the Civic Center Plaza with his belongings in tow Friday, which was the target date of a new city ordinance banning sleeping in the plaza.

Evictions of homeless begin; 5 arrested in San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Police arrested five people this morning as the city began enforcing a ban on sleeping in parks in an effort to empty a downtown plaza where more than 200 people have camped out for two years.

Authorities said Keith McHenry, an activist who is one of the most vocal critics of the homeless removal plan, was arrested before 6 a.m. after about 20 officers began clearing the tree-shaded Civic Center plaza. Four other people, all unidentified, were arrested later.

Police encountered no violence, Sgt. John Goldberg said.

As an alternative to arrest for violating the public sleeping ban, police offered vouchers for admittance to two new city shelters.

Thursday evening, a group of 50 activists and homeless people at the Civic Center decided to accept the city's offer. The group noisily marched seven blocks to one of two new shelters, where a worker told them all the rooms were filled.

City officials said the homeless could obtain vouchers for free shelter elsewhere, but the group returned to the plaza — a park surrounded by mostly government buildings.

"There's no room," said a homeless woman, Lima Rashida. "We have no place to go but back to the Civic Center."

Police had been under orders to begin making arrests at midnight, but after the homeless marchers were faced with no shelter space, officers on the scene did not immediately intervene.

Of the five people arrested later in the morning, three were booked on misdemeanor counts of illegal lodging and interfering with police, and McHenry and one other person was cited with illegal distribution of food, police said.

The march came after a peaceful candlelight vigil mourning the death of Mitch Snyder, a homeless activist in Washington, D.C., who was found hanged Thursday in what police said was an apparent suicide.

The homeless people in the plaza said they paid for a red, white and blue wreath by selling jewelry and other personal items.

Police Capt. Dennis Martel said the plaza transients "don't have the option to stay here anymore. We are encouraging them to go to the shelters. We're handling this in a sensible, humane fashion."

All this week, vouchers for rooms have been handed out, but many of those living in the park expressed no interest.

"I'm safer in this park than in one of those 'hotline' rooms," said a woman who identified herself as Jack Howard. She pledged to stay in the plaza until police begin moving the homeless out.

NATION IN BRIEF

NEA announces reform plans

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Leaders of the nation's largest teachers union focused attention Friday on ways to improve the training of America's future educators.

Don Cameron, National Education Association executive director, said a teacher education reform initiative will begin in November to link universities and colleges of education with local school districts so innovative curriculum ideas and teaching techniques can be tried out in classrooms.

Cameron said negotiations are under way with several colleges and universities, including the University of Maryland, Eastern Michigan University, the University of Delaware, several traditionally black institutions in the South and three colleges in Tennessee.

Many school districts are enthusiastic about the idea, said Cameron.

Trauma tops CDC list

ATLANTA (AP) — Injuries are the top killers of young people in this country, claiming more than 20,000 lives a year. But not all are car crashes or swimming mishaps; nearly 3,000 are homicides.

The Center for Disease Control in Atlanta said 2,877 Americans under age 20 died from homicide in the latest year for which complete statistics are available, 1986.

Homicides accounted for nearly 13 percent of the 22,411 fatal injuries to children in 1986, second only to motor vehicle accidents, the CDC said.

Motor vehicle crashes killed 10,535 young people under 20 in 1986. CDC researchers estimate that between 15 percent and 30 percent of those deaths were associated with alcohol.

Suicide was the third leading cause of childhood fatal injuries, accounting for 2,151 young people's deaths in 1986.

NASA busy with tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA plans tests on two coasts starting this weekend to isolate the source of hydrogen leaks that have grounded the nation's space shuttle fleet, officials said Friday.

Engineers at Rockwell International, the contractor that built the space shuttles, are testing pipes and valves from the space shuttle Columbia this weekend in Downey, Calif.

And next Friday, NASA engineers will conduct leak tests on space shuttle Atlantis which is on a launch pad at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

Leaks found in May on Columbia and last week on Atlantis caused NASA to ground all three of the nation's winged spacecraft. The third craft, Discovery, is scheduled to fly in October if the leak problem is solved.

Mayors to tour U.S.

SAN FRANCISCO (HNS) — A delegation of Chinese mayors arrives in the United States on Saturday to begin a three-week economic blitz of East and West Coast cities, the highest-level visit by Chinese officials here since last year's government massacre in Tiananmen Square.

Led by Shanghai Mayor Zhu Rongji, the group starts its mission in New York and will conclude in San Jose and San Francisco July 24-26. Zhu, long popular with American business, is often mentioned as a possible future prime minister.

Analysts say one aim of the Chinese mayors is to persuade American businesses to improve economic relations and encourage U.S. investment in the Yangtze River Delta Zone. Shanghai, a city of 12 million where the Chinese Communist Party was founded, lies at the core of this zone.

But relations have been strained since the Chinese government's crackdown on student dissenters, despite the fact that the Bush administration has struggled behind the scenes to keep a working relationship and maintain "most favored nation" trading status for China.

Soviet pilot mourned

SEATTLE (HNS) — She waited until most of the 130 mourners had filed past the body of her husband, then stepped near the casket, clinging briefly to his folded hands, and placing a long-stemmed, red rose beside him.

As she gazed down at him, Galina Grishchenko wept silently, something she had not done throughout the Russian Orthodox service that bade a hero's farewell to Soviet helicopter pilot Anatoly Grishchenko.

Grishchenko died Monday at Seattle's Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center of complications from the radiation-induced leukemia he developed after flying his helicopter repeatedly over the crippled Chernobyl nuclear plant. He had received what physicians considered a successful bone marrow transplant in April But his weakened immune system was unable to vanquish a lung infection that developed several weeks ago.

Thursday, at a public memorial service at Johnson and Sons Funeral Home, Soviet dignitaries, physicians and friends paid homage to the man whose whose helicopter missions helped save countless victims of the 1986 nuclear disaster.

When it came time for Galina Grishchenko to speak, she thanked the people of Seattle "for all their kindness and high human qualities."

Alaska fires spread

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Wildfires charred about 400 square miles of Alaska forests and tundra by Friday, but spared a town where firefighters fought a house- to-house battle against wind-driven flames.

One fire, which grew to more than 53 square miles, leaped over trees and fire lines to threaten Tok, a crossroads town 80 miles from the Canadian border.

"It's not under control but the fire quieted down overnight," said Sue Mitchell, a spokeswoman for an interagency fire center in Fairbanks.

About 300 of Tok's approximately 1,200 residents fled Thursday when flames approached to within a quarter-mile of some dwellings, said Rob McWhorter of the Bureau of Land Management. He said Friday that most had returned to their homes, which were protected by fire crews.

Statewide, 900 firefighters were deployed as 37 new fires Friday brought to 184 the number burning out of control across Alaska's interior.

Dart-blowing attacker hits 52nd victim in New York City

NEW YORK (AP) — Some women are looking over their shoulders while walking through midtown Manhattan because of a mysterious attacker known as the Dartman. On Friday, he hit his 52nd victim, police said.

Over the last 10 days the Dartman, so dubbed by the city's tabloid newspapers, has repeatedly blown homemade darts at the backs and buttocks of well-dressed women.

Not all of the darts have met their mark, some becoming entangled in clothing. No one has been seriously hurt.

On Friday, police Commissioner Lee Brown appealed for help from the public. Since the attacker always has struck during daylight in the most crowded part of town, "somebody must have seen him do it," Brown said.

"At this time, it's a nuisance," he said, adding "It doesn't make sense. We want to put a stop to it."

"There's enough to worry about walking through the city without this," said Liz Echauss, 22, who was dressed in a crisp blue linen suit for a job interview.

Another woman in a blue business suit was struck at 2:19 p.m. Friday in the latest attack. A passerby saw the attack and warned the woman, who pulled the homemade dart out of her clothing and kept walking, according to police.

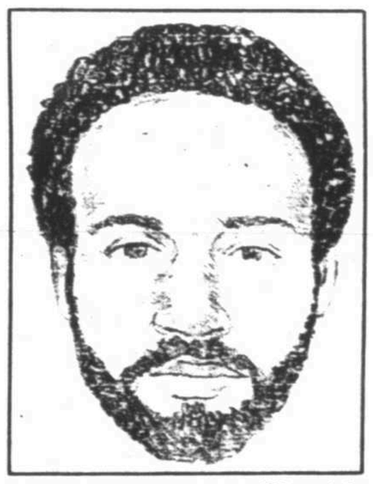

The witness called a police hotline and reported the attack. He said the man who appeared to have fired the dart fled on foot.

Earlier, Brown asked people who work in the midtown area to call police if they spotted a man resembling the one drawn in a police sketch.

Police officials have urged women to remain calm despite the media attention given the attacks, which began June 26th.

For more than a week the Dartman, who witnesses say is black, had fired only on white and Hispanic women. But Thursday afternoon a 45-year-old black woman was struck by a dart while walking to her office.

The victims were struck in the buttocks or lower back with the 2-inch homemade darts, which were fashioned out of straight pins and sewing needles with paper guides and apparently blown through straws.

'Most Wanted' show leads to man's arrest

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (NYT) — A former Los Angeles schoolteacher wanted by police since 1987 on 21 felony child molestation charges was behind bars after an Oxnard, Calif., man recognized him on television's "America's Most Wanted."

Don Ray Moore, 56, whom authorities say had been living among the homeless in Ventura, 70 miles northwest of Los Angeles, faces arraignment Monday on charges that he sexually molested fifth- and sixth-grade children, said Detective Gary Lyon of the Los Angeles Police Department.

A search culminating with Moore's arrest late Thursday was prompted by a Sunday-night telephone call from Marty De Los Cobos, 48, a district supervisor with the Southern California Gas Co. in Oxnard, just south of Ventura, authorities said.

"I was watching ... "America's Most Wanted" and the program started talking about this Don Ray Moore," De Los Cobos said in an interview Friday. "When I saw his picture flash on the television I told my wife, 'I know that guy.' And she said, 'You're kidding.' "

De Los Cobos said he remembered Moore, whom he knew as John Anderson, from a December 1989 meeting when his company was processing claims by transients whose belongings were damaged during an oil spill where Moore was living.

"He was one of about 20 people I had talked to and he kind of stood out because he was obviously well-educated," De Los Cobos said. "He kept on saying, 'I'm an engineer, I'm not like everybody else down here.' "

De Los Cobos said he called 1-800-CRIME90, and representatives of the television show contacted Los Angeles police detectives. Ventura police then were notified.

Group suggests motorist penalities to fight smog

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Motorists in Southern California who run errands or commute alone during rush hour should be penalized financially, a smog-reduction task force recommended.

"Over 70 percent of our air pollution problem is caused by mobile sources," said Judy Wright, who led the group set up by the Southern California Association of Governments.

"There aren't many more smokestacks to go after, so we have to go after the mobile sources."

Wright suggested that one way to penalize motorists would be through extra fees on a toll road or bridge if the driver is alone in the car.

Stickers would show whether a vehicle was authorized to be on the road during specific hours.

The task force suggested test projects in western San Bernardino County, which has many homes and relatively few jobs, and in Los Angeles County's South Bay area, which has lots of jobs, but few homes. Both areas are besieged by commuter traffic.

Collider 'on track' with land purchase

WAXAHACHIE (AP) — A congressman hailed the purchase of the first 10 acres for the superconducting super collider Friday as a "red letter day" for the $8 billion atom smasher.

More than 16,000 acres still have to be acquired from more than 700 Ellis County landowners just south of Dallas for the world's largest scientific instrument.

The collider is a 54-mile underground ring, where protons directed by superconducting magnets will be smashed together. Scientists hope the particles will break apart, offering clues to the fundamentals of matter.

Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis, told scores of reporters and some landowners during a brief ceremony here that the land purchase would convince skeptics that "the project is on track in the United States Congress."

The parcel, one of 1,261 needed, was sold by E.R. "Tut" Morris and his wife Tommie Morris of the Dallas suburb of Balch Springs for $45,000.

"I am delighted at seeing the Morrises turn over a part of Texas to the SSC," Barton said. "This is another red letter day for the superconducting super collider."

The Morrises drew applause as they removed a "Contract Pending" banner from a sign, revealing "Contract Sold" underneath.

"I think it's a good thing for the history of the U.S. and for Ellis County and Dallas County," said Morris, a retired banker. "We're very pleased with the price."

The land was purchased for the state by the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission, which proposed the Ellis County site for the collider to the Department of Energy.

Ownership eventually will be transferred to the federal government.

The government is expected to spend $40 million to $100 million for 10,000 acres of land and the rights to the land underneath another 7,000 acres. Acquisition is expected to be completed in 1992.

Phillip Stafford, associate director for site development, said the commission hasn't yet encountered landowners unwilling to sell.

"The process anticipates that there will be those who may not be a willing seller," Stafford said. "Our commission and other state agencies or federal agencies have the power of eminent domain to ensure the project is not held up for those reasons."

Hoyt Gaston, who owns 100 acres, says he'll be willing to sell "if the price is right."

"I'll be satisfied if I get a deal as good as (Morris') got," he said. Gaston is expecting an appraisal on his land in about a month.

In May, the House voted to build the collider and limited the federal government's share in the giant science project to $5 billion.

Explosion at ARCO plant kills 17

By Ruth Rendon

CHANNELVIEW (AP) — An explosion that could be heard 20 miles away leveled an area the size of a city block at an ARCO chemical plant, killing 17 people and injuring five others, authorities said Friday.

"It looks like a bomb went off in there," said Richard Bailey, chief investigator for the Harris County Sheriff's Department Arson Division.

A tank exploded at the plant at about 11:30 p.m. Thursday. The plant, 15 miles east of Houston, employs 350 people.

Of the bodies found by midday Friday, five were employees at ARCO Chemical of North America; 11 were employed by a contractor, Austin Industrial Inc., of Houston; and one was a truck driver.

"Obviously this is a tragic accident," Jack Johnson, president of Philadelphia-based ARCO Chemical said. "In my 32 years with ARCO Chemical Co., I can't remember any single accident of this dimension where we've had multiple loss of life to the extent we had here. It certainly is a time that all of the employees and myself grieve the loss of fellow employees.

"One loss of life is not acceptable," he said.

Assistant Secretary of Labor Gerard F. Scannell said Friday the Occupational Safety and Health Administration would conduct a "comprehensive inspection" of the accident.

"It looks like a tornado or fire went through that area," Scannell told reporters at the plant. "We'll be interviewing the employees that were at the plant" to determine the cause of the blast.

"I'm concerned when there is any loss of life. We are concerned with what's happening in the petrochemical industry," Scannell said.

The blast jolted neighborhoods as far as 20 miles away.

"I was in a trailer and I was sitting down about to get up, and it sounded like a car ran into the side of the trailer," said Tommy McBridge, who was working at a janitorial service not far from the plant. "When we went out of there, it was like a nuclear explosion — just orange flames."

"It sounded like somebody was breaking the house in," said Deborah Baumbach, who lives six miles from the blast site.

The fire was out by daybreak and plant firefighters sprayed the scene with hoses while other workers went about the grim task of collecting bodies amid the tons of twisted pipe and debris.

"It's pretty obvious the explosion at the tank was devastating to that particular portion of the plant," Johnson said.

"There's a large tank in the center of the area that obviously is completely demolished and the fire is extended around that tank. It looks like an area that's completely burned out."

Johnson said all five of the injured have been treated and released from area hospitals. He said two of those injured were firefighters overcome by smoke, while a third was a tractor-trailer driver who fell as he fled the scene. Two injuries occurred outside the complex when a resident was cut by a window shattered by the blast and another person who complained of breathing difficulties from fumes. Their names were not released.

Plant Manager Earl McCaleb said the blast centered on two tanks that collected waste water and hydrocarbons from the plant. The material is pumped from one tank to another before it is disposed.

The larger tank held 900,000 gallons, he said. The company had no capacity figure for the smaller tank.

"They were not cleaning out the tank. The tank was in operation," McCaleb said. "We think there was some kind of work being done on a decompressor."

That device compresses gases before they enter the tanks.

One body was found in the cab of a vacuum truck near the tanks, McCaleb said. It was not immediately known if the truck had anything to do with the accident. Such trucks are used at the plant to remove wastes, officials said.

Henry Kelly, president of Austin Industries, said his firm had 150 workers at the ARCO plant for maintenance and construction and has had an excellent safety record during 5½ years working there.

The plant had one previous safety citation, received in 1988 for a death at an off-site fire training facility, McCaleb said.

Initially, authorities described the blast and fire as relatively minor and said no injuries were reported and no evacuations necessary.

McCaleb said there was no attempt to withhold information.

The blast is the second major loss of life at a Houston-area petrochemical plant in nine months.

On Oct. 23, a Phillips Petroleum Co. plastics plant in Pasadena was hit by series of explosions that killed 23 workers and injured 130.

Many of those killed part of contract cleaning crew

CHANNELVIEW (AP) — When the sky turned orange and the buildings rocked and windows cracked and rattled, terrified workers at the ARCO Chemical Co. plant fled in fear of their lives.

"We were running through the mud just as fast as we could get out of there," said Tommy McBridge, a plant worker who survived the late Thursday blast. "We knew what it was."

"We just heard a big explosion and everybody said 'Run!' and we all took off," said Marlene Viscus, another plant worker.

A one-block area of the ARCO plant exploded into a fireball, burning for four hours before firefighters doused the flames. Seventeen bodies were recovered from the debris.

Ordinarily, only about five of the 50 ARCO employees working at the plant at that time would have been in the area of the explosion, Manager Earl McCaleb said. The others were contract cleaning workers from Austin Industrial Inc., who were in for tank cleaning done sporadically at the plant.

"We use some contract workers in the plant for certain operations," said Earle Bradford, vice president of public affairs at ARCO Chemical's headquarters in Newtown, Pa. Bradford said he was unaware of any problems occurring when contract workers were used.

The Oil, Chemical & Atomic Workers union has been critical of petroleum companies' use of contract workers.

Last year, a Phillips Petroleum Co. plant in nearby Pasadena exploded, killing 23 Phillips and contract workers and injuring 130 others. Union officials blamed the use of contract workers, unfamiliar with operations, as contributing to safety hazards at the plant.

ARCO officials said they were unsure what the contract workers were doing at the storage tank, which they believed contained waste water and hydrocarbons.

The plant, ARCO Chemical's largest, produces intermediate chemicals used in the manufacture of seat cushions, bedding, paints and urethane packaging and gasoline additives, Bradford said.

The plant provides about 560 million pounds of propylene oxyide, a "building block" chemical used to make seat cushions and bedding and 1.3 billion pounds of styrene monomer used to make drinking cups and automotive parts each year.

In addition, the plant produces about 20,000 barrels a day of methyl tertiary butyl ether, a gasoline additive used as an octane enhancer and is believed to be cleaner than other octane additives. ARCO is the world's largest producer of MTBE, said Al Greenstein, spokesman for Los Angeles-based ARCO, parent company of ARCO Chemical.

"It's not the only MTBE plant, but we are the world's largest manufacturer of MTBE and this is obviously a major plant for MTBE," Greenstein said.

The plant originally was built as Oxirane Chemical Co., a joint venture between ARCO Chemical Co. and Halcon International, in 1974.

Jailed TV reporter remains in legal limbo

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A jailed television reporter was in legal limbo Friday but a campaign to publicize his case gained momentum with a planned appearance on ABC-TV's "Nightline" program.

Reporter Brian Karem has been in jail since June 27 for refusing to reveal the name of a person who arranged a jailhouse telephone interview Karem did with a capital murder suspect last year.

Defense attorneys and prosecutors say they need the person's name as they prepare for the trials of Henry and Julian Hernandez, brothers accused of killing a San Antonio police officer. Karem has repeatedly refused to supply the name and has been jailed for contempt of court.

He apparently will stay in jail even though Sheriff Harlon Copeland has announced the name of the alleged source, who he identified as a cousin of the Hernandez brothers.

State District Judge Pat Priest, who sentenced Karem to six months in jail, said, however, that the sheriff's identification is irrelevant.

Priest had not set a hearing date on a motion Karem's attorney filed after the sheriff released the name.

News organizations throughout the country have criticized Karem's continued jailing.

"I can't see how the interests of justice are being served by keeping Brian Karem in jail at this point," said Jane Kirtley, executive director of The Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press in Washington.

"Once you've got the name of the source, you don't have to keep the journalist jailed, unless you're just offended that the journalist wouldn't buckle under to you," Ms. Kirtley said.

The case was to be profiled Friday night on Nightline, KMOL managine editor Forrest Carr said.

Karem probably will be interviewed by phone from the Bexar County Adult Detention Center.

5-alarm blaze like 'an oven'

FORT WORTH (AP) — A newspaper left inside a dry-heat sauna ignited a five-alarm blaze Friday afternoon and forced the evacuation of 80 adults and 120 children from a day care center, officials said.

Six firefighters were injured, but no civilians were hurt in the fire at the Amon G. Carter YMCA in downtown Fort Worth, said Lt. Kent Worley, spokesman for the Fort Worth Fire Department.

Tiles in the shower and locker room trapped the heat like an oven, he said.

"The heat wasn't dissipating," Worley said. "(The firefighters) were walking into an oven. After two went down from heat exhaustion, we realized very quickly that we had to get relief crews in there or more were going to get hurt."

Car checks conducted

EL PASO (AP) — El Paso police set up roadblocks on international bridges and on entrances to Interstate 10 to find stolen cars, but none was recovered.

Police say they will continue the unannounced checks through the rest of the week.

Parks director chosen

Sansom

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission promoted Andrew Sansom to executive director Friday to replace Charles Travis, who resigned after a controversy over the stocking of animals on public officials' lands.

Sansom, 44, said his appointment to head the approximately $102 million per year agency "is both a credit to the employees of this department ... and is a call for change."

Without discussion of other candidates, the commission selected Sansom 6-0 with three members absent. Sansom will take over the $75,000 per year post Aug. 1.

Quayle to campaign

AUSTIN (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle will visit Austin July 18 to promote state Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown's campaign for Texas attorney general, Brown announced Friday.

"The whole White House team, including President Bush and Vice President Quayle, has made it clear that my election as attorney general is a top priority," said Brown, R-Lake Jackson.

Brown is opposed by state Rep. Dan Morales, D-San Antonio.

"The White House is well aware that I will lead a winning war against crime and drugs," Brown said.

FROM SUMMIT TO SUMMIT

George Bush basks in historic declaration

By Terence Hunt
AP White House Correspondent

HOUSTON — President Bush arrived in his adopted hometown with a smile Friday night after ushering his ideas for reshaping the Western military alliance to quick and easy approval at the NATO summit in London.

Aboard Air Force One enroute to Houston and another round of summitry, this time with the leaders of the seven most industrialized nations, Bush boasted that the "London Declaration," the communique issued earlier in the day by the NATO leaders, "was the United States draft." And "that shaped the new direction for NATO," he said.

In London, it was Bush who announced at the conclusion of the two days of talks among the 16 allied leaders that "I'm pleased ... that my colleagues and I have begun a major transformation of the North Atlantic Alliance, and we view it as a historic turning point."

The president's design for a remodeled Western alliance gained unusually easy approval, but he remained in the minority opposed to direct financial aid to the Soviet Union. Most European NATO members say such aid would help stabilize a deteriorating Soviet economy and send a positive political signal. Bush, for his part, ruled out any direct assistance pending changes in Soviet military spending and its huge support for Cuba, but he indicated the United States might be willing to accord the Kremlin some trading credits.

During the 10-hour flight, Bush was informed that Eduard Shevardnadze, the Soviet foreign minister, had said that NATO's "decisions ... move in the right direction and pave the way to a safe future for the entire European continent." The president said of that reaction: "That's very interesting. And very positive."

Bush confided he had received a recent communication from Soviet Leader Mickhail S. Gorbachev himself. But he merely winked and smiled when asked to describe its contents.

In London, Bush achieved his goal of preserving — at least for now — a NATO that is the main instrument of U.S. influence in Europe while pushing it toward changes that could make it more acceptable to the Soviet Union.

AP Laserphoto

U.S. President George Bush answers questions in a London news conference before flying back to Houston, Texas.

"NATO has set a new path for peace," Bush said. "It's kept the peace for 40 years, and today charted a new course for stability and cooperation in Europe."

France in particular has promoted the idea of diluting the influence of both military blocs — NATO and the nearly dead Warsaw Pact that the Soviets dominated throughout the Cold War. Paris wants a pan-European organization such as the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe to play a bigger role.

Bush said the London meeting reaffirmed that NATO would survive, and that while it would relax its military stance it would continue to rely on the U.S. nuclear arsenal.

"This is indeed a day of renewal for the Atlantic community," Bush said. For more than 40 years we've looked for this day ... and now that day is here and all peoples from the Atlantic to the Urals, from the Baltic to the Adriatic can share in its promise."

The president managed to overcome initial skepticism from Britain on his idea of modifying NATO's nuclear strategy and declare that nuclear arms are "weapons of last resort." But he remained at odds with West Germany and France on the question of whether to provide direct financial aid to the Soviet Union.

"I have big problems with that one," Bush said, adding that he did not think the American public would accept sending money to Moscow as long as Soviet defense spending remained high and the Kremlin continued underwriting Fidel Castro's government in Cuba.

Summit stage moves to Houston

By Martin Crutsinger
AP Economics Writer

HOUSTON — The summit stage moved Friday to President Bush's hometown, where leaders of the world's seven largest industrialized nations will turn their attention to the economic configuration of the post-Cold War world.

Houston was turned out in the summit nations' colors; flags sprouted on downtown skyscrapers and at the Rice University summit site. Painters hurried to put the finishing touches on spruced-up buildings.

Last year's summit in Paris adjourned early when the leaders ran out of things to talk about. That's not likely to happen next week.

Questions of direct economic aid to the Soviets, a contentious fight over farm subsidies and problems of global pollution were expected to dominate the negotiating sessions and working dinners, which get under way Monday.

On many of the issues, the United States found itself at odds with the other summit countries — Japan, West Germany, France, Britain, Italy and Canada.

In many ways the Houston meeting will be a continuation of the talks Thursday and Friday at the NATO summit in London. Of the seven leaders, only Japan's Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu did not participate in the NATO meeting.

As his first order of business, Bush was to hold private talks with Kaifu on Saturday. Officials said that in addition to briefing Kaifu on the outcome of the NATO meeting, the two leaders would cover the various economic issues coming up in Houston.

High on the economic agenda will be the question of whether the West should supply a $15 billion to $20 billion aid package to bail out Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's floundering economic reform effort, an idea being pushed by West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and French President Francois Mitterrand.

Bush repeated his objections to such aid on Friday, saying he has "big problems" in giving U.S. assistance as long as Moscow is spending billions of dollars annually in support for Cuba. But he appeared to open the door slightly to the possibility of extending some types of financial credits to the Soviets.

Diplomatic sources said that Gorbachev had written an appeal for economic aid to British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who like Bush is against the proposal until the Soviets do more to reform their economy.

Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney predicted the economic summit would make "substantial progress" in resolving the Soviet aid dispute.

However, the most likely outcome was a vague statement of support which would not commit any specific amounts of money but would allow countries such as West Germany to offer their own aid packages.

Bush has told reporters that his top priority at the economic summit would be breaking a logjam on agriculture trade which has deadlocked an effort to reform the rules governing world trade.

The United States is pushing for agreement to phase out all trade-distorting farm subsidies over the next 10 years. But that idea has drawn strong opposition from European countries, whose leaders contend that such a proposal would cost the jobs of between 2 million and 3 million European farmers.

The trade liberalization talks, known as the Uruguay Round for the country where they were launched in 1986, are scheduled to conclude in December, but U.S. officials fear they could falter without agreement on the agriculture question.

The world leaders are also expected to consider a European proposal to cut back on "greenhouse" gases, forms of pollution which scientists fear are trapping too much heat from the sun and causing global climate changes.

Traffic helicopters among craft barred from area around summit

HOUSTON (AP) — Motorists in normally clogged Houston have a double-dose of traffic headaches when streets close for next week's economic summit: they might not have traffic helicopters to help find alternate routes.

The Federal Aviation Administration and the Secret Service are restricting airborne traffic reporters from some areas for security reasons.

That means numerous radio stations which use the traffic services won't be able to tell listeners which routes to avoid.

"This is going to be the worst traffic in Houston's history," John Winder of Metro Traffic said Friday. "Probably for the first time we are going to approach gridlock. And that's without the normal stuff."

"It's going to be a mess," added Gary Elliott of a competing service called Traffic Central.

Restrictions that took effect Friday evening barred aircraft from flying below 3,000 feet within an area about eight miles around Rice University, where President Bush will host the leaders of Canada, Britain, France, Italy, Japan and West Germany through Wednesday.

The traffic reporters normally fly between 300 feet and 1,500 feet.

Elliott says he's been trying to get federal authorities to allow him to fly over the most congested areas.

"They are relying on us to give the public information (about traffic) but won't allow us to get it," he said.

Some of the closings may occur at rush hours as dignitaries travel between their hotels and the summit sites.

Winder and Elliott said they would try to beef up traffic reports by adding their own cars to the jammed streets and by stationing reporters in buildings.

Opry stars to present mandolins to leaders attending summit

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Leaders attending the Economic Summit of Industrialized Nations will take home a piece of the Grand Ole Opry when they leave.

"We are honored that the White House wanted the Grand Ole Opry to showcase our music to the Economic Summit, and we wanted to acknowledge that feeling with a gift that symbolizes country music — the mandolin," said Hal Durham, general manager of the Opry.

The Opry will perform Sunday in Houston at the Astroarena for the leaders, only the second time in almost 40 years an Opry performance has been staged outside Nashville.

One of the presenters will be mandolin player Bill Monroe, "the Father of Bluegrass Music." Performers will include Opry members Loretta Lynn, Minnie Pearl and Larry Gatlin and the Gatlin Brothers.

SATURDAY, JULY 7, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your star is on the rise! A new image will enhance your career efforts. Take the time to become an expert on at least one subject. Your love of good food and drink could adversely affect your health. Exercise more self-discipline. Think about your long-term goals and set regular sums of money aside for a future business venture. February 1991 is the ideal time to launch a creative enterprise. Next spring will be a very special period for romance. You find a newcomer irresistible!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: painter Marc Chagall, trumpeter Doc Severinsen, fashion designer Pierre Cardin, actress Shelley Duvall.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Patience and tenderness will help break down the barriers inhibiting romance. Postpone purchasing a luxury item until you have more money in the bank. A child plays a key role in today's events.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You feel ready for anything today! Have fun but do not overtax your strength. A temporary solution to a money problem buys you valuable time. A newcomer has a good influence on you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An emotional reunion makes this a wonderful weekend. You could see a dream come true when certain money problems are solved. Use your leadership skills to improve your environment. Travel is favored.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You do not need any arguments today. Quietly dig beneath the surface to get at the truth. Keep drinking to a minimum this evening and everyone will have a better time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Chores can be completed quickly if you seek family's cooperation. Include small fry. Donate unwanted items to a favorite charity. Certain travel or social arrangements are changed.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take a friend's advice with a grain of salt. Romance will be very rewarding for those who are sensitive to their partners' needs. Evening hours favor fun. Keep entertaining costs within reason.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A family celebration planned for this evening could occupy your thoughts throughout the day. Member of the opposite sex is sympathetic. Increased expenses could complicate your social plans.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): When facing a tough family decision, take your time. Loved ones are on your side. Sincerity is the key to romantic fulfillment. Examine sale merchandise very carefully.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Give greater thought to providing for your children's future. Recognize the profit potential in a family trust. Something you believed unattainable moves within easy reach.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Look for new ways to stretch your money. Teen-agers should be encouraged to find part-time employment. You must be honest with yourself about problems affecting a close relationship.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone wants to repay you for past favors. Be sure to make your real needs known. Spend more time with young people. A TV show or newspaper article could spark a money-making idea.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Continue to show your compassionate side to those in distress. Being surrounded by family brings you great pleasure. A young male could be flexing his muscles. Share a special secret with loved ones.

TODAY'S CHILDREN seem to have a strong interest in money and material possessions. This could be a substitute for the love they are seeking. Wise parents will give these Cancerians fewer toys and more quality time. Born night owls, these youngsters may be difficult to coax into bed at a reasonable hour! They dislike making decisions. Highly intuitive, they should learn to trust their instincts. Companionship is important to these Cancerians. They should take their time when choosing a spouse.

Award-winning crooner dreams of an invitation

NEW YORK (AP) — Harry Connick Jr., who has been described by some critics as the new Frank Sinatra, says he's such a Sinatra "freak" that he has daydreamed of breaking into Ol' Blue Eyes' house.

Connick

"I just want to touch him," the singer, songwriter and pianist said in an interview with USA Weekend magazine. "I just want to touch him. I just want to say, 'Mr. Sinatra, you're the king.'"

Another of the young performer's dreams: to sing "Luck Be a Lady" on stage with Sinatra.

But Connick, 22, who won a Grammy for the music to the movie "When Harry Met Sally," is no Beatles fan. "That music is for second-graders," he said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Bill Monroe, founder of bluegrass music, is making the move to the big screen.

Monroe

A film crew from Caporeale Studios of Cincinnati is in Nashville interviewing friends of the Grand Ole Opry great and gathering film footage for a documentary on Monroe's life.

"Bill's somewhere in the neighborhood of 80 years old," said studio official Tom McGrail. "He's afraid he might not be around much longer, and he's looking at this as his legacy."

Monroe, who turns 79 in September, will be filmed performing this weekend at the Long Hollow Jamboree, the Grand Ole Opry and at a bluegrass festival Saturday at the Opryland U.S.A. theme park.

McGrail said his crew already has interviewed Ralph Stanley, Emmylou Harris and "a bunch of other bluegrass luminaries." Others to be interviewed include Ricky Skaggs and Wynnona and Naomi Judd.

"Bill's a regular, old-fashioned radio cowboy," McGrail said. "We've never seen him without his white hat. And he does a great stone face."

NEW YORK (AP) — Finally, some good news for Donald Trump. The cash-starved developer won a real estate tax fight with the city and saved $1.2 million on his 1989 taxes.

Trump's 56-acre waterfront property on Manhattan's Upper West Side, assessed by the city at $44 million, was instead taxed at a rate $12.5 million lower after Trump made his case before the city Tax Commission.

Trump was one of 19,306 taxpayers who won assessment battles with the city for 1989. The full list of the winners — which included the Andy Warhol estate and Alex DiLorenzo, owner of the building that housed the Happy Land Social Club where 86 people died in an arson fire — was released June 29.

Trump, whose cash flow problems have been well documented, saved $1.2 million in taxes with the re-evaluation, the city Finance Department said.

But that money went right back to the city Thursday, when Trump made a multimillion dollar semiannual property tax payment. Trump shelled out $2.2 million for his undeveloped West Side property, $1 million for Trump Tower and $900,000 for the Trump Parc condominiums.

• • •

ATLANTA (AP) — Billy Joel has finished the Atlanta leg of his "Storm Front" concert tour, but the singer may have to make another Atlanta date — in Fulton County Superior Court.

Joel

Joel's former manager and one-time brother-in-law, Frank Weber, filed an $11 million lawsuit against the rock star claiming breach of contract in his firing.

Joel sued Weber in September for $90 million, claiming Weber used the entertainer's money for interest-free loans, signed Joel's name to documents without consent and put the singer's money in high-risk investments despite instructions to invest conservatively.

Weber's suit, filed Tuesday, contends Joel dismissed the manager without cause and that Weber is entitled to 20 percent of Joel's gross income because Frank Management planned the singer's Atlanta tour.

NEW YORK (AP) — Where can you buy official "Do The Right Thing" T-shirts and other memorabilia from Spike Lee films? Do you know? Do you know? Do you know?

The answer: Spike's Joint, a store Lee plans to open July 22, one day before the debut of his latest film, "Mo' Better Blues."

The store will sell hats, buttons, T-shirts and other items from Lee's movies. It also will feature Lee's preferred headgear — Brooklyn Dodgers' baseball caps.

The store is far from New York's tourist attractions but only a block from the offices of Lee's 40 Acres and a Mule movie company in Brooklyn's Fort Greene section.

Lee's previous sales experience includes pitching Air Jordan athletic shoes for Nike, in a commercial that let him reprise a line from the movie "She's Gotta Have It." Do you know?

Poland's prime minister expels Cabinet members

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Faced with complaints from Lech Walesa and other critics, the prime minister Friday expelled three ex-Communists from his Cabinet and pleaded for political calm.

But Tadeusz Mazowiecki failed to soften the attacks on his government, which is struggling to introduce a market economy and complete the transition to democracy.

Even members of the prime minister's Solidarity camp said they expected bolder moves to restructure his 10-month-old Solidarity-led government.

Mazowiecki accepted the resignations of five of 24 Cabinet ministers, including three of the four former Communists who were included in the government last year as the price for Solidarity taking power.

The most prominent former Communists who departed were Interior Minister Czeslaw Kiszczak and Defense Minister Florian Siwicki.

The prime minister used most of his parliamentary address to warn against "party quarrels and struggles for personal ambitions at the expense of the state." He said they could rob Poland of its "priceless stability."

The remarks appeared to be a reference to Walesa, the Polish labor hero who led the fight against the old Communist regime. Many people now believe Walesa would like to succeed President Wojciech Jaruzelski, another former Communist, as leader of Poland.

In his speech, Mazowiecki declared: "I see danger on the peaceful Polish road to democracy.

"The sense of responsibility for the country is getting weaker in political life. ... An opponent who should be defeated through argument is treated as an enemy to be destroyed," he said.

"These are occurrences that cannot be tolerated even in the most democratic country. I appeal for self-control. Poland needs wisdom, peace and law-abidingness."

The prime minister appeared to be responding to criticism by Walesa in ousting the ex-Communists and calling for parliamentary elections "much earlier" than spring 1991, when they have been scheduled.

Walesa had no comment on Mazowiecki's nationally broadcast speech.

The Solidarity chairman has struck a populist chord with his attacks on Mazowiecki. He has urged faster replacement of Communists in the government and state-run industries, new elections to remove Communists still in the parliament, and quicker privatization of state enterprise.

Legislators kept up their attacks on the government after Friday's speech.

Sen. Jaroslaw Kaczynki said he was only "30 percent satisfied with the changes." Kaczynki is a Walesa ally.

"The changes are much too small. He should have reconstructed the whole government,' said Deputy Jan Litynski, a Mazowiecki supporter.

Litynski and other deputies interviewed urged fully free parliamentary elections as soon as possible.

Mazowiecki's Cabinet made history Sept. 12 when it was seated as the East bloc's first non-Communist government.

But it has been beset by difficulties. The government has faced a major rail strike, used police to break up two farm protests and defended itself against a steady stream of criticism from Walesa.

The Cabinet changes finally take the police and military forces out of the hands of former Communists.

Gen. Kiszczak's departure ends a 10-year career as interior minister. He oversaw the imposition of martial law to crush Solidarity under Gen. Jaruzelski in 1981, and he served as a chairman of the 1989 talks that made Solidarity legal again.

Gen. Siwicki, another Jaruzelski loyalist, had been defense minister since 1983.

The third ex-Communist to be ousted was Transport Minister Franciszek Wieladek.

Also resigning were Agriculture Minister Czeslaw Janicki of the Peasant Party and Telecommunications Minister Marek Kucharski of the Democratic Party.

Nominated to the Cabinet were Krzysztof Kozlowski, a Roman Catholic editor who has been serving as deputy interior minister, as head of that ministry; Rear Adm. Piotr Kolodziejczyk, the Navy chief, as defense minister; Artur Balazs, the minister of rural life and co-founder of the farmers' union Rural Solidarity, as agriculture minister; and Ewaryst Waligorski, a longtime Solidarity activist and deputy to the transport minister, as the head of that ministry.

Panama jet hijacked to Colombia

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A domestic airliner with 10 people aboard was hijacked and flown to neighboring Colombia, where some passengers and a co-pilot were let off before the plane took off again, an official said Friday.

The destination was not known.

The small Twin Otter aircraft belonging to Panama's domestic Aeroperlas airline was hijacked Thursday by five of the eight passengers aboard, said Capt. John Bennett, director of civil aviation.

The hijackers — three men and two women — then ordered the two crew members to fly to a clandestine airstrip in Viterbo, a small town in Colombia near Medellin, a center for Colombian cocaine trafficking and headquarters of the Medellin drug cartel.

The Viterbo strip is used by drug traffickers, which has led Colombian police to believe the hijackers may have belonged to one of the drug cartels, national radio network Caracol reported.

Police speculated that the hijackers may have taken the plane to use it to transport drugs.

At Viterbo, the hijackers let out three passengers and the co-pilot and took off with the aircraft's pilot, Warren Lam, for an unknown destination, Bennett said.

The hijackers first boarded the plane Thursday at Colon, at the northern end of the Panama Canal, using false identities, Bennet said. Flight 147 had been bound for Panama City.

He said air controllers lost contact with the aircraft a few minutes after it took off. It was earlier thought that the plane may have crashed, and government planes and helicopters searched for the aircraft Thursday and Friday.

Bennett said co-pilot Sergio Ortiz, 26, called authorities in Panama City Thursday afternoon and said the three passengers were safe and in good condition at a Colombian military barracks in the small town of Pereira.

He said they will be taken to Bogota today.

Officer accused in priests' deaths allegedly held

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The military said Friday it had detained an officer accused of covering up the murder of six Jesuit priests, but the court that ordered his arrest said he had not been turned over.

San Salvador's 4th Criminal Court ordered the arrest of Lt. Col. Camilo Hernandez on June 26. As late as Thursday, he was still in command at his infantry battalion.

An armed forces spokesman on Friday said Hernandez had been detained.

By law, he must be turned over to the court for arraignment.

"Lt. Col. Hernandez has not been brought here, and we have not been advised of his arrest," said a court official.

Hernandez is accused of burning military log books that could have shed light on movement of troops implicated in the Nov. 16 murder of six Jesuit priest-educators, their housekeeper and her daughter.

Hernandez denied the allegation in sworn testimony before the arrest warrant was issued.

As a military officer, Hernandez will get special treatment after arraignment. Instead of being sent to prison to await trial, he will be confined to an apartment at the headquarters of one of El Salvador's police forces. All three police forces are part of the Defense Ministry.
