AMBASSADOR SHOT — This is a stock picture, made in 1978, of Sir Richard Sykes, British ambassador to The Netherlands, who was shot Thursday morning in front of his residence by some unidentified gunman. The ambassador was taken to the hospital, first reports described his condition as serious.

Mysterious gunmen murder ambassador

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Two mysterious gunmen shot the British ambassador to the Netherlands and his valet today on a Hague street and then escaped in morning rush-hour traffic. The two men died a short time later at a hospital.

Authorities could not immediately explain the motive for the assassination. The ambassador, Sir Richard Sykes, 57, was a security expert within the British diplomatic corps.

Police said Sykes and the 19-year-old Dutch valet were shot at about 9 a.m. outside the ambassador's residence as the envoy was about to enter his Rolls-Royce for the 10-minute drive to the British Embassy.

Three shots were fired, the ambassador was hit at least once, and one bullet struck the valet, who was holding open the car door, police said.

Eyewitnesses said the two gunmen fled through a nearby alley and disappeared into traffic, police reported. The killers were between 35 and 40 years old and were dressed in dark suits, the witnesses said.

Marian Scheffers, who was working with her mother in their candy shop across the street from the Sykes residence, said:

"I thought it was about six shots, but I didn't come out immediately. My mother went to the front of the shop and saw this boy lying wounded on the cobbles just inside the residence gates." Sykes' chauffeur, unharmed in the attack, drove him to the hospital while an ambulance picked up the youth.

The ambassador's residence, a historic mansion, is in an affluent residential area of the Dutch capital.

"We have not received any threats, and there have been no claims since the shooting," a spokesman at the British Embassy said. In London, the British Foreign Office said it knew no reason for the attack.

The flag on the Foreign Ministry building in London was lowered to half-staff after news of the ambassador's killing, and Queen Elizabeth II sent a message of sympathy to Lady Sykes.

Lightning strikes tractor in Sand Springs

Twister sighted near Big Spring

By CARLA WALKER
Heavy clouds Wednesday brought a tornado, hail, spotted rain, and lightning, which burned a tractor in Sand Springs.

A funnel cloud was sighted at 9:25 p.m. 15 miles southwest of Big Spring heading northeast toward the city. There was no report of damage to indicate whether the tornado touched down.

A small field tractor belonging to Deward Walker, Sand Springs, was almost totally lost when the butane tank exploded around 3:45 p.m. Wednesday near Rocco Road in Sand Springs.

Probably cause of the fire was lightning. Walker had been working in the field with the tractor, a recent purchase. When the rain began, he parked it under a tree and left. An oil field worker heard the explosion and reported the fire, to which the Sand Springs Volunteer Fire Department responded. No one was near the tractor at the time of the explosion, and Walker learned of the fire later.

Value of the tractor was approximately $1,500.

Rain around the area was spotted, with Coahoma getting a good shower, and some areas barely receiving a trace. About an inch of rain was received Wednesday in Coahoma, bringing the total for the week to approximately two inches.

North of Coahoma, .7 of an inch was reported, while the official count at the Big Spring Experiment Station was .68 of an inch.

At Luther, .9 of an inch of precipitation was reported, while further north and west in Knott, about 1.0 of the wet stuff was measured.

Ackerly reported 1.1 inches in town, to as much as 1.5 inches (two miles west. However, several miles north of Ackerly only .2 of an inch fell on dry farmland that received the least rainfall in the fall.

Hail, some as large as marble-sized, was reported in Knott and near Ackerly, but no damage was reported.

Garden City received approximately .3 of an inch, although the northeast portion of Glasscock County may have received slightly more.

First Baptist group to present musical on Easter morning

A select group of musicians from First Baptist Church known as "His Children" will present "Breakfast in Galilee" Easter morning for the Big Spring community. The theatre-in-the-round will be accompanied by breakfast for those gathered to hear this new musical centered around the morning of the resurrection.

Music Director Joe Whitten said the services of a Dallas choreographer have been secured to help stage the drama.

The church will take a loss on the project, offering breakfast at cost for participants. Breakfast will be served the Howard College staff.

The event starts at 8 a.m. to give participants time to get to Easter services at their respective churches.

"His Children" are locally known for their ministry to those in prison.

Advance tickets go on sale in three weeks at various Big Spring locations. Only advance tickets will be sold to the event so the college food service will know the number of breakfasts to cook.

Israeli endorsement clears way for peace

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's Parliament gave its landslide endorsement to the peace treaty with Egypt early today, clearing the way for Prime Minister Menachem Begin and President Anwar Sadat to sign the historic pact on Monday in Washington.

Capping an often-chaotic 28-hour debate, the 120-member Knesset voted 95-18 in favor of the treaty that will end the 30-year state of war with Egypt, Israel's most populous Arab foe; return the Sinai Peninsula, captured from Egypt in 1967, and pave the way for limited Palestinian autonomy on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in the Gaza Strip.

Most of those voting against the treaty were nationalists, many from Begin's own Likud Party, who oppose return of the Sinai and the creation of a Palestinian council to govern the West Bank and Gaza. The tiny pro-Soviet Communist Party also opposed the pact, claiming it did not go far enough toward Palestinian independence.

Two deputies abstained, three others voted "present," and two were absent.

Begin, grinning, told reporters the vote was "the largest majority the Knesset has ever given on a political issue."

President Carter sent congratulations saying, "Israel's Knesset spoke with a voice heard around the world — a voice for peace."

A few hours after the vote, Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan left for Washington to wrap up negotiations on a memorandum of understanding between Israel and the United States.

"The question is...would the U.S. assume the responsibility and take measures in case one of the parties would not honor the agreement," Dayan told reporters as he left.

He said Defense Minister Ezer Weizman would follow him on Friday to negotiate the remaining dispute between Israel and Egypt — a timetable for giving up the offshore oil wells the Israelis developed in the Gulf of Suez off the Sinai coast.

Israeli officials have repeatedly said the oil issue is unlikely to hold up the treaty signing, but the Jerusalem Post reported the issue is proving difficult. It said Israel wants to keep pumping oil from the wells until it begins its pullout from Sinai nine months after the treaty is signed. Egypt wants the pumps stopped immediately and has asked Israel to hand over the field in six months, the Post said.

Begin stepped to the Knesset's rosewood rostrum shortly before 4 a.m. — 9 p.m. EST — to deliver a speech concluding the emotional debate.

"There is joy that we have reached this day," he said. "There is worry for the future."

Energy problems may become way of life for Americans

WASHINGTON (AP) — With energy experts in and out of government agreeing that coping with gasoline shortages soon will be a way of life for American motorists, Transportation Secretary Brock Adams is renewing his call for the U.S. auto industry to re-invent the car.

"We have to have a basic breakthrough in the next seven years, technologically, if the American motorist is to keep the kind of mobility he now has," Adams told reporters Wednesday.

Adams said he has seen little response since challenging Detroit automakers last December to turn to new materials and approaches to produce a car that would get 50 miles per gallon of gasoline.

However, he is going ahead with plans for top-level officials from government and the auto industry to meet in Washington in the next couple of months to discuss the situation.

Adams said he disagrees with the domestic automakers' contention that small, fuel-efficient cars won't sell.

"My position is that by the time they get finished making it — and it takes them at least five years to get anything changed up there — it's going to be marketable," said Adams. He said he is convinced the oil situation is not going to get better and "I think the American public is starting to get concerned."

Adams' views on gasoline shortages were reinforced Wednesday by a new CIA study, government energy officials and executives from two major oil companies.

The CIA study, parts of which were made public by Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., concluded that low oil stocks in the United States "will inevitably lead to increased rationing of supplies by oil companies, higher prices and curtailed economic growth."

The CIA predicted that scenario "even with high levels of production in Saudi Arabia and elsewhere" to partially offset a curtailment of Iranian oil available for export.

A separate study released Wednesday by the Treasury Department concluded that the threat to U.S. national security from this country's growing dependence on foreign oil is "greater now than at any time in the past." It based that assessment on the possibility of an actual disruption of foreign oil supplies as well as the erosion of the U.S. dollar stemming from a large volume of imports.

Herbert I. Goodman, president of Gulf Oil Corp.'s trading and transportation subsidiary, told the Senate Energy Committee Wednesday in prepared testimony that even before the shutdown of oil production in Iran there was a budding shortage of the type of oil suitable for refining into gasoline and aviation fuel.

Q. What percentage of the work force at the City Water and Sewer Plants, including maintenance personnel, is made up of minority (non-Caucasian) workers?

A. "The work force of the Water and Sewer Plants and maintenance section consists of 27 percent non-Caucasian workers," said Bill Brown, assistant city manager. "The Chief Operator of the Sewage Treatment Plant is non-Caucasian, and he supervises four Caucasian plant operators and a Caucasian yard man. Our central laboratory located in the Water Treatment Plant building is operated by a non-Caucasian, and our maintenance section is supervised by a non-Caucasian employee," he added.

Farr gets homecoming

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — A homecoming ceremony for a World War II jeep drew an estimated 5,000 citizens — including Jamie Farr of TV's "M.A.S.H." series, and a congratulatory note from President Carter.

Farr, better known as "Corporal Klinger" in the CBS-TV military parody, joined a celebration Wednesday which came after the vintage Army jeep was found abandoned on a grassy hillside on the Texas-Oklahoma border.

Two local veterans of World War II, brothers Bob and Tom McKeegan, bought the jeep for $5,500 from a Texas car buff. A former owner who found the jeep five years ago noticed a plaque identifying it as one of the Stockton-donated Jeeps and told Stockton residents.

Drop-out judge returns

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Thirty-five years ago, A. Leon Higgenbotham Jr. was a 16-year-old freshman at Purdue University who dropped out when school officials told him that as a black, he wasn't entitled to space in a heated dormitory.

Now a federal judge on the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia, Higgenbotham will return to Purdue to accept an honorary degree as a doctor of laws.

The 51-year-old jurist has agreed to accept the honor at commencement exercises May 12, according to the Purdue board of trustees, which approved the award last Friday.

Connally ends visit

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Front-running Republican presidential candidate John Connally has ended a two-day visit to New Hampshire with a warning to supporters to watch out for Ronald Reagan.

Connally, campaigning Wednesday in the state with the earliest of the 1980 presidential primaries, said Reagan has a "strong organization — ready to spring into action as soon as he gives the go-ahead."

Connally said he was enjoying recent polls which made him the Republicans' choice over Reagan for the party's presidential nomination.

Pope may tour Austria

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II is eyeing Austria as the site for a possible papal visit.

After a weekly general audience Wednesday, the pope met with a group of Austrian journalists and was asked when he would visit their country. He replied, hopefully this year.

The pontiff, who visited Mexico and the Dominican Republic in January, is scheduled to make an eight-day tour of his native Poland in June.

Home mortgage money bill supported by Texas Realtors

By a unanimous vote of the Texas Association of Realtors legislative committee in Austin this week the full support of the association was thrown behind legislation designed to increase the availability of home mortgage money, giving the maximum benefit to the borrowing public.

Pat Medley, president of the Big Spring Board of Realtors, in making this announcement said that "Realtors would be actively supporting the committee substitute for Senate Bill 134, carried by Sen. Bill Meier and its companion bill in the House by Rep. Jerry Donaldson.

"While agreeing to a new 12 percent interest ceiling for home mortgages, realtors were able to amend the original bill to include the provision that a mortgagor whose mortgage bears an interest rate in excess of 10 percent per annum may prepay such a mortgage without penalty. And, should the interest rate in the marketplace drop below the rate being paid in his mortgage he would be able to choose renegotiating his note or refinancing elsewhere at a lower rate.

"We are also glad to report that the amended bill will provide that the Savings and Loan Section of the Finance Commission and the Savings and Loan Commissioner will be directed to promulgate rules and regulations whereby variable interest mortgages may be made by savings and loan associations. Of course, such rules will comply with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board Alternatives Mortgage Instrument Final Rule

Not enough information for review

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals says it lacks enough trial records to review Jerry Hartfield's death penalty conviction in the ax slaying of a Bay City woman.

The court put off a decision Wednesday on Hartfield's appeal until the full case transcript is sent to Austin. Hartfield, a construction worker, was arrested in Wichita, Kan., two days after Eunice Jobe Lowe, 55, was found dead Sept. 17, 1976, in a Bay City station. Mrs. Lowe ran the bus station and telegram office.

The woman's daughter found the body and a bloody pick ax nearby. Bus company officials reported $2,400 missing from the office.

Hartfield, then 20, had been working about a month on a nuclear power plant located south of Bay City.

The appeals court said its copy of the court record included a statement from the court reporter that part of her transcript had been stolen and a new one was needed.

"We want an accurate record in this capital case," the court said.

which went into effect Jan. 1 this year.

"This will mean that variable rate mortgages may be made by contract with a borrower wherein the rate of interest in the note will vary with the regional or national "cost of funds" index. The contract or agreement with the borrower would clearly set out the dates of interest adjustment and the date the monthly payment would be affected by such adjustment. The agreement would have provisions of minimum adjustment (.10 percent) and maximum adjustment (.50 percent) in any one year, with a maximum increase during the life of the loan of 2.5 percent, and no maximum decrease."

Mrs. Medley said that "TAR's president, George Sandlin of Austin, is also asking that Realtors support other bills in Austin which will assist in making additional funds available for home mortgages. For example, we feel that Bill SB267 by Sen. Ike Harris would make it possible for domestic life insurance companies to make 90 percent and some 95 percent loans with private mortgage insurance. You see, currently, insurance company funds being channeled into the home mortgage area are now being held back by a current limitation of a 75 percent loan limit.

"Realtors are also looking favorably on U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's bill, S246, which would exempt from income tax the first $500 of interest received from savings by an individual taxpayer or the first $1,000 in a joint return. This tax savings would retain funds in the financial institutions which furnish the majority of funds available for home loans. We are asking our members in TAR to support Bentsen's legislation on behalf of the thousands of homebuyers now finding mortgage money so difficult to find."

Pete Harrell of Fort Worth serves as chairman of the 1979 TAR legislative committee which has been holding a grassroots legislative session in Austin the past week. Several hundred realtors were in Austin for the meetings during which time they visited in the Capitol and sat in on committee meetings.

We're banking the fires of bigotry

At times, this country may seem like it is made up of only two classes of people — those who push and those who are shoved, that the so-called ethnic groups reason the most effective way of improving their standard of living is by voicing a cacophony of protest in several o-taves.

Polster Louis Harris gave us all a little surprise the other day when he discovered that, despite the fact that there are some areas of genuine strain, American racial attitudes today are far healthier than they were 15 years ago.

IN A SURVEY conducted for the National Conference of Christians and Jews, Harris found numerous indicators of progress. Only 27 percent of the whites he polled said they would take umbrage if a black family moved in next door.

When he asked the same question in 1963, 51 percent would have resented the intrusion with the neighborhood. Today, only 20 percent of the white would be irritated if their child brought a black friend home for dinner, as opposed to 42 percent in 1963. And only 15 percent of the whites contacted by the Harris people considered blacks inferior, compared with 31 percent before.

"By any measure," Harris said, "the notion that white attitudes toward blacks have hardened... turned out to be nothing less than a myth which has permeated throughout an establishment that is sadly out of touch, out of tune with the people it is supposed to be leading."

There were, of course, some negative findings: Sixty eight percent of black leaders surveyed "feel that most blacks are shut out from real job opportunities; and 91 percent believe that the Supreme Court's Bakke decision will slow down the hiring of minorities."

Spokesmen for industry, of course, offer the rebuttal that more members of minority groups would be hired if they were as qualified as the Anglos. How can you become qualified unless you get a chance to make good, the ethnic group will counter. Which came first, the chicken or the egg?

On balance, though, there is more good news than bad in the Harris survey. We are a considerable way from jettisoning all our differences, that ethnic groups should preserve those traditions that make them distinctive — but we have progressed a long way toward banking the fires of bigotry. That is cause, not for smugness, but for genuine thankfulness.

Numerous doubters in Israel

William F. Buckley, Jr.

TEL AVIV. — It is on no account to be understood that all Israelis believe that Sadat has successfully performed a prefrontal lobotomy on the Egyptian people, or even submitted to one himself; or, indeed, that the Egyptians are any less suspicious of some of the imperatives of Zionism as understood by some of its exegeses. Consider, for instance, Samuel Katz.

Katz was born in Johannesburg in 1914, but his heart was always in Palestine. By the time he and his boss and best friend Menachem Begin entered the Knesset, Katz had fought with the Irgun terrorists, had edited a Jewish paper in London; and now he was broken with Begin, whose private counselor he once was: over the issue of the peace treaty.

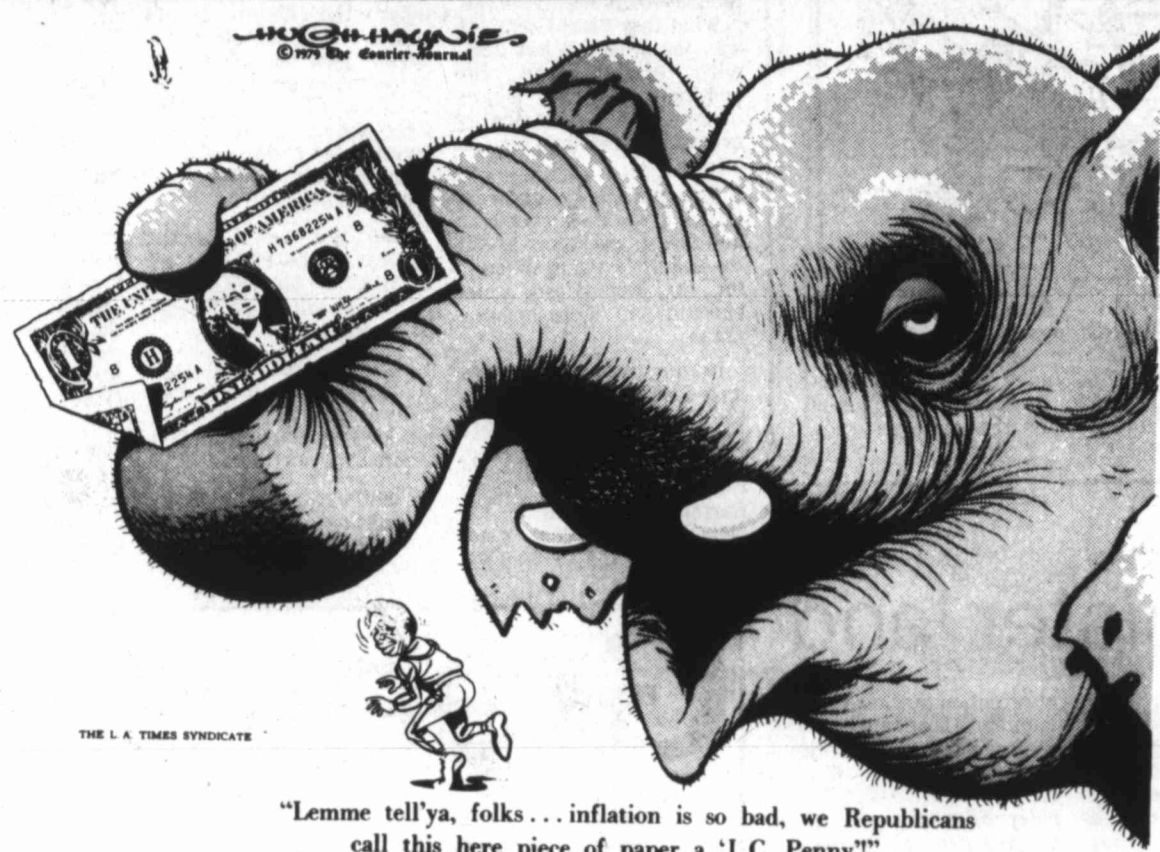

IT IS KATZ'S contention that the Israelis are letting themselves in for one of the biggest swindles of the century. He quotes from memory some of the great bellicose statements of Sadat. He cites Article 6 of the treaty, which would appear to commit Egypt to collaborate with any other Arab country in a military venture. How does one counter such arguments?

One is better off citing other Israelis, on the assumption that Israeli concern for Israeli security exceeds that of anyone else, with the possible exception of Americans running for mayor of New York. Professor Shlomo Avineri is usefully quoted at this point because as a political scientist at Hebrew University who has intensely studied the history of Israel, and participated in its struggles, he said only four years ago, "If I read the Arab policy correctly, their refusal to accept a Jewish body politic in the Middle East is almost absolute."

THAT "ALMOST" saved him: because Avineri, taking issue with Katz, does believe that Sadat — and by Sadat he means also Egypt — has a change of heart. Change does happen. Avineri reminds us that as recently as two years ago, anyone is Israel caught talking about the "legitimate aspirations of the Palestinians" would have been boycotted, anyone doing so in the presence of Menachem Begin would probably have been shot. And who is using that phrase now? Begin.

And consider, Avineri goes on, the matter of giving up the Sinai. It is a major concession, he says; but it does not follow that that loss imperils Israel. "This will disappoint many Israelis and many of my friends in America, but my personal conclusion is that from the point of view of Israel's defense, the 1967 borders were the most defensible. In 1967, from those borders, we won our most stunning victory. In 1973, from our existing borders, we were very nearly extinguished."

But the larger point, Avineri and the majority of Israelis feel is that the text of the treaty, all the wrangling about Article 6 — all of this will be forgotten if a relationship begins the manifest advantages of which give effective life to the treaty. Nobody can remember the terms of the treaty between the United States and Canada respecting the frontier: which is the best kind of treaty. Avineri — and Begin, and the overwhelming majority of the Cabinet — believe that "Sadat has in fact changed. That the man who came to Jerusalem and stood at attention while the Israeli National Anthem was being played — is not a Trojan horse. But should it prove that he, or his successor, were once again to commit aggression, it is the Israeli position that that aggression would be met with force. Decisive force. The gamble, viewed in this way, is the loss of the Sinai, in return for the possibility of a peaceful southern frontier. It is a good gamble."

X-rays: Risks must be weighed

Paul E. Ruble, M.D.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I am a 15-year-old girl. I have a variety of back and bone problems (mostly my lower back). My doctor insists on taking X-rays almost every time I visit him. I average three to five every other visit and I visit him on average every five weeks. A month ago he had nine X-rays taken the same day.

I am worried about the chances of sterility. In the future I want to have a family and raise kids. Can this many X-rays make me sterile? — B.A.

At first blush this seems to be a lot of X-raying, but there's much that has to be known about you and your problems. Spine problems can be mighty tricky to diagnose. Also, X-rays may be needed to tell the effectiveness of such things as braces or special therapy. You don't say if you are being treated with such methods.

The doctor must weigh the risk of X-rays just as he must that of certain medicines — against possible consequences. The spine is three-dimensional, so several X-rays may be required to get a total picture.

There is always the remote possibility that X-rays are unlikely to cause sterility, but an untreated back problem might make bearing a child difficult for you in later years.

Still, these frequent X-ray examinations should be discussed with the doctor, who'll tell you why he feels they are necessary.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I have been told I have a peptic ulcer. Do I have to quit cigarettes? I know about alcohol, and I can live with that, but not without my butts. What about it doc? — F.K.L.

The alcohol is a definite no-no. The cigarettes are usually off-limits, too, but if quitting is counterproductive, causing mental anguish, then some compromise might be made between you and your doctor. I'm not giving you any green light to go on puffing, just suggesting you may want to discuss this with your physician. Why some people with ulcers do much better without smoking is not known. For a fuller discussion of ulcers, see my booklet, "How to Heal Peptic Ulcers and Keep Them Healed." For a copy, send 25 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me care of The Big Spring Herald.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I am told women who take birth control pill gain weight. How much can one expect to put on, say a woman of average build, height, and weight? — Mrs. Y.E.

Not all women gain weight. About half report some gain, usually in the range of two to five pounds. This is liquid retention promoted by the hormones. It is usually lost at the time of menstruation, but returns. The extra pounds are usually shed after discontinuing the Pill. Any other weight gain would be due to excessive eating.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Is it true that vomiting is one of the very early signs a woman is pregnant? — F.P.

Yes, frequently it will occur after the first missed period and may last four or five months. In fact, it's estimated about 75 percent of women have this problem, most of them in their first pregnancies. Severe, persistent vomiting may require hospitalization, although most women can weather this storm. The chief danger is malnutrition.

Dear Dr. Ruble: What does quinsy mean? — Mrs. P.E.

It's abscessed tonsils, a complication of tonsillitis. It is one of the problems that may require tonsillectomy, once the infection has been brought under control.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I am 88 years old and having trouble with the foreskin of my penis. It will not retract. Is this normal, and can you tell me what to do about it? I live in a nursing home. — C.B.

Not normal, but not unusual. Mention it to the doctor the next time he comes around. Sometimes a circumcision is the answer.

Birth control is a highly relevant topic in today's society. Find out what you should know about it in an easy to read booklet, "The Twelve Birth Control Methods." For a copy write to Dr. Ruble in care of The Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 25 cents.

Dr. Ruble welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Reader's questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Mailbag

Dear Editor:

My colleagues and I are going to produce a folk history of the GLs who served in the ETO 1942-46.

We are aiming to contact as many survivors as possible of the 1,500,000 men and women who 'occupied' the British Isles during those fateful years — and as many of the 70,000 brides they took home with them! We want to hear the accounts of every man and woman's war, whether they flew with the B17s, drove a Sherman, fought as infantry, sailed the dangerous waters off our Island or were only members of the honey bucket companies! We would like to hear from everybody, enlisted men and ex-officers alike, before memories dim and time begins to take its toll of the greatest expeditionary force ever mounted.

We would like as many photographs and/or documents as they will trust us with (all will be returned). We want to hear how they all fared from the time they joined Uncle Sam and came to England until the time they returned home victorious. We want their stories whether they are funny or sad, heroic or otherwise.

The only way we can do this is by circulating the editors of as many newspapers countrywide who will extend to us the courtesy of appearing in their correspondence columns.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: My lack of self-confidence is really affecting my spiritual life. For example, I have been asked to teach a Sunday School class but I have so little confidence in my abilities that I even think I'll turn it down, even though I think God may want me to teach the class. How can I overcome this? — S.P.

DEAR S.P.: I am sure many people have trouble with shyness and lack of self-confidence, although it seems to be a special burden to you. Something I heard years ago has always impressed me: God never gives us a task, but what He also gives us the means to accomplish the task.

There may be reasons for your lack of self-confidence, such as childhood experiences in which you failed to measure up to someone's expectation. But that is behind you. Your confidence is in God, not yourself. Think of the positive side: your lack of self-confidence will make you more conscious of your dependence on God to work through you. The person God really uses for His purposes is someone who trusts Him, instead of the strength of the flesh. Do not spend all your time worrying about what people are thinking of you. Concentrate on wanting one thing — that the name of God would be glorified through you. "For God did not give us a spirit of timidity, but a spirit of power, of love and self-discipline" (2 Timothy 1:7, NIV).

Bedlam-on-wheels

Around the rim

Don Woods

The huge, yellow bus rumbles up to a group of ten or eleven school crazed kids with red flashers blazing outside and a squeaky heater wheezing inside. The door is thrown open with a crash of sound and they fly through the open door.

Most of them trip over themselves on the last step and fall all over me or the floor. I wish you could see them, one after the other, impressing the rubber-covered aisle with their screaming faces.

You see, before I was a reporter, I was a bus driver. It was a stop-gap job between the Herald and SWTSU. It was the second of my bus driving jobs. The first one was while I was in college in sunny San Marcos, Texas.

WHAT A CAPACITY for splitting ears my kids had! They sound like their vocal chords were transplanted with factory whistles. Just let me miss a stop somewhere and they let you know it.

Learning to drive this bedlam-on-wheels was as fun as being in a barrel of monkeys; wretched, beastly idiots. The first two or three days the boss drove to show me the route and get me used to the kids, the racket and the methods of discipline.

As a bus driver, my principal tool for creating order from chaos was yelling. Taking an offender aside, being fatherly and kind, is a tool only to be used as the exception, not the rule. The rule is to scream at him. I quite screamed my head off every day.

I was instructed by my boss not to "apply physical hurt" to my human cargo or to "put a child off the bus somewhere other than his own stop." I have dearly wanted, though, to toss an individual heading "somewhere other than his own stop," (like in the middle of no where). I've also wanted to clap one on the crown once when underscoring a tender request.

I was also instructed that the way veteran drivers learned their routes is to let their fare tell them where to stop until the driver learns where. I reacted negatively, though, to 75 elementary kids yelling "Stop!" at me every two blocks.

Discipline is obviously the biggest problem. I passed a battered school bus on my way to work the first day I drove. It was a foreshadowing of things to come.

IN THE BACK seat some boys were fighting and dragging tin cans out of the rear windows on strings. Others were removing the rear door with a blow torch.

And through the jagged, burnt opening, I could see the poor driver cringing in the driver's seat and wearing a hard hat. With dents in it on the back. I wondered if the back of his head matched his hat.

I learned to keep within easy reach a full bottle of aspirin. Veteran bus drivers learn to throw one with deadly accuracy. I'm contemplating a novel about my experience. I think I'll call it "The Sound and the Fury."

In summary, bus driving is a gas. Sometimes when I drove my kids I made them mad. But these wonderful children had the courtesy to reciprocate by driving me mad.

Carter's gift

Jack Anderson,

WASHINGTON — For months, President Carter and Energy Secretary James Schlesinger have been talking about $1-a-gallon gasoline. Thus enticed, the oil men are rushing to make the prediction come true.

They have seized upon the Iranian oil cutoff as an excuse for withholding supplies from their customers. Obviously, the oil profiteers would rather sell gas for $1 a gallon than for the 75-to-90 cents it now costs at the pump.

THE IRANIAN SHUTDOWN reduced oil deliveries to the United States by no more than 3 percent, according to the General Accounting Office. Yet some of the major oil companies have cut back their deliveries by as much as 30 percent.

Suspicious officials expect the companies to resume deliveries as the price rises. In other words, the gas shortage will end as if by magic as soon as the price is right.

The love affair between the Carter administration and the oil crowd, meanwhile, has become an open secret. They began to eye one another during the closing months of the 1976 presidential campaign. Jimmy Carter desperately needed to win the oil states of Oklahoma and Texas. So he began to carry on a flirtation with the oil tycoons who control the politics of both states.

Early in the 1976 football season, the governors of Oklahoma and Texas appeared at the Cotton Bowl to watch a football game. They were joined by Robert Strauss, the Carter politico, who speaks the language of oil.

Between plays, they reached an understanding which encouraged the two governors to go out and campaign for Carter. This was the beginning of a backdoor romance, which we have carefully chronicled. Here are the highlights:

—EVEN BEFORE CARTER was sworn in as president, he was confronted with an urgent warning from government energy experts. "U.S. dependence on oil imports," he was told, was becoming "untenable." Of all forms of energy available within our boundaries, the United States was "dependent on the least abundant." Oil not only was becoming increasingly scarce, they informed the president-elect, but it was concentrated in nations that had demonstrated their willingness to use oil as a "tool of their international politics." Yet Carter ignored their advice to find a replacement for oil.

—Two months after the Carter takeover, we reported that the Federal Energy Administration was ignoring "potential criminal violations" by the oil operators. "FEA officials across the country have pleaded for investigators to crack down on oil criminals," we wrote on March 25, 1977. "Auditors have begged for instructions and more personnel. But the requests have received resounding rejections in Washington."

—The following month, we reported that Carter had left the oil industry's key people "in the right places inside the government to protect the oil interests." We cited a confidential memo from frustrated officials who were trying to clean up the oil stains in government. "Big Oil still controls national energy policy," they wrote. The Carter administration's policies, the memo warned, "will reflect Big Oil's interests because the working data and supporting documentation is coming from the holdovers."

—By the month of May 1977, the United States was spending a staggering $35 billion on imported oil each year. Yet there were no controls over oil purchases. "It is left to the oil companies, not the federal government to negotiate the purchases," we reported. "This might be accepted as the American way, given our free enterprise system, except for some multi-million-dollar price manipulations. (Federal investigators) discovered that 20 major U.S. oil companies overcharged the public $336 million for oil transferred from their foreign affiliates."

—The next month, the president ordered a secret review of the nation's vulnerability. An exhaustive, four-month study concluded that the continued flow of Middle East oil into this country was less than certain. Yet critics continued to contend, we reported, that the Carter administration "puts too much emphasis on conserving oil and not enough emphasis on replacing it."

—We discovered in November 1977, that the Energy Department had asked Price Waterhouse and Company to develop a contingency plan for gasoline rationing. "The firm is the accountant for a number of major oil companies," we reported. "No other company was allowed to compete for the contract... Not surprisingly, the firm is studying an emergency gas rationing plan that would rely on oil company credit cards."

—Our warnings began to stir up alarm on Capitol Hill by the end of the year. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., for one, wrote a stern letter to the Energy Secretary.

Dog daze

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Police have solved a reported auto theft in which the only one to land behind bars was a two-pound Chihuahua accused of biting the hand that fed it.

It began when the owners of two similar automobiles went to the same cocktail lounge. The owner of one car got into the other car when he left the lounge. His ignition key worked and he drove home. The other car's owner later reported his car stolen.

Inside the similar vehicle left in the lot was a high-strung Chihuahua that dutifully stood guard for nearly three days. "An employee at the lounge fed, watered and otherwise took care of the dog best he could. But the dog bit him on the finger and we had to call Rabies Control to lock the dog up," said Police Sgt. Carl Wideman.

Meanwhile, the man who took the other car noticed the discrepancy and reported his car stolen. Wideman said that's when officers unraveled the mystery.

Odiferous product problem

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — The city's Public Works Department says no one is breaking down the door to buy its product. A good thing, too. The broken door would only increase the inventory.

Tacoma's $1.4 million garbage recycling plant, hailed at its dedication as a great innovation, has sat idle for six months at the city's sanitary landfill because no one wants the used garbage or, as it's more politely called, "refused-derived fuel."

"We're probably a little ahead in trying to sell the stuff," said Ron Button, the city public works director. "Maybe that's part of the underlying problem."

"It smells," Button said, "but I don't think it smells that bad. It's just a localized smell. It goes away."

The plant was to recycle about 350 tons of garbage a day and make money-raising fuel for the city. But it has consumed only about 1,000 tons of garbage since it was completed, says Wilbur Larson, chief of the city's refuse utility division.

Death of Chi machine exaggerated

CHICAGO (AP) — It has been widely reported that the Chicago Democratic machine is dead — slain with ballots by an unsmiling blonde Irishwoman named Jane Byrne.

Those reports, as Mark Twain once said about notices of his death, may have been "greatly exaggerated."

"We're going to have to show the world that what happened here (in the primary election) is like a fight in the family, where you always make up," Mrs. Byrne told Democratic Party precinct captains.

Mrs. Byrne, long-time aide to the late Mayor Richard J. Daley, was the victor in the Feb. 27 Democratic mayoral primary. The loser was incumbent Michael Bilandic, who headed the Democratic machine after Daley died.

Bilandic's defeat was viewed by some, at least at first, as defeat for the machine.

But Mrs. Byrne is still courting the machine's power, even though for more than 50 years the winner of the Democratic primary has won the general election. And her Republican opponent, stockbroker Wallace Johnson, trails badly — by a 7-to-1 margin according to a Republican poll taken last week.

Since the primary, Mrs. Byrne has promised to share patronage appointments with George Dunne, Cook County Democratic chairman.

She told 400 precinct captains on Monday that they are part of the "greatest Democratic Party in the United States."

She urged them to turn out the vote for her in the April 3 general election because "it's been written up all over the world what happened (in the primary). A lot of people, including a lot of Republicans, will be looking here to see whether or not we can get our act together."

Democratic regulars who cursed her in the primary are now kissing her cheeks and hanging her picture where Bilandic's once hung.

"These people are professional politicians and Democrats — they have no real choice but to go with the winner," says Don Rose, the antimachine political gadfly who became Mrs. Byrne's campaign manager in early January. Rose was credited with taking a disorganized campaign and putting Mrs. Byrne over the top.

Despite his years of fighting the machine, Rose said he isn't upset that Mrs. Byrne is mending fences with party regulars.

"She's talking conciliation. It's the kind of posture she has to assume before the election, it doesn't mean she's changing colors," Rose added.

Rose noted that Mrs. Byrne's transition team is controlled by anti-machine independents. If Mrs. Byrne follows its recommendations, Rose said, independents should be happy.

The real test, Rose and other analysts say, will be the appointment of top city officials. If Democratic Party regulars end up running City Hall, "I won't be happy," Rose says. "But it's just too early to make predictions."

Alderman Dick Simpson, an independent, said he never viewed Mrs. Byrne as an independent. "If someone is going to kill the machine it's going to take someone else to do it," he said.

Simpson, who did not seek reelection, predicted Mrs. Byrne will "make alliances with Democratic regulars, but it will be on her terms — after all she won the election."

In the meantime, Simpson added, her victory has "fragmented control of city government. There's much more room for maneuvering now, a chance for decent legislation to come out of the city council. I'm sure the first 100 days of the Byrne administration will turn out some good legislation."

Mrs. Byrne's candidacy has been endorsed by both the Democratic Central Committee and the Independent Voters of Illinois.

Uneasy truce prevails

SANANDAJ, Iran (AP) — An uneasy truce prevailed in Sanandaj today as a close associate of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini negotiated with Kurdish rebels still in control of the capital of the Kurdistan region after four days of fighting.

Khomeini, the Shiite Moslem leader of the Iranian revolution, sent Ayatollah Mahmoud Taleghani to try to check the local uprising by the autonomy seeking Sunni Moslem Kurds before it spread to the rest of the tribe in western Iran.

Taleghani, the Shiite religious leader in Tehran, met with leading local tribesmen in the second-story cafeteria at Sanandaj University. He suggested that they submit a list of their demands so he could assess them.

Taleghani was accompanied by the interior minister in Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan's provisional government, Seyyed Javadi.

Heavy firing around the army barracks, where the Kurds had besieged the local garrison of about 200 troops since Sunday, died down around midnight Wednesday, and the city was calm today.

The government said more than 100 persons were killed, but independent sources in Sanandaj said at least 200 were dead and there were hundreds of wounded, most of them Kurds.

The casualties included many women and children cut down by mortar barrages from the troops inside the barracks and firing by helicopter gunships on heavily populated areas of the town.

The Kurds were armed with light automatic weapons and rifles, some of World War I vintage. Their weapons were not powerful enough to penetrate the thick cement wall around the army barracks, which is strategically located atop a rise with a 500-yard no man's land around it.

The Kurdish outbreak was the most serious threat to Khomeini's revolution since it swept the country five weeks ago.

Get involved, find new friends

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Dr. Wallace: I'm a 16-year-old girl, and about four months ago I moved to a new high school and this has been the worst four months of my life.

One of the worst things is that my new school plays my old school in sports and when I talk to my old friends at half-time, the people from my new school look at me like some sort of traitor.

My parents are no help. My mom gets mad whenever I talk to her about my problem. My dad just doesn't seem to care.

I'm so confused that I have even contemplated running away from home. I really need your help. — Lynne, Chekalis, Wash.

Lynne: Not being accepted or just plain old being lonely is a very disturbing and frightening experience for all of us. But let's face reality. Being 16, you will spend the next two years at your new high school and it will be the school you graduate from.

Getting involved in school activities is the best way of finding new friends. Every high school has numerous clubs, associations, teams and leagues where teens with like interests meet.

Get involved immediately. I guarantee you will meet new friends.

Dr. Wallace: I'm a sophomore and I'm crazy about a guy who is a junior. When he found out that I liked him, he said that I needed glasses. You see, he isn't that attractive and he is very self-conscious about his glasses.

I stopped him in the hall today and asked him why he kept putting himself down. He got real embarrassed and said he had to go home.

How can I get this guy to think more highly of himself? I need your help. I really like this guy. — Karen, Ogden, Utah

Karen: It appears that you have just started to "get your man." Stay with it, a couple of dates with you and he will think he is a king!

Dr. Wallace: My sister is very sarcastic to my mom and I don't like it. Sometimes when she does it, I feel like smacking her right in the mouth. Please help me stop her acting this way. — Cheryl, Mt. Vernon, Ohio

Cheryl: I'm proud that you really respect mom, but mom is the person who must demand this same respect from your sister.

A good smacking on your sister's bottom delivered by mom would be a good "respectable" beginning.

Write to Dr. Robert Wallace, TwEEN 12 and 20 in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Women residents say cooking from scratch is the only way

By ROBBIE CROW

Nowadays, cooking is relatively simple. Food is packaged in such a way, it practically does everything but cook itself.

Even though there are a few cooks who go the whole nine yards and cook from scratch, years ago that was the only way to cook.

"A pinch here and a pinch there," was how some of the women at Park View Manor Nursing Home learned to cook.

Fannie Barrett, 91, is one of the oldest residents of the home. She was born Sept. 14, 1887 and according to her, she learned many special cooking techniques from her mother.

A favorite dish she cooked for her family was peach cobbler.

Mrs. Barrett, mother of three girls, claims all of her daughters turned out to be excellent cooks.

In addition to cooking, other interests of this resident includes embroidery and bingo.

Maycie Perry is another Park View Manor resident with plenty of cooking experience behind her. She worked as a salad chef for many years in Fort Worth cafeterias.

"Many of the salads were my original recipes," explained Mrs. Perry.

Although cooking was one of her specialties, Mrs. Perry is also an accomplished artist. On the wall of her room are outstanding paintings of nature scenes created by her. She is the mother of one son.

Holly Covert came to Big Spring when she was a little girl, then later met and married the late well-known Big Springer, Nat Shick.

According to Mrs. Shick, her husband taught her everything she knew about cooking.

"He was a better cook than I was," claimed the resident.

Mr. and Mrs. Shick liked everything and ate everything, so says Mrs. Shick. Her husband carved many totem poles for the city. At their home at 510 Gregg, the Shicks' backyard was somewhat of a wonderland. Mr. Shick was an excellent wood carver and he created many figures such as giraffe's and the like making the couple's yard like no other.

Mrs. Shick, 90, has one daughter, Lillian Dawson who is a Big Spring resident.

"Apple pie and coconut cake was my family's favorite dessert dish," stated Mavis Hayes, nursing home resident since 1975.

She came to Big Spring in 1931 from Hill County. Since she was the youngest of seven children, she had a chance to learn expertise cooking from her mother and four sisters.

"Cooking then wasn't anything like it is now. If you didn't cook from scratch, there wasn't anything to cook," explained Mrs. Hayes.

She is a former bookkeeper for Hall-Bennett Hospital and Malone-Hogan Hospital.

According to the daughters of Mrs. Georgia Jackson, there was no finer cook than their mother. Mrs. Jackson, 81, has been a resident of Park View Manor for 9 years.

"I always enjoyed cooking for my family. There was always some touch I added to make the recipe original," remembered Mrs. Jackson. Janie Hale and Beverly Grant are the activity directors of Park View Manor. They both revealed that there are many interesting cooks and people at Park View Manor as evidenced by these women.

If you haven't had good home cooking from scratch lately, why not try a few of these recipes submitted by these four women.

Dear Abby Bad Examples Did Him Good

DEAR ABBY: My parents fought all the time. When they finally got a divorce, I was sent to live with my grandparents. Well, they fought worse than my parents, but it was better than an orphanage.

I had a pretty rough life as a kid, but it didn't do me any harm.

I had a paper route when I was 10. I had to get up at 4 a.m. daily. Nobody drove me; I went alone in the pitch dark when it was sometimes 20 below zero.

They say kids learn from example, but that's not always true. My father was an alcoholic. After seeing what it did to him and our family, you couldn't pay me to take a drink. My grandfather smoked like a chimney and his breath smelled so bad I vowed I'd never smoke. And I never have.

Sometimes the bad examples kids see will work in reverse. Instead of imitating those bad habits, kids will try all the harder to do the opposite.

What do you say, Abby?

RED IN BURLINGTON, IOWA

DEAR RED: I say you could be right, but I still believe that when kids have GOOD examples to follow, their chances for turning out good are a lot better.

DEAR ABBY: You told a woman whose husband looked at other women, "Let him look. When he's through looking, he's through."

Did you mean he is through with sex, or dead?

FLO IN FLORIDA

DEAR FLO: I meant "through with sex." But some men aren't through with sex until they're dead.

DEAR ABBY: I am 16 and eight months pregnant. I am not married, and have no plans to be.

I made a very important decision a few weeks ago. I decided to give my baby up for adoption. Abby, I love this baby very, very much. That is why I'm giving it up. Some people think I'm wrong. They say I am cruel and heartless and even selfish for wanting to give away my child, but I think it would be much more selfish of me to keep the baby and make it suffer for my mistakes. Every child should have a home with a mother and father who want it and can give it everything a child deserves.

For months I was undecided about what I should do. Now I'm sure. I am thinking of the baby first. That's why I'm giving it up.

I have always respected your opinion, Abby. Do you think I made the right choice?

EXPECTING THE BEST IN TEXAS

DEAR EXPECTING. Yes. God bless you.

Violations drop sharply

MEXICO CITY (AP) — An amnesty law and electoral reform enacted by President Jose Lopez Portillo's administration has sharply reduced human rights violations in Mexico, according to human-rights watchdogs.

"The last report I got of missing persons was in September when two boys were kidnapped in Puebla," said Rosario Ibarra de Piedra, 52, head of a watchdog group called the National Committee for the Defense of Political Prisoners, Fugitives, Exiles and Disappeared Persons.

"But just because things have gotten better that's no excuse to forget the past," she added. Mrs. Ibarra de Piedra, whose son Jesus disappeared in a shootout with police five years ago, has been a leading critic of alleged human rights violations in Mexico.

A Communist Party official, Eduardo Montes, said there have been positive changes in Mexico's political climate as well and the government now respects the rights of opposition parties.

He added that the real test will come in the congressional elections July 1. He said that if any of the handful of tiny leftist parties achieve any significant victories that would be evidence of improvement.

A spokesman for the Popular Socialist Party said he agrees with this view. The membership of both parties is not accurately known. The Communist Party was illegal in Mexico for decades.

The amnesty law has permitted the release of 559 persons from prison or had their criminal records wiped clean since Congress enacted it Sept. 28, 1978, according to government records.

Spokesman Rigoberto Galindo of the Department of Government — the ministry in charge of Mexican internal security — claims that all persons listed as political prisoners have been freed.

"There are still some who consider themselves political prisoners but they are charged with things not covered under the amnesty law — like murder and bank robbery," he said.

Mrs. Ibarra de Piedra said she disagrees, adding that her National Committee's records show that about 300 political prisoners were passed over by the amnesty bill and are still in jail.

She claimed that she herself — a resident of the northern city of Monterrey — is under constant surveillance and that often two or three men sit in a car without registration plates outside her home.

"The internal politics of the country are very different from the face it presents to the world," she said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press. She claimed many of the prisoners are in Military Camp No. 1 on the outskirts of Mexico City.

A recently released International League of Human Rights report dated last May listed 301 persons missing in Mexico and accused the government of condoning illegal arrests, torture, secret jails, the existence of secret police forces and the harassment of families of political prisoners.

Attorney General Oscar Flores Sanchez refuted the accusations at a recent news conference and said of the 314 persons listed as missing since 1971 an investigation by his office showed 154 had died in shootouts with military troops or police, 89 were fugitives, 26 had no criminal record and the rest were either in jail or died from other causes.

"Tortures are crazy and don't accomplish anything," he said. "Just like anywhere else, there are bad policemen."

"The government doesn't have to assassinate anyone or send them to secret jails. The government is very strong."

A senior government official who asked not to be identified admitted excesses were committed by security forces during a 1970-74 anti-terrorist campaign against leftist urban guerrilla groups but added: "We were fighting terrorists. What did you expect us to do?"

Dissident groups not officially approved of have been harassed, their power broken and their leaders jailed or persecuted in the half a century the Institutional Revolutionary Party or PRI has been in power in Mexico.

This was especially true in the 1930s and 1940s when at different times prominent Communist Party members David Alfaro Siqueiros, Jose Clemente Orozco and Diego Rivera were jailed for long periods or exiled.

On top of the persecution, parties not officially approved of could only run write-in candidates in elections but had no chance of winning. Their petitions for official certification repeatedly went ignored.

The political reform bill passed by Congress almost at the same time as the amnesty law broke the PRI's power monopoly. Beginning with the House elections July 1, parties by law can obtain official registration and field their own candidates provided they have a certified membership of 60,000 in each of the country's 32 electoral districts.

Congress' Chamber of Deputies has been enlarged from 237 to 400 seats — with 100 seats to be apportioned to minority groups through proportional representation. The PRI currently holds 195 of the 237 seats in the Chamber and all but one of 64 in the Senate, which is renewed every six years.

An official who requested anonymity but who is close to Lopez Portillo said the purpose of the two laws is to provide a legal outlet for dissidents in Mexico and take the wind out of the sails of elements who would otherwise be prone to violence.

"We have reduced anti-social pressures. We have definitely reduced the possibility of violence in the future," the official added.

Persuasive speaking samples eyed by Lions

Downtown Lions got samples Wednesday of the quality of work in the speaking arts at Big Spring High School.

Brenda Clay gave an example of persuasive speaking, the division in which she competes in various tournaments and Interscholastic League events. Participants are given a pick of three topics and have 30 minutes in which to develop a convincing speech, she said. Jan Whittington, who won first place in state competition last year, presented a short reading of prose. They, and other members of the speech department at BSHS, will soon take part in the district

UIL meet here, also in the Texas and National Forensic tournaments.

Guests at the club included Osvep Manasarin, general manager of the Moscow circus, who described some of the shows acts, and Carlos Vasquez, impresario. Several Lions said the Tuesday evening show was the best circus they had seen.

President Morris Rhoades announced a meeting of the nominating committee for Thursday evening, and a zone meeting Monday, 6:30 at the Family Country Kitchen with the Evening Lions as hosts. John Johansen was presented as a new member.

House panel votes to divert money

Drug war funds may pay DPS overtime

AUSTIN — A House committee has voted to divert money programmed for a massive war against illicit drug trafficking to overtime pay for Department of Public Safety officers.

Currently there are no programs for state employees to receive time-and-a-half pay for work in excess of 40 hours in a week.

The 1977 Legislature did pass a bill providing for overtime pay, but did not fund it.

Now employees are given hour-for-hour compensatory time.

The Legislative Budget Board recommended that the Department of Public Safety hire 25 new narcotics agents to aid in the fight against illicit drugs.

But Rep. Craig Washington of Houston said the 25 new narcotics agents wouldn't make a dent in Texas drug traffic problems.

He said paying overtime would improve morale among current DPS officers and would have a positive effect on law enforcement in all areas.

Washington and Rep. Ted Lyon of Mesquite convinced the House Securities and Sanctions Committee to transfer $2 million programmed for salaries for the new officers to a new overtime account.

Lyon served for five years on the Mesquite police force before being elected to the House.

Walter C. McFarland, head of the DPS narcotics division, said, "It's going to hamper our (narcotics) operations if we don't get the 25 additional men." He said morale is good.

Wilson Speir, director of the DPS, said he asked the Legislative Budget Board for overtime money and the additional narcotics officers. "It would be hard to choose which was the more important," he said.

The committee action was not unanimous. Rep. William Blanton of Carrollton said the money should be used to fight drug trafficking. "We are not doing the job that need to be done there."

The matter now goes to the House Appropriations Committee for its action.

Priest to be arraigned

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest who is an assistant pastor at St. Mary's parish in Cambridge, Md., will be arraigned March 28 on five counts of armed robbery.

The Rev. Bernard T. Pagano, 53, was indicted by a New Castle County grand jury Tuesday on five counts of armed robbery and one of attempted robbery. Police allege Pagano, who is free on bond, was the "Gentleman Bandit" who brandished a small chrome-plated automatic pistol in a series of holdups at northern Delaware stores on Tuesday and Thursday evenings in January and February.

Court upholds ordinance

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The California Supreme Court has upheld a San Diego ordinance banning outdoor advertising billboards and requiring the eventual removal of existing billboards.

The 6-1 decision on Wednesday by Justice Mathew Tobriner said the ordinance was within the city's power and did not violate the rights of free speech. The high court ruling reverses a San Diego County Superior Court ruling that found the 1972 ordinance unconstitutional. The case will be returned to the lower court for further proceedings.

Boy sinks to waist in mud

BRISTOL, Conn. (AP) — An 11-year-old boy taking a shortcut to his grandparents' house found out why the shortcut isn't popular when he sank in mud to his waist, fire officials say.

Shawn Robertson of Littleton, Conn., had to be rescued by firefighters Tuesday. Fire officials said the mud had built up along a stream because of recent heavy rains. Someone who lived near the stream called firefighters after hearing the boy's calls for help, said Deputy Fire Chief John LaFrance. He said the boy would have been endangered only if he had panicked and thrashed around. Instead, the youth stayed still and assisted in his rescue.

Legal drinking age upped

CHICAGO (AP) — The legal drinking age in Chicago has returned to 21. City officials cast aside last summer's ruling that allowed persons 19 and 20 years old to drink beer and wine in taverns without being able to purchase it for off-premises consumption.

Alderman John Madzyk, chief sponsor of the new law, said after Wednesday's 43-1 vote that he was motivated when the Illinois General Assembly earlier this month moved toward passage of a bill raising the drinking age to 21, but allowing communities the optional 19-year-old. Madzyk said he feared the bill would turn Chicago into a teen-age drinking oasis if the age limit was not revised upward.

Thirty-eight ministers sign up for seminar

Thirty-eight ministers from area churches have pre-registered for the area's first seminar on ministering in times of crisis, with a special emphasis on the hospital patient.

"Thank you for offering us the opportunity," one minister wrote, and "this is a great thing that you're doing," another said.

The seminar starts 2 p.m. Friday at Malone-Hogan Hospital. The first session begins at 2:45 p.m. A tour through the crisis-oriented areas of the hospital will begin at 4 p.m.

Spouses of seminar participants are invited to join the ministers for dinner at 7 p.m. Friday at the Big Spring Country Club. Members of the Permian Basin Medical Society and their spouses will be special guests.

The Saturday sessions, which will feature Dr. J.E. Mathews, on the needs of the surgical patient, and Dr. M.A. Porter, who will present case studies on the crisis of birth, will begin at 9 a.m. Lunch will be served at 1 p.m., with adjournment at 2 p.m.

Chaplain Tom Cole, director of pastoral care at Memorial Systems Hospital in Houston, will lead the workshop. Dr. Lee Butler, director of pastoral care at Big Spring State Hospital, will co-ordinate. Chaplain Clayton Hicks, Veterans Administration Hospital, and Chaplain Jim Powell, Big Spring State Hospital will assist.

Gun play in Big Spring

Two Big Springers were threatened at gunpoint Wednesday.

A local woman reported that a man driving a blue van followed her through the city, 10 a.m. Wednesday, until she came to a stop in front of Thornton's Department Store. As she got out of her car, the man in the van pointed a large pistol at her, and said he was going to kill her. He then drove away.

At 11:30 a.m. Wednesday, a local man was called out of his business on Third Street by another man in a car. When the businessman walked out of his office, he was faced by the barrel of a 30-30 caliber rifle.

The man holding the rifle threatened to kill the businessman, put the rifle down and replaced it with a shotgun, and drove away.

A hand-painted plywood sign belonging to Hillman's Saddlery Shop, 110 E. 2nd, was stolen or destroyed sometime this week. The $225 sign was found missing Wednesday morning.

Burglars broke through a rear window in the home of Joseph W. Diliberto, 1605 B. Lincoln, sometime between 8 and 8:30 p.m. Wednesday. Stolen was a 21-inch black and white television set valued at $100.

Burglars also walked into the home of Lupe Marez, 1003 Main, sometime between 4:20 and 5:30 p.m. Wednesday.

The intruders stole only a carton of cigarettes valued at $6.

Vandals pumped BBs through a front window at the home of Charles Douglas, 3619 Connally, around 5:45 p.m. Wednesday.

Damage was estimated at $5.

Three mishaps were reported Wednesday.

Vehicles driven by Charles Vernon, 1805 Morrison, and Sam Lewis, 1511 Stadium, collided at 1300 S. Gregg, 9:15 p.m.

Vehicles driven by Lila W. Estes, 501 Highland, and Wesley R. Hart, 27 November, collided at 12th and Young, 3:41 p.m.

Vehicles driven by Sara Hull, 1707 E. 15th, and Mark Winn, 1203 Settles, collided at Second and Gregg, 12:13 p.m.

San Angelo auto firm awarded $5,627 by jury

Schuch Motor Company of San Angelo was awarded $5,627.92 from the State National Bank of Big Spring in a jury case Tuesday in 118th District Court.

The San Angelo Pontiac dealership had asked for triple that amount under the Deceptive Practices Rule, as well as attorneys' fees and court costs, but the jury only awarded the $5,627.92.

According to testimony in the case, Schuch Motor Company sold a 1978 Pontiac to Glen Johnson, of Iraan, on verbal assurance from State National Bank that the note would be accepted there. Johnson lacked only a few hundred dollars paying off a note at State National Bank on a pickup which he traded in on the new car.

Johnson was supposed to come to Big Spring to sign the note soon after the purchase, on Dec. 19, 1977. Before he arrived here, however, Johnson died in a car accident which totaled the car.

Because State National Bank had neglected to be sure that an insurance policy was taken out on the pickup, no policy had transferred to the new car. Therefore, Schuch Motor Company lost the amount of the cash value of the car minus the pickup trade-in.

State National Bank contended that since the new note had not been signed, they had no responsibility to pay Schuch Motor Company for the vehicle.

The jury only awarded Schuch the amount of the actual cash lost.

Well, this year, you can watch television and get help with your tax return at the same time because the Internal Revenue Service and the Public Broadcasting Service (PBS) are presenting a three-hour television program called "The Tax Clinic" on Sunday, from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m.

"The Tax Clinic" will guide viewers through the preparation of Form 1040A as well as Form 1040 and Schedules A and B. Schedule A is for itemizing deductions and Schedule B must be used for reporting interest and dividend income over $400. As part of the telecast, IRS tax specialists will go through the tax forms line-by-line, stopping to illustrate important or tricky items with examples and to discuss common taxpayer errors and questions.

Topics covered will include whether you should file a Form 1040 or a Form 1040A, how long it should take to get your refund, deductions you might overlook, how to claim the Earned Income Credit and the tax benefits available to older Americans.

"The Tax Clinic" also is designed to afford you the chance to call IRS specialists to answer your tax questions. Viewers just have to dial the number flashed on their TV screen.

Mennonites gain backing of Bentsen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mennonites from Canada and Mexico, faced with deportation, have an influential ally in their struggle to keep alive a dream of a better life on their land in far West Texas.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, introduced legislation Wednesday that would grant permanent resident status to the immigrant Mennonites.

"These good and decent people had been led to believe that by purchasing land in our country, they would be allowed to remain as citizens," Bentsen said.

The religious group of more than 600 was recently served with eviction papers from about 6,400 acres of land near Seminole because of problems with payments.

"It (Bentsen's action) makes me feel better," said Peter Bergen, a spokesman for the Mennonite group.

Bergen said families have been moving off the land since the eviction notice. "Four families are all that is out there now," he said.

He said Bentsen's action will give remaining Mennonites "a chance to work out their papers... their legal status. At least now we know we're not faced with deportation."

While the bill is pending, the immigrants are protected from deportation by the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Bentsen said the Mennonites came to this country in search of a better life. "The cause of their problems... is murky and uncertain. I do not introduce this legislation to lay the blame for their problems on anyone, rather I simply propose to provide the necessary relief."

Sen. Farabee opposes higher interest rates

State Sen. Ray Farabee voted recently against a bill which would increase interest rates from 10 percent to 18 percent. Senate Bill 10 provides for a rate of 18 percent on loans in excess of $175,000.

"Such an increase would be a real problem to farmers and ranchers who depend on credit and frequently must borrow or refinance to stay in business. The bill, if passed by the House, will contribute to the shortage of money and higher rates on smaller loans," Senator Farabee, who represents Howard County, indicated.

Farabee said that he intends to oppose Senate Bill 134 which would increase the ceiling on home mortgage interest rates from 10 percent to 12 percent. "Texans have had Constitutional protection against interest rates in excess of 10 percent since 1891, and we need to retain that protection. Although the money market is tighter nationally, money remains available in this area."

"High taxes and high interest rates are primary contributors to the number one problem of this country... inflation. We are working to implement the tax relief amendment recently adopted by the people, and we should hold the line on interest rates. Any increase in home mortgage interest rates will be inflationary and would only add to the existing problems of those who want to purchase and own their own homes or farms," the 30th District State Senator stated.

Indiana nips Purdue for NIT crown

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The Indiana Hoosiers wanted to stop Joe Barry Carroll and they succeeded, but that isn't what gave them the championship of the National Invitation Tournament.

Carroll was held to 14 points after scoring 42 in Purdue's semifinal victory over Alabama. But while the Boilermakers' all-Big Ten center was held in check, Indiana's own all-conference performer, Mike Woodson, got only 10 points on 5-of-16 shooting.

Obviously, since the two teams had already played each other twice before Wednesday night, they knew exactly what to do to stop the other.

So in the end, one Indiana shot that went in and one Boilermaker shot that didn't determined the outcome.

Butch Carter hit a 20-foot jumper with six seconds left to give Indiana a 53-52 victory, a triumph not clinched until senior Jerry Sichting's baseline shot bounced off the back of the rim at the buzzer.

"They concentrated on Woodson and we obviously concentrated hard on Carroll, and it showed (in the statistics)," said Indiana Coach Bobby Knight, who won the NIT in his seventh try, twice as coach at Indiana and five times at Army, dating back to 1964. Woodson, whom Knight called "the best player ever who didn't even get honorable mention All-America," was supposed to get the final shot for the Hoosiers, although Knight said Carter and Randy Wittman were alternate choices if Woodson was covered.

That was the case, so Carter, who scored 12 points along with fellow Most Valuable Player Ray Tolbert, launched the game-winner.

A little more than a minute earlier and with Purdue ahead 52-51, Carter had climaxed a 3½-minute stall by Indiana that ran the clock from 4:30 to 1:10 by throwing an interception. But he insisted he wasn't thinking of the error in the closing seconds.

"I was taught that if you make a bad play you don't think about it or you'll make another bad play," said Carter. "So I wasn't about to redeem myself with that shot. If you think about a bad play you might make a bad foul or another bad pass."

But Knight said of his 6-foot-5 junior guard, "I think he was really upset after the interception, but he came back and made two good plays — the foul on Carroll and the shot."

The 7-foot-1 Carroll, who hit only two of eight free throws, was fouled by Carter near midcourt after Carter's bad pass. But with a chance to salt the game away for the Boilermakers, Carroll missed the first of a 1-and-1 free throw opportunity and Indiana got the rebound.

Knight said of the unorthodox stall, "I've never held the ball like that when I was behind. But with us one point down I was content to hold the ball and reduce it to a 20-second game instead of 4½ minutes."

In the third-place game, Alabama's Reggie King scored 21 points and set an NIT scoring record of 132 points in the Crimson Tide's 96-86 victory over Ohio State. The old mark of 129 by Bob Lloyd of Rutgers in 1967 was set in four games, while King played in five this year in the tournament's expanded format.

Spartan coach confident but dislikes favorite role

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote says he's got the best team in the NCAA Final Four, but he hates being favored and his players are off limits to the news media until after their semifinal game Saturday against Penn.

The Spartans arrived in Salt Lake Wednesday, a day ahead of the other three finalists in the NCAA Basketball Tournament, and Heathcote immediately served notice their practices would be closed.

"We are out here early to get away from all the distractions surfacing at this time," he said Wednesday in a telephone news conference with the head coaches of the other three finalists.

"We've had a number of columnists in our area indicate there is no need even to come out here ... that we've won it already. We hope they're right, but we don't think that's the kind of columns that we want our players reading at the present time."

When the Spartans were ranked No. 1 during the regular season for two weeks, Heathcote said, "we lost four of six games."

"I'm not blaming the accolades heaped on the club at that time," he said, "but I think there was a tendency to think we could win without defense and intensity, which have been our strengths the entire year."

Despite Heathcote's claims that top-ranked and unbeaten Indiana State should be favored, he feels his 24-6 Spartans, energized by brilliant guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson and high-scoring forward Greg Kelsey, should win.

"We're coming into the tournament with the worst won-loss record of all the teams, but I honestly think we're the best team," he said. "But in a tournament it's not how good you are, it's how good you're playing. You can talk about tough schedules and tough leagues, but when you get to the Final Four, that's all behind you. I can't believe Indiana State can come into here with a 32-0 record, having been ranked No. 1 for six or seven weeks, and suddenly we end up being the favorite."

Heathcote's Spartans are favored by as many as 17 points in their Saturday tipoff against Ivy League champion Penn, and Indiana State is favored over DePaul in their semifinal.

Indiana State's first-year head coach, Bill Hodges, the Associated Press Coach of the Year, admitted he feels strange doing battle with the esteemed Meyer, a 37-year coaching giant who will be enshrined into the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame next month.

Hayes hoping sentence won't be prison term

DALLAS (AP) — Former Olympic and pro football star "Bullet" Bob Hayes returned to a state district courtroom today, hoping to avoid a prison term for his guilty plea on three charges of delivering narcotics to a undercover officer one year ago.

Judge Richard Mays accepted Hayes' pleas last week, but delayed sentencing until today. He had the option of granting Hayes probation on each of the 3 charges or sentencing him to up to life in prison.

A parade of character witnesses, including Cowboy officials, was expected in Hayes' behalf at today's hearing.

Attorneys for Hayes, an all-pro wide receiver for the Dallas Cowboys, said he chose a trial before a judge because the Olympic gold medalist would have been ineligible for parole by a jury.

Under Texas law, a jury cannot grant probation to a person convicted of a previous felony. Hayes was convicted of armed robbery during his collegiate days at Florida A&M, but later received a presidential pardon.

The 35-year-old Hayes was arrested last April 6 after a 3-month investigation into drug trafficking. He was accused of one count of Quaalude delivery and two counts of cocaine delivery.

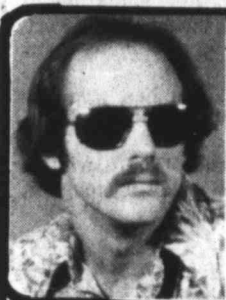

An undercover officer for the suburban Addison Police Department said he and a friend dined with Hayes and his wife at a Dallas restaurant, and that the subject turned to narcotics. As the acquaintance developed, Hayes offered to make various types of narcotics available to him, the officer said.

Hayes, once billed as the "world's fastest human," is alleged to have told the undercover officer he began taking narcotics while he was with the Cowboys and had used them since.

Attorneys for Hayes said, faced with having to plead guilty or innocent, "we felt the best thing we could do, based upon the evidence, was plead guilty and go to the judge for punishment."

Hangin' Out

by Nathan Poss

I usually agree on the ideas that Dick Young writes, and nearly always like his style. But I think he has taken an incident that Sparky Lyle wrote about in his upcoming book, "The Bronx Zoo", and blown it up in illogical fashion.

What Lyle wrote is that Nettles purposely bobbed a New York Met ground ball in the extra innings of the annual exhibition game called Mavor's Trophy and intentionally threw it over first baseman Chris Chambliss' head. What incensed Dick Young is that Nettles told everyone in the dugout that he would do it shortly before it actually happened. Nettles claimed that he wanted to end the game as soon as possible. The Mets didn't score, but the Yankees did in the bottom of the inning to win the game.

Young wrote that honest effort on every play is very pertinent to the games integrity and to the public image, whether they be in exhibition games or not. Maybe so. But on the other hand, anyone that has ever been involved in an athletic game probably has felt the same type of feelings that Nettles did in some form of non-meaningful or practice game.

Sure, it's really not a very honorable thing to do. But I've read some of Young's columns which obviously appeared to be written to fill up space. Consequently they were not good efforts. I am sure that I have done the same thing, although I would rather not admit it.

After watching Nettles play third in such superb fashion while the Yankees won the world title the last two years, I kind of get the feeling that he can play just about as good as he has to. But he's human and vulnerable to his own feelings just as Young, who is also a very good writer.

Young tried to make his final point in somewhat bizarre fashion. He wrote "If a man will rationalize throwing an exhibition game, the throwing of World Series game can be one step away."

Really, Dick, that's taking the case a bit too far. I'm sure there is a vast difference in the way Nettles feels about an exhibition game and a World Series Game. A stop in normal circumstances is not even enough to think about, but the idea of throwing a World Series game is much more than that.

Besides, Nettles is an All-Star third baseman. His position on the team is very secure. He can afford to make a costly exhibition error, because it would not affect his playing status. A player fighting for a spot on the team would in cases not even consider it.

To further state my point, look at the Yankees exhibition record this year. It is 2-12. I doubt very seriously that it will look like that in the regular season, as they obviously know the difference between an exhibition game and a regular season or World Series game.

Last week a story came across the wire service from the state of Washington concerning University of Washington basketball coach Marv Harshman's recruiting trip to Big Spring for the Region V Juco tourney.

Harshman made such comments as "it would be about as close to the pits as a guy could find," and "it's a town of about 25,000 to 30,000 out in the desert. There's cactus, mesquite, sagebrush, a few oil wells, jackrabbits-no, I don't think the jackrabbits live there anymore."

I really couldn't tell if Harshman was being a bit facetious or was absolutely serious in the article. I blew it off as just a writer and a coach trying to get a little publicity. But someone that lives in the state of Washington didn't think so. They wrote me a letter which came down hard on Harshman.

Sports Editor

Big Spring, Texas
Enclosing a clipping from our local paper, quoting "nasty" remarks by University of Washington basketball coach Marv Harshman, regarding your fair city.

I grew up in Central Texas and being a displaced Texan, I resent his remarks about any place in my home state.

I hope someone in your city will see fit to write a rebuttal to Mr. Harshman and at the same time put an appropriate "hex" on his win-loss record of the future. He is a very vocal personality in Seattle and is what I consider a "poor loser". As to his locale, ask him what the suicide rate is in his city of Seattle, due to day after day after day, dreary weather.

He can be reached at the University of Washington, Seattle, Washington; or through the Seattle Times or the Seattle Post Intelligence.

Go get em!
An irate Texan.
Anacortes, Washington

Personally, irate, I don't think Harshman even deserves a rebuttal. I have the philosophy that I can have a good time anywhere, whether it be Big Spring, New York, Seattle or Timbuktu. If Harshman thought this town was the pits, that's his own problem. I know quite a few coaches and referees that enjoyed themselves during their stay at a couple of friendly local establishments.

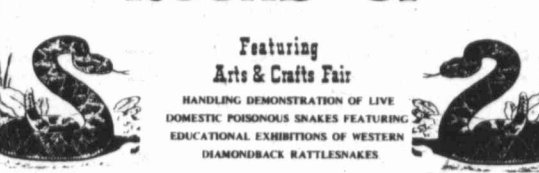

As to putting a hex on his future win-loss record, I'm no witch. He came to Big Spring to recruit McLennan's Anthony Lee. So the biggest hex would probably be if someone could convince Lee to attend Harshman's biggest rival, Washington State University, and deal havoc on the Huskies.

NBA Roundup

You really can't blame Atlanta Hawks Coach Hubie Brown if he refuses to leave his spot in front of the Hawks' bench in The Omni.

After Wednesday's 111-104 Hawk triumph over the Detroit Pistons, Atlanta has won 13 consecutive home games and 31 home contests during the season. The 31 home wins breaks a franchise record that dates to 1962-63.

The credit for the Hawks has to go to reserve forward Steve Hawes. He scored 10 of his 19 points in the fourth quarter, including three straight field goals that gave the Hawks an 87-83 lead, one they never relinquished.

In other National Basketball Association action Wednesday, Washington defeated New York 119-106; Indiana downed Chicago 114-105; San Antonio beat Kansas City 123-116; Philadelphia swept the Texas teams on consecutive nights, beating Houston 114-106; Phoenix blasted Boston 134-113; San Diego eliminated Golden State from the playoffs 106-103, and Portland scored a rare road win in Los Angeles, 114-110.

Bullets 119, Knicks 106
Although missing two starters and their top reserve, the Bullets rallied behind Elvin Hayes' 30 points and 22 rebounds to beat the Knicks. Kevin Grevey, Bobby Dandridge and Mitch Kupchak all missed their second straight game but Greg Ballard and Dave Corzine each chipped in with 15 points as the Bullets won their fourth in a row. Toby Knight led the Knicks with 21 points.

Pacers 114, Bulls 105
Billy Knight led six Pacers in double figures with 24 points. The Pacers took a 31-30 lead with 10 seconds remaining in the first period and never trailed again. Mike Bantom added 17 points to the Indiana attack while Artis Gilmore led the Bulls with 23 points.

Spurs 123, Kings 116
San Antonio's defeat of Kansas City in the battle of division leaders snapped a four-game losing streak. The Spurs were led by George Gervin and Larry Kenon, who scored 24 and 23 points respectively. Gervin and Kenon produced nine points between them over the final six minutes as the Spurs wiped out a 108-106 Kansas City lead, outscoring the Kings 17-8.

Sixers 114, Rockets 108
The Sixers completed a rare sweep of the Texas teams, snapping the Rockets' four-game winning streak. Philadelphia had beaten San Antonio Tuesday night. Julius Erving scored 22 points. Moses Malone led the Rockets with 26 points and 21 rebounds, both game highs.

Suns 134, Celtics 113
Walter Davis, Paul Westphal and Alvan Adams combined for 84 points as the Suns swamped the Celtics, who played without player-coach Dave Cowens. Phoenix built a 22-point lead midway through the second quarter and coasted the rest of the way.

Clippers 106, Warriors 103
Lloyd Free hit the 30-point mark for the 29th time this season and became the second player to reach the 2,000 point mark as the Clippers sailed past Golden State.

Free finished the game with 35 points while rookie Raymond Townsend of the Warriors doubled his previous career high, scoring 24. The loss mathematically eliminated Golden State from the playoffs.

Blazers 114, Lakers 110
The Blazers beat Los Angeles as Maurice Lucas' layup with 14 seconds remaining proved the margin of difference.

The Blazers committed just eight turnovers, one in the entire second half, as they improved their road record to 9-27 on the season and their overall mark to 39-33.

Red Wings receive NHL fine

MONTREAL — The Detroit Red Wings have been fined $5,000 for derogatory statements directed at the National Hockey League Players' Association, NHL President John Ziegler announced.

The statement, made by Ted Lindsay, general manager of the Wings during a television interview March 10, was to the effect that the NHL Players' Association lacked integrity.

Ziegler said he advised the Detroit club that "the making of such a statement was detrimental to the welfare of the NHL. He added that Lindsay had issued a written retraction of his statement and an apology for having made it.

UCLA's Cunningham to resign

LOS ANGELES (AP) — each of his two years as head Gary Cunningham, who coach of the Bruins, was guided UCLA to Pacific-10 scheduled to announce his basketball championships resignation at a press conference today.

France withdraws from meet

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — France has withdrawn from the international hockey meet here April 13-15, leaving Kenya, Holland and Malaysia to compete, the Malaysian Hockey Federation's deputy president, Justice Raja Azlan Shah, said Thursday. He was informed of the withdrawal in a telegram from Rene Frank, the International Hockey Federation's president, said Raja Azlan, who added that no reasons were given for the pullout.

It was confirmed Wednesday that Cunningham was quitting the coaching job, and sources close to the Bruins' athletic program said he will take an administrative post at the school.

His decision came as a surprise, and an informed source said Cunningham did not like the pressure of the UCLA coaching job, where success is still measured against John Wooden's 10 NCAA championships in 12 years.

Cunningham's Bruin teams had a two-year record of 50-8, but lost in the NCAA West Regional playoffs each year. This year's team made it to the NCAA regional finals before losing to DePaul.

The top candidate to replace Cunningham at the Bruins' helm is reportedly Larry Brown, the former Denver Nuggets coach.

Brown, 38, has reportedly already conferred with UCLA Athletic Director J.D. Morgan, and is expected to meet with him again Friday.

Citing tension and poor health, Brown resigned as the Nuggets coach last Feb. 1, and expressed a desire to become a college coach. He had a 272-158 record in 4½ seasons at Denver.

Cunningham, 39, has a doctorate in educational administration and was executive director of the UCLA Alumni Association for two years before becoming the Bruins' head coach.

Billie Jean draws nod as top clutch player

NEW YORK (AP) — If you were on center court at Wimbledon, behind 1-5 and 30-40 in the final set and could select one tennis player to try to battle you out of the jam, whom would it be?

"Billie Jean King," said France's Francoise Durr without a moment's hesitation. "Chris Evert is the steadiest but Billie Jean is toughest in a tight spot...." "I agree," added Rosie Casals, Billie Jean's longtime doubles partner. "No one is better at turning a match around on a single shot."

"I would have to pick Billie Jean at her best," said Martina Navratilova. "Consistently, Chris is hardest to beat but for one occasion, one big match, one crucial point, yes, it would have to be Billie Jean."

Chris Evert and her friends were lolling around Madison Square Garden, awaiting their turns in the $275,000 Avon Championships, and the talk naturally turned to tennis, with a few detours involving love and marriage, slumps and the game's fierce new tiggesses.

It's now one of the best shows in sports — the ladies' tour. The competitors are attractive, bright, personable. They have a splendid organization. When they elect to put on a show — unlike the men's tour, which is fragmented by selfishness and inflated egos — all the stars show up.

Fans who buy tickets to see Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert see Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert, with their full supporting cast. No AWOLs as in the case of the rich Grand Prix Masters this winter when Bjorn Borg, Guillermo Vilas and Vitas Gerulaitis all chose to ignore it.

Chris Evert, the No. 1 women's player in the world for the last five years, is here, intent on defending her position despite one of the biggest distractions that can afflict a lady — an impending marriage. Sometime in the next few weeks the court princess from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., will take her prince — young John Lloyd of England.

Billie Jean, the court bulldog who has won six Wimbledon, now at 35 and with two fragile knees, is more spectator than competitor.

"I'm phasing myself out," she said. "There are too many good players around now. It's getting tougher and tougher."

Billie Jean left her mark.

"No matter how far down you got her, you never could be sure of beating her," said Rosie. "She might make one shot and suddenly catch fire. She is very emotional — up and down. Chris is not as flashy. She is more level, cold and consistent."

Women's tennis remains largely a Chris and Martina show. Martina has beaten her rival in two of their three meetings this year but Chris has an overall edge over the strong, left-handed Czech defector.

"We both enjoy playing each other," said Chris. "It's a challenge. We realize every time we meet, No. 1 is on the line."

Carter administration worried

No target for corporate earnings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration's concern over a big jump in corporate profits in the final three months of 1978 will not prompt it to set an overall target for corporate earnings, a spokesman says.

Jody Powell, the White House press secretary, said Wednesday the administration is worried that a 26.4 percent rise in corporate profits in the fourth quarter of 1978, compared with the fourth quarter of 1977, will undermine support for President Carter's wage and price guideline program.

But he said the administration does not want to try to tell corporations what level of earnings would be appropriate.

Powell appeared to be turning aside a suggestion from AFL-CIO President George Meany that the government tax "excessive profits" of businesses to help keep prices under control.

The union chief said the fourth quarter increase in profits was "the grossest demonstration of profit-gouging since the opening days of the Korean War."

"Unless there are effective and enforceable controls on prices and profits, workers cannot be expected to seek wage increases that do not catch up with lost buying power and maintain their families' standard of living," Meany said in a statement.

The Associated Press erroneously reported Tuesday that overall profits for 1978 were up by 26.4 percent during 1978. The actual increase for the year was 16.2 percent.

The increase of 26.4 percent was the difference between the pre-tax fourth quarter profits in 1978 of $225.3 billion, computed at an annual rate, and fourth quarter profits in 1977 of $178.3 billion, also expressed as a projected annual rate.

An annual rate is the figure that would result if the profits during the fourth quarter continued at the same level for an entire year.

Actual 1978 profits, taking into account all four quarters of the year, were $202.1 billion, an increase of 16.2 percent over 1977 profits of $173.9 billion.

Profits in the fourth quarter of 1978 were up 9.6 percent from the third quarter.

In other developments Wednesday:

—The trucking industry offered the Teamsters union a wage increase that would fall within Carter's 7 percent guidelines but is about half the union demand. The offer brought a muted public reaction from Teamsters President Frank E. Fitzsimmons, but privately union bargainers were said to be angry.

The Teamsters negotiations are considered critical to the future of Carter's voluntary anti-inflation program.

—A new Associated Press-NBC poll found that Americans are unhappy with the way the president has handled two domestic issues — the economy and energy. The poll taken Monday and Tuesday shows that the public's ratings of Carter's work on economic and energy problems hit their lowest levels since he took office.

First week in April

'Texas Industrial Week' designated

The first week in April has been designated state-wide as "Texas Industrial Week" by Governor Bill Clements.

The observance was created in 1951 by a concurrent resolution passed by the Texas Legislature. During the week, business and industry is saluted for its contributions to the state's economic well-being.

Locally, the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce will conduct a program of recognition and appreciation of both existing and new industries. An open house will be held at various industries in the Big Spring Industrial Park with conducted tours of facilities. "Heading for the 80s — The Lone Star Keeps Rising" is the slogan chosen by the Texas Association of Business, which sponsors this annual event.

"With the unemployment rate low and the state's tax structure one of the lowest in the nation, Texas business and industry will be heading for the 80s with a bright outlook on continued growth," read the official memorandum issued by Gov. Clements.

For more information about upcoming activities in Big Spring, call the Chamber of Commerce at 263-7641.

Number of operating rigs in Texas bounces back to 701

The number of working oil rigs in Texas rose again slightly this week.

The total number of operating rigs rose from 699 to 701 as of Monday. The total a month ago was 721, and 831 on March 20, 1978.

Unlike the Texas total, the number of rigs operating nationwide dropped from 1,970 to 1,966 this week. The national total was 2,046 a month ago, and 2,143 a year ago.

'Arbitrary actions, wet-eared fool prosecutor'

Judge in Davis divorce case calls it quits

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Enraged by what he called "arbitrary actions" of a "wet-eared fool prosecutor" the presiding judge in the long and bitter Cullen Davis divorce case has called it quits.

District Judge John Barron said Wednesday he would withdraw from the case and declare a mistrial after five weeks of tedious testimony.

Prosecutors Jack Strickland and John Bankston appeared in Barron's chambers Wednesday about 1 p.m. with a grand jury subpoena for all the records of the divorce trial.

The records were to have been presented to a special session of the Tarrant County grand jury Wednesday afternoon and returned this morning.

"I've never been treated as a judge in this way before, by an arrogant DA, which Strickland is in the purest sense of the word," said Barron in an interview with KDFW-TV in Dallas.

"I'm withdrawing from the case and will declare a mistrial after five weeks of trial due to the calumny and arrogance and arbitrary actions in embarrassing me and my court by a wet-eared fool prosecutor having no respect for anyone," said Barron.

"I'm not going to put up with this. I'll go back to Bryan and hunt rabbits."

The judge said Strickland "insulted everyone connected with his court including Mr. (Cecil) Munn, Mr. (Donn) Fullenweider, Mr. (Ronald) Aultman and myself."

Munn and Fullenweider are Davis' lawyers, and Aultman is Mrs. Davis' attorney.

The judge said lawyers for both Davis and his estranged wife, Priscilla, objected to turning over evidence.

"He could have handled it with some dignity, but he didn't do it. He could have worked it out with me real well. Then after I'd made a decision in the case I'd have given him the full record. He comes up here and kicks us around just like we're a bunch of dogs," said Barron.

Strickland said he did not believe he acted illegally or unethically in securing the documents.

"In my opinion, I certainly treated the judge will all due respect," said Strickland.

"Fortunately, the proceedings this afternoon were all taken down by the court reporter and another representative of the district attorney's office was there. I think the transcript will speak for itself."

Strickland also said he was shocked at the way Barron chose to air his differences. He said he has no interest in engaging in name-calling or fingerpointing with the judge.

Judge Barron said it was unprecedented for prosecutors to subpoena all records of an ongoing divorce trial.

"It's the first time in my life, in the history of the judicial system that I've ever seen anything like this," said Barron.

Strickland said Barron objected to surrendering the records immediately and claimed he would make them available at the end of the trial.

But Strickland objected because he said a decision in the case was not expected for another month.

"I wasn't going to be placed in the posture of having to review important evidence just a few days before I went to trial," said Strickland, an assistant prosecutor in Davis' murder-for-hire trial.

A mistrial was declared in January when a Houston jury could not reach a verdict in Davis' trial on charges he tried to solicit the murder of the previous presiding judge of his divorce case, District Judge Joe Eldson. But Tarrant County prosecutors plan to try Davis again, possibly within six weeks.

Fullenweider disagreed with Strickland's assessment. He said the testimony in the divorce trial would have ended today. And Davis' attorney indicated he understood why the judge reacted as he did.

"I know he (Barron) was irritated. He was treated pretty shabbily. This man has come down here (as a visiting judge) ... and the damn district attorney comes in here and doesn't say boo to him. He just insults him," said Fullenweider.

Mrs. Davis' lawyer Jerry Loftin said when he walked out of the courtroom at 5 p.m. everything was okay, and at 10 p.m. everyone was saying everything is ruined.

"The whole damn thing is just getting ridiculous. I have no idea what is happening," said Loftin.

Strickland declined to comment on what specific information they are seeking.

Marine flown to Thailand

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — An American Marine who was captured by the Viet Cong in 1965 and stayed in Vietnam for more than 13 years after his release was flown into Thailand today.

Pfc. Robert Russell Garwood, 33, of Greensburg, Ind., refused to talk to reporters on arrival at Bangkok airport from Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon.

Garwood, thin and about six feet tall, wore a pair of sunglasses and had a small flower bouquet in the buttonhole of his casual sports shirt.

Garwood was escorted through the crowd of reporters by U.S. Consul Andrew Antipapas who later told the correspondents, "I told him that his lawyer doesn't want him to talk."

A U.S. embassy spokesman said a U.S. military C130 transport had been flown in to pick up Garwood, and the plane took off for a U.S. military facility in Okinawa about two hours after Garwood's arrival.

Garwood is still listed as a prisoner of war and will undergo the normal procedure of returning POWs, the spokesman said.

However, he has been accused by some of having collaborated with the Communist side during the Vietnam War.

U.S. officials refused to say what any legal action will be taken against Garwood, who is the first POW released by Vietnam since 566 prisoners were returned in 1973. But the embassy spokesman said there would be a military investigation into Garwood's activities after his capture.

Pullman to cease production

CHICAGO (AP) — Pullman Inc., is ending production of railroad passenger cars, including the sleepers associated for more than a century with long-range rail travel.

The firm's passenger car division will close after 1980 because of foreign competition and the fact that the division has turned a profit in only four of its last 25 years, vice president John S. Burr said. The decision was made Wednesday by the company's board of directors.

"What we can't figure out is how these foreign companies can produce the cars, have them shipped here and pay duties on them and still have prices 25 to 30 percent lower than ours," Burr said.

The passenger division will close after two major contracts — an order for 60 cars from Boston and 204 cars from Amtrak — are completed in 1980, Burr said. He said the division lost $23 million after taxes during the last four years.

The decision to close the passenger division does not affect the profitable freight and truck trailer divisions, he said. The firm's engineering and construction operation also will continue.

Pullman is the latest corporate casualty in the railroad passenger car manufacturing business. Besides General Electric, Burr said the only other major manufacturer in the United States is Budd Corp., owned by a German steel company.

SNAKES ALIVE — Jack Tonn smiles casually as he displays one of his potential candidates for the Rattlesnake Round-up this weekend at the Howard County Fairbarns. He has "some pretty good sized ones." Some snakes measure 5 feet long. He has entered diamondbacks for the last 12 to 15 years. The snake shown above has a string of 13 or 14 rattles, Tonn said.

Retarded child donation bill

Mother speaks at hearing

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Margaret Little, a mother fresh from a long legal battle to allow her mentally retarded daughter to donate a kidney, and save her son's life, took time out to speak for a bill that might ease the pain for other families.

Fourteen-year-old Steve Little, victim of a congenital kidney disease, and 15-year-old Anne Little are at home in Seguin awaiting the medical go-ahead for the transplant.

"I'm the mother of Anne and Steve Little," the grey-haired, stocky woman told the House Judiciary Committee on Wednesday night.

"Where would you like me to begin?" she asked in a businesslike but soft voice that wavered only rarely. "I can begin when Steve was born or when Anne was born."

Her husband Thomas was present at the hearing but did not testify.

A bill sponsored by Rep. Bennie Bock II, D-New Braunfels, would set a legal procedure to allow mentally retarded minors to donate kidneys under certain safeguards.

A civil appeals court decision to allow the transplant for the Little family was handed down Feb. 7.

Bock said he had introduced the bill in case of a court ruling to the contrary. The Little's then would have needed emergency help from the Legislature.

"They don't need it now but somebody else might, and that's why the Little's were here," he said.

Steve, who lost one kidney when he was four, had been admitted to the hospital in deteriorating condition Feb. 5, two days before the appeals court decision.

His remaining kidney was removed Feb. 15. The youth is receiving dialysis treatments five hours a day and three days a week until the transplant takes place.

Mrs. Little said Anne understood some of the implications of the kidney transplant, and wanted to give her brother the kidney.

The court-appointed guardian for Anne's interests contested it because there was no Texas law on the subject.

The court ruled that the transplant should proceed because Anne would receive benefits.

The court said she faced the loss of a loved brother without the transplant and would receive from it self esteem and increased status in the family.

Mrs. Little said her daughter has taken the medical attention well.

"She loved it. She is very socially oriented and a very outgoing young lady. ... She is looking forward to going back to the hospital."

Mrs. Little said she and her husband have been active supporters of rights for the mentally retarded.

The bill was referred to a subcommittee for further study, with instructions that it be reported back to the full committee at its next meeting.

Bus streamer turns heads in New York

NEW YORK (AP) — It takes a lot for a city bus to make heads turn in midtown Manhattan, but these buses were different. Stretched across their sides were 27-foot-wide streamers saying, "HAVE FUN AT THE WHOREHOUSE."

The suggestion is not suggestive to New Yorkers who recognize that it refers to a hit Broadway musical. But the signs are coming down because of protests — from, among others, Cardinal Terence Cooke, archbishop of New York.

The ad's primary message is in large white letters in a bright red background. A second line, in small type, says, "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas, 46th Street Theater."

In the theater district, a large sign above the 46th Street Theater proclaims simply, "WHOREHOUSE."

"We have received a number of passenger complaints concerning the ads," Louis Collins of the Transit Authority, which runs the buses, said Wednesday.

"Since we are a public transportation agency carrying a large number of school children, certain sensibilities must be considered."

The action drew a protest from Westward Productions, the division of Universal Pictures that produced the musical, a well-received legitimate stage production. The show has run newspaper ads and television spots, the latter re-assuring viewers that "nothing dirty" goes on in the show.

"Cardinal Cooke and various old ladies that don't know what's going on on Eighth Avenue complain about the word 'whorehouse,'" said Warren Knowlton, spokesman for the producer. "If theatergoers and gentlemen from the Transit Authority really want to see something terrible, let them get on the buses and look out rather than look in."

The show's ad agency had contracted to have the ad run across the roof line of 80 buses for a projected three months at $1,333 a week, plus production costs.

A spokesman for the cardinal, a crusader against pornography, applauded the removal of the advertisements, but said the archdiocese played no role in getting the TA to pull the ads.

"We compliment the TA on its good sense," said Monsignor Eugene V. Clark. "It's a new level of insensitivity among vendors that they would project a sign like this that suggests fun in New York City could be centered around a whorehouse."

Council will pick auditor

COAHOMA — The Coahoma city council will appoint an auditor for the 1978-79 annual audit when they convene at 7:30 o'clock this evening in a regular session.

Other items on the agenda include discussion of a site for doing maintenance on city equipment and a trailer to haul outside equipment, purchase of an air conditioner for the city office, the hiring of an animal warden and the extension of water-sewer lines to residents in the Foster addition.

Water bills will be discussed, as will the city dump ground and the Dwayne Clawson plant.

A Safeway service in support of suggestions from the U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs

"Recycling in the Kitchen"

Leftover meat and vegetables can make excellent additions to home made soups and stews. The U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs suggests that you keep a supply of plastic containers on hand for storing leftovers. Freeze them for use at a later time in preparing imaginative, economical meals. Safeway stocks a wide variety of convenient plastic bags and containers in many sizes and shapes.

INFLATION FIGHTING ideas

Leftovers needn't be boring the second time around. An economy-minded cook regards leftovers as a challenge to creativity. Even a leftover hot dog, sliced up, can add interest and flavor to scrambled eggs or soup.

Chemical production

Fuel rechanneled

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A United Nations expert predicts that oil and natural gas-producing nations will use increasingly less of those valuable resources for fuel, channeling them instead into lucrative chemical production.

"Oil is too valuable to burn as fuel," Dr. Mohamed El Halfawy of Egypt said in an interview. He was one of 250 experts from 80 countries at a recent meeting on the petrochemical industry sponsored by the U.N. Industrial Development Organization or UNIDO.

Approximately 4.5 percent of the crude oil now produced is used to make petrochemicals. A report issued by the U.N. conference said the percentage will go up to 10 by 1985 and keep growing at a huge rate until the turn of the century.

Petrochemicals include a number of synthetic materials — especially plastics — that have large worldwide use. Ethylene and propylene, derived from crude oil, are basic components of plastics. Aromatics, benzene and xylene are used in fibers like nylon, dacron and rayon. Butadiene is used in synthetic rubber. Methanol, also derived from crude oil, is the ingredient for formal, a key constituent of adhesives. World consumption of ethylene is roughly double that of propylene or benzene.

Halfawy predicted that developing nations — which produce the bulk of the petroleum now used as fuel by industrialized countries — will expand their petrochemical industries, despite efforts that he and other experts claim are being made by multinational corporations to resist that.

"Western nations must realize that oil-producing nations are going to set up petrochemical plants. It is their legitimate right. It is their raw material," he said. Currently, only 9 percent of the petrochemical industries are located in the developing nations.

Mexico is one leading oil and gas producer that is expanding its petrochemical industry.

Halfawy claims these nations aim to have 25 percent of the world petrochemical market by the turn of the century and warned there could be a glut in petrochemicals if the industrialized nations do not cooperate in coordinating production.

"Most of the world's oil is in developing countries. Industries based on those raw materials should be natural choices to substantially increase the Third World total of petrochemicals production," he said.

"Does it make sense to take natural gas from the Middle East, liquefy it at great expense, transport it thousands of miles, store it, re-gasify it and then use it as feedstock for petrochemicals?" Halfawy asked.

"Why don't the multinationals go into joint ventures with developing nations to build plants close to the site of the raw materials?" That way there would be full utilization," he added.

"Instead, most of the best stock for petrochemical plants is being flared."

Halfawy claimed that "industrial nations are more understanding of the plight of the Third World than they were 10 years ago. But they will too often use the argument they are free-market societies and they have no control over what policies their multi-national companies pursue."

"We need cooperation, not confrontation," he added.
