O.J. defense refuses to rest; Ito moves on

■ Prosecution reluctantly begins rebuttal as judge, worried about a stressed-out jury, orders testimony to resume.

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Images of O.J. Simpson wearing snug leather gloves like those found by murder investigators captivated anxious jurors Monday after prosecutors were forced to begin their rebuttal even though the defense refused to rest.

In an unusual assertion of power, Judge Lance Ito ordered testimony to resume in spite of defense plans to present "startling" evidence involving a mystery witness and a vow to appeal rulings involving Detective Mark Fuhrman.

Some of the pictures showed Simpson wearing brown gloves, similar to the bloody gloves introduced as evidence. Other pictures showed him wearing black gloves, and the judge questioned their relevance.

Clark said the black gloves showed "a very short and tight fit," which was important in judging how Simpson wore his gloves.

Jurors, who last heard testimony Wednesday and have been kept under guard for exactly eight months, took copious notes on the glove exhibition, which included video footage of Simpson as an NBC broadcaster.

When the print pictures were passed to jurors, they held them close to their faces for viewing.

When the photos first went up showing Simpson in his former life, he became animated, pointing to his palm and whispering to one of his attorneys.

The videotapes, although shown without sound, provided a mini-retrospective of Simpson's TV career, showing the photogenic football legend doing friendly interviews with Cincinnati Bengals' then-coach Sam Wyche and quarterback Boomer Esiason and talking with his former

MISD schedules public meetings to clarify unitary status judgment

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

Parents who want to know more about the agreed judgment in the Midland Independent School District's Unitary Status matter have that opportunity now.

A community meetings is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Alamo Junior High Auditorium and another at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 19 at Lee Freshman High Auditorium.

"The purpose of the meeting is to clear up any misunderstandings (about unitary status)," said school Superintendent Joseph Baressi. "That is the most important part."

The meetings are part of the requirements outlined in the agreed judgment, added MISD Communications Specialist Susan Webb.

"The intent is to do a systematic approach of educating people on both sides of the issue," Baressi said.

He said the meeting will spell out how the school district will go about getting the federal court orders dismissed. In the agreed judgment, the school district has been given three years to meet certain requirements to be freed from court rule.

Baressi said the MISD board of trustees will outline the content of the agreed judgment document while providing the community and parents in particular an opportunity to give the board "the benefit of their thinking."

Ms. Webb said the school board and MISD executive staff will be involved in the meeting, which is intended to share with the public what the agreed judgment is, why it was reached, what the projections are for writing the plans, and how committees are compiled for the different issues.

The following issues are scheduled to be discussed at the meeting: majority-to-minority transfers; faculty and staff desegregation; bilingual/English as a second-language education; co- and

Powell offers views on death penalty, abortion, gun control

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Retired Gen. Colin Powell, revealing for the first time his views on presidential campaign issues, said he supports abortion rights, some gun controls and the death penalty.

He has no problem with a moment of silent prayer in the schools or with taking race into account when admitting students to universities, he said in an ABC television interview with Barbara Walters. However, he said he opposes any sort of required prayer in schools.

Powell also criticized President Clinton's foreign policy, saying it "lacks a certain coherence."

He said he rejected the prospect of becoming Clinton's secretary of state last winter because, "I am not a fan of the manner in which foreign policy issues are hammered out in this administration."

Powell was an integral part of one of Clinton's successful foreign policy initiatives — driving military coup leaders from Haiti. Powell was an emissary, along with former President Jimmy Carter, who went to Haiti and helped persuade the military rulers to leave peacefully.

"There is too much tactical judging from day to day and week to week. And I think it hurts us," he said in the "20/20" interview to be broadcast

WORLD IN BRIEF

■ Thousands protest nuclear testing

PARIS — Thousands of people, chanting to the strains of accordion music, marched through Paris on Monday to protest France's resumption of nuclear test blasts in the South Pacific.

Several hundred protesters also demonstrated in Orleans in central France and in Reims in the east.

The protests were small by French standards, involving far fewer people than the typical union, student or other anti-government demonstration. But they were still one of the largest shows of opposition yet in France to nuclear testing.

The Paris march was organized by some 140 groups, including leftist unions, environmentalists, humanitarian groups, and doctors angered by last Tuesday's blast under Mururoa Atoll.

■ Grenade attack kills 10, injures 15

ADEN, Yemen — A grenade attack at a wedding killed 10 women and injured 15 other women and children, said security sources who blamed it on a militant Muslim group that opposes flamboyant celebrations.

Several suspects have been arrested since Sunday's attack at the Al-Talal sports club in Aden, the largest city in southern Yemen, the sources said. They gave the casualty toll but had no other details.

The sources, who spoke Monday on condition of anonymity, blamed Islamic Jihad, which has become active in Aden since last year's two-month civil war.

■ Indian rebels, Mexico agree to talk

SAN ANDRES LARRAINZAR, Mexico — Indian rebels and the Mexican government agreed Monday to talk, a minor point that, after five months of often abrasive peace negotiations, was hailed as a major breakthrough.

The two sides said they would discuss the poverty and abuse that led to the Indian rebellion last year in Chiapas, Mexico's poorest state.

"This ... marks the start of a new phase in the process of building a just and dignified peace by moving on to the problems that gave rise to the conflict," they said in a joint statement.

Talks on indigenous culture and rights, which will include issues of self-government, political representation, community development, education and the preservation of traditions, will begin here Oct. 17. Negotiators also agreed on detailed rules that will govern future meetings.

The government's lead negotiator, Marco Antonio Bernal, called the arrangement "a victory for both sides."

■ Bush urges consultation with China

BEIJING — George Bush's prescription for patching up tense relations with China: More consultation, less confrontation.

The former president, in Beijing on Monday for a private visit, also said the Clinton administration should promote China's transformation into a global economic power.

"The United States should take the lead in encouraging China to assume a political and economic role commensurate with its growing weight in the region — indeed, in the world," he said.

U.S.-Chinese relations, strained by disputes over trade, arms and human rights, were wounded deeply in May when Washington let President Lee Teng-hui of Taiwan attend his college reunion in the United States. China regards Taiwan as a breakaway province and its government as illegitimate.

Tentative moves to stabilize relations may have been set back when Hillary Rodham Clinton used her speech at the U.N. women's conference in Beijing last week to attack repression in China.

Bush said the women's conference hasn't helped U.S.-China relations because the American media have reported delegates' complaints about inadequate facilities and intrusive security.

■ Report: Buddhists hold 20 captives

NEW DELHI, India — Buddhists who want autonomy are holding as many as 20 tourists captive in the same northern region where Muslim separatists are holding four Westerners hostage, news reports said Monday.

The foreigners, detained since Saturday, reportedly were European and Australian hikers, the United News of India news agency said. Government officials were headed to the valley to negotiate.

A spokesman for the Jammu-Kashmir state government, however, said the tourists weren't being held hostage or threatened but were advised by the government to stay at a guest house out of harm's way.

■ Man dies on sidewalk; people walk by

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Police want to know why no one helped a fatally injured man who sat on a downtown sidewalk waving his hand to passers-by for hours, news reports said Monday.

When someone finally reacted and police arrived, the 19-year-old refugee from Chad was dead, police said. The incident happened Saturday in the small town of Klippan in southern Sweden.

The body of the man, whose identity was not released, bore marks of violence, the national news agency TT reported Monday. He was from a refugee camp northeast of Klippan.

Violence between ethnic groups has increased in Sweden in recent years, and police did not eliminate the possibility that the man, who was black, was the victim of a racial attack.

Detective Inspector Bjorn Gronhult said people walking by thought the man was drunk when he was sitting down.

At some point, the man moved or was moved to a flower bed, and police did not find him when they first arrived, TT said. Not until 15 hours later did police discover him under some bushes. A knapsack with identification and some valuables was found nearby.

Yacht pastor a guiding light in heart of Hurricane Luis

By Aandrew Salsky
Associated Press

SIMPSON BAY, St. Maarten — As one of the century's most powerful hurricanes ripped boats from their moorings, a voice crackled over the radio to those on board, shedding light on the darkest day of their lives.

For more than seven hours last Tuesday, the Rev. Tom Higginbotham directed boat traffic in the surging seas from his perch at his St. Maarten International Baptist Church, on the second floor of a white-and-orange stucco minimall overlooking Simpson's Bay Lagoon.

To the "yachtees" who survived Hurricane Luis last week, Higginbotham was a lifeline, a voice that calmed them and helped direct them as they struggled with their out-of-control vessels.

"There were boats flying everywhere," said Higginbotham, wearing a T-shirt, shorts and deck shoes. "There were boats hitting other boats. There was nothing you could do in six- to eight-foot waves."

His lifesaving broadcast was cut off abruptly at 4 p.m., when the hurricane ripped the roof from his house, and the radio antenna with it.

The Rev. Tom Higginbotham

"He's been absolutely unbelievable," said Yvette Hemmens of Cape Town, South Africa. "If not for him, some people wouldn't be alive. He's been like a saint to all the yachtees here."

The church has become an aid coordination center for yachtees from all over the world who were in St. Maarten when Luis hit.

The official toll on this Dutch half of the island, hit by Hurricane Luis on Sept. 5, stood at five. One more death was reported in St. Martin, the French side. Officials feared the toll could climb as French and Dutch divers looked Monday through hundreds of sunken boats in the lagoon for victims.

People at the lagoon said divers brought up a woman, barely alive, over the weekend. They said she had been saved by an air pocket in the hull of a sailboat. U.S. Consul General Buddy Williams said the divers brought up a body.

On Monday, a French helicopter crew offered to lift beached boats back into the water. Yachtsmen from around the world established a fund to rebuild the vessels of uninsured yachters.

A Spanish woman, who asked that her name not be used, said she wanted to thank the unassuming, soft-spoken Higginbotham personally. Five days after the brunt of the hurricane hit St. Maarten, she remained unhinged by the experience and did not want to stray from her beached yacht.

"You can't imagine the waves. It was so terrible," she said. "Friends of ours told us that at one point a girl or woman got on the radio asking for help, saying, 'The captain drowned! The captain drowned!'"

She covered her face with her hands and sobbed.

Higginbotham was like an air-traffic controller in a world gone mad, using his more powerful radio to help the yachters communicate.

"If I heard something broke loose, I'd know who was in the way and radio them. I gave them the hurricane's coordinates and told them about expected wind shifts, so they could adjust the locations of their anchors."

At one point, he dashed out into the hurricane to cut the anchor line of a yacht with an elderly man aboard that was being hammered by a bigger yacht. The yacht freed itself.

Taped to the wall of a room inside his church were notices of people missing from yachts, their friends unsure if they flew out of St. Maarten before the storm or went down with their boats.

Higginbotham, 39, quit his job as an inspector of cargo ships on the Mississippi River in Walker, La., seven years ago to become a preacher. Nearly half the members of his 60-person congregation are yachters.

After arriving in St. Maarten, he helped boaters with immigration, mail, fuel and other tasks. He later decided he would reach more people through a daily chat on two-way radio.

"He wouldn't do heavy preaching, just mention his church is here. If you were from another denomination, he'd point you to that church," said Paul Frost, a Welshman who abandoned his London home to sail the seas.

Women's conference moves toward accord on sweeping platform

BEIJING (AP) — Like worried parents everywhere, delegates to the U.N. women's conference struggled with questions about teen-agers and sex. Does access to contraception and sex education encourage promiscuity? Do parents' responsibilities outweigh teen-agers' right to privacy?

In a carefully crafted compromise, they decided Monday night that the needs of both must be taken into account.

The four-day debate pitted countries favoring total parental control against those that wanted no parental rights. But the final agreement drew not a single objection.

"It's a beautiful diplomatic balance," said Rachael Kyte, policy analyst with the New York-based International Women's Health Coalition. "Everyone was happy."

The agreement on parental responsibility, and on other hotly disputed issues including sexual freedom and abortion, brought predictions that the Fourth World Conference on Women will end Friday with an ambitious plan to achieve women's equality.

"I have every reason to be very optimistic," said conference secretary-general Gertrude Mongella. "I am quite confident the conference is going to end very successfully."

Delegates from 189 states were still working night and day to reach agreement on other issues, including discrimination against lesbians, inheritance rights for girls, and funding for programs emerging from the meeting.

When the conference started, 438 phrases — about 20 percent of the text — were in dispute. Late Monday, U.N. official John Mathieson said only 150 sections remained to be resolved by Wednesday night.

That is the deadline for completing the platform so it can be formally adopted by the conference on Thursday.

The conference is aiming for consensus, but the document is not legally binding. In the last 24 hours, delegates reached agreements in key committees on issues ranging from abortion and sexual rights to religion and the family.

A provision on sexual freedom would recognize for the first time that women have the right to control their own sexuality without "coercion, discrimination and violence."

Tomahawks cause 'severe damage'; government attacks Serbs

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — American cruise missiles badly damaged Bosnian Serb air defenses, NATO said Monday, vowing to keep up its attacks until the skies over Bosnia are safe for Western warplanes. The Serbs were defiant, warning that the attacks could endanger the peace process.

The 13 Tomahawk missiles fired from the USS Normandy late Sunday caused "severe damage" to Serb anti-aircraft systems, Group Capt. Trevor Murray said in Naples, Italy.

But he said the defenses were not entirely destroyed, and attacks would continue — possibly with more of the $1.3 million Tomahawks — until they are.

Murray said NATO had no indication that the missiles killed or wounded civilians, as the Serbs claimed.

With the Serbs reeling from NATO's bombs, the Bosnian government took advantage of their weakness to capture a strategic village and gain control of a route linking government holdings in northern and central Bosnia.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic said the attacks showed that NATO was working with the government army, and warned that they were jeopardizing a diplomatic breakthrough last week that set the stage for possible peace talks.

"It is clear that the most powerful military alliance on earth is openly taking the side of our enemies," Karadzic wrote in a letter to Western leaders. "The entire peace process could be wrecked."

The Serbs have so far resisted NATO's demands to remove artillery and other heavy weapons from around Sarajevo. Rebel commander Gen. Ratko Mladic contends that would leave Serbs in the area vulnerable to attack.

And for the Serbs, removing weaponry from around Sarajevo appears to be a secondary issue, because the meeting of foreign ministers in Geneva on Friday already established the basic principles of an overall settlement.

The cruise missiles, used in Bosnia for the first time, were fired at radar, anti-aircraft missile sites and communications stations near the northern Serb stronghold of Banja Luka.

Murray, the NATO spokesman, refused to say what the missiles hit. Although they damaged Serb facilities, he said, the air defenses were still working.

"If suitable, we may well use (Tomahawks) again, as we will use other types of weapons," Murray said.

Serb television in Banja Luka said Monday night that five of the Tomahawks hit radio relay stations in the Kozara mountains, 30 miles north of Banja Luka. They caused massive damage, the report said without elaborating or saying where the other missiles hit. There was no footage of the damage.

In southern New Mexico, pilots of F-117A "stealth" fighters at Holloman Air Force Base were alerted that they might be called in for NATO missions over Bosnia, officials said. The officials gave no timeline for deployment of the $46 million black, bat-winged radar-evading airplanes.

The Bosnian government, meanwhile, said its army captured the village of Vozuca in central Bosnia, giving it control of a direct route linking the northern government stronghold of Tuzla with its holdings in central Bosnia.

"Our forces had a lot of success yesterday and today in the region of Vozuca and, I hope, in other regions," said Bosnian Premier Haris Silajdzic.

Bosnian state television also reported government army gains near the Serb-held town of Jajce in central Bosnia. Bosnian Serb media said Jajce was shelled on Monday.

Under Western pressure, the Bosnian government promised Sunday not to attack Serbs around Sarajevo if they withdraw their heavy weapons.

The U.N. commander in the former Yugoslavia, Gen. Bernard Janvier, met with Mladic on Sunday to try to convince him to withdraw the weapons. Mladic refused, and NATO launched the cruise missile attack hours later.

NATO did not fire cruise missiles on Monday, but jets attacked Serb positions. The Bosnian Serb military said "dozens of planes" dropped bombs near Sarajevo and Banja Luka.

NATO said the Serbs fired missiles at the planes, but all returned safely.

Associated Press Television reported the Serbs lighted fires in the northern Sarajevo suburb of Vogosca to produce black smoke and throw off NATO pilots.

A Bosnian army officer formerly with the Serb-led Yugoslav army said Vogosca is the site of an underground ammunition factory and a long tunnel where the Serbs reportedly are hiding heavy weapons from NATO attacks.

Since Aug. 30, NATO has bombarded an array of Serb targets across Bosnia, including ammunition depots and command and communication centers.

The campaign was launched two days after a shell exploded in Sarajevo, killing 38 people, and was designed to force the Serbs to ease their siege of Sarajevo and halt all attacks on U.N. "safe areas."

The airstrikes have met with strong condemnation from Moscow, a close Serb ally.

The Russian defense minister warned Defense Secretary William Perry in a phone conversation that "recent escalations of the armed conflict will inevitably lead to it spreading beyond the Balkans," according to Russia's Defense Ministry. The Pentagon refused to confirm that.

NATO and Russian officials met Monday in Brussels, but failed to resolve their differences.

At the United Nations, Russia proposed a resolution to the Security Council calling for an immediate suspension of the bombing. The resolution also demanded a cease-fire, and the withdrawal of heavy weapons.

The resolution, likely to face strong opposition from the United States and its allies, also calls for the demilitarization of safe areas.

Pentagon hopes cruise missiles sent Bosnian rebels a message

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

■ News analysis

WASHINGTON — Beyond the physical damage it did, NATO's Tomahawk missile attack in Bosnia escalated the psychological war by bringing into play one of America's most sophisticated weapons. U.S. officials hint that other high-tech arms such as the F-117 stealth fighter may join the fray.

There was a straightforward military logic to adding computer-guided Tomahawk cruise missiles to the mix of NATO attacks: They can hit targets without putting allied pilots at risk in a heavily defended area, and their accuracy isn't affected by bad weather.

But equally important was the psychological effect. NATO hopes the Bosnian Serbs, in considering the allies' demand that they pull their heavy weapons away from Sarajevo, will think harder about the cost of continued defiance now that they know NATO is willing to go beyond conventional air attacks.

The head of NATO air operations in Bosnia, British Group Capt. Trevor Murray, said Monday that the Tomahawk attacks may not be over. And, he told reporters in Naples, Italy, "we may use other elements of our armory."

One of the "other elements" of NATO's arsenal is the Air Force's F-117 fighter, which was highly successful in hitting key targets in Baghdad during the 1991 Persian Gulf War. The "low observable," or stealth, technology in the F-117 makes it difficult to track on radar and therefore a useful weapon against the more dangerous links in the Bosnian Serb's integrated air defense network.

Murray said Monday that although the 13 Tomahawks launched against parts of the air defense network near Banja Luka in northwestern Bosnia inflicted "severe damage" on some targets, the air defenses still pose a danger to NATO pilots.

The Air Force's F-117 stealth planes are based at Holloman Air Force Base, N.M. They were used briefly in the 1989 U.S. invasion of Panama; in the Persian Gulf War, they flew some of the toughest missions and none was shot down.

Until the Tomahawks were launched from the Navy cruiser USS Normandy on Sunday, NATO's attacks in Bosnia, which began Aug. 30, had been carried out by U.S. and allied airplanes launched from bases in Italy and from the carrier USS Theodore Roosevelt in the Adriatic Sea — and by British and French artillery guns.

Murray and other NATO officials insisted that adding Tomahawks to the mix did not mean NATO was widening the war in Bosnia. It was simply using another means of attacking the same kinds of targets, a means that posed less risk to NATO pilots.

Some observers said that while the Tomahawk attack served a psychological role, it may take a lot more to persuade the Serbs that NATO is serious about ending the stanglehold on Sarajevo.

"If they've gone this far, (NATO) should use everything necessary to destroy the targets, not just attack them," said retired Adm. Thomas Moorer, who was chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in the early 1970s.

Thousands of Sudanese demonstrate

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Police fired tear gas and bullets Monday to disperse thousands of students demonstrating against the military government, a news agency reported. At least 10 people were wounded.

It was the third straight day of trouble at Khartoum University, and came amid reports of a severe bread shortage.

The protesters shouted slogans against Lt. Gen. Omar el-Bashir's government and Hassan Turabi, the Islamic leader considered the real power in Sudan, Egypt's Middle East News Agency said.

Students from other universities in the capital joined the protests, burning cars and at least two banks, the agency said. Police tried to disperse the crowds with tear gas, and MENA said they later fired bullets at the protesters.

Between 10 and 15 people were hurt in the clashes, which began on the campus and spilled into a nearby market, the news agency said.

Here's another necessity for your apartment.

If you are living in an apartment or duplex, this may be the first opportunity you've had to experience the terrific benefits of having natural gas in your home. You will find that for heating your home during cold weather, for hot water, or for cooking, nothing beats natural gas for convenience, economy, and efficiency.

With cooler temperatures just around the corner, here are a few reminders from your friends at Energas Company on the safe and responsible use of natural gas where you live.

Your furnace needs an annual check-up.

Your natural gas furnace has been sitting quietly all summer, waiting for the time it's really needed. And like anything that's been idle a while, your furnace needs a check-up before it starts back to work. You may want to check with your landlord or apartment manager about arranging for an annual inspection by a qualified professional heating contractor. Once it's been inspected, your furnace should require very little attention the rest of the winter.

A closet isn't always a closet.

Your water heater or furnace is probably in a closet all by itself. And that's the way it should stay. As tempting as it may be, don't use the space around a water heater or furnace for storage. Even if these major appliances sit in the open, the space around them should be kept clear to insure adequate air circulation.

If you smell gas.

We hope that you will never have to deal with a gas leak. If you do smell gas, day or night, exit the building then call your local Energas office immediately. Do not flip light switches or use any other electrical equipment. Do not light a match or a candle. Do not try to find the leak yourself.

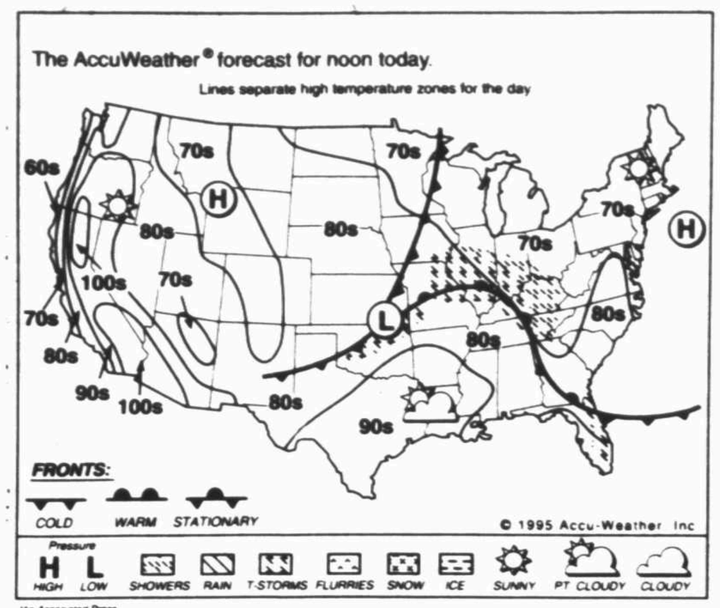

Natural gas is the best energy you can have in West Texas for any home heating job. Just set your thermostat, and have a great winter!

Partly cloudy skies hold rain chance

Staff Report

The forecast for today calls for partly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of showers or thundershowers, a high near 90 and south winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a 20-percent chance of thundershowers and a low in the lower 60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland. Wednesday should be partly cloudy with a high in the mid-80s.

After an overnight low of 69, Monday's temperature reached 86, compared to the record high for that date of 102 set in 1930. The record low is 50 set in 1935.

STATE

Skies were mixed across Texas on Monday, while a cold front that brought fall-like weather to North Texas returned to the region as a warm front.

Moisture sweeping across North Texas produced cloudy skies for most of the area, and an upper level disturbance triggered scattered rainshowers along the central part of the Red River. Afternoon temperatures across the region were in the 80s.

Today's forecast for North Texas calls for partly cloudy skies with a chance of thunderstorms. Highs are expected in the upper 80s to low 90s with lows of 67 to 72 degrees.

In South Texas, skies were partly cloudy except in coastal areas where showers and thunderstorms had developed. Afternoon temperatures ranged from 98 degrees at Laughlin Air Force Base to 84 degrees at Victoria.

Increasing showers can be expected in the region by late this afternoon.

Cloudy conditions also were noted in West Texas across the Permian Basin and Trans Pecos regions, while elsewhere skies were mostly sunny. Afternoon temperatures ranged from 73 degrees at Marfa to 93 degrees at San Angelo.

Today, the region should see partly to mostly cloudy skies with a chance of showers and thunderstorms over most areas. Highs are expected mostly in the 80s with some 90s over the extreme south.

NATION

Rain drenched portions of the Southeast and the Plains on Monday, while record lows were recorded in some Northeast communities.

Heavy rain fell across North Carolina, causing some flash flooding. In Albermarle, N.C., 4.5 inches of rain had fallen by midafternoon.

Farther south, thundershowers around St. Augustine, Fla., spawned several waterspouts, some of which moved inland and did minor damage.

An area of low pressure moving across the Dakotas was forecast to bring scattered showers and thunderstorms from the eastern slopes of the Rockies into the Plains.

Thundershowers north and west of Denver spawned winds gusting above 50 mph.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were also possible from the Four Corners region east through Texas and Oklahoma and into Arkansas.

There was a risk of severe weather and locally heavy rain from Texas north into Kansas and Oklahoma.

Cool weather continued across the Northeast, with record lows in Youngstown, Mansfield, Cleveland, and Akron, Ohio, of 34, 40, 42, and 38 respectively; Binghamton, N.Y., with a low of 38; and Muskegon, Mich., with a low of 37.

The high in the Lower 48 was 98 degrees in Palm Springs, Calif. The low was 27, in Clayton Lake, Maine, and Wildhorse Reservation, Nev.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

JUDGMENT: School board sets public meetings extra-curricular activities; course enrollment at the secondary school; gifted and talented education; facilities/school construction; long-range plans regarding the cluster system; the Carver school; and formulation of plans and the monitoring process.

"We will basically be providing information for the public as to what does this mean. We will explain the process of operating under this agreed judgment for the next three years," Ms. Webb said.

"This is to take the mystery out of it," Ms. Webb said. "Some people may not understand the outcome of this matter and we certainly want to make the community aware of what transpired."

Baressi said some people are confused as to what the agreement is and what it means for the school district.

Trustees to tackle issue of cluster system change

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

Midland Independent School District's board of trustees is scheduled to vote today on whether or not to begin an effort to change the cluster system, according to MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi.

Baressi said the board will vote today on whether it wants to activate a section of the agreed judgment in the unitary status matter regarding the cluster system.

The school district came to a settlement in a federal court matter in which the school district appealed to get out from under the court's rule regarding desegregation.

The school district signed an agreed judgment and has three years to comply with the document's requirements to gain unitary status and be out from under the court's rule.

Under the agreed judgment, the board could change the cluster system if the schools are deemed integrated, he said.

The superintendent said that if the school board chooses to activate that section of the agreement, a committee could be appointed to begin the process.

The plaintiff interveners can appoint 10 people and the school board can appoint 10 people to the committee. Then, the committee appoints a 21st person to serve as the committee chairman, Baressi said.

"Within the next five years, we could change the cluster system of elementary schools by removing the naturally integrated schools," Baressi said.

He said there will be a number of plans regarding compliance with the agreed judgment scheduled for input from the public for mid- to late October.

"We feel we saved time and money" by reaching the settlement in the case, Baressi said. "There is very little in the agreement we wouldn't have done otherwise."

Spanish translators will be available at both meetings, Ms. Webb said.

POWELL: Retired general offers views on issues

(From 1A)

Friday. Portions of the interview were aired on ABC News on Monday.

Powell is considering whether to run for president and said in a Time magazine interview this week that the time has come for him to begin letting the American people know his political views. While he has toured the country giving speeches, he previously has been coy about his views on many issues and his feelings about running for president.

The former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff enjoys approval ratings far higher than those of any Republican candidate or President Clinton, but is virtually certain to lose some of that support as interest groups begin to hear positions they do not like.

He said he would prefer that women give birth and then put an unwanted child up for adoption. "If, however, it is her choice to abort," he said, "it's a matter between her, her doctors, her family and her conscience and her God. ...So that's pro-choice."

That brought immediate criticism from anti-abortion activists.

Ralph Reed, head of the Christian Coalition, told ABC News that Powell's support of abortion rights and opposition to organized prayer in schools would "disappoint a large number of people, who then would be quite unlikely in spite of his heroism to be willing to support him for the presidency."

Mark Maddox, senior policy director for the Colorado Springs, Colo.-based Focus on the Family, expressed disappointment that Powell would support "termination of unborn life for any reason."

As to how that might affect Powell's political chances, he said, "The pro-life, pro-family voter is interested in public officials who share their views."

He added: "There's a large constituency who identifies with a variety of issues, none more closely than defending the unborn. It sounds like Gen. Powell does not intend to defend the unborn."

On the question of preference programs for minorities, Powell noted that he himself had benefited from affirmative action in the Army. He indicated he would not favor allowing university admissions solely on racial grounds, although that could be one aspect officials could look at.

"Why shouldn't a group of senior officials in a university take a look at the total background of these youngsters?" he said. "They claim they just don't let them in on the basis of the SAT scores. ...But what we shouldn't do is say we're going to have six blacks. Or because you're black, you're coming in. Look at the total student. See what is best for the community."

He also said that because there is so much interest in him and his presidential prospects across the country, "the country may well be ready for a black man — or a black person."

A gun owner, Powell said he sees no problem with having to "put up with some level of inconvenience," such as registering a weapon or complying with a waiting period for gun ownership.

He also said school prayer should not be required, but "I have no problem if upon arriving at school, a quiet moment is allowed for a child to do whatever the child wishes to do in that, in that private moment."

As for the death penalty, Powell said, "I support it."

Asked whether he would be a Democratic, Republican or independent candidate, should he decide to run, Powell said "the easier way to do it' would be as a Republican. But he repeated earlier assertions that he is not comfortable with either parry.

The Republican Party, he said, is "right on" about free enterprise, reducing the tax burden and getting the government out of people's lives "as much as possible."

"But on other issues, social issues, I'm a product of my background. I think the government does have a role to play in making sure that those of our citizens who are most in need, who are hurting, are taken care of," he said.

TRIAL: Judge Ito orders testimony to resume

NBC colleagues, including Bob Costas.

The glove presentation was the prosecution's final attempt to erase the impact of an earlier demonstration that failed when Simpson struggled to pull on the evidence gloves and told the jury they were too small. Monday was the first time the jury saw the prosecution photos of Simpson wearing gloves.

Glove expert Richard Rubin was in the courtroom waiting to testify about similarities between the bloody gloves and those Simpson wore on the football field sidelines.

Defense lawyers fought to keep out the pictures, saying that prosecutors had them before they rested their case last July and should not have been allowed to hold them back for dramatic effect until the rebuttal case.

Ito said although prosecutors received some of the pictures before resting, they had no obligation to use them before they could be analyzed.

Fuhrman testified he found a bloody glove on Simpson's estate that matched one near the bodies of Simpson's ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman. For more than a year, Fuhrman has been a target of attacks by defense attorneys, who contend his is a racist capable of framing Simpson.

Outside the jury's presence last week, the retired detective invoked his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination and refused to answer any questions, including whether he planted evidence against Simpson.

The judge refused to have Fuhrman invoke the Fifth before jurors, but he had drafted an instruction telling jurors that Fuhrman was unavailable as a witness and that they could take that into consideration when weighing his credibility.

Prosecutors asked an appeals court to intervene. On orders from the higher court, Ito withdrew the jury instruction, a move that sent defense attorneys scrambling over the weekend.

On Monday morning, the judge rejected several alternatives offered by defense attorney Gerald Uelmen, including:

■ To strike all of Fuhrman's testimony dealing with the glove and throw out the glove found at Simpson's estate from evidence.

■ Grant Fuhrman immunity from perjury prosecution and allow him to undergo cross-examination about his use of a racial epithet on explosive tape recordings and in other conversations. Uelmen said jurors will be left wondering why Fuhrman never answered the allegations that contradicted his testimony.

■ Let jurors hear portions of Fuhrman's audiotapes on which he boasts about planting and manufacturing evidence in other cases.

Clark argued that the defense has gone as far as it should in impeaching Fuhrman.

"He's been impeached with his own voice saying racial epithets," Clark said. "But they want more. ... They want to rub the jury's nose in it."

"The defense has trumped everything that they had planned to give to this jury in an incredibly overwhelming way. They have launched every inflammatory attack they could possibly launch," Clark said. "The defense is refusing to accept its victory graciously."

Ito ruled that the testimony about finding the glove didn't have to be struck because Fuhrman was thoroughly questioned by the defense in March.

And the judge said he had no authority to force prosecutors to grant immunity.

After the lunch break, defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. returned to say the defense decided to ask an appeals court to intervene on the Fuhrman matter.

"We cannot rest at this point," Cochran told the judge.

"These are extraordinary issues," Ito said of the defense's concerns. In a rare but not unprecedented solution, he said he wouldn't force the defense to rest but ordered prosecutors to begin calling rebuttal witnesses immediately.

"At this point, the court is mindful first and foremost of the burdens placed on our jury," Ito said.

Clark objected that this would put her at a disadvantage because the defense could return with witnesses while rebuttal is under way.

"It's time for the court to tell him it's over," Clark said, referring to Cochran. "This is another filibuster proposed by the defense."

The judge turned aside her protests. "Get the jury down here," he ordered.

The situation was complicated by Cochran's disclosure that he had met with the judge privately to inform him that there may be "startling" information regarding a "critical witness." Cochran said information on the witness, whom he refused to identify, was developing and would not be complete until Wednesday.

The decision to allow rebuttal before the defense concludes received high marks from legal analysts.

"It was a Solomon-like decision to keep things going," Loyola University law professor Stanley Goldman said, adding that changing the order of presentation is not unprecedented if time constraints are involved.

Prosecution rebuttal before defense rests is a highly unusual maneuver

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Judge Lance Ito's order that the prosecution rebuttal case begin even before O.J. Simpson's defense rests was an unusual demonstration of judicial power and put the prosecution in a tough spot.

Ito took the action Monday, exactly eight months after the jury was sequestered. The panel, which has only two alternates remaining, had heard testimony on only three days during the past two weeks.

"At this point, the court is mindful first and foremost of the burdens placed on our jury," Ito said in ordering the trial to continue.

Prosecutor Marcia Clark began calling rebuttal witnesses after the judge agreed with defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr.'s arguments that he needed time to appeal rulings and because a "critical witness" could be recalled.

"It's extraordinary, though clearly within the judge's power to do it this way. And under the circumstances, it's understandable," said Erwin Chemerinsky, a University of Southern California law professor.

"It may not be literally unprecedented, but it's very unusual," said Robert Pugsley, professor of law at Southwestern University.

Pugsley could not recall a case that took the same course. Neither could UCLA law professor Peter Arenella.

"It's a real strategic victory for the defense," Arenella said. "I've never seen anything like it."

The very structure of the rebuttal may depend on who the last defense witness was, he said.

The defense sought to defer resting its case in part because it hopes to get an appellate ruling that allows the jury to be told something about why former Detective Mark Fuhrman won't be called for further testimony

Nation in Brief

■ Cop faces three murder counts

NEW ORLEANS — A policewoman was convicted Monday of killing a former partner and two other people during an attempted robbery at a restaurant.

Antoinette Frank faces execution or life in prison at her sentencing Tuesday on three counts of first-degree murder.

Officer Ronald Williams, a former partner of Frank's who was moonlighting as a guard at the Kim Anh Restaurant, and two of the owners' children — Cuong Vu, 18, and Ha Vu, 24 — were killed March 4.

Frank was arrested after she returned to the scene with a large contingent of officers and was identified by Vu family members who hid in a large cooler during the rampage.

Frank's lawyer, Robert Jenkins, declined to present a defense and told the jury in his closing argument that her accomplice, Rogers Lacaze, was the sole killer. Lacaze, 18, was convicted in July and sentenced to death.

■ Bomb explosion in van kills 5

ESSEX, Md. — A bomb blew up a van in the parking lot of a suburban shopping mall Monday, shaking homes for blocks and killing five people, police said.

The 6 p.m. explosion in the parking lot of the Middlesex Shopping Center, in a residential suburb seven miles east of Baltimore, blew the van's glove compartment a half mile away, Officer J.L. Taylor said.

"Investigators found some explosive material around the car," said Baltimore County Police Capt. Brian Uppercue. "They know it wasn't a gas tank explosion."

He said it appeared the bomb was in the van at the time it exploded and that the van was stationary.

Police initially reported four people killed. A fifth victim, a girl, was pronounced dead at a hospital, Uppercue said.

Skip Frock, who operates a nearby barbershop, said two children, a man and a woman were dead at the scene.

Police would not release details about the victims. Authorities said it doesn't appear that there were any other victims.

■ GM settles pickup cases

ATLANTA — A couple whose $105.2 million judgment against General Motors Corp. was reversed on appeal has settled for an undisclosed sum with the automaker they accused of causing their son's death in a pickup.

The settlement was one of four reached with GM on Friday in suits alleging that pickup trucks made from 1973 to 1989 with side-mounted gasoline tanks were prone to explode. Terms of the settlements — including two in Oklahoma and one in Kansas — were not disclosed.

In 1993, Thomas and Elaine Moseley of suburban Snellville won one of the largest product liability awards in U.S. history when a jury found that GM was negligent in the design of the pickups.

The couple's 17-year-old son, Shannon, was killed in 1989 when the truck he was driving was struck by a drunken driver and burst into flames.

Georgia's Court of Appeals reversed the verdict, saying the Moseley's lawyer made improper references to other cases involving the pickups.

■ Astronauts struggle with radio link

The shuttle crew released the Wake Shield Facility nearly two hours late because of on-and-off communication between the satellite and ground controllers.

The trouble persisted after the release, and only one of two planned satellite-thruster firings was completed, slowing the separation between the satellite and Endeavour and delaying the project.

By afternoon, hours after the satellite was released, the communication link appeared to be solid. If it breaks up again, the astronauts — rather than ground controllers — will have to send all commands to the satellite.

Scientists have just two days to try to produce semiconductor film on the Wake Shield. The five astronauts are supposed to retrieve the spacecraft on Wednesday.

Betty Crocker to have multi-ethnic makeover

GOLDEN VALLEY, Minn. (AP) — Betty Crocker, the white-bread-and-mayonnaise symbol of middle America, is getting a multi-ethnic makeover.

General Mills Inc. said Monday it will select photos of 75 women — to celebrate Betty Crocker's 75th birthday — and digitally "morph" them into a new Betty.

Chances are, she won't be the fair-skinned, blue-eyed homemaker whose image has appeared on and off over the years on cookbooks, cake and brownie mixes and Hamburger Helper.

"I guess they want to put some fire under her tail," said Lehman Brothers analyst Caroline Levy. "I think it's a great idea to revitalize the brand."

The new face, to be unveiled in February, will be the eighth Betty Crocker since the fictional character was created in 1921.

Small changes were made over the years — she smiles in the 1955 portrait and wears a pearl choker in '65 — but she always remains prim and proper. The latest incarnation, in 1986, wears a red business suit and bow tie.

University of Minnesota marketing professor Akshay Rao said the idea reflects the increasing percentage of minorities in the nation.

"The face of the nation is going to be very different than it was 20 years ago," he said. "If they can identify with the person on the brand better because it looks like them, this is a wise thing to do."

Quaker Oats Co. has given periodic makeovers to Aunt Jemima, who has slimmed down and become more sophisticated-looking over the years.

General Mills is asking Betty wannabes to send in their photos along with an essay on how they embody the company ideal of family and community spirit, creativity and interest in cooking. Winners will be chosen on the basis of the best essays.

What if an aspiring Betty happens to have a nose ring, cheek tattoo or lime green mohawk?

"I have no idea what the judges will do, but I don't think there will be a significant number of fringe winners that will affect Betty looking mainstream," General Mills spokesman Barry Wegener said.

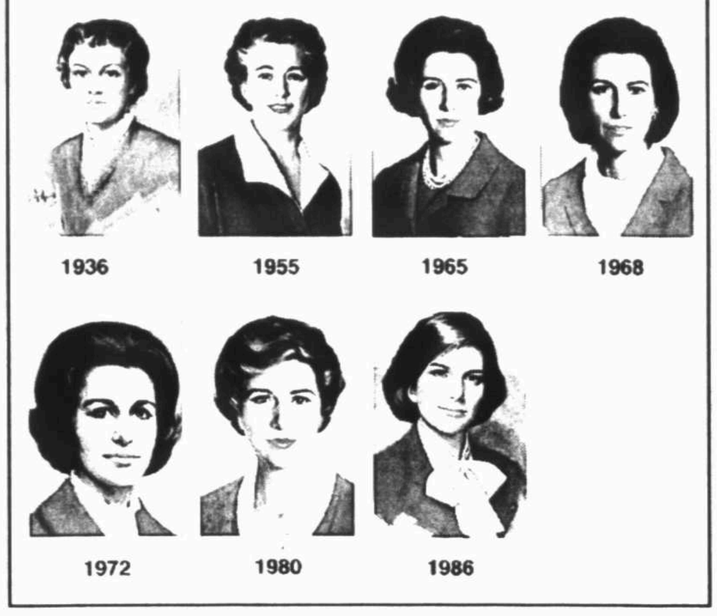

And what about a male version of Betty? Such applications will be read, but "we are looking for women," project manager Cindy Guettler said.

Toni Green, director of marketing for the Minneapolis Institute of Arts, wasn't all that impressed with the campaign.

"If I am going to buy cake mix, it doesn't matter if she is white," said Green, who is black. "I think sometimes they overthink these things, and I think there are more pressing issues in the world than trying to get a more politically correct woman."

In the cake mix aisle at a grocery store in Minneapolis, Joan Mensinger said she never gave a second thought to the packaging.

"I only care if it's a good cake mix," Mensinger said. "Part of me thinks it's silly. The other says they don't have a choice. You offend someone no matter what you do."

Man's death ends officer's hopeful dream

By Rick Hampson
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Nine years ago, Shavod Jones' bullets stole a police officer's ability to walk, to breathe, to scratch his nose.

On Monday, just days after getting out of prison, Jones was in the morgue, killed in a motorcycle crash.

His death ended former Officer Steven McDonald's dream of not only forgiving the boy who put him in a wheelchair but spreading a message of hope with him.

"He was robbed of a chance to live at least a part of his life happily," McDonald said. "He suffered for most of his life. I hope he's finally at peace. I pray for that."

Jones, 24, was released Wednesday after serving nearly nine years of a maximum 10-year sentence for attempted murder. On Saturday, he was riding on the back of a motorcycle as the driver popped wheelies. The driver lost control and crashed into a car, throwing Jones to the ground. He died early Sunday.

Police said the motorcycle also hit a second, parked car, injuring a parole officer inside — one of three watching Jones.

"We don't do (surveillance) as a routine matter," said David Ernest, spokesman for the state Parole Department. "But we felt it was justified in this case."

Earlier this year, McDonald said he hoped to team up with Jones when he got out of prison, visiting churches and schools to talk about the futility of violence.

"I don't think we've ever seen anything like what I envision — the two of us, together," he said at the time.

Jones and McDonald met nine summers ago while the cop, then 29, was on plainclothes patrol in Central Park.

Rain can't dampen Septemberfest spirit

Thank goodness the hearty people who brave wind, rain and other sorts of inclement weather to attend Septemberfest every year keep coming back to Midland. That's because the art festival's history is pockmarked with ample examples that September brings stormy weather to the Permian Basin.

The rainclouds that kept festival-goers constantly in fear of another dousing this past weekend didn't dampen spirits or deter crowds, however, which translated into another rousing weekend of fun-filled activity. And, yes, a good time was truly had by all!

In fact, the clouds that hovered over Midland kept daytime temperatures down and actually created a fall mood for the celebration. And the art, music, food and fun helped to put the Septemberfest crowd in an appropriately jovial spirit.

It's difficult to get upset in September in Midland anyway because the showers that have become something of a Septemberfest tradition are such a relief from the heat of summer. Many of those attending Septemberfest recognize that fact, as well as what the rain means to farmers and ranchers. As one of the participating artists this year noted, "...it's hard to have a grudge against rain in a community that needs it."

The 26th annual Septemberfest will be remembered as one the weather couldn't spoil — and in that way, it's like a lot of earlier Septemberfests. The weather made it better, and that's the way we like it!

Southwest Conference gets kiss of death

A new football season is at hand. The protracted death agonies of the old Southwest Conference end in a few months. The sufferer, according to script, shoots himself, and the relatives scatter for greener pastures — the Big 12 for the really big and cool, the Western Athletic Conference for the small fry. The storied Cotton Bowl prepares for who knows what destiny. Livestock shows?

Murchison

A few observations anent what college sports — and colleges themselves — have become in the course of two or three decades. The observations, I give fair warning, are anything but cheerful. They concern ...

1. The death of local identity in athletics, as in so much else in modern America — home-owned banks, for instance. Regional conferences once commanded regional loyalties. The boys next door, wherever that was — Texas Christian University, Baylor, University of Texas, Texas A&M — were heroes whose followings filled stadiums. The local papers had spread their feats before the local public.

No longer. Big-time colleges, and even little-time ones, recruit all over the country, and television impartially broadcasts their exploits nationally. The objective now is the winning of games and the amassing of honors — not the nurturing of local pride.

Not that the fans, in any case, are bothered, due to ...

2. The homogenization of the American college campus — a trend at least as rapid as the disappearance of regional dialects. When colleges and universities were smaller, each had its own personality. In the Southwest Conference, the Baylor Bears were goody-goody Baptists, the Aggies were agricultural louts, the Texas Longhorns were "tea-sips" and the SMU Mustangs were playboys. Or so it was fun to pretend.

Rivalries are founded on difference as well as locality. On television, one team looks like another. Background, tradition, atmosphere — difference is kaput. In the end, what does it matter who beats whom?

This dismaying trend has been reinforced by ...

3. The semi-professionalization of college sports. Doncha wanna win? Sure you do. Hence, you get the best in athletes — usually meaning those whose eyes are on the pros. Don't know much about history, don't know much geometry — but, oh, those pro contracts, those endorsements! Always, the SWC produced pros: Doak Walker, Don Meredith, Ben Crenshaw, etc., ad infin. But there was no perception then, as there is now, that the show of which they were part was for their personal benefit.

The new seriousness about money is a part of ...

4. The general seriousness of modern life — a dismal datum indeed. Coaches are serious about winning, players are serious about their pro contracts, fans are serious about ticket value. The whole topic of sports is deadly serious: a measure of that deadly intensity with which popular entertainment inspires us.

An old-time rivalry, by contrast, a do-or-die-for-old-Siwash, is (or was) great fun. Did it matter in the large scheme of things if Texas beat Arkansas? Of course not. The fun was in pretending that tears would course from the gods' stony eyes if Alma Mater went down. This was a different kind of winning: unmechanical and unrelated to the career prospects of beef-factories-in-uniform.

There is no more of this now in the Southwest Conference, the networks having declared, with their practiced respect for the dollar's almightiness, that no one gives two hoots about a conference like ours. This meant no lucrative television contracts, which in turn meant no big bucks for athletics — the definitive kiss of death.

And so it goes: Life closes another door, somewhere flinging open a new one. We'll survive. But the end of amateurism in the Southwest Conference and, at last, of the conference itself is a landmark in our passage from fun-loving amateurism to cold, nationalized professionalism.

Childhood can be survived without programs

A sudden insight zonked me 'side the head the other day: It's a miracle I survived childhood because the whole time I was deprived of government-sponsored recreation and counseling.

No midnight basketball or daytime basketball for that matter. No after-school programs. No counselors. No clubs. No social workers. No organized sports activities.

Reese

In the words of today's special pleaders for social welfare programs, I was one of the kids "left to the streets." It's so strange that I, without any help from social workers, had a full, exciting and happy childhood.

Not only was I deprived of government supervision, I didn't even have a TV set or a computer.

Looking back, I just don't know how I managed to play marbles, backyard tackle football and softball; lie in a bed of daffodils; feed chickens; chop wood; climb trees; explore woods; build dams across creeks; pester people to let me pick cotton or try to plow; hitch rides on the backs of wagons; play on the cotton bales at the train depot; hitch rides on boxcars; make model airplanes; shoot off fireworks (powerful ones and unsupervised, by golly); take target practice with my BB gun and later my .22; go to the movies; talk to the watchmaker; read a lot of books; play on rope swings and in tree houses; dig foxholes; play "guns"; haul in the coal; jump off roofs; explore abandoned buildings; go fishing and hunting; race my bicycle down steep hills; build traps; skin moles; shoot a bow and arrow; make slingshots; pick plums and blackberries; socialize with the family and friends; and go to the movies.

It's just a mystery that I managed to do all those things and more without some government bureaucrat or welfare busybody supervising my every step. It's true my pals and I would get into fistfights, shoot out a street light or two and toss firecrackers at cars. And I never saw a fence I wouldn't climb if something on the other side looked interesting.

It's also true I did lots of Gene Kelly dance steps while my mom whacked me with a peach tree switch, and I shed my share of blood with various cuts, bumps, bruises and smashed fingers. I even was hit by a car. My teeth were drilled and pulled with no anesthetics.

But if, as the welfare do-gooders say when they beg for money, kids on the street will turn to crime when you take away government programs, why didn't I? It could be because we never passed a chain gang that my father didn't say, "That's where you'll end up if you grow up to be a hell raiser."

I would look at those sweating, miserable men swinging the grass cutters and at the cold-eyed guard with his .12 gauge. Even to a 6-year-old, it didn't look like an appealing place to be.

Or it could be all those sermons I was forced to hear, all those Bible stories I was read, impressed on even my hard head a simple message that there are some things you do, and some things you don't.

And it could be that the message sunk in because I was hearing the same essential message from the preacher, my parents, the school and — believe it or not — the movies? In those days, the movie industry censored itself, and no bad guy ever survived to the final credits.

Robert Preston, that talented actor, made a career of being the good guy who goes bad but redeems himself at the cost of his life at the end of the film. No wonder Preston played "The Music Man" with such zest. It was one of the few roles he ever got which didn't require him to die at the end.

The bigger-budget beggars and the politicians do today's kids a great injustice. The overwhelming majority of kids today employ the same ingenuity to amuse themselves, study just as hard and are just as unlikely to become criminals as my gang of barefoot rascals.

Generations are libeled to justify bigger budgets and cushier jobs. Some public and private bureaucrats relish the minority of kids who go bad. To them, a bad kid is money in their pockets.

House Republicans should pass line-item veto measure

When House Republicans took the reins of power last January, one of their first orders of business was to pass a measure giving the president line-item veto power to strike wasteful spending from appropriations bills.

In so doing, the House made good on one of the key provisions of the GOP's Contract With America.

It also fulfilled the wishes of every president — Republican and Democrat — since Richard Nixon.

Now, however, it appears the House leadership may be backsliding on its pledge to enact the line-item veto this year.

The backsliding is so apparent that, in an 83-14 vote, the Republican-controlled Senate approved a resolution calling on the House to appoint negotiators to join the Senate in working out differences between the House and Senate versions of the legislation.

House leaders say they are too busy working on 13 different appropriations bills to decide at this time which lawmakers should participate in a House-Senate conference committee. They say they'll get around to it some time after the summer recess.

But not even Senate Republicans are buying this explanation.

Indeed, Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., has suggested that the House GOP leadership is stalling on final approval of the line-item veto until much later this year or perhaps even next year. House leaders are unwilling to give President Clinton this new authority, McCain says, until after this year's spending bills become law.

But a tool of fiscal discipline as important as the line-item veto should not be sacrificed to partisan politics. ...

The line-item veto should not have to wait until all 13 appropriations bills have been enacted. The House GOP promised to pass the line-item veto this year. If the Republicans fail to make good on this key promise, it will be apparent that they have placed politics above principle.

Verbal fossils are abundant in any living language

After three years out of sight, the dinosaurs are back, in splendid new quarters, at the Museum of Natural History in New York. A different kind of fossil meanwhile continues on permanent display, in language.

When President Clinton describes someone as dumb as a post or senators talk about each other as show horses or workhorses, they're giving merely routine examples of Washington political vernacular — but superb illustrations of how a living language changes and churns. Each generation finds ways to reflect new experience. Yet many old expressions remain embedded in the language, long after the experience that prompted them has passed. Just as deep digs in Egypt or Kenya or Yucatan yield up the bones of species long extinct, earthy expressions often yield up language fossils.

The barnyard idioms that still salt colloquial speech echo from another America. From 1910 to 1920, when farm population peaked, one-third of all Americans lived on the farm. As recently as 1950, 15 percent of us did so. But now the farm population is less than 2 percent. If people know how high the corn will get, they probably got their information from musical comedy rather than rural reality.

Hardly a day goes by that someone in Congress doesn't accuse an opponent of acting pig-headed, without having any first-hand notion of just how pig-headed a pig can be. Officials take errant employees to the woodshed. Anthony Lake, the national security adviser, remembers thinking during the Nixon administration that "woodshed" was a nickname for the White House Situation Room. That, he heard, was where an angry Henry Kissinger was taking the CIA.

A Philadelphia police captain, referring to protest demonstrators last month, insisted that "they can march until the cows come home." When Oklahoma City bombing case charges were dropped recently against James Nichols, the Michigan farmer was asked whether he would celebrate. "Celebrate?" he responded. "I've got to make hay while the sun shines, so to speak."

So to speak. At a recent gathering in northwest Connecticut, a woman visiting for the weekend asked: "What's for dinner?" "Spring chickens," answered the host, who grows poultry as a hobby. She did a double take; it was the first time she had ever heard the term used other than to describe how young some older person is not. In a column last spring about California's Pete Wilson, A.M. Rosenthal of The New York Times challenged the idea that governors have a responsibility to fill out their elected terms, rather than run for president. That's an idea to which "I would say hogwash if I knew exactly what hogwash was." His modesty is not widely shared by other users of the term.

Language fossils suffuse ordinary speech: Silk purse out of a sow's ear. Till the cows come home. Separate the sheep from the goats. People whose closest contact with horses is with carriages in Central Park nonetheless routinely say stop horsing around, hold your horses, horse of another color. Citizens of this hatless society casually drop terms like old hat, high hat, hat in hand, eat my hat, at the drop of a hat.

Many such expressions are generational and will fade with the passing of a generation that says we need to get our socks up, or like salts through an old maid. Rather than hold your horses, young adults today would probably say chill.

Yet many dated terms live on because they remain useful. Kids who have never seen a rotary phone outside a Lily Tomlin skit still know what it means to dial a number. People who have only rarely used carbon paper know what the letters cc: and bcc: mean at the bottom of a page. There is as yet no other convenient way to let a recipient of a document know that the writer is sending it along blind, without telling the addressee. Until there is, language fossils like this will not allow themselves to be buried.

TRULY GERMANE

The soil of language also glitters with bright bits of foreign speech, sometimes used because they are useful — and sometimes because they are impressive. It has long been thought to be, well, soigne to quote French expressions. At the moment, for instance, the word shiver seems to have disappeared from the vocabulary of movie critics; they look for opportunities to say frisson.

What seems to be changing is the prestige language of choice. More and more, people seem to be turning to German.

Freud's legacy probably helps explain the frequency with which English speakers now go out of their way to say angst, as though saying it in German conveys more authority than anxiety. A computer search of The New York Times over the past two years discloses that every fifth anxiety becomes an angst.

Other German terms are useful because of their precision. Zeitgeist, the spirit of the age, has broken out of its academic habitat into the popular press.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 12, the 255th day of 1995. There are 110 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Sept. 12th, 1944, during World War II, U.S. Army troops entered Germany for the first time, near Trier.

On this date:

In 1609, English explorer Henry Hudson sailed into the river that now bears his name.

In 1814, the Battle of North Point was fought near Baltimore during the War of 1812.

In 1880, author and journalist H.L. Mencken was born in Baltimore.

In 1938, in a speech in Nuremberg, Adolf Hitler demanded self-determination for the Sudeten Germans in Czechoslovakia.

In 1943, during World War II, German paratroopers took Benito Mussolini from the hotel where he was being held by the Italian government.

In 1953, Massachusetts Sen. John F. Kennedy married Jacqueline Lee Bouvier in Newport, R.I.

In 1954, "Lassie" made its television debut on CBS.

In 1960, Democratic presidential candidate John F. Kennedy addressed the issue of his Roman Catholic faith, telling a Protestant group in Houston, "I do not speak for my church on public matters, and the church does not speak for me."

In 1974, Emperor Haile Selassie was deposed by Ethiopia's military, after ruling for 58 years.

Monopoly manufacturer acknowledges misspelling

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Forget about passing "Go." Apparently, the makers of Monopoly never passed spelling.

A 60-year-old error in the spelling of Marven Gardens was acknowledged Monday by the makers of the world-famous board game.

Still, "Marvin Gardens" won't be corrected because it would cost too much, said Carol Steinkrauss, a spokeswoman for Parker Bros.

"That would be extreme. In the grand scheme of things, it doesn't mean that much," she said.

Charles Darrow developed the board game on an oil cloth in his kitchen, using Atlantic City-area landmarks. He sold the game to Parker Bros. in 1935.

He misspelled Marven Gardens, a neighborhood in nearby Margate whose name he used for a street. The name combined the first three letters of Margate and Ventnor, another nearby town.

Players apparently never minded: The game has sold more than 160 million copies and is available now in 25 languages and 45 countries.

Neither did the residents of Marven Gardens.

"It doesn't bother us a bit," Bernie McCabe, 66, said at a ceremony Monday marking the game's 60th anniversary.

The ceremony featured Uncle Pennybags — whose round-headed image appears on the game — Mayor James Whelan, the mayors of Ventnor and Margate and Miss America Heather Whitestone.

A full-color 25-by-25-foot replica of the board was laid out on the Boardwalk in front of Convention Hall. A 2-by-4 foot bronze sign will be placed in Marven Gardens acknowledging the mistake.

To show there were no hard feelings, Ventnor Mayor Ted Bergman presented the Parker Bros. spokeswoman with a souvenir piece of the city's Boardwalk and invited her to visit.

"But we ask that you obey the laws," he said. "Because in Ventnor, we don't accept 'Get Out of Jail Free' cards."

Investigators sift wreckage of plane to find cause of crash

The skydivers club had leased the plane since June, said club treasurer Carol Clay. The plane had no record of crashes or safety problems, according to Federal Aviation Administration records.

SHACKLEFORDS, Va. (AP) — Gina Arbogast had climbed aboard the plane ready to make her first formation jump with her skydiving friends. They, like her, lived to plunge thousands of feet toward Earth.

But something went terribly wrong Sunday shortly after the twin-engine Beechcraft made its way into the sky in a gathering dusk.

The plane banked, then dived into a house in a dense pine forest, killing all 11 people on board and a man who was sitting on his back porch, watching his son play.

Miss Arbogast, a 28-year-old nurse from Virginia Beach, had recently completed training with the Peninsula Skydivers, a club based at the West Point Airport, where the plane took off. Everyone on board but the pilot was a club member.

"She loved the beach, and she loved skydiving," said Miss Arbogast's mother, Cathy Arbogast of Charlottesville. "It was a passion."

The skydivers club had leased the plane since June, said club treasurer Carol Clay. The plane had no record of crashes or safety problems, according to Federal Aviation Administration records.

Investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board arrived Monday to pick through the charred wreckage along a country road about 40 miles east of Richmond.

At a news conference Monday evening, NTSB vice chairman Robert Francis said two pilot witnesses reported "some sound of the engine malfunctioning" as the plane took off. Those witness said the aircraft turned right after climbing to somewhere between 500 feet and 1,000 feet, then banked sharply and turned nose down, he said.

Francis said there was evidence in the badly damaged cockpit controls that the right engine had been turned off, but he said the engines needed closer inspection. Investigators have records of the plane's engine maintenance, but have not yet reviewed them.

Investigators hoped to wrap up their on-site investigation today, but a final report on the cause of the crash will take about six months.

Ms. Clay and other club members said the plane had made 18 flights carrying skydivers without a problem during the weekend — not an unusually high number when the weather is clear, members said.

Nick Christian, 31, was the pilot who club members said flew for most jumps.

"Nick was a good guy, and a good pilot," said club member Ed Bibb of Richmond. "If he couldn't save it, nobody could."

The Beechcraft Queen Air BE-65 made nearly a straight dive into the home of Vincent Harris, who had been sitting on his porch. None of the tall trees near the house had been clipped by the plane.

Harris' 8-year-old son, Vincent Jr., wasn't hurt. Harris' wife had just left to pick up their 15-year-old daughter, Velicia, when the plane came down.

"You could hear the engine cutting on and cutting off," said Harris' brother, Michael Harris, who was two houses away.

He tried helplessly to save his brother but said he was driven back by flames. He said the plane swerved from side to side before plunging to the ground.

Harris was a trucker who moonlighted as a Baptist preacher, said his pastor, the Rev. Keith Parham of First Baptist Church.

"That's pretty much what he was about," Parham said. "Everywhere he went, he was trying to introduce people to the Lord."

There was no black box recorder on the plane that might give clues to the cause of the crash; the device is not required on such planes.

The plane was owned by Stephan S. Rose and Rebecca P. Smith, both of Newport News. The plane, built in 1966, was "a reasonably old aircraft" but not unusually old, said Robert Francis, NSTB vice chairman.

The skydiving club also used another plane of the same model. It sustained minor damage in a landing accident April 15, according to FAA records.

The last two fatal plane crashes involving skydivers occurred in 1992. All 12 people were killed when a twin-engine Beechcraft B-18 went down near Hinckley, Ill., on Sept. 7, 1992. The NTSB blamed the crash on engine failure caused by poor maintenance and inspection.

Sixteen people died when a De Havilland Twin Otter DHC 6-200 carrying 22 people crashed during takeoff on April 22, 1992, at Perris Valley Airport 70 miles east of Los Angeles. Federal investigators blamed that crash on pilot error, dirty fuel and overloading.

Miss Arbogast had been jumping for about a year and was going to jump simultaneously with the others to create a formation.

"This was to be her first time to jump in formation," her mother said. "She absolutely loved it."

African Americans worry that white church is trying to steal flocks

By Jim Jones
N.Y. Times News Service

As African-American Baptists gathered in conventions this summer, a question that kept coming up was whether the predominantly white Southern Baptist Convention is attempting to steal their flocks.

It's a concern expected to be addressed this week as the nation's two largest African-American Baptist bodies conduct national conventions in Dallas and Birmingham, Ala.

Some African-American Baptists question the sincerity of a highly publicized resolution approved in June by Southern Baptists repenting for the denomination's roots in slavery and apologizing for condoning racism. And some have wondered in writings and in speeches at various conventions whether the apology will remove a major barrier to more African-American congregations joining the predominantly white group.

In Dallas, up to 15,000 attending the annual convention of the 3.5 million-member National Baptist Convention of America Inc., through Friday are expected to discuss the Southern Baptist racism resolution and what it really means, said the Rev. Willie Range of Dallas, a local spokesman for the convention.

"I think we will accept the apology," Range said.

But, he added, "I think there is some concern about sheep-stealing. I think they also are concerned about hidden Republican agendas in the Southern Baptist Convention. Many of the white Baptists are archconservatives (politically)."

Soon after the Southern Baptist apology, African-American ministers began questioning the action in their pulpits and at denominational meetings.

It was a hot topic in June when the Rev. Michael Bell of Fort Worth spoke in San Diego at the National Baptist Convention U.S.A. Congress of Christian Education.

"Speaker after speaker condemned the Southern Baptist resolution" with many calling it an effort to barge in on the African-American church community, Bell said.

The Southern Baptist statement is not on the agenda for discussion but will probably pop up in speeches this week when 25,000 delegates gather in Birmingham at the national convention of the 7.5 million-member National Baptist Convention USA, the largest African-American Baptist denomination, said Bell, who will attend the Alabama meeting.

"The Baptist resolution may have been meant for good," he said. "But many are interpreting it as a means of seducing black congregations and trying to sucker African-American churches into joining the Southern Baptist Convention."

Although most African-American Baptist congregations still belong to predominantly black denominations, Southern Baptists are making rapid progress in adding black churches to their 15.5 million-member denomination.

African-American congregations make up about 1,900 of the more than 37,000 churches in the Southern Baptist Convention. And the number has been increasing at a pace of about 120 new churches a year since 1989, said Willie McPherson, director of the African-American relations department of the Baptist Home Mission Board in Atlanta.

But McPherson and other Southern Baptist leaders said they are not trying to rob the African-American denominations of their congregations or nourish any political movement and instead want to reach out to unchurched people in the African-American community.

"The bottom line is Southern Baptists are not interested in stealing sheep," said McPherson, who is an African-American.

But the Rev. E. Edward Jones, president of the National Baptist Convention of America group meeting in Dallas, disagreed.

"I think they are going more into the African-American community because we have the largest and fastest growing middle class among any ethnicity today," he said.

In a statement sent to churches this month, Jones said: "Southern Baptists with their belated apology have not had such a heart and mind to so love us. ... We must not be swept away by hidden agendas."

He added: "We must realize our own potentialities. The Black Church must see a need for its continued existence."

In an interview, Jones noted links between many Southern Baptists and right-wing Republicans.

During the Dallas convention, Jones said he will urge churches to redouble their efforts to aid the minority community that is threatened by the Republican agenda calling for cuts in affirmative action programs.

Jones said he and the Rev. Henry J. Lyons, president of the National Baptist Convention U.S.A., met recently and are discussing joint programs to offer economic assistance to the black communities they serve.

Although his denomination continues to grow, it is not growing fast enough, Jones said. "We've got to increase our efforts to assist in building new churches.'

Reebok "Comfort Ultra"
our best-selling walking shoe at a great everyday price
$39
What is Dynamic Cushioning?
Reebok's "Comfort Ultra" walker features Dynamic Cushioning air chambers in the sole of the shoe. While walking, your heel strikes the ground and compresses the heel chamber, forcing air into the forefoot chamber. When you "toe off," the forefoot chamber forces air back to the heel. This air movement pampers and cushions your feet. Even while you're standing, Dynamic Cushioning stimulates circulation and helps reduce fatigue.
With a full-grain garment leather upper and soles made of Goodyear's remarkable "Indy 500 Plus" compound, these shoes are made for long-lasting comfort and performance. Women's sizes in white; men's sizes in black or white.

Tax cuts reduce veteran services

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The peal of "no new taxes" may be as sweet to taxpayers as the sting of taxes can get without nixing taxes altogether.

But, in the case of the Midland County Veterans Service Office, cutting departmental budgets by the Midland County Commissioners' Court to exact a balanced budget is a death notice.

The Midland County Veterans Service Office, which dates to the 1940s, is scheduled to be closed on Sept. 30, the end of the county's 1995 fiscal year, due to lack of funding.

"It is not a question of whether veterans will receive services," Midland County Judge Jeff Norwood said on Monday. "It is a question of whether the county will fund the duplication of those services."

Jim Phillips, a retired United States Army veteran, was hired by the Midland County Commissioners' Court in 1992 to direct the veterans office.

Phillips

"The veterans have earned their benefits — the benefits that were promised to them," Phillips said. "They are not asking for a handout; they are asking for something that was promised them."

Each year, Phillips said, he assists about 1,200 of Midland County's 10,258 veterans — mostly from the World War II era — to realize their benefits, including pensions and compensations, and assists their widows in seeking help.

In many cases, Phillips works with veterans from the filing of their military-discharge records in the county courthouse to securing grave markers for their cemetery plots.

But Norwood said that services and information provided by Phillips, who maintains offices in the Midland County Courthouse Annex, are available elsewhere, including offices of congressmen in Midland and Odessa, the Texas Veterans Commission in Austin, and other sources, such as veterans organizations and the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs.

The five-member Commissioners' Court is calling for a public hearing on the county's proposed general-fund budget of $18 million in expenditures and $18.5 million in projected revenues at 9 a.m. Monday in the Commissioners' Courtroom in the Midland County Courthouse.

The Midland County Veterans Service Office's expiring 1995 budget is $22,937, including Phillips' $15,720 annual salary.

The county's overall 1996 proposed general-fund budget, down from 1995's $18.9 million in expenditures and $19 million in revenues, also considers reduced spend-

Incorporation

WIMBERLEY — Hayes County officials want it. The Chamber of Commerce wants it. Many local business people want it.

But longtime residents of Wimberley are gearing up for a renewal of the fight over whether to incorporate the picturesque village in the hills about 30 miles southwest of Austin.

Wimberley businessman Dave Campbell, leader of an advisory committee on incorporation, said the time has come for the community to become a town with a government, public services, regulations and taxes.

"The other option is to let someone else determine what our environment will be five to 10 years down the road," Campbell said.

'Greenie' brings fun for children, grown-ups alike

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Ah, the smell of the crowd and the roar of the grease paint ...

There are precious few human problems that cannot be improved with a few sight gags and bad jokes, according to Linda Greene — Midland's own Greenie the Clown.

The clowning profession is about the healing power of laughter and the magical nature of childhood, Ms. Green explained. In only five years as a professional clown, Ms. Greene and her alter ego, Greenie, have become an institution in some circles.

Ms. Greene plays to an estimated 3,000 children each year, usually at birthday parties and hospitals. While most of her audience is four or five years old, Ms. Greene is also called upon to play grown-up parties on occasion.

Her clowning business must be bal-

Texas, Mexican officials agree to promote area as trade center

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas and Mexican trade officials met Monday to discuss ways to share resources and promote the region as a major trade center.

"We're making tremendous strides towards positioning Texas and northern Mexico as globally competitive economically," said Brenda Arnett, executive director of the Texas Department of Commerce.

Ms. Arnett and officials from the Mexican border states of Chihuahua, Coahuila, Nuevo Leon and Tamaulipas signed agreements to work together to enhance global competitiveness, address barriers to regional development and exchange information.

Ms. Arnett and the Mexican officials said that because the countries have resources and industries that complement each other, the region is capable of attracting more business, conserving jobs and building a global presence.

"From birth to death, we want to grow it, build it, sell it, buy it. We want to keep it right here," Ms. Arnett said.

Too often, for example, parts are shipped to Mexican auto plants, cars are manufactured and then shipped back out of the country. Ms. Arnett said she and her counterparts would like to see parts for those cars created in Texas and Mexico, cars produced in the region and then sold and serviced in the region.

Monday's meeting was the first in a series that aims to create a plan for next year. The delegates discussed ways to exchange information on what industries and businesses exist in each state and how they could best be used together.

"In essence, we are talking about a more intellectual exchange of assets right now to try to define what assets we have that are complimentary," Ms. Arnett said.

"We welcome the opportunity to share our knowledge, and to share the labor pool and the intellectual pool on both sides of the border," said Salvador Fernandez of Tamaulipas.

Enrique Terrazas Torres of Chihuahua said working together was imperative to improving the quality of life in his state and the border.

"The first thing we have to do is we have to know each other," Terrazas said.

Celebration to honor memory of Mexican freedom fighter

By Michael Kashgarian

Any people can be free that wants to be.
— Father Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla, 1810

On the evening of Sept. 15, 1810, in the small Mexican town of Dolores, a Roman Catholic priest rang church bells to summon the town's people, mostly Indian peasants and some mestizos. The priest also freed prisoners from the town's jail.

The 57-year-old priest — Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla — gave a powerful speech to incite a rebellion from 300 years of Spanish rule. Today that speech — "El Grito de Dolores," or the cry of Dolores — is generally considered the beginning of Mexico's independence.

Hidalgo sought to lift the tyranny of viceroys and councils — appointed by the king of Spain — over the poor Indians, mestizos and criollos (people of Spanish decent born in America). The royalists controlled the state, the church and trade.

After Hidalgo asked for the help of the Blessed Virgin of Guadalupe, the insurgents — subsequently joined by others along the way — began overtaking and freeing communities and cities. At its height, the rebel army reportedly con-

Two recent events illustrate good, bad sides of sports

More rambling thoughts ...

— Let's see. There were two big sporting events this past week. The first was Cal Ripkin, who is a real oddity in that he is actually humble about his accomplishments, breaking Lou Gehrig's record for most consecutive games. The second involved a part-time football player, who is perhaps best known for his post-touchdown taunting of opponents, receiving a multi-year contract worth $30 million, give or take a million or so. One event represents everything good about sports. The other personifies everything that is wrong. You decide which is which.

— Embarrassing moment: Making a telephone call and right before the other person answers you go completely blank and forget his (or her) name.

— The new "in" defense for any past indiscretion seems to be: "Hey, I was drunk and don't remember. So don't blame me."

— It is hard to believe that despite everything history has taught us, there are still young punks out there who take a perverse pleasure in flaunting Nazi symbols and ideology.

— Just a thought: Anxiety does not come from thinking about the future but from wanting to control it.

— Eugene O'Neill once said, "God is a Mother."

— What the world needs now are more old-fashioned gas stations that feature those coke machines where you push the top back, reach your hand into the incredibly cold box and retrieve a NuGrape soda pop in the bottle.

— Telling a person he "ought to do something" really means "I want you to do it," so why not go ahead and tell the truth in the first place?

— Let's face it, the person doesn't want to talk to you if his secretary says, "Just a minute. I'll see if he is in."

— Although I haven't watched an entire Murphy Brown episode in years, I still find myself pulling for Candice Bergen to win the Emmy for best comedy actress.

OTT: Morbid fascination with human tragedy leads us to disaster scenes her yard.

— You know times have changed when you realize one of the more popular juvenile pranks from your youth was throwing water balloons at passing motorists. Now the kids use bullets.

— Overheard: "Wit is the only wall between us and the dark."

— There is something unique — be it simple curiosity or a morbid fascination with human tragedy — that leads most of us to the scene of a disaster such as the plane crash that killed two persons on Thursday and left a local residence heavily damaged. Hey, I was there, too.

— And today's final quote comes from Wilhelm Busch, who once said, "Becoming a father is easy enough, but being one can be rough."

GREENIE: Clown brings healing gift of laughter

(From 1B)

anced with raising four children, caring for her west Midland household and her husband of 28 years, Mark Greene.

Ms. Greene's clowning career started about 14 years ago when other mothers in her parenting co-op talked her into pretending to be a clown for her child's birthday party.

"It wasn't like a lifelong ambition to be a clown," she said.

Ms. Greene characterizes that first performance as less than professional — perhaps even less than good. "I was what I call a typical Halloween clown," she said.

But the children never noticed that Greenie was really Ms. Greene from the car pool and remained rapt in the performance. "I was like the Pied Piper," Ms. Greene said.

These occasional venues continued to come along and Ms. Greene began studying the very old art of clowning. Today, Ms. Greene is a member of several national, state and local clowning organizations and has awards to her credit from state and regional competitions for makeup and performing skits.

About five years ago, the Greenes decided they needed another income and Ms. Greene was thinking of taking a job. A close friend, however, was pushing her to take her party clown persona to the next level — which includes pay.

Ms. Greene said she prayed for guidance when the telephone rang and a member of her parent co-op wanted her to be Greenie for his child's birthday party.

"The Lord doesn't usually deal with me quite this directly," Ms. Greene joked.

Ms. Greene enjoys playing hospitals and uses clowning as a tool for Christian ministry as well.

"It is now my profession, it is my ministry and it is my favorite hobby," she said. "Not many people can say that about their jobs," she added.

Ms. Greene's favorite stories are from playing hospitals. Children at the Allison Cancer Center are so often surrounded only by medical staff who must perform painful procedures to treat their illness. The children's family are often very sad — only Greenie is in a position to put smiles on these children's faces.

"For a few minutes, everybody laughs," she said. "Laughter is the best tension reliever."

The rewards of playing for sick children are so great that Greenie sometimes keeps going for hours.

At birthday parties and other venues "I usually go an hour and my big, red nose is drooping." she said.

Ms. Greene alternates her repertoire of jokes and gags, but keeps an abundance of both. Timing and rhythm are often as important to this kind of humor as the substance.

From her handbag, shaped like a giant hand, Greenie can pull one silly prank after another — such as a picture of her kids (two goats), and a car phone complete with wheels.

One addition to the act is a giant disposable razor that bears a sign: Shave the Whales.

Ms. Greene and the local clowning organization, Oops Alley Clowns of Odessa, is hosting the Permian Basin's first clown convention.

The public is invited to watch the skit competition at the Globe Theater at 1 p.m. Sept. 30.

The entire convention is four days long and is a good way for interested people to learn more about clowning.

For more information, contact Ms. Greene at 689-9579, or Kay Vealè of Odessa at 1-915-368-0746.

HONOR: Celebration remembers freedom fighters, independence

(From 1B)

sisted of about 80,000 people, mostly Indians.

The revolutionaries rampaged and were violent and uncontrollable, according to historical accounts. Royalist troops sought to stop the uprising.

Hidalgo's march ended on Feb. 28, 1811, when he and some followers were captured outside Monclova, located in the state known today as Coahuila.

Commanders were immediately executed but Hidalgo and Ignacio Allende — a military officer who was part of the original conspiracy — were taken to Chihuahua city to be tried.

Allende was promptly found guilty as a traitor and executed; Hidalgo — after being investigated by the Inquisition — was put to death by a firing squad on July 30, 1811.

The heads of Hidalgo, Allende and Juan Aldama — another army officer part of the original movement — were displayed for 10 years in Guanajuato, where a bloody battle occurred a couple of weeks after the revolution began.

Despite the warning to future insurgents, the cause did not die. In 1821, Mexico was declared free from Spanish rule, which had began in 1512.

The role of Hidalgo as a freedom fighter has not been forgotten. Each year, on Sept. 15, the president of Mexico and representatives of Mexico around the world commemorate the El Grito ceremony.

The Diez y Seis de Septiembre (16th of September) — although the revolution actually began the evening prior — celebration this year commemorates the 185th anniversary of Hidalgo's declaration of independence.

In Midland, Mexican Consul Jose-Luis Suarez, Mayor Bobby Burns and the city of Midland will recognize the anniversary at 7 p.m. Friday at Centennial Plaza. The Mexican and American flags will be presented by La Asociacion de Charros de Midland and the Midland Police Honor Guard, respectively.

The mayor will read a proclamation on behalf of the city, and Midland County Commissioner Louisa Valencia will do the same on behalf of the county.

Organizers encourage the public to attend the event.

Judge's injunction prevents removal of gunslinger's remains

EL PASO (AP) — High noon for the descendants of notorious gunslinger John Wesley Hardin will come in a courtroom early next year.

State District Judge Kathleen Olivares issued a temporary injunction Monday forbidding Hardin's family from removing the remains from an El Paso cemetery until the dispute goes to trial Jan. 29.

She ruled that moving the body would cause irreparable harm to both the historical Concordia Cemetery and to his remains. "The moving of the body prior to the trial will harm the body," Olivares said.

Some Hardin descendants, led by great-grandson John Billings, want the gunfighter reburied in Nixon, zeast of San Antonio, where Hardin lived briefly with his first wife, Jane.

They are opposed by the Concordia Heritage Association, a historical group that has filed suit to keep Hardin in the town where he spent the last few months of his life before being gunned down in a saloon on Aug. 19, 1895.

The Concordia association used two restraining orders to successfully block an attempt to remove Hardin's remains last month. Olivares' injunction reinforces the prior orders by two other judges.

Both Billings and his attorney Frank Billings, another Hardin descendant, declined to comment following Monday's hearing on the association's request for the temporary injunction.

Concordia association vice president Leon Metz breathed a sigh of relief.

"I have to admit I was sitting there a little scared," Metz said. "The other side had a better case than I would have thought."

Frank Billings brought out detailed testimony about the procedures that family representatives had followed prior to the attempt to exhume Hardin's remains on Aug. 27.

He also challenged the historical society's claims to the remains, noting several descendants have authorized Hardin's removal to Gonzales County.

John Billings said his goal was "to bring him back to Gonzales County where the memory of him is better served by people who knew what he was."

"He was a family man. He was a victim of the times and he was viewed by many, many people as a friend," said John Billings, who took issue with the Concordia association's portrayal of Hardin as a ruthless gunfighter.

Olivares indicated, however, that the issue of who has the right to the remains should be settled in trial.

Afterward, Metz challenged the depiction of Harding as a good man with strong ties to central Texas.

"He had no occupation except fugitive in Gonzales County," said Metz, a historian who has written a book on Harding.

In fact, Harding, who was credited with killing seven men before he was 17, spent a large part of his life as either a fugitive in Texas, Florida and Alabama, or in prison.

He did study law while he was incarcerated and had opened a law practice in El Paso just shortly before he was killed following an argument.

TRADE: Officials want to promote region for business purposes

(From 1B)

In the coming months, the delegates will discuss a host of trade issues, such as transportation laws, environmental regulations and insurance for tourist excursions.

In Mexico, Ms. Arnett said, the government is deregulating the railroads and the gas industry.

"We want to be able to be the first state to participate in the benefits of that deregulation," she said.

By Dec. 15, the group said they hope to have a strategic plan to capitalize fully on the North American Free Trade Agreement and attract business to the region.

"We clearly want to enhance this region so that we get a lion's share of the business," Ms. Arnett said.

University announces $72 million repair project

HOUSTON (AP) — New University of Houston President Glenn Goerke, standing in front of a long-broken escalator, announced Monday a five-year $72 million project to fix nearly every academic building on campus.

"It's been a long time coming," Goerke, who took over as president six weeks ago, said. "You look at a campus this age — with buildings dating back to the '60s and '70s — it would be easy to spend $100 million. What we've identified are the most critical needs."

School officials listed 1,690 individual projects. That number makes the renovation one of the most ambitious capital renewal plans ever undertaken by a university in Texas or anywhere else, Goerke said.

Maintenance and repairs had been deferred because the school didn't have the money. The university now can afford the expenditures because of increased legislative appropriations in the state's Higher Education Assistance Fund.

An audit of 50 buildings on the main campus showed while most are in fair condition, the heating, ventilation and air conditioning systems are not working properly and most of the roofs of the buildings leak.

"We had consultants come in here and take a look at the entire campus and not only walk the space but crawl in the space and crawl under the space," he said.

And although many have been renovated over the years, the consultants determined those renovations hindered the operation of the original electrical and mechanical systems, which were not designed for today's technology and building codes.

In addition, most of the structures are more than 20 years old and equipment is deteriorating rapidly.

None of the buildings comply with guidelines under the Americans With Disabilities Act and the school estimated compliance with that law alone would amount to more than $4.7 million.

"The disrepair has long been a volatile issue with us," Dom Lewinsohn, a senior hotel and restaurant management student and vice president of the UH Student Association, said. "This is really exciting news. Let's hope I won't be a student when the renovations are finished in five years."

University officials said they have hired Houston-based 3D/International, an architectural engineering and construction management firm, to manage the entire project rather than handled each repair job individually.

"We estimate that right off the top we'll see a 3 to 5 percent savings because we won't have to hire different consultants for each project," Goerke said.

During the time it takes to complete all the repairs, some buildings will have to be closed.

"Part of our planning involves making sure the university's mission is not compromised," Goerke said, adding that transitional classrooms and lab space will have to be found.

"We'll have to ask faculty, students and staff to be patient.

"All in all, the effect is to make this a better place to teach and learn. Teaching and learning does not go on well when it rains and water is up to your ankles. Teaching and learnings does not go on well when the air conditioning does not work and it's 143 degrees inside a classroom."

Pollution dims clear skies over Texas national park

By Tim Madigan
N.Y. Times News Service

BIG BEND NATIONAL PARK — The plaintive conversation between park ranger and park visitor occurred this spring, as the white haze of pollution once again dulled the vistas of this desert tourist destination that sprawls along the Rio Grande.

The visitor was a woman who had come to Big Bend National Park every year for the past 20, she told Ranger Valerie Naylor.

"But I think this is going to be my last visit," the woman said, "because I want to remember Big Bend the way it used to be."

From national park headquarters in this desolate corner of southwest Texas, to State Department offices in Washington, officials have adopted the same doleful tone, fearing for the aesthetic future of the 800,000-acre national preserve, one of the most remote and scenic national parks.

Most of their concern stems from massive, coal-fired electricity plants operating near Piedras Negras, Coahuila, Mexico. The plants spew unfiltered sulfur dioxide into the air, which wafts on breezes from the southeast 130 miles to the park, where smog this summer has often resembled Los Angeles on a bad day. American officials say the pollution comes from the government-owned plants known as Carbon I and Carbon II.

In two years of discussions about the problem, federal environmental officials from Mexico and the United States have been bogged down, mired in a diplomatic morass involving economics, the environment, politics and issues of national sovereignty.

Mexican officials, for example, say they aren't convinced that their power plants are causing the Big Bend pollution, but add that, even if they were, the cash-starved nation could not afford to fit the power plants with the necessary anti-pollution devices.

"For all plants (the cost) goes over $1 billion ... to solve a Texas problem," said Jose Luis Samaniego, a senior official with Mexico's Environment Ministry. "There is a tremendous lack of proportion. There is an impact on aesthetic values of an area for a small number of people, vs. $1 billion. ... One billion dollars is more than is needed to solve all the problems with water treatment plants that we have at the border."

American officials warn that pollution problems at Big Bend are likely to intensify as the newest Mexican plant, Carbon II, increases its generating capacity in the coming months. The plants ultimately will produce more than 250 tons of sulfur dioxide each year, more than all Texas electric plants combined, U.S. officials say. The resultant smog could reduce visibilty at the park by 60 percent during the spring and summer, when the wind blows from the southeast.

"I can't say I'm an optimist," said State Department official Larry Cohen, who has been involved in discussions with Mexican officials. "I don't hold out a lot of hope that we can get to a solution promptly. ... It's a tragedy. Do you have any answers? It's a tough one, a real tough one."

'EL DESPOBLADO': Park visitors, officials and the smattering of full-time Big Bend residents thus are left to bemoan the irony of city-like pollution in an area dubbed "el despoblado," or uninhabited land, by Spanish explorers who first arrived in the 1500s. Today, the nearest Texas supermarket is in Alpine, 80 miles north, and most days AM radio reception is available only at night.

Big Bend National Park is a sun-scorched world of blooming cactus; abundant wildlife, such as mule deer, javelinas, coyotes, bears and peregrine falcons; spectacular canyons cut by the Rio Grande over millions of years; and volcanic mountains that climb to 7,800 feet. The park's isolation, stark grandeur and sweeping views are the main attractions for its 330,000 annual visitors, of whom 65 percent are Texans.

On the clearest days, such as June 30, visibility at the park can stretch to 150 miles in all directions. But those days are increasingly rare, said Jose Cisneros, park superintendent.

"On June 30th, some of us walked out of our houses and weren't quite sure what was going on," Cisneros said. "It was so clear. It was like wearing a new pair of glasses. The next day, it was down to 60 (miles.) It doesn't last long anymore.

"Out here should provide a place where people can come out of the urban areas and clean out their lungs for a while," Cisneros said. "You used to be able to do that at Big Bend. That is no longer the case."

Longtime Big Bend-area residents said they started noticing the haze about a decade ago, which corresponds to the date in 1986 when Carbon I was fired up. But the smog has intensified dramatically this year, residents and park officials concur, particularly since late August. Production of electricity at Carbon II was increased about that time.

On Aug. 22, air monitors recorded a record-low nine-mile visibility at the park. Visibility ranged from 21 to 60 miles over the next two weeks, with 11 days of visibility less than 30 miles. In previous years, average summer visibility has been 50 miles.

TAXES: Cuts include many duplicated services

ing in other health and welfare categories.

Midland County Welfare Director Wanda Colburn's office is to be closed at the end of the 1995 calendar year. Her role in certifying indigents for burials in the county-owned Fairview Cemetery is being assumed by the cemetery's sexton and his staff. And her work in doling out $11,000 in food vouchers each year, at $20 per quarter for a maximum of $80 a year per family, is being canceled.

"To me, the food-voucher program didn't make sense," Norwood said. "It wasn't justified. We have eliminated food vouchers and transferred the indigent-burial aspect of her job to the (Fairview) Cemetery personnel. There wasn't any program or anything left for her to administer. It was eliminated because of efficiency measures and budget cuts that the county was having to make."

Norwood said there are other places and ways for the poor and hungry to obtain food, such as through the Permian Basin Food Bank and the Soup Kitchen Ministry, and to secure script — federal food stamps — with which to buy food at grocery stores.

Among the commissioners' other cuts was in transferring the work of the county's former litter-control and rabies-control officer to the county's Road and Bridge Department and to the fire marshal.

Of eliminating the county's veterans services, Norwood said, "There are a number of other agencies and offices where veterans can receive services. We (members of the Commissioners' Court) did not think we should continue the duplication."

Phillips said Texas law mandates that the commissioners' court of any county with a population of 200,000 or more "shall maintain a veterans county service office."

However, Phillips said that "if members of the Midland County Commissioners' Court "don't provide someone" to help veterans, then "it is really on their shoulders to provide assistance.

"The responsibility is supposed to fall on the Commissioners' Court, because the Commissioners' Court is the deciding factor as to whether or not they are going to fund an office for the veterans."

Norwood had noted that the Commissioners' Court is a pro-veterans political body. Two of its five members are veterans of military service: Commissioners Henry Goulet and Guy McCrary. Commissioner James Brezina is a former military reservist.

Still, the court's consensus was to ax funding for a county-operated veterans service office.

"That was a tough call," Brezina said.

"I argued in favor of the Veterans Service Office," Goulet said. But, the commissioner said he was assured by the county judge that services for veterans were "readily available" through sources other than county government.

To nix the veterans service office was a "very tough decision, because the money just isn't there," Goulet said.

Norwood said members of the Commissioners' Court "would be more than happy to assist as well as the three members of Congress who represent Midland," Norwood said. "I am certain their offices would be happy to assist veterans if they had any problems receiving benefits owed to them through the Veterans Administration. Most congressmen, as part of their constituency services, help veterans on a regular basis. I am sure they will be more than happy."

Of inroads into the budget, Norwood said the Commissioners' Court was "forced to make a lot of budget cuts in order to avoid a tax increase. And we have done that. We are going to adopt the first (Midland County) balanced budget without a tax increase in over eight years. And that is a major achievement for this Commissioners' Court.

"We are making cuts, and we are going to do more with less," Norwood said. "And we will continue to fund the essential services of the county. The vast majority (more than 70 percent) of the county's general-fund budget goes toward the criminal-justice system," including the courts, the county and district clerks, the jails and public safety, which takes in offices of the sheriff and the constable.

"The central mission of county government is to operate the criminal-justice system," Norwood said. "We are refocusing on that effort to fund the criminal-justice system as economically as possible while still providing a high-level of public safety."

Agency approves construction of border fence to control crime

EL PASO (AP) — The U.S. Border Patrol has been given the green light to begin construction on a controversial fence in a border area that officials have complained is fraught with criminal activity.

U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service Commissioner Doris Meissner said Monday the fence will provide a "firm response" to increased problems in the area between Sunland Park, N.M. and a section of Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

"Border violence is a very real threat in communities like Sunland Park and the targets can include everyone from Border Patrol agents to illegal immigrants," Meissner said in a statement released during a visit to El Paso.

The 10-foot-high fence will be constructed along a 1.3-mile stretch of desert between the rocky shoulders of Mount Cristo Rey and a hill known as Monument No. 3 mesa.

It will be made of steel mesh with a concrete foundation two-feet wide and four-feet deep.

Construction on the roughly $100,000 project is expected to begin within the next couple of weeks and should be completed by the end of October, said Doug Mosier, a Border Patrol spokesman in El Paso.

The project has generated a great deal of controversy since 1993, when the Border Patrol first floated the idea of building a steel wall in the area.

Agency officials maintain they need a barrier to control the area, where the border is little more than an imaginary line, making it a focal point for drug smuggling and illegal immigration.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Reach for the impossible dream. Old friends will play an instrumental role in a business or career victory. A clever money-making suggestion deserves further thought. Act before someone else has the same idea! A home computer could become a necessity. Compare prices. Early in 1996, a loved one will return to the fold. Exciting professional gains are featured next May. A coveted assignment falls into your lap.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: Olympic legend Jesse Owens, country singer George Jones, singer Maria Muldaur, soap actress Irene Dailey.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Domestic matters could dominate, no matter how hard you try to get away. A transition will be easier if you can bring yourself to compromise with a stubborn individual.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can strengthen family ties by being a good listener. Respond quickly to overdue bills. Eagerly-awaited news regarding an educational matter arrives. Celebrate! A slump in earnings is over.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): New job demands could require overtime. Mate or partner will be understanding. A hands-on hobby provides a perfect outlet for your artistic talents. Your enthusiasm for a promising relationship is justified. Be patient.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Love begets love. Have faith in your partner; happiness will follow. It may not be smooth sailing at work. Keep a low profile. Avoid disclosing your financial assets to anyone you do not know well.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your professional instincts are excellent. A long-distance call turn your plans topsy-turvy. Postpone making an important decision until up-to-date information is available.

VIRGO Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Turn in a sterling performance today and VIPs will be impressed. Your outlook on life matters to others, and should matter to you. Aim for the stars! Focus on meeting the needs of a teen-ager.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If asked for an unbiased opinion, give it — but watch yourself in the clinches. Not everyone will agree with your conclusions. A well-designed exercise and nutrition program will leave you feeling more energetic.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep expenses down if self-employed. Long-distance phone calls can take the place of costly travel. Catch up on your professional reading. Discretion is essential when talking to a member of the opposite sex.

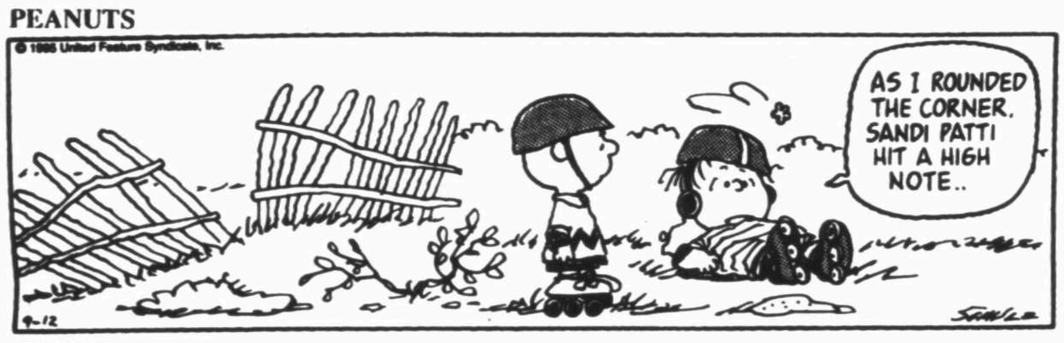

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Getting better organized on the homefront will let you enjoy your leisure hours more. Keep close relatives advised of any pressing financial commitments; it will help them understand when you must say "no."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your artistic or creative powers are at an all-time high. Seek professional advice on marketing them, even if you must sign with an agent. Get all promises in writing. Your mate's behavior has you wondering.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Guard against boredom by taking care of routine matters early in the day. Then turn your attention to something challenging! Business transactions can be completed in record time. Domestic issues dominate tonight. Make concessions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Avoid people who ask too many personal questions. Remind them that you are entitled to privacy. Communication with a parent improves when you forget old animosities. See people and situations as they really are.

Opening lead: Queen of ♡

If declarer can move freely between the closed hand and the dummy, there are many opportunities to make a contract. When communication is restricted, however, strange things happen.

South's response was good news to North, who immediately became interested in a club slam. Instead of rebidding the six-card diamond suit, North raised clubs, then showed strength in spades. Three no trump would have been easy, but North felt obliged to make slam intentions clear by bidding over game. When South failed to cue-bid diamonds, North's ardor cooled distinctly.

Five clubs was a precarious contract and became more so when West started the queen of hearts. Since dummy's diamonds would have to take care of at least one losing heart, declarer won the opening lead in hand and fired back the ten of diamonds. West ducked and East won, and quickly returned a heart to the ace.

West won the next round of diamonds and continued with the jack of hearts, and the contract could no longer be made. The best declarer could do was ruff in dummy and cash the king and queen of trumps, but the jack did not drop. Now there was no way to return to hand to draw the last trump. Whether declarer ruffed a diamond high or low, West's jack of trumps was destined to become the setting trick.

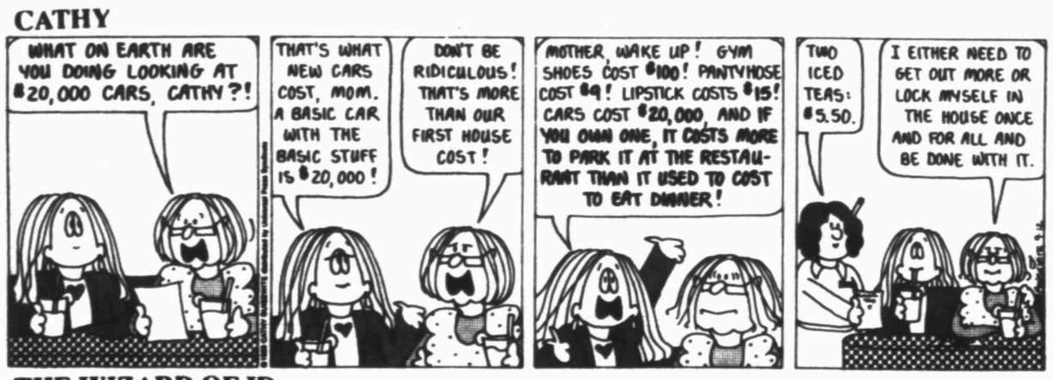

This was excellent defense. Had East-West sought an immediate trump promotion by playing three rounds of diamonds, declarer could have countered by ruffing the third diamond with the ace of trumps. A finesse for the jack picks up trumps and dummy has all the winners declarer needs.

Magic Johnson will get $400,000 for speaking tour.

The former basketball star will preach the message that "anybody could get HIV," said Anthony Roda, a spokesman for the government's health department.

Johnson will visit Manila and Cebu City Oct. 26-28, Roda said Monday. Roda wouldn't identify the company paying Johnson.

The former Los Angeles Laker retired in 1991 after learning he has the AIDS virus.

The government estimates that 65,000 Filipinos are infected.

COLUMBIA, S.C. — South Carolina's "Hootie who?" governor hasn't decided whether Hootie & the Blowfish should receive the state's top honor.

A legislator is pushing Gov. David Beasley to give the homegrown rock band Order of the Palmetto awards in time for their concert Wednesday in Columbia. Beasley said he probably won't make up his mind by then.

"We do Order of the Palmettos on our own time schedule and in our own time frame," Beasley said Monday.

Earlier this year, before Democratic Sen. Darrell Jackson made his award request to the Republican governor, the band's lead singer, Darius Rucker, criticized the flying of the Confederate flag atop the Statehouse.

Beasley responded to the criticism by asking, "Hootie who?"

NEW YORK — Wearing some excess weight, not silky lingerie, made Andie MacDowell feel sexy — really sexy — after each of her three pregnancies.

Playing a pregnant mother and expecting her third child while filming the movie "Unstrung Heroes," MacDowell said she wished she could have kept her extra 20 pounds on longer.

"When I was round, after having each of my babies, I thought I looked really beautiful and felt very sexy. Extremely sexy," the 37-year-old actress told Redbook magazine in the October issue.

"I had dimply legs — it's not the type of beauty Americans are used to," said the co-star of "Four Weddings and a Funeral."

The 5-foot-8 MacDowell, who usually weighs about 130 pounds, thought she had a "softness" like "that seen in old paintings" and felt "sexy in bed making love with my husband."

She's married to builder Paul Qualley.

POINT REYES STATION, Calif. — What small town wouldn't want to play host to a Walt Disney movie? Point Reyes Station, for one.

The Northern California town where the "Village of the Damned" was made last year rejected Disney's offer to film the John Travolta movie here after residents complained about the disruption.

"I think they were surprised," said Joe Soule, president of the Point Reyes Village Association. "Most places probably would have been delighted to have them, but Point Reyes Station sent Mickey Mouse packing."

Disney wanted to use the picturesque hamlet 30 miles north of San Francisco as the location for "Phenomenon." The movie is about a man whose intelligence suddenly skyrockets because of a miraculous event.

The town asked Disney for $100,000 for local charities rather than the $10,000 the studio offered.

Disney refused and shrugged off the rejection, saying the movie will be filmed elsewhere in Marin County and in Sacramento.

LOS ANGELES — The movie "Showgirls" is all the exposure Elizabeth Berkley needs.

The actress, who plays a stripper in the NC-17 movie, said she turned down an offer to pose nude for Playboy.

"Showgirls" is all the exposure Elizabeth Berkley needs.

"I felt with the movie out, this wasn't the right time because you can pay $7.50 and see enough of me in the movie," Berkley told the syndicated TV show "Extra" in an interview for broadcast Tuesday.

That doesn't mean she'll never pose for Playboy. "I never say never," she said.

"Showgirls," due out Sept. 22, is the first movie since "Henry & June" to get the NC-17 rating, equivalent to an X.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: In referring to the young boob who did not remove his baseball cap when he was a dinner guest, you said if he has graduated from college, it is safe to assume he has plenty besides hair under that baseball cap.

Van Buren

Not necessarily so! I have carried a thought I read years ago in The Denver Post: "Education doesn't guarantee wisdom."

This man is inconsiderate and cares for no one but himself. He may have been "educated," but he lacks wisdom. — EDWARD J. WOJTAS, SUN CITY CENTER, FLA.

DEAR MR. WOJTAS: Lest you think you are alone in your opinion, read on:

DEAR ABBY: You blew it. Just because a person has graduated from college does not ensure that he has more than hair under his cap.

Another gripe of mine is "cowboy" singers who keep their hats on when they are guests on a TV show.

A gentleman always removes his hat when entering a home, an office, a church, a public meeting or an elevator with ladies present.

DEAR ABBY: I usually agree with most of your answers, but you blew it big time in your answer to "An Ohio Mom" (her daughter's boyfriend came to the dinner table wearing his baseball cap). You told "Mom" to say nothing to the young man. Say what? Abby, I see you have mellowed in your somewhat older years.

The young man was in HER house, sitting at HER dinner table. She had every right to politely tell him that in her house, caps are not worn at the table or inside the house ... and he should please remove his. If he didn't want to comply, she should have shown him the front door — or the back porch, and told him to eat his dinner there!

Abby, a lot of young people read your column. Your advice is like a bible to them. Wearing a baseball cap in the house may be no big deal, but it's the principle of the thing. — BEEN THERE, DONE THAT IN SALUDA, S.C.

DEAR ABBY: I disagree with your reply to "An Ohio Mom," who was disturbed because her daughter's college-graduate boyfriend wore his cap in the house. A clod with a college degree is still a clod.

I'm a native Texan, and we Texans wear hats a lot of the time, but when folks enter my house, I invite them to "take off your hat and stay a while." Removing one's hat indoors is plain old-fashioned courtesy. Abby, NO ONE sits at my table with a hat on!

"Ohio Mom" has every right to tell him to remove his cap in the house, and she shouldn't expect her daughter to inform him of the rule — it's "Mom's" house, and she should do it. — GROVER E. SMITH, DALLAS

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in response to the mother in Ohio who thinks her daughter's boyfriend should not wear a baseball cap at the dinner table. I realize it's her house and she should be able to make the rules, but I wonder if she ever considered why he was wearing one in the first place.

We have all heard the term "bad hair day." Guys are allowed to have them too. I have a younger brother who struggles with his hair on a daily basis. To rid himself of the agony, he wears a baseball cap frequently. Not only would it make the young man feel uncomfortable to be asked to remove his hat by his girlfriend's mother, he would have to put up with the embarrassment of "hat hair."

To the mother in Ohio, leave well enough alone and bite your tongue. Be happy that your daughter has found a nice guy, and be thankful he's wearing a hat and not carrying a loaded weapon. — SOMEWHERE IN THE MIDWEST

AT WIT'S END

Speaking your mind can lead to court disaster

By Erma Bombeck

The most intriguing story I've read in a long time was about a legal battle between two young surfers. They met in a courtroom, where one was suing the other because he took his wave.

Flashback

Took his wave! It's comforting to know that in a world where lawyers are trying to untangle complex laws involving everything from custody of frozen embryos to selling parcels of real estate in outer space — justice will be served.

The case was thrown out of the court because there didn't seem to be a price you could put on the pain and suffering of watching some yahoo sail past you on a wave that had your name on it.

The closest I have ever come to a confrontation over the elements was a few years ago in Florida. I spread my towel on a beach chair by the pool and prepared to relax when an elderly man announced, "You are sitting in my chair."

"I'm sorry," I said. "I didn't realize you had to rent them."

"In Florida," he said wryly, "you pay for the air you breathe."

F. Lee Bailey, Johnnie Cochran, Alan Dershowitz and Robert Shapiro were busy, so I let it pass.

This has become one of the suingest generations in the history of law. Nothing is too ridiculous to get on the dockets. A fruit tree with branches that grow over a neighbor's yard — whom does the fruit belong to? (Get Perry Mason.)

It seems as though everyone is on a short fuse. Anyone who has raised children knows firsthand the annoyance that can grow into hand-to-hand combat. One demand that eventually led to violence between my two sons was, "Make him stop humming." I don't know why this was so objectionable, but they would actually watch the veins in each other's neck to prove the point. They hummed even when you couldn't hear anything.

Another was, "Make him stop looking at me." To stare was to die. I was so stupid I found myself finding validity in the accusation and threatening, "Stop looking at him or I'll send you to your room." Is this the reasoning of a mature woman?

Today it's a major risk to look at someone. If we stop at a traffic light and out of the corner of our eye we see a pickup truck with music blaring from it, I say to my husband, "Don't look! I'm begging you." We both sit there like portraits pretending the music isn't taking away our hearing. "You're looking." I mumble without moving my lips. "Stop it!"

"I am not looking," he insists.

Where will all this lead? It wouldn't surprise me if we were at the Grand Canyon and aimed our camera at the same time and the same place another tourist aimed his. When he turned around he would snarl, "This is my sunset, buddy. You got a problem with that?"

Film professor tracks barbecue

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — If there's barbecue being cooked, Joe R. Murphy knows where it is.

The 47-year-old video production and criticism course instructor at Appalachian State University has been on a two-year mission — boldly go where barbecue is made in the South and talk to the people who eat it. He has captured his findings on videotape.

Murphy's final product is "Slow Food: Fast Times." The film takes a broad and lighthearted view of the Southern tradition in which religion and politics get stirred in with the barbecue sauce, and a sandwich's worth is often measured by how many miles you're willing to drive to get it.

His hourlong documentary will premiere on public television's North Carolina Visions on Sept. 30, the Winston-Salem Journal reports. It is part of a nine-week series showing work by independent filmmakers. The series began on PBS Saturday night.

Murphy is not new at making video documentaries. He has made seven since 1992, and several focused on people's obsessions with such things as cars, shoes and hairdos.

"It's fascinating," he said. "Otherwise reasonable people place extreme significance on the absurd. We're so often judged by what shoes we're wearing."

In his latest work, he tackles his own obsession.

He said he has always loved barbecue, from the days when he was a 10-year-old living in Memphis, Tenn., when he and his friends would chase Elvis' car to a corner drugstore.

Driver dies

BERLIN — British driver Keith Odor died Monday of injuries suffered when his Nissan was hit by a car traveling 120 mph during the Super Touring Car race on the Avus course.

Rescuers took a half-hour to cut Odor out of the wreckage, and he was flown to University Clinic, where he died of head injuries early Monday.

It's over: Caps win TL crown

■ Shreveport defeats Midland, 5-1, Monday to win the Texas League Championship by a 4-1 margin over the Angels.

By Sean Wallace
Sports Writer

SHREVEPORT, La. — This time, the Angels came up short.

Desi Wilson smacked a key two-run double in the fifth inning to lead the Shreveport Captains to a 5-1 win Monday over Midland at Fair Grounds Field and the Texas League Championship four games to one.

The win gives the Captains their third Texas League title in six years, capturing the championship in 1990 and 1991, in its 10th-straight playoff appearance.

"This is the best feeling I've had, ever. You can't beat it," Shreveport shortstop Kurt Ehmann said, who went 1-for-4 with an RBI.

Midland center fielder Michael Wolff watched in the dugout as the Captains celebrated their first championship in four years, wondering if next year would be the Angels' year.

"I've never been in a championship in any league, so I want to take it in, see what it's like and get mine next year," said Wolff, who went 10-for-35 (.286) in the series. "This was a good experience for me and, hopefully, I can take this into next year, give me a little more drive and and win one."

Angels' catcher Jose Monzon got a single in the ninth but Shreveport closer Shawn Purdy got Tim Harkrider to fly out and struck out second baseman Alfredo Diaz to end the game as Shreveport teammates rushed out to the mound to begin the championship celebration.

"At the beginning of the season, people doubted us because of how young we were, but we came out and won the games, broke the records and won the title," Shreveport second baseman Jay Canizaro said.

The Angels came through with a spectacular performance in Game 5 of the Western Division finals to beat Wichita, but there were no miracles this time.

"We just got beat by the best team in the league," Angels manager Mario Mendoza said. "We had a good season just getting into the championship series. No one thought we would get there and getting to the championship was great."

Shreveport reliever Mark Peterson surrendered only one hit while striking out four in 2 2/3 innings to get the win.

The Angels jumped ahead for ony the second time in the series with a run in the second off Shreveport starter Chad Frontera. Luis Raven walked to open the inning then went to third on Wolff's single, then scored as Leon Glenn slapped an RBI single to left field which put the Angels head 1-0.

Willard Brown, who pitched spectacularly in Game 1 despite losing 1-0, lasted only 4 1/3 innings and gave up five hits to take the loss as the Captains answered with the tying run in the second.

Jason McFarlin and Jacob Cruz singled with one out in the fifth which chased Brown from the game and brought on reliever Bryan Harris. Wison greeted Harris with a long drive to deep left that bounced off of Raven's glove. Harris then walked Canizaro to load the bases when Darrel Akerfelds came in for the Angels and walked in a run which gave Shreveport a 3-1 lead.

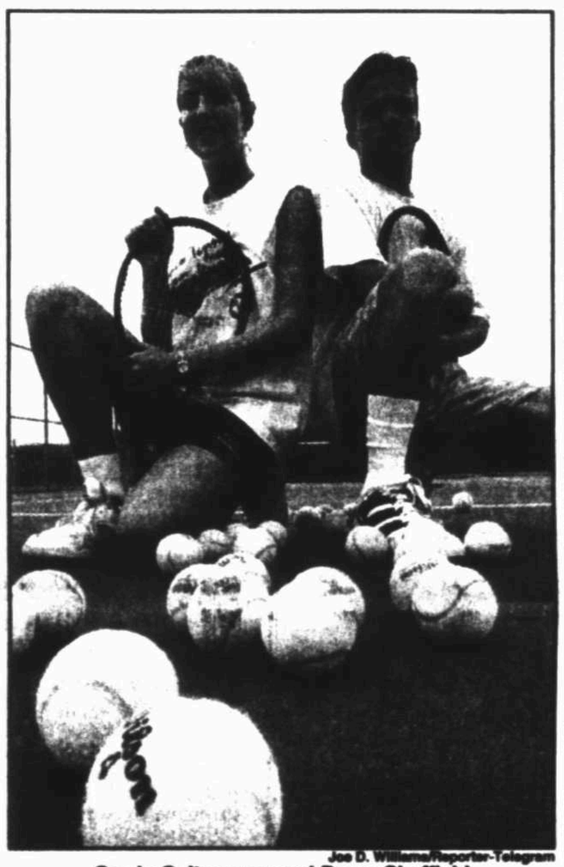

"That's the way its been the whole series," Mendoza said. "If we had gotten the key hit when we needed it, we might have been up 3--0 coming here."

Shreveport added two more runs in the sixth inning,

■ District 4-5A tennis race begins today with Midland High taking on Midland Lee, and both looking up to state power Abilene Cooper.

The Midland High and Midland Lee tennis teams are back in the swing of things.

The two teams will face each other to start District 4-5A Team Tennis competition today at 4 p.m. at Midland Lee.

Sitting on top of the district and state for that matter is Abilene Cooper. The two-time defending state champion will have the others trying to knock them off the top. Cooper's dominance might be as great as any high school team in any sport.

"They are better in tennis than (Odessa) Permian is in football," said Midland High tennis coach and one-time Permian Panther tennis player Tom Heiting. "Cooper's tennis team is so strong it is unbelievable. They could be ranked No. 1 in the United States every year."

Other schools that MHS and Lee will be chasing includes Abilene High, who won state in 1991, San Angelo, who has the district's best boys player and two time defending Region I champ in senior Charlie Roberson, and Odessa Permian. Kathrynn Scott from Cooper, daughter Cooper coach Leann Scott, Permian's Melissa Hodges and San Angelo's Courtney Choke are the top girls in 4-5A. The district is tough from top to bottom, just one reason it might be one of the top districts in the state.

"This year is the strongest, the district has been in 25 years," said Midland Lee tennis coach Steve Buck. "There are four teams who legitimately could be in the Top 10 (in state) and all seven teams could be in the Top 25."

Sanders news conference turns into an interrogation

■ Status of Deion Sanders' ankle isn't the news some wanted to hear from the $35 million man.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Deion dazzled Dallas on Monday, but did owner Jerry Jones pay $35 million for a part-time player who won't play hurt?

The question became an interrogation of Jones and Sanders at a Cowboys' celebration news conference.

Jones said his doctors told him there were 15 players on the Cowboys who had worse ankle problems than Sanders.

But he quickly added, "I want Deion to have his physical condition in the best shape. This is not a big deal. The ankle is a non-issue for me. His tolerance for pain is well known."

Sanders attacked any thought he should be rushed into action before he was ready.

"When I step on the field I want to be 110 percent," he said. "I'm not a full-speed. I can't cut. If I'm limping on the baseball field I know what it will be in football. I know what I can't do."

Sanders, who hurt the ankle in the spring when playing for the Cincinnati Reds, said he will undergo arthroscopic surgery as soon as the San Francisco Giants are eliminated from the playoff picture.

Holtz spinal surgery set during Irish football grind

By Kate Wiltrout
Associated Press Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz will have spinal surgery Tuesday and will be sidelined at least three weeks.

Defensive coordinator Bob Davie will coach the No. 24 Irish while Holtz is out.

"We kind of just all sat there in disbelief," said offensive guard Ryan Leahy, describing a team meeting Monday in which Holtz broke the news to his players.

Leahy said Holtz was calm but the team was shocked.

"It's pretty hard to take that," Leahy said. "Half the time you see your coaches as indestructible. But then you realize they're just human."

The operation will take place at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., where Holtz is expected to remain for about a week, said university physician Dr. James Moriarity. The 58-year-old coach could be out three to four weeks.

Holtz was told the condition required an immediate operation to avoid permanent spinal cord damage and possible paralysis.

"There's no reason for the operation not to be totally successful," Moriarity said at a news conference. "The only difference would be ... if all the damage already done to the spinal cord is reversible."

Moriarity said Holtz has what appears to be a bone growth that has compressed the spinal cord. Doctors believe the growth has been developing for some time and is not the result of an injury.

Surgeons will enlarge the diameter of the spinal canal so the cord will be able to fit.

Moriarity said Holtz has experienced weakness in the muscles of his legs and hands the past four weeks.

"On the morning of the Northwestern game (Sept. 2), he came to us for medical advice after he was unable to run onto the field with his team and climb the stairs to the locker room," Moriarity said.

Holtz could miss as many as three games against current Top 25 teams. Notre Dame faces Vanderbilt Saturday, then plays No. 15 Texas, No. 10 Ohio State and No. 18 Washington.

Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz
...out of the lineup for surgery

"In 26 years as a head coach, I've never missed a practice, let alone a game," Holtz said. "I've seen three different doctors, trying to find the least bit of encouragement to delay this, but they all say it has to be done now."

The loss of Holtz was another lowpoint in an already disappointing season for the Irish. They were upset by Northwestern 17-15 in their opener but recovered to beat Purdue 35-28 Saturday.

Though the team knew Holtz was uncomfortable — he told them not to slap him or bump him on the sidelines — Leahy said they were all surprised at the seriousness of his condition.

"He's a fighter, so I'm sure he'll probably get out of there as quick as he can," Leahy said.

Holtz is in his 10th season at Notre Dame and has been a head coach at the major college level for 26 years. The victory over Purdue was his 200th win, something achieved by only five other active coaches in Division I-A.

Davis, 40, is in his second season as Notre Dame's defensive coordinator after serving in that capacity at Texas A&M the previous five seasons.

■ Texas Tech is trying to cope with a loss in the final four seconds while the call goes out to quit throwing tortillas.

LUBBOCK (AP) — The Red Raiders were battling letdown Monday in wake of their last-minute, 24-23 loss to No. 4 Penn State.

Football coach Spike Dykes sounded subdued but predicted Texas Tech would bounce back even better to open at home Saturday against Missouri.

"I think it was obvious our guys were not pleased with playing close," Dykes said. "They weren't satisfied with losing. They didn't want any moral victories."

Tech turned three Penn State fumbles into touchdowns and led 20-7 before losing on a field goal kicked with 00:04 remaining.

Dykes said his players — three-touchdown underdogs to Penn State — had trouble maintaining long drives. But he also emphasized that a team's path to improvement must involve tough opponents.

"Doesn't help your record, and I understand losing is losing," he said. "But still you sort of get tired of apologizing for kids when they go give everything they've got and they come up short."

Saturday's 6:30 p.m. kickoff in Lubbock marks the first match between Texas Tech (0-1) and Missouri (1-1).

The Tigers blew a 10-point lead Saturday to wind up 17-10 behind Bowling Green State.

Dykes said his players should expect a huge offensive line and a swarming defense from Missouri.

"They'll be pumped and ready to go," he said of the Big Eight Conference opponent. "They'll be primed."

Texas Tech saw its key performances last week from sophomore tailback Byron Hanspard, who rushed 23 times for 85 yards, and from sophomore quarterback Zebbie Lethridge, 11-of-23 for 138 yards and two touchdowns.

Dykes praised his players for keeping cool in front of 96,034 fans — the biggest crowd to ever watch Tech. And he said he expects hard workouts this week.

"They were wounded. They were wounded Saturday, there's no question about that," he said. "But when it quits hurting to lose, well then you probably need to quit playing."

Also Monday, Tech Athletic Director Bob Bockrath made a plea for Red Raider fans to quit tossing tortillas onto the field.

Bockrath called the custom "inappropriate behavior" and said Southwest Conference officials will penalize Tech 15 yards if it happens more than once Saturday.

Green Bay holds off Bear rally

CHICAGO (AP) — Green Bay's offense carried the Packers in the first half Monday night. The defense came to the rescue in the second.

The Packers, behind a record 99-yard touchdown pass from Brett Favre to Robert Brooks, jumped to a 24-7 halftime lead and then held on for a 27-24 victory.

Chicago was on the Packers' 2-yard line, trailing 27-21 after a blocked punt and threatening to take the lead. But the Packers held and forced a field goal with nine minutes to go.

But with two minutes left, Reggie White forced a fumble and Wayne Simmons recovered with 1:59 to play and Green Bay (1-1) had beaten its oldest rival again.

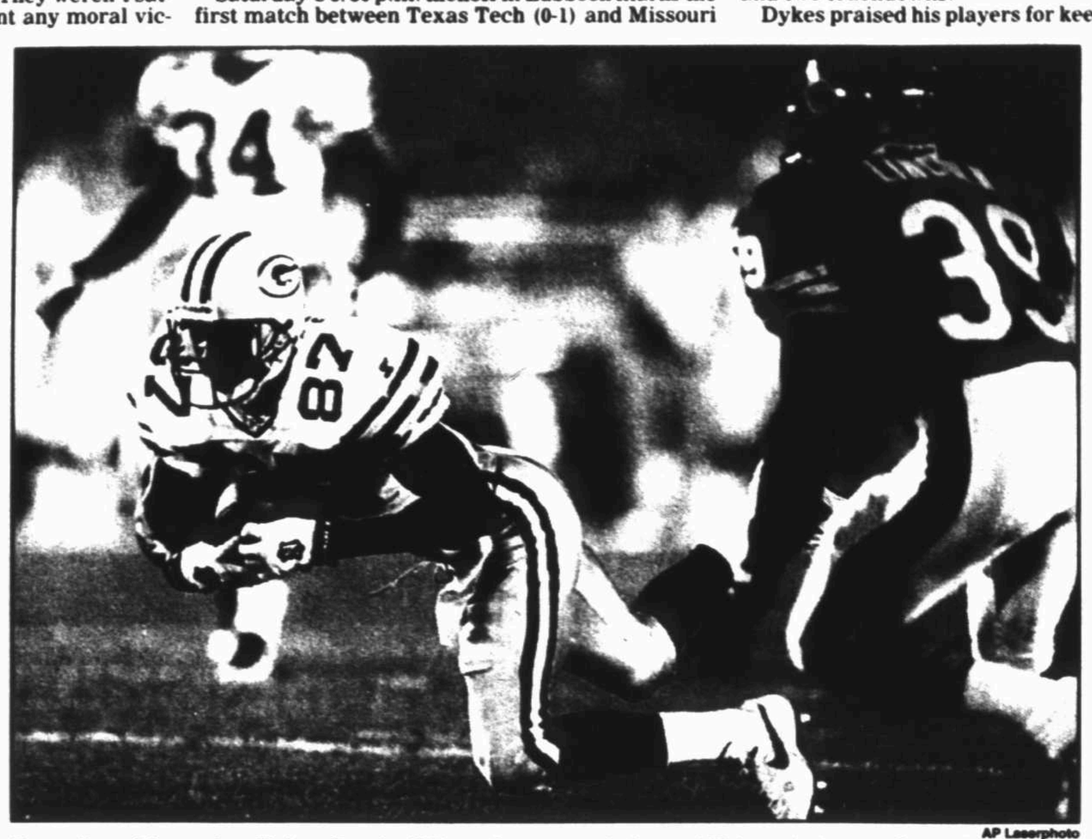

Green Bay, which won both games with the Bears last season by a combined 73-9 score, appeared on the way to another lopsided victory.

But a fourth-quarter interception by Donnell Woolford, who'd been burned on the 99-yarder, and a blocked punt by Anthony Marshall, giving the Bears the ball at the 2, put Chicago in position to win.

After the Packers twice stopped Rashaan Salaam from the 2, Erik Kramer lofted a pass in the corner to Jeff Graham, who caught the ball out of bounds.

Kevin Butler's 20-yard field goal then made it 27-24 with just more than nine minutes remaining.

Favre was ready to put the game away. He hit Mark Chmura for a 20-yarder and connected on a 13-yarder to Edgar Bennett. Dorsey Levens then carried 21 yards to the Bears' 12. But Green Bay couldn't get in the end zone and this time a fumbled snap on a field goal attempt gave the Bears another chance.

AP Laserphoto

Green Bay wide receiver Robert Brooks (87) catches a pass in front of Chicago's Jeremy Slagel (39). Brooks caught a 99-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Brett Favre during the Monday night game.

But White sacked Kramer and forced a fumble and Simmons recovered at the Bears' 22 and the Packers ran out the clock, sending Chicago (1-1) to its eighth straight Monday night loss — five at home.

The Bears got close in the second half when Jim Flanigan, a defensive tackle whose father played linebacker for the Packers from 1967-70, caught a 2-yard touchdown pass from Kramer in the closing seconds of the third quarter to make it 27-14.

Favre, who was intercepted three times last week, threw his first of the night. Woolford stepped in front of Brooks and returned 15 yards to the Packers 8. From there, Salaam rammed into the end zone to pull the Bears to 27-21 with 11:57 to go.

Green Bay scored on its first two possessions behind Favre's passing, Bennett's running and the play of Brooks to take a 14-0 lead.

On the third possession, just when it appeared Chicago had the Packers pinned deep, they stunned the Bears with the eighth 99-yard touchdown pass in NFL history and first since last season when San Diego's Stan Humphries connected with Tony Martin.

It came with 10:08 remaining in the first half and made it 21-0.

Favre, on a third-down and-10, dropped back into the end zone, pump faked and then found a streaking, wide-open Brooks. Brooks, meanwhile, had freed himself with an inside-outside fake on Woolford.

It was the eighth 99-yard pass in NFL history and the longest touchdown pass for the Packers in their 75-year history, surpassing a 96-yarder from Tobin Rote to Billy Grimes in 1950.

Favre hit Brooks with a 4-yarder on the opening drive to complete a 65-yard drive; he passed 15 yards to former Bear Anthony Morgan to make it 14-0 at the end of the first quarter.

Martinez all blanks in four-hit shutout

Associated Press

MONTREAL — Pedro Martinez threw a four-hitter and the Montreal Expos averted a four-game sweep with a 5-0 victory over the New York Mets on Monday night.

Martinez (13-8) allowed two singles in the first inning and another in the fourth. He retired 11 straight before Joe Orsulak singled with one out in the eighth.

The right-hander struck out six and walked three for his second complete game and shutout of the season.

Rondell White went 3-for-4 to lead Montreal's 13-hit attack. The victory was the Expos' seventh in their last 25 games at Olympic Stadium.

Rookies Shane Andrews and F.P. Santangelo each drove in two runs as Montreal handed rookie Bill Pulsipher (5-7) his first loss in seven starts.

Andrews, who had just two at-bats as a pinch-hitter since his last start on Aug. 24, singled to score White in the second.

White, who was running from second on the play, collided with Mets third baseman Butch Huskey who was lunging for the ball to his left. Huskey left the game with a sprained right wrist.

White hit a leadoff double in the three-run fourth. Andrews drove him in with a sacrifice fly before Santangelo and Mark Grudzielanek added RBI singles.

Reds 2, Marlins 1, 11 innings

Cinncinati won for only the fourth time in 12 games, snapping a four-game losing streak against the Marlins.

Rich Garces (0-2) gave up a one-out single to Hal Morris and a walk to Barry Larkin — the Marlins' 10th walk of the game — and then struck out Reggie Sanders before Walton singled to right.

Mike Jackson (6-1) pitched a perfect 11th to help the Reds improve to 10-2 in extra innings.

Starters Willie Banks and Mark Portugal took different paths to the same result: Banks gave up a lot of walks, Portugal a lot of hits, and both gave up just one run in six innings.

Banks walked five of the first nine batters he faced and threw a wild pitch that set up Jeff Branson's sacrifice fly in the second inning. The right-hander gave up two doubles and seven walks and threw only 50 strikes out of 111 pitches.

Banks recovered with a single and a double in his first two at-bats off Portugal. Greg Colbrunn singled to lead off the fifth and Banks pulled a double just inside third — his fifth hit in 21 at-bats — to tie it.

Pirates 7, Padres 5

PITTSBURGH — Al Martin had three hits and Pittsburgh took advantage of Andy Ashby's wildness to beat San Diego, ending a five-game losing streak.

Ashby (9-10) lost his fourth consecutive decision as the Padres lost their fourth straight game and continue to fade in the wild-card race. Ashby gave up six runs, four earned, on five hits. He walked five, hit a batter and threw two wild pitches that allowed runs to score.

The Padres pounded Pirates starter Denny Neagle for nine hits in the first four innings and scored four runs. Tony Gwynn, who had been 1-for-16 against Neagle, hit an RBI double in the first. Ken Caminiti broke a 1-for-22 streak with a run-scoring single in the three-run first.

Bip Roberts' error led to a first-inning run for Pittsburgh and Jacob Brumfield had an RBI single in the second. Martin's double keyed a third-inning rally and Ashby's wild pitch scored a run. Martin singled in a run to break a 4-4 tie in the fifth and another scored on a wild pitch.

Cardinals 13, Giants 4

ST. LOUIS — Ray Lankford and Brian Jordan each homered and drove in three runs and the St. Louis Cardinals beat the San Francisco Giants 13-4 Monday night.

The Giants entered the game 5 1/2 games out of first place in the National League West and a wild-card spot. They had won nine of 12. The Cardinals have won four in a row.

Ozzie Smith turned a double play in the fourth, tying the career record for shortstops of 1,553 held by Luis Aparacio.

John Mabry doubled and scored on a bloop single by David Bell. Danny Sheaffer singled to send Bell to second but Mark Petkovsek forced Bell at third on a fielder's choice.

After Bernard Gilkey walked to load the bases, Smith doubled in two runs. Smith and Gilkey scored on a single by Lankford, who extended his hitting streak to 12 games.

Brewington allowed six runs on six hits and two walks and one strikeout in his two innings.

Cubs 12, Dodgers 1

CHICAGO — Kevin Foster threw a five-hitter over seven innings and also had a two-run double and a run-scoring single to lead Chicago to a victory over Los Angeles, ending the Dodgers' three-game winning streak.

Mark Grace hit three doubles, increasing his National League-leading total to 46, to help snap the Cubs' four-game losing streak.

The 26-year-old right-hander walked one and struck out four.

Ismael Valdes (11-11) gave up seven hits over 3 1-3 innings, walking two and striking out four, in his fourth straight loss.

The Dodgers entered the game tied for first with Colorado for first place in the National League West.

With two out in the first, Grace doubled and scored on Sammy Sosa's single.

Luis Gonzalez walked to lead off the fourth, advanced on Scott Servais' single and scored when Rey Sanchez bounced a double over third baseman Tim Wallach to make it 2-0. Foster, a .235 hitter entering the game, then singled, scoring Servais and Sanchez. One out later, Todd Haney greeted Pedro Astacio with a double, scoring Foster to put the Cubs ahead 5-0.

Rockies 5, Braves 4

DENVER — Andres Galaragga doubled with one out in the 12th inning to give Colorado a victory over Atlanta and move the Rockies into sole possession of first place in the NL West.

Hickerson (3-3) pitched the final two innings as the Rockies beat the Braves for the first time at Coors Field, and for only the second time in Denver. Atlanta leads the series at Colorado 15-2.

Colorado a game ahead of Los Angeles in the NL West after the Dodgers were beaten 12-1 by Chicago. The Braves failed to clinch at least a share of the NL East title and still have a magic number of two to clinch a four.

McDowell keeps Yankees in playoff contention

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Jack McDowell pitched a four-hitter for his second shutout of the season Monday night, beating the Cleveland Indians for the third time in as many tries as the New York Yankees won 4-0.

The Yankees have won five straight and 11 of 13, putting themselves squarely in contention for the AL wild-card spot. They started the night trailing wild-card leader Seattle by a half-game; the Mariners played host to Minnesota later.

The Indians, blanked for just the third time this year, saw their 14-game home winning streak end. It was the longest home winning streak in the AL this year.

McDowell (14-10) struck out eight and walked four in his eighth complete game of the year. In his last eight starts, he is 6-2 with a 1.71 ERA, five complete games and two shutouts.

He has had a decision in each of his last 21 starts, including his 3-0 mark against the Indians.

Dennis Martinez (10-5) pitched well but dropped to 2-14 lifetime against the Yankees. He gave up three runs and five hits in seven innings, walking three and striking out two. He last beat New York in 1982 when he was with Baltimore.

The Yankees scored a run in the third on Bernie Williams' RBI single. They added two in the sixth on a double by Williams, an RBI single by Darryl Strawberry, a single by Dion James and Don Mattingly's sacrifice fly, which was caught by Kenny Lofton racing toward the fence in center.

Gerald Williams doubled off Paul Assenmacher and eventually scored on a sacrifice fly by Tony Fernandez in the ninth.

The Indians' best scoring chance came in the fifth, when a wild pitch by McDowell advanced runners to second and third with two outs. Omar Vizquel flied to center, ending the threat.

Tigers 3, Blue Jays 2

TORONTO — Travis Fryman led off the 10th inning with a homer to give Detroit a victory over Toronto, its third straight win after losing the opener of the four-game series.

Fryman hit a 2-2 pitch from Jimmy Rogers (2-4) into the first row of seats in left, making a winner of Mike Christopher (3-0).

Christopher pitched a scoreless eighth and ninth, then allowed a leadoff double in the 10th to pinch-hitter Shawn Green. Brian Bohanon came on and retired three straight hitters, the last two on strikeouts, for his first career save.

Toronto's Joe Carter led off the sixth with his second homer of the game to tie it 2-2. It was his 34th career multi-homer game and fourth this year.

He led off the second with his 23rd homer of the season to cut Detroit's lead to 2-1.

Fryman and Cecil Fielder hit consecutive doubles with two outs in the first for Detroit. Steve Rodriguez hit a two-out double and scored on John Flaherty's single in the second to make it 2-0.

Toronto starter Paul Menhart went five innings and gave up two runs and five hits, walking three and striking out five. He left the game because he had a migraine headache and experienced blurred vision when warming up before the sixth.

Menhart was one of 10 rookies — five per team — in the starting lineups Monday night in a game between the teams with the two worst records in the AL East.

Orioles 10, Red Sox 7

BALTIMORE — Harold Baines homered in a five-run eighth inning, and Baltimore extended Boston's losing streak to a season-high four games with a 10-7 comeback victory.

Mike Greenwell hit two homers and Jose Canseco and Mo Vaughn also homered for the Red Sox, who had taken a 7-5 lead in the top of the eighth.

Bret Barberie reached on an error and Curtis Goodwin hit an RBI double to get the Orioles within a run. Bobby Bonilla tied it with a single and Cal Ripken gave Baltimore the lead with a sacrifice fly before Baines hit a two-run homer off Stan Belinda.

Mark Lee (2-0) got the win and Doug Jones worked the ninth for this 22nd save.

Roger Clemens, bidding to win his fifth straight start, walked seven and allowed six hits in 5-plus innings. The seven walks tied his career high, a feat he's done four times, the last time July 18, 1989.

Clemens was in position to take his first loss since Aug. 2 and Baltimore starter Mike Mussina was poised to become the majors' first 17-game winner until Boston overcame a 5-4 deficit with three runs in the eighth.

With one out, Canseco hit his 24th homer of the year and 300th of his career to tie it. Greenwell followed by driving a 1-0 pitch from Jesse Orosco into the center-field seats, his first two-homer game of the season and fifth of his career.

A run-scoring single by Luis Alicea made it 7-5.

Boston went up 2-0 in the first. John Valentin singled and Vaughn drove Mussina's next pitch an estimated 441 feet for his second homer in two games and 35th of the year.

Baltimore tied it in the third, taking advantage of three walks to score their first runs off Clemens this season in 17 innings. Goodwin singled in a run and Ripken drew a two-out, bases-loaded walk.

Greenwell led off the fourth with his 11th homer, but Baltimore took a 4-3 lead in its half of the inning. After Clemens issued two two-out walks, Brady Anderson blooped an RBI single to center that Troy O'Leary misplayed, allowing another run to score.

The Red Sox pulled even in the fifth when Canseco hit a two-out double and scored on a single by Greenwell. Baltimore went ahead 5-4 with an unearned run in the sixth.

Carpenter gets ace at Hogan

The assistant golf professional at Green Tree Country Club, hit a 5-iron on the 185-yard hole. The shot was witnessed by Derek Edwards, Jason Hewett and Tim McWhirter, who had a hole-in-one at Green Tree on Sunday.

Yankees go assistless

CLEVELAND (AP) — The New York Yankees did not record an assist in their 4-0 victory over the Cleveland Indians on Monday night, the fourth time that has happened in major league history and the second time it involved these teams.

Jack McDowell, who threw a four-hitter, had eight strikeouts. In addition, there were two grounders to first baseman Don Mattingly, who made the plays unassisted, and 17 flies, pop-ups and line outs.

The last time it happened, the only time in NL history, was when the New York Mets did it against Philadelphia on June 25, 1989.

The St. Louis Browns were the first team to do it, on Aug. 8, 1943, in the second game of a doubleheader against Cleveland. The Indians went without an assist on July 4, 1945, in the first game of a doubleheader against the Yankees.

ROAD?

Workmen complete the installation of a big sign proudly announcing the almost completed, new location for Midland Muffler and Brake at 3200 W. Front, corner of Front and Bankhead Highway.

Why did the chicken cross the road? Well, there are hundreds of answers to that age-old riddle, but Midland Muffler and Brake is crossing the road and using its nest egg to build a brand new facility in order to offer expanded service.

Midland Muffler plans to start business in its new location at the corner of Front St. and Bankhead Hwy. (directly across the street from the current 3201 W. Front address) on Monday, October 2. Owner Mike Murray's pride and joy will include eight work bays (versus the current four) and six hydraulic lifts.

"This has been a goal of mine since I bought the business five years ago. I've been fortunate to have a consistently growing client base, which allows me to go ahead with my plans to offer expanded service," said Murray.

Front-end specialist Tim Smith said, "We've been leasing our current location. The new building will be better designed for our needs."

The most notable part of the new service will be the shop's ability to work on motorhomes and industrial (two- and three-ton) vehicles. The new 18' ceiling will accomodate the larger vehicles on lifts. The mechanics will be able to put the vehicles on the rack for a thorough visual inspection of the exhaust system, brake pads or shoes, and hydraulic brakes. They can then make necessary brake or exhaust system repairs.

Murray said Midland Muffler will be one of only two businesses in town which offer complete brake and exhaust service for these vehicles. And, they'll complete their facility just in time for fall, which is one of the best times to do routine maintenance on motorhomes.

With eight new bays Murray's team will be able to work even more efficiently on all types of vehicles. More space will mean less down time for customers.

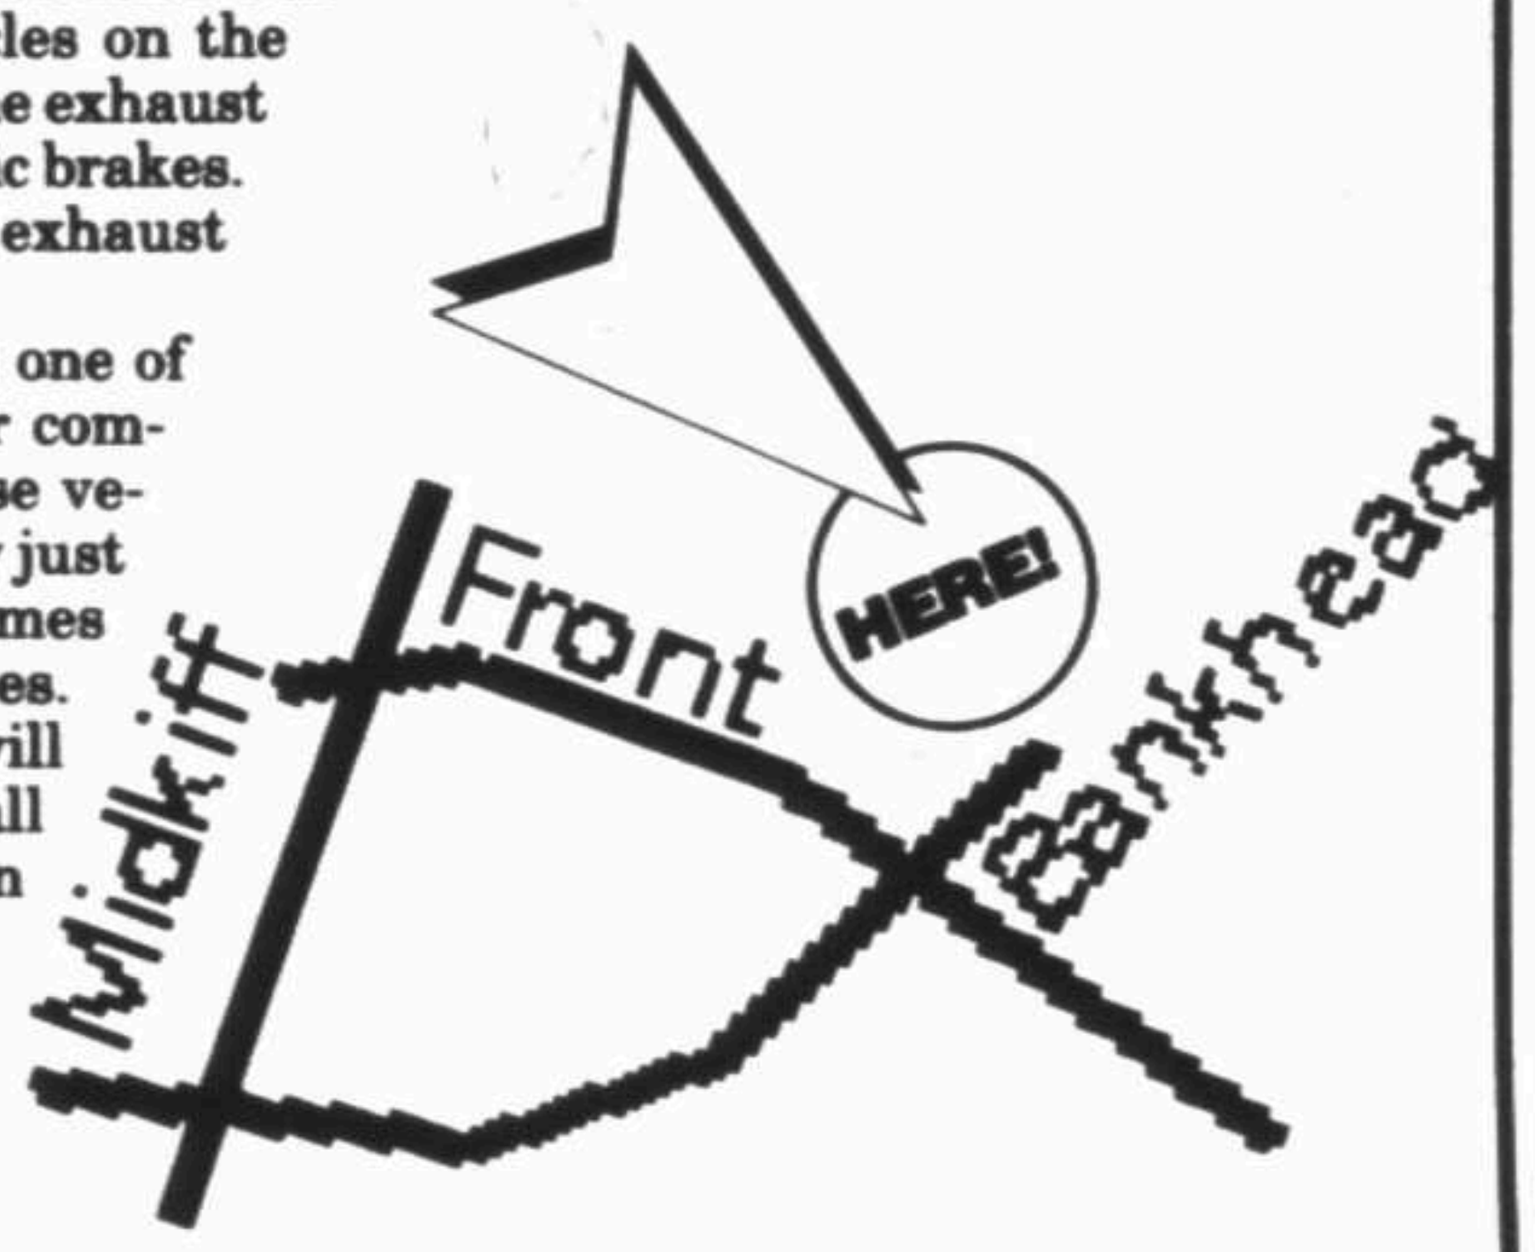

In addition, Rick Butler has joined the Midland Muffler team as a computer alignment technician. Butler has been a mechanic for seven years with expertise in alignments.

With all the additions, the shop is not changing several tried and true things. They'll continue to offer free estimates and a lifetime guarantee on all brake and exhaust parts.

The quality parts they use include Walker exhaust products, Raybestos brake equipment, and Moog suspension and linkage parts.

Murray won't have to upgrade any high-tech computer equipment when he makes his move. He is already using a sophisticated laser-sensor alignment computer.

WHO KNOWS, BUT MIDLAND MUFFLER IS CROSSING TO EXPAND SERVICES

Midland Muffler and Brake offers complete brake service and alignment on all domestic and foreign models. They also service shocks and mufflers. Currently located at 3201 W. Front (since 1983), store hours are 7:30 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday and 7:30 a.m. to noon Saturday. The phone number is 699-7924.

You can run, but you can not hide from the Internal Revenue Service

Once an Internal Revenue Service office manager and analyst, Charles Frost turned his knowledge of the system to new use by founding Federal Tax Consultants.

The company's local associate, William F. Judd, C.P.A. described the company's mission as "to help troubled taxpayers weather the storm."

Frost and Judd have an intimate knowledge of the issues facing taxpayers. In particular, their knowledge of the system can benefit IRS non-filers and non-payers to reenter the tax system with as little pain as possible.

"During 1994 alone, FTC saved their clients more than one million dollars," Judd said.

The IRS claims its new programs will help delinquent taxpayers get back into the IRS computer systems and eventually back into compliance with the tax laws. This is true, and it has always been true, according to Frost.

Still, there are two interests involved: that of the IRS and that of the taxpayer.

The IRS wants the delinquent taxpayers to file and pay taxes. It is the IRS mission to levy and collect as much tax as possible. "The IRS must protect the government's interest, not the taxpayer's interest. Delinquent taxpayers must understand this key point," Frost explained.

Bill Judd, C.P.A. associate of Federal Tax Consultants tells troubled taxpayers "Knowledge is Power," especially when it's time to deal with the Internal Revenue Service. Delinquent taxpayers can schedule a consultation by calling Judd at 682-7004.

For this reason, when a person or business is delinquent, Frost recommends that they consult a tax professional, preferably a professional who concentrates in IRS tax resolution matters. Federal Tax Consultants can use their knowledge to protect the interest of the taxpayer.

Filing a delinquent tax return is only the start of the resolution method. For this reason, FTC representatives are trained in complex IRS collection resolution methods. Oftentimes, taxpayers face a 10-year challenge of paying tax, penalty and interest.

Many times the IRS asks for another extension of time on its right to collect. This is called a Collection Status Extension Waiver.

Delinquent taxpayers have rights afforded them by the Taxpayers Bill of Rights. If a taxpayer knows his rights but cannot communicate with the IRS, then problems will surely arise. FTC has saved its clients thousands of dollars by invoking the Taxpayer Bill of Rights or through the complex Offer in Compromise program.

When it comes to working out tax problems with the IRS, FTC is a valuable partner. Complex tax and legal tax matters require special handling. Delinquent taxpayers may call FTC for a free consultation. Representation is fee based.

Federal Tax Consultants is a tax consulting firm founded in Amarillo on 1988 by Charles Frost. Local FTC representative Bill Judd can be contacted at 682-7004 or 1-800-382-6337. The office is open all year to assist with tax matters.

Midland is home to a Texas classic: Jib's

When reviewers begin searching for the restaurant most deserving of the title "The Quintessential Texas Restaurant" there's a bright little spot in Midland that ought to have it hands down, Jib's Family Dining at 3316 W. Illinois.

Jib's has been open for four months now and customers claim their bragging isn't just a bunch of Texas tall tales when they say Jib's offers the best Texas style food in a family atmosphere. Just one thing, they say, isn't Texas size; well, that can come later.

Have you ever ordered a good ol' Texas staple like steak fingers or chicken fried steak, only to get something smothered in a sauce that looks like it was imported not just from New York City, but probably all the way from France? Well, you won't get that at Jib's. Owner Joe Harper knows the real Texas recipe for his fare. His steak fingers are specially cut, all day long, to ensure the greatest tenderness. Then they hand bread them and serve 'em up hot with the same delicious gravy that they ladle on their chicken fried steak.

There're two more Texas staples which Jib's does up right: Burgers and Chili Dogs. Customers order the burgers with chili, cheese, bacon, and green chili peppers. Some independent Texans concoct their own burger combinations and that's just fine at Jib's. "We sell jillions of jalapeno burgers, and it's not even on the menu," Harper explained.

The side order list belies Jib's devotion to Texas foods. Can't you taste them now: spicy fries, Texas toast, okra, stuffed jalapenos, onion rings and Blue Bell ice cream?

Add BLT, chili pie and charbroiled chicken breast options and Jib's has about anything one would expect from a real Texas restaurant.

These have been the heart of West Texas cooking for years, Harper said; however, Texans of the 1990's have been developing a taste for some other foods, also. For that reason he rounds out his menu with deli sandwiches, ranging from a "to die for" Krab Melt to the Jib's Reuben.

Jib's should be a shoo-in for the title with that alone, but the reviewers would be remiss not to notice Jib's atmosphere. Texas is a family kind of place and so is Jib's. Families gather there to share the events of the day and when a little one dumps his drink (for the second time in five minutes), no sweat. Harper thinks the kiddos are worth it.

The steak fingers at Jib's are hand cut and breaded throughout the day to insure the ultimate in freshness.

To show that, he offers kiddie meals with a main course, fries, drink and ice cream or cookie for $2.75.

That brings up one really interesting thing about Jib's. While they serve Texas food in Texas size portions and have the friendliest, family atmosphere around, they don't ring up Texas size tickets.

"There are not that many places a person can go and eat with a five dollar bill," Harper said.

A regular chicken fried steak with salad, fries, Texas toast and all the cream gravy you can handle will only lighten your wallet by $4.95.

A quarter pound burger with all the trimmings is only $2.50.

You don't want to read a complete price list, but you get the idea. Jib's value just can't be beat and you don't need to leave a tip.

When the reviewers do show up to bestow the well deserved honors on Jib's the lines may become Texas size, so mosey on in this week and get a sneak preview.

Jib's, located at 3316 W. Illinois, is open from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday. The restaurant specializes in steak fingers and chicken fried steak. The phone number for carry out orders is 699-3008.

Armstrong: a good option for budget-conscious consumers

With Texas summers getting hotter, effective central air conditioning is increasingly a priority. If an air conditioner goes out while the temperature outside goes up, the average person is left feeling a little hot under the collar.

That's where Armstrong heating and air conditioning systems can help out. Armstrong's efficient heating/cooling systems are less expensive than many other national brands - a big plus to budget-minded consumers.

"Customers can buy a high-efficiency Armstrong system at a reasonable price," said Derek Rotan of D & D Plumbing (an Armstrong dealer).

Outstanding heating and air-conditioning manufacturer Lennox International Inc. is Armstrong's parent company.

Armstrong was one of the first companies in the heating and air conditioning industry to attain ISO 9001 certification—a world standard developed to assure that quality processes and procedures are in place. The certification procedure involves meticulous examination of Armstrong's product design and development, production, installation and service.

As fall approaches (without the extreme heat of summer or cold of winter as motivation for Midlanders to replace worn-out equipment), D & D is offering special prices on their complete inventory of products, including Armstrong systems.

Great service is key to D & D plumbing's success

There's nothing more frustrating than having a pipe break and flood your home, ruining carpet and other interiors, your air conditioner going out when it's 100 degrees outside, or your heater going out just when Midland gets its big snow each year. Inefficient service can add to the frustration, especially if you've called for help and you keep waiting for someone to show up.

D & D Plumbing's number-one priority is quick, efficient service. They do their best to stay on schedule and keep appointments on time.

Q: Why are so many plumbers also heating and cooling system experts?

A: When air conditioning was first introduced in Midland, most people had evaporative cooling systems, which used water and air to cool homes. If there was a problem with the cooler, plumbers were called to work on it. When central heating and cooling because more popular, it was natural for plumbers to service and sell these systems as well.

If they do get behind, they will try to let customers know. They also are available around-the-clock for emergency service.

Owners David and Dwain Rotan, and employees Derek Rotan and Randy Hall are licensed plumbers and certified air conditioning technicians. "Each of us has a good deal of experience in all aspects of heating and air conditioning maintenance, plumbing repairs, and drain cleaning," said David Rotan.

In fact, D & D Plumbing is essentially a one-stop, service shop. In one service call, they could fix a leaky faucet, a commode that runs all day, a clogged drain, a blocked septic line, a faulty water heater, a gas leak, or do maintenance on your heating and air conditioning system.

When you call for that repair, the friendly voice you're likely to hear is that of Willie Rankin, the newest addition to the D & D Plumbing team. She is the part-time receptionist and bookkeeper.

From the voice you first hear on the phone to the finished repair or installation, D & D Plumbing's main goal is a happy, satisfied customer.

D & D Plumbing does plumbing service and installation as well as all types of heating and air conditioning units. They are authorized dealers for Armstrong and Trane. The phone number is 687-1011.

(From 1C)

The Bulldogs come into a season after three consecutive fifth place finishes in district. The Bulldogs, 11-8 last season, lost what Heiting calls his best senior class since coming to Midland High four years ago. The 1994 team placed first or second in five of six tournaments entered. All players that stayed under Heiting for three years earned earn a tennis scholarship in schools around the nation. Replacing that class will be tough, but Heiting says he has the talent to do that.

"We lost incredible talent," said Heiting. "I have seen some players emerge this year as leaders. All the players are accomplished and play all year long. They just need to get into the flow of school tennis. It is a different ball game than summer tennis or individual competition."

On the boys side, a group high on talent and low on team experience will hit the courts. Juniors Bryan Sheffield, Nathan Lawrence and Douglas Scharbauer, a transfer from Midland Trinity, are the names to look out for right away. Others like lone senior Blade Van Stavern, junior Terrell McDonald and sophomores Spencer Ritchie, Douglas Prieto, Bobby Jones, Kevin Hinshaw and David Harshbarger are also qualified and expected to contribute to the teams' hope for a spot with the district's elite.

"The top six boys are all state ranked," said Heiting, who played his college tennis at Midland College, where he was a member of the 1989 national title team, and the University of Iowa. "All of them have tons of talent. I'm just trying to give them mental aspects to harness that talent and use it better to suit their game styles. You watch them hit and you think they are world-beaters."

The girls have age coming back and should be able to make some noise. Seniors Carrie Geltemeyer and Kallie Woods, who are both in the super championship division in Texas, lead a team Heiting says has come miles in just a few years.

"My girls have come a long way," said Heiting. "I've come from slim pickings to people who are taking it seriously and keep improving."

Juniors Brianne Brewington, Hilary Essex, Katherine Geib, Marci Holland and Jessica Marshall and sophomore April Robinson fill out the rest of the team.

The Bulldogs are 3-3 going into district play.

Midland Lee

Coach Buck is going into district with some of the best players he has had in his five years at Lee. The one problem is that the ability comes from players not long on experience. So Buck resorted to a long preseason schedule to season his players.

Buck, a former coach at Abilene High, Abilene Cooper (where he won a state title in 1982) and the University of North Texas, loaded the team with 10 non-district matches that included a trip to El Paso. The 9-1 record includes wins over district champs El Paso Austin and El Paso Hanks. Buck also feels the wins gave Lee, who went 9-8 last season, momentum going into district play.

"Knowing we can win in any district in Texas will give us confidence that we can play in this district," said Buck. "I knew we had to get experience. I'm thankful we have a strong team that can stay on the court. We can beat 90 percent of the teams in the state."

Lee will bring back four seniors and three of those are on the boys side. The No. 1 player for the Rebels will be junior Conner Austin. Austin will be followed by three seniors, Glen Abrams, Josh Gahr and Kerwin Tolentino. Juniors Frank Ruda and Alex Clinton and sophomore Wes Hunt make up the rest of the Lee lineup.

"I think our guys are really strong this year," said Buck. "Conner (Austin) is a fighter and extremely tough."

The girls are where the youth really shows its potential. Only one senior, Emily Godbold, will start the season for the Lady Rebels while three sophomores will see time. Sophomores Laurie Haas and Tracy Broach will start and No. 1 and No. 3 for Lee and make up the top doubles team for the girls. Juniors Abby Coatney, Deborah Ho and Krystal Barnett should also see time in the top six.

"This year we have a lot of talent and depth," said Buck. "Laurie (Haas) is a strong sophomore. She has found out that playing No. 1 is not always fun, but I think she can handle it."

This year Lee, however, will have to depend on team balance and wins on both sides of the draw to win matches in district play. Having depth on both sides could help Lee contend for the first time since 1992 when the Rebels finished third.

NOTES: Team tennis has a format where the boys and girls play six singles and three doubles matches each. The winner is the first team to to win 10 matches. A tie will be broken by the team who has won the most sets... MHS has only lost once to Lee in team teams, that coming in Heiting's first year in 1992. This is Heiting's fourth season with the Bulldogs...

Prices steady

NEW YORK — Crude oil prices stayed mostly steady Monday, with many market players content to sit out the day's trading ahead of a supply report due Tuesday.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in October finished 3 cents per barrel higher at $18.47 on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The American Petroleum Institute will release its inventory report after trading ends on Tuesday. Many traders are watching to see whether it will show a narrowing in crude supplies, which have been somewhat lean in recent weeks, causing crude prices to rise.

Natural gas prices for delivery in October rose 1.3 cents to $1.655 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Desk & Derrick Club

The Midland Desk and Derrick Club will meet Thursday at the Petroleum Club. The meeting will begin with social hour at 6 p.m., followed by dinner at 6:30 p.m.

Guest speaker will be George Jansen, owner of Jansen Safety Consultants, who will discuss the Occupational Safety and Health Agency.

Reservations can be made by calling 682-5600.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar turned mixed against major currencies Monday without fresh economic data or other stimuli to guide it.

Analysts said fears of central bank intervention were a cloud over the market, also inhibiting serious movement.

In late New York trading, the dollar rose to 99.98 yen, up from 99.70 yen Friday, but never hit 100 yen. Also in New York, the dollar fell to 1.4729 German marks, down from 1.4785 marks late Friday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday: 1.2085 Swiss francs, down from 1.2160; 5.0800 French francs, down from 5.0825; 1,616 Italian lire, up from 1,613; and 1.3439 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3367.

The dollar rose against the British pound, with sterling quoted at $1.5485, down from $1.5505.

Markets higher

NEW YORK — The stock market rose in sluggish trading Monday with little economic or other news to guide investors.

Analysts said many market players were reluctant to make significant commitments ahead of data scheduled for release later this week on August inflation, retail sales and industrial production.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 298.92 million shares vs. 317.27 million in the previous session.

The Dow started the day higher, moved up about 20 points pulling other indexes with it, then settled into a relatively narrow range by midafternoon.

Among broader market indicators, the NYSE's composite index rose 0.50 to 307.89. The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 1.23 to 573.91. The Nasdaq composite index rose 6.53 to 1,066.56.

No recession seen by top economists

By John D. McClain
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The economy has reached the long-discussed "soft landing," with no recession in sight, top analysts believe.

The consensus of the latest surveys by the National Association of Business Economists and the newsletter Blue Chip Economic Indicators projects the economy growing 2.9 percent this year and 2.4 percent in 1996.

"Out of 49 respondents, only one anticipates that a recession will begin this year," the business economists said in releasing their survey results Monday. "Three more expect the next recession to begin sometime in 1996."

None of the 52 Blue Chip forecasters saw a recession coming in either year.

The term soft landing often is used to describe an economy slowing sufficiently to keep inflation in check without stalling into a recession.

That was the Federal Reserve's goal as it boosted short-term interest rates seven times in the 15 months ended last February.

But after the economy slowed almost to a stop last spring, and without any serious inflation pressures in sight, the central bank notched rates down slightly in July.

A third group, the Shadow Open Market Committee, a panel of economists that closely follows Federal Reserve policies, said a recession could come next year unless there is another cut in interest rates.

"The Fed has remained too tight, too long," said Allen Meltzer of Carnegie-Mellon University. He said a prime measure of the money supply is growing at a 4.5 percent annual rate, and should be expanding at 6 percent.

The business economists conducted their survey in August. The results were released at the association's annual meeting in San Francisco and made available here. The Blue Chip poll of 52 forecasters was taken earlier this month.

The two polls produced identical readings on inflation — 3 percent this year and 3.2 percent in 1996. The Consumer Price Index rose 2.7 percent in 1994.

They also showed similar feelings about unemployment prospects.

Midlander travels hard road to success

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Kang Yoo Chang is only 31 but he has already lived life in the pits of hell and on the mountain top.

In 1979, he was a teenage prisoner in a Khmer Rouge slave camp. Enduring hunger, torture, illness and threat of death daily, his only ambition was to stay alive another day. In his wildest dreams, he could not have conceived then, that he would one day be living the American dream in Midland, Texas — but he is.

Today, Chang is a successful Midland businessman, with his own newly organized moving company, Acme Movers. He has a deep appreciation for all things American and a success story to tell that might well be the subject for a book, if it were not a story so often repeated of penniless Asians who come to America and make good in business, usually without a dime of capital or even a command of the language.

For Chang, who is Chinese, his journey to America began in 1975. That was the year the Khmer Rouge, a more backward and violent version of the Viet Cong, came down from the hills of Cambodia, sealed off the borders and began to systematically "cleanse" the population of intellectuals so that dictator Pol Pot could rebuild a socialist state free of western thinking. Pol Pot considered teachers, doctors, store clerks, or even anyone who wore glasses as an intellectual, and his bandit army would snatch innocent passer-by off the street and send them off for execution. It was a socialist reign of terror not unlike Hitler's Nazi Germany.

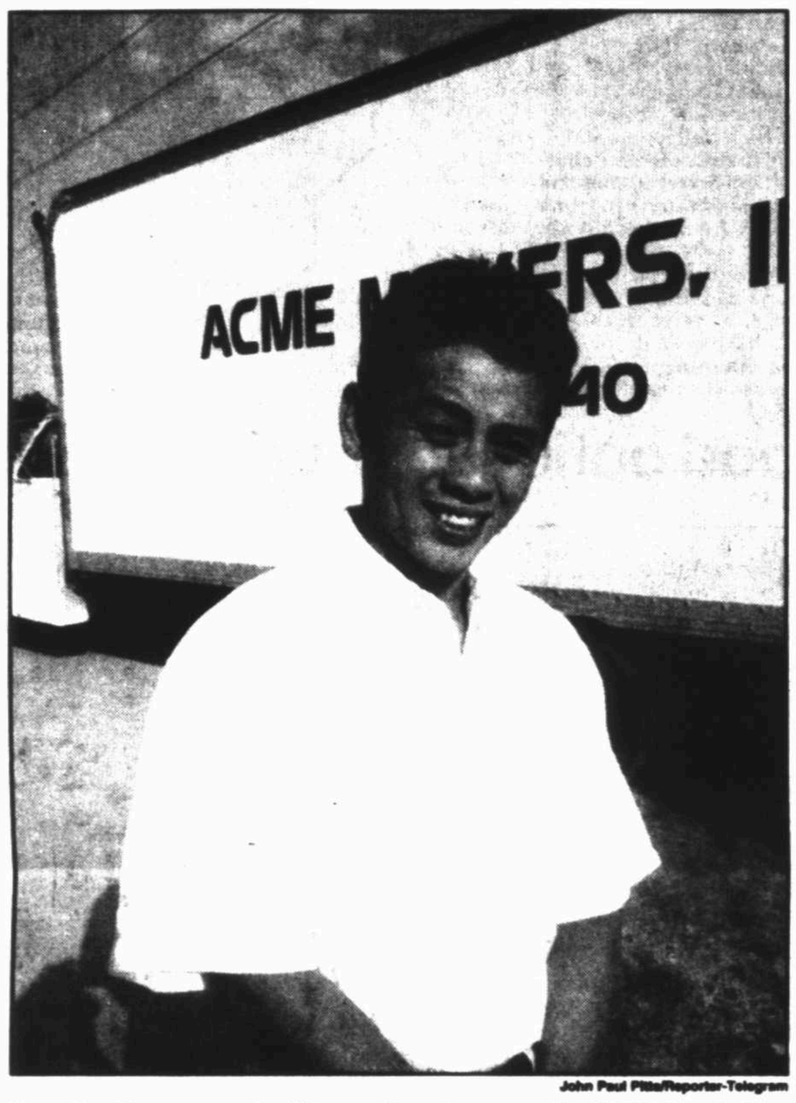

Cities were shut down and families driven into the countryside to fend for themselves in a desperately poor country. There was no one to grow food and no one to sell food. One evening Chang, 13 at the time, was caught by Khmer Rouge soldiers climbing a tree to steal a coconut to help feed his family.

He was about to be executed on the spot when his father intervened and pleaded for his life. "Somehow, the soldier decided to let me live, but sent me and father to work camp. I don't know why we not killed. Sometime you run into Khmer Rouge who is a little bit human, like us, but 99 percent of time you are killed and your head was added to a mountain of skulls," Chang explained in slightly broken English.

For the next two years Chang labored 12 hours a day, seven days a week, with only a subsistence diet of rice. Weak and worn out, with no medicine, he said the slightest illness often resulted in death. His father, who had intervened for him, soon died in prison. "Prisoners were often tortured and beaten, until they dropped. I think they learn 80 percent of brutality from Chinese Communists."

Eventually Chang was allowed to join the Cambodian army and while on patrol one day, he made his escape to Thailand and freedom.

"In the jungle you don't know which way is which. I climbed the tree and saw Thailand, and knew which way to run. If I had been caught I would have been shot. They would shoot you and leave you to die a slow death."

John Paul Pitts/Reporter-Telegram

Kang Yoo Chang poses beside a used moving van, a Ford F-700 diesel with a 24 foot container, which he purchased from Ryder Trucks for $14,700.

Safe in Bangkok, Chang learned from a gem dealer and friend of the family, that his mother, two brothers and two sisters had also escaped from Cambodia through the jungles. Two brothers were living in Paris, but his mother and the rest of the family had gone to America as Red Cross refugees and were living in Midland.

In 1981, through the efforts of the Red Cross and a Midland Church, the 16-year-old was able to join his family in Midland. "I went to high school, but I could not speak English. I learned nothing, they just passed me on," said Chang, who explained that most of the years after high school were spent as a busboy and cook at a variety of Midland fast food restaurants. He thought about saving his money and opening a restaurant, but decided against it because: "It takes too much help, and the work never ends."

Weary of restaurants, he became a laborer for a number of moving companies. Then this year, with a loan from a Midland businessman, he was able to buy his own moving van, which he uses to move local residents and businesses.

"We are doing great business. We have cheap rates and good service. We are honest and we have respect for people's homes and furniture."

Chang says anybody can make it in America, because America is a nation of laws and people respect and obey the law. "In other countries, money is the law. Those who have the money bend the law to suit themselves. Corruption and not justice dominates. In America it is justice that makes the difference."

Chang, who is married to a woman from Mexico, says he is living the American dream. "I used to ride a cow, now I drive an Oldsmobile. I used to could not speak English, now I have two children who are straight "A" students. I used to be a poor dishwasher, now I own my own business. I could not ask for anything more."

He thinks. "Well actually, I may want a little more. I would like to expand to two trucks, or maybe three or even five — just enough to make a comfortable living." Chang says he is not rich, but the venture is already making a livelihood, for him and his partners.

Pickens drops 'golden parachute'

By Susan Hightower
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Stung by criticism from a dissident shareholders' group, Mesa Inc. chairman Boone Pickens said Monday he would give up a potential $2.2 million and quit the company's new "golden parachute" retention plan.

But he defended the package as a way to keep key officials while the rival investors threaten to take control of the struggling natural gas company.

Last month, the board of Irving-based Mesa approved a package offering executives at least twice their salaries if the company changes hands and they lose their jobs within two years. Other employees would get smaller amounts.

In a letter dated Friday, Pickens asked the directors to exclude him from the plan.

"While there have been arguments that I should be included in the program in recognition of my 35 years of service to the company, retention shouldn't be a concern in my case. I have a large investment in Mesa and will stay to see our program through," wrote Pickens, who founded the company and owns some 7.5 percent of its stock.

"I was obviously the lightning rod for the whole thing," he said in an interview.

"This was expensive to me but it was worth it," Pickens said. "I thought, 'That will just take the lightning rod away.'"

The company already has lost three important workers from among its 400 or so employees in the past two months, he said, but he declined to be more specific.

"It's a concern to me that we've lost some people because of David Batchelder's actions, and it's a pretty tight group and I hate to see that happen," Pickens said.

Mesa has struggled for years under a heavy debt load and weak natural gas prices. Now, wealthy investors Marvin Davis and Dennis Washington, advised by former top Pickens aide Batchelder, have purchased 9.4 percent of Mesa's stock.

Under pressure from the investors, Mesa is considering selling, merging or restructuring the company. If Mesa doesn't act fast enough, the group says it will try to call a special shareholder meeting to oust the current board.

Last week, Mesa opened a data room to companies interested in bidding on its natural gas properties in the rich Hugoton field in western Kansas, Pickens said. Two companies visited last week, and five more are scheduled this week, he said.

"For them to say that we're not moving fast enough is silly. We're moving as fast as anybody can move," he said.

In addition to the severance package, the fight for control of Mesa brought criticism of Pickens after the board implemented a "poison pill" takeover defense. He has often criticized such plans.

Despite the turmoil, Pickens said he is not worried about Batchelder's moves and is "playing better golf than I've ever played in my life."

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Stock gain means big tax bite under capital gains

By Bill Doyle

Q: We are faced with a big income-tax increase for this year.

Doyle

Many years ago, we purchased stock for $3,000. The stock was split a number of times, increasing the number of shares we owned. Now, the company has been bought out by another company, and our shares are being paid off at $83,000.

It could not have happened at a worse time. This is probably the last year my husband will work; his salary is about $27,000. He gets about $8,400 and I get about $5,000 in Social Security benefits. He collects a $4,000 pension from a former employer. Being past age 70 1/2, I must make a $6,800 individual retirement account withdrawal. We will receive approximately $7,000 in interest and dividends.

Do you have any ideas on how we can minimize our tax bite for this year?

A: Not under present tax law.

You can say a few prayers that the revisions of the Internal Revenue Code now wending their way through Congress will include a reduction in the tax on long-term capital gains taken in 1995.

But that's a long shot. As things now stand and based on your numbers, you will be hit with a $22,400 tax on your sale of that stock.

Your $80,000 profit — the difference between your $3,000 cost basis and your $83,000 proceeds from the sale — is taxable as a long-term capital gain, because you owned that stock for more than one year.

The maximum tax on long-term capital gains is 28 percent. So, you will have to part with $22,400 tax on your $80,000 profit.

If you were in the 15 percent federal income tax bracket — the only bracket lower than 28 percent — you would pay 15 percent on your long-term capital gain.

But the figures you supply show your other sources of income put you in the 28 percent bracket, even without the $80,000 profit from the stock sale.

The 28 percent cap on long-term capital gains tax would apply even if you were in one of the higher federal income tax brackets, which currently are 31, 36 and 39.6 percent.

There is a possibility that Congress will lower — perhaps even eliminate — the capital-gains tax. However, that would benefit you only if the new rule is made retroactive to before the date on which your stock was sold.

Q: So far this year, I have sold three stocks and shares of two mutual funds at nice profits. Some quick calculations of the capital gains tax I will be required to pay give me the horrors.

This set me to thinking. I know I and the Internal Revenue Service will receive Forms 1099-B listing the exact amount of those sales. I also know the IRS does not have records of the prices I paid for those five securities I sold.

I am considering "fudging" the Schedule D of my 1995 Form 1040 on which I report the five sales by listing my "cost or other basis" much higher than the prices I paid, thereby reducing my reported profits — and the taxes I would have to pay.

What's to prevent me from doing this?

A: Your innate honesty, to begin with.

Perhaps more important, you had better be aware that you will have to come up with proof of your basis if your return is questioned by the revenooers.

In disputes with the IRS, the burden of proof is on the taxpayer. What you call "fudging" could be called "fraud."

Q: While employed at a major railroad for 35 years, I bought the railroad-'s stock through payroll deduction and reinvested all dividends.

I have no records of what I paid. Is it possible to get such records from the railroad's payroll department?

A: Give it a try. If you come up blank and ever sell that stock, you would have to estimate your cost — and hope the IRS doesn't come calling.

N.Y. Times News Service

MONTEREY, Calif. — Gil de Ferran, driver of the Pennzoil Special Mercedes-Benz, earned the first race win of his Indy Car career at the Laguna Seca PPG Championship season finale. De Ferran was one of four drivers using Mercedes-Benz power to finish in the Top 10 and claimed the Rookie of the Year award in the process while driving for the Midland-based Hall Racing Team.

"This is the biggest thrill you can imagine," said de Ferran afterwards. "No other success in my career can compare (to winning my first Indy Car race). I had kind of given up on the Rookie of the Year thing because we were so far back in the points. It is unexpected and a very nice surprise."

As well as powering the Laguna Seca winner and Rookie of the Year, Mercedes-Benz finished its first full-season in modern-day Indy Car competition ranked second in the manufacturers championship. Mercedes was credited with five race wins and 17 podium finishes.

"We're extremely pleased with our first full year of Indy Car competition," said Hal Whiteford, vice president of operations, who oversees the Mercedes-Benz motorsports program. "Our partnership with Ilmor Engineering has produced a great engine, and it was very satisfying to work with so many first-rate teams. We are eagerly awaiting the start of next season."

De Ferran, who started the Laguna Seca race from third on the grid, turned the fastest lap of the race on his way to the front of the field, taking the lead from Jacques Villeneuve on lap 29. The team of Midland's Jim Hall then put their faith in the superior power and fuel economy of the Mercedes engine, shortening de Ferran's first pit stop by giving the young Brazilian's Reynard a light load of fuel and getting him back out on the track while still in the lead.

De Ferran surrendered the lead only briefly, when he made his second pit stop on lap 54, but he faced a tense moment some ten laps later when Andre Ribeiro and Bryan Herta tangled in front of him, sending Ribeiro up in the air and into the wall.

"The (short) pit stop was fantastic strategy," said de Ferran. "But I was very lucky not to get involved in that incident. I was right behind them."

Heisman contender Phillips of Nebraska arrested on assault charges

Phillips was thrown off the team Sunday, hours after he was arrested on suspicion of misdemeanor third-degree assault and a day after he rushed for four touchdowns against Michigan State.

"Lawrence Phillips was involved in an incident early Sunday morning in which he injured a young woman," said Tom Osborne, coach of the defending national champion and second-ranked Cornhuskers. "We have told all our players that abusive behavior such as this will not be tolerated."

Still unknown today was the status of No. 2 running back Damon Benning, who was arrested early Saturday morning on suspicion of misdemeanor assault.

Lincoln police said a 19-year-old woman went to Benning's residence to retrieve some personal belongings and was confronted by Benning. She told police a verbal confrontation turned physical and Benning allegedly grabbed her around the throat and pushed her around. Police say the woman had redness on her neck and complained of pain in her right arm.

field for the Nov. 12 meeting with the defending Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers.

"I want the ankle to be the best it can be," he added. "I want to give my best when I represent the Dallas Cowboys. If I score after a touchdown I want to be able to dance and have the ankle hold up."

Cowboys players want Sanders as quickly and wide receiver Michael Irvin said "he hurt it during baseball season, let him get it fixed during baseball season."

Sanders, loaded down with gold jewelry and wearing a blue pin-striped suit, a Cowboys cap, and a shirt collar with "Prime Time" on it, had the crowd laughing when he joked he could have squeezed more money out of Jones if his mother, Connie Knight, had quit saying she wanted her son in Dallas.

As it was, Sanders got plenty, starting with a bonus of one penny short of $13 million. It's a seven year deal for $35 million. Sanders gets $25 million if he opts not to play the last two years.

The original Dallas franchise cost $650,000 in 1960 which makes the Sanders salary 18 1/2 times that figure for a part-time employe. Jones paid $140 million for the Cowboys. Sanders will receive a fourth of that figure.

"My financial situation could have been greater," said Sanders, 28, who signed early Saturday morning. "I just wanted to be a Cowboy. I've always been a star and now I'll have one on my helmet every day."

Sanders said he knew he wanted to be a Cowboy three weeks ago, when he saw Jones on his hotel room television.

"That was the first time I saw in his eyes that he was really sincere," Sanders said. "That was when I made my decision. I told (agent Eugene Parker), 'Get it done. I want to be a Dallas Cowboy.'"

The decision was cemented last week.

Rate & Credit Policies

Rate charges are determined at the time of placement. All ads accepted are subject to credit approval. Some classified categories require payment in advance. Credit applications are also required for business accounts. Yearly contract agreements are available. The Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right to correctly classify and edit all copy or to reject or cancel any advertisement at any time.

Cancellations

The price of your ad will be based on the number of days published according to our rate structure. Call (915) 682-6222 - ask for your cancellation number. This is your record of cancellation and it is important that you have it in the event of any misunderstanding or adjustment. "Super Seller" and "Real Wheel Deal" ads may be cancelled, but are non-adjustable and non-refundable.

Errors and Adjustments

Please check your ad the first day that it appears to be sure that all of the information is correct. This will ensure that your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. Call us the first day if you find an error at 915-682-6222. To report an error in Saturday's edition call Saturday morning between 8a.m. and 10a.m. Errors in Sunday's edition should be reported on Monday morning after 8:00 a.m. We must limit our financial responsiblity, if any, to the charge for the word or space, and cannot be held responsible for incorrect ads after the first day of publication.

Omissions of Ads

The Midland Reporter-Telegram assumes no financial responsiblity in an ad beyond the cost of the ad itself, and no responsiblity for the omission of an ad.
