Work on income tax issue debated

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — House Speaker Gib Lewis supported a constitutional ban against a state income tax then backed off, and now he endorses it again.

Lewis, a charter member of Texans Against State Income Taxes, said his "first knee-jerk reaction" was to support a constitutional amendment prohibiting a personal or corporate state income tax.

Last month, however, the speaker said, "If you really think about it, you really are playing havoc for the future of this state when you tie the hands of the legislators of the future trying to look for revenue to meet the needs of the state."

Tim Conger, a spokesman for Lewis, said Tuesday the speaker personally opposes a personal or corporate income tax, but repeated his call for the special legislative session beginning Aug. 6 to remain narrow in scope. The budget problems, the spokesman said, pose a tough enough problem without expanding the session to deal with other issues.

Lewis, his spokesman said, didn't realize Texans Against Income Taxes also wanted a ban on corporate income taxes. The speaker thinks trying to pass the personal-and-corporate income tax ban might be "too greedy," his spokesman said.

Richardson Rep. Bill Ceverha, founder of Texans Against State Income Taxes, wants Gov. Mark White to open the special session's agenda to a no-income-tax amendment for Texans to vote on at the Nov. 4 general election. White has acknowledged that his staff is canvassing lawmakers to gauge their support for such a proposal.

Ceverha, a Republican, said if future Legislatures need an income tax to raise revenue, voters can decide by repealing the constitutional amendment. Because the budget will be the special session's main focus, that is the time for a no-income-tax amendment, he said.

While House conservatives were urging White to ban income taxes, a bipartisan groups of lawmakers said the state should place referendums for pari-mutuel betting and a state-run lottery on the Nov. 4 ballot.

Lottery and pari-mutuel bills have failed in past sessions, but Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris, R-Dallas, said lawmakers now will support gambling over new or higher taxes.

Under lawmakers' proposal, all money from betting and a lottery would go into the general revenue fund, the state's basic checking account. Previous gambling bills have earmarked the money for special prorams, such as education and welfare, or have included special monority-contracting provisions that bill writers won't use this time.

Until the governor's office finishes hammering out details in the proclamation for the special session, White will not announce the scope of the session, his aides said.

"The people need to know," said House Speaker Pro Tem Hugo Berlanga of Corpus Christi, "there's an alternative to raising taxes in January."

Supporters said they will lump dog and horse racing together in the bill but will limit dog tracks to three counties along the Texas Gulf Coast.

Two-thirds of lawmakers in both houses must approve a state-run lottery, then voters must approve a constitutional amendment. Berlanga said getting a lottery before voters in November puts the state 18 months ahead as compared to waiting until the regular session in January to vote on it.

Pari-mutuel betting does not require a constitutional amendment, but White has said voters must approve any gambling proposal through a state referendum. White also wants a local-option provision in a gambling bill to allow each county to decide if it wants a track.

Rep. Al Luna, a Houston Democrat and chairman of the Mexican-American Legislative Caucus, said services for the poor, disabled and elderly "are on the block" for Appropriations Committee cuts. He suggested pari-mutuel betting as a way to preserve those programs.

Customers get federal checks

From Staff and Wire Reports

ODESSA — Hundreds of depositors of the Permian Bank of Odessa have received federal checks closing their accounts as the failed bank is slowly stripped of its assets and fades out of existence.

By Tuesday afternoon, lines of former depositors which had begun forming at 5 a.m. were down to a manageable length and payoff of accounts was moving "very well," said Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. closing supervisor Ken Gorham.

Lines this morning were only about half as long as on Tuesday, as 100 to 150 depositors were on hand to claim their account balances.

The bank was shut down Friday after the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. failed to find a buyer to keep it afloat.

The failure was blamed on the declining oil industry, according to a statement by Texas Banking Commissioner James Sexton, who appointed the FDIC as receiver.

Three other banks in Odessa-Midland have failed since 1983. But this was the first time there was no bidder to take over the bank.

Two failed area banks were acquired by outside banking holding companies — First National Bank of Midland, by RepublicBank Corp., Dallas; and National Bank of Odessa by Independent Bankshares Inc., Abilene.

The third closed bank, Metro Bank at Midland Regional Airport, was rechartered as Mid-Cities National Bank and has since evolved into United Bank in Midland.

On Tuesday, depositors had access to their money for the first time since the shutdown last week. Permian Bank will be open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from noon until 6 p.m. on Sunday for the next two weeks as depositors receive FDIC checks for the balance of their accounts.

According to revised FDIC figures, the bank had total assets of $38.2 million, of which $9.7 million was tied up in installment loans and $18.2 million in commercial loans, Gorham said.

Former FNB officer is indicted

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

William Hoyle McCright Jr., retired executive vice president and former director of the defunct First National Bank (FNB) of Midland and current president of the Midland College board of trustees, was indicted Tuesday by a Midland federal grand jury for embezzlement, fraudulent participation in a loan, and making false bank reports and entries.

McCright

"I have not done anything wrong," McCright, 61, said after the indictment was handed down.

The grand jurors alleged that McCright embezzled and misapplied $1.925-million in 1981 — two years before the bank failed —, that he shared in $330,000 through a loan of $1.925-million, and that he in 1982 made false entries in bank reports.

McCright is to appear before U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith early next week for his initial hearing and bond setting. Meanwhile, he is free. McCright's defense attorney in the case is Ted Kerr of Midland.

Since 1985, McCright became the sixth former Midland-Odessa banker to be indicted as a result of Federal Bureau of Investigation probes into banking procedures in the Midland-Odessa area.

Earlier this month, Olen Mack Brock, 49, former FNB-Midland vice president and loan officer, was indicted on three counts of embezzlement and fraud in 1981.

City Council to explore use of private firms

By DOUG DRUMMOND
Assistant City Editor

The City Council — searching for ways to save money — requested a study Tuesday about using private firms to run the city's fleet services and the Midland Regional Airport parking lot.

Until the study is finished, the council will not know how much, if any, money can be saved by using private firms.

The city staff will compile the study. It should be complete in the fall.

Other studies at a later date will look into using a private firm for services such as park maintenance, sanitation, janitorial services and airport security.

"We'll just have to look into it," said Assistant City Manager Mike McGregor. "And see what the possibilities are."

McGregor spoke to the City Council Tuesday morning at a briefing session.

Although many variables will be considered, the bottom line is whether the city can save money and still provide what they describe as a quality service to the public.

"We may bid these things out and find out it may cost us more than we are paying now," McGregor said.

"But that's why we are putting out the bid documents. We want to find out."

The city now uses private firms in several areas including street sweeping, public information, personnel searches and data processing services.

Most other U.S. cities also rely on the private sector for some services.

The idea of using a private company to run the city's Fleet Services has surfaced in recent years.

Fleet Services — which has an estimated budget of some $4 million next year — handles most of the city's repair and upkeep of vehicles.

It is also responsible for purchasing city vehicles.

Deputy City Manager Fred Poe said Tuesday there was preliminary discussion last year with an interested company, but no agreement was reached.

He said little, if any, money would have been saved.

Oil price falls amid speculation on OPEC quotas

United Press International

Oil prices skidded by $2.02 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange Tuesday amid growing evidence that OPEC is unlikely to reach an accord to curb production and reduce the global oil surplus at its meeting next week.

The Gulf News, an English-language newspaper based in the OPEC emirate of Dubai, said independent producers' refusal to cooperate with the 13-nation cartel in stabilizing the oil market would make it difficult for OPEC to agree on new national output quotas at its July 28 summit in Geneva.

"It would be surprising if agreement on quotas was easy to secure in a context where the non-OPEC group has stepped up its output every time that OPEC has cut production to prevent prices from collapsing," the Gulf news said in an editorial.

Other industry analysts and officials predict that prices could fall to $6 to $8 per barrel if OPEC's fourth meeting of the year fails to reach a production accord.

Edward Krapels, a Wasington-based oil observer told the Wall Street Journal that cheap oil is encouraging broad stockpiling that "will reduce the possibility of a price recovery for the rest of the year." He predicted that without OPEC reining in production immediately, oil prices may "approach a floor of $6 per barrel.

On the Merc, West Texas intermediate — the benchmark U.S. crude for August delivery — plummeted by $2.02 to $11.07 a barrel.

Analysts said traders bailed out of the August crude contract, which expired Tuesday, when it became apparent that the recent technical rally on the Merc was spurred by speculators and could not be sustained in face of the continuing glut. Feverish buying had pushed the crude above the $13 mark Monday.

Reagan tells Texans U.S. 'won't be captive of cartel'

DALLAS (AP) — President Reagan, attempting to boost the Republican campaign of one-time Texas Gov. Bill Clements, today pledged "that America will never again be captive to a foreign oil cartel."

Reagan, in a speech prepared for delivery at a big-money rally for Clements, blamed the Democrats for the tough times that have hit once-booming Texas.

"I think it's a tragedy that hard times have hit Texas and that unemployment is as high as it is.... And let me pledge that...this administration is determined that America will never again be captive to a foreign oil cartel," Reagan said.

The president said his administration was committed to a strong domestic energy industry and the decontrol of natural gas prices.

Reagan, seeking to help Clements in his bitter rematch of 1982 against incumbent Democrat Mark White, argued that under Clements, who was governor from 1979 to 1983, Texans enjoyed better times.

But the president did not mention that the high oil prices of those years were in large part due to production controls by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and that the collapse of those controls has glutted the world oil market with much cheaper crude, lessening the incentive for American producers to pump oil at previous rates.

Under the Democratic governor, Reagan said, Texas has a bigger budget, higher taxes and a $3 billion deficit.

LONDON (AP) — Prince Andrew married red-haired English commoner Sarah Ferguson today at Westminster Abbey to bugle fanfares, pealing bells and a nation's cheers in a spectacle that mustered the pomp and glory of Britain's 920-year-old monarchy.

To Britons, it was an invitation to put aside their troubles for a day and celebrate the sturdier values of their heritage, which is anchored by Europe's most popular and enduring monarchy.

If convicted, he could be sentenced up to 15 years in prison. Until the indictment, Brock was a banker in Ruidoso, N.M.

If he is convicted, McCright could be sentenced up to 20 years in prison — five years on each of the four counts alleged in the indictment.

Four ex-bankers, including three former bank presidents, have been convicted by federal juries in Midland of embezzlement and bank fraud. They were sentenced to prison terms from 10 years to 24 years by U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton. All together, they were ordered to pay more than $1.72-million in restitution.

"Juries in the Permian Basin have delivered the same message," Assistant U.S. Attorney James K. "Jim" Blankinship said earlier. "You'd think that bankers and ex-bankers out there who have abused their positions would have received the message: 'Corrupt banking will not be tolerated.'"

Convicted were:

— Eddie Thomas, 43, ex-president of the failed MetroBank at Midland Regional Airport, is serving a 20-year prison sentence and has been ordered by Bunton to pay $550,000 in restitution. He was convicted of 14 counts of embezzlement, misapplication of funds, and making false entries. He was MetroBank's president from its inception in 1978 until he resigned shortly before the bank collapse in mid-1983.

— Max Malone, 53, former president of the defunct Permian Bank & Trust in Odessa, was sentenced by Bunton to 24 years in prison and was ordered to pay $317,410.71 in restitution. Malone was convicted of counts of embezzlement, misapplication of funds, and making false entries.

— Bill Tapp, 42, former president of Bank of the West in Odessa, was sentenced by Bunton to 20 years in prison and was ordered to pay $481,565.02 in restitution. He was convicted on 10 counts of embezzlement, misapplication of funds, making false entries and making loans without the approval of the bank's board of directors.

— Roger Harris Clark, 43, an engineer who was a former director of Permian Bank & Trust in Odessa and owner of manufacturing companies in Odessa and Tulsa, was sentenced by Bunton to 10 years in prison and was ordered to pay $378,317.65 in restitution. Clark was convicted of five counts of mail fraud, wire fraud, wire-transfer fraud and making false statements to secure bank loans after his oilfield-related businesses started to decline in late 1981.

McCright was charged by the grand jurors in the four-count indictment with embezzling and misapplying the $1.925-million in the form of 1981 loan to Midland West Corp., which the indictment alleged McCright was an owner. Further, he was charged with sharing and receiving $330,000 through the $1.925-million loan.

In addition, he was charged with two counts of making false entries.

The indictment accused McCright of providing "an inaccurate listing of his affiliated and related interests" in his executive officer-director questionnaire forms for the bank's 1982 proxy.

The indictment said that the information did not note that McCright held 6.25 percent working interest in the Atkins Prospect oil field investment; did not include his reversionary interests in oil field properties managed by Wood and Locker Inc. of Midland, and did not list his one-sixth right to collateral — ranch land — which secured an FNB loan of $2.444-million to Pen-Dee Corp.

The indictment said that McCright was subject to FNB's "Standards of Conduct," which stated in part that "The achievement of the Bank's goals and objectives is dependent upon complete public trust and confidence in the directors and staff of the Bank. Therefore, all parties associated with the Bank will be expected to conform to high standards of ethical behavior in both the conduct of the Bank's affairs and their own personal affairs. ... All directors and staff members will be required to manage their personal and business affairs so as to avoid any conflict between their self-interest and their obligations to the Bank, its customers, and its shareholders."

McCright, a graduate of the Southwestern Graduate School of Banking at Southern Methodist University, ended his 34-year career with the FNB in 1982, when he retired. In 1983, he was elected to Security National Bank's board of directors but resigned that position last year.

The 93-year-old FNB, which was Texas' largest independent bank, failed on Oct. 14, 1983. Subsequently, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC) took over the bank's assets.

Since mid-1983, four Midland-Odessa banks have failed in wake of the energy slump and depressed economy: FNB, MetroBank at Midland Regional Airport, National Bank of Odessa, and, just recently, Permian Bank & Trust of Odessa.

McCright, who has been active in community affairs, has served on the Midland College board of trustees since 1973.

CITY

"Several years ago, that work (the city garage) was being farmed out by several cities," Poe said. "But now a lot of those same cities have come back and taken the garage back over."

Poe said the cities figured out they could do a better and more efficient job.

But Poe said his staff would be happy to look into the idea.

City Aviation Victor White said a private firm handling the airport parking lot would save money.

The parking lot's budget is about $330,000 annually.

"We've already begun looking into it," White said, noting the airport has discussed the idea with several companies.

He said private firms can have better control of its employees in areas such as salaries, discipline and benefits.

White said a city parking lot employee has a beginning salary of some $7 per hour. He said a private firm would likely pay a $4.50 hourly wage.

The parking lot has 15 employees.

In a July 15 memo to the Council, McGregor outlined four other areas that the city should "explore" for possible privatization.

Perhaps the most likely of the four to be put into action is allowing a firm to take over janitorial services citywide.

Currently, the city has contracted such a service for the Municipal Court.

"They (private janitorial firms) have cheaper labor," Poe said, noting many of the firms clean buildings at night and use workers who already have another full-time job.

"It's a second job to most of them," he said.

The city also will look into the idea of using private companies to upkeep its parks.

George Logan, the director of community services, told the council Tuesday such a move could save money.

Two other areas mentioned in McGregor's memo are sanitation and airport security.

Some council members questioned Tuesday whether using a private firm would be viable for those areas.

McGregor said the biggest advantage to privatization is the city can get "expertise on more of an economy scale."

But he added the city also must be cautious in developing standards and entering into contracts.

"We want to watch out for the interests of the taxpayers," he said.

WEDDING

Miss Ferguson, dressed in a beaded ivory silk satin gown, and Andrew, in full Royal Navy uniform, took their vows in firm, self-assured voices. She stumbled just once, on one of Andrew's four names.

Andrew, the queen's second son and fourth in line to the throne, gently slipped on his bride's finger a ring of gold from the same Welsh mine that provided the wedding ring for his grandmother in 1923.

"I pronounce that they be man and wife together," the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Most Rev. Robert Runcie, told the kneeling couple at 11.50 a.m. (6:50 a.m. EDT).

Then, with only their close relatives present, they signed the register and legally became Prince and Princess Andrew, the Duke and Duchess of York. The queen conferred the dukedom, usual title for a sovereign's younger son, on Andrew 90 minutes before the wedding.

The couple walked down the aisle, hands clasped, pausing for Sarah to curtsy to Queen Elizabeth II, while Andrew bowed to his mother. The new princess smiled broadly to her mother-in-law.

Church bells chimed as the newlyweds, both 26, approached the door, and a huge cheer went up as they emerged from the abbey and waved to the crowds. They mounted an open carriage — Andrew helped his bride gather up her 17½-foot train — and made a triumphal ride through London to Buckingham Palace.

More than an hour later, the newlyweds stepped onto the palace balcony and shared a tender kiss before hundreds of thousands of cheering spectators. During their brief appearance they smiled and waved, flanked by the queen and other members of the royal family and wedding party.

Andrew and Sarah reportedly were to jet to Portugal's Azores islands in the Atlantic later today for their honeymoon.

Andrew's younger brother Prince Edward was best man, and Prince Charles, his older brother and heir to the throne, read the lesson from Ephesians 3 during the wedding ceremony, which was viewed by an estimated 300 million people worldwide on television.

Queen Elizabeth watched proudly in a seat just behind the couple. Kilted Scottish nobles, military men in red tunics, lords and ladies in suits and blue dresses, first lady Nancy Reagan, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and pop star Elton John were among some 2,000 invited guests in the abbey.

Four-year-old Prince William, second in line to the throne, fidgeted and fiddled and pushed the bobbie on the chinstrap of his sailor hat into his mouth during the proceedings, while his mother Princess Diana looked at him warningly.

New York Times reporter now expelled from China

PEKING (AP) — New York Times reporter John Burns was expelled from China today after being accused by the government of photographing classified objects in a restricted military zone. He dismissed the accusations as nonsense.

Burns, 41, was taken this morning from the barred, padded cell where he had been held for six days without charge, and put aboard a CAAC state airlines flight for Hong Kong, said Times Executive Editor A.M. Rosenthal.

The allegations against Burns, a Briton, arose from a motorcycle trip he made earlier this month through restricted regions of central China. He was accompanied by an American attorney, who since has left China, and a Chinese man whose whereabouts are unknown.

A statement issued in Peking by Public Security Bureau officer Xu Hui said Burns and his two companions "broke into a militarily restricted zone of our country, and took numerous photographs of classified objects."

"Such demeanor obviously constitutes an act of spying and intelligence gathering which will not be tolerated by any sovereign state," the statement said.

It did not specify what objects Burns allegedly photographed. The statement said Chinese authorities acted with utmost restraint to avoid harming U.S.-Chinese relations.

Upon arrival in Hong Kong, Burns said the accusations were baseless.

Shultz urges South Africa to set apartheid timetable

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz called on South Africa today to set a timetable for eliminating apartheid, but pleaded with Congress not to bind the Reagan administration in a "straitjacket of rigid legislation" aimed at punishing the white minoryrnment.

Shultz told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that a bill passed by the House calling for complete U.S. disinvestment from South Africa amounts to "a declaration of economic war" that would "end our capacity to have any positive influence on the struggle for justice and human rights in southern Africa.

"Other legislation, although less extreme, would similarly weaken our ability to have a positive effect on what happens in South Africa," Shultz said.

The testimony by the secretary of state came a day after President Reagan delivered a speech on U.S. policy toward South Africa.

BANK

Insured depositors, those with $100,000 or less in the bank, will get a full refund.

The reported 23 depositors with more than that the $100,000 insured by the FDIC will get a second check for 30 percent of the uninsured money which is immediately negotiable and a receivership certificate for the remaining 70 percent. The receivership certificates will be paid off on a pro rata basis from excess proceeds recieved from liquidation of remaining assets and collections on the bank's loans, less the FDIC's administrative costs, said Gorham.

Permian is the 12th bank to fail in Texas so far this year, the same total as for all of 1985.

In addition, the Odessa bank is only one of an estimated 160 banks around the nation expected to fail by year's end, Gorham said. Last year, the number was 120.

"The number of failures is increasing and the number of payoffs is also increasing. It's a reflection on the economy," said Gorham.

"We thought that was extraordinary," said Gorham. "A few years ago, 160 banks failing in one year would have been unthinkable."

When a bank is unable to continue operations, two things can happen. Investors can bid with the Division of Banking Supervision, a branch of the FDIC, and assume control of the bank, in which case the institution could keep operating. But no buyer is found, the bank's assets are sold by the FDIC's Division of Liquidation, to which Gorham belongs, and depositors are paid off. In that case, the bank ceases to exist.

"The two main areas where we've experienced most bank failures are in the agricultural, mid-section of the country and in the energy-related Southwest," said Gorham. "In terms of states, Texas and Oklahoma will be right at the top."

In his statement Sexton said:

"Permian Bank has struggled for the last four years with the consequences of liberal lending to energy sector entities during the early 1980s. Despite repeated capital injections and managerial and regulatory efforts since that time, the bank could not be rehabilitated."

Sexton said he was unsure whether the legal problems of the bank's former president, Melvin Max Malone, fueled the bank's downfall.

Malone was convicted in May of several charges, including embezzlement and misapplication of $451,000 through insider loan practices. He was sentenced to 24 years in prison and ordered to repay $317,410, but is appealing his conviction.

OIL

"Reality has finally set into the Merc," said Jay Amberg, crude oil pricing editor at the Oil Buyers' Guide in Lakewood, N.J.

Home-heating oil for immediate delivery on the Merc nosedived by 1.93 cents to 33.63 cents a gallon, unleaded gasoline dropped by 1.06 cents to 33.50 cents, and leaded gasoline fell by 0.78 cent to 34.48 cents.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, where oil is sold to the highest bidder, West Texas intermediate plunged by $1.90 to $11.50 a barrel. Texaco U.S.A. — the third largest U.S. oil company — lowered its buying price for the key domestic crude by 75 cents to $12.25 a barrel.

On the European spot market, where oil is sold to the highest bidder, Britain's Brent North Sea crude tumbled by 85 cents to $9.25 a barrel.

World oil prices have fallen by about 60 percent from an average of $30 a barrel in December, when the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries abandoned production and price controls in a bid to force non-OPEC members to rein in their output.

North Sea production in Britain, the prime target of the OPEC campaign, fell to a three-year low in June, a study by the London brokerage of James Capel showed. Britain has publicly refused to cooperate with OPEC in stabilizing oil prices, but some other non-members have expressed a willingness to cut back production.

OPEC production has surged to a 4½-year high of around 19.5 million barrels a day in July after the cartel deadlocked for the second time this year on adopting new output quotas for its members under an overall production ceiling.

OPEC's moderate majority tentatively agreed to a production lid of 17.6 million barrels a day to raise prices to the $17- to $19-a-barrel at talks in Brioni, Yugoslavia, last month. But OPEC price hawks Iran, Libya, and Algeria scuttled the pact.

Since then Saudi Arabia, OPEC's largest producer, has stepped up production to more than 5 million barrels a day.

Royal bride calls silk wedding dress with 17 ½-foot train 'incredible'

WORLD

LONDON (AP) — Sarah Ferguson's bridal dress, one of the best-kept secrets of today's royal wedding, is an ivory silk satin gown beaded with the bees and thistles of her coat of arms and anchors and waves for her Royal Navy prince.

With its low, curved neckline and fitted bodice, the gown shows off the figure of the 26-year-old bride, who on Tuesday described the creation by London designer Lindka Cierach as "incredible."

The gown, with full sleeves edged in pearls, has a dropped waist and falls into a wide skirt which is flat in front and full at the back, with a 17½-foot train flowing from beneath a fan-shaped bow.

Details of the bride's gown and the outfits of Queen Elizabeth II and other members of the wedding party were made public to coincide with the moment that Miss Ferguson stepped into the black-and-gold trimmed Glass Coach at Clarence House on her way to Westminster Abbey for her marriage to Prince Andrew.

Several manufacturers have promised to rush out copies of the elaborate bridal gown, which took three months to make. One manufacturer, Sidney Ellis, said his first copy would be on sale within five hours at a London department store for $1,275.

The bride insisted Tuesday, "There will never be a dress to match it."

The beading is based on the bride's recently adopted coat of arms showing thistles with bees hovering over them. These are interwoven with anchors, waves and hearts on the train which has in the center a huge A interwoven with two small Ss.

The veil, made of pure silk bobbinet, is scalloped with embroidered hearts along the edge and beaded throughout with sequins and punctuated with tiny bows.

Although she was not well-known in London's top fashion circles before being chosen to design the royal gown, Ms. Cierach's one-of-a-kind wedding gowns, which cost at least $7,500, are noted for their exquisite fabrics and beautiful detailing.

The price of the royal wedding gown was not divulged.

Like most traditional brides, Sarah Ferguson said she would wear something old, something new, something borrowed and something blue but she refused to disclose what the blue item would be, saying only that it wasn't a garter.

The dress is new, and the borrowed item is a diamond tiara lent by a family friend.

She also wore a pearl, gold and diamond necklace and pearl and diamond cluster earrings.

Her shower bouquet of lilies, gardenias and traditional myrtle and veronica, cut from bushes grown from cuttings from Queen Victoria's wedding bouquet, qualified as something old.

In her red hair, she wore lilies and clusters of cream roses and gardenias following the outline of the tiara.

Her shoes, designed by Manolo Blanik, were satin pumps beaded with bees and ribbons in pearl bugles and diamonds, with a medium Louis or Cuban-style heel.

The four bridesmaids, ranging in age from 4 to 7, wore peach taffeta silk dresses trimmed with ecru and peach cotton lace, with tiered petticoats visible from the back.

The two older pages, Princess Anne's son, Peter Phillips, 8, and the bride's half-brother, Andrew Ferguson, 7, wore copies of Royal Navy midshipman's uniforms from the late 1700s.

The long blue cloth dress coat and white single breasted waistcoat — both with gilt buttons — top white breeches, white hose and black shoes.

Prince Andrew made duke just before wedding

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II today conferred on Prince Andrew the title Duke of York — traditional for the monarch's second son — just 90 minutes before his marriage to Sarah Ferguson, Buckingham Palace announced.

That meant his bride automatically became the Duchess of York on her marriage to the prince. Not since the Middle Ages has the son of a sovereign been married without a peerage title.

The dukedom dates back 601 years to when King Richard II bestowed the honor on his uncle, Edmund of Langley, fifth son of Edward III, in 1385. There have been 14 holders of the title.

The tradition of giving the title to the second son of the reigning monarch began when Edward IV in 1474 bestowed it on his younger son, Richard, the younger of two princes murdered in the Tower of London.

Normally conferred on a prince in his mid to late-twenties, there was much speculation that Prince Andrew would receive the title in 1982 because of his role as a helicopter pilot in the war with Argentina over the Falkland Islands.

However, it was widely reported that the queen did not want to show her son any special consideration and insisted he be treated like any other serviceman.

With the dukedom go the Earldom of Inverness and the Barony of Killyleagh.

"The queen has been pleased to direct that the Prince Andrew should be created Duke of York, Earl of Inverness and Baron Killyleagh. This will be gazetted at 10 o'clock this morning and takes effect immediately," said a brief statement from the palace.

The dukedom of York is a title that carries with it no automatic lands or financial reward, unlike the Duchy of Cornwall, which provides Andrew's elder brother, Prince Charles, with a substantial income.

The title is one of the only five royal dukedoms in the 920-year-old monarchy. The others are held by the queen's husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, her heir Prince Charles, the Duke of Cornwall, and two of her cousins, the Duke of Gloucester and the Duke of Kent.

The most recent Duke of York was the queen's father, King George VI, who was 24 when the dukedom was bestowed upon him in recognition of his service in World War I.

Six previous Dukes of York have become king — Edward IV, Henry VIII, Charles I, James II, George V, and George VI.

Probably the best-remembered Duke of York was Queen Victoria's uncle Frederick, who gained notoriety in the nursery rhyme "The Grand Old Duke of York."

According to the rhyme, his renown stemmed from marching 10,000 men up a hill and then back down the same hill. Frederick was a British field commander in two unsuccessful military campaigns.

Royal bride plans to continue editing career

LONDON (AP) — Sarah Ferguson does not intend to quit her editing position after she marries Prince Andrew on Wednesday, and Andrew is contemplating staying in the Royal Navy beyond his 12-year hitch.

The couple talked about their wedding and future plans in interviews released Tuesday by Press Association, the domestic British news agency, the British Broadcasting Corp. and independent radio and television.

They portray a pair of 26-year-olds who intend to allow each other some breathing room but are a bit old-fashioned.

Andrew said of the wedding vows they have chosen: "There's nothing in that that says Sarah is going to meekly follow what I say...I have no intention of laying any law down."

But Miss Ferguson said she is happy to have the word "obey" in her vow.

"I'm quite traditional, and I think it is the man's role to be the leader," she said.

She also said she will welcome Andrew's pledge to "worship" her, and he rejoined with a laugh, "I get down on my knees every morning and worship her."

Miss Ferguson said she will regard herself first as the wife of a Royal Navy helicopter pilot whose duties may mean many separations, but her job as an editor with an art-publishing firm will permit her to work at home.

"But I will not change...I'm not going to get thin, I'm not going to change."

— Sarah Ferguson

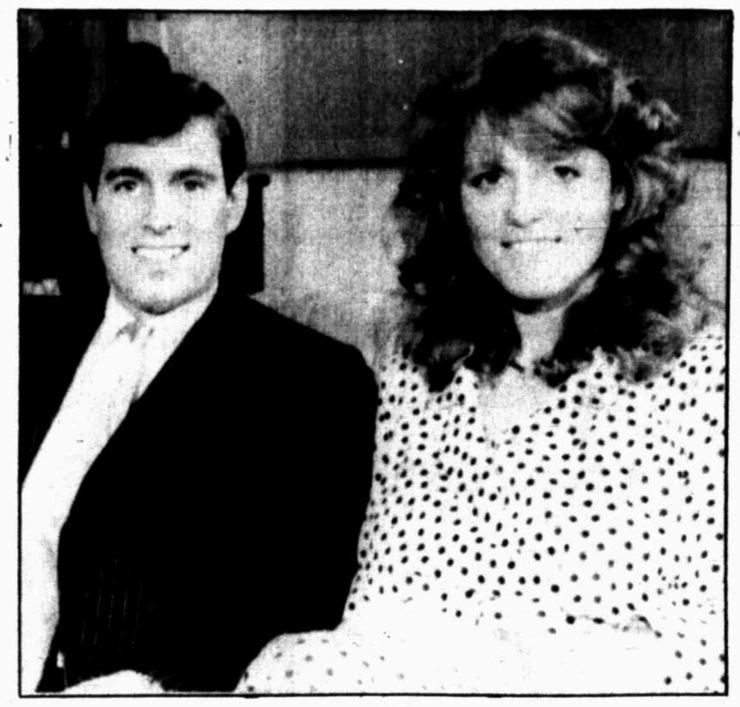

"Therefore, I can be part of his life and his career, and follow my own career," she said.

She added that as a princess, she would have to start thinking more before she speaks.

"But I will not change...I'm not going to get thin, I'm not going to change, I'm just going to be me."

Andrew, who at 19 signed up for 12 years in the navy, said he may try to transfer into the mainstream career officer pattern and stay on beyond 12 years.

Miss Ferguson said of the wedding extravaganza that includes carriage processions with cavalry escorts to Westminster Abbey: "It's going to be the best day of my life. The more the merrier, more carriages, more pomp. Wonderful. I love it."

Hassan, Peres continue talks for second day

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — King Hassan II and Prime Minister Shimon Peres today held their second straight day of talks on breaking the impasse in Middle East peace negotiations, and Western diplomats said the talks would end today.

Peres, the first Israeli prime minister to officially visit an Arab country other than Egypt, arranged to fly home late this afternoon, according to Western diplomats who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The palace refused to comment on the talks, but the official news agency, Maghreb Arabe Presse, said the king would make a televised nationwide address later today.

Peres and Hassan have not emerged from the king's retreat at Ifrane, 125 miles east of Rabat, since the Israeli prime minister arrived Monday night.

Hassan is chairman of the Arab League and president of the Jerusalem Committee of the Islamic Conference, the organization of Moslem nations.

The first Moroccan press reports of the discussions appeared today in the papers of independent political parties, while the official media maintained its silence.

The daily L'Opinion, the newspaper of the main opposition Independence Party, reported that the Hassan-Peres meeting aimed at "breaking open the door to peace in the Middle East and speeding up the peace process before October," when Peres is to be replaced as prime minister by Yitzhak Shamir of the right-wing Likud bloc.

L'Opinion and Western diplomats said Hassan's position in the talks was based on a plan adopted by the Arab nations in Fez in 1982 for mutual recognition and a permanent peace settlement with Israel in exchange for Israel's total withdrawal from occupied Arab territory, including east Jerusalem.

At the time, Israel rejected the plan.

Libyan radio reported today that Syrian President Hafez Assad, who severed relations with Morocco over the summit, discussed the move with Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi.

The report, monitored in Cyprus, said Assad called Gadhafi Tuesday night and discussed the "results of contacts with other Arab leaders and Syria's firm response." Further details were not reported.

Assad's government branded Hassan's meeting with Peres "black treason" and gave the Moroccan ambassador, Abdel-wahed Ben Massoud, a week to leave Damascus with four other Moroccan diplomats.

It also barred Syrian citizens from entering Morocco and instructed the Syrian ambassador in Rabat, Ahmad Issa, to close the legation and return home with his staff.

Gadhafi, whose country is linked to Hassan's by a 2-year-old treaty of union, said receiving Peres was a "grave violation" of that agreement, but stopped short of breaking formal ties.

Iraq said the meeting was a "deviationist" move by Hassan that would "further weaken and rip apart the fragmented Arab world."

An Algerian government spokesman branded the visit "an outrage against the entire Arab nation and an unspeakable violation of its most sacred cause, the liberation of Palestine."

Algeria and Morocco, divided over Morocco's annexation of the former Spanish Sahara, have not had diplomatic relations for nearly 11 years.

Moderate Arab nations such as Saudi Arabia, Jordan and Kuwait had little or no comment on the talks going on in Morocco. All presumably were among those given prior notice.

Saudi Arabia, however, formally denied knowing about the meeting ahead of time.

President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt said of the talks: "If they are going to present us with new initiatives for a solution, I support this with everything in my power and I believe the whole nation agrees with me, because we want to live in peace."

Egypt is the only Arab nation to have relations with Israel. In 1977, then President Anwar Sadat traveled to Jerusalem, meeting with Menachem Begin in the first encounter between an Arab leader and an Israeli prime minister.

Southwestern U.S. border new center of drug trade

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drug smuggling and related violence along the 2,000-mile Mexican border may soon rival the narcotics trafficking heyday of southern Florida six years ago, a federal customs official told Congress.

"The crisis on our Southwest border is evidenced by growing corruption in Mexico, increased acts of violence on both sides of the border, increased seizures of narcotics...and evidence of a huge increase in cash activity within the financial institutions located in U.S. border towns," William Rosenblatt, assistant commissioner of the U.S. Customs Service, said Tuesday.

"Colombian smugglers are settling along the border. They are buying the services of Mexicans to carry their drugs into the United States and the Colombians are bringing more violence with them," he said, adding that smugglers have built new landing strips and warehouses less than 100 miles south of the border.

Six years ago in Florida, he said, "Colombian drug smugglers were gunning each other down in crowded shopping centers in broad daylight...We are beginning to see many of the same warning signs we saw in southern Florida."

Rosenblatt told members of the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control that increased efforts by the customs service and other federal agencies will reduce drug trafficking along the Mexican border just as it did in Florida, but he added that cooperation from Mexican law enforcement officials would be "one of the most encouraging developments."

Committee members were sharply critical of State Department efforts to secure Mexican cooperation and warned that Congress would act if the administration does not get tough.

Committee Chairman Charles B. Rangel, D-N.Y., made reference to laws giving preferential treatment to Mexico, and added, "We know how to create an atmosphere that engenders more cooperation."

He recalled President Richard Nixon's closing of the Mexican border in the early 1970s, adding "Nixon obviously knew how to get the attention of the Mexican government."

Rep. Joseph J. DioGuardi, R-N.Y., added, "The State Department has to take a much heavier hand in using (our) economic muscle."

The criticism followed testimony by Mark Dion, deputy assistant secretary of state for international narcotics matters, who described the Mexican border as "the highest priority in our whole worldwide narcotics agenda."

"If this is the highest priority, God knows what we can expect to be coming across the Mexican border," said Rangel, who held hearings in the Southwest in January to hear local officials describe the border problem.

Dion said Mexico's faltering economy and the subsequent move by Mexican farmers to plant lucrative opium and marijuana crops, favorable weather for drug crops and a drop in the effectiveness of the U.S.-Mexican drug eradication program all contributed to the rising tide of narcotics from Mexico.

The amount of drug crops eradicated has remained steady or risen slightly, he said, but production is soaring. However, he predicted greater effectiveness in the next six months.

Dion said U.S. commercial firms under government contract have completed an aerial survey which should be available this fall to aid crop dusters spraying herbicide on drug plants. U.S. pilots are also training Mexican pilots to fly the crop dusters, he said.

U.S., Bolivia claim success in drug raids

EL ZORRO, Bolivia (AP) — U.S. and Bolivian officials, showing off the only cocaine laboratory seized in five days of joint operations, claim they have paralyzed this Latin American country's giant cocaine industry.

"Even if we don't seize any more laboratories, although we expect we will, we will at last have stopped cocaine trafficking in Bolivia," Ron Garibotto, a special agent for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, said during a tour of the lab Tuesday.

The processing complex, 140 miles northwest of the city of Trinidad in the heart of tropical northeastern Bolivia, was raided Friday in the first of six raids so far carried out by Bolivian police being ferried in U.S.-piloted American military helicopters.

The subsequent raids have failed to locate targets, either due to bad weather or poor information.

But Garibotto and other U.S. and Bolivian officials said fear of the operation has sent drug traffickers fleeing from the vast grasslands and jungle region known as the Beni, where dozens of cocaine processing centers are believed to be concealed.

The cloud cover at Trinidad lifted Tuesday, but officials refused to disclose whether new missions were under way or planned.

The raids have come under political and press criticism, but Interior Minister Fernando Barthelemy staunchly defended the program at a news conference in Trinidad, site of the operation's field headquarters 260 miles northeast of the capital of La Paz.

"I think that this work with the United States is successful from the point of view that we have broken the total structure maintained by the narcotics traffickers and we have stopped the fabrication, elaboration and export of cocaine from the time the operation began to this moment," he said.

"Many have asked why we have not had fundamental gains in all of the operations we have mounted," Barthelemy said. "The answer is that we could not obtain the collaboration of all of those who knew of this program and information was made public prematurely."

Barthelemy reiterated authorities' statements that the U.S. troops are only playing a supporting role in the drug sweep, piloting the six Black Hawk helicopters and never getting closer than about a mile to the drug factories.

"The U.S. crews stay in the helicopters and move them even farther back," Barthelemy said. "Afterward, they pick up the police and return to their base."

Gen. James Taylor, commander of the U.S. 193rd Infantry Brigade based in from Panama, was asked if the mission was as successful as expected.

"As best as we could determine before we came down here, it pretty well matches up," he replied.

A Bolivian policeman stands in front of cocaine processing chemicals and paraphernalia at Camp El Zorro in the Bolivian jungle Tuesday. The camp, which was raided during a joint Bolivian police-U.S. military exercise last Friday, was capable of producing up to 1,500 kilos of cocaine per week. It is the only camp to have been seized, so far in the joint exercise.

Mexico promises economic change

WASHINGTON (AP) — International financial officials say they are optimistic that a financial agreement that could reap billions of dollars for Mexico can help the economically ailing country begin to correct its debt problem.

In an unusual ceremonial signing of a "letter of intent" Tuesday, Mexico promised the International Monetary Fund it would make changes in its economy, in return for about $1.6 billion in new loans over the next 18 months.

The package could mean as much as $12 billion in additional loans for Mexico, said an international monetary source who spoke on condition his name not be used.

Mexico, battered by dropping oil prices, has been having problems making payments on its $98 billion foreign debt.

Mexico was in financial trouble even before the drop in the price of oil, its main generator of foreign currency.

Afghan government favors political solution

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — The Soviet-backed Afghan government favors a political settlement to its 7-year war with anti-communist rebels, state-run Kabul radio reported Tuesday.

In a broadcast monitored here, the radio quoted Najibullah, general secretary of the Communist Party, as saying, "If the government of Pakistan does not insist on the timetable of its choice for withdrawal of the limited forces of the Soviet Union from Afghanistan, the problem can be solved."

"We want a political settlement of the Afghan problem," he said in the broadcast, but added: "There are many other problems besides the withdrawal of the Soviet troops that should be solved first." He did not elaborate.

Pakistan and its Western allies say a complete withdrawal of the estimated 115,000 Soviet military personnel operating in Afghanistan is the key to ending the conflict. The Soviets sent the troops into Afghanistan in December 1979 to help the Marxist government battle the guerrillas.

The broadcast said Najibullah, who took over the powerful post of party leader in May, made the remarks at a news conference attended mainly by Soviet and East European correspondents in Kabul, the Afghan capital.

Pakistan and Afghanistan have held seven rounds of talks since 1982 under the auspices of the United Nations in Geneva. The eighth round is due to begin July 30.

The seventh round ended in May without agreeing on a timetable for the Soviet withdrawal. Pakistan insists the troops leave Afghanistan in about six months, while the Kabul government said the withdrawal will take four years.

In Peshawar, Pakistan, Burhanuddin Rabbani, who heads one of the largest guerrilla groups, the Jamiat-i-Islami, said the rebels would never agree to a cease-fire unless all Soviet troops withdraw.

U.S. aid to Afghan rebels comes disguised

EDITOR'S NOTE — The writer entered Afghanistan with a Moslem guerrilla unit to obtain material for this dispatch. Afghanistan's government bars Western reporters.

By BARRY RENFREW

GAGI, Afghanistan (AP) — To Moslem guerrillas fighting the Soviet army in Afghanistan, the United States is a virtual mystery despite the vast amounts of American aid they receive. A main reason is that U.S. aid comes in disguise.

Very few of the guerrillas and few of their commanders know that the United States is providing up to $400 million annually for weapons and supplies to fund their war against the communist government of Afghanistan and an estimated 115,000 Soviet troops.

Some of the guerrillas are openly hostile toward the United States because they believe it to be an enemy of the Islamic world.

Officially the United States will neither confirm nor deny that it gives assistance. Top guerrilla leaders and U.S. officials privately acknowledge, however, that the guerrillas receive huge amounts of American military assistance that is vital to the insurgents.

Few of the guerrillas realize that many of their weapons and other supplies come from the United States because of elaborate measures to conceal American involvement in the war. Only Soviet-designed weapons, usually purchased from manufacturers such as Egypt, are given to the guerrillas so that they can claim all their arms are captured from government or Soviet forces.

American-made weapons are never supplied to the guerrillas, a tactic that fools many of the insurgents as well.

"No weapons come from America. We get nothing from America. I have never seen American weapons," said Yaqub Shah, a senior guerrilla commander in eastern Afghanistan.

The U.S. arms supply is channeled through the Pakistani armed forces, according to various sources, who insisted on not being identified.

China, Egypt, Saudi Arabia and other Moslem nations also aid and fund the guerrillas and Pakistan allows the insurgents to use bases on its territory. None of the guerrillas' foreign backers officially acknowledge they provide military assistance.

Mohammad Anwar, another top guerrilla commander, said the United States and other nations support the guerrillas because of their own disputes with the Soviet Union.

"As long as other countries are sure we can resist the Soviets they will help us," he said.

Some guerrilla commanders and political leaders contend the United States is not doing enough to support them. They contend the U.S. government should back the guerrillas on the same scale as the Soviets support the Afghan communist regime.

Guerrilla officials say they would prefer that U.S. aid and that of other nations come directly to them; they contend that large amounts are siphoned off by corruption in the supply channel through Pakistan.

"We don't know how much aid is given," said Mohammad Karim, a guerrilla political official. "We don't know who gets what. But much is taken."

The Afghan government contends the guerrillas have no popular support and are American mercenaries. Every night the Afghan state radio denounces the guerrillas as bandits and "servants of American imperialism."

Some guerrilla leaders are openly hostile toward the United States because of their perception that U.S. policies are anti-Islam, a theory that possibly has come across the border from Ayatollah Ruholiah Khomeini's Iran.

But most guerrilla leaders and commanders argue that the insurgents should accept aid from anyone willing to help them. They dismiss suggestions they are fighting for U.S. interests.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Mayor vows to obtain goal

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico (AP) — The opposition mayor of this northern city, who ended the third week of a hunger strike Tuesday aimed at forcing honest elections, said he'll obtain his goal or suffer the consequences.

"There's no reason now for me to discontinue the fast," Luis Alvarez, 66, said as he rested in a tent in a public park.

The white-haired politician, a member of the conservative National Action Party, or PAN, launched his hunger strike on July 1 to pressure the government for honest elections July 6 throughout the state of Chihuahua, bordering Texas and New Mexico.

But claims of vote rigging in favor of the dominant Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, surfaced just as the polls opened.

In addition to the gubernatorial race, the PRI won 14 legislative posts and 65 of 67 mayoralities, including the one in this state capital.

Workers to get new town

MOSCOW (AP) — A new township is being built south of the stricken Chernobyl power station for 10,000 plant workers, and a giant effort is under way in the Ukraine to house evacuees from the nuclear disaster, the newspaper Pravda said today.

The report in the Communist Party daily indicated that most of the 100,000 people evacuated from an 18-mile radius of the plant after the April 26 reactor explosion and fire will not return home.

Twenty-eight people died in the accident and its aftermath, the Soviets have said.

Pravda noted, however, that two villages west of the plant in the evacuated zone were reinhabited last week after it was determined that radiation posed no danger there and the settlements had been decontaminated by the military.

Underground paper leaked

MOSCOW (NYT) — An underground document made available here says the Soviet Union can halt what it calls a backward slide only by democratizing its society and allowing a political opposition.

The statement, by a group calling itself "Movement for a Socialist Renewal," is dated Leningrad, Nov. 21, 1985, and is addressed "to the citizens of the Soviet Union."

The document was made available to two Western reporters — Steven Hurst of NBC News and Martin Walker of The Guardian, a British newspaper — by what they said were Soviet officials.

The group claiming authorship has not been previously identified, and it is impossible to determine how widespread a viewpoint it represents. It describes itself as "a group of Soviet citizens with objective information at their disposal."

Man who shot police officers, held four hostages surrenders

MUNHALL, Pa. (AP) — A gunman who wounded two police officers and held four people hostage after an argument with his girlfriend surrendered early today, ending a 16½-hour standoff.

Ford

Paul W. Ford, 29, of nearby Braddock, was brought out of the building in which he had taken four hostages about about 3 a.m. handcuffed to his attorney, Jim Ecker, and another attorney, Paul Gettleman, both of whom had negotiated with him.

Ford had released two hostages earlier, but the two he kept with him until the end, his daughter, Zetra Ford, 6, and Nikki Vandiver, 4 — were carried out by Robert Kroner, superintendent of Allegheny County Police as hundreds of people surrounding the floodlit building clapped and cheered.

Neither was injured, said Kroner, who dangled Ford's .38-caliber pistol from one hand as he left the building.

"I think he was relieved," said Kroner of Ford, a sometime construction worker with a long history of arrests and convictions for violent crimes. "You're talking about a human being. When we got his weapon it was all over."

Kroner said Ford was taken to Allegheny County Jail in Pittsburgh and would face charges of aggravated assault and battery in connection with the shootings of the two police officers. Neither was seriously wounded.

Helmeted police with rifles and shotguns surrounded the apartment building in this community just south of Pittsburgh, as a crowd of onlookers that swelled with the day's drama stood by or leaned out of windows.

Kroner said Ford gave in to the entreaties of the attorneys and a constable while he sat with his back against the wall of a second-floor corridor in the building, his gun at his side, as the children lay sleeping beside him.

Kroner, said the children had not appeared to be frightened during the ordeal. Ford had made no demands, he said, but appeared to be scared that he would face a murder charge after shooting two police officers at the start of the standoff Tuesday.

Teen parents don't want more children

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Twice married and the father of two, 15-year-old Hal Warden is looking to the end of summer vacation and beginning ninth grade.

Catherine Warden, Hal's 14-year-old wife who gave birth July 8 to Ashley, his second daughter, plans to attend private school part-time after taking last year off on maternity leave.

Both of the youths, who live with Hal's parents, say the birth marks the end of having children.

"When I first got pregnant, I thought one was all I wanted," Catherine said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

"I love her," said Hal of his new daughter. "But there were seven kids in my family and we were always fighting, so I don't want any more."

Catherine's pregnancy is not a rare statistic in Tennessee. In 1984, 16,400 teens became pregnant — about 45 a day, the state Center for Health Statistics said in a report in May. One in 47 girls age 10 to 17 became pregnant.

Hal and Catherine were married Feb. 4, just a few months after discovering she was pregnant. They moved into his parents' home and hope to move next week into their own trailer nearby in a rural area near the city limits.

"I was waiting for baby's navel cord to fall off, and it fell off today, so we'll move in a few days," Catherine said.

Hal was with Catherine when she had the 8 pound, 1½-ounce infant at Nashville Memorial Hospital.

"Catherine was in labor for 10 hours," he said, adding that "it was a big surprise" when she got pregnant and he had been too embarrassed to ask his his parents to supply him with condoms or buy them himself.

Meanwhile, Hal's first wife, Wendy Chappell Warden, 17, on Saturday brought the couple's 2½-year-old daughter, Heather Nicole Warden, to Nashville from Richmond, Va., where she lives with her parents, Hal said.

He said Heather is to spend the rest of the summer here under terms of his divorce agreement which allows him three months of custody each year.

Hal began dating his second wife in August, a month before his divorce from Wendy became final. He was 13 and Wendy 15 when they married in January 1984, after she learned she was pregnant. The marriage took place in Chugiak, Alaska, where she lived with her parents.

Hal and Wendy were involved in a long and bitter custody battle, with Hal still vowing to obtain full custody, although no court dates have been set.

He said Catherine "filled a place in my heart that was gone" after his divorce from Wendy.

Hal said his father, Herbert, still supports him and his family.

"He supports me about 99½ percent," Hal said. "I do what I can. That's all I can do."

Catherine said Hal wanted her to raise the children and not to work. "He won't let me. He says taking care of the children is my job. That's just fine with me."

In the meantime, Hal is working in his father's asbestos removal business.

Bill would create separate Social Security agency

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill that would make the Social Security Administration an independent agency and bar the government from using Social Security trust fund investments to increase federal borrowing authority, has been approved by the House.

The measure, passed 401-0 Tuesday, would break the Social Security Administration out from the Department of Health and Human Services.

Establishing an independent Social Security agency "takes it off the political football field entirely," said Rep. Jim Jones, D-Okla., the bill's floor manager and chairman of the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security.

The bill would establish a new agency headed by a bipartisan three-member Social Security Board appointed to staggered six-year terms by the president. A commissioner who would administer the agency would be appointed by the board to a five-year term.

Jones said an independent agency is needed to administer Social Security programs because "the quality of service provided by Social Security in many cases has been declining over the last decade."

"SSA's long tradition of outstanding public service has deteriorated in the day-to-day management of Social Security," he said.

While it favors the ban on disinvestment of Social Security trust-fund investments, the Reagan administration opposes establishment of the independent agency.

The Treasury Department redeemed long-term Social Security investment bonds worth $9.8 billion in 1984 and $27.9 billion in 1985 when the government's debt ceiling was about to expire in those years.

Though Reagan administration officials insist the money was used to pay Social Security benefits, critics in Congress and elsewhere contend it was actually a device to create more borrowing authority for the government.

"This bill simply assures that the Treasury Department cannot make an end-run around the debt ceiling while awaiting congressional action," said Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas.

The House action came as the federal government was within $8.3 billion of hitting the current debt ceiling of $2.079 trillion.

Legislation pending in the Senate to raise the debt ceiling to $2.3 trillion contains a similar ban on disinvesting Social Security trust funds to extend the government's borrowing authority.

The Senate Finance Commmittee adopted a clarifying amendment to the bill Tuesday that would only allow trust-fund assets to be used to pay Social Security benefits or administer the program when the debt ceiling is hit.

Current law allows redemption of trust-fund investments when there isn't enough money from revenues to pay benefits.

"Trust funds are not a convenient cash box when the debt ceiling has been reached," Jones said.

Seven indicted for allegedly selling plans to Libya

ATLANTA (AP) — Five Americans and two Libyans have been indicted in a $50 million plot to sell two military transport planes and spare parts to Libya, a federal prosecutor said.

The indictment, to be unsealed today, names three California-based companies and two West German firms that claimed they were going to use the aircraft for oil exploration in the West African country of Benin, said acting U.S. Attorney Steve Cowen.

The seven indicted, who included five from California, bought the L-100 transport planes from Lockheed, which was not charged, Cowen said Tuesday.

One person had been arrested by Tuesday night, he said.

The four-engine propjet planes are the civilian version of the C-130 military cargo plane and have been built at Lockheed-Georgia's plant in suburban Marietta since 1953.

The indictment contends that Libya had planned to convert the aircraft into KC-130 tankers, which can refuel planes in the air.

They were flown from Marietta to Newfoundland to France, Benin and then to Libya, Cowen said.

The document alleges involvement by the Libyan military, Cowen said.

NBC Nightly News reported Tuesday that the chief of the Libyan armed forces was among those to be indicted.

United States policy forbids the delivery of American aircraft to Libya.

Cowen said the indictment was handed up in Atlanta because Lockheed-Georgia built the planes in the area and the indictment alleges some of the defendants dealt with Lockheed officials in or near Atlanta.

The government of Col. Moammar Gadhafi paid $42 million for eight C-130 cargo planes in 1972, but in the eroding relationship between Libya and the United States, the State Department denied an export license for the planes.

Heat wave killing chickens in Georgia

GAINESVILLE, Ga. (AP) — The circles of wet grass, the flies and the smell of decay are the only signs that remain of the piles of dead broilers that have stood outside Carl Rogers' two chickenhouses all week.

Surveying the scene Tuesday, Rogers said the triple-digit heat began killing his broilers late last week, uffocating 400 on Thursday and 80 Friday. He and his son found 1,200 more dead on Saturday and another 1,000 on Sunday.

But the real crisis hit Sunday night when the pump in his well burned out while he was watering down the broilers with a hose. By the time he had it replaced seven hours later, 6,000 had died from dehydration.

By the time Rogers, his son and several hired hands had removed the 6,000 carcasses by hand from among the living, piles of dead birds stood five feet high outside the six doors leading into the chicken houses.

"These last five days have just been a disaster," said Rogers, 38, whose flock of 33,000 was reduced by one-third less than a week before the broilers would have been old enough to ship to market.

"My wife and I have decided that God's putting me out of this business. It's very discouraging with a drought and a heat wave. I've worked my butt off for five days and I've lost at least $3,000," he said.

Rogers isn't alone.

The heat wave has claimed about 610,000 broilers in Georgia in the last 12 days, Abit Massey, executive director of the Georgia Poultry Federation, said Tuesday. Overall, Georgia's $6 billion poultry industry, one of the nation's largest, is losing about $5 million a week, he said.

Like most poultry growers, Rogers had few options when temperatures stayed above 95 degrees and the fans and misting mechanism in the roof of his chicken houses failed to cool his chickens, which have no sweat glands.

His contract with Mar-Jac Inc., one of four major poultry companies in Gainesville, required him to grow the chicks they had supplied for 48 days before he turned them in for processing.

Stop-gap measures such as spraying the hot tin roofs of the chicken houses with a hose rarely work and besides, Rogers said, most growers barely have enough water in their wells to supply the birds with drinking water.

Some growers build a water cooling system into one wall of their chicken houses, which generally are 400 feet long, but such systems are too expensive for most people in the business.

Harold London, the broiler manager at Mar-Jac, said his company employs about 200 contract growers like Rogers, who receive day-old chicks, feed and medicine and provide the labor, land and chicken houses to grow them.

London said the growers usually lose about 5 percent of their broilers to heat during the summer. In the last two weeks, he said, the mortality rate has been 12 percent, costing Mar-Jac about $140,000 in lost income.

A larger concern, however, is the company's water supply. London said it takes about six gallons of water to process a single broiler and that the company processes about 650,000 a week.

Gainesville, which supplies much of Mar-Jac's water, has not restricted industrial water use, but that could change soon, he said.

Rogers, meanwhile, may be in better shape than most growers because his business is a sidelight to his primary job as an insurance agent.

He also said his remaining 20,000 broilers will turn 48 days old today, meaning that Mar-Jac will pick them up for processing.

Explosions hit petroleum storage facility

PETAL, Miss. (AP) — Explosions blasted a deep crater at a liquefied petroleum storage facility Tuesday, injuring at least 14 people and sparking fires that shot hundreds of feet into the air and threatened tanks holding thousands of gallons of propane.

The explosions occurred at Enterprise Gas Products on U.S. 11 near Petal and possibly involved an underground pipeline, said Jim Darrah, area Civil Defense Director. He said the blast dug a crater up to 40 feet deep and 200 yards wide.

"We still have a serious situation here because there is the possibility of additional explosions," Darrah said. "We're getting water in to cool down those threatened tanks."

Petal Fire Inspector Aubra Evans said the cause of the blast was unknown, but Darrah said a line rupture may have been responsible.

"There's a big crater right where a line was supposed to be located. There is a tank truck in the crater," Darrah said.

Officials said the injured, most suffering from burns, were taken to two hospitals in Hattiesburg.

About 200 people living within two miles of the facility had been evacuated and the command post for those battling the fires had to be moved several hundred yards back from the crater, Darrah said.

He said flames from the crater, at one point shooting several hundred feet into the air, were not as intense by early afternoon but that a column of thick, black smoke continued to pour from the crater.

"We now have seven in our emergency room with serious burns," said Lowery Woodall, executive director at Forrest General Hospital, adding that all were in stable condition.

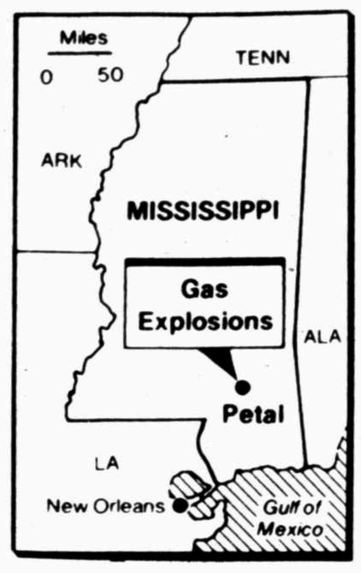

There were seven more injured at Methodist Hospital, said administrative assistant Ruby Guest.

Enterprise spokesman Jim Eastburn said officials had not been able to get into the fire area for a close look at the scene.

Eastburn said the company's emergency response team was coming from Houston, Texas, and was en route. He said company officials do not think the pipeline involved belongs to Enterprise. Seven liquid petroleum companies operate underground storage and terminal facilities in the area.

Rajneesh disciples sentenced in poisoning plot

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Disciples of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh engaged in "germ warfare against an entire city" by spiking restaurant food in The Dalles with salmonella bacteria that sickened 750 people, officials said.

Two former leaders of the guru's sect, including Ma Anand Sheela, 36, Rajneesh's former personal secretary, were sentenced Tuesday on federal charges stemming from the plot.

The state Health Division said 750 people reported gastrointestinal illness after they ate at 10 restaurants in the northern Oregon town in September 1984. Forty-five people were hospitalized.

Sheela and Ma Anand Puja, former head of the Rajneesh Medical Corp., pleaded guilty in the case to a federal charge of conspiracy to tamper with consumer products.

Each was sentenced to 4½ years in prison and Sheela, a native of India who also admitted immigration fraud, was ordered deported after her sentence. She also was sentenced to 20 years in prison in a state hearing on other charges.

Prosecutors said the poisoning plot was part of an effort by Rajneeshee leaders to defeat candidates on the Wasco County ballot.

It was coupled with an effort to bring in transients from around the country to Rajneeshpuram, the sect's central Oregon commune, so they could vote in the November 1984 election, prosecutors said.

Former Rajneeshee Ma Ava told FBI agents she was given a wig and blue clothes, rather than the red clothes Rajneeshees normally wore, before she was sent on one of several missions to contaminate food in The Dalles, according to a prosecution statement submitted in U.S. District Court.

Ava said Sheela asked her to put the bacteria in salad bars and coffee creamers at the restaurants, and that Puja gave her the disguise and six vials filled with a brown liquid that contained the bacteria.

Among the victims of the contamination was an infant born two days after his mother ate contaminated food at one of the restaurants, prosecutors said. The child, who was born in septic shock, was given only a 5 percent chance of survival. He recovered and no deaths were reported.

In the state hearing, she and Puja also pleaded guilty to charges of attempted murder of the group's doctor, assault on county officials and arson.

The assault charge involved giving poisoned drinking water to two Wasco County officials; the arson count charged she set a fire that damaged the county planning office.

Sheela agreed to pay $469,000 in state fines and restitution.

A third woman, Ma Shanti Bhadra, 40, of Perth, Australia, also pleaded guilty to attempted murder of the doctor, Swami Devaraj, and was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

The three, who fled the state last year after Rajneesh accused them of plotting against him, were arrested in West Germany in October and extradited to Oregon in February.

Rajneeshee informants have told investigators the July 1985 attack on Devaraj stemmed from a power struggle.

In the immigration fraud charge, Sheela was accused of helping to arrange more than 400 sham marriages so Rajneesh's foreign disciples could remain in the United States.

House votes to impeach Claiborne

Claiborne

WASHINGTON (AP) — Judge Harry E. Claiborne's impeachment case is going to the Senate, and the imprisoned jurist is "going to the mat" to fight the House's 406-0 recommendation to oust him, the judge's lawyer says.

Before Tuesday's vote making the convicted tax cheater the 14th federal official impeached by the House, lawmakers bitterly attacked Claiborne for drawing his $78,700 salary while in prison.

"The judge mocks us, the judge is laughing at us," said Rep. George W. Gekas, R-Pa. "He mocks the entire system. Let us impeach."

Leading the impeachment arguments, however, were three veterans of the historic effort to remove Richard M. Nixon as president in 1974: Judiciary Committee Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., ranking committee Republican Hamilton Fish Jr., and Rep. Robert W. Kastenmier, chairman of the panel's subcommittee on courts.

Claiborne, noted Rodino, is serving a two-year prison term while retaining many of the "emoluments of the office which he has disgraced."

But Oscar Goodman, attorney for the chief U.S. district judge for Nevada, said Claiborne's resolve is "stronger than ever for a full and complete trial" in the Senate.

"We're going to the mat," he said. "The judge has taken the position he's willing to go through this ignominy and scorn because he feels that as a true American, the public is entitled to know of the improprieties engaged in by their government."

Goodman has consistently described Claiborne as the victim of a government vendetta, because the Democratic judge often has fought with federal attorneys and prosecutors. Government lawyers who prosecuted Claiborne deny the accusation.

The House voted for a single impeachment resolution that contained four separate articles. Articles I and II paralleled counts of the criminal indictment against Claiborne for income tax evasion, while the third contended the judge's 1984 conviction constituted an impeachable offense. Article IV said Claiborne harmed the reputation of the federal judiciary.

Impeachment is the process granted Congress by the Constitution to remove federal officials from office. The House votes to impeach, in effect charge, a defendant with offenses that would undermine the system of government.

The Senate then conducts a trial and, by a two-thirds vote, can remove the official from office and ban him from ever again holding a federal job.

The focus next shifts to the Senate. Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said he expected a trial this fall.

But the Senate Rules Committee will meet Thursday to review impeachment trial rules originally proposed in 1974 when a Nixon trial loomed. The president short-circuited the impeachment process by resigning before the House voted, citing his loss of support in Congress.

One proposed Senate rule would allow much of the trial to be conducted before a committee of senators, holding only the final stages of the case before the full Senate.

Goodman said he would oppose such a system, contending the full Senate should be there not only to hear evidence, but to judge the demeanor and credibility of witnesses.

Rodino, D-N.J., argued that confidence in the federal judiciary would be "gravely jeopardized" if Claiborne is not removed.

Fish, R-N.Y., mentioned another aspect of Claiborne's financial situation, pointing out that as of Sept. 1, 1988, Claiborne would be 71 years old and have completed 10 years of service.

"He would then be eligible to retire on the full salary of that office," Fish said. "Judge Claiborne is more than a mere embarrassment. He is a disgrace — an affront — to the judicial office and the judicial branch he was appointed to serve."

Kastenmeier, D-Wis., author of the four impeachment articles against Claiborne, assured House colleagues that there was "substantial evidence" to justify Claiborne's removal.

TMI train allowed to cross Nebraska

LINCOLN, Neb (AP) — A train carrying damaged radioactive fuel from the Three Mile Island nuclear plant was allowed to roll into Nebraska early today, 3½ hours after Gov. Bob Kerrey ordered it halted in Kansas.

Kerrey on Tuesday ordered the Nebraska State Patrol to stop the train, saying that U.S. Department of Energy officials had not notified him or the patrol that the fuel would be coming through on its way to Idaho.

The train was stopped at Marysville, Kan., about 9 p.m., and was given clearance to cross the border, about 10 miles away, at 12:30 a.m., said Union Pacific railroad spokesman John Bromley.

The train stopped at Marysville "to avoid any state border confrontatioin," said W. Don Nelson, Kerrey's chief of staff who flew with state patrol Col. Bob Tagg to talk with federal officials riding the train.

Kerrey said Nelson and Tagg had the authority to allow the train to enter Nebraska without consulting him.

He ordered the train stopped because there had been no prior notification about the shipment, Nelson said. The train is carrying the radioactive fuel to the National Engineering Laboratory in Idaho Falls, Idaho.

"We negotiated with the federal government so that the state has a role in these shipments," Kerrey said. "This is a serious breach of faith on the part of the federal government."

State officials have a right to know about such shipments to ensure public safety and protection, he said.

NATION IN BRIEF

Some Marines being trained on motorcycles

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (AP) — Marines are being trained on motorcycles for the first time since World War II, but the sleek dirt bikes are quite different from the clumsy two-wheelers used during the 1940s, officials say.

The new bikes, Kawasaki 250 dirt bikes costing $2,800 apiece, are designed to handle the mud, sand and hilly terrain where many battles occur and would be used primarily to carry messages during wartime and deliver necessities.

The cycles can carry up to 50 pounds of equipment, and the liquid-cooled engines are designed to take long hours of use in wilting temperatures.

Nine volunteers and seven instructors recently finished the first training session, officials said. The plan is to eventually train volunteers and return them to their units, awaiting service in maneuvers or combat.

Getting volunteers for the pilot program has been no problem, but controlling their zeal is a chore, said Gunnery Sgt. Duet Gray, who's in charge of the program.

Jury awards $30 million

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jury Tuesday awarded $30 million to a former member of the Church of Scientology who contended his 11-year affiliation with the organization ruined him emotionally and financially.

Larry Wollersheim said during the 94-day trial of his lawsuit that the organization forced him to cut off contact with his family and branded him an enemy when he suffered a mental breakdown.

The Superior Court jury deliberated eight days before ordering the organization to pay Wollersheim $5 million in compensatory damages and $25 million in punitive damages.

Wollersheim said Scientology members harassed him after he left the organization in 1979, forcing him to move and change jobs.

In closing arguments, Scientology lawyer Earle Cooley said Wollersheim was an opportunist whose mental problems were caused by drug abuse.

Senator's license revoked

CHICAGO (AP) — U.S. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski is losing his driver's license for one year after pleading guilty to drunken driving charges in Wisconsin, state officials said.

Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, pleaded guilty and paid a $555 fine last month after he was stopped by police near Burlington, Wis., and refused to take a breath test for blood alcohol content.

The Illinois secretary of state's office mailed the Illinois Democrat a letter Tuesday, informing him that his license was being revoked.

"It's not unexpected," said David P. Lowe, Rosenkowski's attorney in Milwaukee. Lowe said the congressman had expected the action because of a reciprocal agreement with the Wisconsin Department of Motor Vehicles.

Rostenkowski, 58, is expected to receive the letter Thursday. State officials say his license will be revoked from July 29 until July 29, 1987.

Nervous robber drops loot

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A nervous bank robber lost the two bags of loot he took in a bank holdup, police said.

The robber dropped the first bag in the parking lot of the First Interstate Bank branch he robbed when a dye pack exploded and lost the second while being chased by a young man from the bank.

The dye pack in the second exploded as the bag was returned to the bank, said Salt Lake County Sheriff's Lt. Ben Forbes.

Up, up and away

The Congressional Record shows that during 1985 three of every five members of the House of Representatives and 43 of the 100 U.S. Senators made extensive trips abroad at taxpayers' expense.

The bill? A cool $4.76 million. Most of that, moreover, was for food and lodging. A major portion of the transportation outlay will appear on the ledgers of the Defense Department which provided aircraft for the lawmakers at costs generally exceeding the fares charged by commercial airlines.

Overseas trips by members of Congress are fairly commonplace and, in many cases, justified. But not every time. Congressmen and senators, of course, have been getting away with this boondoggle for years on the grounds that they should study world conditions first hand in order to vote intelligently on international matters put before them on Capitol Hill.

While that argument undoubtedly is justified in many instances, was it pure chance that put House Speaker Tip O'Neill, 10 other Congressmen and seven aides in Ireland during the March week that St. Patrick's Day occurred? And was it just coincidence that practically everybody in the O'Neill entourage had an Irish surname? It really sounds like it was "Old Home Week" — courtesy of the U.S. taxpayer, of course.

One of the congressmen piling up the most mileage abroad professed to be extremely hurt by the fingers pointed at him. He insisted that journeying through strange lands in search of facts was exhausting work and that the accomodations and transportation were often uncomfortable.

That member of Congress should try telling that to one of his constituents who is holding down two jobs to support his family and still shell out for congressional junkets.

Watch for repair 'sham'

Buyers, beware of a recently-enacted legislative statute for yet another method in which unscrupulous auto mechanics (and not all mechanics are crooks) can and do take advantage of customers.

Picture, for a moment, the following very real situation. You, the consumer of the mechanic's services, take your car to an auto repairman whose record with the Better Business Bureau has been investigated. The mechanic informs you that the work on the car will be "minor," and it will be worked on soon. You ask for a definition of "minor," and he advises you with confidence that neither the work nor the bill will be great. With that vague answer, you inform him that any work done must be approved by you, and you provide him with your phone number.

Not only has the mechanic, at the end of the first day, not called to advise you of the determined problem, but he has 1) "farmed out" some of the work, 2) has ordered a part to be sent by bus from Dallas, due the next day, and 3) has not the slightest idea of how much your bill will be. You express your displeasure in not being notified for approval, but admit to yourself that once a mechanic has your car, and you do not have an estimate in writing, you are at his mercy.

You arrive to pick up your car the next day. The mechanic, who is not a dealer, informs you that though he expected the delivery of the part ordered, it has not arrived, and further, if you want your car for the weekend, you must pay the entire bill which is over $250 and he will put the part in the following week. You pay the bill, having to specifically request that the "services due" be itemized.

Well, sucker, your part is not in the next day, or the next, or the next, or the next. So you stop payment on the check because you've paid for parts not received yet due, and realize that the whole thing is a "sham." He calls you the next day to inform you that your part has been picked up. You arrive to take delivery of the item and readily offer to write another check for an adjusted amount because 1) of the stop-payment check and 2) you no longer desire that he install the part, which should result in less labor. He insists upon the original amount because "he intended to install the part free of charge," being the wonderful person that he is. Ha! So upon his confirmation that the part is in the back, you write another check, and after he has the second check in his hands he tells you that the part has not yet been picked up yet.

So you leave his premises in your car and stop payment on a second check. No telephone contact is made by either the consumer or the mechanic. One month later, he tows your car away from your place of work. Guess what! The police will not charge him with theft because, though it is debatable, since the customer stopped payment the mechanic may claim a "Possessory Lien," not to be filed of record and not to be confused with a Mechanic's Lien.

Then the justice, unfortunately, must be found in the courtroom at the customer's financial and emotional expense. Consumers beware!

Ball mistakenly included

In response to Jeanne Green's letter regarding local caterers for charity benefits, the Crystal Ball benefitting High Sky Children's Ranch was mistakenly included in a listing of Midland charities that chose to use outside caterers.

The Holiday Inn Convention Center catered the Crystal Ball at a cost comparable to last year's in-town caterer. The Holiday Inn made every effort to assist us in keeping the cost within our budget, which we very much appreciated.

We wish to thank the community and others in the Permian Basin for their continued support of the children of High Sky during a very difficult economical period.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

One hundred years ago, on July 23, 1886, New York City saloonkeeper Steve Brodie claimed to have dived off the Brooklyn Bridge into the East River.

On this date:

In 1829, William Austin Burt of Mount Vernon, Mich., received a patent for his "typographer," a forerunner of the typewriter.

In 1885, Ulysses S. Grant, the 18th president of the United States, died in Mount McGregor, N.Y., at the age of 63.

In 1904, by some accounts, the ice cream cone was invented by a Charles E. Menches during the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in St. Louis.

In 1914, Austria-Hungary issued an ultimatum to Serbia following the killing of Archduke Francis Ferdinand by a Serbian terrorist. The dispute led to World War I.

In 1945, French Marshal Henri Petain, who had headed the Vichy government during World War II, went on trial, charged with betraying his country. Although convicted and sentenced to death, Petain was spared.

In 1951, Henri Petain died.

In 1958, Britain's Queen Elizabeth II named the first four women to peerage in the House of Lords.

In 1984, Vanessa Williams resigned as Miss America because of nude photographs of her that were being published in Penthouse magazine.

Ten years ago: One of three men sought in the Chowchilla, Calif., kidnappings of 26 children and their bus driver surrendered to authorities.

Five years ago: Israel's prime minister, Menachem Begin, labeled "astonishing" U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's charge that Israel had set back Mideast peace efforts by bombing Iraq's nuclear reactor and Palestinian targets in Lebanon.

One year ago: In his first diplomatic ceremony since his cancer surgery, President Reagan greeted Chinese President Li Xiannian at the White House.

Israel may have own cluster bombs

WASHINGTON — The Jonathan Pollard spy case has apparently inspired a series of leaks by government officials who don't subscribe wholeheartedly to President Reagan's staunch support of Israel.

Jack Anderson

The latest of these stories involved cluster bombs. U.S. Customs officials leaked word that Israel is suspected of trying to obtain U.S. technology on the grisly bomb.

We wrote about Israel's use of U.S.-made cluster bombs in Lebanon four years ago. Ariel Sharon, Israeli defense minister at the time of the 1982 invasion, admitted to us that he had authorized use of the bombs, despite Israel's 1978 pledge to use them only in the event of an attack by more than one Arab country.

Now our associate Donald Goldberg has obtained a secret Defense Department document that shows U.S. intelligence agencies have known for at least four years about Israel's development of its own cluster-bomb technology. The project was designed specifically to give Israel cluster bombs it can use without restrictions.

"Both Israel-and U.S.-made cluster bombs have probably been used by the Israeli Air Force in the conflict in Lebanon," the Defense Intelligence Agency report concluded. It was dated July 16, 1982, the very day that President Reagan stopped the shipment of new cluster bombs to Israel because of the controversy surrounding their use in the Lebanon invasion.

This allowed the White House to avoid an investigation into Israel's use of the U.S.-supplied bombs. If such an investigation had established that Israel had broken the 1978 agreement on cluster-bomb restrictions — and it undoubtedly would have — then sale of all military items to Israel would have been stopped by law.

The secret DIA report explained that Israel's development of its own cluster bombs was "undoubtedly spurred" by the widespread criticism of their use in Lebanon, and Jerusalem's concern that the United States "might cut off supplies."

But the point is that even in 1982, Israel had a well-established capability to produce cluster bombs and was "no longer completely dependent upon U.S. supplies of such munitions," the report says.

The report goes into some detail: "Israeli-made cluster bombs include the TAC-A, B, C, D and apparently also the TAL-1. These bombs were developed in the 1970s at the Rafael Armament Development Authority north of Haifa and are probably made there. Production of these munitions reflects Israel's desire not to be completely dependent on the U.S. for defense materiel."

Sharon's disclosure to us in 1982 was the first public acknowledgment by an Israeli official that the cluster bombs were being used in Lebanon. The bombs are canisters full of golf ball-sized pellets that explode like grenades on contact with a hard surface. But when they land on soft ground, the pellets often fail to detonate; they become alluring toys for children, who are then cruelly maimed or killed when the balls explode.

The secret Pentagon report raises an interesting question: If Israel has been developing its own cluster bombs since the 1970s, why would it need American technology, stolen or not? Yet this is what Customs Service officials have charged.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: Administration officials are quietly seething over the publicity surrounding U.S. military assistance to Bolivia in its battle against cocaine producers. The operation was supposed to be a deep, dark secret, but Bolivian officials leaked it. One reason the White House wanted the operation kept under wraps is because Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger opposed the plan, arguing that it would use Pentagon resources in a non-military venture. But Vice President Bush got President Reagan to overrule Weinberger, and the White House wanted to hush up the disagreement.

WATER, WATER... Drought is the big problem in some areas of the country, but not in Durango, Colo. There the big dust-up is over the proposed Animas-La Plata irrigation project, which will cost at least $550 million. The federal government wants farmers and other local residents to pay a bigger share of the cost; they say they can't afford it. Environmentalists are worried about the threat to wildlife. But Indian tribes in the area say the government is obligated to provide them with water, and they'll sue if the dam isn't built. Looks like a long hot summer in Durango.

MINI-EDITORIAL: We'd like to believe that William Rehnquist and Antonin Scalia are the conservative, strict constructionists President Reagan thinks they are. But we worry about the undisguised glee with which their Supreme Court appointments have been greeted by the radical right. These ideologues deplore "judicial activism" only when the decisions go against their far-right views; they are clearly hoping that Rehnquist and Scalia portend an activist Supreme Court that will ram the radical right minority's fiercely held beliefs down all our throats. We hope they're wrong.

NOW IT CAN BE TOLD: Skilled spotters at seven airports within easy striking distance of the Statue of Liberty had computerized lists of 293,000 privately owned airplanes' registration markings to guard against terrorism over the Fourth of July weekend. The lists were provided by the Federal Aviation Administration's Mike Monroney Aeronautical Center in Oklahoma City. Using the lists, the spotters could identify instantly the owners of any planes straying into the area where President Reagan, French President Francois Mitterrand and other dignitaries were gathered for the centennial celebration of "Miss Liberty."

JAMES RESTON

Burger may reclaim 'miracle of Philadelphia'

WASHINGTON — From George Washington's military headquarters at Liberty Pole, New Jersey (now Englewood), Alexander Hamilton, the general's aide-de-camp, wrote a remarkable 17-page letter in September of 1780 insisting that the 13 sovereign states were not fit to govern the country in war or peace.

James Reston

"There is only one remedy," he said, "to call a convention of all the states" and to prepare the people for change by "sensible and popular writings."

In this same vein, Warren Burger has retired as chief justice of the United States to lead a campaign of public education in preparation for the 200th anniversary of the Constitution next year.

His purpose is not to change the Constitution but to celebrate it — not merely with another television spectacular but with a year of study and reflection in the schools and homes of the Republic on this most remarkable and enduring political document.

Here is a project worthy of every teacher, editor, politician and parent in the country. For those who wonder where we came from and where we're going, for those who are troubled by the problems of the present age, the chief justice finds a remedy in the "sensible and popular writings" of the Philadelphia convention.

To understand the fundamental issues that divided the states and the spirit of toleration that finally overcame them, the reading of a single book could make a difference. This is Catherine Drinker Brown's "Miracle of Philadelphia," a remarkable account of the men and issues of that historic gathering.

She tells of James Madison saying during the early arguments of the convention that "the situation was too serious for despair," and she reminds us of the men (but no women) who worked this "miracle."

Washington was 55 years old, Charles Pinckney of South Carolina was 29; Alexander Hamilton, 30; Rufus King of Massachusetts, 32; Jonathan Dayton of New Jersey, 26; Gouverneur Morris of Pennsylvania — "he of the suave manners and wooden leg" — was 35, and James Madison of Virginia, known today as the "father of the Constitution," was only 36.

Benjamin Franklin, at 81, lifted the average age of the delegates a bit, but even then it never went over 43, the age of our youngest elected President, John F. Kennedy.

One wonders about the difference in the ages of our contemporary politicians — with Ronald Reagan at 75 — and the candidates to succeed him: Vice President Bush and Bob Dole, the Senate majority leader are 62; Howard Baker, 60; Jack Kemp, 51; Governor Cuomo, 54; Gary Hart, 48; Charles Robb, 47; Lee Iacocca, 61; Jesse Jackson, 44.

The Philadelphia delegation was a younger bunch, but at the opening of that convention, Richard Henry Lee wrote from Virginia that he was pleased to note among the delegates "so many gentlemen of competent years." And when John Adams was asked at 37 to make a speech in Boston, he refused on the ground that he was "too old to make declamations."

Catherine Drinker Brown reports the events of the convention's closing day:

"The weather had been cloudy," she writes, "but toward late afternoon the sun came out and in the evening the sky was illuminated by a beautiful aurora borealis. Afterward, people remarked upon the spectators' silence while the procession passed.

"Benjamin Rush of Philadelphia said no victory during the late war had brought such deep-seated happiness to every countenance." The adoption of the Constitution, Brown adds, in less than 10 months, under the influence of local prejudices, opposite interests, popular arts and even the threats of bold and desperate men, was a solitary event in the history of mankind.

"'Tis done," Rush wrote. "We have become a nation," and Francis Hopkinson, chairman of the committee on arrangement, composed an ode that was distributed to the Crown as the procession moved along:

"Hail to this festival — all hail the day!
Columbia's standard on her roof display!
And let the people's motto ever be,
United thus, and thus united, free!

Some folk here in Washington wonder why the chief justice of the United States has retired from the bench to organize a thoughtful commemoration of the 200th anniversary of the Constitution, but it may be one of the most useful assignments of his long career. Provided, of course, he gets the cooperation of the people and particularly of the parents and teachers for this celebration of what both Washington and Madison called "the miracle of Philadelphia."

ART BUCHWALD

Burning issue really has Helms heated up

No matter how bad a military dictator you are you can always find a friend in Sen. Jesse Helms. Gen. Augusto Pinochet, Chile's strongman, is devoted to the senator and vice versa. Even when it comes to setting people on fire, the senator is in the general's corner.

Art Buchwald

Recently a teen-age boy and his girlfriend were doused with a flammable substance in Santiago and burned — the boy died and the girl is fighting for her life.

The crime was so heinous that the senator was one of the few people who could find anything good to say about the Pinochet government.

As a matter of fact, when Helms went to visit the good general in Santiago to pay his respects, he told reporters that he was incensed — not at what had happened, but at the way it had been reported. He said, "I am ashamed of the media in my country." When questioned about a $500 million suit Pinochet was threatening against American newspapers, Helms said, "I assured President Pinochet that the major media in the United States have a tendency to be very unfair to anti-Communist governments."

What really boiled the senator was that the U.S. ambassador to Chile, Harry Barnes, attended the youth's funeral (which was tear-gassed by the government). This, Helms decided, was tantamount to going to a Communist rally. Helms wants the ambassador sent home for "planting the American Flag into the heart of a Communist activity."

Before you get upset at Jesse Helms, let's look at it from his standpoint. Chile is one of the few solid Fascist governments we've got in South America. You don't turn your back on a head of state just because he keeps tear-gassing his country's citizens.

Is Jesse Helms interfering with our South American policy by giving aid and comfort to Augusto Pinochet at this time? Of course he isn't. But the senator couldn't have dropped in at a more auspicious moment. The U.S. State Department has been trying to persuade the dictator general to get his country to straighten up and fly right, and this was making Pinochet feel lousy. When your troops are accused of kidnapping and jailing people it's always good to talk to a senator who understands your problems.

You can fault Sen. Helms for many things, but not his foreign relations know-how. In complaining to the Chilean press about our ambassador, Sen. Helms said that Ambassador Barnes had advised the State Department about the burnings of the two young people "in a manner calculated to produce criticism of the Chilean regime."

That says it all. Helms is going to do everything to get Barnes out. If he succeeds, there is only one person in the United States who is worthy of filling the post, and that is the senator himself. Would Helms take it? That's the burning question they're asking in Santiago.

Senate panel to vote on plan to tear down billboards

By MIKE ROBINSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The "highway beautification" battle, launched by Lady Bird Johnson two decades ago, is boiling up in the Senate.

Conservation forces are taking aim at thousands of billboards standing beside the nation's highways. They call the signs unsightly.

Billboard defenders, however, say any aesthetic faults should be tolerated because the signs bring dollars to communities feeling the economic pinch.

"I drive into Dallas and I've never seen such billboards — they just seem to enlarge them," Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, declared Tuesday as the Environment and Public Works Committee wrestled with the issue.

Chairman Robert T. Stafford, R-Vt., had planned a vote for Tuesday on a billboard proposal he is spearheading along with Bentsen to bring down thousands of signs that stretch across America's landscape.

But critics claimed too many questions remained unanswered concerning the plan the lawmakers seek to attach to a four-year highway bill that would authorize $13.1 billion annually for aid to the states.

Stafford postponed a vote until today, providing lobbyists with 24 hours more to try to tilt the balance on the committee, which Senate staff aides say could go either way.

On one side is the Outdoor Advertising Association of America. It is consistently one of the major providers of fees to members of Congress for making speeches at its meetings.

With a total of $100,664, it ranked third in the nation last year in paying such "honoraria," according to a study by Common Cause, the self-described citizens lobby.

On the other side is the Highway Beautification Coalition, which claims to be bankrolled by conservationists and businesses who believe that clusters of billboards in downtown areas drive away customers.

The highway beautification crusade got on the map in 1965 when it was adopted by Lady Bird Johnson, then the first lady. She scored a number of successes, including a facelift for George Washington Parkway in the Virginia suburbs outside the nation's capital.

In many parts of the country, however, billboards have proliferated, committee aides say.

As the committee began to tackle the issue, small-state senators declared that with energy and farm prices in a nosedive, tourism has become an economic mainstay of the folks back home.

They said billboards are vital to tourism.

Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., said signs were needed to direct tourists to Yellowstone National Park.

"You appreciate the signs," declared Sen. James Abdnor, R-S.D. "It even breaks up the monotony of driving once in a while. Keeps you awake."

That brought a tart retort from Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J.

"To me, travel and tourism is enhanced by returning to nature, by grass and trees and shrubs and not being wakened from my reverie by a sign advertising a hot dog at a motel," Lautenberg said.

The measure would wipe out a requirement that states must reimburse owners of billboards they take down.

Estimates are that it would cost $1 billion to do the job that way, and the money has not been made available.

Under the Senate measure, owners could amortize the value of the billboards by continuing to rent them to advertisers for five years. After that, they would have to be taken down.

That would apply only to signs erected legally, but since outlawed by state legislatures. The states would be permitted to retain the reimbursement system.

The provisions of the measure would apply only to the Interstate system and primary highways that get federal aid.

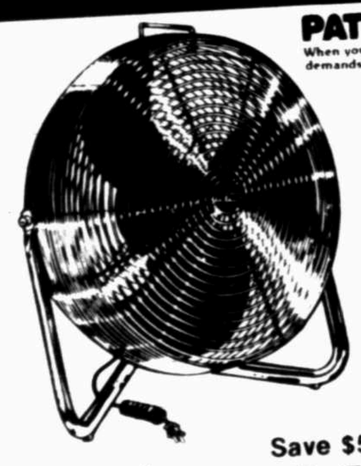

Under the proposal, the secretary of transportation would be empowered to deduct 5 percent from a state's highway aid if it failed to bring down its share of the nation's estimated 24,000 illegally erected billboards.

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Gaines, Andrews, Dawson, Borden, Martin and Howard counties: Tonight, fair with a low in the upper 60s. Wind south 5 to 10 mph. Thursday, mostly sunny with a high in the upper 90s. Wind south 5 to 15 mph.

Sterling, Coke, Irion and Tom Green counties: Tonight, fair with a low near 70. Wind south 5 to 10 mph. Thursday, mostly sunny with a high in the upper 90s. Wind south 5 to 15 mph.

Rain not anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport said there is no chance of rain tonight or tomorrow.

Skies tonight will be fair with a low in the upper 60s. Winds will blow in from the south at 5-10 mph.

Thursday should be sunny with a high in the upper 90s. Winds will again be from the south at 5-15 mph.

Back in 1978 on this day, the record low temperature was a chilly 53. But three years later, a record high of 103 was recorded.

STATE

Early this morning, scattered thundershowers were in the western Panhandle, while thunderstorms were scattered over parts of Far West Texas, the Trans-Pecos and the lower south plains. Skies around the rest of the state were mostly clear, the National Weather Service said.

Winds across the state were generally from the south at 5 to 10 mph. Early morning temperatures were mainly in the 60s and 70s. At 4 a.m. the extremes were 63 degrees at El Paso and Guadalupe Pass and 80 degrees at Waco, Del Rio and Laredo.

The forecast for North Texas calls for sunny and hot weather Thursday with highs in the 90s to near 100 and lows in the 70s.

South Texas should see isolated daytime thunderstorms, but mostly sunny skies with highs near 90 to the 100s and lows in the 70s to 80s.

West Texas was forecast to be generally fair and warmer through Thursday with a few isolated thunderstorms and highs in the 90s Thursday to near 102 with lows in the 60s to 70s.

NATION

Rain dotted the West today and temperatures in a Southern heat wave dipped slightly, while Hawaii was battered by high waves amid a hurricane watch.

Hurricane Estelle also prompted gale warnings and a high surf advisory for the island of Hawaii. Small craft advisories were posted for the remainder of the Hawaiian islands.

Showers and thunderstorms were widely scattered across southern California and the Rockies. Heavy rain in western Texas prompted a flash flood watch for El Paso and Hudspeth counties.

Thunderstorms were scattered across North Dakota while showers and thunderstorms ranged across the southern Appalachians and northern Florida.

Clouds and rain were expected to keep most of the South below 100 degrees today for the second consecutive day.

SOME PEOPLE BUY AIR CONDITIONERS LIKE THERE'S NO TOMORROW.

When it's time to replace your old air conditioner, it'll probably only take you a little while to find a new one that looks pretty good and doesn't cost much. But it'll take a lot longer to realize a quick bargain is likely to cause a slow burn on your wallet every month.

A high-efficiency air conditioner could make a difference in your cooling costs this summer and every summer. A high-efficiency choice means steady savings because you're getting the same amount of cooling using less electricity than with a low-efficiency unit. On top of this, you'll get a valuable rebate from your electric company if your central air conditioner or window unit meets our Energy Action standards.

See your recognized Energy Action air conditioning contractor or dealer for help in choosing a high-efficiency air conditioner or heat pump. Tomorrow, you'll be way ahead of the game.

It pays to choose an Energy Action Unit.

Howser brain tumor malignant

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Dick Howser's brain tumor is malignant, doctors have learned, and cannot be entirely removed.

The 50-year-old manager of the World Series champion Kansas City Royals underwent a three-hour operation Tuesday, in which parts of the tumor were taken out, officials said.

"A portion was sent to pathology for their diagnosis," said Dr. Charles Clough, the neurologist who performed the operation. "Our therapy as to where we go from here will depend on that pathology report."

Clough said the report should be ready in two or three days. Royals' team physician Dr. Paul Meyer said the tumor, on the left frontal lobe, could not be completely removed for fear of damaging healthy tissue.

Howser was admitted to St. Luke's Hospital last Thursday night, just 48 hours after managing the American League to a 3-2 victory over the National League in the All-Star Game at Houston. He had been complaining of headaches and a stiff neck and was showing signs of mental confusion.

Doctors said he was awake following surgery and was able to move his limbs.

"He was very alert and he knew (his wife) Nancy," Joe Burke, president of the Royals, said.

Clough declined to answer questions, but said in a statement he read to newsmen that the tumor "appeared to be a type of tumor called a glioma."

A glioma tumor, also called a primary tumor, is commonly treated with radiation therapy. Dr. Robert Morantz, a Kansas City neurologist, said in an interview last week that primary tumors are the most lethal and the most difficult to remove.

Clough told the Kansas City Times that he was able to see all of the tumor without the use of the ultrasound imaging devices often used to detect the exact location of tumors.

"I removed all I could, using a suction and cauterizing device," Clough said. "The operation went well."

The news stunned the team, currently in Baltimore for a series against the Orioles.

"We were all obviously hopeful and optimistic that the biopsy would indicate the tumor was benign," said General Manager John Schuerholz, who met with team members behind closed doors. "That was the worst news of all that we could have gotten out of this. We're just going to have to remain positive."

The Royals are under the direction of interin manager Mike Ferraro, Howser's close friend and third base coach — who lost a kidney to cancer surgery in 1983.

"I can't say anything. It's been enough trying to control myself for five days," Ferraro, 41, said as he wiped tears from his eyes. "I was in shock for five or six days because I was in that situation."

Howser guided the 1985 Royals to one of the greatest post-season comebacks in baseball history. Only five times in the history of the best-of-seven World Series format had a team recovered from a 3-to-1 deficit to take the title. Yet, the Royals did it against Toronto in the best-of-7 American League playoffs and repeated the trick against the St. Louis Cardinals in the World Series.

Ferraro, who accompanied Howser to the All-Star Game, said that Howser "was totally out of it" during the game.

Angels split with Caps

From Staff Reports

SHREVEPORT — In any other year, Shreveport's George Ferran would probably find himself in the major leagues with the San Francisco Giants. But the Giants are now contenders and Ferran is relegated to the Texas League with a 12-0 record after a five-hit shutout over the Midland Angels here Tuesday night and a doubleheader split.

Ferran struckout 10 Angels and halted Dante Bichette's 17-game hitting streak in the process.

Catcher Kevin Burrell batted in Angel Escobar for the game's only run in the eighth. Don Timberlake (5-6) took the loss for Midland.

In the first game of the twinbill, it was Midland's Sherman Corbett (6-6) who held Shreveport to one run on six hits for a 5-1 Midland victory.

Pat Keedy hit the fourth pitch of the game for a home run for the Angels. There were two unearned runs in the second inning plus two runs in the fifth.

Shreveport scored in the seventh. John Burkett (5-5) took the loss.

Attendance topped 100,000 for first time since 1954 at Fair Grounds Fields, giving the Captians its best attendance mark in 32 years.

In other Texas League action Tuesday night, Arkansas shut out Beaumont 10-0, San Antonio beat Tulsa 2-1, and Jackson thrashed El Paso 12-2.

Amid Beaumont's thunderstorms, the Arkansas Travelers did a little rain dance of their own, pouring on nine runs in the first three innings and scoring one more in the seventh.

Steve Peters (2-2) was the winning pitcher, yielding just four hits, striking out two batters and walking one.

Mustangs vault to finals

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Midland Mustangs took the easy route into tonight's Texas Teen Age Baseball Hi-Junior district championship game. They simply won both their games the first two days.

On Monday, the Mustangs defeated Odessa American Legion 9-4 before heavy rains hit Angels Stadium, washing out the remaining two games. The rain made for a long day Tuesday as four games had to be played, three involving Tom Green County (San Angelo) Bar Association.

TGCBA opened Tuesday's play with a 9-1 victory over the Midland Astros for the right to take on the Mustangs for a championship berth. The Mustangs rolled to an 18-6 win and were able to rest the remainder of the day.

Odessa followed with a 21-6 victory over the Astros and a 25-5 victory over TGCBA to eliminate both teams and earn a rematch shot at the Mustangs tonight at 5:30 at Angels Stadium. An if necessary game is scheduled for 8 p.m.

FOR THE Mustangs, Jamie Surratt didn't give up any hits but allowed one unearned run in 4⅓ innings of relief duty to gain the victory while TGCBA struggled through five pitchers.

After taking a 6-0 lead in the top of the third, Tom Green County made a game of it by knocking Eric Boyt off the mound in the bottom of the third to the tune of five unearned runs on four hits, 6-5.

The narrow margin was short-lived as the Mustangs answered with five in the fourth on four hits. The Mustangs added three in the sixth and four in the seventh while allowing only one in the fifth for the 18-5 win.

Nicky Sanchez and Kevin Wallum led the way at the plate with three hits each for the Mustangs while John DeFrance added two, including a double.

Mike Anderson took the loss for Tom Green County.

IN THE loser's bracket, the outcome of each eventual blowout was in doubt in the early innings of play.

Odessa held a 8-6 lead over the Astros going into the fourth and was up 6-5 over Tom Green County after four.

Seven runs in the top of the fourth inning followed by five in the fifth and one in the sixth took care of the Midland Astros while seven in the fifth and 12 in the sixth ousted Tom Green.

Neither game went into the seventh inning, being called by agreement of the coaches.

Sims' football career grounded by knee

Associated Press

Training camp is a time when hope for the new season begins to build. It also is a time when careers officially come to an end.

The end of Billy Sims' five-year career has arrived, and the Detroit Lions have scheduled a 1 p.m. EDT news conference for today to announce it.

"I would have loved to have had him play (for me)," said Lions second-year Coach Darryl Rogers. "I'm sorry things turned out this way."

Sims hurt his knee Oct. 21, 1984, in a game at Minnesota. He underwent surgery for ligament damage, but has been unable to come back despite intensive rehabilitation.

Lions spokesman Bill Keenist said team officials anticipated the 30-year-old Sims would fail his annual preseason physical exam this morning. Sims' knee has failed every physical since the injury.

The Lions' all-time leader in touchdowns and rushing yardage, Sims already is believed to have filed a claim on an insurance policy he purchased prior to the 1984 season. The policy guarantees payment of Sims' $4.5 million contract in the event of a career-ending injury.

But Sims isn't the only one with damaged body parts.

Washington Redskins quarterback Joe Theismann is trying to return from a broken leg suffered midway through last season.

Theismann had a compound fracture of his tibia and fibula of his right leg on Nov. 18 when he was sacked Nov. 18 against te New York Giants. Theismann, who said he can throw but can't drop back or run, said he has had to stop playing all sports but golf.

Another quarterback feeling the pain of the position is the Los Angeles Rams' Dieter Brock.

Brock hopes that the back problems he has experienced won't hamper his career, but admits that his days in the sport could be numbered.

"The back did bother me a lot last year and especially so during the off-season," Brock said. "While I'm definitely concerned about it, I'm not ready to announce my retirement just yet.

NTPGA Final

Lightning may not strike twice in the same place, but Lindy Miller will tell you that history, after a fashion, repeats.

The 30-year-old Fort Worth pro came out of the sand to birdie the par three 17th hole and then went on to beat Bob Smith of Dallas on the first playoff hole to win the North Texas PGA Club Professionals tournament at Mission Country Club Tuesday.

Last fall Miller birdied the final two holes at Mission and then won the NTPGA Sectional playoff over Butch Mitchell.

Smith had staged a strong finish, birdying three holes in a row to go three under after 15 and take a one-stroke lead. Miller playing ahead, found the greenside sand on the par three 17th, but came out for the birdie that pulled him even.

SMITH OUTDROVE Miller on the 420-yard playoff hole by 75 yards, but Smith found the sand trap next to the green and Miller wound up in a grass bunker to the right. "Bob hit his shoot thin and the ball went by by 30 feet," explained Miller, who is the club pro at Fort Worth's Mira Vista, a course that won't open until the middle of next year. "I was more fortunate."

Miller left himself a six-inch putt.

The victory qualifies the former Oklahoma State, Walker Cup golfer for the Club Pros' national tournament in Palm Springs, Calif., in October and leaves him $1,500 richer. He'll also bid for an NTPGA Sectional repeat in the fall.

The difference in the two tournaments is that anyone is eligible for the Sectional. Only working club pros are eligible for the NTPGA Club Pro event.

Miller spent six years on the pro tour, "when I decided to evaluate where I had been," he explained. That's when he got a job as an assistant at the Columbian in Dallas. With a baby arriving recently, it was time to settle down, as far as Miller was concerned.

"Two months ago I was offered the job at Mira Vista, a Tom Weiskopf designed course. I never got out of the tour what I wanted and I feel this is what is supposed to be."

MILLER LIMITS himself to three or four tour events a year like the Byron Nelson Southwest Classic in Abilene, the Texas Open or Woodland and tries to qualify for the U.S. Open. And he keeps his winning edge with tournaments such as this one. It comes on the heels of his victory in the NTPGA Match Play tournament.

Sale Omohundro, Sherman, the first day leader, slipped back to a tie for third with a 75-144 with Terry Lester, Midland's Hogan Park, 74-144.

Members of the Cincinnati Reds and New York Mets engage in a bench clearing brawl during the 10th inning of game Tuesday in Cincinnati. The Giants and Cardinals also had a brawl Tuesday night in St. Louis.

Mets take brawl ball win

Astros continue last at-bat heroics

Associated Press

Howard Johnson's three-run homer in the top of the 14th inning Tuesday night gave the New York Mets a 6-3 victory over Cincinnati in a game that featured a bench-clearing brawl, six ejections, two protests and a crucial two-run error by Reds' right fielder Dave Parker.

Parker dropped a fly ball for the potential final out in the ninth letting in two runs to tie the game 3-3.

Carl Willis, 1-1, the fifth Reds pitcher, gave up a double to Ed Hearn and a walk to Jesse Orosco opening the 14th. Johnson hit a 2-2 pitch off reliever Ted Power.

"We feel we owe this team something because they came into New York and beat the hell out of us for three games," Johnson said. "This is our chance to stick it to them."

Orosco and Roger McDowell were alternating between the pitchers' mound and right field for the last four innings. McDowell, 2-2, got the win.

The fight started when Mets' third baseman Ray Knight punched Reds' pinch-runner Eric Davis in the bottom of the 10th.

Davis stole slid safely into third with a stolen base and was tagged by Knight. Davis and Knight started pushing each other and the benches emptied onto the field after Knight punched Davis in the face.

"He said, 'You pushed me.' I said, 'I didn't push you on purpose,' " Knight said. "He said, 'Don't push me again, you so-and-so.'

"He came at me. His eyes looked like he was mad. He was moving toward me, so I popped him. It was just reaction."

Davis, Knight, Mets outfielder Kevin Mitchell and Reds pitcher Mario Soto were ejected following the fight. Reds coach Billy DeMars and the Mets' Darryl Strawberry had been thrown out earlier.

The Mets filed a protest over the ejections. The Reds filed a protest of their own an inning later when Orosco was allowed to warm up after he and McDowell switched positions again.

In the Mets ninth, Len Dykstra drew a two-out walk from reliever Ron Robinson and took third on Tim Teufel's ground-rule double. Keith Hernandez drove a ball to the edge of the warning track in right field. Parker got into position to make the catch, but the ball glanced off his glove for an error.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Astros 1, Expos 0

Nolan Ryan allowed one hit in 9⅓ innings and struck out 14 batters, then Glenn Davis' home run ended the game in the bottom of the 10th. Davis hit his 21st homer of the season off Montreal starter Floyd Youmans, tying him with Mike Schmidt for the NL lead. It was only the third hit off Youmans, 10-6.

The 14 strikeouts were the highest total in the NL this season. The only hit off Ryan was a fifth-inning double by Mike Fitzgerald.

Dave Smith, 3-6, relieved Ryan with one out and runners on first and second in the 10th and got the victory. It was the fourth straight game which the Astros won by a run with a last-inning score.

Baseball

Cardinals 10, Giants 7

Andy Van Slyke tripled and homered to start and finish St. Louis' eight-run fifth inning. The Cardinals' biggest inning of the year also featured Ozzie Smith's two-run single as the 11 men went to the plate.

The game was delayed 15 minutes by a seventh-inning fight. San Francisco Manager Roger Craig and two Giants players were ejected following the five-minute brawl, which erupted when Vince Coleman was struck by a Frank Williams' pitch.

Dodgers 4, Pirates 3

Reggie Williams hit a two-run homer as the Los Angeles Dodgers rallied for three ninth-inning runs against reliever Cecilio Guante. Pinch-hitter Alex Trevino doubled and scored on a groundout for the first ninth-inning run.

Dennis Powell, 1-3, worked two scoreless innings for the victory with Ken Howell pitching the ninth for his eighth save.

Phillies 5, Braves 4

Atlanta's Ken Griffey hit three home runs, but Tom Foley's pinch-hit single with two out in the 11th inning gave Philadelphia the victory. Von Hayes, who hit a two-run homer in the first, doubled and scored on Foley's hit.

Cubs 6, Padres 4

Ed Lynch pitched seven shutout innings before yielding three runs in the eighth, and Chicago handed San Diego its fifth straight defeat. Lee Smith pitched the ninth for his 16th save. The Cubs scored a run in the first, two more in the fifth and had a three-run rally in the seventh.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Yankees 9, Rangers 1

Dave Winfield and Don Mattingly each homered and had three hits, boosting Dennis Rasmussen to his seventh straight victory and pulling New York within four games of Boston.

Rasmussen, 12-2, allowed three hits in 6⅔ innings before he was hit on the left elbow by Toby Harrah's line drive. Rasmussen left the game and was taken to a hospital for X-rays.

The loss was the sixth straight for Texas.

A's 4, Red Sox 2

Dave Kingman lined a two-run single in the first inning and scored on Carney Lansford's double, backing the pitching of Joaquin Andujar and two relievers who combined to hold Oakland to six hits.

Orioles 5, Royals 4

Cal Ripken broke a 4-4 tie in the eighth inning with Baltimore's fourth home run of the game. Rookie Jim Traber drove in three runs with a pair of homers and Fred Lynn added a solo shot as the Orioles twice overcame two-run deficits in the first four innings.

Tigers 3, Twins 0

John Grubb homered twice, driving in all of Detroit's runs. Walt Terrell did not give up a hit until the sixth, then gave up two in the ninth before he was relieved. Willie Hernandez retired one batter with the bases loaded for his 19th save.

Indians 8, White Sox 4

Chris Bando's two-run double capped a six-run first inning and Tony Bernazard had two of Cleveland's eight hits in the outburst. Joe Carter, Mel Hall, Brook Jacoby and Pat Tabler singled in the first four runs.

Tom Candiotti, 9-7, pitched his ninth complete-game victory, allowing eight hits and three walks.

Brewers 6, Angels 2

Cecil Cooper drove in four runs with a double and single and Rob Deer homered, giving the victory to rookie Juan Nieves, 9-5. Nieves pitched five innings, Bryan Clutterbuck shut out California for 3⅓ innings and Mark Clear got the final two outs.

Mariners 8, Blue Jays 7

Phil Bradley singled home Spike Owen from second base with two outs in the 12th inning. Owen, who went 4-for-5 and drove in three runs, led off the 12th with a single against Bill Caudill, 2-2.

Bo Jackson nabs Southern League's player of week

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner Bo Jackson, whose professional baseball career is off to a slow start, may have finally found his "timing" in the batter's box.

Jackson, who had an eight-game hitting streak snapped Monday night, was named Monday as player of the week in the Southern League.

During his hitting streak, Jackson had collected 11 hits in 26 times at bat, for a .423 batting average. He scored seven runs and drove in 11.

Overall, Jackson is hitting .203 for his 21 games as a professional, with 15 hits in 74 at-bats. Jackson has struck out 34 times.

Jackson made headlines when he rejected a multi-million dollar offer from the Tampa Bay Buccaneers of the National Football League to give baseball a try.

He signed with the Kansas City Royals and was sent to the Chicks.

Chicago Cubs' ballgirl Marla Collins will be featured in the September issue of Playboy Magazine.

Collins to give Cubs 'exposure'

CHICAGO (AP) — Marla Collins, the Chicago Cubs' ballgirl whose curves are better than many thrown by Cubs' pitchers, wants to spice up the team's dismal season by appearing — nude — as a Playboy magazine pinup girl.

Collins, the Cubs' ballgirl for the past five seasons, shows her best curves to baseball fans nationwide in an eight-page pictorial in Playboy's September issue.

She shows up in about a dozen Playboy pictures.

In some, she's partially clad in jewelry and a leather dress. In others, she's nude, Playboy officials said. And in some, they said, she's shown in action, chasing baseballs during Cubs' games photographed during the 1985 season.

"I think maybe it will be a little spice in what so far has been a dreary season for Cubs fans," said Gary Cole, Playboy's photo editor.

COLLINS, WHO has an agent and a shoe-endorsement contract, hopes her appearance inspires the team, added Jeff Cohen, Playboy's managing photo editor who produced the pictorial.

"We talked about how this might get the Cubs some headlines about something other than their playing," Cohen said in a telephone interview Monday night. "She knows the players and hopes this gives them some new life and, if nothing else, gives sportswriters a new angle in their stories about the Cubs.

"Hey, if it's any indication, they won (Monday)," said Cohen, a Cubs fan who had thought for several years about featuring Collins in the magazine. She has dusty blonde hair, green eyes and a 35-23-36 figure, he said.

Collins' foray into Playboy modeling comes midway through what has been a disappointing year for diehard Cubs' fans. The team, plagued by poor pitching, has fired one manager already and is 39-50 — 22 games out of first.

"This will give fans one more incentive to go out to the old ballfield — to see Marla, assuming the team keeps her on the field," Cohen said.

Cubs spokesman Ned Colletti said Monday night that the team had "no comment" on its ballgirl's Playboy debut.

The September issue is scheduled to hit Chicago-area newsstands Monday and others nationwide later next week.

Collins did not return a reporter's phone call Monday night.

WHILE OTHER major-league teams have ballgirls, Cohen said, a pictorial on Collins seemed appropriate because of the Cubs' national following through broadcasts on superstation WGN-TV.

"She's not only known in Chicago," he said. "She has a big following in Arizona and California and wherever the station broadcasts Cubs' games. In fact, several readers have written in and suggested we do a pictorial on her."

Collins, an avid Cubs fan raised in the Chicago suburb of Evergreen Park, suggested the idea to Playboy in June 1985, through her agent Mark Childers of Talent Network, Childers said.

Childers added that Collins has a contract to endorse Pony athletic shoes and wanted to do the Playboy pictorial to advance her career. He said this will be her last season with the Cubs and she is engaged to be married in late September.

Cohen said Collins has said she is interested in an acting career. "I think she's decided this will be a launch for her career," he said. "It's a way to get some — no pun intended — national exposure."

Despite trial, USFL full steam ahead

Associated Press

The eight United States Football League teams are slowly plodding toward their mid-August camps with an ear toward the federal courthouse in New York.

The outcome of the USFL's $1.69 billion antitrust suit against the older NFL, which is scheduled to go to the jury Thursday, will have a major influence on how the 4-year-old league approaches its first fall season, scheduled to begin Sept. 13.

A few clubs say they aren't worried about the jury's verdict, but others aren't as definitive.

"I think we presented a very strong case," Birmingham Stallions President Jerry Sklar said about the trial. "But that remains for a jury to decide. We are on pins and needles waiting."

"I couldn't tell you for sure what would happen," said Sklar when questioned the possibilities if the NFL won the case. "I couldn't see the league going forward if we lose outright."

Jacksonville Bulls Coach Mouse Davis gives the league only a 20-40 percent chance of playing this autumn.

"To figure a percentage, you have to figure all the scenarios," said Davis, whose club is scheduled to open camp Aug. 14. "And to weigh the number of different things that would get us to play, as opposed to those where we wouldn't play, it seems we cannot expect to play as the USFL in many situations."

"It could very well be reality that I will not be coaching this fall," said Davis.

But everything appears to be on schedule with the USFL, despite the pessimism.

"It (training camp) will be rough, the same as the NFL," said John McQuire, spokesman for the two-time defending champion Baltimore Stars, who open camp Aug. 15. "They'll be sweating during the day and going to bed in pain, so there won't be any time to think about the trial."

Body weight reflects habits

Body weight is, in general, a reflection of eating habits and activity level. Excessive food intake adds to the body's fat stores; whereas, exercise reduces it.

The physiologists refer to the body's fat stores in terms of percentage of body fat. For example, the percent of body fat for female gymnasts would be in the range of 9-12 percent fat, whereas a 25-year-old male would exhibit about 20 percent body fat. A 25-year-old female would have approximately 25 percent.

This male-female difference is caused by hormonal differences. Females have a continuous layer of fat beneath the skin called the "panniculus adiposus." This is responsible for that smooth contoured look that ladies have.

In men, the primary fat depository is around the abdomen, whereas the hips and thighs are affected in ladies.

By increasing exercise activity, more dietary fat is burned reducing the amount that would have been stored. Conversely, decreasing fat intake (dieting) does the same thing. The ideal weight loss program is a combination of increasing exercise and decreasing intake.

This approach is preferable to dieting alone because it tends to burn almost entirely fat. Dieting alone burns fat and muscle. The observed weight loss is relatively rapid and leads to the development of better health habits.

An example of a proper exercise program would be walking, 45 minutes a day, four times a week. At this exercise level, calories would be expended and with proper walking shoes, orthopedic problems would not develop. Slow progression of the exercise program leads to higher levels of physical fitness without muscle soreness and overuse syndromes.

Faddish diets are advertised everywhere. These schemes can lead to an electrolyte imbalance, vitamin deficiencies and malnutrition. The best diets are those that reasonably limit caloric intake and are low in fat content.

A diet consisting of chicken (prepared without the skin), fish and vegetables works nicely. Red meat and fried foods should be avoided since both are high in dietary fat content.

If an individual were instructed on a 1,000 calorie weight reduction diet, but desired 2,000 calories per day for comfort and desired to jog off the extra 1,000 calories, he or she would have to run 40 miles a day.

Our bodies are wonderfully efficient machines. In a weight reduction program, both exercise and dietary control are of utmost importance.

NAIA adopts drug screening program

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Colleges belonging to the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics must adopt a drug education and screening program for their athletes by the end of this year, the NAIA announced Tuesday.

While the screening program is directed specifically at illegal drugs, the policy adopted at a meeting of the NAIA's Executive Committee and Council of Presidents last week also urges schools to inform athletes of the dangers of alcohol and tobacco and discourage their use.

The member schools set their own guidelines, but must have screened all athletes by Jan. 1, 1988, and must outline procedures to be taken if drug tests are positive.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Your financial position should improve. Launch new enterprises in November or December. Commitments made long ago could come back to haunt you now. Deal with them in a responsible way and, whatever you do, keep your emotions under control. Try bossing a partner and you will be the loser. Refrain!

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Comedienne Ruth Buzzi, aviatrix Amelia Earhart Putnam, "The Liberator" Simon Bolivar, former Congresswoman Bella Abzug, Alexandre Dumas, Sen. Charles Mathias (R-Md.), Milwaukee Brewers pitcher Jerry Augustine.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Try harder to understand the individual personalities of those you work with and your own children as well. Let others be heard before you speak. Haste makes waste, so be patient in everything.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Face the facts and deal with them, no matter how unpleasant they may be. Take more risks in love and friendship but be very conservative when it comes to money management.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Make the most of whatever opportunities avail themselves this week. Do not expect friends to be supportive. Fascinating news will improve your mood as the day ends. A social gathering is exciting.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Make important decisions. Mixing business and pleasure will work against you. Something you thought was lost will be found. Memories seem very real today. A romance could become very serious.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Stay on your toes and exert as much emotional self-control as possible. Let leadership qualities come to the fore. Being arrogant with associates is likely to alienate your biggest supporters!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Finish up last-minute details before you make a decision on a new work project. Be generous to yourself as well as to others. Romance will find a way. Just be patient!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Handle your boss with kid gloves. Let go of that guilt you have been harboring; look to the future. Take care of family needs before heading out to play. Romance may be very unpredictable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Needed benefits come through friends or loved ones who are willing to bend over backwards for you. Small talk does not come easily to you, but it could come in handy in social situations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You need to be more assertive if you want to reach career goals. An independent scheme brings success. Check your calendar and be sure to return phone calls.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be more tolerant of the shortcomings of those around you. Give a merchandising idea a chance to work. High energy helps you achieve goals; but you still should find more time to rest.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Financial decisions may take you by surprise, but eventually you will be a principal beneficiary. Find out what others expect from the future and you will understand them better.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Act on the first idea that comes into your head this morning. It could produce extra cash. Return calls and answer your mail. You could find out you have the Midas touch today.

| 3 ♣ | Pass | 3 NT | Pass |
| Pass | Pass | | |

Opening lead: Two of ♠

The second entry in our lexicon of bridge plays consists of blocking an enemy suit. This hand was dealt in a recent rubber bridge game, and South was not aware of the possibilities.

Light overcalls are the fashion nowadays, and the preemptive power of the spade suit is such that we would not dream of censuring East for his action. A reasonably normal auction that included a weak raise of the overcall saw South become declarer at three no trump.

West led the two of spades. East rose with the ace and returned the suit, and declarer opted to finesse. West's queen won, and his spade continuation removed declarer's last stopper. When the heart suit failed to break, South was forced to fall back on the diamond finesse for his contract. That failed — down one.

The bidding and the opening lead provided valuable clues to making three no trump. Had West raised with three low spades, he would probably have led his highest card in the suit. And in the event that he had made an unusual lead, he almost surely would have held the king of diamonds.

Therefore, declarer should have hopped up with the king of spades at trick two. As the cards lie, the defenders are helpless. West cannot jettison his queen of spades without yielding another stopper, and trick, to declarer. After testing the hearts, declarer loses the diamond finesse to East. That worthy can revert to spades, but West's queen blocks the suit. The defenders can score only two spade tricks, one heart and one diamond.

Cup, other items takes from desk on set of NBC's Tonight Show

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Heeere's Johnny!

But not his coffee cup, cigarette lighter or cigarette box, which were lifted from his studio desk sometime during the talk show host's three-week vacation, NBC-TV publicist Charles Barrett said Tuesday.

The items must have been stolen between June 27, when Johnny Carson left, and July 14, when comedian Gary Shandling took over as guest host, Barrett said. "The Best of Carson," was shown during that week and no one was on the set.

Carson, who noticed the items were missing upon his return, announced the theft Tuesday night on "The Tonight Show." The audience moaned, and Carson, who said he brought the items with him to California from his New York days, said, "I know. It's shocking."

He told sidekick Ed McMahon that he was not a suspect because there were alcoholic beverages in the box and they weren't touched.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire must appear in court next month for what he says is his first speeding ticket in 25 years.

The Wisconsin Democrat, accused of traveling at 41 mph in a 25 mph zone in Waupun on July 7, has posted bond of $67.50.

Proxmire, whose court appearance is scheduled for Aug. 11, said Tuesday he wasn't aware he was traveling so fast, "but that's no excuse."

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, who is retiring in January after 39 years in politics, will write an autobiography for Doubleday & Co., the publisher has announced.

Goldwater

Journalist J.J. Casserly will assist in writing the book, to be published in 1988, just before the presidential elections, Doubleday said Tuesday.

Goldwater, R-Ariz., will write about his feelings about his colleagues and will focus attention on the performance of the CIA.

NEW YORK (AP) — Former heavyweight champ Muhammad Ali and boxer Mark Breland are among the celebrities vowing to "K.O. crack," the powerful form of cocaine.

Ali

Ali and Breland joined actor Burt Young and the Rev. Al Sharpton, a civil rights activist, at a conference Tuesday to create a counter-crack strategy.

"Hey, I'm from Bedford-Stuyvesant — that's where I grew up — and if there's anything I can do to help out, I'll do it," said Breland, an Olympic gold medalist.

Sharpton, who headed the conference, said he has approached the singers Prince and Melba Moore to participate in the campaign. "Those who already have the ears of America must do something," he said.

Prince spokeswoman Robyn Riggs said no agreement had been reached.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Cristina Ferrare Thomopoulos, John De Lorean's ex-wife, can't account for thousands of dollars in jewelry that belonged to his auto company, an attorney for the now-defunct company said.

Eugene Farber, representing De Lorean Motors Co.'s bankruptcy trustee, said the jewelry was purchased with company funds and is needed to help pay off its $104 million in debts.

Farber said Tuesday he learned of the missing jewelry when Mrs. Thomopoulos, now a talk show hostess, gave three days of depositions in California earlier this month.

Her lawyer, David Dean, insisted the jewelry belonged to Mrs. Thomopoulos because it had been received as gifts — from De Lorean or others.

Dean said the jewelry disappeared when Mrs. Thomopoulos moved from New York to California in 1984. He implied De Lorean or one of De Lorean's employees was responsible for the disappearance of the jewelry from two safe deposit boxes.

Farber also complained to U.S. District Court Judge Charles Brieant that Mrs. Thomopoulos failed to get adequate insurance for $1 million in jewelry, furs, antiques and furniture she took from residences the couple shared.

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — Kari Swenson, the athlete kidnapped and shot by two self-styled mountain men, says she will withdraw from almost all athletic competition this fall to attend veterinary school.

Swenson, 24, a member of the U.S. women's biathlon team, said Tuesday she will put her biathlon career on hold for four years while she attends school in Fort Collins, Colo.

Swenson also said she has talked with NBC about a movie concerning her ordeal, but has yet to have the project confirmed. "I expect any day to hear from them," she said.

Swenson was kidnapped near Big Sky by Dan and Don Nichols. A man who tried to rescue her was fatally shot, and the Nicholses fled. The father and son were captured five months later and convicted last summer in separate trials.

The biathlon combines cross-country skiing and marksmanship.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singers Willie Nelson and George Jones are among finalists for induction this year into the Country Music Hall of Fame.

Joining them are the late humorist Rod Brasfield, the late yodeler Elton Britt, the late humorist Whitey "The Duke of Paducah" Ford, the musical-comedy team Homer and Jethro and the singing duo the Louvin Brothers.

Nelson organized two FarmAid concerts during the past two years to raise money for needy farmers. He has recorded hits such as "On the Road Again" and "Always on My Mind."

Jones, formerly married to country queen Tammy Wynette, has recorded 65 albums during more than 30 years as a singer of traditional, hard-core country music.

Neither was present Tuesday when the finalists were announced at a news conference at the hall of fame on Nashville's Music Row.

Country Music Association officials also announced the 10 finalists for the annual Horizon Award for career development.

They are T. Graham Brown, the Forester Sisters, Vince Gill, Kathy Mattea, Restless Heart, John Schneider, Dan Seals, Randy Travis, Keith Whitley and Dwight Yoakam.

The Horizon nominees are themselves future hall of fame members," said Jo Walker-Meador, executive director of the CMA.

Landry doesn't fit NFL mold

The trouble with Tom Landry is, he doesn't fit the media — or public — conception of the mythical football coach.

He should. He's one of the best, Maybe the best.

A football coach in the public mind, not to say in the press' or Hollywood's, is this kind of guy: He bangs the walls of the locker room at halftime. He cries, yells, calls on the shades of long-dead halfbacks, cajoles, exhorts. He's as emotional as the second act of Tosca or a Browning poem.

He shows he cares.

Tom Landry is the man who isn't Knute Rockne. He isn't even Vince Lombardi, Bear Bryant or Howard Jones. He doesn't have a quip on his lips or a chip on his shoulder.

HE'S NOT quotable. He never says things like, "Winning is the only thing." He never calls on the deathbed utterances of long-gone players, and his teams aren't emotional extensions of himself.

Tom Landry is, for Texas, quite a specimen. Tight-lipped, laconic, his speech is as dry as a high-plains dust storm. It is not interspersed with the bucolic colloquialism of the state, even though he comes from deep in the heart of Texas.

He projects the image of a bloodless banker, a computer, not a man, with circuits instead of veins.

His own players cut him up.

"A plastic man," Duane Thomas once complained.

"Tom Landry and Minnesota Coach Bud Grant once had a personality contest — and no one won," Don Meredith used to say on the air.

When someone pointed out to Meredith that Landry would one day be a statue in the park, Meredith retorted, "He already is."

One of his linebackers once complained: "He looks at a player and he sees an X or an O. They put the names on the back of the uniforms for Tom, not the spectators."

Don Rickles, used to get one of his biggest laughs at Landry's expense. "Eighty thousand people are going nuts in the stands and there's Landry, standing there looking up and trying to get his hat straight!"

His team was "America's Team." Why wasn't he America's coach?

You go a long way to understanding Landry when you understand that his personal idols were Ben Hogan and Paul Brown.

Ben Hogan didn't play a round of golf, he engineered it. He didn't care what the world thought of him. He already had the hardest person to please in the world — himself.

Paul Brown was the one who changed football from grand opera to high tech.

Those were Tom Landry's role models. His own respect for technology grew when his life depended on it. He flew 30 missions over Europe as co-pilot in a B-17 when you could lose your life over the target or over your landing field.

"Your instruments are better than you are," he says he found out.

HE FELL in love with the football technology when, as a player-coach he set up the defense that stopped the rampaging Cleveland Browns, 6-0, in 1950 on their way to the NFL championship.

"We shut them out again in 1958 and no one else shut them out until 1971," he said.

The Dallas Cowboys under Landry are probably the most perennially successful team in their sport and occupy roughly the same niche in the public mind as the New York Yankees or Notre Dame. The Green Bay Packers, Pittsburgh Steelers, even the Miami Dolphins abide their destined hour and go. The Cowboys endure. Because Landry endures.

They are his lengthened shadow. The public likes them because they project an image of Billy the Kid evading the posse, Wyatt Earp gunning down the Clantons at the OK Corral, Tom Mix foiling the rustlers or even John Wayne holding the fort.

They are not the Monsters of the Midway or the Pack or the Steel Curtain. They are the guys in the white hats, outmanned, outgunned but not outdrawn. Watching them win is like watching Gary Cooper save the town. It's always high noon when the Cowboys play.

I think America fell in love with Landry's Cowboys when they took on the heavily armed Green Bay Packers in the years when they had to live by their wits. They barely lost, with the ball on the one-yard line once and once in a game that might just as well have been played on the slopes of Everest.

America's Team is Landry's team. They have never had any other coach in their 26 years.

So why isn't he Captain America? Why isn't he recognized, as he will be one day, as the foremost of all men who teach and coach football today? Why do other men have the labels genius and wizard, while Landry is labeled cold and aloof, and lampooned for having a whisk broom in his hat and a crease in his pants and not lauded for the game plan in his pocket?

Landry, a practicing Christian, never complains. But he thinks he knows why.

"When a big play occurs for our team, I'm concentrating on how the defense is reacting to it," he says. "Most of the time, I don't see the great catch or the long run. What I'm looking at is how the other team defended it. The camera pans on me and it looks as if I'm disinterested. I'm not. I try not to break my concentration.

"VINCE LOMBARDI was more of a motivator than I am. I always concentrated on the science of football, not the emotion. Lombardi's teams were no finesse teams. They just ran over you. Lombardi's greatness was in arousing players to play above themselves.

"I take the game and apply engineering principles to it. I put in my system at a time when, to succeed, we had to be flashy. We couldn't sit there and trade punches with the league. We were an expansion team and we had to surprise teams, not surround them."

Cowboys' Hackett seeks checkmate

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry and Paul Hackett, the team's offensive coordinator, play a mental game of chess almost every day at training camp.

Landry, the only coach the Cowboys have had in their 26-year existence, takes Hackett's latest offensive strategy and tries to beat it. Then Hackett attempts to checkmate Landry's move.

The impact of "Hollywood" Hackett — as some have nicknamed the former San Francisco 49ers' offensive coordinator for his demonstrative personality — on the Cowboys' offense will certainly be felt in 1986.

Hackett is the man who developed Joe Montana into a Super Bowl champion quarterback. He was hired in the offseason by club President Tex Schramm who wanted a little more punch in the Cowboys' offense.

Jim Shofner, who had a lot of input in the Cowboys' offense as quarterback coach, went to the St. Louis Cardinals to join the staff of former Cowboys' defensive backfield coach Gene Stallings.

The Cowboys will be a more control pass-oriented team in 1986. They've dropped a lot of their influence offensive line blocking for a man-to-man physical approach in the trenches.

They've abandoned their tricky little shift which was used originally used to help shield the running backs from linebackers. It became outmoded and was more of a waste of time than tricky.

Quarterbacks will role out more. Halfbacks and fullbacks must learn to catch the ball.

"Hackett is doing fine," said Landry. "He brings a different approach. He forces you to pay attention.

"He has a different style. He is enthusiastic and he's a good teacher. He knows how to present something."

Landry said Hackett has already "changed the offense some. We've always been a multiple formation team but now there are more formations. The routes the receivers run have been changed."

Landry will still call the plays although he said Hackett might do so in the preseason.

Hackett sets a tough work standard ala Landry. He is at the practice field early and stays late.

"There's a lot to get done," Hackett said.

"I'm really enthusiastic about the upcoming season," said quarterback Danny White. "Paul has given me a lot of confidence. This could be a real fun season."

Hackett has a strong personality, saying such things "as there won't ever be a quarterback controversy as a long as I'm here."

But the former aide to the 49ers Bill Walsh knows his place: "I'm not here to change things. Coach Landry's record speaks for itself. I just hope I can help the offense get better.

"It's exciting for me to get to work with a man like Tom Landry."

Hackett said he's happy the Cowboys get to play an extra exhibition game thid year.

"I'm probably the only person on the team excited about five games, but that just gives me longer to adjust," Hackett said. "I'm pumped up about it."

Try Kelly to Flutie combo

HOUSTON (AP) — Doug Flutie, who won the Heisman Trophy and a million-dollar ticket into pro football from the quarterback's slot, is now practicing catching the football.

How well he does on the receiving end may decide whether he plays or sits on the bench this fall with the New Jersey Generals.

Thanks to a merger between the Generals and the now-defunct Houston Gamblers, Flutie is on the same team with Jim Kelly, twice the United States Football League's leader in total offense and passing.

Kelly once threw for 4,623 yards and 39 touchdowns in one season with the Gamblers. Meanwhile, Flutie had something of a mediocre rookie year with the Generals. He completed 134 of 281 passes for 2,109 yards and 13 touchdown with 14 interceptions.

While Flutie isn't giving up that position, he isn't ruling out a switch. He's been catching passes during informal workouts this week in Houston.

"I'm not thinking about the competition now," Flutie said. "I'm just trying to learn the offense to the point I can be comfortable about it."

He still is in running for the lead quarterback's position and will share practice time with Kelly and Todd Dillon, the second man in NCAA passing history with 3,587 yards, Coach Jack Pardee said.

Oilers missing Everett, sign Allen

SAN ANGELO (AP) — The Houston Oilers have signed starting cornerback Patrick Allen and six free agents but No. 1 draft choice quarterback Jim Everett of Purdue missed the rookie reporting deadline.

The Oilers greeted 100 rookies and free agents Tuesday night but Everett and Nos. 2 and 3 round picks, Louisville's Ernest Givins and Notre Dame's Allen Pinkett, officially became holdouts.

New Coach Jerry Glanville planned two rookie workouts today before the arrival tonight of the team's veterans, who will work out for the first time on Thursday.

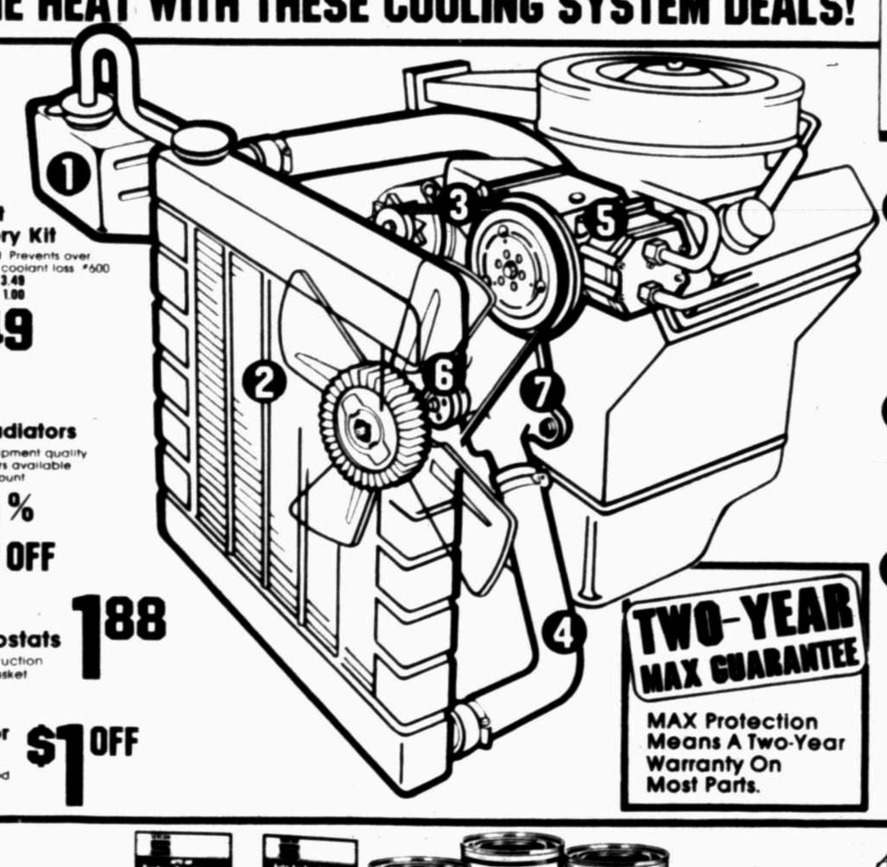

Terms of Allen's contract were not announced.

Four veterans, tight end Chris Dressel, tackle Eric Moran, guard Pat Howell and nose guard Brian Sochia, remained unsigned Tuesday night.

Volcker urges other countries to aid in recovery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker warned today of growing "imbalances and strains" in the U.S. economy and urged America's major trading partners to do their share to keep the worldwide recovery alive.

Volcker, in his mid-year report to Congress, issued his strongest plea yet for Japan and the countries of Europe to push for stronger internal growth to take some of the pressure off the United States, the driving force behind the 3½-year-old recovery.

Volcker's testimony to the Senate Banking Committee came at a time when the central bank is under renewed pressure to loosen its credit controls to spur the sluggish American economy.

The government reported Tuesday that the economy, as measured by the gross national product, grew at an annual rate of just 1.1 percent in the April-June quarter, the slowest pace since the end of the recession in 1982.

After the GNP report was released, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said the sluggish growth report was further evidence that the Fed needed to cut its bank lending rate by "another half point to a point."

The Fed has already reduced its discount rate, the fee it charges financial institutions for loans, three times this year to its current level of 6 percent.

Responding to critics, Volcker said in his testimony that the Fed's conduct of monetary policy could not alone provide the stimulus needed to keep the recovery going.

Volcker warned that all the country's progress since the end of the 1981-82 recession was in "growing jeopardy unless we act ... we in the United States, we in the industrialized world, and we in the world as a whole ... in mutually supportive ways."

Volcker called on America's trading partners "to achieve and maintain a momentum of home-grown expansion" that will boost demand for American exports abroad and thus help to alleviate the yawning U.S. trade deficit.

Volcker said that a few foreign countries, such as West Germany, were showing some signs of stronger economic growth. But he said these signals were still modest and varied widely among key countries.

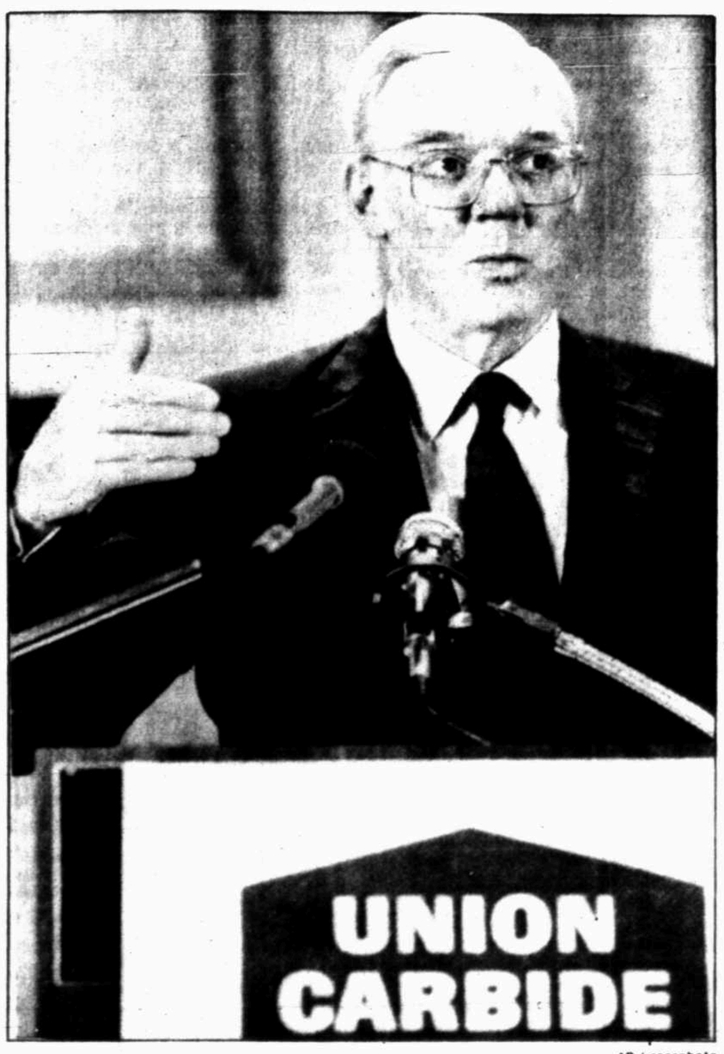

"What is of concern is that the domestic markets of our major industrial competitors have remained so sluggish, raising a question as to the buoyancy of the markets for our exports and of their own growth prospects," Volcker said.

"Today, the imbalances and strains are clearly showing. The forward momentum of our economy has been sustained almost entirely by consumer spending and housing construction, both of which have been accompanied by unsustainably heavy borrowing," he said.

The head of the central bank said the Fed will play its part in promoting stronger growth, but he also warned that inflation, which has been declining this year because of falling oil prices, was likely to return to higher levels in 1987, placing limits on how much the central bank can do to promote economic growth without rekindling higher inflation.

The Fed's efforts so far this year to spur economic growth by lowering interest rates have pushed a variety of rates, including mortgage rates, to their lowest levels of this decade. But economic growth has remained stuck at the sluggish plateau of the last two years.

Union Carbide president Robert Kennedy announces the company's decision to sell its agricultural products division.

Union Carbide sells agriculture division

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Union Carbide Corp.'s announced plans to sell its troubled agriculture chemicals division surprised some employees, but a stock analyst says it is a wise move for the corporation to get out while it can.

"Carbide has not been a major player in agricultural chemicals and never would be," said Leonard Bogner, a senior chemical analyst at New York's Prudential-Bache. "It's a wise move for them to sell out now."

Carbide announced the intended sale early Tuesday of its Agriculture Products Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary. The company said all but the division's Bhopal, India, plant, where a poison gas leak killed more than 2,000 people, would be sold to a single buyer.

The sale would affect about 4,000 employees at plants in six states and three foreign countries.

The Bhopal methyl isocynate leak in December 1984 marked the worst of a series of problems for the division. It was followed by a gas leak in August 1985 at the Institute, W.Va., plant that injured 135 people. The company subsequently was fined a record $1.3 million for alleged safety violations at Institute.

Carbide president Robert D. Kennedy said those highly-publicized problems were not related to the sale.

"We are competing against billion dollar-plus agriculture companies around the world and they are about double our size in sales and probably double our size in what they are spending in research and development," Kennedy said.

"We can compete for the next few years, but if you really think you are going to slug it out with the heavy hitters, this business would be better served if it also were married up with something that looked like a billion-plus company."

Price slide may cost 142,000 jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The slide in oil prices probably will wipe out 142,000 oil industry jobs by the end of this year and almost as many among supplier companies, the industry's largest trade group said Tuesday.

Jobs among suppliers ranging from machinery and steel manufacturers to advertising agencies probably will fall by 116,000, the American Petroleum Institute said.

A price of $15 a barrel would, by 1991, mean the end of almost 300,000 jobs from the 1.6 million provided by the industry in 1985, according to API figures. A $10 per barrel price would eliminate 407,000 jobs, the institute said. These projections do not include jobs in supplier firms.

Oil prices averaged about $28 in the United States last year, according to API. On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for August delivery of West Texas crude recently have been running around $13, after rebounding from about $10.

The institute presented a new study, based on a survey of 21 large member companies, that projected U.S. production in 1991 at 6.2 million barrels per day if the price is $15 and 5.1 million barrels at $10. Last year's production was 8.9 million barrels, a figure that would rise to 9.1 million barrels if the price remained at $28, API said.

This means imports would rise from about a third of U.S. consumption currently to more than 50 percent under either price scenario, Charles DiBona, institute president, told a news conference.

The institute study repeated earlier recommendations for accelerated leasing of the outer continental shelf, retention of favorable tax treatment for oil industry investments, removal of restrictions on use of natural gas as a boiler fuel and continued purchases of crude oil for the strategic petroleum reserve.

Midland enjoying lower electric bills

By MELLA McEWEN

The falling oil prices that have brought record unemployment in the Midland-Odessa area have also brought relief in the form of lower electric bills.

According to a study by the Public Utility Commission, residential electric bills for July 1986 have fallen 5 percent in the Midland-Odessa area. The study found rates have fallen for the state's nine largest metropolitan areas. Decreases range from 20 percent in the Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange area to 2 percent in Lubbock and Amarillo.

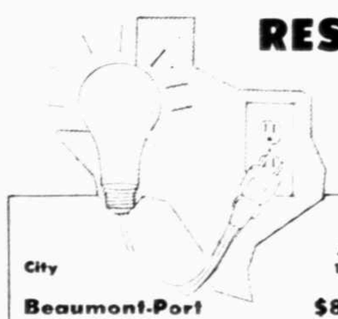

"The cost of fuel is the variable in these bills, and the reason for these decreases," stated Winston Barclay, division manager for Texas Electric Service Co. He pointed out that the fuel cost represents half of the electric bill, that rates haven't changed.

"About 50 percent of our fuel used to generate electricity is natural gas, the other half is lignite coal," according to Barclay. "We have a number of long-term contracts for natural gas, and as those contracts come up for renewal, we're able to negotiate lower rates." He added that Texco's fuel cost is 100 percent pass-through — the cost is passed, dollar for dollar, to the customers.

The drop in July rates marked the third consecutive month that electric rates were lower than 1983 levels, according to PUC chairman Peggy Rosson. Of the 30 cities surveyed, only Abilene and San Angelo have rates higher than 1983 levels. Both are served by West Texas Utilities, which has raised 13 percent between July 1983 and July 1986. San Antonio saw a 1 percent increase. Rates for San Antonio and Austin, which saw a 2 percent decrease, are not regulated by the PUC.

Following the Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange area's 20 percent decline in electric rates were Houston and Galveston, both with 12 percent. Corpus Christi, cities in the lower Rio Grande Valley and Victoria with 8 percent, the Midland-Odessa area and a group of Dallas area cities with 5 percent decreases.

Figures for Houston did not take into account the PUC's fuel factor decision of July 16. Also, the 3 percent decline for El Paso did not include the most recent PUC-ordered rate reduction of $13.9 million which is under appeal in state district court.

Senate funds aid for jobless oil workers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate used a bill to fund the Export-Import Bank Tuesday as an unlikely vehicle to aid unemployed oil and gas workers in the Southwest.

Senators approved an amendment to the bank bill that would provide $7 million under the Trade Adjustment Assistance Act for job retraining and other benefits for jobless workers in the oil states.

Its passage was a victory for Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., who was unsuccessful in attaching similar legislation to a supplemental appropriations bill already signed into law.

Much of the debate on the bill focused on Angola, with the Senate approving one amendment that would block Export-Import Bank loans to communist countries.

It was attached to a 10-year reauthorization bill funding the Export-Import Bank, which helps finance exports of American goods and services.

The amendment would prevent the president from removing Angola from a list of communist nations ineligible for the loans unless he certifies to Congress that no more Soviet or Cuban troops are there.

The bill provides for a $300 million "war chest" to combat foreign government subsidies for exports in competition with American products. Over the next two years, it would subsidize the sale of $1 billion in U.S. goods to developing countries.

Midlander takes care of pets left at home

By MELLA McEWEN

Summertime is a favorite vacation time for many people. However, many have to leave their pets and plants behind.

But a Midlander has come up with an answer: COMPLETE ANIMAL CARE. Owner Sondra James will take care of the pet that's left behind, as well as the plants and the home.

The service includes daily feeding and watering, and even medical needs, according to James, who is an animal technician currently employed by a local veterinarian. "I'll take care of everything but monkeys. I'll take care of dogs, cats, birds, horses, even tarantulas."

She'll also tend to the house and the plants. "My husband has a degree in horticulture, so he can help," she said.

Discounts are offered to senior citizens, customers who will be away for an extended length of time, and for those with small animals.

Midlander Sherri Chernesky is now registering for classes at her new dance studio, DANCE WITH CLASS, in Western Park Plaza close to Anthonys.

Because classes have limited space, students are promised individualized attention, according to Chernesky. Students will be taught in the same manner as those who dance at the Kirov Ballet in Leningrad, a program developed by Agripina Vaganova of the Vaganova Choreographic School in Leningrad. Chernesky said this method teaches the precision of the movement, the stressing of balance and poise, and the step by step mastery of each skill.

Chernesky, who received her bachelor's degree in dance in 1982, will offer classes in ballet, tap, jazz, twirling and women's Christian exercise.

MORROW & ASSOCIATES, pre-retirement planning specialists, have been licensed by Half-Time Associates, Inc., a national developer and publisher of lifestyle and retirement planning programs.

The three-hour Half-Time workshop, which incorporates an award-winning film, participant workbooks and interactive exercises, guides participants in taking stock of their lives and to begin preparing for the future.

Bob Morrow is a licensed N.A.S.D. representative with 20 years experience in financial planning, and is a managing executive with Integrated Resources Equity Corp., a subsidiary of one of the nation's largest financial services companies.

Morrow & Associates will offer the Half-Time program once a month.

HARRIGANS, 418 W. Wadley, is offering a new menu that includes mesquite smoked prime rib, barbecued babyback ribs, orange roughy and halibut.

Also included on the menu are malts and shakes, a new chef salad, a revamped spinach salad, and Corona, Dos Equis and Tecate beer.

The change means that menu items quiche lorraine, stuffed tomatoes and artichoke hearts have been eliminated. According to Harrigan's manager Lamar, the quiches will be available until the last pie baked is sold, and the stuffed tomatoes will be available for awhile. "Some of these items were popular in this area, so I imagine some people won't be too pleased." But he's still enthusiastic about the new items, saying they're terrific.

A new Dallas company is promoting note-selling for millions of homeowners who finance all or part of the houses they sell.

"Owner financing in commercial real estate has always been a mainstream financing technique," said Dennis Bloom, president of NOTE BROKERS OF AMERICA, INC.

By 1984, there were $164 billion worth of privately financed real estate mortgages, the bulk of them arranged on an individual basis.

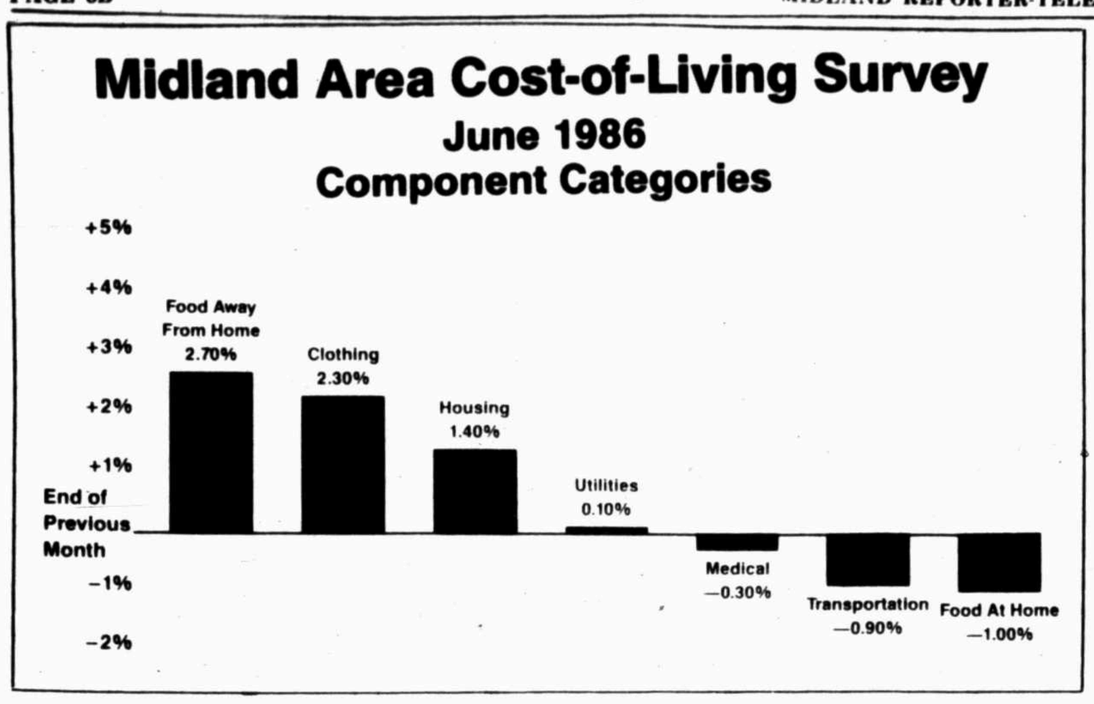

Note Brokers of America, incorporated less than a year ago, is franchising and training brokers, who, for a fee of between 7 percent and 10 percent, put the holder of a note together with an investor willing to buy the mortgage. It currently has offices in 11 states in the South and West.

One of the company's first steps has been to work with investors, institutional lenders, banks and finance companies to define the rules for the industry to operate, Bloom said. It has devised a note-rating system called PECOS, an acronym for property value, equity, credit, occupancy and seasoning (the time a note has been outstanding).

Bloom said the system, which uses letters similar to those of most major bond-rating agencies, defines what risks a note carries, how they relate to each other and how the risks affect the expected return to an investor.

"The average price is probably 75 to 80 cents on the dollar," Smith said. If a note owner is not getting that, his broker should have some good explanation based on significant problems that affect the quality of the note, such as a very long term or low interest rate.

Cost of living down .3 percent

From Staff Reports

The cost of Midland rose 0.3 percent during the month of June, marking the second month costs have increased, according to a survey released by the ClayDesta National Bank. Annualized over six months, Midland has a deflation rate of 1.5 percent. However, the cost of living has remained stable the past year, showing a slight increase of 0.01 percent. Odessa's cost of living dropped 0.9 percent following an increase in May.

Decreases in food at home, transportation and medical costs were offset by increases in food away from home, clothing, housing and utility expenses.

Transportation costs for Midlandes decreased 0.9 percent, the second month costs have decreased. Slightly higher costs for automobile insurance were offset by lower gasoline prices. Transportation costs have decreased 19.8 percent during the past year.

For the second month in a row, medical costs have decreased, showing a 0.3 percent drop in June. A second month of lower prices for over-the-counter drugs was responsible for the drop. Midlanders have seen medical costs rise 3.6 percent over the last 12 months.

Following a hefty increase in May, food at home costs fell 1.0 percent. Increases in meat and produce prices were offset by prices for alcohol and shelf items. Food at home prices have increased 4.2 percent in Midland over the past year.

The cost of eating out in Midland rose 2.7 percent in June, following two months of decreases. A second month of lower prices for non-alcoholic beverages was offset by higher prices for meals made with chicken, fish and beef, as well as higher costs for vegetable side dishes. Midlanders have seen restaurant prices rise 3.4 percent over the last year.

Following a decrease, clothing expenses rose 2.3 percent in June, led by higher price tags for mens wear. ClayDesta calculates a 4.1 percent increase in clothing costs in Midland over the past year.

Housing expenses in the Tall City continue their see-saw action of late, with a 1.4 percent increase in June, caused by higher rental fees in the area. Housing costs have risen 1.2 percent over the last 12 months. Odessa, however, saw a fourth month of lower rents leae to a 0.9 percent decrease in June, which calculates to a 10.9 percent decline over the past year.

Midlanders paid 0.1 percent more in utility bills, the second consecutive increase. The electric fuel adjustment charges rose for the second month in a row, by 0.4 percent in June. Gas rates remained stable after two months of increases, and water rates remained stable for the ninth month in a row. Midlanders have seen their residential utility bills go up 4.4 percent over the past year.

VOLCKER

Many economists believe that Volcker and his colleagues will resist pressure to enact another discount rate cut, preferring instead to see whether the economy will show signs of strength in the second half of the year.

Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Brothers of New York, said that hidden in the weak GNP report were some signs that the interest rate cuts will spur faster growth in the second half of the year.

He said consumer spending and residential construction, two areas particularly sensitive to interest rates, were performing very well in the April-June quarter and were likely to continue to show strength for the rest of the year.

"The Fed has to feel better now about its outlook than it did before the GNP report came out," he said. "This suggests a hold on Fed policy and no quick action for another discount rate cut."

The Fed's report to Congress said the central bank remains optimistic that the economy will pick up in the second half of the year and remain healthy through 1987. The Fed forecast that economic growth this year could reach an annual rate of 3 percent and rise to an even faster 3.5 percent growth rate in 1987.

The Fed report, which was released on Friday in advance of Volcker's testimony, reaffirmed the central bank's money growth targets for 1986 but said it was largely ignoring increases in the basic measure of money, M-1, because it has been growing far faster this year than the central bank intended and would instead concentrate on two broader measures of the money supply.

Consumer prices down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices, halfway through 1986, are down at an annual rate of 0.2 percent, their best performance in more than three decades, the government said today. The good news came despite a 0.5 percent increase in June.

Last month's increase, the steepest since November, followed a 0.2 percent May gain.

Yet, due largely to three months of falling prices earlier in the year, inflation at the retail level for all of 1986 is now expected to be 2 percent or less.

Both gasoline and food prices rose last month, the Labor Department said.

Legislator: Panhandle operators not not paying fair share of tax burden

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Canyon Sen. Bill Sarpalius Tuesday said major oil companies operating in the Panhandle may not be paying all they should in taxes because of a quirk in Texas Railroad Commission rules.

However, a spokesman for the State Comptroller's Office dismissed Sarpalius' claim, saying that any loss in tax revenues is "negligible."

Sarpalius has asked Attorney General Jim Mattox to decide whether the commission is violating its own rules by not requiring major oil companies to pay separate taxes on natural gas and natural gas liquids such as propane and butane.

Railroad Commission rules require liquid separator units on all gas wells drilled in fields where natural gas and natural gas liquids comingle. In turn, the state comptroller's office uses results of the units to tax both forms of gas.

Tuesday, Sarpalius charged that the commission officially considers gas in the Panhandle Field "dry," and void of any natural gas liquids.

"It's ridiculous for (the commission) to say there are no liquids in Panhandle Field gas when geological tests and legal caes have consistently proven there is," Sarpalius said in a prepared statement. By not enforcing its own rules, he added, the commission is "allowing the majors to avoid paying their fair share of taxes on the liquids."

"At a time when the state is hurting for money," Sarpalius said, "that's pretty sorry."

But Tony Proffitt, spokesman for Comptroller Bob Bullock, said it does not matter whether the commission requires oil companies to separate the gas.

"Everyone wants to say we're losing taxes — depending on what side of this issue they're on," Proffitt said, "but we're not. We don't care what they call it, once it comes out of the ground, we tax it."

Sarpalius acknowledged the comptroller's office can calculate liquids through measurement of the energy value of natural gas, but he would prefer that the commission follow its own procedures.

"There's no question the comptroller's people are working hard to collect every penny due the state," Sarpalius said. "We all have confidence in their methods. Still, I don't think the state can be completely accurate without actually separating the liquids from the gas."

In a related issue, Sarpalius also asked Mattox for an opinion on whether a Railroad Commission employee violated agency rules by outlining reporting procedures for so-called "white oil" in the Panhandle Field.

Major oil companies, who own gas rights in the field, and independent oilmen, owners of oil rights in the field, are engaged in a legal battle over production and reporting practices for oil and natural gas.

The independents use a refrigeration process in which casinghead gas is cooled to a liquid state and reported as crude oil. The majors contend that practice allows independents to produce more natural gas from an oil well than allowed by Texas law.

The Railroad Commission has sided with the majors in the dispute and shut down many Panhandle Field oil wells, causing a decline in the area economy. At a May 13, 1985 hearing, the agency ordered independents to stop reporting casinghead gas as white oil. That order came in response to a request from Phillips Petroleum Co., one of the majors operating in the field.

Although the agency agreed with Phillips' claim that white oil should not be considered as crude, it rejected the company's request for a change in the commission's reporting rules, saying state law already prohibits such action.

J.H. Morrow, a commission employee, wrote a letter to independents in September 1985 detailing procedures for crude oil production — procedures Sarpalius claims are virtually identical to those Phillips requested.

"The law states clearly that state agencies must conduct a hearing before changing any administrative rule," Sarpalius said. "When the commissioners conducted hearings on Phillips' proposal, they determined a rule change was not necessary. Four months later, Phillips' request is put on TRC stationary and presented as new rules. That's not right."

Gasoline inventories increase

NEW YORK (UPI) — The nation's gasoline stocks rose last week for the first time in a month as production and fuel imports increased, the American Petroleum Institute reported Tuesday.

Gasoline supplies normally decline by as much as 10 million barrels a week during the peak summer driving season and had dropped for the previous three weeks.

Earlier this year, some industry analysts had predicted U.S. gasoline demand would surge by 10 percent to 12 percent in 1986 as motorists responded to falling pump prices. But gasoline demand climbed only 1.3 percent during the first half of 1986 from year-ago levels.

In the week ending July 18, gasoline inventories crept up to 226.3 million barrels from 225.7 million barrels in the prior week and 222.2 million barrel in the same week last year.

But unleaded fuel, which accounts for more than 65 percent of the domestic gasoline market, slipped to 117.7 million barrels from 118.2 million barrels the week before. There were 107.5 million barrels of unleaded fuel on hand a year ago.

Gasoline production picked up to 7.0 million barrels a day from 6.7 million barrels a day in the preceding week and 6.8 million barrels a day in the corresponding 1985 week.

Gasoline imports shot up to 377,000 barrels a day from 268,000 barrels a day the previous week and 360,000 barrels a day a year earlier.

Supplies of distillate, used for home-heating oil and diesel fuel, moved up to 110.6 million barrels from 106.9 million barrels the preceding week and were only slightly below the 114.9 million barrels in storage a year ago.

Distillate production tapered off to 2.6 million barrels a day from 2.7 million barrels daily a week earlier and matched last year's rate of 2.6 million barrels a day.

Distillate imports soared to 390,000 barrels a day 155,000 barrels daily a week ago and 77,000 barrels a day in the corresponding 1985 week.

U.S. refineries operated at 84.4 percent of capacity, up from 83.9 percent the week before and 81.3 percent in the same week last year.

Crude oil imports held steady at 4.1 million barrels a day, unchanged from the previous week but up from the 3.4 million barrel-a-day rate of a year ago.

Imports of petroleum products surged to 2.2 million barrels a day from 1.7 million barrels daily a week earlier and 1.6 million barrels a day in the comparable week last year.

U.S. crude oil stocks jumped to 327.6 million barrels from 320.6 million barrels the week before and neared the 333.1 million barrel level of a year ago.

July 22 1986 Union Carbide announces intentions to sell Union Carbide Agricultural Products Inc which makes methyl isocyanate the chemical that leaked from the company s Bhopal India plant in December 1984 killing more than 2 000 people

CARBIDE

The move was unexpected by some workers at the Institute plant. About half the 1,700 employees there work for the agriculture division.

"There were rumors a year ago," said electrical engineer George O'Neill. "Then we were reassured, under the restructuring they had last fall, that everything was going good. Some folks are really shook."

Kennedy said the agriculture division was too small to retain a profitable share of the world market, even with such widely-used pesticides as Temik and Sevin. He said the sale decision was made in July 1985, but Carbide put it off for a year while it dealt with publicity from the chemical leak at its Institute plant.

Kennedy said several major companies have approached Carbide about buying the division, but no negotiations have been held.

Spokesman Kurt Mazurosky, at Carbide headquarters in Danbury, Conn., said the world's chief farm chemical competitors include the Monsanto Corp., Dow Chemical Co., and Diamond-Shamrock.

He said Carbide Ltd. of India would keep the Bhopal plant while it settles lawsuits stemming from the MIC leak. He would not say whether the Bhopal plant will be sold after the suits are resolved.

MIC is a key ingredient in pesticide production, including the manufacture of Sevin and Temik.

Kennedy said profits from the divestiture would help trim a roughly $4.5 billion corporate debt and finance added investment in Carbide's profitable specialty chemicals division.

The $2.25 billion sale of Carbide's consumer products division earlier this year already had dropped the debt by about $1.1 billion, he said.

Kennedy would not divulge an asking price for the $500 million-a-year agriculture division. He said any buyers "are going to be paying a fair dollar for it."

The agriculture division has plants at Institute; Research Triangle Park, N.C.; Woodbine, Ga.; Clinton, Iowa; St. Joseph and St. Louis, Mo.; and Ambler, Pa. The division also has affiliate facilities in Calgary, Alberta, Canada; Bezier, France; and Cubatao, Brazil.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Keogh plans for all with self-employed incomes

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am 72 and have a self-employed income, after expenses, of approximately $8,000 a year. Since I cannot contribute to my established individual retirement account due to my age, last March I asked at my bank if I could open a Keogh retirement plan.

I was informed I am not eligible for a new Keogh plan at my age. I was told, if I had established a Keogh plan before I reached 70½, I could continue to contribute to it.

Is this correct?

Doyle

A. No. Anyone with self-employed income, regardless of age, can set up a Keogh plan. You can contribute 20 percent of your self-employed income to a defined contribution Keogh plan and not pay federal income tax on that money until you take it out.

Technically, you can put 25 percent of your net self-employed income into the Keogh plan. But that net is defined as income after expenses minus your Keogh contribution. That works out to 20 percent. The maximum anyone can put in is $30,000 a year.

You must establish your Keogh plan by Dec. 31 and complete your annual contribution by April 15. Last March, you could not open a Keogh plan and make a 1985 contribution. That might account for the confusion at your bank. You can, of course, open a Keogh plan now and make a contribution for 1986. And you can keep putting money in for every year in which you have self-employed income.

Now, because you're past 70½, you're required to start making withdrawals from a Keogh plan. However, those withdrawals are based on your life expectancy or the joint life expectancy of you and your Keogh beneficiary.

Until quite a number of years down the pike, you'll be able to put more money into your Keogh plan than you're required to take out. As a result, you'll save tax dollars.

If you can afford to tuck some of your self-employed income into a Keogh plan, by all means open one.

* * *

Q. There have been many news stories about how individual retirement accounts might be affected by the proposed federal tax reform law. But I have seen nothing printed about any changes in Keogh retirement plans for self-employed people. What would happen to them?

A. Neither the House nor Senate version of the tax reform bill calls for any major changes in Keogh plans. It's considered unlikely that the House-Senate conference committee, which will work out the final version, will alter the present status of Keoghs.

The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 changed the ground rules on Keogh plans, making them similar to corporate pension plans. Although strange things happen at F... alley on the Potomac, it's unlikely Congress will tinker with Keoghs this time around.

* * *

Q. As a self-employed engineering consultant, with no employees, I opened a Keogh retirement plan in 1979. I have had no earned income since 1984 and consequently have made no Keogh contributions since then.

If I have to fill out a Form 5500C every year, wouldn't it be easier to terminate my Keogh plan?

A. Here's a bit of solace. You don't have to file Form 5500C every year. You had to file that ridiculously complicated form in 1985. That was the first year self-employed people with no employees were required to do so.

For 1986 and 1987, you file the shorter Form 5500R, which isn't nearly as difficult. Then, you go back to three-year cycles — filing 5500C one year and 5500Rs the following two years.

I know just what you mean. That cockamamie Form 5500C drives strong men and women to despair. If it and the 5500Rs stump you, you can terminate your Keogh plan and put the money you have there into a rollover IRA.

Microorganism eats coal tar on site of New York plant

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Researchers at the University of Notre Dame are looking for a microscopic critter with a taste for coal tar.

The microorganism will be rewarded with an all-you-can-eat affair on the site of a 19th century New York gas plant.

The search began when the Niagara Mohawk Power Corp. decided to reclaim a 65-acre site in Utica, N.Y., once home to a gas plant run by Utica Gas and Electric Co.

The manufacture of gas for cooking, heating and lighting left the site coated with a thin veneer of coal-tar residues. So Niagara Mohawk sent out a plea for help to Robert Irvine, a professor of civil engineering at Notre Dame.

Irvine helped pioneer sequencing batch reactor technology, a process that promotes the growth of harmless microorganisms to break down wastes.

"The question is, who can eat this food?" Irvine said recently.

Texas Housing Authority to offer reduced rates

AUSTIN (AP) — More than 1,000 buyers may land mortgage interest rates of 8.70 percent when the Texas Housing Authority begins offering the reduced-rate financing Aug. 18.

The statewide program has $73 million for loans to low- and moderate-income homebuyers. The FHA-insured loans are 30-year fixed rate, said Melinda Magee, an agency spokeswoman.

To qualify for the program, an individual applicant must have an adjusted gross income for the preceding tax year of $33,000 or less, and a family can have a combined income of up to $42,000. The loans also require a minimum downpayment of 3 percent to 5 percent, officials said.

Borrowers in most of the state also must be first-time homebuyers or not have owned their principal residence in the past three years in order to qualify.

Ms. Magee said home price limits and maximum loan amounts are not available because they vary, depending on the provisions of the program.

Applications for the loans will be accepted at participating lenders starting Aug. 18, she said. Those interested in more information may call the housing agency at 512-472-7500 for more information, she said.

To file an application, a borrower must provide a copy of a valid sales contract on a house, copies of their 1983, 1984 and 1985 tax returns, credit information and pay a processing fee.

The last time the agency offered low-interest loans was November 1985, when it issued $111 million in tax-exempt bonds that guaranteed fixed-rate loans of 9.7 percent.

Ms. Magee said that in July 1985, the agency arranged for $176 million in financing for 3,000 loans at 9.75 percent. At that time, interest rates commonly available were about 13 percent.

She said that the participating lenders in that program took 10,000 applications in the first month.

The money for the home loans arranged through the Texas Housing Agency comes from the sale of tax-exempt bonds. The agency receives no state or federal appropriations, officials said.

According to the agency, since it was started six years ago the program has provided home loans to some 12,000 Texas families.

White says polls wrong, talks economic strategy

Associated Press

Gov. Mark White, responding to reports that he trails Republican challenger Bill Clements by 14 to 20 percent in opinion polls, said that "polls are wrong in every case."

White, along with representatives of five state agencies, met with 350 residents from Lubbock and 18 other South Plains counties at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center Tuesday to discuss economic development strategy.

Later Tuesday, White, Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace and other state officials and oil representatives participated in a panel discussion in Longview on the oil and tax revenue crisis in Texas.

Claiming that he has never used polls in his own campaign, White recalled that Clements' polls were wrong during their gubernatorial race in 1982.

"Clements said his polls showed that he would win by 12 percent, but I won by 7 percent," said White, a Democrat. "That's a 19 percent spread."

White said his campaign is based on positive programs for the future while Clements is dwelling on the past.

"If we want to talk about the past, then why didn't Clements do anything about needed education programs when oil was $30 a barrel?" White said. "Why wasn't anything done about highways when oil was $30 a barrel?"

White told the Lubbock audience that the state can still find opportunity in the adversity of depressed oil, gas and agricultural economies. Using Lubbock's rebuilding after the devastating tornado of 1970 as an example, White said the state can prepare for the future.

He urged diversification of the state's economy and pointed to the recent achievements in education, highway programs and the state water plan.

"The old magnets which attracted people to the state were oil, cotton and cattle," he said. "We have the new magnets of good schools, good transportation and water."

He said the drop in oil prices will result in energy cost savings for state facilities. Other savings could be realized by renegotiating some of the rents the state pays on nearly 7 million square feet of office space, he said.

White and the Texas Legislature are facing as much as a $3 billion budget shortfall when lawmakers convene in special session in August.

Later, in Longview, White reiterated his call for a temporary variable tariff on imported oil to "win the war for U.S. independence."

Both Wallace and the governor called on the audience to write federal officials in support of the tariff. "I want you all to think about what's happened to you, then write to your elected officials. If you think you've been done an injustice, say so," said Wallace.

Businessmen pleased on space center issue

By KATHRYN BAKER

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of Houston businessmen said they were satisfied after a day of meetings at the White House and the Capitol that there will be no shift of personnel away from the Johnson Space Center without the scrutiny of the Texas congressional delegation and Vice President George Bush.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration surprised the delegation with an announcement earlier this month that it planned to transfer space station program management and some research to NASA headquarters here and to the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala.

The JSC is central to the Houston Chamber of Commerce's effort to bring new industry to the city, plagued by a recession due to low oil prices.

Chamber president Gerry Griffin, Jack Rains of 3D International, Don Jordan of Texas Power and Lighting, Walter Mischer of Allied Bancshares Inc., and Jack Blanton of Scurlock Oil Co. met Tuesday with Bush, Texas Sens. Lloyd Bentsen and Phil Gramm, and several congressmen, including House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth.

"The best encouragement is that the Texas delegation — top to bottom, left to right — is well informed and single in the understanding that the Johnson Space Center is important to the Houston economy, which is important to the economy of Texas," Griffin told reporters.

He said Bush, a former Houston congressman, was sympathetic, but "no promises were given."

"He's personally interested, and I think that's about all we can ask for right now," Griffin said.

According to the House Committee on Science and Technology, NASA estimates the JSC would lose as many as 1,900 jobs from 1987 to 1993 under the proposed changes.

Griffin said some companies the Chamber has been courting have expressed doubts about moving to Houston as a direct result of NASA's announcement that it will seek the program shift.

"This is where Texas draws the line," said Rep. Mike Andrews, D-Houston. "We can't lose on this if we expect to diversify our economy."

Andrews has asked the General Accounting Office to investigate the cost of NASA's proposed changes, which he said would "greatly reduce" the role of the JSC in the agency's manned space flight program, cutting the center's percentage share of work on the space station project from 43 percent to 29 percent.

Project to place mild offenders under eyes of electronic jailer

AUSTIN (AP) — The Criminal Justice Policy Council has received a recommendation from a study committee for a pilot project that would place low risk offenders under the watchful eyes of an electronic jailer.

The council, headed by Gov. Mark White, which will make recommendations to the 1987 Legislature.

The pilot project, if approved, would use one of several different methods to keep track of prisoners released on "house arrest."

One general method, using radio waves, constantly monitors the offender, telling a central station his location. Another general method, using the telephone, would have the offender check in with a central station at certain times or on demand.

Those under "house arrest" would go to work and then return home without any variations.

Mattox wants vigilante group out

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox says his staff is searching the law to prevent an Alabama-based vigilante group from patroling the border between Texas and Mexico.

Mattox said Tuesday those behind the patrols have the "dangerous potential" to interfere with legitimate law enforcement efforts.

"They are armed and appear to be quite strident in their bizarre beliefs that they can control our country's borders," Mattox said.

Anti-tax group urges ban on personal taxes

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Constitution should prohibit any personal or corporate income tax, says an anti-tax group urging Gov. Mark White to allow lawmakers to consider such a ban next month.

"It's a very traditional value that we have in this state. The people don't want an income tax," said Rep. Bill Blanton, R-Farmers Branch.

The group, Texans Against State Income Taxes, sent White a letter Monday encouraging him to include consideration of a constitutional amendment banning an income tax as part of his formal calling of the Aug. 6 special legislative session.

The group's chairman, Richard Ford, said that although White and other state leaders say they oppose any income tax, a constitutional prohibition is better.

"I don't believe they will be in office indefinitely. This is an issue that is so important that it needs to be put into the Constitution to protect the people," Ford said.

If approved in the special session, a proposed constitutional amendment could go before voters in November.

If approved by voters, a constitutional ban could only be repealed by a future general election vote, and backers of the idea said that's a big plus.

"This doesn't mean that we could never have a state income tax. It's going to make it harder...and it means the people of Texas are going to get to decide the issue if we put this (ban) in the Constitution," said Rep. L.B. Kubiak, D-Rockdale.

The governor hadn't seen the request Tuesday, said his press secretary, Ann Arnold. She said the formal proclamation calling the special session isn't ready yet. The proclamation will include subjects the governor will allow to be considered during the 30-day House and Senate session.

With the state government facing a $3 billion deficit, Ford said an income tax would be a bad way to balance the budget.

He argued that an income tax would stifle creation of new jobs, reduce employment and make the state less attractive to companies seeking new locations.

"This state has been one of the fastest-growing in the nation. One reason for this is that Texas has no income tax and a low tax burden," Ford said.

CREATE YOUR OWN Designer ICED COFFEE

If you're one of those savvy people who feel most comfortable in unique, designer clothing, then you'll really be turned on by this collection of stylish, designer-inspired summer drinks. They're smart, they're sleek, they're sophisticated. And they're super-easy. Once your ingredients are assembled, you can combine them in minutes.

The two important points about these cool summer sippers are their good taste and their versatility. Serve them practically anytime! Add a scoop of ice cream or sherbet, if this suits your mood, and serve with spoons as well as straws.

The Creamy Coffee Soda, Mocha Milkshake, Spiced Brazilian Coffee and Apricot Coffee Frost make excellent substitutes for formal desserts. The Coffee Collins is a spirited, irresistible, any-time drink. Serve in tall, tall glasses or bold glass tankards. Lavish with whipped topping, if you like, and pass around a box of rich chocolates or indulgent cookies for added luxury. Now that's style!

Spiced Brazilian Coffee

1 square Baker's unsweetened chocolate
2 cups regular or decaffeinated instant coffee
1/4 cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
Dash of nutmeg or allspice
1-1/2 cups milk
1-1/2 teaspoons vanilla

Heat chocolate and coffee in saucepan over very low heat, stirring constantly until chocolate is melted and mixture is smooth. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer for 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Add sugar and spices. Gradually stir in milk. Heat thoroughly, stirring occasionally. (Beat with rotary beater to blend, if necessary.) Remove from heat; add vanilla. Cool or pour over crushed ice in tall glasses. Top with whipped topping and chocolate curls, if desired. Makes 3¾ cups or 6 servings.
NOTE: Recipe may be doubled.

Apricot Coffee Frost

1 cup milk
1 cup apricot or peach nectar
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon regular or decaffeinated instant coffee
Ice cream

Or use pineapple juice and 1/4 cup sugar.

Combine milk, nectar, sugar and instant coffee in bowl. Beat with rotary beater or blend in electric blender until frothy. Top with scoop of ice cream and garnish with strawberry and peach, if desired. Makes about 2 cups or 4 servings.

Coffee Collins

2 teaspoons superfine granulated sugar
1 teaspoon regular or decaffeinated instant coffee
1 tablespoon water
1 egg white
1 ounce rum, vodka or gin
Ice cubes or crushed ice
Ginger ale, chilled

Combine sugar, instant coffee, water and egg white in small shaker or bowl. Shake or beat until coffee and sugar are dissolved. Stir in rum. Pour over ice in tall glass; fill glass with ginger ale and stir. Makes about 1 cup or 1 serving.

Mocha Milkshake

(not pictured)

1 cup cold water
2 teaspoons regular or decaffeinated instant coffee
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 pint chocolate ice cream
Ice cubes

Measure all ingredients into blender. Cover and blend 10 to 15 seconds. (Or beat all ingredients in mixing bowl with rotary beater.) Serve immediately over ice cubes in tall glasses. Makes about 2⅔ cups or 3 or 4 servings.

Perfect Iced Coffee

(not pictured)

1/4 cup regular or decaffeinated instant coffee
4 cups water
Ice cubes or crushed ice

Place instant coffee in pitcher or coffee server. Add a small amount of the water and mix well. Gradually add remaining water, stirring well. (This helps prevent excessive foaming.) Pour over ice in tall glasses. Serve with cream and sugar, if desired. Makes 4 cups or 4 servings.
For 1 serving, use 1 rounded teaspoon instant coffee and 1 cup water.
For 16 servings, use 1 cup instant coffee (2-oz. jar) and 1 gallon water.

Creamy Coffee Soda

1-1/2 teaspoons regular or decaffeinated instant coffee
1 tablespoon sugar
1 tablespoon water
1/2 cup (about) ice cream
1/2 cup (about) club soda or ginger ale, chilled

Measure instant coffee and sugar into tall glass. Add water and stir until coffee and sugar are dissolved. Add ice cream, stir in soda and serve at once. Garnish with a stemmed maraschino cherry and mint sprig, if desired. Makes about 1 cup or 1 serving.

CREATE YOUR OWN SPECIAL SIGNATURE DESIGNER COFFEES

Here are some special ideas that will make these coffees uniquely yours:
USE COFFEE ICE CUBES—for more pronounced flavor. Use 1 tablespoon instant coffee per cup of cold water and stir. Pour into ice cube trays and freeze.
VARY YOUR SWEETENERS—try honey, brown sugar, maple syrup, grenadine syrup. For after-dinner iced coffee drinks, add a splash of liqueur—creme de cacao, for instance.
GARNISH WITH GLAMOUR—your own little touches add individuality and charm—a sprig of mint, a slice of fruit on the rim of the glass, a whole, ripe strawberry on a skewer, a dollop or two of whipped topping.
USE STYLISH GLASSWARE—while the traditional iced coffee glass is a tall, slim one, use a variety of smart-looking glassware—big glass mugs, double old-fashioned glasses, oversized balloon glasses, tall champagne flutes.

Chicago restaurant show provides food for thought

By KAY JARVIS-PROKOP
Copley News Service

CHICAGO — The next time the dessert trolley rolls down one of those restaurant aisles toward me, my thoughts will undoubtedly flash back to the recent National Restaurant Show in Chicago. I will wonder how well-traveled those gooey multilayered extravaganzas are.

"Cakes are where it's at — pies are out," it was explained to me at one of the many booths showing overdecorated cakes at the show — the world's largest of its kind and this year attracting 100,000 participants to McCormick Place.

"Ah," I replied sagely, while the man studied my name tag suspiciously. It said I was a restaurant critic. "Where do you get these cakes?"

"What do you care-you're not in the business," he snapped, looking over my shoulder as though searching for a security guard.

"Well, you know how popular restaurant columns are and readers like to know what they're supposed to want to eat next."

THAT SEEMED to make sense to him and he told me about cakes being in. "They travel good, they have a long freezer life, markup's high and they're not labor intensive." (The latter means that if you have someone who can wield a cake knife and get a slice onto a plate, that's all the work required.)

"Where are these cakes made?" I asked, surveying a cold case cluttered with everything from Sacher torte and German chocolate to Black Forest cakes. The last were decorated with swirls of icing that looked like old-fashioned permanent waves and cherries that appeared to be petrified.

"Germany," he replied grandly.

"You mean you bring these cakes all the way across the Atlantic Ocean and sell them in the United States?"

"Absolutely. Hell of a market. Like I said, freeze these babies and they'll go anywhere."

I HAD this instant mental picture of a cake being baked, decorated and frozen in Frankfurt, placed aboard a plane, unloaded at some central distribution point and then laid to rest in a freezer until it was ordered by a restaurant or commissary somewhere.

Then it would be trundled into another cargo hold, eventually pushed into another freezer in Kalamazoo, and there coldly sit for disconsolate months waiting to be defrosted.

WHAT IF nobody wanted it? Would the restaurant owner or whoever bought it eventually ship it back to the central distribution point?

Might this cake then journey to Orlando or Boston? Is it possible that a cake could outlive us all as decades later it achieves its ultimate glory on a dessert cart in, perhaps, Nome?

The salesman at the booth had no time for this sort of flighty conjecture. He was busy taking orders for frozen, fully decorated cakes from some delighted restaurant owners who were probably planning to fire their pastry chefs.

He did give me a sample of chocolate mousse and Bavarian Ecstasy cakes. They tasted like seasoned travelers to me and a bit jet-lagged. If you succumb to a dessert-cart dissertation and the waiter tells you the cakes were baked by a little old lady in Germany, order the sherbet.

ALSO SPOTTED during the four days of wandering the 9 miles of exhibits were cakes, croissants and other pastries shipped frozen from France, and Chinese food from Hong Kong and Canada. It may turn out that what you eat has been around a lot more than you have.

I don't want to make this column a little house of horrors, but there were a lot of other amazing things at the restaurant show.

It first should be explained that the restaurant show is a glorious example of free enterprise. There are sales representatives, vendors, equipment manufacturers, furniture, linen and tableware salesmen and thousands of others there to sell to restaurants, commissaries, school hospitals and anywhere else people gather to eat.

The show is not open to the public but attracts buyers and sellers from 75 countries.

If there was a theme, it would have been shelf life. That means any edible product that is close to indestructible and might even survive in a toxic waste dump. Despite all the hoopla about fresh food freshly prepared, there were enough chemicals around to keep Dow in business for a millenium.

TO SET the mood, there is first the All-America aroma of hot grease throughout the vast halls. French fries, doughnuts, chicken, fish, onion rings and appetizers are all being popped out of their freezer bags or extruded from machines and deposited into boiling grease. Free samples are part of the chaos.

Since you may, at a banquet, fast-food shop, deli or even (let's hope not) haute cuisine restaurant, eat some of these goods someday, let me tell you about some of the best and worst.

Sorbay is a new product (the name a takeoff on sorbet) that is non-dairy, contains no fat and has a shelf life of six to nine months. Once it's poured into an ice cream machine and liquid added, it looks like sherbet. It is bright yellow or bright green. The inventors said it is being ordered at a brisk rate for Navy hospitals and convalescent homes and there is a lot of interest from fast-food restaurants. It has a slight fruit flavor.

Proving that a restaurant might get by without a stove but never without a microwave were preprepared entrees such as beef roasts, prime rib, barbecued ribs and chicken in every guise.

PRECOOKED ENTREES included chicken stuffed with apples and almonds, wild and brown rice, Cordon Bleu-style and mixed with pasta. It was also done "Tel Aviv" style with a sweet potato and apple topping.

Oriental adaptations might make a traditional sushi maker reach for his cleaver. Klaus Dietrich, former executive chef of Pan Am, has created sushi for shipping that is supposed to appeal to the American palate.

Rather than using raw fish, the base for sushi, Dietrich is doing designer appetizers of salmon, imitation crab and multicolored vegetable pates wrapped in the traditional seaweed and shipped in frozen rolls. Slice as needed, decorate a plate or serve on appetizer trays. Like so many of the lavish cakes, they look ever so much better than they taste.

ONE OF THE urgent questions of the 1990s will be, "How to address the dinner business in fast-food chains," according to a spokesman for Hormel. These outlets do a great lunch business and have made terrific strides at breakfast, but dinner still eludes them.

To help out, Hormel developed some precooked entrees in individual packages. Catfish fillets, pork chops and steaks with simulated char marks on them can be heated in two minutes.

When they were test-marketed in Los Angeles, the response was lukewarm. The idea is now in limbo, but surely there will be others.

Restaurants get big bite of American food dollar

Americans will spend $186 billion in restaurants this year. That's 40¢ of every food dollar.

Americans dining out

By KAY JARVIS-PROKOP

CHICAGO — Just in case you're wondering about how much you spend on eating outside the home, it's 40 cents of your food dollar and climbing.

That statistic comes from the National Restaurant Association and accounts for the $186 billion rung up each year in food service industry sales.

With that kind of money floating through the economy, it's no wonder that restaurant owners spend a lot of time thinking about how to please their customers.

During the recent National Restaurant Association show, seminars were a well-attended part of the hectic action.

At one of the seminars, Mike Hurst, owner of Fifteenth Street Fisheries in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., who has been in the business most of his life, laid out his menu for success to an enthralled audience. The talk also provided guidelines for the restaruant-goer looking for the best.

"We cook 900 dinners to order a night using the freshest fish we can get, locally grown produce and homemade dressings and pastries. Sure, it costs us more, but that is more than offset by our increase in customers and their satisfaction with us."

The ebullient Hurst advised the restaurant owners to beware of preprepared foods that, while portion-controlled and far cheaper, often offer less in flavor.

"When you standardize, you sterilize," Hurst said, adding that he has three full-time cooks in the kitchen and that warming drawers, steam tables and heat lamps are used as little as possible. "We'd like to get rid of them altogether, but in a big operation, getting the food to the table hot is a first priority."

It should please diners to know that Hurst thinks fine service will be the target of the next decade.

"It's the guts of hospitality in a restaurant. You can buy decor, table settings and delivery of food, but I want people who care."

Hurst said he looks for waiters and waitresses who smile easily, speak with animation about the food and know the menu. "You can teach the techniques of serving, but personality has to be there."

Hurst said one of the worst pitfalls in the business is destroying the customer's expectations. "If the menu item is OK one time and not the next, get rid of it. Customers who go away disappointed find someplace else to eat."

'Royal Freckles' cocktail inspired by royal bride

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Burke's Peerage reports that the former Miss Sarah Ferguson "is the first royal princess this century who has not received one electric appliance" as a wedding gift.

If it's any consolation, she also may be the first royal princess this century in whose honor a cocktail created by a British bartender was named.

According to the gift list published before the royal wedding, 'Fergie' and Prince Andrew had received presents valued at more than $350,000.

Among the gifts were 18 breakfast sets, 38 salt and pepper shakers and about thousand water glasses. But not a single electric toaster.

How will the poor dear keep from burning the toast on their honeymoon?

Well, serve Prince Andrew enough "Royal Freckles" before he eats and he probably won't know the difference.

Its inventor, Buchanan Aitken, says the inspiration of the "Royal Freckles" cocktail came from the bride's freckled face.

"I decided on freckles because everyone associates them with Miss Ferguson," the Loch Lomond barkeep said. "The effect is created by tiny pieces of pure gold leaf.

"They remain in suspension in a drink and resemble freckles on a bride's cheek. Stir the cocktail with a straw and the freckles appear to be dancing."

Aitken says that "the freckles are created by the inclusion of Royal Gold Liqueur."

Once you have assembled all the cocktail ingredients, you're supposed to shake them with ice and pour "into a crystal goblet."

Ordinary glass won't do, apparently. Let's not be gauche while toasting the happy couple.

Wine or wine vinegar best to wash commercial variety of strawberries

By KIT SNEDAKER
Hearst News Service

Modern strawberries began in Virginia, according to "Jane Grigson's Fruit Book." The wild berry found there was so good it was taken back to England and eventually crossed with a South American plant. In the 19th century, berries produced by this cross won Michael Keens, an Isleworth gardener, a silver cup from the Royal Horticultural Society.

The plants came back to their own country and provide most of the large strawberries on the market today. The best berries, however, are still the tiny wild ones found in fields in early spring.

To prepare the commercial variety properly, don't wash them in water. Wash them in cheap wine or wine vinegar. Lightly tumble the berries — don't bruise them — in a tall, deep bowl and pour about half a cup of wine or wine vinegar for every basket of berries over them. Turn each berry once in the liquid that settles to the bottom and transfer it to a larger, dry bowl. If they aren't going to be eaten at once, put the unwashed, unhulled berries in the refrigerator on a cookie sheet with plastic wrap over them.

After they're cleaned and hulled, sprinkle lightly with powdered sugar and pour a little balsamic vinegar over them for a new taste. Or pour white wine over them (and sugar, if you must). The standard way, of course, is to eat them with sugar and cream. The simpler the better for strawberries, especially good ones.

If there are a lot of berries, American shortcake is indicated. This one is from "The California-American Cookbook" by Jeanette Ferrary and Louise Fiszer:

NEW-FASHIONED STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE

Shortcake:
2 cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon baking powder
3 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons grated lemon zest
¼ cup cold sweet butter plus 2 tablespoons melted sweet butter
¾ cup heavy cream

Preheat the oven to 450 degrees and grease a cookie sheet.

In a bowl, mix the flour, salt, baking powder, sugar and lemon zest. Cut in ¼ cup butter piece by piece until the mixture resembles cornmeal. Add the cream and mix until the dough holds together.

Turn the dough out onto a floured surface and knead for a few minutes. Roll the dough out to ½-inch thickness and cut six rounds with a 3-inch cutter. Place the rounds on the cookie sheet and brush with melted butter. Bake for about 12 minutes or until golden brown. Let them cool and split each round in half horizontally.

Filling:
1 10-ounce package frozen raspberries, thawed, or 2 cups fresh raspberries
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon framboise or liqueur of your choice
24 ounces fresh strawberries, hulled and halved
1½ cups creme fraiche (see note) or whipped cream for garnish

In a processor, puree the raspberries with sugar, lemon juice and liqueur. Strain to remove the seeds. Pour over the strawberries and marinate for at least 6 hours in the refrigerator.

Place a shortcake half on each plate, cover with strawberries and top with the other shortcake half. Surround with additional strawberries and garnish each with creme fraiche or whipped cream. Makes 6 servings.

Note: To make creme fraiche, mix 1 cup heavy cream with ½ cup sour cream or 2 tablespoons buttermilk and let sit at room temperature for 8 hours.

STRAWBERRY PATE

This dessert, with its overtones of an English summer pudding, must be made a day (or even two) before serving. Under refrigeration, it turns into a solidly encrusted pate.

1½ pounds good quality Scotch shortbread
Approximately 3 tablespoons whipping cream
Sugar
3 cups strawberries
Pinch of cinnamon

Crush the shortbread to a fine crumb in a blender or food processor. Put aside 1 cup. Bind the rest of the crumbs lightly with cream until the mixture is just moist enough to pack.

Sprinkle the bottom of a small terrine or loaf pan (about 4½ x 7 inches) with 2 tablespoons of granulated sugar. Pat a thin layer of "dough" onto the bottom and up the sides to the height of 1½ inches.

Mix the berries with cinnamon, the reserved cup of crumbs and enough sugar so they taste distinctly sweet. Spoon the berries into the crust and cover with the remaining moist crumbs. Put a layer of aluminum foil on top of the pate and weight it with small cans or jars. Refrigerate at least overnight.

To serve, run a knife around the edge and dip the mold bottom briefly into hot water. Reverse the mold sharply down onto a towel-covered counter. Slide the pate onto a serving dish and slice off one crusted end.

Cut the pate into ¾-inch slices, dipping the knife in hot water between cuts. Garnish each slice with a small rosette of sweetened whipped cream. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Quality coffee goes further, tastes better

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

I figure I'm pretty conscientious about my diet. I've cut down on fats, I'm eating more vegetables and less meat, I go for whole-grain breads most of the time, and I don't even smoke. But I don't care WHAT the health consultants say: I'm not giving up my coffee, and I want the caffeine left in it, thank you.

I don't overdo it, of course. Two or three cups is the most I indulge in on any given day. It's my one little vice (well, OK, there may be one or two others ...), and I plan to keep it.

I always buy good-quality coffee. It not only goes further, but it tastes better, too. And no matter how expensive those grounds may seem at the market, a cup of home brewed java still costs only about a nickel (based on 80 cups or more per pound at $4 a pound).

For best results, clean your coffeemaker regularly as instructed by manufacturer, and use the proper grind for your machine or pot.

You never want to leave a pot of coffee on the warmer for more than half an hour, or the delectable brown liquid will develop a strong, bitter flavor not even a heaping helping of milk and sugar will cover up.

To prevent the utter ruination of perfectly good coffee, turn to your microwave for help. While it can't be used to make fresh coffee, it's the best device there is for reheating cold coffee. Just make a pot in the morning, drink what you want, and let the rest get cold. Then reheat by the cup whenever it's wanted for coffee that tasted like it was just brewed.

Heating beverages, by the way, is one of the most popular uses of the microwave. And no wonder, when it takes only 1½ minutes (at HIGH setting) to heat a cup of coffee or tea. (When microwaving 4 or more at one time, arrange in a circle for more even heating.)

Cups or mugs with metallic trim, and those which have been cracked or broken and glued back together, are not good candidates for microwaving.

To make instant coffee (or tea), mix powder with water in mug or cup and microwave 1¼ to 1½ minutes on HIGH (100 percent power), or until steam rises.

Americans consume about half of the world's coffee, so there must be a lot of you who are just as mad about the stuff as I am. The following recipes are for you (they all work just as well with decaffeinated):

CAFE BAHIA

⅓ cup water
⅓ cup instant coffee granules
¼ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
4 cups milk
½ cup whipping cream, whipped
Ground nutmeg

Oven setting: HIGH (100 per cent power); MEDIUM (50 per cent power)

Pour water into a 2-quart glass casserole. Microwave at HIGH setting 1 minute, then stir in instant coffee until dissolved.

Blend in sugar and cinnamon, then pour in milk, stirring constantly.

Microwave, uncovered, at MEDIUM setting for 5 to 9 minutes, stirring after 3 or 4 minutes, until hot.

Serve in mugs with a dollop of whipped cream sprinkled with nutmeg.

Serves 4 to 6.

MOCHA DIVINE

2 cups water
2 packages (1 ounce each) instant cocoa mix
1 tablespoon instant coffee
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ cup milk
Whipped cream (optional)
Shaved bittersweet chocolate curls (optional)
2 cinnamon sticks (optional)

Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent)

Measure water into a 1-quart glass measur or casserole. Microwave 3 to 5 minutes, or until almost boiling.

In small bowl, combine cocoa mix, instant coffee and cinnamon. Stir into hot water, then stir in milk. Pour into two large serving mugs.

Optional garnish: Top each serving with a dollop of whipped cream, sprinkle with chocolate curls, and add cinnamon stick.

Serves 2.

CAFE A L'ORANGE

4 cups hot, freshly brewed coffee, or 4 cups hot water and 2½ to 3 tbsps instant coffee (to taste)
¾ cup orange liqueur
½ cup whipping cream whipped with 3 tbsps powdered sugar
2 tablespoons grated orange peel

Oven setting: HIGH (100 per cent power)

Heat water in 6-cup glass measure 9 to 13 minutes, or until very hot and near boiling.

Stir in instant coffee to dissolve, then stir in orange liqueur. (If using freshly brewed hot coffee, stir in liqueur.)

Pour into cups or small mugs. Top each with a dollop of whipped cream and sprinkle with a bit of grated orange peel.

Serves 4 to 6.

Tiny, tart strawberries considered best in Nemi

NEMI, Italy (UPI) — It's a perverse little strawberry festival they throw in the strawberry capital of Italy.

No strawberry shortcake.
No strawberry jam.
No strawberry milk shakes.
No strawberry tarts.

Just strawberries and more strawberries, picked that morning and served up along the village's main street at tiny ice-cream-parlor tables covered with strawberry-printed tablecloths.

Perhaps even more confounding is Nemi's idea of the perfect strawberry — a tiny, narrow specimen about the size of a child's thimble with a tart, woodsy taste.

Called "fragoline" (frah-go-lee-nay, literally "little strawberries"), these miniature, wild-looking berries are served only in the simplest ways — with sugar and lemon juice, or vinegar or white wine or maraschino liqueur, sometimes with vanilla ice cream or under a spoonful of thick, freshly whipped cream.

Nemi's fragoline — grown in the volcanic soil around the tiny jewel of a lake at the foot of the town — bring in 10 times the price of the standard cultivated strawberry that also is grown in the area.

"Fragoline di Nemi" retail in town for 25,000 lire a kilo — roughly $7.75 a pound — while growers who cultivate "fragoloni" (literally "big, fat strawberries") get only about 80 cents a pound.

SO EXPENSIVE are the fragoline that they are often sold by the "etto" (one-tenth of a kilo, equivalent to 3 ounces) in dollhouse-sized, hand-made baskets. One miniature wicker basket holding 3 ounces of "fragoline" and lined with miniature ferns $2.

In Nemi — and throughout Italy — bigger is definitely not better when it comes to fresh fruits and vegetables.

Italians seek out the small, from tiny strawberries to miniature green beans, from baby peas to scallions that are little more than slivers of white and green.

With taste instead of magnitude as the basic criterion, Italian housewives think nothing of rummaging through a crate of fava beans to shell one or two for a raw sample before deciding whether to buy.

Strawberry vendors in Nemi know most berries look alike, whether they come from the rich volcanic soil near Lake Nemi that produces the best-flavored berries or from the less favored lowlands nearby.

So they compete for customers in the only way they can, offering free taste tests and calling into question the origin of their neighbors' products.

"Signora, try one of mine," said one sturdy farmer's wife selling berries at a roadside stand. "Mine come from right by the lake, not like those over there that come from who knows where."

A VILLAGE of 1,500 people, Nemi is situated on a heavily wooded promontory in the Alban Hills 15 miles south of Rome.

Romans have been making the 1,575-foot climb up to Nemi for some 2,000 years. But religion, not strawberries, is what first brought ancient Romans to the area.

Imperial Rome used to troop out to Nemi to celebrate pagan rites associated with the goddess Diana and the high priest who reigned at her temple there. The priest kept his post until a challenger suceeded in breaking off a branch from a certain tree in the goddess's sacred grove and fought him to the death.

The Emperor Caligula, who reigned from 37-41 A.D., had two pleasure barges built to carry his guests across the lake for the Festival of Diana. The barges, virtually intact, were raised from the lake in 1930-31 but were destroyed by retreating German soldiers during World War II.

Food historians say that by the end of the first century, during the reign of the Emperor Trajan, the strawberries around Nemi were highly praised as the best available in the region.

Fresh strawberries low in calories

By BETTY WILSON
Hearst News Service

It's a shame the fresh strawberry season is so short, because this fruit has a lot to offer. Not only are strawberries low in calories — 55 per cup — they also are a fair source of vitamin C and look attractive.

When selecting strawberries, look for berries red to the tip. Less juice is lost when berries still have the green cap attached.

STRAWBERRIES JULIET

4 cups whole fresh strawberries
⅓ cup thawed whipped topping
⅓ cup plain low-fat yogurt
1 tablespoon sugar

Slice enough strawberries to measure ¼ cup. Crush with a fork. Add the whipped topping, yogurt and sugar. Mix well. Spoon the remaining berries evenly into dessert dishes. Top each serving with the strawberry-yogurt mixture. Chill 1 hour.

STRAWBERRY YOGURT DESSERT

1 can (8-ounce) unsweetened crushed pineapple, undrained
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1½ cups sliced fresh berries
1 carton (8-ounce) strawberry low-fat yogurt
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind

Drain the pineapple, reserving the juice. Set aside. Sprinkle the gelatin over the pineapple juice in a small saucepan. Let stand for 1 minute to soften. Stir the mixture over low heat 3 to 4 minutes or until the gelatin dissolves. Remove from the heat. Add strawberries, yogurt, lemon rind and reserved pineapple. Mix well. Pour into six 4-ounce dessert dishes or a 5- by 9-inch loaf pan.

For my money, strawberries are one of the best things about spring. When I was growing up, my brothers and I looked forward to the first strawberry shortcake of the season almost as much as we anticipated the last day of school.

Although they're available year round, the juicy red berries are at their peak right now. When you look for fresh strawberries at the store, choose those with stem caps attached. Berry size is not an indication of quality; the biggest berries may be the most tempting but are not necessarily the most flavorful.

Strawberry-Lemon Pie is a Sunday-best strawberry dessert. Sliced berries top a rich lemony pudding layer. If you don't have the 10-inch flan pan called for in the recipe, you can use a 9-inch pie plate instead.

STRAWBERRY-LEMON PIE

Pastry for 1-crust 9-inch pie
½ cup granulated sugar
4 teaspoons cornstarch
½ cup water
1 beaten egg yolk
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
3 tablespoons lemon juice
3 cups sliced fresh strawberries
2 3-ounce packages cream cheese, softened
¼ cup sifted powdered sugar
⅓ cup coconut
¾ cup whipping cream
¼ cup coconut, toasted

On a floured surface roll pastry to a 12-inch circle. Fit into 10-inch flan pan with removable bottom, pressing dough against sides. Trim excess dough even with pan. Prick shell. Bake in a 450-degree oven for 10 to 12 minutes. Cool.

In a saucepan combine granulated sugar and cornstarch. Add water, egg yolk, and butter or margarine. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly; cook 2 minutes more. Remove from heat.

Stir in lemon juice. Turn into baked shell. Cool. Top with sliced berries.

In small mixer bowl beat together cream cheese and powdered sugar. Fold in the ⅓ cup coconut. In another bowl beat whipping cream to soft peaks; fold into cream cheese mixture until combined. Spread on top of the berries. Sprinkle with the toasted coconut. Chill 4 hours or overnight. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

WHAT'S COOKING

Seventh-grader makes simple desserts sing

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

As a soon-to-be seventh grader at Goddard Junior High School, Regina Yarbrough, 12, has set her sights on music. She plans to be in the school band this coming year — playing the clarinet — and "I have been taking piano lessons for three years. I'm still going to go on with piano lessons."

She aspires to be a virtuso in the kitchen, too, often preparing the family's meals. "I try to cook a meal a week," she said.

"One day I invited a friend and made meat loaf, some corn, some beans, pistachio pudding salad and dessert," said Regina.

She began cooking when she was about 10, because "my mom cooks a lot. I helped her and decided I liked that."

Although desserts in general are her favorite foods to make — "the first thing I ever made was cake" — Regina said she has no one particular favorite. "I like to get in there and play around."

Two favorites at the Yarbrough household are the following Cherry Nut Pie and Pistachio Pudding Salad

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Regina Yarbrough

CHERRY NUT PIE

1 can pie cherries, well drained
1 can Eagle-brand condensed milk
½ pint whipping cream
1 cup chopped pecans
Juice of two lemons or 4 tablespoons lemon juice

Mix cherries, milk, whipping cream and pecans. Add lemon juice and mix well. Pour into 9-inch vanilla wafer pie shell and chill.

PISTACHIO PUDDING SALAD

20 ounce can crushed pineapple with juice
2 cups marshmallows, large sized cut up or miniature
1 carton (9 ounces) non-dairy whipped topping, thawed
½ cup chopped nuts
1 package instant pistachio pudding, dry

Place all ingredients in large bowl and mix with spoon. Do not beat. May be made the day before.

This is called a salad but could be a dessert, also.

Cake has taste of tropics

Associated Press

PINA COLADA POUND CAKE

1 package 2-layer-size yellow cake mix
1 4-serving-size package instant coconut cream pudding mix
½ cup water
¼ cup cooking oil
4 eggs
1 6-ounce can frozen pineapple juice concentrate, thawed
1½ cups sifted powdered sugar
⅓ cup rum
2 tablespoons toasted coconut

Grease and lightly flour a 10-inch fluted tube pan; set aside. In a large mixer bowl combine cake mix, pudding mix, water, oil, eggs and half (1-3rd cup) of the juice concentrate. Beat with electric mixer on low speed until mixture is combined. Beat on medium speed for 2 minutes. Pour into prepared pan. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 45 to 50 minutes or until cake tests done. Place cake on wire rack; cool for 10 minutes. Remove cake from pan; place on wire rack over a tray.

Meanwhile, for syrup, in a small saucepan combine powdered sugar and remaining juice concentrate; bring just to boiling. Remove from heat; cool slightly. Add rum. Prick holes in top of cake with tines of fork. Spoon syrup slowly over top and down sides of cake, allowing syrup to soak in. Sprinkle with toasted coconut. Cool cake thoroughly. Makes 12 servings.

Food sayings founded on both fact, fancy

By MARIAN BURROS
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Feed a cold and starve a fever.

An apple a day keeps the doctor away.

Where does fact leave off and superstition begin with the old wives' tales about food and eating that all of us were brought up on? And where do they come from?

Everyone knows an apple a day isn't going to keep you from getting sick, but is there not still a kernel of truth in the saying?

My mother always told me about starving a fever when I was sick, and I acted on the information when my first child was born. Did it make any sense?

Not really. But in many old bromides there is often just enough truth in the saying to keep people following the advice. If anything, said Dr. Sidney Wolfe, the director of Health Research Group, a Washington-based public interest group, someone with a fever should eat more. Fever causes the body to burn up more energy than normal, requiring more food. But food is often the last thing on the mind of someone running a fever.

It's important to eat, but it's more important to drink as much liquid as possible to prevent dehydration.

Apples may not keep the doctor at bay, but they are fine roughage. Other fruits, with more nutrients, as well as the fiber that apples offer, are just as good or better.

But what about the suggestion that insomniacs drink warm milk? More truth than fancy here. Milk contains tryptophan, an amino acid that is a precursor of serotonin, a chemical that induces drowsiness.

Even the consumption of chicken soup as symptomatic relief from colds is worthwhile. The heat from the soup helps clear a stuffed nose. Well, you say, hot water will do the same thing. But who wants to drink hot water?

The origin of the idea that oysters are an aphrodisiac is a bit difficult to pinpoint. Oysters are a good source of zinc. Zinc deficiencies are related to impaired sexual growth. But how did people hundreds of years ago know that, when they hadn't even heard of zinc?

Will carrots do anything for eyesight? Only for those who have a vitamin A deficiency, which can cause night blindness and eventually total blindness. But for those without such a deficiency, it isn't necessary to overdose on carrots.

Nor is it necessary to eat fish to improve the brain. "Fish doesn't make you smarter," said Bonnie Liebman, a registered dietitian at the Center for Science in the Public Interest, in Washington. "If you had a protein deficiency you might have impaired mental development," she said, but otherwise telling little children that fish is brain food was mother's way of getting them to eat the fish.

Children in my era were given flat ginger ale for an upset stomach, and Wolfe said that isn't a bad idea. "Nonirritating clear liquids are good for an upset stomach," he explained. A soft drink like ginger ale contains sugar, which provides energy, but the drink should be free of the carbonation that may be irritating.

And, said Wolfe, parents who insisted that eating a bowl of hot cereal was important before going to school on a cold winter morning were not so far off the mark. When it is very cold outside it is better to eat hot food because the heat of the food warms the body, as do the calories that the food provides.

At the opposite extreme, the virtues of eating spicy food in steamy climates is not just an old wives' tale. It has some validity. In such climates, people may drink just enough water to quench their thirst when, in fact, they need at least half again as much as that to keep from becoming dehydrated.

Eating spicy foods is certain to increase consumption of fluids.

Guerrero's chefs serve up tradition

By MAUREEN CLANCY
Copley News Service

Alicia Gironella De' Angeli has never eaten a ground-beef taco salad in her life.

She has never waded through cheese-smothered chili con carne, either.

But, as gastronomic director of the Centro de Gastronomia Guerrerense, De' Angeli probably knows more about real Mexican food than anybody.

Petite and reserved, but passionately enthusiastic about the food of her native land, De' Angeli is head of the culinary institute of the state of Guerrero (an area of central Mexico that incorporates Acapulco, Ixtapa and the silver city of Taxco).

CNS Graphic

THE PURPOSE of the Centro de Gastronomia, established by state Gov. Alejandro Cervantes Delgado as the only gastronomic center of its kind in Mexico, is to rediscover, recover and divulge the culinary traditions of the state, traditions with roots that go back to pre-Hispanic days.

To that end, De' Angeli wants to acquaint the world with such delicacies as pozole verde with fresh corn, seafood and herbs; sweet-and-sour pork leg; Taxco pink mole, clemole (a Mexican bouillabaisse), and talla, assorted fish, meats and poultry that are first "scrubbed with herbs and chilies," then grilled and served with special sauces.

THE FOOD of Guerrero is noteworthy for its variety, complexity of tastes and textures and exuberant use of fresh herbs and chilies.

Most dishes incorporate vegetables and chilies that are first cooked over an open flame or on a red-hot grill.

"Preparing garlic, chilies and onion this way brings out the natural flavors, fragrances and essential oils," says De' Angeli.

The cooking of the region also takes full advantage of such local foodstuffs as fish and shellfish from the Pacific Ocean, corn, rice and tropical fruits and vegetables.

Many meats and fish are wrapped in leaves before being grilled.

Chicken is also frequently prepared this way — being marinated overnight, then wrapped in some type of leaves and either grilled over an open fire or baked in an oven.

OTHER DISHES of Guerrero feature sweet-and-sour sauces — creations that were learned when ships from the Orient stopped in the port of Acapulco during the 17th and 18th centuries.

The following recipes were provided by the Centro de Gastronomia Guerrerense.

TOMATO SOUP WITH EPAZOTE

4½ pounds tomatoes peeled and seeded
3 canned pimientos or 2 fresh
2 chilies chipotles adobados
1 teaspoon each, chopped: onion, garlic
2 tablespoons olive oil
20 epazote leaves
6 white mushrooms, thinly sliced
Fried tortilla strips
Salt and pepper

In 1 teaspoon of oil, lightly fry onion with 2 epazote leaves, garlic, pimientos and chilies chipotles.

Stir in pureed tomato and season with salt and pepper.

It may be necessary to add a pinch of sugar to cut the acidity of the tomatoes.

Heat over low heat for 15 minutes; the soup should begin to thicken. Thin slightly with a small amount of consomme or light cream.

Serve hot with lightly fried epazote leaves, mushroom slices and tortilla strips. If served cold, eliminate tortilla strips and substitute chopped onion.

Serves 6 to 8.

TORTILLA SOUP

1 pound chopped pork
2 cups water
Toasted oregano
2 cloves roasted garlic
Pinch salt
1 onion, roasted, sliced
4 tomatoes, roasted, peeled, seeded
2 tablespoons chicken fat
4 cups of broth in which beans have been cooked
2 pasilla chilies, de-veined, fried, broken up
10 medium day-old tortillas, cut in strips and lightly fried
2 avocados, cubed
½ cup queso anejo
Cilantro and finely chopped onion

Cook pork in its own fat, then simmer until thoroughly cooked in 1 pint water with oregano, roasted garlic and salt. Remove garlic; grind with onion and tomatoes.

In large kettle, melt chicken fat; add ground vegetables and fry lightly. Stir in bean broth and pork with its broth; let cook over low heat for 8 minutes. Check seasoning.

Several minutes before serving, gently stir in tortilla strips; they should stay crisp and float slightly. To serve, bring soup to table with separate bowls of chili pieces, avocado cubes, cilantro and onion so guests can garnish soup to their taste.

Note: This soup can be made with whichever type of bean broth you wish. The best way to serve this soup is in individual heat-proof bowls. Put tortilla strips in bowls, then add boiling-hot soup and serve immediately.

Serves 6 to 8.

CEVICHE

3 medium avocados peeled
1 pound skinned fillets of mackerel, sierra or carp
Juice of 6-7 large limes
2 medium tomatoes
3-4 canned chilies serranos en escabeche
¼ cup olive oil
½ teaspoon oregano
½ teaspoon salt, or to taste
Freshly ground pepper
1 small onion, sliced in rings
A little finely chopped coriander (optional)
20 olives without seed, chopped

Cut fish into ½-inch cubes. Put lemon and lime juice and fish in glass bowl. Set to chill in coldest part of refrigerator for at least 5 hours, or until fish becomes white, loses its translucency and becomes opaque.

Stir fish from time to time so that they get evenly cooked in the juice. The acid in the lemon juice coagulates the protein in the fish.

Peel, seed and chop tomatoes, chop chilies with their seeds, and add them with rest of ingredients to fish.

Set ceviche aside in bottom of refrigerator for at least 1 hour to season.

Pour oil, oregano, salt, freshly ground pepper, onion sliced in rings and finely chopped coriander, as well as olives.

You should serve it chilled, but not so cold that the oil congeals.

Before serving, garnish each portion with slices of avocado.

Serves 6.

Fast fajitas fixed with frozen beef

Associated Press

FAST FAJITAS

8 6-inch flour tortillas
1 14-ounce package frozen very thinly sliced beef
½ cup sour cream dip with chives

Wrap tortillas in foil; warm in a 350 degree oven for 5 minutes. Meanwhile, prepare beef according to package directions. Cut beef into bite-size strips.

For each fajita, arrange some of the beef strips down the center of each tortilla to within 1 inch of the edge. Spoon about 1 tablespoon of dip and 1 tablespoon of salsa onto each tortilla. Keep warm while preparing remaining fajitas. Makes 4 servings.

Add tossed salad with tangy dressing, iced tea, and orange sherbet and have supper ready in less than 30 minutes.

DEAR ABBY

Soldier's wife develops battle fatigue

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I got married seven months ago to a soldier in the U.S. Army. When it came time for me to get my I.D. card, I found out that I married a man who already had a wife in Germany!

Now he tells me that the marriage that took place in Germany is not considered a legal marriage in the United States. Is this a line of bull or what? He lies so much I don't know where I stand with him. We've had some serious arguments over it. I'm not sure if I'm married or not.

He says he doesn't love me anymore and is bored. I would leave him, but I think I'm pregnant. Holy cow, what a mess!

Please tell me where I can get some straight answers. He's a sergeant and draws good pay. — DESPERATE ARMY WIFE

DEAR WIFE: See the Army chaplain and tell him exactly what you've told me. He will straighten out the mess, and your husband's commanding officer will straighten out the sergeant.

DEAR ABBY: I have a "gripe" I've never seen in your column. What do you think of a teen-ager sending a graduation announcement addressed to simply "Mary Brown," when Mary Brown is in her 80s?

One such girl just missed getting a nice graduation gift from me. Where has respect for the elderly gone? — B.B. IN VA.

DEAR B.B.: In this case it hasn't "gone" anywhere. It never existed. Children cannot be expected to know what they haven't been taught. You missed an opportunity to give that young lady a valuable gift that would serve her for a lifetime: a book on etiquette.

DEAR ABBY: I am fuming over your "advice" to "Unappreciated in Ohio": "Do what you can for your parents without thoughts of being repaid."

This is the most disgustingly hypocritical, sanctimonious, holier-than-thou nonsense I have ever come across in your or any other advice column! What utopian planet do you live on? Old people can be selfish, greedy and ungrateful — just like young ones. This ungrateful old mom has lived off two of her eight children and has amassed a small fortune, which she is now proposing to distribute equally between all eight children, including the six who never did more than send a plant for Mother's Day. Legally, this is her right, but morally it is deplorable.

Abby, this was your golden opportunity to read a lecture on gratitude to ungrateful parents who take advantage of the good-natured child who takes them in while doting on the ones who ignore them.

If I were "Unappreciated," I would tell Mom to either start paying for her room and board or divide the pleasure of her company between all eight of the beneficiaries of her "share-and-share-alike" will. And to please let me know which of the other six plant-senders she'd like to "visit" starting next month.

Old people deserve no special treatment just because they are old. They should take note of how their children treat them, and reciprocate accordingly in their wills.

Harsh advice? Yes, but fair. Anything else is garbage! — DISGUSTED IN BOSTON

DEAR DISGUSTED: Thus far the score: "Unappreciated in Ohio," 133; Abby, 27.

THE BUTCHER

Rocky Mountain oysters home on the range

By MERLE ELLIS

I first tasted Rocky Mountain oysters at Berrcham's Bar on the Winnebago Indian Reservation in Winnebago, Nebraska. That's just across the river and down the road from where I learned the butcher trade in Sioux City, Iowa. They were, they are, delicious.

What are Rocky Mountain oysters? Well, you see, they're-a-well-a-they're-a-sort-of-a-they're the testicles of the male bovine, most often those of calves taken at castrating time.

In sheep country, lamb testicles, usually called "fries," also are served as Rocky Mountain oysters. I tasted those only recently at the Hi-Country Lamb Cook-Off in Greely, Colorado.

They are, in my estimation, the best of the bunch. However, I have yet to taste turkey. Yes, tom turkey testicles also are highly prized and, according to my friend Sam Arnold, a gastronomic historian who is something of an authority on this subject, "turkey surprises," as they are known in the trade, are the most tasty of them all!

JIM ROSS lived in Winnebago, and worked with me at the A & P store in Sioux City. He was the head "back room man" and I was his apprentice. Every Saturday morning when he got to work Jim would take a 30-pound box of bull fries out of the freezer and in late afternoon when the week's cutting was done and the cooler cleaned, I would help him "fix 'em."

Rocky Mountain oysters, no matter the source, have a membrane covering the gland that must be removed. It is much easier to remove that membrane and to slice the fries if they are still slightly frozen and a bit frosty. Bull, calf and lamb testicles usually are sliced into ½- to ¼-inch thick slices for frying. Jim used to have us run the slices of bull fries through the meat tenderizer once or twice.

That isn't necessary with calf or lamb testicles. I doubt that turkey fries even need to be sliced. They can simply be skinned, impaled on toothpicks, deep-fried and served as hors d'oeuvres.

ACCORDING TO Sam Arnold that's the best way to eat any Rocky Mountain oyster. "At castration time on the range," he recalls, "the fries were simply impaled on a stick and roasted over the campfire 'til cooked." And he's not talkin' turkey! Thanks, anyway, Sam. But when it comes to bull, calf and lamb, I'll have my fries sliced and fried and served with horseradish sauce.

Jim Ross used to soak the sliced fries in salt water for a couple of hours to remove any strong flavor. Calf and lamb fries — and probably turkey as well — need no soaking. They are very mild in flavor.

Cooking Rocky Mountain oysters, whatever the species, is a simple process, once the skinning and slicing are done. The fries, either sliced or whole, are simply dusted with seasoned flour, dipped in egg, or milk and egg wash, then rolled in some sort of flour or crumbs and deep-fried in hot fat (400 degrees) until just golden brown. Overcooking will toughen them.

Jim Ross used to use a mixture of pancake flour and cornmeal for the final dusting of bull fries he served in Winnebago.

Sam Arnold, who serves calf fries at his restaurant, The Fort in the foothills, southwest of Denver, uses finely crushed soda cracker crumbs, as does George Simpson, who cooks up lamb fries at Dick's Tavern in Ault, Colorado, about 12 miles north of Greeley.

IN THE more elegant and sophisticated surroundings of Harris' restaurant, one of the finest steak houses in San Francisco, Anne Harris has veal fries prepared with a simple dusting of seasoned flour prior to deep frying.

Rocky Mountain oysters are not an item that you are apt to find in the meat case of your average local supermarket. There is a somewhat limited supply. Most calf testicles are taken at calving time on the ranch rather than in a USDA-inspected meat plant and are, therefore, not allowed to be sold. You have to know a cowboy.

Veal producers like Provimi are the best source of calf fries. They pack calf fries in 10-pound packages and ship them in 40-pound boxes, four packages to the box. Any butcher who handles Provimi veal could order them for you — if he would.

Lamb fries also may be ordered from lamb packers, but, like calf fries, they come in 10-pound or 20-pound boxes. Bull fries come in even larger containers.

Obviously Rocky Mountain oysters are not something you would plan for an intimate dinner party, but they are a lot of fun to feed a very informal crowd looking for something that goes great with a keg of beer on a hot summer day.

Foods become 'Visual Delights'

BOSTON (UPI) — It was inevitable, in this day of exquisite food presentation — the cookbook has become as much fun to look at as it is to use.

Imaginative cook Nathalie Hambro and photographer Christine Hanscomb have combined their talents to produce "Visual Delights," a seasonal recipe book that lives up to its name.

Even the paper comes in four different colors, starting with green for spring and working through pink for summer, golden for autumn and blue for winter. Framed on these pages are truly innovative recipes and eye-catching, often atmospheric photographs.

"Visual Delights" (Little, Brown, $19.95) mixes coffee table with dining table in a most pleasing way. Here is Hambro's summer recipe for Veal and Orange Ring.

VEAL AND ORANGE RING

1 tablespoon oil
1 pound piece leg of veal
2 tablespoon cognac
4 oranges
1 lemon
2 tablespoon Grand Marnier
1 tablespoon white wine vinegar
1 pint stock, clarified
1 packet (½ tablespoon) gelatin
Salt and freshly ground black pepper
Nasturtium flowers and leaves to garnish

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Heat the oil in a small, heavy roasting pan and brown the veal. When it is golden, pour in the cognac and ignite. Roast the veal for 30 to 40 minutes — it should still be pink in the center. Transfer to a plate and leave to cool.

Prepare the sauce in the roasting tin. Add to the meat juices the juice of 2 oranges and the lemon, the Grand Marnier, vinegar and stock. Bring to a boil, stirring, then strain and leave to cool.

Meanwhile, soften the gelatin in about 2 tablespoons of warm water, then add it to the sauce together with salt and pepper, stirring until the gelatin is totally dissolved.

Peel the 2 remaining oranges, removing the pith, pips and membranes. Cut the veal into thin slices and then into small triangles.

Chill a 1½ pint savarin mold in the freezer for 5 to 10 minutes, then line the bottom and sides of the ring with a little of the jelly. It should set at once.

Arrange the veal pieces and the orange sections in the bottom of the mold, dipping each piece in the jelly first to help it remain in the right position. Add just enough jelly to cover the veal and orange segments, then chill.

Set each layer before arranging the next, gently warming the remaining jelly if it starts to set. Once the mold is full, refrigerate for at least 4 hours. Unmold the ring onto a round serving dish, then garnish with nasturtium flowers in the center and leaves and flowers around the edge.

Serves 8.

Jamaican inn delights international clientele

By JOHN DeMERS
United Press Internaitonal

OCHO RIOS, Jamaica — Off the beaten path (but right on the water) and a universe removed from those steamy "couples" resorts, a 21-room inn delights an international clientele with sheer relaxation and wonderful food.

Despite their simplicity and reasonable prices, the Hibiscus Lodge and its Almond Tree Restaurant have become favored destinations of people who tend to pay far more elsewhere.

"We have made ourselves a name here since the night we opened," said Alfred Doswald, the Swiss-born chef who seems as likely to dish up a spicy native specialty as an elegant tableside flambe. "We don't do much advertising. We do mostly word of mouth."

Whatever he and the hotel's owners do — a tiny postcard here, a printed rate sheet there — it certainly is working.

Even the 21 rooms represent an increase from 19 last year, and the Almond Tree's reservation book is often filled three days in advance during the north coast's weather-blessed winters.

On an island whose resorts range from the plush to the laid-back and sexy, the Hibiscus Lodge in Ocho Rios is a departure and a half.

The rooms are stylishly done-up and ripple daylong with sunshine, yet on a world scale they are nothing special for amenities. Comfort seems the ticket here, not quite pampering.

And even though the Hibiscus Lodge is on the blinding blue water, there is no long beach of white sand to frolick upon. Instead, there's a stone staircase down a 30-foot cliff, leading to a tiny stamp of sand and water turned glassy by a welcome coral reef.

IT'S THE perfect place for snorkling, sharing the underwater world with a rainbow of tropical fish, and for sunbathing on a floating platform that's more reminiscent of Capri or the Riviera than the tourist-crazy Caribbean.

White is the favored color around the Hibiscus Lodge. In its finest moments, it is strikingly set off by the inn's bright flame trees. Trade winds keep them shimmering reddish-orange in the sunlight against the sea.

"I liked it here from the first day," said Doswald, who arrived in Jamaica 28 years ago and hooked up seven years ago with a couple renovating a century-old home into a guest house. "I got married out here, and I have a family out here. I can't leave anymore."

Like some small inns in France, the Hibiscus Lodge at mealtime seems a set of rooms paying homage to a restaurant, rather than vice versa. In addition to well-prepared continental favorites, the chef has created a handful of dishes blending Caribbean spice with European presentation.

Among his best are the pumpkin and pepperpot soups and the Jamaican Plantation Rice, featuring curry from the East Indies, banana and pineapple from the tropics and a host of seafoods from water just down the steps.

Serving up to 280 dinners a night, Doswald's attractive open-air eatery has established itself far beyond the hotel's guests. Popularity, in fact, has inspired renovation.

BEFORE ABOUT a year ago, rain reduced the Almond Tree's dining space to only nine tables. Since then, a stair-strung complex straight out of Swiss Family Robinson has replaced the spartan surroundings.

There are now two separate dining areas — a "formal" section complete with European flambe cart for dinner and a casual, white-splashed balcony for lunch. Both sections can be used for either meal, when the season demands.

For couples awaiting tables, a bar has been installed with wooden seats hanging from the ceiling by ropes.

Summer rates at the Hibiscus Lodge (through Dec. 15) are $38 single or double and $48 triple. For the winter season, they rise to $52 and $72. The inn's mailing address is Box 52, Ocho Rios, Jamaica, W.I. The telephone number is (809) 974-2676.

Nearly 100 Midland County public high school graduates already have applied for a free year at Midland College and officials say they expect more will apply by the August 24 deadline.

The Abell-Hanger Foundation earlier this month announced it will pick up the tab for all of this year's graduates of Midland, Lee and Greenwood High Schools who choose to attend the community college this fall.

The foundation has offered to pay tuition, fees and books up to $325 per semester. The total grant — worth about $600,000 — will be continued into the second semester, depending on the students' academic progress.

Bill Burns, director of financial aid, said as many as 90 students already have accepted the scholarship and plan to register for fall semester classes.

"We're getting real good response," he said. "Some people are just tickled to death."

MC President Dr. Jess Parrish said he expects 450 of the 900 eligible graduates will take advantage of the opportunity.

But Burns said he can't be sure how many will enroll until after the August 24 deadline.

"Knowing these kids, some will wait until the very last minute, but we're geared for it," he said.

With the Abell-Hanger Foundation award, Burns said students may attend either part-time or full-time and may take traditional academic courses or choose vocational or technical training programs.

College officials say they hope the grant will entice those students, who otherwise would not choose to further their education, into trying college for at least one semester.

Students receiving the financial assistance must enroll in at least six hours of credit courses each semester, Burns said.

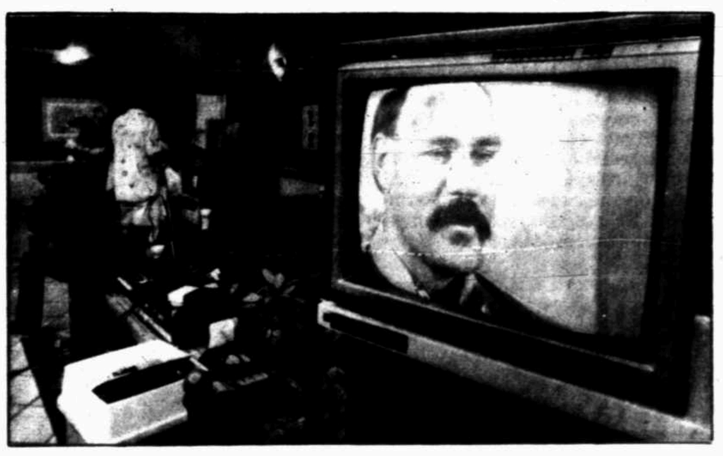

Burns, who will administer the grants, said the 1986 graduates should contact his office either before or during fall semester pre-registration August 26 and 27.

Letters of eligibility were mailed to graduates following the announcement, and additional copies are available in the financial aid office for those who did not receive one, he said.

Burns said the grant may be used to supplement other financial assistance that doesn't completely cover the cost of tuition, fees and books.

Midland College also awards scholarships to Permian Basin students who graduate in the top 5 percent of their high school class.

Midlander John Conder, pictured on screen, was one of about 60 Permian Basin residents auditioning Tuesday for the opportunity to host a Movie Channel Special. ## Dr. DeBakey to visit city, give day-long symposium

From Staff Reports

Physicians and Surgeons Hospital will host reknowned cardiovascular surgeon Dr. Michael DeBakey of Houston in a day-long symposium, October 3, at the Plaza Club in ClayDesta National Bank.

He will be joined by five nationally-known speakers who will discuss various aspects of heart disease and treatment. Among other speakers will be Dr. V.S. Mathur of Houston, Dr. James Warren of Ohio State University, Dr. M.L. Kashyap of the University of California at Irvine and Dr. Monte Malach of Brooklyn, New York.

Topics will include diagnosis of chest pain, changing aspects of acute coronary syndrome, effects of cholesterol, surgical intervention and status of artificial heart and transplant surgery.

Dr. P.V. Patel, a Midland cardiologist and director of the catheterization lab at Physicians and Surgeons Hospital, will join the speakers for a round-table discussion.

Dr. Roger Belizaire, a Midland surgeon who studied under Dr. Debakey, will chair the symposium.

"We've never had anyone of Dr. DeBakey's caliber in town," said Dick Liley, administrator at Physicians and Surgeons Hospital.

"This is a first. We are trying to do something positive for the community."

The symposium is free and open to physicians and medical personnel in West Texas and Southeast New Mexico.

Permian Basin actors get big chance at movies

By HOLLY LONGABERGER

ODESSA — If you happened to be in the Permian Mall in Odessa Tuesday you might have stumbled upon a Civil War scene.

Dressed as Southern belles and confederate gentlemen, aspiring actors and actresses of the Permian Basin had a chance to audition for The Movie Channel's Second Annual National Screen Test.

With a camera crew, monitors, cue cards, and makeup and costume artists running around a small part of the mall looked like a Hollywood studio.

The 60 or so "aspiring stars," acted out a brief Civil War scene from 'Say Dixie, My Darling."

On a tour of eight American cities, The Movie Channel is searching for a person to host one of their film festivals. The winner will be flown to New York City for the role.

The Movie Channel is a 24-hour all-movie cable network.

Midlander Marti Malaspina, dressed in Scarlet O'Hara garb, said she was very nervous when reading her lines.

"I shouldn't have been, but I was."

With no previous acting experience, Ms. Malaspina, a drummer with a local band, said her reason for trying out was just impulsiveness.

"Everytime they've had something like this I was always at the wrong place at the wrong time. And, you never know what might come of it," she said.

Screen test producer, Jeff Gray of The Movie Channel, said that the auditioning has been very successful and they will try to audition as many people as possible. Also anyone, young or old, is eligible to try out.

"We are looking for new talent and we meet a lot of people. Our last year's winner now has an agent and a couple of screen tests," Gray said.

The videotapes of the screen test will be taken to New York where they will be judged.

Gray added that if a person did not make to the screen test, he can write to the Movie Channel, get the papers to fill out and then send in a videotape. The deadline for all videotapes is Dec. 31, 1986. The national winner will be announced at the beginning of the year, he said.

Jack Watkins of Midland, a waiter and aspiring actor, said this could be his big break.

"I'm with the 'Summer Mummers' and I'm involved with the community theater. This is a chance to get somewhere and it's a lot of fun." Watkins, looking much like a confederate officer, added.

Gray said the judges are looking for people who have fun with the script, their timing and camera appearance. "But most of all, we're looking for originality."

He added that the people of the Permian Basin are just as talented as people elsewhere.

Odessa high school student Christy Mitchell said she wanted to be an actress.

"It's a chance to fulfill my dream."

Ector County schools approve budget cuts saving $1.5 million

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County school district board members Tuesday night approved 22 budget reduction recommendations that will save slightly more than $1.5 million in the 1986-87 fiscal year.

Board members also approved utilization of $3.6 million from the district's nearly $13 million operating reserve and a minimal tax rate adjustment.

The wide-ranging cost reduction measures recommended by Superintendent Hugh C. Hayes include: a five percent decrease in funds for staff travel; a 10 percent reduction in custodial overtime; a decrease in arts and humanities program funding; a reduction in participation in KERA-TV consortium costs; elimination of after-school physical education programs; the elimination of two high school librarians and addition of two library clerks (to give each high school library one librarian and two clerks rather than two librarians and one clerk); and a district-wide reduction of an unspecified number of clerical staff.

The board deferred action on Hayes' recommendations concerning salary schedules that call for an average pay increase of about 3.47 percent which would boost regular salary costs by about $2.16 million. Total 1985-86 payroll costs were nearly $63 million.

Board member Vickie Gomez said the pay increase that would actually range from 2.6 to 4.4 percent. "What happened to the 3.0 percent for everybody?" she asked.

Buddy West, who is going through his first budget session as a board member, suggested 1985-86 pay schedules be retained with no increases because of economic conditions.

Jim Spencer, also a new board member who is a former ECISD principal, suggested everyone be given $114 per month, rather than $84, and that various "additives" be eliminated. He suggested the salary schedule item be tabled until Walker could tell the board how much his suggestion would cost.

Walker said he could tell him right now that it would increase salary costs $475,000 more than the proposed schedule.

Board member Jim Nelson asked Walker if he could provide board members with a look at several alternate proposals.

Following lengthy discussion, Board President Mickey Jones asked Walker if he would rework the salary schedules in light of the various suggestions and provide board members with something to study until the board meets in special session July 30, to finalize a salary schedule for the coming fiscal year. Walker said he would.

With board members required to approve a final budget next month, Hayes observed there will be a special state legislative session Aug. 6. Hayes said it's expected legislators will leave funding for education intact, though no one can know for sure. He suggested board members be prepared to possibly rearrange budget priorities.

Superintendant announces major restructuring of staff

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The new superintendent of the Ector County school district Tuesday night announced a major restructuring of the district's administrative staff that will begin with the retirement of a longtime school official Nov. 30.

Hugh C. Hayes told board members Don Williams, assistant superintendent for management snd support since 1981, had submitted his request for retirement. Hayes recommended to the board that Dr. Bill Walker, ECISD business manager, be named to succeed Williams. Board members approved Williams' retirement and the request that Walker fill his position.

Hayes said that Walker, as business manager, has functioned essentially as an assistant superintendent. "The promotion of Dr. Walker," he said, "will provide him less than $1,500 in salary increase, but will provide him some recognition for outstanding service he has provided to the district during the past several years.

"The ultimate result of this realignment," Hayes told the ECISD board, "will mean the district will function with one less top level administrator in 1986-87 than we have the past few years."

He noted that the reorganization of the superintendent's executive cabinet will result in a cost reduction of about $60,000 in the 1986-87 fiscal year because there will be four rather than five assistant superintendents.

The district is now soliciting applications for assistant superintendent for administrative services, the position left vacant by the resignation last month of Dr. Joe Starnes. Starnes left to accept the position of superintendent of the Mansfield School District. Mansfield is a suburb of Fort Worth.

Williams, who joined ECISD in 1979 as director of planning, evaluation and research, is credited with structuring the planning, evaluation and research department upon sound principles that served the district well during the turbulent years of the desegregation court hearings.

Walker became ECISD director of business in 1981 and three years later became the district's chief financial officer. During the past 15 years, Walker has earned a reputation as one of the state's foremost experts in school finance, officials said.

City officials' concern prompts public hearing

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Concerned about their $11 million investment in Stacy Dam, Midland city officials will hand-deliver a resolution tonight to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers at a public hearing in Ballinger.

Possible delays and resulting increased construction costs caused the City Council Tuesday to unanimously pass a resolution in support of the $68 million project.

"We're not tight for the water now, but we're afraid delays will increase construction costs," said Deputy City Manager Fred Poe.

"We're optimistic that it will eventually be built, but we are becoming less optimistic that it will be built on schedule," Poe said.

Construction, scheduled to begin in May 1987, may be delayed because of its possible threat to a proposed endangered species — the Concho water snake.

Poe and Utilities Director John Lowe will travel to the public hearing on the Draft Environmental Impact Statement beginning at 7:30 p.m. today in Ballinger, 139 miles east of Midland.

"We are confident that the snake and the reservoir can both benefit. We think things can be done to protect the snake and not affect the reservoir."

— Joe Pickel

In the draft statement, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service says it will propose that the snake be listed as an endangered species, said Paul Hathorn, with the U.S. Army Engineer District in Fort Worth.

If the snake is listed as an endangered species, the Corps of Engineers would have to deny a permit for the dam, Hathorn said.

The Fish and Wildlife Service has until January 22 to list the snake as an endangered species, he said.

However, the owners of the dam, the Colorado River Municipal Water District, say they are confident that the snake and dam can coexist.

"We are confident that the snake and the reservoir can both benefit. We think things can be done to protect the snake and not affect the reservoir," said Joe Pickel, secretary to the district's board.

Stacy Dam, about 25 miles southeast of Ballinger, is expected to start supplying Midland with water by the early 1990s, through a 150-mile pipeline.

Midland, San Angelo and Abilene are buying the dam's water, with each paying for 16.54 percent of the construction.

A water rate increase of about $2.70 a month was approved by 97 percent of the Midland voters August 10, to pay for the dam construction.

So far the dam is on schedule, with the corps of engineers expected to grant a reservoir permit in the fall, Pickel said.

Bids for the three-year project are expected to go out by March, he said.

"We feel we can come to a sensible solution to this thing," Pickel said.

Houston's economy nets worst crime figures

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's economic woes are contributing to the largest increase in crime in four years with reported major offenses rising 13.7 percent for the first half of this year, police officials say.

"We know, for example, that of the total amount of crimes reported to us, almost 95 percent will have property or money as the motive," Houston Police Chief Lee Brown said after the crime statistics were released Tuesday. "Our city's economy certainly has something to do with it."

Houston's unemployment rate soared to 12.6 percent in June, the worst since the Great Depression in the 1930s, said Donald L. Huddle, professor of economics at Rice University.

Other factors for the overall crime rise included an increased use of cocaine and a changed policy for recording aggravated assaults, which mushroomed 76.2 percent in the period, Brown said.

"Any indication of potential (domestic) assault is now officially documented by field officers and this change has substantially increased the number of assault cases reported in 1986," the police chief said.

He also blamed an increased use of cocaine among young people for more crime in Houston. A national study showed cocaine users need more than $100 per day to support their habit.

Violent crimes of all categories increased 34.3 percent overall, compared with non-violent crime which was up by 11.3 percent, according to police records. Murder, however, was down 7.6 percent from the same six months last year, Brown said.

The city's crime statistics showed robberies were up 21.4 percent from the same period last year, burglaries up 20.8 percent, theft up 5.3 percent and motor vehicle theft up 12.4 percent.

Municipal golfers urged to mind manners as council passes ordinance

From Staff Reports

Golfers at the municipal course will have to start minding their manners if the city has anything to say about it.

The City Council passed an ordinance Tuesday prohibiting "out-of-control" behavior at the course.

Violators found using loud and profane language, throwing clubs, driving carts off the paths and "not following the common courtesy of the game of golf," could face a fine of up to $200, said Parks and Recreation Director George Logan.

"All we're trying to do is let the conduct in the area be upright and honest," Logan said.

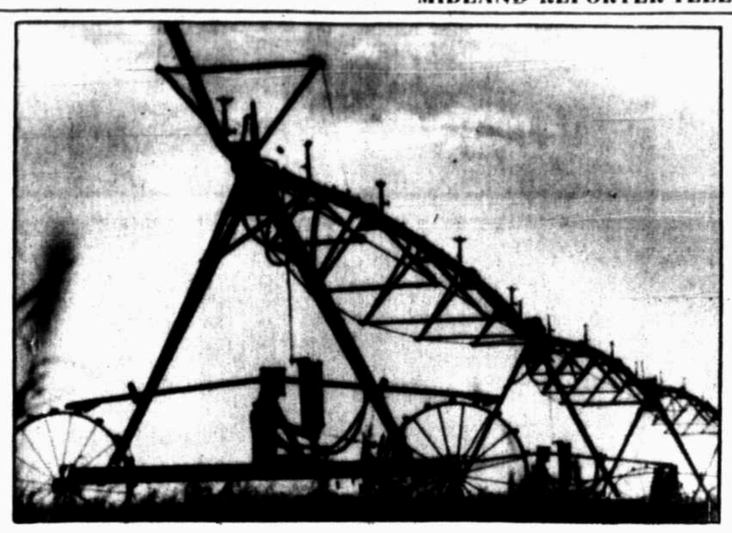

Although he says the ordinance is not needed now, Logan said, "We would like to have it in the event we need it. But we have no problems now."

The ordinance will also give the course marshal or professionals authorization to call the police and arrest players who are disruptive, Logan said.

Two Odessa men arraigned in connection with Sunday shooting

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Two 20-year-old Odessa men were arraigned in Municipal Court this morning on charges of murder in connection with the early Sunday shooting of a 23-year-old Midland man.

According to police spokesman Cpt. John McAhon, the two men were arrested about 2 a.m. today. He said two juveniles suspected of having been involved in the fatal shooting of Blaise A. Nesser, 5101 N. Ave. A, were still being sought late this morning.

Judge J.E. Weatherly this morning set bond at $25,000 each for Rodney Terril Sims, 927 E. Monahans St., and Victor Charles Perkins, 406 E. Odessa St., on charges of murder.

McAhon said one of the juveniles is suspected of firing the shot that killed Nesser.

The shooting occurred about 1:20 a.m. Sunday in the 1100-block of Blackshear Street near the old Blackshear Stadium field house.

McAhon said Nesser and three friends, who had left an Odessa bowling alley and were returning to Midland, met four men in a car at the intersection of East 42nd Street and Dawn Avenue, talked with them briefly on the parking lot of Permian High School, then followed them to the Rondavoo Club, at the intersection of Fitch Avenue and Lubbock Street, in near-southeast Odessa.

The eight then went to the Old Blackshear Stadium area where they parked their vehicles. Police reports indicate the other four men got out of their car, approached the four Midlanders and demanded money, then began to assault them. One of the young men is alleged to have shot Nesser once in the face with a small caliber weapon during the assault.

Nesser was transported to Medical Center Hospital where he was pronounced dead about 8:10 a.m. Sunday.

Senators search for solutions

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — With the peacemaker out campaigning and a special session just two weeks away, the Texas House and Senate Tuesday continued to look for conflicting solutions to the state's budget crisis.

Lawmakers from both chambers complained that Gov. Mark White needs to stay in Austin and help resolve the growing impasse before the special legislative session begins Aug. 6. If he doesn't, they say, the session could be a 30-day flop and White could turn into the big loser.

Facing tough re-election opposition from former Republican Gov. Bill Clements, White has scheduled a series of campaign stops and economic development seminars across the state through Thursday. He has refused to offer specific budget cutting or tax increasing suggestions, saying that is the job of the Legislature.

"He won't be doing any campaigning if we stay here 30 days and nothing happens," said Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches. Blake said the governor has to take charge and offer direction like he did during the 1984 special session on public school reform.

"He's going to have to do it in those 30 days or he's going to go back to practicing law," Blake said.

"The governor is just hoping we can work it all out so he'll be all right when this is all over with," said Rep. Mike Toomey, R-Houston. "I've never seen him show leadership on the budget."

> "The governor is just hoping we can work it all out so he'll be all right when this is all over with. I've never seen him show leadership on the budget."
> — Rep. Mike Toomey

Said Rep. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen: "If he called a special session, he at least ought to provide us with what he thinks ought to be done."

The House Appropriations Committee spent its third day examining possible budget cuts Tuesday after receiving detailed reports on how those reductions would affect state services and state employees. Committee Chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said he had "substantial" votes on the 29-member committee to support a $1.3 billion cut but would not ask the committee to vote on a plan this week.

"We're just going to lay things on the table," he said. "I hope we have as much as $1.7 to $1.8 billion when this things finished in cuts or other methods." He would not outline the "other methods."

Some committee members speculated that Rudd was withholding a vote to place more pressure on White. Toomey said a vote from the committee endorsing the cuts would "just force a confrontation with the Senate."

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and many senators favor a combination of budget cuts and a tax increase to erase the entire $3 billion-plus deficit. Hobby next week has scheduled a six-city tour of speaking engagements to business and civic groups. An aide said Hobby will try to enlist support for a special session tax increase from "the people who would have to pay the bill."

House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, said neither his Republican-dominated committee nor the majority of the House membership will support a tax bill during the special session. Schlueter and most House leaders want to cut enough from the budget to keep the state from bouncing its checks and then deal with the remainder of the deficit, probably with some increased taxes, during next year's regular session.

"I can't believe that the speaker and the governor and the lieutenant governor will not be able to work something out before we start the special session," Schlueter said. "If they haven't worked something out by the time we come in on the sixth, we've got trouble."

Hinojosa said the anti-tax sentiment in the House will decline when members realize the proposed cuts include items such as "meals on wheels" for the elderly and services to blind children.

"You're talking about hurting a lot of people," he said.

Midland students clean up list of honor-qualifying Tech students

Drug conference a success

From Staff Reports

Hundreds of Texas students and adult sponsors set out to make a difference at the Texans War on Drugs first Youth in Action conference held recently at Southwestern University in Georgetown.

The conference was designed to teach young people about drug abuse prevention and how they can get involved in activities in their own schools.

Midland's Prevention Using Student Help sent 11 students and two sponsors. They included Tracy Hardy, Anthony Adkison, Margaret Mogford, Jaclyn Jones, Amy Morris, Tamie Dodson, Elizabeth Woodside, Michael Morris, Russell Van Husen, Steve Solberg and Brandon Hudgeons.

Reports indicate fire deliberately set

From Staff Reports

No injuries were reported following two fires, one early today which reports said was deliberately set, and one late Tuesday that damaged a mobile home.

About 5:30 a.m. today, firefighters responded to a reported fire at a residence at 705 S. Lincoln St. When they arrived, the fire was out but the side of the residence was scorched. The occupant, Carolyn Allen, told police and firefighters that gasoline had been thrown against the house and ignited. The fire marshal's office is investigating.

Three units and eight firefighters responded to a mobile home fire about 11:45 p.m. Tuesday on County Road 1224, just south of Loving Trail. The alarm was turned in by the owner, J.D. Martin. Reports said the fire, which was quickly extinguished, was caused by a faulty water heater. Minor damage was reported.

Police report three area burglaries

From Staff Reports

Three burglaries were reported Wednesday by the Midland Police Department.

F.N. Mae told police seven doors valued at $1,050 were taken from a residence at 1326 E. Pine Ave. Reports said a back window was apparently entered to gain access to the items. Approximately $1,700 damage to the carpet in the residence was also reported.

Police Roundup

Assorted tires and wheels valued at $1,500 were reported stolen from Teledyne Exploration, 1513 W. Montgomery, Tuesday morning. Reports said police found a hole in the east wall of the building when they arrived, which apparently was used to gain entry.

Police are looking for a Hispanic male who allegedly burglarized an automobile while it was parked in the 1900 block of Rankin Hwy. According to reports, a fold knife and an undetermined amount of cash were stolen from the vehicle about 10 p.m. Tuesday. The suspect may have entered the vehicle through a convertible top, reports said.

Texas lawmakers urged Gov. Mark White to include a lottery and pari-mutuel betting proposal on the special session agenda at a press conference in Austin. The eight legislators said their proposal would be a "painless" alternative to raising taxes in order to solve the state's projected $2.3 billion deficit.

Legislators urge White to endorse gambling instead of raising taxes

By JACK KEEVER

AUSTIN (AP) — Eight legislators Tuesday urged Gov. Mark White to put a state lottery and pari-mutuel betting on horses and dogs on the special session agenda as an alternative to raising taxes.

White's press secretary, Ann Arnold, said the governor's proclamation setting out what legislators could consider in the Aug. 6 session had not been prepared.

The governor said earlier he was calling the session to deal with a projected budget deficit of $2.3 billion for the two-year period ending Aug. 31, 1987.

"The lottery itself, if put on the November ballot, could be in operation in three months and could generate several hundred million dollars in this biennium. Pari-mutuel will admittedly take longer, but if put on the November ballot, should begin generating tax dollars within a year," Rep. Lloyd Criss, D-La Marque, told a news conference attended by seven other legislators.

A state lottery would require approval of a state constitutional amendment. Pari-mutuel betting would only require new laws, but Criss said White had wanted a statewide referendum on the issue and that also could be done in November.

"Besides saving state jobs, this program could generate more than 34,000 new jobs in Texas," Criss said.

"The taxes paid through pari-mutuel and the lottery would be painless. People would be playing when they paid the taxes," Criss said.

Hefner says government's porno rules contradict promise to stay out

By SUZANNE GAMBOA

DALLAS (AP) — The federal government's attempt to crack down on pornography contradicts the present administration's promise to reduce the role of government, Christie Hefner, president of Playboy Enterpises Inc. said.

"The Meese commission is not only wrong in its conclusions, but at odds with the mandate given by the voters to President Reagan to get the government out of people's lives," Ms. Hefner said Tuesday. "For what is more intrusive than to govern what people read, believe, see and practice in the privacy of their own homes," she said.

"The censorious effect that this report could have if many of us allow it to take its course, I think is only begun." Ms. Hefner, the daughter of Playboy founder Hugh Hefner, said before a group of Dallas lawyers.

The Attorney General's Commission on Pornography reported a link between sexually explicit material and sex offenses. In its July 11 report, it endorsed steps to crack down on the sale and distribution of such material.

The panel had threatened to publish the names of stores selling materials the report listed as pornographic, and sent letters to companies it had planned to list.

The list was never issued.

Ms. Hefner's comments before the Dallas Young Lawyers came on the same day Playboy announced it would be decreasing guranteed circulation figures for advertisers because of slumping newsstand sales. Ms. Hefner said the commission's report is partly to blame.

Part of the problem with the commission's report, Ms. Hefner said, is it uses the word pornography to refer to all materials it studied.

"Playboy is not pornography," she said.

Ms. Hefner said the commission ignored social scientists who said that gauging the correlation between sexual materials and sex crimes must also take into account poverty, alcoholism and outdoor magazines.

If pornography turns people into sex fiends, then how come we had so much sexual violence before it was available," Ms. Hefner said.

She said Dallas-based Southland Corp., the parent firm of 7-Eleven convenience stores, had the "most responsible" policy of selling adult-oriented magazines. The publications were kept behind the counter and sold only to customers 18 and over.

But Southland's decision to stop selling the magazines in May was a response to pressure from the commission and fundamentalist Christian groups, Ms. Hefner said.

Southland said it pulled the magazines in response to customers' preferences.

Instead of opting for a quick fix, the federal government should support programs that could directly influence the life of a potential sex offender, such as a halfway home for runaways, Ms. Hefner said.

Christie Hefner, president of Playboy Enterprises Inc., addresses a group of Dallas attorneys. Invoking the First Amendment, quoting judicial opinions and reading from recent newspaper editorials, Hefner said the recent report on pornography issued by the commission is out of touch with reality and exceeds the government's role.

STATE IN BRIEF

Legislator wants fishing license bill considered

AUSTIN (AP) — Rep. Frank Collazo, D-Port Arthur, has asked Gov. Mark White to open the special legislative session to a bill that would repeal the requirement for a fishing license for persons under 17 years of age, over 65, blind persons and disabled veterans.

Collazo said as of Sept. 1 such persons will be required to obtain a "free" license from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, a process that will cost the department $250,000.

He said his proposal would eliminate the "free" license, which would save the state money, and would make it clear that those under 17, over 65, blind, and disabled veterans would be exempt from license requirements.

Texas man goes on trial

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — The jury selection process began in Yuma Tuesday for the trial of a Texas man charged in the deaths of his brother and a Yuma police officer.

Edward Neil Smith, 28, of Arlington, faces two counts of first-degree murder and one count of escape in the shooting deaths of Yuma police Officer Gary Maas, 28, and Smith's brother, Donald, 28.

Maas and Donald Smith were killed in an April 9 shootout at a Yuma bus terminal.

Edward Smith escaped following the shooting and was arrested April 24 in Wewoka, Okla.

Smith was returned to Yuma May 2 after waiving extradition and has been held in the Yuma County Jail without bond.

A spokeswoman in the county attorney's office said late this morning that the jury selection process had begun in Yuma County Superior Court.

Teen crashes into school

WACO (AP) — Who holds the distinction for having gone through a Waco elementary school the fastest?

It most likely is a 16-year-old who crashed a stolen station wagon through the front door of Lake Waco Elementary School Monday night, swerved to his right, zoomed down a hallway and halfway out the back door.

The boy — whose name was withheld by authorities — then abandoned the 1972 Datsun wagon and fled.

A couple in a backyard near the elementary school saw the crash and yelled for softball players practicing on the school grounds.

Brad Huser said his co-ed softball team and a nearby men's softball team pursued the youth unsuccessfully.

"We heard a loud noise that sounded like a car wreck," he said. "An older couple hollered for us to stop him. The young boy came running from the school and we and the other team went after him, but we didn't catch him."

The juvenile ran to his home, where he was later detained and turned over to juvenile authorities.

Waco Independent School District officials said it would be several days before they knew the cost of repairs, including demolished front and back doors of the building.

Man pleads guilty to theft

HOUSTON (AP) — An Arlington man was sentenced to two years probation after he pleaded guilty to conspiring to sell a stolen tractor-trailer rig to undercover federal agents.

U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling sentenced Floyd Trainor on Tuesday. The truck theft charges against Trainor stemmed from a federal Camshaft probe. The Arlington man was tring to sell the rig to agents in 1984.

Another man, Jose Gomez Ramirez of Jacinto City, pleaded guilty Tuesday to a separate indictment charging him with conspiring to sell three stolen trucks. He will be sentenced Aug. 26, and could receive up to five years prison and $10,000 in fines.

The two men are among 20 people charged in federal court as a result of the Camshaft probe, a multi-agency investigation aimed at tracking stolen vehicles and equipment.

Project may degrade waste

HOUSTON (AP) — University of Houston and Detox Industies Inc. have agreed to participate on a project to commercially develop a biotechnology process that degrades toxic wastes, officials said.

Through the agreement announced Monday, Detox Industries of Sugar Land and the university will cooperate in developing technologies to degrade toxic materials such as PCBs and DDT, officials said. All rights for the process have been assigned to Detox in return for royalties for both the university and John E. Evans, a professor of biology.

Detox also has established a $1 million endowed chair in microbiology to be held by Evans.

Detox is the only company in the country with an Environmental Protection Agency approval to biologically degrade PCBs. Evans developed a method to biodegrade PCBs and other organic contaminants.

"Biodegradation is here replacing burning and landfills as the disposal technique of choice for toxic waste," Evans said.

The process developed by Evans is conducted on-site, eliminating the problem of transporting toxic wastes and is constantly monitored.

Family's trial postponed

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A federal racketeering trial involving the William F. Fredeman Sr. family of Port Arthur, was postponed until September after a federal judge cancelled a pretrial hearing.

U.S. District Judge Sam Hall had scheduled to begin the trial at the conclusion of an Aug. 11 pretrial hearing. But after he canceled the hearing, defense attorneys argued that the August trial date would not give them adequate time to prepare their clients' cases.

Selection for 12 jurors who will hear the case is scheduled for Sept. 29 in Beaumont.

At a hearing last week in Texarkana, where Hall's main office is located, the judge also issued a gag order on the case.

A federal grand jury in April charged 89-year-old Fredeman Sr. with conspiracy to steal $40 million of tow boat fuel from customers of Port Arthur Towing Co., Channel Fueling Service and Fredeman Shipyards.

Hall dismissed the charges against Fredeman Sr. on July 14 after two Beaumont doctors found him incompetent to stand trial.

Grand jurors also charged Fredeman's sons, William F. Fredeman Jr., 49, and Henry F. Fredeman II, 46, both of Groves, his son-in-law, James Crawford, 52, of Lake Charles, La., and 17 of their employees.

Strategic Defense Initiative: the peace shield?

On March 23, 1983, President Reagan called upon the leaders of American science and technology to devise a defense against nuclear attack which would render nuclear weapons "impotent and obsolete." The plan, to date, is for a four-layer defense against inter-continental ballistic missiles (ICBMs) fired from the Soviet Union. In the four stages of the missiles' flight, the U.S. would track and attack incoming ICBM's -- using a wide variety of weapons.

The current proposed weapons include (A) a space-based chemical laser guided by an early warning surveillance satellite; (B) A 'pop-up' X-ray laser on a missile launched from a submarine; (C) A ground-based beam weapon reflected from a space-based relay mirror; (D) A space-based neutral particle beam battle station controlled by a sensor satellite; (E) Anti-ballistic missiles (ABMs) similar to those developed in the '60s; and (F) A 'smart rock' -- a small homing device launched on an air-to-space rocket from a jet.

In a multi-tiered defense, high levels of effectiveness are theoretically possible, even if each successive defense line is only partially successful. If, for example, each tier of a four-tier system is 75 percent effective, the first line of defense will still allow 25 percent of the targets to leak through, the second about six percent; the third less than two percent; and after the fourth, just four warheads out of 1,000 launched will hit their targets.

Massive costs for SDI research

Between 1984 and 1993, the projected research costs for the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) could total as much as $70 billion. By 1993 or 1994, SDI officals claim that the U.S. will be in a position to decide which technologies are candidates for further development and eventual deployment. The first $70 billion will be only an initial investment, with the total cost of actual deployment unknown. After such an enormous down-payment, SDI could be be difficult to halt, even if future leaders deem it unwise to continue.

U.S. & Soviet nuclear balance

Americans seem evenly divided between approving (45 percent) and disapproving (47 percent) of President Reagan's decision to abandon the SALT II treaty. More than half of those polled feel that the U.S. and U.S.S.R. are about equal in nuclear strength. About 20 percent feel the U.S. is stronger, while another 20 percent feel that the U.S.S.R. has the edge.

Comparing SDI to other high-cost programs

By 1993, projected costs for research on the Strategic Defense Intiative are around $70 billion. For comparison, the entire B-1B bomber program, including development and purchase of 100 aircraft, will cost $28 billion. The MX missile will cost some $25 billion. Among all planned U.S. weapons, at present only the price of the Trident missile submarine program approaches even the research cost of SDI. The Trident program calls for $67 billion to buy 17 submarines, each equipped with 24 nuclear-armed missiles.
