Battle of the bees

Each day in the Rio Grande Valley, television and radio ads warn that they are coming. But "don't panic," the ads say. At the same time along the U.S.-Mexican border, government workers in pickups and on horseback check hundreds of traps to see if they've captured any. It's no longer a question of whether the ill-tempered insects known as "killer bees" will show up in Texas this year. It's only a question of when.

Nintendo settles

WASHINGTON — Nintendo bullied some of the nation's biggest retailers to keep them from cutting the price of its home video system, federal and state officials charged Wednesday. Nintendo of America, a subsidiary of a Japanese electronics giant, denied the allegations of price-fixing. However, the company agreed to give its customers $5 coupons to "get the matter behind us." Under an agreement with the Federal Trade Commission, Nintendo no longer will tell stores they can't charge less than $99.99 for its home video game.

Kennedy case

PALM BEACH, Fla. — The alleged victim of a rape at the Kennedy compound took an urn and photo from the mansion to prove she had been there, says a friend who picked her up at the estate. Anne Mercer said she went to the Kennedy estate when her 29-year-old friend called her at 4:30 a.m. on March 30 and pleaded to be picked up. When Ms. Mercer and another friend arrived, the woman was "was very distraught, very upset and was screaming rape," Joe Mincberg, an attorney representing Ms. Mercer said Wednesday.

Rallies defy Gorbachev

200,000 strike; wave of unrest intensifies

■ Soviet president no longer has credibility to enact a serious reform program, Soviet economists say.

From Reporter-Telegram wire reports

MOSCOW — An estimated 200,000 workers defied Mikhail S. Gorbachev's moratorium on work stoppages and poured out of factories to strike Wednesday in Minsk. Siberian miners intensified their demans, all on the day after President Mikhail S. Gorbachev proposed a yearlong moraturium on strikes and protests.

The republic's leaders granted strikers a key demand and let them read an unprecedented anti-Communist statement during the republic's nightly television news program.

"The Communist Party of the Soviet Union is guilty of the collapse of the economy, lies around Chernobyl, and annihilation of the peoples and their languages," strike committee member Georgi Mukhin said in the remarkable broadcast.

The wave of unrest seemed to be a response to a package of "anti-crisis measures" introduced by the Soviet president on Tuesday at a meeting of leaders of Soviet republics. Gorbachev warned that the nation must act immediately to avoid economic collapse.

The economic details of the plan have not been made public, and there was no immediate reaction from opposition leaders in the Russian federated republic or elsewhere.

Strike leaders across the country made few references to Gorbachev's statements or proposed program, underscoring the sense that the central government is losing its authority in the face of an inexorable wave of

Court awards Gulf Oil Corp. pensioners $180 million

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge on Wednesday ordered Chevron USA Corp. to pay 40,000 former Gulf Oil Corp. employees and their families about $180 million in back pension benefits.

The former Gulf employees claimed Chevron cheated them of pension funds when it acquired the Pittsburgh-based oil company in 1984.

The award came in addition to a $25 million settlement reached in January by Chevron and some Gulf employees who were fired between Jan. 1, 1984 and June 30, 1986.

"Altogether, we're talking about somewhere approaching $200 million," said Lee Godfrey, lead attorney for the plaintiffs.

"I'm sort of on Cloud Nine about it," he said. "I'm quite pleased. I think the judge did a competent job in a very complicated case. He didn't give us all the relief we sought, but we were pleased with the result."

Candidates air views on bonds, taxes, economy

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

City Council, school board and hospital district candidates talked taxes, bonds and economic development Wednesday at a Midland County Republican Women's Club luncheon.

Fifteen candidates, speaking in election-ballot order, took the lectern to highlight issues and their respective attributes before about 70 people.

Incumbent J.D. Faircloth, one of three at-large Midland City Council candidates, said he was committed to not raising taxes this year.

"We're probably facing the most serious tax problem we've faced in a number of years," Faircloth said. "We must live within our budget, and I'm going to work hard to keep the effective tax rate the way it is."

Panel hammers out school-finance deal

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — In a last-gasp effort, a Senate-House conference committee hammered out an agreement on a school-finance bill Wednesday.

State leaders said the bill goes further than any previous effort in meeting objections of House members who represent property-wealthy school districts, and has a good chance of approval.

House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, predicted it would pass with from 76 to 100 votes in favor. It would take 76 votes to provide a majority in the 150-member House.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, author of school-finance legislation on the Senate side, said he could not predict the House vote, but warned of an impending disaster if the bill failed and the courts take control of school financing.

The House voted down a previous conference-committee bill March 27, despite a state Supreme Court deadline of April 1 for enacting a new plan that would not discriminate against property-poor districts.

State District Judge Scott McCowan then put into force an injunction against the state's providing any more funds for schools. Judge McCowan also ordered a Texas Education Commission official to begin preparation of a court plan that most likely would involve consolidation of many school districts and involve the redistribution of available school money.

The Senate and House will vote on the new bill as soon as it is ready, which could be as early as this afternoon. Lawmakers were working on the bill Wednesday afternoon, and legislative rules require a 24-hour wait after a bill is printed before a vote can be taken.

Gov. Ann Richards said she would sign the bill immediately, if it is approved.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock called the bill "just about the last opportunity that we have to resolve the No. 1 issue that exist-

Nancy bio generates bookstore sellouts

By Allen E. Howland
Assistant City Editor

As the Kitty Kelley publicity mills churn full force on the television networks, local booksellers are reaping at least a share of the profits.

"I've been surprised by the response," said Patteanne D-Beverley, owner of Pages & Prints Bookstore in Plaza Center. Ms. Beverley said that her initial order of six copies of Ms. Kelley's "Nancy Reagan: An Unauthorized Biography," was more than usual for an unauthorized bio, but all copies were gone by Tuesday afternoon.

The story was the same at Hastings Books, Music & Video, where the store's initial shipment of 12 copies were gone by the end of the second day of sales — most within the first two hours Monday morning, according to assistant store manager Teresa Ibarra.

■ Related story/6A

It will be at least a week before the store receives new shipments of the 603-page volume that reviewers have called "thoroughly unsympathetic" and "peppered with questionable accusations, innuendoes ... and hidden disclaimers."

Hastings' warehouse and all its distributors are sold out, said book-manager trainee Mark Teel. Requests for the book are flood-

U.S. warns Iraq to stop military action against Kurds

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The United States has warned Iraq not to engage in "any military activities" in areas of the country where Kurdish refugees are fleeing from President Saddam Hussein's forces, administration officials said Wednesday.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said that so far, Iraq has complied with the warning, which was issued over the weekend.

Implicit in the warning is the threat that the United States will destroy any Iraqi aircraft or ground forces operating there.

Fitzwater said the warning was issued to Iraqi officials last weekend at their embassy in Washington and at the United Nations. They were told "not to interfere with humanitarian relief efforts under way in Iraq," he said.

"We informed Iraq that the United States, the United Nations and other coalition officials would be operating in these areas to distribute humanitarian assistance to the Kurdish population," Fitzwater said. "We expect these officials to be allowed to operate safely and without military threat from Iraq."

Fitzwater declined to specify the geographic areas that are off limits to the Iraqis. However, a State Department official with knowledge of the warning said the Iraqis were told not to engage in military activities above the 36th parallel.

This would include the northern Iraqi cities of Mosul, Erbil and Dohok — population centers that were home to several hundred thousand Kurds before the war ended. Since that time, Kurdish rebels briefly seized control of many northern cities from Iraqi control but were eventually evicted as Saddam's forces fought back. The Kurds living throughout the area, fearing reprisals, then fled into surrounding mountains and along the Iraqi borders with Turkey and Iran.

U.S. officials have said as many as 2 million Kurds may be on the move in the region.

Television cameras and radio recording devices normally must be turned off during Fitzwater's daily press briefings. But on Wednesday the White House permitted them to be turned on while Fitzwater talked about U.S. efforts to aid the Kurdish refugees, thousands of whom have reportedly died or are near death from the cold and diarrhea after having trekked for days trying to avoid Iraqi reprisals.

The administration has come under attack by some columnists and Democratic members of Congress who charge President Bush was slow to react to the plight of the Kurds. Fitzwater's public appearance Wednesday seemed designed to counter those charges.

He said the United States, Britain and France have already airdropped 145 tons of blankets, tents, sleeping bags and clothing to the Kurds. "We also have identified food stocks sufficient to feed 300,000 people for 30 days," he said.

In recent days, he continued, 30 countries have pledged more than $250 million for the relief effort. This include $11 million from the United States and $180 million pledged by the 12-nation European Community.

Fitzwater said the White House will seek a special appropriation from Congress to cover the cost of aiding the Kurds.

'Official' cease-fire bell ready

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Officers from the five permanent Security Council nations will serve together for the first time in the new 1,440-member U.N. force that will monitor the Iraq-Kuwait border, officials said Wednesday.

Twenty-seven other nations will join the United States, Britain, France, China and Soviet Union in the patrolling force, whose advanced guard, led by an Austrian commander, was to arrive in Kuwait City on Friday.

An official cease-fire in the Gulf War will take effect Thursday at 10 a.m. EDT, diplomats said, as long as council members have no last-minute objection.

Members of the council received copies of the Iraqi Parliament's decision on Saturday accepting the Security Council's conditions for a permanent cease-fire.

The two-line Iraqi statement simply said that the body accepts Security Council Resolution 687, passed April 3, which requires Iraq to pay for war damages and destroy its weapons of mass destruction.

The council had been prepared to declare the cease-fire on Tuesday, but at the last minute decided it needed to see whether the Iraqi Parliament had expressed any reservations or conditions.

When the cease-fire becomes official, the Security Council president, Belgian Ambassador Paul Noterdaeme, will send a letter to Iraqi Ambassador Abdul Amir al-Anbari that informs him of the condition.

Austrian Maj. Gen. Gunther G. Greindl, who commanded the U.N. peacekeeping force in Cyprus from 1981 to 1988, was official confirmed Wednesday as leader of the U.N. Iraq-Kuwait Observation Mission, called UNIKOM.

Greindl and the other advance members of the UNIKOM team arrive in Kuwait City on Friday, but the main units of peacekeeping infantrymen, military observers and combat engineers are not expected for another 10 days to two weeks.

Headquarters for the force will probably be established at Um Qasr, an Iraqi town in the demilitarized zone.

Kuwait skies stay smokey

By Matthew L. Wald
N.Y. Times News Service

KUWAIT CITY, Kuwait — The weather forecast, as carried Wednesday by the Armed Forces Desert Network: smoky with a chance of thundershowers.

This time the forecast was right, although predicting the smoke part was not much of a challenge. It travels on the breeze, and with 500 burning oil wells sending off tall columns of smoke across the flat horizon, you don't need a weatherman to know which way the wind blows.

The smoke really is the weather here, turning this city the color of a Cape Cod fog in November, or, if the wind is right, back into the dazzling clearness of a desert spring.

With each turn comes a change in the feeling in a million throats, and 2 million eyes.

For a few people, the smoke is life-threatening. Doctors are advising patients with asthma to leave the country, because the smoke is setting off their attacks, and increasing the likelihood that a trip to a hospital emergency room will mean a stay.

But that is no escape, because the air in the hospital is really no better, said Dr. Shafika al-Awadi of the Amiri Hospital. It simply means "we put them in a place where they can't run around, going inside and outside," she said.

It is hard to judge how many people face an acute risk. There are fewer people living here than there were before the war, and thus fewer asthmatics as well.

Refugees trapped in mountains fear they will not survive

By Clyde Haberman
N.Y. Times News Service

ISIKVEREN, Turkey — Squatting in swamp-like mud high up in the mountains, stung by rain and fierce nighttime cold, lacking proper shelter, medicine and anything near enough to eat, the refugee Kurds from Iraq fear they are not going to make it.

A woman woke up Wednesday morning on a mountain ridge above this meager village and discovered that six young children had died during the night in just the scattering of tents around her.

She watched the families bury their tiny bodies in a patch of ground that has become a distressingly expanding cemetery. Then, through their first hours of forever, she wept.

"That is how they will eradicate us, piece by piece," said Ahmad Ali, an engineer from the northern Iraqi city of Dohuk. "Yesterday, maybe it was six dead, the day before three, tomorrow five."

"It grows," he said. "Maybe after a week or 10 days, we will all be dead."

Ten days have passed since the Kurdish exodus from Iraq began reaching Biblical dimensions. Yet rescue operations, at least in this stretch of mountainous border where 100,000 or more Kurds have sought sanctuary, have yet to be translated into anything more concrete than a chaos of promises and intentions.

There is a Turkish relief effort, to be sure, bolstered by overseas contributions and aimed at hundreds of thousands of refugees massed at several entry points along the 206-mile frontier between Turkey and Iraq.

American, British and French cargo planes have augmented that aid for the last four days by dropping bundles of emergency supplies to Kurds on both sides of the border.

But at this remote outpost, up steep paths of thick mud inaccessible to most trucks, it is hard to see a pattern to the haphazard distribution of meager food and water supplies. And any internal organization by the Kurds seems nonexistent.

"The snow is our water," a woman said. She and other refugees scoop up the snow that streaks the mountain's upper reaches, and boil it or simply let it melt.

As for food, sometimes there is bread or potatoes, but far more often not. The more provident among the Iraqis hauled flour with them to make a doughy bread, but those supplies are disappearing.

Before long, the snow will also be gone. While that is good in one sense because it means that days will not be so cold, it also threatens to eradicate the principal water source unless alternatives are provided soon.

The on-scene chief of the Turkish Red Crescent Society, working at the base of the main mountain road, said he had yet to visit the top, three or four miles up. He also did not know, he said, how many physicians were there, if any. The answer to that was easy: None.

Had he gone up, the chief would have seen that most of the Kurds have landed in a crazy-quilt fashion, almost as though a giant unseen hand had gathered them up and scattered them like pellets, some winding up by chance here, others there.

Many sleep in tents they brought with them or, if they were lucky enough, that they received from relatives living in nearby towns and villages in this predominantly Kurdish region of Turkey. Others huddle under wet blankets or sheets of plastic stretched across low-hanging tree branches.

Hollow-eyed women peer out from the tents, some with hacking coughs brought on by sleeping outdoors in subfreezing temperatures. Mud-crusted children look hungry and frightened — that curdling fear a child feels upon realizing that the parents are just as scared.

Some Kurds accuse Turkey of deliberately stalling in getting a workable relief system under way. It is because they are Kurds, they insist, and because the Turkish authorities have often dealt repressively with their own Kurdish population over the decades. In addition, local Kurds say that soldiers have blocked their efforts to bring in food and clothing on their own for their refugee brethren.

While some of those accusations may be products of frustration and panic, there is no question that basic structures like hospital tents are just now being set up.

And the soldiers are indeed rough, often screaming at the refugees in a language they do not understand and firing warning shots in the air to keep the Kurds from inching inland. Rifle fire reverberated across the mountain tops again and again on Wednesday.

But no matter how desperate their straits are here, the refugees insist they will not go back to their homes while President Saddam Hussein is in power. Death awaits them back in Iraq, they say.

Look for winds, clouds, 80s

Today will be partly cloudy and windy with a high in the mid-80s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland. Winds will be out of the southwest at 20 to 30 mph.

Tonight will be partly cloudy with a low between 50 and 55.

Friday is expected to be sunny and windy with a high between 75 and 80.

After an overnight low of 55, Wednesday's high was 79, compared with the record high for that date of 95 in 1948. The record low for today's date was 30 set in 1988.

STATE

High pressure kept most of Texas dry on Wednesday, but a storm system from the Rockies was bringing the threat of rain.

Skies were partly cloudy across North Texas and sunny across Norteast and South Texas.

Clouds and some strong thunderstorms prevailed along the Gulf Coast. Pea-sized hail was reported with a morning thunderstorm near Bay City. Three-quarter inch hail fell at Houston's Hobby Airport and golf ball-sized hail was reported in Chambers County.

Temperatures were seasonal with highs in the 70s and 80s. Readings ranged at 3 p.m. from 69 degrees at Hobby to 87 degrees at Harlingen and McAllen.

Winds were generally from the southeast at 5 to 15 mph and blustery in West Texas in advance of the frontal system. Winds were gusting up to 55 mph in Guadalupe Pass in Southwest Texas. South Texas winds were from the east and northeast at speeds of 10 to 15 mph.

Today was expected to be mostly cloudy with a chance for thunderstorms, some severe, as the front moved across the state. Highs in the 60s to 80s.

NATION

Rain dampened the Gulf and Atlantic coasts Wednesday, northern Michigan coped with a heavy snowfall and snow and wind buffeted parts of the West.

Showers and thunderstorms developed along a cold front crossing the Atlantic Coast region and the central Gulf Coast region. The storms were much tamer than those that produced severe weather in the East on Tuesday.

Rain also fell in northern and central Florida and coastal Texas. Light rain and drizzle prevailed from the middle Atlantic Coast to the northern Atlantic Coast states.

A deep low pressure system brought heavy snow to parts of Michigan overnight Tuesday. In eastern Upper Michigan, 10 inches fell around Newberry and up to a half a foot of snow was reported at the Mackinac Bridge. Light snow, strong winds and temperatures near freezing prevailed across Michigan.

A strong Pacific cold front crossing the northern high Plains, central Rockies and the southern plateau region brought snow to parts of Idaho, Utah and Wyoming. Seven inches had fallen at Solitude, Utah, by midmorning.

An upper level weather system behind the cold front was bringing the prospect of more snow to parts of the north-central United States.

Strong and gusty winds alo prevailed behind the Pacific cold front. Winds in Southern California gusted to 57 mph near Barstow early Wednesday.

Dry weather prevailed across the rest of the nation. Skies were sunny in California, Arizona, New Mexico, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin and northern Illinois. Sunny skies also prevailed from Oklahoma and northern Texas to Mississippi, northern Alabama and Tennessee.

discontent.

Soviet economists and Western diplomats have suggested that Gorbachev's major challenge at this critical juncture is less economic than political. Gorbachev no longer has the credibility to enact any serious reform program, they say, unless he can win the support of his political opponents, first of all Boris N. Yeltsin, the popular leader of the Russian republic.

Yeltsin, who has publicly called on Gorbachev to resign, was reported to be taking a brief vacation after a strenuous meeting of the Russian republic's Parliament.

Reports from Minsk, the capital of the Byelorussian republic, said the mass meeting unfolded peacefully as scores of speakers on Lenin Square assailed the Kremlin, specifically its recent decision to raise prices on food and many consumer goods.

Organizers said 64 major enterprises, including giant automobile, tractor and electronics works, were shut down for much of the day, though there was no indication that the strike would continue.

The demonstration developed from a spontaneous rally last Thursday, just after the price increases went into effect. Until then Minsk had been among the last relatively quiet Soviet urban centers.

Commentators pointed out that supplies there had been relatively stable, leaving the public unprepared for the sudden doubling and trebling of prices on basic foods and commodities.

Even officials of the republic's government, which has long been regarded as fairly orthodox, seemed angered by Moscow's action.

"There is a drop that will cause any cup to overflow," Stanislav S. Shushkevich, vice president of the Byelorussian Parliament, said in an interview with Soviet television at the rally. "It took all our efforts to keep Minsk under control under the old prices.

"Unlike Moscow or other capitals we maintained a supply of meat, flour and other essentials," he said. "These prices were an explosion."

In Georgia, where the nationalist government proclaimed independence on Tuesday, President Zviad Gamsakhurdia ordered a wave of strikes against the Soviet government on Wednesday to demand the ouster of Soviet troops from the strife-torn province of South Ossetia.

The province has been wracked by violence between the Georgians, whose Parliament officially dissolved the province last December.

DEAL: Parker warns of disaster if bill fails to pass ed last year, a year ago today, and the opening day of this session."

The compromise legislative, like the plan the House rejected, would cost the state between $1.2 billion and $1.3 billion in additional spending. The Legislature would have to approve some form of new taxes to come up with that amount.

The bill also would require local districts to increase property taxes by an estimated $400 million statewide during the next two years. Most of that would come from property-wealthy districts that have been paying rates much lower than the state average for many years.

Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice, chairwoman of the House Public Education Committee and sponsor of the legislation in the House, said about 700 of the state's 1,052 school districts would be able to reduce taxes and still receive the same amount of income they currently get.

The bill would create taxing regions, primarily along county lines but pairing some of the state's 254 counties to form 188 taxing districts.

It requires a minimum tax of 72 cents next year, increasing 10 cents a year to $1 in the 1994-95 school year.

The state guarantees each district $2,200 per student, increasing $200 a year to $2,800 in 1995, as a basic program.

Districts can raise local taxes above $1 to $1.45 for their own local enrichment, and the state will guarantee poor districts the same amount. However, the bill contains a capping measure that would require schools to reduce their enrichment taxes any time 2 percent of the school children in the state begin to receive 10 percent more than the total state and local revenues that would be generated at a tax rate of $1.25.

Districts also could increase taxes from the $1.45 level to a maximum $1.50, but the state would not provide other districts any money to match that increase.

Lt. Gov. Bullock and Sen. Parker also added several provisions to the bill.

AWARD: Judge orders funds to be distributed

(From 1A)

The 40,000 former Gulf employees, retirees and Chevron employees who previously worked for Gulf and their family members had asked that $600 million be restored to the Gulf pensioners plan.

U.S. District Judge Simeon Lake's 143-page opinion issued Wednesday afternoon followed a five-week trial last fall.

Chevron attorney Robert J. Malinak referred calls to Chevron spokesman Mike Libby in San Francisco. A telephone call from The Associated Press was not immediately returned.

The plaintiffs argued that Chevron unfairly lumped surplus money from the Gulf employees' pension plan into a merged fund with the Chevron pension plan in 1986. As the new company, Chevron paid out less in pension benefits than Gulf had done as an independent company.

Gulf workers who were laid off or given early retirement during the merger lost their vestment in the pension fund. In his order, Lake restored their participation in the pension plan.

Lake ordered the funds to be distributed to plaintiffs over a six-month period. Godfrey said he would be working with the court to determine the amounts of each award.

"I think a number of issues decided by Judge Lake will be quite important in connection with the mergers of one company to another and with the downsizing of a company," Godfrey said. "I think it sends a strong message to trustees or managers of large corporations' pension plans that they are going to be held responsible for the rights of their employees."

Chevron and Gulf agreed to merge in May 1984, and the deal was completed a year later. In 1986, Chevron merged the two companies' pension plans, prompting the Gulf workers' lawsuit.

"The court found that there has been a partial termination of the (Gulf) plan" because of the merger, Godfrey said.

BOOK: Shoppers talk about author's appearances

ing in at about "one every half-hour," he said.

At Midland Park Mall, both B. Dalton and Waldenbooks had the book in stock Wednesday afternoon, each carrying a typical "bestseller" markdown of 25 percent from the $24.95 list price.

Waldenbooks manager Sharron Massey said that her store's initial shipment had sold out by Tuesday night, and that sales of the second shipment that came in Wednesday morning were brisk.

Once this supply is gone, she said, there could be a gap before the next order is filled, as distributor stocks dry up.

Since she put the first 30 copies on B. Dalton's shelf Monday morning, senior sales clerk Joni Trice has seen more than two-thirds of the copies fly off the stacks.

"It's fun to have a book generate this kind of interest and get people talking," she said.

Buyers have been "kind of embarrassed and apologetic about wanting the book, but they can't wait to get it," Ms. Trice said.

Buying the book doesn't imply an acceptance of all of Ms. Kelley's accusations against the former first lady, Ms. Beverley said. "Curiousity has triggered interest in the book, but I'm not sure how long it will last," after the initial publicity push dies down.

Ms. Massey said that customers' sentiments have been divided, with some saying it can't all be true — taking everything with a grain of salt — while others believe every word of it."

Shoppers were talking Wednesday about the author's morning appearances on NBC's "Today" show, CNN's "Sonya Live" and an hour-long interview on the syndicated "Sally Jessy Raphael Show," Ms. Massey said.

The biography is out of sales blocks faster than last year's controversial "Friday Night Lights," examining Permian High School football, which Ms. Massey called "a phenomenal seller for us."

Ms. Trice said that Ms. Kelley's turn is coming — booksellers already are talking about "Poison Pen," an unauthorized biography of the author herself. "It's payback time, I guess," Ms. Trice said.

The Hastings managers said they weren't anticipating such rapid response to the book, because the initial order of 12 was less than for a typical hot topic by a known author.

Ms. Beverley echoed that surprise, saying she didn't sell six copies total of Ms. Kelley's unauthorized biography of Frank Sinatra. "There just wasn't nearly this interest in that book, which was just as titillating."

VIEWS: Fifteen candidates talk election issues

(From 1A)

Economic development was a topic discussed by the council candidates, and Faircloth was no exception.

"The City Council has worked hard the past two years," Faircloth said. "We're working very hard to locate and relocate businesses to Midland."

Fellow at-large candidate Hugh White III accused the council of not upholding their past tax promises.

White said the council, if it approved another tax increase, would "do it over my vote and not because of mine."

Economic development, he said, means going for big business rather than concentrating on small enterprises.

"We can't do it with small mom-and-pop grocery stores and things," White said.

Incumbent at-large candidate John Castro highlighted the council's accomplishments over the past two years, including drainage projects and economic development.

Castro also credited the council with giving the Midland Police Department a new headquarters and playing a large role in bringing the Confederate Air Force to Midland.

Upcoming projects Castro said he would like to continue overseeing are a new animal shelter, a financially successful municipal golf course and additional park construction.

District 1 council hopeful Steve Scott also spoke of economic development as a high priority, with much of its success resting on the shoulders of an improved Midland International Airport.

"We have a vested interest in Midland, its economic future, its growth and its vitality," Scott said. "We definitely need to expand and supplement our oil-based economy."

Scott also pledged to put a cap on taxes, saying "it's going to take some real hard work" to do so. But it can be done, he said.

The candidate also said he only would serve one two-year term.

His District 1 opponent, James F. Devenport, vowed to bring strong leadership to the council and said economic development also is among his goals.

"I believe economic development is the key to enduring success," Devenport said.

He said Midland International Airport's control tower should be on 24-hour status instead of being open 18 hours daily.

Parks, street improvements and drainage also are on his campaign list, Devenport said.

District 2 candidate Jose Alfredo "Beau" Zertuche said he would work to bring new business to Midland's east side.

"I think I can contribute to the community," Zertuche said. "I believe I have come to know the needs of the city."

He said many eastside problems, such as run-down streets, have been alleviated in the past two years and lauded the council for its accomplishments.

"Midland, I believe, is an ideal place," Zertuche said. "I feel we've done a good job in creating a suitable climate for business."

District 2 opponent the Rev. Michael R. De Vaughn also said economic development and 24-hour control tower status are two important issues facing the city.

"I believe Midland is a good place to live," De Vaughn said. "I will work to continue economic development. I would work to make the city a first-class city and a world-class city and continue to make it a better place to live."

School overcrowding and an upcoming bond issue were the primary matters covered by Midland Independent School District trustee candidates.

Hightower said he would work to improve state standardized test scores, enhance teacher benefits and focus on looking in house for promotions.

"I believe we have a good school system in Midland, but it could be better," Hightower said.

All three District 6 candidates — Jerry A. Weant, Gary Willis and Lex K. Crawford — spoke to the crowd.

Weant said he would ask the community and school administration to evaluate the MISD cluster system.

"We're going to have to do some changing of the boundaries," Weant said, adding that cluster system alternatives may have to be studied.

He also said trustees need to work on improving communication between the board, teachers, administration and public.

Willis said his experience as a businessman and educator would come in handy on the board.

He said that several local organizations already had endorsed his candidacy.

Crawford said he is prepared to squeeze the most use out of each dollar.

"Being from a one-paycheck family I can feel the pinch of the dollar going a different way than what I had expected it to go," he said.

The District 6 candidate questioned why MISD waited so long to study the district's overcrowded conditions in elementary and junior high schools.

District 5 incumbent George G. Staley is running unopposed and did not attend Wednesday's luncheon.

District 5 hopeful David Mandell proposed an audit of all Midland Memorial Hospital departments in search of possible cuts.

"I do not feel our tax dollars have been spent in the most efficient manner," Mandell said. "We need direction that will fairly balance the needs of the hospital with the needs of the people."

Opponent Jean Pittman said she would work to maintain quality care for the county's indigent patients.

"I realize how important it is for our local hospital to have quality health care," Ms. Pittman said. "We don't always have a choice of going elsewhere."

Mike Roadcup, also a District 5 candidate, accused the hospital district of needlessly raising taxes at a time when the economy is down but the hospital is prospering.

"The hospital is making a profit, folks, and it's making a pretty good profit," Roadcup said. "At a time when the economy is down, you don't look for a tax increase. I think it's obvious that we need to discount what we charge those indigents."

Incumbent District 1 candidate Margaret C. Williams, who is running unopposed, also spoke at luncheon. District 6 candidate Dr. Stephen L. Wiesenfeld and District 2 candidate Sylvester Ferguson, both of whom are running unopposed, were not present.

Nintendo settles complaints of price-fixing with $5 coupons

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nintendo bullied some of the nation's biggest retailers to keep them from cutting the price of its home video system, federal and state officials charged Wednesday.

Nintendo of America, a subsidiary of a Japanese electronics giant, denied the allegations of price-fixing. However, the company agreed to give its customers $5 coupons to "get the matter behind us."

Under an agreement with the Federal Trade Commission, Nintendo no longer will tell stores they can't charge less than $99.95 for its home video game console.

In a separate accord with the states of New York, Maryland and Virginia, the company will spread up to $25 million in coupons among Nintendo game owners in all 50 states. The coupons should arrive just in time to buy Nintendo game cartridges for Christmas.

Nintendo, based in the Seattle suburb of Redmond, Wash., agreed to redeem a minimum of $5 million in certificates. In addition, it will pay $1.75 million to the states of New York and Maryland for costs of administering the settlement and $3 million for use by the states to enforce antitrust laws.

The coupon offer, as opposed to cash refunds, "was suggested by the states and we thought it was a very reasonable and practical way of resolving a dispute," Howard Lincoln, a Nintendo senior vice president, said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

"If we resorted to giving direct refunds ... there would be millions of checks sent out for minuscule refunds," New York Attorney General Robert Abrams said during a news conference to announce the settlement.

Nintendo owners who purchased their systems between June 1, 1988 and Dec. 1, 1990, will automatically receive the $5 coupon if they returned the warranty registration card. Those who did not return the card may receive a coupon by calling 1-800-255-3700 and supplying the game's serial number.

Bush links Brady Bill, crime package

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Bush may drop his longstanding opposition to a nationwide seven-day waiting period for handgun purchases if Congress also passes the administration's anti-crime proposals, Attorney General Dick Thornburgh said in a letter made public Wednesday.

But Bush may veto the handgun bill if his proposals, which include an expanded federal death penalty and stiffer penalties for gun-related crimes, are shelved or passed by Congress in "a watered down version," Thornburgh said.

The letter, dated Tuesday, was shown Wednesday to the House Judiciary subcommittee, which then voted 9-4 for the Brady Bill. That completed the first legislative step for the waiting-period measure named for James Brady, the press secretary who was severely injured during the 1981 assassination attempt on President Ronald Reagan.

In his letter to Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., the crime subcommittee chairman, Thornburgh said: "If the Congress acts favorably on the president's comprehensive crime bill, the president will accept, as part of that bill, appropriate measures to identify felons attempting to purchase handguns."

Such legislation "must be presented to the president as part of, or together with, his crime bill," Thornburgh said. If not, "his senior advisers would recommend he veto it."

He said Bush still prefers a swift, immediate computer search of the sort proposed by the National Rifle Association (NRA).

"While I'm happy about this shift in position, I continue to believe that the president should move out of the caboose and become the engineer of this train by clearly and unequivocally endorsing the Brady Bill in its current form," Schumer said.

Other Democrats dismissed the veto threat, saying public opinion compels the president to support the bill.

"The president is looking for political cover on this issue, recognizing that 95 percent of the American people, including Ronald Reagan, support it," said Rep. Edward F. Feighan, D-Ohio, the bill's prime sponsor.

Thornburgh said Congress should amend the waiting-period bill so it would not apply in states where computerized criminal record systems are in place for gun merchants to screen felons. Three states — Florida, Virginia and Delaware — currently have the over-the-counter background checks.

The NRA and its allies in Congress are backing a separate bill that calls for a national system of background checks.

"It will work in seven minutes and you don't have to take seven days," said Rep. Bill McCullom, R-Fla., and one of the four lawmakers voting against the Brady Bill.

But such a system is millions of dollars and several years away, the Justice Department says.

Gun control advocates said Reagan's endorsement last month of the Brady Bill has helped the measure's chances of passage.

The full House Judiciary Committee is expected to vote on the bill later this month.

Panel: Global warming requires action now

WASHINGTON (NYT) — In a report welcomed by the White House and environmentalists, the National Academy of Sciences said Wednesday that the United States should act promptly to reduce the threat of global warming.

An academy panel recommended a variety of steps, including raising overall mileage standards for new automobiles to 32.5 miles per gallon from 27.5; increasing federal support for mass transit and reforestation, and developing a new generation of safe and efficient nuclear power plants.

The feared warming is expected as a result of the steady accumulation of waste industrial gases like carbon dioxide.

The steps necessary to address global warming have been a matter of fierce political contention between the Bush administration and environmental groups.

Even within the administration, the EPA has favored quicker action against global warming, which the president's chief of staff, John H. Sununu, has opposed.

The academy's report seems to be intended as an adroit political compromise between the various factions, and was praised on all sides.

Although its recommendations are somewhat general, as would be expected in a consensus document, they point the way to a broad-based national program for reducing carbon dioxide emissions.

They lay down the rudiments of a national energy policy, which the administration has long resisted.

William K. Reilly, the administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, called the report "a step foward," although he said that he did not necessarily agree with everything in it and that his agency had not yet analyzed it in detail.

A senior administration official, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified, said he was pleased that the report had not recommended "draconian changes."

He also praised the report's cautious stand on the uncertainties of global warming, its cost-benefit analysis, its refusal to propose target dates and quotas for reductions of carbon dioxide emissions, and the importance it places on eliminating another powerful trapper of heat, chlorofluorocarbons.

Dr. D. Allan Bromley, the White House science adviser, said, "I am delighted with the report, as are all my colleagues in the White House. He said actions already taken by the Bush administration would result in emission reductions on the order of those proposed by the academy.

■ Winds postpone shuttle landing a day

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. — High winds swirling around the desert landing strip here Wednesday forced the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to postpone the landing of the space shuttle Atlantis for at least one day.

NASA officials first postponed the shuttle's re-entry by one orbit to see if the winds would subside to prescribed safety limits, and then called off any attempt to land Wednesday when gusts of up to 41 miles an hour continued to blow across the runway.

The officials said they would try to land the Atlantis on Thursday morning. The landing is now scheduled for 6:56 a.m., Pacific daylight time.

■ Judge delays Noriega trial again

MIAMI — A U.S. district judge on Wednesday postponed the start of the drug trafficking trial of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega until July 22. The trial had been scheduled to start June 24.

Judge William M. Hoeveler granted the delay, which was requested by both sides, apparently to give the government more time to respond to a defense request for a diverse variety of classified documents relating to the deposed Panamanian leader's relationship to U.S. intelligence agencies.

This is the third time the trial has been postponed. The first trial date was for March 1990, and the second was last January.

The trial is expected to last at least two months.

■ Public Citizen sues for Glaspie files

WASHINGTON — A federal court was asked Wednesday to order the release of State Department files on former U.S. Ambassador to Iraq April Glaspie's meeting with Saddam Hussein a week before his troops invaded Kuwait.

The July 25, 1990, meeting in Baghdad has been a pivotal issue in the debate over whether the United States led Saddam to believe it would not intervene if he tried to take over his tiny, oil-rich neighbor.

Attorney Alan B. Morrison of the Ralph Nader group Public Citizen, which filed suit in U.S. District Court, said the State Department effectively waived its secrecy right by discussing the meeting in public.

■ Lax bottled water laws may risk health

WASHINGTON — Lax federal regulation of the U.S. bottled water industry may pose health risks to consumers, who pay a hefty premium for beverages that may come out of the public tap anyway, a government study said Wednesday.

The General Accounting Office prepared the report at the request of Rep. John Dingell, the Michigan Democrat who chairs the House Energy and Commerce Committee, whose subcommittee on oversight and investigations grilled FDA officials Wednesday.

"FDA oversight does not ensure that bottlers meet federal standards," Dingell said. "Although consumers may be paying 300 to 1,200 times more per gallon for bottled water than for tap water, as much as 25 percent may be drawn from public drinking water systems."

Mrs. Reagan strikes back at book

■ More national news/4D

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan is encouraging her friends to go out and impugn a critical new biography that alleges she ran the presidency and carried on with Frank Sinatra.

"She said anybody who wants to say anything, she would be grateful," Sheila Tate, a former press secretary to the first lady, said Wednesday.

"Certainly, correcting the record in the name of accuracy is not a bad thing to do," said Bill Gerber, a spokesman for President Reagan and his wife in Los Angeles.

He said the Reagans will not do interviews, but that friends who have called about the book, "have not been told not to express their feelings in the name of accuracy."

Mrs. Reagan also consulted a public relations firm on how to handle the negative publicity about "Nancy Reagan, the Unauthorized Biography," sources said.

Friends and associates of the Reagans have made themselves available for interviews in the past two days to challenge allegations in the gossipy biography by Kitty Kelley.

Among them, Mitchell E. Daniels Jr., former White House political director, said it was "impossible to imagine" that Mrs. Reagan could have had a secret relationship with Frank Sinatra in the White House, as the book alleges, because of the "minute-by-minute presence of staff and security."

Reagan's son, Michael Reagan, whom Kelley portrays as a stepson Mrs. Reagan all but shut out of the family, said Wednesday on CNN's "Crossfire" that the affair with Sinatra "never happened."

He conceded that Mrs. Reagan sent his son as a gift a teddy bear the boy had left behind at the White House, as Kelley reported, but said the Reagans also sent their grandson a $50 check to go with it.

Tate, who now works as a Washington public relations consultant, said the book had numerous factual errors, including material about how Tate was hired, how she granted interviews with the first lady and about the wedding gift Mrs. Reagan gave her.

Before the book was released Sunday, the feeling among Reagan loyalists was, "We all sort of spontaneously said we should keep our heads down," Tate said. "I talked to Nancy Reagan last Saturday. ... That was the general feeling then, and she agreed."

"As things got worse and worse, we all finally agreed ... you can't leave some of these things unchallenged, because they're wrong. They're such character assassination," said Tate.

Friend: woman cried rape at Kennedys'

PALM BEACH, Fla. (NYT) — The woman who said she was raped at the Kennedy estate here on March 30 was "very distraught and was screaming rape" when she was picked up by a female acquaintance at 4:30 a.m. outside the house, friends of the two women said on Wednesday.

The friends' account of how the 29-year-old woman was picked up at the Kennedys' ocean-front home added new details to the story of the night's events, but also raised new questions about what actually happened. The accounts were given in interviews Wednesday and in newspaper stories published on Tuesday.

The woman has charged that she was raped by William Kennedy Smith, a 30-year-old Georgetown University Medical School student and a nephew of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy. Smith has denied that he was involved in any "offense."

The confusion surrounding the case, particularly the police investigation of it, was also heightened by a statement on Tuesday by Joseph Terlizzese, the Palm Beach police chief, who said he was "99 percent sure" that a rape had occurred at the Kennedy estate.

Criminal defense lawyers in Florida said Wednesday that they were astounded by Terlizzese's comment.

"If he is 99 percent certain, that goes well beyond the standard needed to charge, indict or convict someone and they ought to make an arrest immediately," said one local criminal lawyer who has been following the case. He spoke on the condition that he not be identified.

The Palm Beach police have been criticized by some lawyers in the case for taking so long to make an arrest.

The case began when Smith went out with Senator Kennedy and his cousin, Patrick Kennedy, a Rhode Island state representative, to the nightclub Au Bar, this season's most chic night spot in Palm Beach. It was there that Smith met the woman, the mother of a 2-year-old child.

Also at the nightclub that evening was Anne Mercer, a 32-year-old friend of the woman. It was Miss Mercer whom she would later call from the Kennedy estate to report that she had been raped and whom she would ask to pick her up, according to the new accounts.

Miss Mercer, who lives in West Palm Beach, about 20 minutes away, reached the Kennedy estate, the victim was standing alone in the parking lot, according to one of the accounts.

A story in The Miami Herald on Wednesday said the woman was holding an urn and a Kennedy family photograph. Joe Mincberg, a lawyer who is serving as a spokesman for Miss Mercer, told the paper that the woman explained to Miss Mercer that she had taken the items because "she wanted to prove she had been there."

Asked Wednesday why the woman had called Miss Mercer, Mincberg said, "They were friends, and they began the evening together."

But a good friend of Miss Mercer said that Miss Mercer and the woman were not particularly close friends, leaving open the question of why the woman chose to call Miss Mercer for help.

Mincberg said Miss Mercer had given a statement to the police. He said that her father, Leonard J. Mercer, had asked him to be her liaison with the press. Mincberg said he had represented Mercer in criminal proceedings.

Mercer, who was also at the nightclub that evening and who danced with the victim, has given his own statement to the police, Mincberg said.

Mubarak tells Baker Egypt is open to peace talks

AP Laserphoto

U.S. Secretary of State James Baker, right, shakes hands with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak at the beginning of their meeting in Cairo on Wednesday.

CAIRO, Egypt (NYT) — Egypt's leaders told Secretary of State James A. Baker III on Wednesday that they were prepared to consider an American proposal for an Arab-Israeli peace conference sponsored by the United States and the Soviet Union, and would treat Israel's conditions for such a meeting with an open mind.

After a 90-minute meeting between Baker and the Egyptian president, Hosni Mubarak, Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel Meguid told reporters that the Israelis were talking about a "regional conference" while Egypt and the other Arabs had been talking about an "international conference."

"I think there is a common denominator between the two, which is the word conference," he said. "In that respect, I think we can certainly work on that conference, how it can be an instrument for the attainment of a comprehensive peace."

Egypt, he said, was "open to discuss any way to find a peaceful solution."

Baker arrived in Cairo on Wednesday after two days of talks with the Israeli prime minister, Yitzhak Shamir. The Israelis told Baker that they were prepared in principle to attend some kind of regional meeting sponsored by the Soviet Union and the United States provided that it was only a one-day ceremonial encounter that would then break up into direct talks between Israel and the Arab countries and Israel and the Palestinians.

The Israelis believe that this approach can satisfy their demand for direct negotiations as well as the Arab demand for some international cover for their contacts with Israel.

But it was impossible to tell from Abdel Maguid's remarks whether Egypt and Israel were really narrowing their differences or whether the Egyptians were doing what the Israelis did on Tuesday.

That was to agree in principle to the idea of some kind of conference in order not to be blamed for the breakdown in the American-sponsored peace diplomacy while holding out all sorts of conditions and reservations that are being discussed privately.

Baker himself seemed torn about how much progress was being made. He said after the meeting, "I remain hopeful that we can find a way to develop a process that can move us toward peace in the Middle East."

But he quickly added: "I would repeat what I said in Israel, and that is that the problems we are addressing are extremely difficult. There are many things that still have to be addressed, many things still have to be resolved. But there would appear to be some congruence of opinion between the views of the United States and other countries outside the region, and countries in the region, such as Israel and Egypt and hopefully others."

A positive sign was the fact that Abdel Maguid, in his public remarks, seemed to indicate that Egypt would be flexible.

Traditionally, the Arab position has been that there should be an international conference, sponsored by the United Nations, with the attendance of all five permanent members of the Security Council as well as the combatants themselves.

When Abdel Maguid was asked whether Egypt would insist on the presence of all Security Council members, he answered: "All the members? I think this would be an exaggeration for me. But if we can have the presence of international representation that can really mean this conference is under international participation, I think Egypt would be willing to go along."

Settlement in occupied lands will continue, Shamir says

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Wednesday that Jewish settlement in the occupied territories will not be halted while Israel pursues talks on Mideast peace with its Arab neighbors.

Shamir's comments followed two days of talks with U.S. Secretary of State James A. Baker III in which Israel proposed the idea of a regional conference as a prelude for Arab-Israeli peace talks.

But Shamir has rejected any withdrawal from the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip and disagreed with U.S. criticism that Israeli settlements in the areas are an "obstacles for peace."

"This is an issue that has nothing to do with the negotiations between us and the Arabs. This is an internal Israeli issue," said Shamir. "Nobody in Israel and the Israeli government is doubting our right to build houses in Judea, Samaria (West Bank) and Gaza. ... We will continue to build there."

Shamir's adviser Avi Pazner said Baker raised the issue of settlements, but there was "no discussion about it."

An estimated 80,000 Jewish settlers live in the occupied areas among 1.7 million Palestinians, who have waged a 40-month uprising against Israeli rule.

Persistence pays for young speller!

That's a lesson that 12-year-old Jared Hoggan learned last Saturday at the Fourth Annual Midland Reporter-Telegram Regional Spelling Bee.

Jared, a student at Hillander School in Midland, had previously participated in spelling bees for two years. Last year, he won third place in the local contest. Persistence prompted Jared to try, try again.The year before that, he hadn't even made it through the opening rounds.

But Jared remained persistent.

In the meantime, however, Jared had been persistently studying his spelling with his mother, Barbara Hoggan, who helped the effort with flash cards. At the bee Saturday, Jared spelled words that would confound many adults, such as "philately," "trochaic" and "snouch.".

When all the spelling was over, Jared was the champion and now will represent Midland at the Scripps-Howard National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C. May 26-June 1.

"I know it's going to be a lot harder at the national bee," Jared said following his victory. "There will probably be a lot more advanced words."

Jared should take heart from the lesson he has learned over the past three years. As the words get tougher and the competition grows more intense, he should rely on the skills he developed in the earlier competition.

He should recall the lessons his teachers have taught him and remember all the days spent practicing spelling instead of doing something else he might have enjoyed more.

Persistence pays off. Jared Hoggan is a persistent young man. We wish him the best as he competes at the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

Legislature must be in control of schools

State District Judge Scott McCown's decision to give state lawmakers until April 15 to come up with a constitutionally suitable school finance system was a humane one.

If the Legislature cannot do the job, then McCown will use a plan drafted by deputy state education commissioner Lynn Moak. Then, heaven forbid, the courts will control our schools just as they control our state prisons and our welfare system.

The crisis centers on a school finance system the courts have ruled unconstitutional. It depends too heavily on property taxes, and thus creates a huge disparity between the money spent on students living in property tax-rich districts and those in poor districts.

Lawmakers now must devise a plan that spreads the wealth more evenly.

They should not rob from the rich districts to pay more money to the poor districts. To do that would have the effects of "dumbing down" the state education system, to reduce the common denominator we use to gauge how much money should go toward public schools. It is time, therefore, to recast the entire state tax system.

Time is running out for the Legislature to retake control of our state's schools. The alternative — to let the courts finance them — is unacceptable.

Dixon sentence does not discourage crime

Five years for defrauding federal regulators, illegally spending depositors' money and engaging in a host of other misdeeds? By giving former savings-and-loan kingpin Don R. Dixon a slap on the wrist, federal District Judge A. Joe Fish has given the public a slap in the face. Conceivably, Dixon could be eligible for parole as early as next year. Considering the damage he did to the savings industry and its customers, that's a terribly small price to pay. ...

The judge, in remarks before the sentencing, said the prison term should not be based on the public's hostility toward Dixon. That's true. Justice should never be meted out according to the roar of the crowd. But what's also important to remember is that prison sentences should be substantial enough to deter similar wrongdoing in the future. Dixon faced as much as 120 years behind bars; he ended up with a mere five. What message does that send?

Fish also said he tried to take into account the euphoria that swept the savings industry in the early '80s, explaining that he didn't think it was fair to judge the participants in those heady events by today's standards. But why not? As one prosecutor noted afterward, "Lying and stealing has always been wrong." The fact that Dixon was foolish enough to get caught up in the euphoria of the times is no excuse for what he did — or at least it shouldn't have been.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, April 11, the 101st day of 1991. There are 264 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 11, 1945, during World War II, American soldiers liberated the notorious Nazi concentration camp Buchenwald in eastern Germany.

One year ago: Funeral services were held in Indianapolis for AIDS patient Ryan White, who had died three days earlier at age 18.

Today's Birthdays: Fashion designer Oleg Cassini is 78. Former New York State Gov. Hugh Carey is 72. Ethel Kennedy is 63. Actor Joel Grey is 59. Actress Louise Lasser is 52. Syndicated columnist Ellen Goodman is 43.

Thought for Today: "If we were to wake up some morning and find that everyone was the same race, creed, and color, we would find some other causes for prejudice by noon." — George Aiken, U.S. Senator (1892-1984).

Army not eager to discuss Grenada

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon was eager to tell the world about its stunning victory in the Persian Gulf. Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf went on international TV standing before an array of maps and charts, jabbing his pointer and explaining the brilliant military strategy.

Anderson

But the same folks didn't want to talk so much about the invasion of Grenada eight years earlier. Schwarzkopf's assessment of that war is classified. We have obtained the report in which Schwarzkopf broadly hints that headquarters screwed up the invasion "every way you can possibly screw it up."

Operation Desert Storm and the Grenada squall had one thing in common: The military managers tried to manage reporters and keep them at bay. During the Gulf War, the generals rushed out news of their latest triumphs and showed videos of "smart bombs" to a virtually captive audience of reporters safe in Riyadh.

The media management was a little more severe in Grenada. Admiral Joseph Metcalf, the task force commander, threatened to fire on reporters who chartered a boat in an attempt to get to Grenada to cover the invasion.

From classified accounts, we can now tell the story of the Grenada invasion. No one was more critical of the operation, the secret assessments show, than Schwarzkopf, who was assigned at the last minute to be Metcalf's second in command.

Schwarzkopf's mission was to rescue some 600 American students who U.S. officials feared might be taken hostage by Grenada's radical, Cuban-supported government. But the Army couldn't find most of the students at first. The rescue force stormed the wrong campus. The only accurate intelligence that the Army had about where the students were came too late from the employee of an intelligence agency in Washington. He just happened to have a brother studying in Grenada who had sent him a snapshot of the main campus.

The task force commanders relied on an old black-and-white map of Grenada published by the British Ministry of Overseas Development. Some Army units had to pick up tourist maps at boutiques and gas stations to find their way around the island.

The key target was a new landing strip that the Cubans were building at Point Salines — a strip that was supposed to be for tourist flights, but would have accommodated Soviet and Cuban military operations. Navy helicopters dropped 16 Seals onto whaling boats to check out the airfield on the coast, but four of the men were lost in the high seas and none got close enough to scope out the target.

The second attempt to land Seals fared no better. The engine of the whaling boat flooded and the boat drifted out to sea with the Seals on it. Not to worry. The Army's Ranger paratroopers were advised that the Cuban workers at the airfield probably wouldn't put up a fight.

But when the Rangers approached Point Salines in their helicopters, the sky exploded with anti-aircraft and small-arms fire. One pilot likened the scene to a fireworks display on the Fourth of July at the Washington Monument. The Rangers were dumped into the hail of bullets.

Later in the operation, Navy planes mistakenly clobbered a mental hospital, killing 30 patients. The rest of the patients roamed around the town bewildered until troops rounded them up and put them in another hospital.

The intelligence was faulty. The estimates about the enemy were wrong. The operations were botched. But the troops fought valiantly and won the day. Afterward, Schwarzkopf declared in his classified account of the invasion that Grenada had "proved that even though higher headquarters screws it up every way you can possibly screw it up, it is the initiative and valor on the part of the ... soldiers on the ground that will win it for you every time."

Cuomo out of synch with rest of country

ALBANY, N.Y. — Mario Cuomo, who has always had both the mournful countenance of a basset hound and the serrating bite of a Doberman, is feeling frisky but not friendly. His famous fluency, always the product of genuine passions, is the primary reason many Democrats want him to run for president. But the nature of his passions today may preclude that.

Will

He is a man emphatically, and with a kind of grim exuberance, out of emotional synch with the country. For now. He believes the country's emotional high from the war is perishing as he speaks.

"You," says Cuomo, master of the antecedent-less pronoun, "are great killers in the desert. You believe in the death penalty." Perhaps he means the president, or the current national consensus. But there is no ambiguity about who he is talking about when, in a tone of mingled wonder and disgust, he notes that the president even appeared on tape during the telecast of the NCAA basketball championship, talking about Desert Storm. "He can't stop talking about it!"

Cuomo says, facetiously but acidly, that some politician soon "will wear epaulets and a saber. There definitely will be a saber in the campaign." But, he adds, Democrats are not really vulnerable to the brandishing of military symbols. Is, he asks, the crucial criterion a willingness to wage war? Fine. "Democrats were good at that. Roosevelt was no shirker. Truman dropped the bomb."

But "were," "was," and "dropped" are in the past tense. Besides, what he clearly believes, with an urgency that defies disguising is that the war tapped a dark atavism in America.

We are "good at killing," even, he intimates, comfortable with killing. When the president turns his attention to the domestic agenda, what leads the list? A crime bill featuring expanded uses of the death penalty.

The Democratic Party, he says, owes the country "a fight on ideas" and finding ideas better than the president's "should be easy." An administration that can find half-a-trillion dollars for the S&L cleanup but can't find relative pocket change for fighting drugs....

But before you can change the nation's mind, you must change the topic of conversation. And Cuomo, like many other Democrats, may find that hard. Opposition to the use of force in the Persian Gulf in January is intellectually defensible, but the political chore of making that defense may be incompatible with the need to conduct a forward-focused presidential campaign.

Cuomo disagrees. He is in his third term and ninth year as governor and knows how long 18 months can be in politics. While he was speaking last week about epaulets and war, the farce in Kuwait was counterpoint to the tragedy unfolding in Iraq.

On the graph of national serenity, two lines may be about to cross. One is the descending line tracing the diminishing emotional returns from the victory celebrations. The other line traces the rising revulsion about the chaos, disease, starvation and death that is not really surprising, even in the aftermath of a war waged to enhance peace and stability.

To the rest of the country, the condition of Cuomo's realm, New York state, is indistinguishable from the condition of New York City, which is so far down at the heels it can hardly aspire to seediness. Were Cuomo to be a candidate, his problem would not be that there is a Willie Horton in his record. Rather, his problem would be that New York City is a Willie Horton: scary.

Recalling that in his first state-of-the-state message less than a decade ago he did not need to deal with AIDS or the homeless, he says, "We must share our wealth in ways we have been reluctant to do."

All this is at least arguable. But before it can be argued, the country must change the course of its current conversation. Is Cuomo fluent enough to do that? Probably not.

FDIC not in the business of making money

The government is having an impossible time offloading its failed S&Ls, so it is holding "going out of business" sales at "rock bottom prices."

To speed up the process, it has hired used-car salesmen to do the selling.

Buchwald

That's how I met Smiley who was standing outside Crazy Sam's Savings and Loan Lot in Rockville.

"Can I help you?" Smiley asked. "We have some unbelievable buys on 1987 and 1989 savings and loans. Here's a sporty little thrift model. It's hardly been used because the owner is doing 10 years in San Quentin. You can open up for business tomorrow morning."

"I'm just looking," I told him.

"Come over here. This is a steal. It comes equipped with six teller cages and has an Italian marble floor and Lalique chandeliers. You're never going to find one like this."

"Will you take my old S&L on a trade-in?"

"It depends. How much do you owe on yours?"

"I'm in the red for $330 million, but I expect to be bailed out by the government at any moment."

The salesman looked in his blue book, "I think that we can give you $450 for your bank. The taxpayers will pick up the rest. Come over here, I want to show you an S&L drive-in model. It was only used by a little old lady on Sundays."

"The safe is empty."

"The previous owner took that with him when he moved to Brazil. We'll install another safe from one of our other S&Ls. Do you see that savings and loan over there in the lot? We inherited that from a very close relative of the president of the United States. It's in tiptop condition, and we're selling it for $50 and a handshake."

"It appears to be in good shape," I admitted, "but there must be a catch if you're only asking $50 for it."

"We're just trying to clear out all these defunct S&Ls so that we can bring some more in. Our policy is, 'Everything must go.' You'll never see bargain basement prices like this again."

"The one with the colonial facade looks nice."

"You have a sharp eye for S&Ls, sir. That happens to be the Abigail Adams Dime Savings of Miami. It only lost $1 billion, but structurally it's as sound today as when it was first chartered. The owners put in their own spa and golf course in the back for their family. I have been authorized to let you have this bank for $3,000, with 10 percent down."

"Won't you lose money on it?"

"The FDIC is not in the business of making money. All we're trying to do is liquidate these turkeys at prices that the average investor can afford."

"Are these S&Ls guaranteed?" I asked.

"Of course, they are. They're all in Chapter 11, but we give you a warranty that says you are not responsible for any debts of the previous owners."

"Okay, give me $2,000 and we'll throw in Charlie Keating's desk for nothing."

Earle defends grand jury's legislative investigation

AUSTIN (AP) — In a small room tucked away in a hallway on the third floor of the Travis County courthouse, a grand jury has spent the past four months investigating alleged abuses of the public trust by state lawmakers.

On Dec. 28, a little more than three weeks into its inquiry, the panel indicted the most powerful legislator in Texas — House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth.

At the time, Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle said allegations were mushrooming, and there was talk of a Sharpstown-size scandal that rocked Texas in 1971.

But aside from a fight with another powerful legislator, Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, over his business records, the score remains the same: two misdemeanor charges against Lewis, which he claims are phony.

The grand jury was released Friday from its duties, but Earle said the investigation will continue with two grand juries, which will also handle other cases.

He makes no excuse for the amount of time spent and the results.

"We have operated in blinding speed," for an official corruption investigation, he said.

The grand jury has received thousands of pages of records and heard from more than two dozen witnesses, including a reported former topless dancer who went with Lewis and others on a vacation in 1987 to a plush Mexican resort.

Earle said the investigation has often been delayed by court challenges of subpoenas by Lewis and Berlanga.

Earle, himself a former lawmaker, also says he has been attacked by the House on several fronts since the probe began, including a bill that would alter grand jury procedures.

His almost holy tone in calling for sweeping ethics reform has also brought him enemies.

"There is a difference between sin and crime, and a lot of the acts that have been described, that have struck people as outrageous, are not made illegal under Texas law," Earle said.

"I understand how difficult it can be to be a member of the Legislature, financially. The Legislature to me is a hallowed institution, and I suppose sometimes it gets overrun with moneychangers and I do take offense to that," he said.

Lewis contends that Earle has damaged the Legislature.

"Mr. Earle may have had the concept there's a lot of corruption going on in the Legislature. And he's been here for what, 17 weeks, and has not been able to uncover any corruption in the Legislature," the House speaker said.

The investigation has focused on the relationship between lawmakers and lobbyists, specifically the political muscle of the San Antonio law firm of Heard, Goggan, Blair and Williams.

Heard, Goggan has parlayed a little-noticed, 1981 revision in state law into a financial empire. The law allows private law firms to receive 15 percent penalties for collecting delinquent taxes for cities, counties and school districts.

In 1989, it was estimated Heard, Goggan, had more than 100 contracts to collect about one-half of the $1 billion in back taxes owed in Texas.

Numerous attempts to allow public attorneys to collect the same delinquent tax penalty have died in the House.

The charges against Lewis allege that he accepted a gift from Heard, Goggan, in the form of a $5,000 payment for back taxes for a company half-owned by Lewis, and failed to report it on his public disclosure statement. Lewis has denied any wrongdoing. A pre-trial hearing in the matter is scheduled for July 2.

The law firm, which operates offices across the state, has made political contributions to many legislators and has hired some current and former lawmakers as "local counsel" to maintain good relations with local governmental bodies that hire it for tax collection.

The firm is no stranger to controversy.

In 1988, Sen. Frank Tejeda, D-San Antonio, secretly taped an offer made to him by Lupe Zamarripa, a Heard, Goggan attorney, in which he said the lawmaker could make between $10,000 and $30,000 for helping the firm secure the business of the Harlandale school district.

Tejeda turned him down and let the San Antonio Light publish the tapes. Oliver Heard Jr., the firm's senior partner, said the incident was a misunderstanding.

Heard, 47, collected publicity for himself in April 1988 during his failed bid to become president of the State Bar of Texas. His effort was damaged when he was in an Austin nude modeling studio when it was raided by police. No charges were filed against Heard, who said he had stopped in to use the bathroom.

One of the incidents investigated by the grand jury concerned a trip Lewis took with an Austin lobbyist, four Heard, Goggan partners, and six single women. One newspaper reported Lewis shared a suite with Toni Barcellona, a former receptionist for the law firm.

1. REDUCE--Buy products wisely, keeping in mind that you can "precycle" by purchasing products in recyclable containers. Don't buy products that are overpackaged (the ones you can't get into anyway).
2. Buy foods in bulk or concentrate.
3. Make 2 sided photocopies, or use electronic mail if possible.
4. Use cloth towels in the kitchen instead of paper towels, cloth napkins instead of paper napkins.
5. Avoid styrofoam products, disposable lighters and razors.
6. Buy products that come in RECYCLED containers rather than RECYCLABLE containers when possible.
7. Use products made from recycled fibers. Use computer, typing, notebook paper made from recycled paper. Napkins, paper towels and toilet paper are now available made from recycled paper. TEXAS CERTIFIED NURSERY PROFESSIONALS serve you here!

Teachers will do it in STYLE

Site-based management plans OK'd

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

With several raps of the gavel at the recent board meeting, Midland school board trustees approved two innovative site-based management proposals.

Midland High School teachers are preparing to implement a seven-period day next fall while Goddard Junior High School teachers are gearing up for a team teaching plan.

Site-based management, a concept encouraged by Senate Bill 1, involves decisions being initiated at the campus level.

Texas is behind other states in implementing programs with teacher participation, according to Delmar Janke, a Texas A&M professor.

Goddard Junior High School teachers are ready to give their campus some "style."

The style Goddard teachers have in mind won't include fashion trends or sprucing up classroom decor. Instead, teachers will be focusing on providing innovative methods of teaching to suit the style of every learner.

School board trustees gave their stamp of approval to Project STYLE (Students and Teachers Say Yes to Learning Enrichment) at the recent board meeting.

Goddard Principal Jane Carrens said the program would provide a core of five teachers for 100 seventh graders and five for 100 eighth graders in the fall.

County officials in IBM video

■ Promotional film will show the advantages of the computer which Midland County bought in 1989.

Making a video pitch for IBM wasn't hard for Precinct 1 County Commissioner Durward Wright; he's been on TV before, after all.

Besides, he has a steadfast belief in the product.

"It really is on the cutting edge," he said. "We could stay back in the horse-and-buggy stage and do everything by typewriter, but we would require considerably more brick and mortar and considerably more people."

Wright was among several county officials interviewed for an IBM promotional videotape shot this week at the Midland County Courthouse and the Elections Administration Office.

The video will show the advantages of IBM's model AS/400 computer, one of which Midland County purchased for about $200,000 in 1989.

An IBM crew came to Midland Monday to solicit testimonials from county employees and officials who use the system.

PBRPC seeks grant for health care for needy

■ Commission wants to establish program to provide 'primary' care for poverty-level people in 10 area counties.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

About 18,000 poverty-level people in 10 West Texas counties, including three that are without physicians, may be afforded "primary" or basic health care if a federal grant to be sought by the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission (PBRPC) is funded.

The PBRPC board of directors, which is made up of representatives of 17 West Texas counties, on Wednesday authorized pursuit of a $300,000 federal grant for each of three years mainly to afford basic and preventative-medicine treatment for the poor in Crane, Glasscock, Loving, Martin, Pecos, Reeves, Terrell, Upton, Ward and Winkler counties. Of those, Loving, population, 61, Glasscock, population 1,226, and Terrell, population, 1,614, are without benefit of medical doctors.

"Primary care will be made in your community to people that can't afford it," Harley Reeves, the PBRPC's health planner, told the PBRPC board, which includes judges, majors, commissioners and other officials from 17 West Texas counties.

The program, which would be funded through the United States Department of Health and Human Services, primarily is for those people without sufficient money and without medical insurance, who "will never go to the doctor for preventive care," Reeves said.

"They go when they are down."

Statewide, Reeves said, 24 regional planning commissions, including PBRPC, are competing for federal funds.

THE PROGRAM would bring into those counties nurse practitioners to screen the patients, to dispense medication, and, when necessary, to refer the patients to general physicians or specialists in medical centers and clinics in, for example, Midland, Odessa, Big Spring and Andrews.

Additionally, the program might hire a physician to administer to any of the poor ailing patients since, Reeves said, physicians in those seven counties which do have doctors often are overloaded with cases or do not want to deal with Medicaid or Medicare patients. In the main, the Medicaid government program is for the poor — those who are unable to afford regular medical services. Medicare primarily is for the aged.

"This is a pretty fragmented world that we live in as far as health (care) is concerned," Reeves observed.

"Many of our doctors in our rural communities have a full caseload already," Reeves said, "and they are not too interested, occasionally, in taking care of Medicare-Medicaid patients, because it's a paper nightmare."

Because of that, he said, there is "a possibility we may have to hire a physician to cover these 10 communities, working in conjunction with the nurse in each of the health clinics" in those counties.

"The primary reason for offering the services," Reeves said, "is not from a humane point of view but strictly from an economic point of view." And, he said later, "Most all of the legislation we get in this country, both state and federal, is because of economics."

It is far less expensive, he explained, to treat people early into their illness or affliction and to treat minor physical and mental problems than it is to hospitalize patients for major medical problems that could have been held in check by preventive medicine.

ECTOR COUNTY, he said, saved $1 million a year "strictly on hypertension and diabetic patients" who are being treated early into their medical problems.

Primary care, Reeves explained later, is "basic health care.

"If you've got a cold," he said, "you go see a doctor, because you've either got money or got insurance."

But the poor often do not have the money or the insurance to buy medical care.

And they often ignore or fail to recognize early symptoms of illnesses.

But, Reeves said, "Once a person knows that they can go to a doctor, or go to a clinic to receive those services, they won't wait until they get deathly ill to go to the emergency room in the local hospital, so we will be reducing our costs of medical treatment to this target group of 18,000 people."

Those people represent about 25 percent of the approximately 70,000 people in the 10 counties to be affected by the proposed primary-treatment medical program, Reeves said.

HYPERTENSION detected and treated early could prevent or forestall strokes and heart attacks.

"Usually, if we can get the people in the program, once we get them identified, we can prevent that extensive treatment" by preventative medicine, Reeves said.

But people who are stricken by a debilitating disease or condition, including a stroke or "diabetes that has gone into gangrene," may have to "seek treatment by specialists."

And "unfortunately," Reeves said, that $300,000 infused into the 10 counties each year "by and large would not take care of 18,000 people" even if not all of them got sick. "We may run out of money as far as paying for (primary) treatment before the program is over."

Chaplain honored for his good deeds

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The Rev. Ray Riddle, chaplain at the Hospice of Midland, describes his work this way:

"I just do what the nurses tell me to do."

But his work — and that ever-present modesty — were rewarded Wednesday night when Riddle, 74, was presented the Golden Deeds Award at a banquet of the Midland Exchange Club.

About 125 people were present at the Midland Country Club to honor Riddle.

"I am highly honored that they would do this," Riddle said about the award that has been an annual tradition of the Exchange Club since 1963.

Charles Hartwell, banquet organizer, said Riddle was chosen because of "not any one specific thing but what he's done over the years."

"The award is for a low-key person who goes around and does a lot of good things," Hartwell said.

Riddle has been a chaplain at the hospice since he retired as pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in 1984, said Carol Armstrong, executive director of Hospice of Midland.

"He is the most loved person I've ever been around in my life," said Ms. Armstrong.

"He was chosen for all the lives he has impacted, the families he has helped, his kindness and gentleness," Ms. Armstrong said.

As for his work at the hospice, Ms. Armstrong said, "He visits all our families that don't have a minister. He brings a lot of care to those patients and their families."

But work at the hospice is not "work" for Riddle.

"I think it is one of the finest ministeries in the city," Riddle said, adding that he jumped at the chance to work there following his retirement.

Why does he do it?

"I really care about people. I love being with them," Riddle said.

"A big part of it (staying with the hospice) is that it is such important work," Riddle added.

Before volunteering his time at the hospice, Riddle worked as a minister for 41 years.

His first ministery was in New Orleans for 17 years before moving to Memphis, Tenn., where he preached for the next 14 years. Riddle helped form the Metropolitan Inter-Faith Association, a program that provides community service to the needy, while in Memphis.

In 1974, Riddle moved to Midland where he became pastor of the First Presbyterian Church.

Bottler instrumental in selling idea of 7Up as a soft drink

By William Whitaker

ABILENE (AP) — For an old fellow who knew and admired straight-shooting Lyndon B. Johnson, longtime bottling executive Virgil L. Musick has proven unnervingly diplomatic when asked his preference in soft drinks.

"Well," he once said, trying to keep from smiling too broadly, "right now I like 'em all."

Musick

That might seem strange considering Musick introduced a huge stretch of West Texas to 7Up and also labored mightily on behalf of Pepsi-Cola, always in battle with Coca-Cola and Dr Pepper. But with his broader responsibilities in recent years, he's had to stay neutral.

All that changed a week ago. He finally retired as seeing-all, knowing-all administrative secretary of the Texas Soft Drink Association — a position, amazingly, he's held almost continually since 1951. The only breaks he's had included his presidency of the association in 1960.

Not surprisingly, lots of tributes were made to Musick at the association's recent convention in Austin.

"Well, they celebrated it at the convention, but I didn't celebrate it at home when my term actually ended," he said last week. "I just felt good to be out from under that load."

DON'T CONCLUDE, however, it's been one long chore. To hear friend and associate Raymond McDaniel Jr., a longtime Abilene bottler, Virgil Musick's work with the bottling association has been a labor of love.

"I really think he enjoys the association and the bottlers and it's definitely his love," McDaniel said. "He shouldered it for many, many years. You know, people would come and go in the chairmanship of that organization but Virgil stayed and carried the ball for years."

Certainly Musick's 40 years with the association weren't easy. Part of the job involved intensive lobbying — and at age 84, Musick says, it was getting to be too much work.

"The toughest part of the job was politicking against bad bills we didn't want, like the one in '73 for mandatory deposit on all containers and, later, the vendor's tax. We've been very successful in our legislative efforts and I'm very proud of that."

But enough is enough, he says.

"With my health, I couldn't face that Austin lobby anymore — staying up till midnight and going to all those cocktail parties. I decided it was time to get in the slow lane."

When it comes to selling soft drinks, folks in the know say Virgil Musick is a master. Among other things, he's one of those folks who recalls the challenge of marketing 7Up.

"IT HAD no caffeine in it and no color," he said. "It got started down in New Orleans and San Antonio. They had trucks that had on the side: 'Good the Next Morning.' But it got started as a mixer and the biggest customers were honky-tonks. It was hard to sell at first."

But if anyone could sell it, Virgil Musick was the man. After all, he was a chip off the old block — his father, Ed Musick, happened to be one of Taylor County's busiest Watkins Products salesmen, forever on the road, forever making friends out of strangers, especially in rural parts.

Musick attributes much of his marketing know-how to his father.

"He had the best attributes of a salesman. I think I not only got his sales ability but his do-it-yourself attitude. That sales bit just came naturally to me. Of course, he died in 1921, when I was 13 years old. But I think I got his humor, his pleasant personality. He loved everybody."

The death of Ed Musick left the family in tough straits.

It quickly became obvious Virgil would have to help — so at age 13 he quit school. "I think there were a lot of 13-year-olds in those days who didn't see the value of an education, and I was kind of glad to get out and start making some money."

By the time he was into his 20s, Virgil was working with the Abilene Laundry Company, running a route, picking up and delivering laundry.

IN 1928 he married Bertie Briggs, a telephone operator.

In 1937, he moved to Lubbock to go into business with one of his brothers, a pharmacist. However, the two disagreed over how aggressive they should be and so soon parted ways.

Musick turned his attention to something else — a strange drink called 7Up that few folks knew what to make of.

It was to offer him his first big chance in business.

One of the first men to bring 7Up to West Texas was C.R. Pennington, a well-known Abilene Realtor and civic leader. 7Up had only recently started up and Pennington, together with some associates, decided to buy a franchise for the Panhandle.

After setting up a bottling plant in Amarillo, he advertised a distributorship in Lubbock — and Musick saw it as an opportunity to get in on something big and new.

The first challenge was selling Pennington on the idea when Musick, again, lacked substantial capital.

"HE WANTED someone with more money than I had, but he saw pretty quick I could sell 7Up and he never could find anyone else with the right capital," Musick recalls.

Judging from what others say, Musick oversimplifies his efforts in the soft drink business after that.

"Went into Amarillo," he once said, "got me my first load of merchandise, came back to distribute — and from that day on, I've been very successful in the bottling business."

Conrad Dunagan, 76, of Monahans, one-time West Texas Coca-Cola and 7Up bottler and former president of the Texas State Historical Association now writing a history on bottling for The Handbook of Texas, says marketing 7Up in West Texas was no easy feat.

For one thing, the stuff didn't look like a cola. Some folks thought of it solely as a mixer.

"The take-home business (in 7Up) wasn't near what it is today," Musick said. "And I heard this so many times I got aggravated — 'Oh, I don't want to handle 7Up, that's just a chaser.' And we were out there trying to promote it as a soft drink.

"What we'd do, we'd sell 'em a case of drinks — part of it root beer, part of it orange, part something else," Musick said, "and then I'd slip some 7Up in there so they'd have to sell it."

BUT VIRGIL Musick's life in West Texas was more than soft drinks.

During World War II, he joined the faculty at Texas Tech and helped instruct military pilots.

He also became involved in the Democratic Party, forging a relationship with an ambitious power-seeker by the name of Lyndon Johnson. He recalls Texas' best-known politician as "very pushy" but has fond memories of both the man and his principles.

"His favorite expression was, 'If it's real hard to do, you do it immediately. If it's impossible, it just takes a while longer.' "

Musick, later a regular visitor to Johnson's spread in the Hill Country, pretty much agreed.

Musick eventually sold his Lubbock interest, and in 1947 purchased the San Angelo 7Up franchise. He added the Pepsi franchise there in 1950. His purchase of the local 7Up franchise in 1955 brought him back home to Abilene.

Musick sold his bottling interests in the late 1960s.

Now that his work with the association is done, he says he's looking forward to doing some reading and taking a long cruise with Shirley. Asked how he'll manage to refrain from getting involved in the soft drink business, he says: "I wish I had an answer to that."

STYLE: Board approves team teaching

(From 1B)

She said the concept of team teachers, or academic teams, is a positive approach to solving adjustment problems during the transition from elementary school to high school.

"The students who really struggle would benefit the most," she said. "This is more than a configuration. It is an approach to learning."

The principal said students in Project STYLE will attend a seven-period day and will have the same curriculum and number of teachers as their peers.

"The difference is that teachers will be able to coordinate their curriculum in several ways," Ms. Carrens said. "For example, they won't all give a test on Friday. With 1,100 students, no five teachers have the same students now."

Each team will consist of five teachers (math, English, science, social studies and reading). Team teachers will share a common planning period.

The program will target children considered at-risk according to state guidelines, those enrolled in basic courses, those who score below the 25 percentile on California Achievement Tests or have demonstrated non-mastery of all or some of the TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) program or by teacher recommendation.

Each student will be given a diagnostic test to determine their predominate style of learning — visual, auditory or tactile (touch).

Joyce Whitley, eighth grade team leader, said the idea is to discover how children learn best then modify teaching to suit the child. "If students don't learn the way we teach them, then we will teach them the way they learn."

"I don't want my students to just stay on grade level," Ms. Whitley said. "I want them out of basic classes."

Val Butler, seventh grade team teacher leader, said the teachers will be dealing with slower learners. "Notice I said 'slower,' not 'slow.' These children learn at a slower rate, many of them are concrete learners."

Ms. Butler said team teaching will create an atmosphere of "partnership" and will include the concept of peer tutoring.

"Basically, the concept will keep children from becoming lost or becoming a number," Ms. Carrens said. "There will be a group of adults who will have a sense of ownership or responsibility for a child."

"This will prevent children targeted at being at-risk from becoming even more at-risk or getting lost in the shuffle during the transition to seventh grade," she said.

MISD: Management plans OK'd

(From 1B)

In a recent news release Janke said the Lone Star State can become a leader in education by ending the way teachers are largely excluded from decision-making.

School-based management is gathering momentum across the United States, according to a recent issue of Time magazine. School districts in 27 states have experimented with it, with varying degrees of success.

Supporters of site-based management claim that it lifts teacher morale and allows flexibility within the schools, factors that improve learning.

Janke agreed. "You can't legislate greatness," he said. "Teachers must be an important part in the improvement of our educational system. We can become a leading state if we give a voice to the people who can make an improvement."

Midlanders trek 8 miles for MS society

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

About 1,000 Midlanders put on their walking shoes last weekend and trekked eight miles to raise funds for the Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Walkers sporting aqua-colored MS bandanas, congregated at the Museum of the Southwest, before beginning the 8-mile trek.

Jackie Manning, local MS coordinator, said organizers were pleased with the turnout, especially since this was the first time the annual national event was staged in Midland.

"We felt it was very successful," Ms. Manning said. "It impressed us a lot that all the walkers finished the walk, even those with children."

Ms. Manning said volunteers from throughout the community pitched in to provide entertainment. "We had entertainment all along the way right up to the finish line, including the Midland Community Theatre Singers at rest stop number one and Summer Mummers players at rest stop number two," she said.

The coordinator said the entertainers served to "cheer on" the walkers. Other performers included dancers, jazzercise groups, country and western singers, the Midland College Jazz Band, and Cliff Watson playing bagpipes.

The Sheriff Department's reserves provided traffic control. Other groups participating included Veterans of Foreign Wars Post #7208, Midland's M-Squad, Mache Kids, and the Greenwood Volunteer Fire Department.

"One of our most colorful groups of volunteers were the motorcyclists 'The Brotherhood of the Cross' from Odessa who provided rides to people and checked on the walkers," Ms. Manning said.

Special walkers included persons with mild cases of MS and family members walking for loved ones who have MS, the coordinator said.

Although funds raised haven't been totaled yet, Ms. Manning said 60 percent of the money raised will stay with the West Texas Chapter of MS to provide funding for services and educational materials. The remaining 40 percent of the proceeds goes directly to research.

Sponsors of the event included the Midland Reporter-Telegram, American Airlines, Subway Sandwiches of Midland and Odessa, Magic Radio 102.1 FM, KMID-TV, Diet Pepsi and Keebler Cookies.

Suit moved to federal court

Staff Report

The Midland County Attorney's Office has removed shooting victim Lola Jones' lawsuit against the county to U.S. District Court, records show.

The suit, originally filed Dec. 10, 1990, in 142nd State District Court, names Midland County, the Midland County Sheriff's Office, Sheriff Gary Painter and deputies Jerry Lee and Gary Lynn McLaughlin Jr. as defendants.

County Attorney Mark Dettman said he authorized the removal because the suit alleges civil rights violations on the part of the sheriff's office.

"It's a federal cause of action and it's more properly tried in a federal court," Dettman said. "It's routine for them."

Ms. Jones, 43, claims in the suit that the sheriff's office ignored her pleas for protection against harassment by her ex-boyfriend, Gary Fay Allison, who eventually was convicted of shooting her.

Allison is serving 20 years for attempted murder in connection with the Dec. 9, 1988, shooting. He pleaded guilty last May in 142nd District Court to shooting Ms. Jones in the head with a .25-caliber handgun.

DEATHS

Frances Mann

Services for Frances Whitley Mann of Stanton have been set for 11 a.m. Friday at the Ellis Chapel with Rev. Tim Swihart officiating. Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Mann

He died Monday at a local hospital.

Harold Freedman

Graveside services for Harold Gilbert "Hal" Freedman of Midland will be at 3 p.m. today at Resthaven North Mausoleum with Rabbi Larry Jacofsky of Dallas officiating. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

He died Tuesday at a local hospital.

He was born July 23, 1922, in Chicago, and at the age of 6 he moved to Dallas with his parents. He graduated from Forest Avenue High School and then attended Texas A&M.

He later enlisted in the U.S. Army and served during World War II in Japan. He was honorably discharged and went to school briefly at Southern Methodist University before transferring back to Texas A&M where he received his degree in petroleum engineering. He then returned to the service and was stationed at Fort Dix in New Jersey briefly.

While in the service, he met Lenora Carlin in New York City and they were married in Dallas on Nov. 14, 1948.

Freedman began to work for Conoco and they moved to Big Spring. They also lived in Bartlesville, Okla., and Wichita Falls, where they resided for 14 years. They moved to Midland in 1959, and he went to work for Wolfson Oil, where he was employed at the time of his death.

He was a member of Temple Beth El, B'nai B'rith and the Plaza Club.

Survivors include his wife; one son, Kerry Freedman of Corpus Christi; three daughters, Lori Cole of Coral Springs, Fla., Elizabeth Gabert of Schaumberg, Ill., and Mari Lester of Midland; one brother, Ira Freedman of Longview; one sister, Sally Kern of Clarendon, Ark.; five grandchildren and eight nieces and nephews.

She died Tuesday in Dallas.

Pallbearers will be D.G. Roberts, Robert Berger, Zay Kimberlin, Guy Jameson, William Franklin and L. Frank Mullins.

Honorary pallbearers will be Jack Moore, Ralph Lee, Frank Ittner, Dr. William C. Tucker, Dr. P.C. Rowand and Dr. J.C. Moudy.

Man held on attempted murder

Staff Report

ODESSA — A 25-year-old Odessa man was arrested Wednesday for attempted capital murder in connection with the stabbing of a store clerk during a January robbery, police officials said.

Jose Luis Hernandez, 1108 Drury Lane, remained in jail Wednesday in lieu of bond after appearing before a magistrate, police said.

Hernandez was apprehended at a residence at 504 Foster St. about 3:15 p.m. on an arrest warrant issued March 31.

Hernandez was wanted in connection with the stabbing of Don Clauson during a robbery of the 7-Eleven store at 10th Street and Grant Avenue on January 20, police said.

Clauson underwent surgery as a result of the injury and is still undergoing treatment.

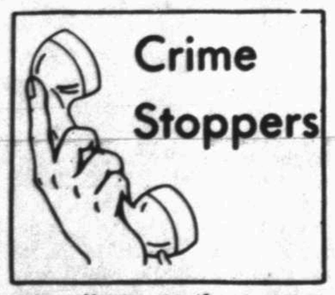
Homicide information sought



This week Crime Stoppers is seeking information on a homicide that occurred on Nov. 1, 1990, at 603 N. Madison St.

At about 6:37 a.m. on that date, officers were dispatched to the alley behind 603 N. Madison in reference to a body being found. Officers discovered a black man who had been shot in the face. He was later identified as James Posteal.

Investigators believe Posteal was involved in a altercation earlier that evening with several Hispanic men in which handguns were displayed. After this incident, Posteal left and returned sometime later that evening. Investigators believe the actual shooting may have occurred at a different location.

Investigators are particularly interested in locating either an eye witness or the weapon used.

At this time, there are no suspects in the crime. Crime Stoppers is offering up to $1,00 this week only to the first caller for information which leads to the arrest and indictment of those responsible. Call Crime Stoppers in Midland at 694-TIPS or in Odessa at 333-TIPS. All callers can remain anonymous.

SIFE chapter wins award

Staff Reports

A second runner-up trophy and $500 cash were awarded the Midland College SIFE Inc., chapter last week at a regional competition in Houston. The Midland chapter of Students In Free Enterprise was one of only two from community colleges to be entered in the judging.

Top prizes in the competition went to the University of Houston and to the University of Texas-Pan American.

Midland College SIFE members attending the competition included: Sally Hernandez, office technology major; Herb Clardy, business administration major; Andra Jones, communications major; Nancy Tranum, management major; Mike Saum, English major; and Angela Lewis, education major, all of Midland; Cathy McElwee, public relations major from Lubbock; and Norma Morales, legal assistant major from Lamesa.

IBM: County officials make promotional video

(From 1B)

Their remarks will be featured on the 30-minute video along with comments from satisfied IBM customers in Oakland, Calif., and Omaha, Neb.

Dick McMaster, an IBM executive who was in Midland to supervise the shooting, said his company produces such videos quarterly for computer merchants to use as promotional tools.

McMaster said he expects the video, which has been in production since February, to be complete and in distribution by next month. He said taping in Midland would wrap up Wednesday afternoon.

Bill Baxter, the tape's producer, said this is the second video project he has worked on for IBM.

"I've been in about six different locations in the two shoots I've been involved in, and Midland County really rolled out the carpet," Baxter said. "It's nice to see someone who's proud of their decision."

District Clerk Vivian Wood said the decision to replace the county's old IBM computer with an AS/400 was worthwhile.

"I think it will be just great once we get it all situated and get all the bugs worked out," she said.

The AS/400 will allow the use of optical disk technology for storage and retrieval of records, thus eliminating most of the paper files being stored in the courthouse.

Wright said the new computer will partially pay for itself by eliminating the need to remodel the clerk's office to create more space.

"They were going to require at least a 25 to 30 percent space increase," he said. "By going with the (optical disk) imaging system, we didn't have to increase the-...floor space in the District Clerk's Office at all."

He estimated the cost savings at $100,000.

Music recital held

Program targets gunmen

A program designed to target felons who use firearms in the commission of crimes is scheduled to begin today, the U.S. Attorney's Office in San Antonio announced.

Project Triggerlock, which will team federal and local authorities in special task forces, will ensure that "all crimes committed with firearms are moved to the highest level of the prosecution agenda," Attorney General Dick Thornburgh said in a news release.

Thornburgh said Triggerlock will eliminate plea bargaining in cases where firearms are used during violent crimes.

30 Midland students receive awards at regional science fair

Staff Report

Thirty awards were earned by Midland students in the Permian Basin Regional Science Fair last week at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

This year's science fair drew students, grades three through 12, from throughout the area. Nearly 1,000 students, parents, educators and interested area residents attended the fair and awards ceremonies Saturday.

Carol Rogers and Juan Vargas of Andrews High School took top honors, earning berths in the International Science Fair May 5-11, held in Orlando, Fla. Winning an alternate berth was Krista Stanton of Midland High School.

Rogers' experiment dealt with the behavioral and physiological effects of various scents on humans. Vargas' study explored the relationship of the various ingredients in beer on cholesterol levels of rats.

Stanton reported on the effects of slope on erosion, building a wave machine for this experiment.

State representative Gary Watkins was on hand for the event, stating, "These young men and women are the future of Texas and the United States."

Dr. Vincent Bash, a member of recently formed Midland Math and Science Boosters Club, noted that he was pleased at the showing of Midland students.

The Midland Math and Science Boosters Club was formed when it was discovered that no Midland ISD secondary students entered the 1990 Permian Basin Regional Science Fair.

In addition to Stanton's overall third prize recognition, 27 other awards were presented to Midland public school students and two to Midland private school students.

Midland winners were:

Burns McKinney, Midland High School, 1st place, chemistry; Robert Wiley, Lee High School, 2nd place, chemistry; Brian Pendleton, Lee High School, 3rd place, chemistry; Krista Stanton, Midland High School, 1st place tie, earth and space; Jay Blaylock, Lee High School, 1st place tie, earth and space; Natalie Reed, Lee Freshman High School, 3rd place, environmental sciences; and Katherine Prentice, Midland Freshman High School, 1st place, mathematics.

Others include John Evans, Midland High School, 1st place physics; Marc Tanberg, Midland High School, 2nd place, physics; Todd Manning, Midland High School, 3rd place tie, physics; John Waller, Midland High School, 3rd place tie, physics; Marc Tanberg, Midland High School, senior award, American Meterological Society; Kaley Conway, St. Ann's, junior award, American Meterological Society; and Marcie Watson, Goddard Junior High School, senior award, Eastman Kodak Co.

Others include Marcie Watson, Goddard Junior High School, Junior Engineering Technical Society; Barry Craig, Midland High School, senior award, National Aeronautics and Space Administration; David Bryant, Lee High School, senior award, National Aeronautics and Space Administration; Alison Vaden, Lee High School, senior award, National Aeronautics and Space Administration; Kristin Keller, Goddard Junior High School, junior award, National Aeronautics and Space Administration; Katherine Prentice, Midland Freshman High School, National Council of Teachers of Mathematics; Rush Moody, Rusk Elementary, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services; Kevin Barrett, Midland High School, U.S. Metric Association; and James Miller, Midland Christian School, U.S. Army Outstanding Award.

Others include Krista Stanton, Midland High School, 1st place, U.S. Marine Corps Award; Marc Tanberg, Midland High School, 2nd place, U.S. Marine Corps Award; Sarah Drescher, Goddard Junior High School, U.S. Army Engineering Award; Krista Stanton, Midland High School, U.S. Army Environmental Science Award; John Evans, Midland High School, U.S. Army Life Sciences Award; Tera Mander, Lee Freshman High School, U.S. Army Physical Sciences Award.

House bill specify penalties for illegal acts against animals

AUSTIN (AP) — The House on Wednesday tentatively adopted legislation that would specify penalties for those who interfere with animals used in agriculture, research, education or exhibitions.

The bill also would cover offenses involving facilities where such animals are kept.

More than 50 illegal acts had been committed against farm animals or animal research facilities in Texas, said the bill's sponsor, Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi.

The Senate earlier passed a similar bill, authored by Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, which would impose stiffer penalties for animal rights-type crimes.

But the House bill would follow the lesser penalties for offenses that are currently included in state law. For instance, criminal trespassing at an animal facility would be a class B misdemeanor, as would any other criminal trespass.

Rep. Steve Ogden sponsored an amendment to lower the penalties sought by Sims' bill.

Ogden said the measure would follow the current penal code — but send a message to animal rights activists.

"It makes a statement, which I agree with, that people that damage animals in legitimate animal research projects deserve to be punished, and that's against the public policy of Texas," said Ogden, R-Bryan.

But the House bill would follow the lesser penalties for offenses (against animals) that are currently included in state law.

Berlanga said that if the bill wins final passage from the House, it likely will go to a House-Senate conference committee to work out the differences in penalties.

The House also gave final approval, 90-54, to repeal the so-called LBJ Law, which allows candidates for president or vice-president to run for another office on the same Texas ballot.

Republicans have complained that Democrats kept the law on the books for Lyndon Johnson in 1960 and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen in 1988 but now want to repeal it because GOP Sen. Phil Gramm will be up for re-election in 1996, a presidential election year.

Also Wednesday, the House postponed consideration of a measure that would relieve Texas prisons of their duty to accept state inmates from county jails if doing so would violate a court order.

State penitentiaries are under federal order not to exceed 95 percent population capacity.

By Jean Carper

Coffee drinkers concerned about heart disease, take notice. Caffeine, while not causing heart disease, may help conceal it.

Carper

So says Dr. Luiz Belardinelli, professor of medicine at the University of Florida Medical School. He worries that caffeine may stifle chest pain (angina), a prime symptom of heart disease. Thus, a coffee-drinker might suffer small, silent heart attacks and not even notice. Such events are widespread, he says.

Here's how it could happen: Let's say you are overexerting. Your heart pumps out a chemical, called adenosine, to tell you to slow down. Adenosine accomplishes that by causing chest pain. But caffeine counteracts adenosine, blunting the sensation of pain. Dr. Belardinelli says two or three cups of coffee will help block adenosine's action.

"What caffeine does is override adenosine's heart-protective mechanism," he says.

Thus, although there's little reason to think caffeine triggers heart attacks, its role in masking chest pain may be reason enough for some to cut back, especially people with a history of angina, he says.

Hypo-allergenic tuna?

If you or your child have allergic reactions to eating fish, try eating canned tuna fish. It's perfectly safe, according to a surprising new report from the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine.

In a recent study, 30 children, 11 with known reactions to eating fish, were tested. All of the allergic children reacted to raw tuna extract and to other types of fish. But they showed no allergic response when they ate canned tuna.

Dr. Jan Bernhisel-Broadbent, a pediatric allergist at Hopkins, says the allergic-triggers are so-called glycoproteins in both raw and cooked tuna as well as other fish. But her study showed that the troublesome glycoproteins are not present in canned tuna.

She thinks something in the canning process breaks down tuna's glycoproteins into smaller molecules that escape detection by the body's immune surveillance system; thus, no reaction occurs.

However, she cautions children with milk-allergy to avoid water-packed tuna because it often contains casein, a milk derivative, as a flavoring. Safer, she says, are oil-packed tuna and cans labeled "dietetic" or "Kosher, parve."

Bad news bran

Suddenly loading up on high-fiber cereal could be a cure that's worse than the problem. So reports Dr. Daniel Miller, Georgetown University Hospital, in a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

It seems that a man was told by his physician to eat a large bowl of bran cereal every day as a cure for constipation. After 10 days on the high-fiber diet, the man had severe pain, nausea, vomiting and fever.

The cause, as revealed by X-rays, was a large obstruction in the small bowel. The high-fiber cereal had not made it through the colon. Surgeons removed an 18-inch-long mass of fibrous plant material.

Here's Dr. Miller's advice for avoiding such a complication. Don't switch suddenly from a low-fiber to a high-fiber diet. Gradually increase your fiber intake over a period of four to six weeks to give your system a chance to adapt. Be sure to drink lots of fluids to soften the fiber as it moves through the bowel.

Also, get fiber from a variety of sources, such as fruits, vegetables, legumes and whole-grain breads, instead of from just one super-fiber cereal.

Study: Disposables are healthier

CHICAGO (AP) — Banning disposable diapers in day care centers to reduce solid waste could increase sickness among babies, a new study says.

An environmental group and two day care center officials dismissed the findings, saying sanitation procedures and staff training are probably more important in preventing sickness than the type of diaper used.

The study linking cloth diapers to an increase in germs on toys and furniture was published in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

Most of the funding for the study came from Procter & Gamble Co., a leading maker of disposable diapers, but the lead researcher, Dr. Larry K. Pickering, said the company had no influence on the study design or data analysis. He called for further research to verify the findings.

Disposable diapers make up an estimated 2 percent of the millions of tons of solid waste that Americans dump each year into overflowing landfills, the study said. Several states are trying to ban use of disposables in day care centers.

Pickering, head of pediatric infectious diseases at the University of Texas Medical School in Houston, and the other researchers found significantly fewer fecal coliform bacteria on toys, diaper-changing pads and chairs in rooms where disposable diapers were used than in rooms where children wore the cloth variety.

Some forms of fecal coliform cause diarrhea, and the greater the fecal coliform contamination, the greater the risk of a diarrhea outbreak, Pickering said.

Jackie Prince, a spokeswoman for the Environmental Defense Fund in Washington, said the study was unlikely to change her organization's call for an end to use of disposable diapers.

"There really has not been a significant problem" with infections linked to cloth diapers in day care centers, she said Tuesday.

"The controlling factors are really things like how often is the baby changed? Does the care giver wash her hands between changing one baby and another?" she said.

A Chicago hospital's day care director agreed that cloth diapers are not the culprit in transmitting disease.

Furthermore, banning paper products in day care centers "probably won't even make the tiniest dent" in the solid waste problem, said Jane Grady, director of the Laurance Armour Day School at Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago.

The researchers took 2,946 specimens from objects and from the hands of care givers and children in 10 rooms at four day care centers in the Houston area. The samples were taken over nine weeks.

About 55 percent of the toys used by cloth-diapered children were contaminated with bacteria compared to 24 percent of the toys used by youngsters in disposable diapers. None of the children was wearing clothes.

Pickering said contamination decreased significantly when children in both groups wore clothes because the clothes helped contain the bacteria.

Grady noted that relatively few youngsters of diapering age — up to 2½ years — are in licensed day care centers. Most are in private homes or stay with relatives, she said.

Pickering said his findings would apply to home care only if many toddlers were present and could pass germs to other youngsters.

Elderly malnutrition causes health problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of senior citizens are malnourished and sick because they can't get food or those who care for them aren't making sure they eat, according to a report released last week.

It's not so much that older people require a special diet as that they are blocked from getting food, said a panel of experts on nutrition and aging that is trying to make nutrition screening a routine part of medical examinations.

Sometimes older people don't feel like eating when their tray is brought to them at the nursing home and it is taken away fully loaded. Sometimes medication causes loss of appetite or dental problems make eating unpleasant.

Some seniors who live alone can't get to the grocery store regularly. A sizable number of older people go full days without eating anything.

Though these problems seem obvious, health professionals don't regularly consider them when diagnosing health problems in their elderly patients, the panel said. It gathered to publicize a report by Johanna Dwyer, a nutrition professor at Tufts University.

Her study is the first attempt to explain how poor nutrition relates to geriatric health problems.

"Only in the past decade have the increases in aged people and their associated malnutrition problems become apparent," she said.

She said problems such as bone fractures, osteoporosis, dental disease, physical inactivity, depression and social isolation all are connected to poor nutrition.

Doctors should be sitting down with elderly patients and asking them what and how often they eat, said Dr. Gerald Keller of the American Academy of Family Physicians.

"If an elderly lady breaks her hip and already is at nutritional risk, she's not going to do well," said Keller. She probably won't be told what to eat once she gets home, he said.

Keller said that no survey has been done of the exact number of senior citizens who are malnourished, but he said 200,000 would probably be an underestimate.

Dwyer's report is being used as the basis of a conference of nutritionists, health professionals and geriatric experts meeting next week to figure out how to get doctors and elderly care facilities to emphasize proper nutrition.

They also will study whether legislative action is necessary.

Work, breast-feeding linked

BALTIMORE (NYT) — New mothers who work part-time are more likely to continue breast-feeding than mothers working full-time, according to a Baltimore study.

Researchers at Johns Hopkins University found that mothers who worked for 20 hours or less per week breast-fed more than those who resumed full-time employment. Some of the mothers resumed work as early as two to three months after giving birth.

THURSDAY, APRIL 11, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Large-scale financial deals will keep you busy. Good luck accelerates career progress in September. Extra funds will become available when you adopt innovative business practices next December. A life-altering romance will take you by surprise in January 1992. A sibling provides special help during a family crisis. Educational pursuits will be more important than ever in spring of 1992.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, actors Joel Grey and Peter Riegert, comedian Louise Lasser.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Influential people will approve your ideas if you choose the right words. Be diplomatic. Give your loved ones extra encouragement. Romance is on a delightful course.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You learn a valuable lesson from an authority figure. Avoid engaging in power plays. Team effort is needed to put over an important deal. Spiritual values help you get the job done.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Appealing to a wider audience will increase your income and prestige. Upgrading your home will add to its resale value. A heart-to-heart talk with loved one will solve a recurring problem.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Let your talents shine where more people can see them. Present an innovative idea to higher-ups. Avoid acting secretive around your colleagues; it will make them suspicious. Outline a new budget.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A good day to catch up on paperwork. Seize an opportunity to change your work schedule to accommodate unexpected jobs. Relax at home tonight with a good book or favorite video.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Sharing your knowledge with VIPs will make them trust you more. Skipping a social event might be wise even though you feel you should attend. Let your loving heart embrace your relatives.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Privacy remains an important consideration. Your financial ideas are right on track. Do not let strangers sway you. Romance could have its ups and downs. Play a waiting game.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Everything is coming up roses! Loved ones agree you are special. Use your strong bargaining position to promote a pet project. A gift or timely apology will salvage a relationship.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your image is very important where the public is concerned. Be careful not to act high and mighty. A long-cherished goal moves within reach. Do not neglect your loved ones' emotional needs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can get to the heart of a matter in a special way. Negotiate new terms — you will be pleasantly surprised. A talk sets you straight. Get together with someone new tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A commitment can be made without reservation. Join a team. A romantic attraction grows stronger. A good evening for socializing or athletics. Live it up!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The tides of prosperity begin to subside. Rechart your course. Keep everyone's interests at heart. A lawsuit will be settled in your favor. Host a small celebration at home tonight.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are eager, intellectual and very articulate. Parents can expect these youngsters to speak in complete sentences at an early age. They are both determined and competitive in school. Getting a good report card means little to the Aries unless it represents a challenge. Count on them to be very concerned with their class rank. They love to both entertain and be entertained. Witty and outgoing, they are the life of the party! Just hearing their melodious laughter cheers their fellow guests.

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	6 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♠ Study the bidding and play of this hand. Then decide who, if anyone, made any errors in either aspect of the game.

The auction was a matter of simple arithmetic. After South's one no trump opening bid, North knew that North-South held a minimum of 33 high-card points and a maximum of 35 in two balanced hands. That is enough for a small slam, but not sufficient for a grand, so North wasted no time in reaching the desired contract.

Declarer could count nine fast tricks and two more could be developed in hearts. The 12th would have to come from one of the minor suits—a 3-3 break in either or a successful finesse for the jack of diamonds if it doesn't drop doubled.

After winning the first trick in hand, declarer led a low heart to the jack and ace. East's club shift was taken in the closed hand, and declarer cashed out his major-suit winners and two more clubs. Although clubs did not break, declarer learned that West had started with six spades, two hearts and one club; hence, that defender held four diamonds. So declarer cashed the ace and king of diamonds and then took the proven finesse for the jack. Making six-odd.

Was there any error on the hand? Yes, but a very subtle one. By winning the ace of hearts early, East allowed declarer to obtain a complete count of the hand. Suppose that East were to allow declarer to win the first two heart tricks. Declarer will be able to find out that West started with six spades and one club, but won't be sure whether the red-suit distribution is 4-2 or 3-3. Those mathematically inclined will claim that West is slightly more likely to be 6-4-2-1 than 6-3-3-1, but the difference is slight. In any case, declarer is reduced to a guess rather than a sure thing.

Schwarzkopf agrees to be derby parade grand marshal

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf's itinerary will be closely guarded — as will the general — during his visit as grand marshal of the Kentucky Derby Festival Pegasus Parade.

Schwarzkopf, U.S. commander in the Gulf War, has tentatively agreed to lead the 1991 parade on May 2, festival officials said Tuesday.

Schwarzkopf

Schwarzkopf's attendance depends on conditions in the Middle East, said David W. Higgins, the festival's board chairman, and Daniel A. Mangeot, president of Kentucky Derby Festival Inc.

This year's parade is being dedicated to soldiers who took part in Operation Desert Storm.

The general's wife, Brenda — a horse-racing fan — is reported to be enthusiastic about coming to the Derby, said Festival board member Tom O'Hearn. "I think that was instrumental in getting him to come."

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Singer Eddie Fisher says $30,000 in cash, jewelry and other items was stolen from his suite at the Dunes Hotel where he is appearing.

Fisher, 62, a top pop singer during the 1950s, and his companion, Betty Lin, reported the theft to Las Vegas Metro Police.

Lin said she awoke Tuesday and discovered the theft, including $1,500 in cash, a $10,000 fur coat and a $10,000 pair of ruby cuff links.

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — The highborn Sydney Biddle Barrows doesn't mind one bit that she'll go down in history as the Mayflower Madam.

"Despite everything that's happened, it's still the best job I ever had," Barrows says with a smile.

Arrested in 1984 for running a high-class Manhattan escort service for over five years, Barrows, 39, is now on the lecture circuit and autographing books about her call-girl service.

The former debutante told a group of businesswomen Tuesday how she operated Chachet, $175-per-hour escort service in New York, and that it essentially was "just another business."

Barrows, who pleaded guilty in 1985 to a misdemeanor charge of promoting prostitution and paid a $5,000 fine, traces her ancestors back to the Mayflower.

NEW YORK (AP) — Susan Spencer, a CBS national correspondent since 1989, has been named White House correspondent for the network, CBS News President Eric Ober announced Wednesday.

Spencer joined CBS' Washington bureau as a reporter in July 1977 and was named a correspondent in 1978.

She was medical correspondent from 1986 to 1989, and anchored the Sunday edition of "CBS Evening News" from March 1988 to April 1989.

She covered the Democratic and Republican national conventions in 1988 and the May 1989 student uprising in China. Most recently, Spencer covered the Gulf War from Riyadh, Saudi Arabia.

BOSTON (AP) — Raymond Burr's Perry Mason is getting ready to go to court again, even though the actor wishes he'd cut the TV lawyer's career short.

Burr

Looking back, Burr said Tuesday, "One thing I wouldn't like to do over again is 10 years of Perry Mason. Five years would be all right."

Burr, 73, portrayed the defense attorney in a TV series from 1957 to 1966. Since 1985, Burr has played Mason in a string of two-hour specials.

He came to Boston on Tuesday to promote the latest, "The Case of the Glass Coffin," which airs on NBC in May.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Lynn Redgrave is putting some professional distance between herself and sister Vanessa.

L. Redgrave

Lynn fears that her sister's politicial outspokenness may harm her own career, the Ladies' Home Journal reported in its May issue. Lynn said she'll probably change her last name to Redgrave-Clark to avoid any confusion.

Vanessa publicly opposed Western intervention against Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, while Lynn supported President Bush's actions. Vanessa was recently dropped from a U.S. tour of the British comedy "Lettice and Lovage."

"I'm very proud I come from my family," Lynn said. "But Vanessa crossed a line. This is the strongest I've ever had to be in opposition to her."

The State

Base in San Angelo allegedly on closure list

'It's my feeling that when the list of base closures is made public Friday, that Goodfellow will not be on the list.

— Rep. Lamar Smith

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas congressmen were doing some furious last-minute lobbying Wednesday as the Defense Department drew up a list of bases to be closed, with rumors of possible targets centering on Air Force bases in Fort Worth, Austin, and San Angelo.

Despite tight security surrounding the list, rumors circulated on Capitol Hill that Bergstrom Air Force Base in Austin and Carswell Air Force Base in Fort Worth were among installations singled out by Defense Secretary Dick Cheney for closure.

Quoting unnamed sources, the Dallas Morning News reported Wednesday that Goodfellow Air Force Base near San Angelo was also on the Air Force's list of bases it was recommending Cheney include on the final list, which would then be submitted to an independent base-closing commission.

But Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, said that after contacting the Pentagon and the Air Force "it's my feeling that when the list of base closures is made public Friday, that Goodfellow will not be on the list." Goodfellow, San Angelo's largest employer, is in Smith's district.

Cheney had originally planned to reveal the tightly guarded list Thursday, but on Wednesday postponed the release until Friday.

"I'm not going to give up on anything until the list is public," Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said late Wednesday. "I figure I've got one more day than we thought we had, and I want to go back ... and make all the cases again for the Texas facilities that we've known now, for over a year, were vulnerable."

Also considered prime targets are installations in East and South Texas that had been targeted for closure or cutbacks by Cheney last year, including Longhorn Army Ammunition Plant in Karnack, Chase Field Naval Air Station in Beeville, and the distribution center at the Red River Depot in Texarkana. Also considered vulnerable is the nearly completed Naval Station Ingleside near Corpus Christi.

With tens of thousands of military personnel in Texas and dozens of installations, officials have cautioned that the state will not escape the Pentagon's efforts to cut 500,000 uniformed personnel over five years.

"There's no way there won't be a Texas base on it," Gramm said.

Carswell, with approximately 7,700 military and civilian employees, is a part of the Strategic Air Command and houses a fleet of B-52 bombers. Bergstrom, with 5,600 employees, is home to RF-4s, fighter jets fitted for reconnaissance missions. And Goodfellow, with 3,400 employees, provides technical and intelligence training.

'Killer' bees on way to Texas

■ Experts telling public not to be scared by the expected arrival of a swarm pf 'Africanized' bees.

N.Y. Times News Service

'We tell people that there is no need to panic, but they should take some precautions, such as getting away from a swarm...'

— Elba Quintero, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service

Each day in the Rio Grande Valley of Texas, television and radio ads warn that they are coming. But "don't panic," the ads say.

At the same time along the U.S.-Mexican border, government workers in pickup trucks and on horseback check hundreds of traps to see if they've captured any.

It's no longer a question of whether the ill- tempered insects known as "killer bees" will show up in Texas this year. It's only a question of when.

"We expect to find a swarm any day now," said Elba Quintero, a honeybee program manager for the federal Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service in Harlingen, Texas.

The first signs of an invasion came last October, when a swarm of 3,000 of the bees crossed from Mexico and tried to set up a hive near the Texas city of Hidalgo. Federal agriculture workers destroyed the swarm, but it marked the beginning of what scientists expect to be a spread of "Africanized" bees throughout the United States.

In Texas, the anticipated coming of the bees, which are so aggressive in their swarming behavior that they are popularly known as "killer bees," has caused public anxiety.

"Some people are very concerned that the bee will make it dangerous to go outside," said Ms. Quintero.

To ease the fears, she and other experts have recorded radio and TV announcements and written newspaper ads to correct what they say are misconceptions about the insect.

"We tell people that there is no need to panic, but they should take some precautions, such as getting away from a swarm if they spot one," she said. "We tell them they need to take the same precautions that they take to avoid rattlesnakes."

Africanized bees began terrorizing South America in 1957 when a breeding experiment — aimed at increased production of honey — went awry. A group of African bees escaped from a Brazilian lab and began breeding with domestic bees, resulting in a fierce hybrid prone to swarming and delivering multiple stings to victims. Hordes of the bees have since been moving north.

Africanized bees have hitchhiked on ships from Latin America into U.S. ports for many years.

The biggest concern among scientists and state agriculture officials in the South is that the Africanized bees will replace domestic bee colonies as they have in many Latin American regions. Nationwide, domestic honeybees pollinate $10 billion worth of crops and produce an average of 260 million pounds of honey annually.

Their venom is no more potent than that of other bees, researchers say. But the temperamental insect is more alert to movement, vibration and odors than domestic bees, and will attack an intruder in great numbers.

"In most cases, people can walk right up to domestic honeybee hives without getting stung," said Dr. Michael Breed of the University of Colorado and coauthor of the book, "The 'African' Honey Bee." "But Africanized bees have been known to respond to people approaching within 100 yards of a hive, stinging and chasing them for up to a mile."

Other researchers say flatly that the Africanized bee has gotten a bum rap.

"Africanized bees are aggressive, but they can be managed," said Dr. Roger A. Morse of Cornell University. "The Argentineans and Brazilians have proven that. Eighty percent of Argentina's honey is now produced without any problems by Africanized bees in Buenos Aires province.

"In Brazil, Africanized bees are making honey in large amounts in areas where it was never produced before, and people are living with these bees very nicely."

He said that, contrary to many reports, Africanized bees are more efficient at honey production in warm areas. In addition, they are resistant to a mite that has devastated domestic bees in some areas of the United States.

Dickey takes Tech reins

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — James Dickey knows his first assignment as head basketball coach at Texas Tech is to fill the stands at home games, and he said Wednesday a run-and-gun style offense ought to do the trick.

Dickey

Dickey, 37, who served one year as an assistant at Texas Tech, was promoted to head coach Wednesday, replacing Gerald Myers.

Myers agreed to step down after 20½ years and four consecutive losing seasons. Dickey is faced with rebuilding a once-prominent program that has fallen on hard times.

Myers left the school as the third winningest coach in Southwest Conference history and coached the Raiders to two regular season SWC titles and three SWC tournament crowns during his 20-year tenure.

But the Red Raiders, who have 10 scholarship players returning next year, are coming off their worst season ever, which included a school record 23 losses against only 8 wins.

Attendance has plummeted at Tech home games during the past four years, and many fans blamed the lack of interest on Myers' patient, half-court offense.

"We are going to play an entertaining style of basketball," Dickey said shortly after Tech Athletic Director T. Jones announced his promotion at a news conference.

"It's a players' game. It's going to be fast-paced. We are definitely going to run and take 3-pointers. I don't want the kids throwing the ball into the stands. We want to be under control and take good shots. But I want fans to go away thinking that Tech has given its all."

Dickey, 37, came to Tech as an assistant under Myers last year after eight years as an assistant under Eddie Sutton at Arkansas and Kentucky.

He served under Sutton at Arkansas from 1981-85 and then moved to Kentucky as Sutton's top assistant from 1985-89.

"I've had a lot of outstanding assistant coaches through the years, but none better than James Dickey," Sutton said after hearing of Dickey's promotion.

"He knows the game of basketball; he's a tireless worker; he's a great recruiter and he has always established a super rapport with the players who have played for him," Sutton said.

Before joining Sutton at Arkansas, Dickey was an assistant for two years at Central Arkansas, where he lettered four years in basketball before graduating in 1976.

Dickey was one of six candidates interviewed by Jones and the only one to be interviewed by school President Robert Lawless.

Lawless last week criticized Jones' search for a new coach as not being extensive enough. Jones defended the search, which included more than 50 applications from several NCAA Division I head and assistant coaches.

Lawless said Wednesday that he and the Tech Board of Regents unanimously approved Jones' recommendation.

Day suspended

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas basketball star Todd Day and three teammates were suspended from the team for a year for their part in a sexual incident at the athletic dormitory, sources said Wednesday.

The players can appeal the ruling of the All University Judicial Board to administrators. The ruling doesn't preclude the players from attending school, said two highly placed university sources, who spoke on condition they be given anonymity.

A 34-year-old Springdale, Ark., woman, who said she was sexually assaulted on Feb. 27, implicated four players. They admitted having sex with her but said she consented. Police said the woman was drunk. The local prosecutor said there wasn't enough evidence to prosecute the players.

School officials, saying federal law prohibits disclosure of any details of the internal investigation, have declined comment on action taken against the students.

The silence has drawn criticism from the public and concern from school boosters, who say the incident has tainted the reputation of the athletic and academic programs.

"The minimum effect of this would be to prohibit all of the players involved from either playing or practicing next year — for the full year," one of the sources said.

According to the sources, the suspensions were given to:

District netters convene

■ As the District 4-5A tennis tournament opens, a number of Midland players have an eye on the Region I tourney.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

All the long hours spent on practice, tournaments and travel by the rank and file of seven District 4-5A tennis teams will come to fruition for just a very few players this weekend as the district tennis tournament kicks off Friday at the Odessa College courts.

The annual two-day event, hosted this time around by Odessa High, will determine 4-5A's entrants in the Region I tourney two weeks hence in Lubbock, where the league's top two boys and girls singles players and its two best boys and girls doubles teams will compete for berths at the state tournament in Austin.

First-round action begins with girls singles at 9 a.m. Friday, followed by boys singles at 10:15 a.m., girls doubles at 11:30 a.m. and boys doubles at 12:45 p.m. Second-round play is scheduled for Friday afternoon. The semifinals will be decided beginning at 8:30 a.m. Saturday, and the finals and third-place games are slated to begin around 11 a.m. Saturday.

The District 4-5A coaches will meet tonight in Odessa to determine the

Boo opts for Ragin' Cajuns

■ MC basketball star Carroll 'Boo' Boudreaux surprises everyone by announcing he will attend Southwestern Louisiana.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland College's Carroll Boudreaux dropped a small bombshell Wednesday by picking Southwestern Louisiana as the school where he will play basketball the next two years.

Boudreaux has been courted and wooed by the likes of Nebraska, Louisiana State, Oklahoma and University of Nevada-Las Vegas, but the desire to return home seemed to carry the final impact for his decision.

"It was a difficult decision at first and there was a lot of pressure with different people telling me different things, but it was my decision and one I made to return home," Boudreaux said.

The Ragin' Cajuns of coach Marty Fletcher play in Layfayette, La., only 40 miles from Boudreaux' hometown of Cecilia, La.

"My family and friends haven't seen me play in two years, so I just want to go back home and be happy."

Boudreaux was not the only former Chaparral to sign with a major college Wednesday as Eugene Witherspoon, a 6-8 forward/center inked with the University of Illinois at Chicago. Witherspoon averaged 12.3 points a game for MC during the 1990-91 campaign and 7.7 rebounds.

Bear confident about Masters

Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Jack Nicklaus has a confident feeling going into his 33rd Masters, which begins today.

"I won't be surprised if I win," he said Wednesday.

"Do I expect to win? Half and half. I expect to have a good chance to win. The last couple of years I wouldn't have said that coming here."

Nicklaus boosted his confidence last week when he won the Tradition for the second year in a row, closing 66-67 to overcome a 12-shot deficit entering the last two rounds of the PGA Senior Tour event.

"Even though it was a Senior event, it was a golf tournament," Nicklaus said. "Any time you win a golf tournament it builds a little confidence."

Nicklaus

It's been exactly five years since Nicklaus last won an event on the regular PGA Tour. It came on this same Augusta National course, where at age 46, he won his sixth Masters — an all-time record.

It also lifted his total of major professonal championships to 18, including five PGA Championship titles, four U.S. Opens and three British Opens. He also won the U.S. Amateur crown twice.

"I'm playing fine, the golf course is terrific and I'm looking forward to the tournament very much," Nicklaus said.

Nicklaus was the only player to win the Masters two years in a row, turning that trick in 1965 and 1966, until Great Britain's Nick Faldo repeated last year.

Faldo will try to set a precedent this week with a third consecutive title.

"I never thought there was much pressure when I won two, but I missed the cut," Nicklaus said of his 1967 bid for three in a row when he missed several short putts during a second-round 79.

"In my own mind, the most difficult Masters to win is the first one," he said. "The next time you feel it's a heck of a lot easier. In '66, I didn't particularly play very well, but I still won the golf tournament.

"I think Faldo feels like it's him against the field," Nicklaus said. "I felt like I controlled it myself. If I played well, I should win."

Straw's bat wins over glove

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Darryl Strawberry's bat overcame his glove in his debut with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Strawberry dropped a fly ball in the third inning that led to two Atlanta runs, but went 2-for-4, drove in two runs and scored one as Los Angeles opened its season with a 6-4 victory over the Braves on Wednesday night.

Strawberry, who signed a five-year contract worth more than $20 million during the off-season after spending eight years with the New York Mets, drove in a first-inning run with a groundout and doubled in the final run in a three-run fifth inning.

Dodgers' starter Tim Belcher (1-0) allowed four hits and three runs, only one earned, in 7 1-3 innings. The right-hander struck out five and didn't walk a batter.

NL Roundup

Reds 6, Astros 5

CINCINNATI — Todd Benzinger drove in four runs and Chris Sabo hit a two-run homer in the seventh inning as Cincinnati overcame a three-run deficit to beat Houston.

Benzinger, who had failed to get an extra-base hit in spring training, had an RBI single, a two-run double and a run-scoring triple to lead the comeback.

Cubs 2, Cardinals 0

CHICAGO — Greg Maddux allowed five hits in eight innings and George Bell and Gary Scott drove in the runs Chicago beat St. Louis.

Maddux, who had eight complete games and two shutouts last season, struck out five and walked one, allowing only one runner to reach second base.

Padres 4, Giants 3

SAN DIEGO — Fred McGriff and Jerald Clark hit two-run homers as the San Diego Padres beat San Francisco in a game marred by a fourth-inning brawl.

The Giants' Kevin Mitchell, who homered off Bruce Hurst in the second inning, was ejected in the fourth when he charged Hurst and knocked him down on the mound with a body block after being hit by a pitch.

Pirates 6, Expos 3

PITTSBURGH — Bobby Bonilla had three hits and drove in two runs, and winning pitcher Zane Smith doubled and drove in a run as Pittsburgh beat Montreal.

Phillies 8, Mets 7

NEW YORK — John Kruk's run-scoring grounder with the bases loaded in the 10th inning gave Philadelphia a wild win over New York.

Associated Press

DETROIT — Scott Sanderson's no-hit bid was broken up by Tony Phillips' leadoff double in the ninth inning Wednesday as the New York Yankees beat the Detroit Tigers 4-0.

Phillips hit Sanderson's first pitch in the ninth off the screen in right field, just out of the reach of Jesse Barfield. Sanderson was then lifted for Greg Cadaret, who retired the side in order.

Sanderson, pitching his first game for the Yankees, was trying to throw the first Tiger Stadium no-hitter in 18 years. He also was bidding for the Yankees' first winning no-hitter since Dave Righetti's against Boston in 1983.

Blue Jays 5, Red Sox 3

TORONTO — Pat Tabler hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning, rallying Toronto over Boston as Midland rookie Mike Timlin picked up his first major league win.

The Blue Jays won two of three games in the opening series between the teams that dueled last year until the final day in the American League East. Boston won the championship, helped by a 10-3 season edge over the Blue Jays.

Timlin pitched a perfect eighth for the victory. Tom Henke got his second save in two days despite giving up two hits.

AL Roundup

Brewers 6, Rangers 0

ARLINGTON — Chris Bosio continued his April dominance, scattering four singles in eight innings, and Bill Spiers and Greg Vaughn homered as Milwaukee blanked Texas.

Bosio (1-0) is 14-2 lifetime in April, but only 38-46 in his career. He struck out six, walked two and allowed just one runner to reach second base.

Royals 1, Indians 0

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kevin Appier pitched eight shutout innings and Danny Tartabull drove in the only run as Kansas City beat Cleveland.

Appier, whose 2.76 ERA last year was fourth-best in the American League, struck out four and walked one. Jeff Montgomery pitched a hitless ninth for the save.

White Sox 2, Orioles 0

BALTIMORE — Greg Hibbard held Baltimore to three hits in eight innings and Bobby Thigpen got his first save of the season as Chicago completed a two-game sweep of the Orioles.

Scott Fletcher's two-run double in the sixth inning accounted for the only scoring. He finished 3-for-4 with two doubles.

Hibbard (1-0) walked four, struck out four and allowed only one runner to get as far as third base.

Twins 4, Athletics 1

OAKLAND, Calif. — Allan Anderson allowed two hits in eight innings and Brian Harper homered off Bob Welch as the Minnesota Twins rebounded from an opening night loss, stalling Rickey Henderson and the Oakland Athletics.

Henderson remained one shy of Lou Brock's all-time career stolen base record of 938. Henderson went 0-for-3 with an RBI groundout, and reached safely once.

Henderson walked leading off the fourth and took second when Dave Henderson grounded out, but was picked off when Anderson caught him leaning towards third.

TENNIS: Hopkins expected No. 1 seed

seedings.

While Midland High has a splendid chance of keeping its yearly string of district representatives alive with expected No. 1 seed Tracey Hopkins in girls singles, Midland Lee will enter the fray at the OC complex with a couple of post-district possibilities on the boys side.

Lee's Antwine Smith could be ranked as high as the No. 2 seed in boys singles, and he will be looking to reach the finals where probable No. 1 seed Patrick Root of San Angelo — last year's 4-5A runner-up to MHS' Harper Essex — hovers as the likely foe.

And the Rebels' tandem of senior Jason Gooch and junior Ben Bacon is after a return trip to the Region I extravaganza after taking 4-5A runner-up honors last season. Yet even with a regional round under their belts, Gooch and Bacon cannot afford to take the competition lightly in what the tennis coaches at both Midland schools say is one of the most wide-open fields in recent memory.

"Boys doubles is wide open," Lee coach Steve Buck said. "We've got a real good chance with Ben and Jason — they are certainly one of the top teams — but they had the luxury of playing a spoiler role last year.

"Now they have to play the other role," Buck said.

"I think it will come down to who wants it the most," said MHS coach Steve Hoover, who will send juniors Lanny Temple and George St. Clair in as his top doubles entry.

"There isn't a doubles team that's going to go in there and dominate," said Hoover, who also believes the Bulldogs' No. 2 team of senior Steven Jeffcoat and junior Gavin Hudgeons has a chance.

"Steven and Gavin have been a little deceptive this year because they've drawn the No. 1 seeds in almost every tournament we've played. But they won the Division II doubles in the Austin Tournament, and they were second in Abilene and Lubbock," Hoover said.

"We can name seeds, but any of five teams could do it."

Jay Enzer and Justin Cobb of San Angelo did it last weekend at the Abilene Invitational, where all the 4-5A schools were represented in a tune-up for the district tournament. Cobb and Enzer got by Temple and St. Clair 6-1, 6-4 in the final and could easily go into Friday's action as the top seeded team.

That No. 1 honor will also very likely go to MHS' Hopkins, who stormed to the Abilene Invitational singles title with a 2-6, 6-2, 6-3 win over Abilene High's Camille Prather in the finals.

"I think I should be the No. 1 seed because I think I've earned it," said Hopkins, who has relied on a strong baseline game to overcome both injuries and adversaries throughout the season.

"I'm trying to be more aggressive by turning more to a serve and volley style, but I played well this last tournament, and everybody in our district was there. It pretty much showed where I should be," she said.

"She's proven to everybody that she's the best in the district," Hoover said. "And I even think she's the top player in the region. It's just a matter of going out and performing when the pressure's on."

Senior Leslye Beck of Lee and MHS' Shawn Whelan, a junior, will join Odessa High's Molly Anderson and Odessa Permian's Amy Richter as other singles front-runners.

After Root and Smith, the boys singles looks fairly wide open, too. Senior Phillip Allison and sophomores Brett Shannon and Allan Neighbors will represent the Bulldogs. Abilene Cooper's Colin Harrison and Abilene High's Billy Wilkinson are other proven candidates.

"I see my main competition as Patrick Root from San Angelo, but Abilene High and Cooper also have tough singles players," said Smith, who fell in the district semifinals last year.

"I think the key for me reaching the finals is a consistent serve and keeping the momentum in my direction once I get ahead."

Another key is the Lee senior's health. Smith slipped four disks in his back and bruised a rib during a tournament in Uvalde earlier in the season.

"I'm 100-percent fine right now," Smith said. "I had a few sore muscles in my back, but they are healed and I'm ready to go."

Both Lee and MHS are young and inexperienced in girls doubles. MHS will send four sophomores into action as Kari Brewer and Jennifer Burkett team up, as will Shannah Burgin and Abby Geltemeyer.

The Lady Rebels will use senior Monita Poudyal, juniors Stacey Stroman and Monisa Poudyal and sophomores Wendy Hobbs and JoAnn Kelly. Coach Buck is still tinkering with the exact pairings, but he said the key to success for anyone this weekend may be in how they handle the pressure.

"So many of them put a lot of pressure on themselves for district," Buck said.

BOO: Family considered in decision

(From 1C)

Boudreaux, whose twin brother, Harold, plays for LSU, turned down the opportunity to play with his sibling and took the road that may lead him against his brother.

"My brother told me it was my decision and wanted me to do whatever I felt best," Boudreaux said. "It would have been nice to play with my brother and win a national championship, but I have to make the decision."

Boudreaux, who was an All-Conference selection in the Western Junior College Athletic Association and picked as the player of the year in the Texas JUCO ranks, averaged 21.4 points per game for MC in his one season and 9.4 rebounds.

"I went to Delgado (Junior College) in New Orleans my first year, but that was a mistake," Boudreaux said. "I wish I had played here two years. I wish I could come back to Midland College. I love the way Midland College treats its athletes and I love Coach (George) Walker (MC assistant coach)."

Walker and Boudreaux spent a couple of long nights weighing the offers Boudreaux was facing.

"We were up until the wee hours of the morning the night after the All-Star game (April 6) and again last night when he did most of the talking," Walker said. "It's Carroll's decision."

For Southwestern coach Fletcher, Boudreaux, at 6-9, 235 pounds, gives his team something it hasn't had.

"We've won 41 games in two year and have won at Kentucky and at Oklahoma, but we've done it with speed and quickness," Fletcher said. "Carroll potentially can be one of the best players in America. He can shoot outside and inside. He definitely gives us something we haven't had. He would be a great addition to any team in the land."

Southwestern is Division I in basketball and Division I-A in football. The school posted a 21-10 record this season as a member of the American South Conference. However, the American South and the Sun Belt conferences have just recently announced a merger.

"We don't even know the name of the conference yet, but I think it's going to be the American Sun Belt Conference," Fletcher said. "At any rate, it's going to be a good conference with teams like Lamar, New Orleans and South Alabama in it."

Boudreaux will still graduate from Midland College. He will need six hours this summer and plans to attend MC this summer to complete his degree work.

Trail Blazers sweep Texas

NBA Roundup

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — The Portland Trail Blazers won their 12th consecutive game and became the first NBA team since 1987 to sweep a three-game Texas series, defeating the San Antonio Spurs 105-100 Wednesday night behind Clyde Drexler's 22 points.

Not since Boston beat Dallas, Houston and San Antonio consecutively from Feb. 18-21, 1987 has a team repeated the feat. There were 43 intervening three-game Texas series before the Trail Blazers, who defeated Dallas on Sunday and Houston on Tuesday night, did it.

In 12 previous Texas series this season, opposing teams were a combined 7-29.

Cavaliers 94, Pistons 90

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Brad Daugherty scored 23 points and Larry Nance 22 as Cleveland beat Detroit, trimming the Pistons' lead over Milwaukee to one-half game in the Eastern Conference playoff race.

Darnell Valentine had 20 points and Daugherty grabbed 11 rebounds for the Cavaliers, who led by as many as 12 points before the Pistons closed within two in the final minute.

PHILADELPHIA — Ron Anderson had 25 points and 10 rebounds as Philadelphia beat New York, retaining its slim hopes of winning a homecourt edge in the NBA playoffs.

Bulls 101, Pacers 96

INDIANAPOLIS — Michael Jordan scored 10 of his 28 points in the fourth quarter and Chicago limited Indiana to just three baskets in the final six minutes for a victory over the Pacers.

Heat 112, Bullets 106

MIAMI — Rony Seikaly broke out of a slump with 27 points and 16 rebounds and Kevin Edwards converted two three-point plays in the fourth quarter as Miami defeated Washington.

Jazz 97, Mavericks 91

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone scored 12 of his 26 points in the decisive fourth quarter, and Utah rallied from a 19-point deficit to defeat the Dallas Mavericks.

John Stockton and Jeff Malone had 18 points each.

Sonics 140, Clippers 108

TACOMA, Wash. — Benoit Benjamin scored 22 points, and the Seattle SuperSonics set a franchise record for field-goal accuracy by making 63.5 percent of their shots.

NHL

Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Mike Craig and Mark Tinordi scored during Wayne Presley's second-period major penalty and Minnesota held the Chicago Blackhawks to 10 shots in the first two periods as the North Stars evened their NHL playoff series with a 3-1 victory on Wednesday night.

Neal Broten also scored for Minnesota, which sent the best-of-7 Norris Division series back to Chicago Stadium for Game 5 on Friday night. The sixth game will be Sunday at Met Center.

The Blackhawks led the league with 106 regular-season points and finished 38 ahead of fourth-place Minnesota.

The North Stars blew a 5-2 lead Monday but held on Wednesday despite allowing Steve Larmer's goal with 4:58 to play. Minnesota outshot Chicago 34-17 and has a 145-107 series advantage.

Jon Casey, pulled from Minnesota's net the last two games by coach Bob Gainey and criticized for allowing two weak goals in Monday's Game 3, was rarely tested until the third period.

Red Wings 4, Blues 3

DETROIT — Third-period goals by Rick Zombo and Brent Fedyk lifted Detroit over St. Louis, giving the Red Wings a 3-1 advantage in their NHL playoff series.

Brett Hull, who led the NHL with 86 regular-season goals, scored two third-period goals for the Blues, including his fifth of the series to narrow the score to 4-3 with 2:51 remaining. The Blues pulled Riendeau for an extra attacker with 1:00 remaining.

The best-of-7 Norris Division series resumes with Game 5 in St. Louis on Friday night. Only seven teams in NHL playoff history have rallied from a 3-1 deficit to win a series.

Oilers 5, Flames 2

Tikkanen and Mark Messier revived the Oilers' anemic power play, each scoring goals while Edmonton enjoyed the man advantage in the second period after the Flames took a 2-0 lead in the first.

Associated Press

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys will not be able obtain pre-draft contracts from all three of their first-round choices, according to a decision by the NFL commissioner Wednesday.

Commissioner Paul Tagliabue said that the team holding the first pick in the National Football League draft may negotiate a contract with a player if it chooses.

But Tagliabue, in New York, also ratified a decision made at league meetings barring a team without the first pick from talking contract with prospective draftees.

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones had planned to lobby the commissioner on a plan that would require pre-draft contracts from all three of the team's first-round choices.

But the pre-draft contract plan drew opposition around the league, and some observers predicted that Tagliabue would block the proposal.

The plan by Jones and coach Jimmy Johnson to get contracts before their choices were officially made in the April 21-22 draft would have ensured that all could participate in minicamps and training camp.

A spokeswoman for Johnson at the Cowboys' headquarters said Wednesday the coach would have no comment on the commissioner's decision. Jones did not immediately return a telephone call from The Associated Press.

The NFL's competition committee at last month's meetings had recommended that no negotiations take place with any player.

The New England Patriots, which have first pick in this year's draft, are expected to choose wide receiver Raghib Ismail of Notre Dame.

Prices climb

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices rallied Wednesday to their highest level in nearly two months, with crude futures closing above $21 per barrel as traders feared the nation's supply of gasoline was sinking ominously low.

The American Petroleum Institute reported the night before that the gasoline stockpile had fallen last week to 206.5 million barrels, not far above the level of 205 million barrels that is considered a bare minimum by the government.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in May settled at $21.05 per barrel, up 79 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. Oil last settled above $21 per barrel on Feb. 14, when it closed at $22.32 during the more volatile trading sessions of the Gulf War.

Getting near 205 million barrels does not necessarily mean shortages will develop, because the nation has plenty of crude oil on hand and the refinery capacity to make more gasoline.

Natural gas prices, which have been depressed for some time, fell again. For delivery in May, natural gas settled at $1.376, down 1.5 cents per 1,000 cubic feet.

Tandy suit

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A lawsuit over unused vacation pay will be settled by Tandy Corp., which has tentatively agreed to pay as much as $16 million to former California employees, the company said.

The tentative settlement was announced Tuesday by the company, which is based in Fort Worth, following a longstanding class action lawsuit.

Karl and Cathleen Czechowski of Bakersfield, Calif., in the 1988 lawsuit, contended that the company failed to pay accrued vacation pay to all departing employees in a violation of California law.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar rose broadly Wednesday, strengthened by heightened unrest in the Soviet Union and reports of large dollar purchases by a major Asian bank.

In London, the British pound fell to $1.7800 from $1.7900 late Tuesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared to late Tuesday's rates, included: 1.6800 German marks, up from 1.6655; 1.4295 Swiss francs, up from 1.4080; 5.6815 French francs, up from 5.6360; 1,246.00 Italian lire, up from 1,236.50; and 1.1513 Canadian dollars, down from 1.1525.

U.S. company to drill in Soviet Union

■ In agreeing to set up and operate two rigs in Western Siberia for a U.S.-Soviet joint venture, Parker Drilling has become the first drilling contractor to operate in the Soviet Unit.

By David Ivanovich
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON – Despite concerns the Soviets will institute a hefty tax on oil exports, Houston's Anglo-Suisse and its joint venture partners are proceeding with plans to drill for oil in Western Siberia.

Last fall, Anglo-Suisse, an independent oil company, teamed up with Phibro Energy of Greenwich, Conn., and Varyeganneftegaz, a Soviet oil and gas concern, to form White Nights Joint Enterprise, the first U.S.-Soviet drilling venture.

White Nights, which is half-owned by the Soviets and half-owned by the two U.S. companies, is taking over production at three Soviet oil fields near the Siberian town of Raduzhny: West Varyegan, Tagrinsk and Roslav.

On Tuesday, Parker Drilling Co. of Tulsa announced it had signed a three-year contract to set up and operate two state-of-the-art oil rigs for White Nights, making Parker the first U.S. drilling contractor to operate in the Soviet Union. Terms of the deal were not disclosed.

Parker will ship one rig from the Anadarko Basin in western Oklahoma, while the other rig will come from Singapore. Drilling with the new rigs is scheduled to begin in July.

Jay McGee, vice president of exploration production for Anglo-Suisse, said Parker was chosen because "they're a strong company. They had the rigs we required." Parker has operated in 43 different countries, including China.

Jim Linn, Parker's senior vice president of operations, said his company will send over 15- to 20-member crews, who will work in Siberia in 28-day shifts to install and man the rigs. The U.S. crews will work with about 400 Soviets at the sites.

The three oil fields produce only about 20,000 barrels a day, said a Phibro official, who declined to be identified. By the middle of the decade, White Nights hopes the three fields will produce about 150,000 barrels a day.

White Nights workers are busy trying to repair non-producing wells at the sites while they await the Parker equipment. "We are proceeding full speed ahead," Linn said.

But all work could come to a halt if the Soviets try to enforce a new law that would impose a whopping 40 percent tax on oil exports. The law is causing much confusion, leaving White Nights officials uncertain whether the new regulation applies to their joint venture.

"That tax is a strange beast," the Phibro official said. "It shows up one day and is gone the next. ... We're concerned about the tax, but we're moving forward despite the fact it's out there."

If the Soviets do try to collect the tax, they will have to drill for oil without U.S. partners, White Nights officials said.

"The bottom line is, if they're going to tax joint ventures in this fashion, Western companies will withdraw from the Soviet Union," the Phibro official said. "And our feeling is the various ministries recognize this, and they want to see Western participation, so it will go away – eventually."

The landmark Plaza Hotel would be converted into luxury condominiums of owner Donald Trump has his way. The sale of 800 rooms could bring him $750 million.

Trump plans to turn Plaza into condominiums

■ Donald Trump plans to make most of the Plaza Hotel rooms into condominiums, while some rooms would continue to operate as hotel rooms.

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — If Donald Trump's latest plan goes through, most of the rooms at the Plaza Hotel will be converted into condominium units.

Trump and some of his bankers Monday confirmed the existence of the conversion plan, which is subject to the approval of the New York State attorney general's office. The plan has not yet been filed with the attorney general's office, but a filing is expected within the next 60 days.

Even by New York standards, the prices will be astronomical, as Trump seeks to reap some extraordinary benefits from the New York landmark he bought for about $390 million three years ago.

If the plan goes through, the Plaza will continue to operate as a hotel, but some of its rooms will no longer be available to the public. Some rooms, though, would continue to be operated as hotel rooms even after they were sold to private buyers.

The least expensive room in the Plaza now rents for $175 a night, and among its standard suites the most expensive is about $1,400 a night.

Trump and Stephen F. Bollenbach, his chief financial officer, have developed the plan at a time when Trump, badly short of cash, is facing mounting pressure from his bank lenders to sell assets.

The money from selling the condominiums would be used in part to pay off the $300 million mortgage on the property, pay down some of Trump's other debts and provide millions of dollars for him.

Local aviation firms merge, change name

■ Two local aviation firms have been merged to form Avion Flight Centre Inc. at Midland International Airport.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

Betona Aviation Inc., based at Midland International Airport, has concluded its purchase of Rich-Air Co. also based at the Midland airport and simultaneously changed its name to Avion Flight Centre Inc. it was announced Wednesday.

Charles R. Perry, chairman of the board of Avion, said he saw great opportunity for growth at Midland International. "The Confederate Air Force should bring lots of business year round and especially during the air shows," said Perry. Over 500 private plane are expected to fly in for the annual CAF shows.

Perry said there was also an on-going promotion and advertising campaign designed to make Midland a refueling stop for private planes flying from coast to coast.

"We are billing the airport as an ideal fuel stop because of good weather, lack of traffic and quick service," said Perry. He noted that military refueling at Midland International was also increasing for the same reasons.

Perry also pointed out that a number of aviation-related businesses were being sought for the airport which could improve the private aviation business at the airport.

Perry said the purchase of Rich Air would provide the company facilities for expansion. Betona which had offered services at Midland International for the past five years had enjoyed a growth rate of 80 percent annually compounded. Rich-Air, formerly owned by Richard Henderson had offered fuel and hangar storage services at Midland International Airport for the past 30 years.

Perry said Rich-Air would bring a wealth of experience and tradition to the new operation and that Betona would bring a broad variety of new, innovative procedures, equipment and marketing procedures to Avion.

He added that most of the employees of the two companies would be retained as employees of Avion, which is a distributor of Triton aviation fuels. Avion management includes: Charles T. (Tom) Perry, president and chief executive officer, and Charles R. Perry, chairman and chief financial officer. Avion will be a unit of the Charles R. Perry family which also owns Perry Management Inc., Rivercourse Development, Perry Gas Companies and Perry Consultants Inc.

Revlon sells two units

NEW YORK (AP) — Cosmetics giant Revlon Inc. is selling its Max Factor division and its Betrix subsidiary in Germany to Procter & Gamble for $1.14 billion, Procter & Gamble announced today.

The transaction will give Revlon badly needed cash to help juggle a heavy debt load. It also will significantly expand Procter & Gamble's share of the cosmetics industry.

Revlon's Max Factor division includes products such as the Almay line of hypoallergenic cosmetics and the Max Factor brand of makeup. Its annual 1990 sales were estimated at $621 million.

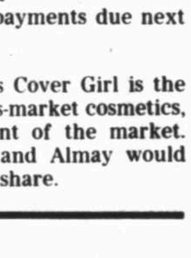
Procter & Gamble is also acquiring manufacturing plants in Japan, Britain, Germany and Mexico.



Perelman

Revlon, headed by Ronald O. Perelman, has been deeply in debt since Perelman acquired it in 1985 through his privately held Pantry Pride Inc. after a bitter takeover fight.

Proceeds from the sale announced today could help Revlon meet an estimated $816 million in loan payments due next year.

Procter & Gamble's Cover Girl is the leading brand of mass-market cosmetics, with about 23 percent of the market. Adding Max Factor and Almay would give it a 30 percent share.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Should investor roll over CD or put in annuity

By Bill Doyle

Q. On April 6, 1990, I put $53,000 into an insurance company's flexible premium deferred annuity into which I can make additional payments at any time. At the end of last year, the annuity's accumulated value was $56,322.50. I have a $42,000 certificate of deposit coming due and wonder if it would be advisable to put that money into the annuity.

Doyle

My husband is retired and receiving a good pension. I'm still working. Our children are married and doing well. Enclosed is a copy of the annuity contract and other literature about it. How safe is this annuity?

A. There is very little risk involved in it. The company with which you have the annuity has been dubbed "A plus (Superior)" by A. M. Best, the well-known insurance rating service. Just be aware that doesn't mean your annuity is absolutely free from risk. Best has been known to goof by giving high ratings to insurers that got into financial trouble shortly thereafter.

As annuities go, yours has some good points. The contract guarantees interest will accumulate at no lower than 5.5 percent annually. On some annuities, the guaranteed rate is lower. In recent years, the actual accumulation rates have been higher. Based on the amount you originally put in and the accumulated value approximately nine months later, a quick calculation indicates the initial year's gain in value was about 9 percent.

But don't expect that to continue. Now that interest rates in general have fallen, most insurance companies are cutting the accumulation rates on annuities and cash value life policies. The rate on your annuity can be changed every three months.

Some annuities have escape clauses, allowing them to be cashed in — without penalty — when and if there are sharp cuts in accumulation rates. There's no sign of an escape clause in the literature you sent along.

Although you can withdraw up to 10 percent of the annuity's cash value annually without a company termination charge, you'll be socked with big company penalties if you withdraw more. The penalty rate started at 10 percent during the first year the annuity was in force and declines by one percentage point annually until it disappears. That's a stiff rear-end load.

Unless you are in the 28 or 31 percent federal income tax bracket and want to keep the accumulating annuity interest deferred from tax, you would be much better advised to put the $42,000 from your maturing CD right back into another CD.

Q. An insurance agent assures me the annuities offered by his company are "no load," meaning there is no cost to purchasers. He points out that the only deduction from money I pay in will be for premium taxes, which cannot be avoided. All my other money will be credited to the annuity's accumulated value, on which interest will build up.

There is a termination charge beginning at 10 percent but phasing out after nine years. If I don't surrender the annuity during that time, no charge. Don't you agree this is too good to pass up?

A. If you swallowed all that, I'll bet you already have eaten every bit of candy the Easter Bunny left.

The Securities and Exchange Commission does not allow mutual funds with contingent deferred sales charges — the equivalent of termination charges — to call themselves no-load funds. Insurance companies escape that SEC dictum on fixed annuities, because they are regulated by state insurance departments.

"Load" is slang for commission, whether applied up front at the time of purchase or out back when shares are redeemed or annuities are surrendered. An insurance company with annuities such as you mention pays commissions to sales people at the time of purchase and recoups that money from termination charges and/or the difference between the interest credited on the annuities and the higher interest the company receives on its investments.

N.Y. Times News Service

Mesa Limited Partnership, the Dallas energy company headed by the outspoken Boone Pickens, is making both a political and environmental pitch in its 1990 annual report being mailed to 175,000 shareholders.

Tucked inside the report's front page are detachable letters addressed to Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., chairman of the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, and Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Commmittee on Energy and Commerce.

The letters urge the two politicians, who are playing leading roles in the debate over national energy legislation, to push for expanded use of natural gas as a transportation fuel.

Specifically, the letters urge that the federal government "lead by example" by replacing about 500,000 gasoline-powered vehicles in the federal fleet with natural gas-powered vehicles.

The United States could reduce its dependence on Middle East oil by encouraging "greater use of our vast, domestic reserves of natural gas," Mesa maintains.

The letters, slightly larger than a typical postcard, have a space where they can be signed by shareholders and bear the mailing address of the congressmen on back.

Pickens, in a telephone interview Monday, said he thinks the letters could prove an effective tool to promote natural gas because "if there's one thing you can count on with congressmen, it's that they're going to be sensitive to (public opinion)."

Natural gas is increasingly being touted as a clean-burning, domestically abundant fuel that has been underused.

Greater use of gas could "help the (petroleum) industry and help our country," Pickens said.

In addition to making the political pitch to Johnston and Dingell, Mesa sought to score environmental points by stressing that its annual report is, for the first time, printed on recycled paper.

What's more, the report was printed at a lower cost than the previous Mesa annual report, said the company, which has headquarters in Dallas and has substantial operations in Amarillo, Texas.

Mesa has ample reason to emphasize both lower company expenditures and the increased use of natural gas.

Although Pickens, Mesa's general partner, is customarily described as an "oilman," his company is primarily a natural gas producer. About 75 percent of Mesa's reserves are in natural gas.

The company has been crippled the past two years by depressed natural gas prices. Last year, it posted a net loss of $208.9 million on revenues of $329.6 million, after losing $63 million on revenues of $326.9 million in 1989.

In its annual report, Mesa said that its cash flow from operating activities "is not expected to be sufficient to fund required principal payments" on its debt (totaling $161 million this year and $202 million in 1992) and capital expenditures expected to total $33 million this year.

Mesa said it will reduce its debt through the first half of this year with sales of oil and gas properties totaling about $450 million. The sales were previously announced.

Pickens said he is expecting another poor financial performance for Mesa this year.

Unless natural gas prices make an unexpectedly sharp rise, "there's no way we can make money," he said.

Natural gas prices are currently at a depressed level of about $1.20 per 1,000 cubic feet on the spot market. For Mesa to turn a profit, prices would need to average $1.80 to $2, he said.

Pickens also said Monday that Mesa soon will move 45 to 50 employees from Amarillo to Dallas. Those moving would include various company officers, petroleum engineers and members of the company's legal and gas marketing departments.

That move will increase Mesa's Dallas area employment to about 100 and reduce its Amarillo employment to about 200, Pickens said.

DEVELOPMENT WELLS

Environmentalists, Lujan clash over ANWR drilling

DALLAS (AP) — Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan Jr. promoted oil exploration in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to petroleum geologists Tuesday.

Broadened exploration of the refuge, called ANWR, is a key component of President Bush's proposed national energy strategy.

Lujan told the American Association of Petroleum Geologists that more exploration could start in the refuge later this year. "I haven't been this confident in a long time," he said.

But shortly after Lujan's speech, in a first for the association, a major environmental leader took the podium and assailed ANWR development as "wrongheaded."

"It's important to preserve certain parts of the earth that are so unique and so fragile that once you drill for oil they're gone," said Peter Berle, president of the National Audubon Society. "Those are the last places you should go rather than the first place."

Berle's appearance marks a shift in environmental awareness for the 34,000-member association, president Jim Gibbs said.

"One of the positive things that the environmental movement has done is to raise the public's consciousness and also the industry's consciousness to some very important issues," said Gibbs, who is also an independent oil producer in Dallas.

"We need to integrate those concerns into our deliberations so that we more responsibly explore for and develop the reserves that we have."

The association is considering creating a division of environmental geosciences to follow energy and environmental issues more closely, he said.

"Geologists are by nature conservationists. That's part of what attracted us to this profession," said Thomas Rollins of Rollins Resources in Houston, president of the Texas Nature Conservancy and AAPG member since 1953.

"Understanding land forms and how they're created and understanding what geologic time is as opposed to elementary time, we're able to see these aspects," Rollins said.

Berle said he was delighted to be invited to the convention, attended by 8,000 geologists.

"We all share the earth," Berle said. "We may have different views about how to make it work in the most constructive fashion. But people who spend their time thinking about natural resources, who get out as much as geologists do, ought be environmentalists and a lot of them are."

Broader exploration of the ANWR must begin this year because it will be politically difficult in 1992, an election year, Lujan said.

Lujan noted only 1 million acres of the refuge's 18 million acres would be subject to exploration and potential production. He said the Interior Department estimates the probability of finding substantial oil in ANWR is 46 percent. The estimate went up in February from 19 percent.

"If we couldn't do it in an environmentally sound manner, then of course we would not support it," Lujan said.

But Berle said, "Frankly, it's wrongheaded."

"You can produce more oil for any particular purpose that you may seek by increasing the efficiency of the American automobile fleet by as little as 1½ miles to the gallon," he said.

ANALYSIS

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 45.54 points on Tuesday, slipped another 1.24 to 2,871.78 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Losers slightly outnumbered gainers in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 719 up, 766 down and 502 unchanged.

Analysts said investors grew restive Tuesday after it became evident that the Federal Reserve wasn't ready to take new steps toward easier credit conditions.

In addition, the market faces a test of its optimism over the next few weeks as companies make their earnings reports for the first quarter, a period of generally difficult business conditions.

But hopes persisted that the economy will soon show increasing signs of recovery from the recession.

Traders of that belief appeared to shore up the market today, buying stocks whose prices have pulled back in recent sessions.

Bank of New York fell 1 to 26⅛ on top of a 2⅛-point drop Tuesday, when the company reported a $63 million loss for the first quarter and reduced its dividend.

By contrast, Motorola, which posted a smaller quarterly earnings decline than some analysts had expected, climbed 4¾ to 60⅞.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks slipped .15 to 204.59.

American Airlines' trip to London gets bumpy

NEW YORK (AP) — California investor Kirk Kerkorian's interest in Trans World Airlines has become a wild card in the dramatic reshuffling of trans-Atlantic air travel.

By persuading the Transportation Department to listen to his ideas on buying and rebuilding TWA, Kerkorian has dealt at least a temporary setback to American Airlines, the nation's biggest carrier, which has agreed to pay $445 million for six lucrative TWA London routes.

The government on Wednesday put American's plans to get into London's Heathrow Airport on hold by saying it wanted Kerkorian to present a detailed plan for making TWA a viable carrier. Two days earlier, Kerkorian said it would take a complete buyout of TWA to keep it from being shut down and sold off by owner Carl Icahn.

Meanwhile, United Airlines, the second largest carrier and American's top rival, has already begun flying into London Heathrow, aviation's dominant gateway to Europe, on routes it bought from Pan American World Airways.

Those in the industry have for months viewed Pan Am's transfer of London routes to United and TWA's transfer of London routes to American as a Darwinian survival of the fittest, with the strong carriers getting stronger at the expense of the weak.

Now, American finds itself mired in delays that it blames on an attempt by Kerkorian to make TWA a takeover target and political pressures from Midwestern congressmen who want to keep TWA intact.

"It just puts us at a tremendous competitive disadvantage with United, who is already flying their routes," American spokesman John Hotard said Wednesday. "If for some reason, we're not allowed to sell (tickets to Heathrow) in the next six weeks, we've lost the summer traffic."

United has declined to comment on whether its head start means much. Analysts have said American could catch up after a brief delay.

But should the TWA deal be put off even longer, American could find itself in the unenviable position of taking over the London routes heading into next winter, when it could be expensive to fly lightly filled planes across the ocean, Hotard said.

Airline analysts said it was wise for the Transportation Department to listen to Kerkorian, whose Tracinda Corp. wrote Transportation Secretary Samuel K. Skinner on Monday to say it wanted to team up with TWA's unions to buy the carrier and rebuild it under new management.

TWA is one of the nation's most troubled airlines, and Kerkorian warned that if the London routes were sold, it would have to stop flying.

American has warned the politicians that they may be improperly meddling with what it calls a firm contract with TWA.

Even if Kerkorian were to buy TWA, which would be no easy task, he would face an extremely difficult battle in trying to compete with United over the Atlantic, analysts said. TWA and Pan Am were unable to make the best use of their London routes because they lacked strong domestic route structures for picking up passengers around the United States.

Eye for detail resulted in pension suit

By Jim Zook
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON – About 40,000 people will divide approximately $205 million because Dean Borst invested a buck more than five years ago.

Borst wanted the full story on the company that spent $13.3 billion to buy Gulf Oil Corp., his employer of 22 years.

"I saw that they hadn't placed any money in the thing, but the amount of money in it kept growing and growing," said Borst, 55, now a home builder in suburban Pittsburgh. "That's why I knew there was a surplus in the fund, and everybody's share should have been larger."

Under the original Gulf pension program, if the plan were terminated, any money beyond what would be needed to pay pensioners would be distributed among all employees.

That is a $672 million detail that some former Gulf employees say was intentionally and unjustly overlooked in the minutiae of the 1984 merger of Chevron and Gulf.

The claim for more than $672 million is based on an actuary's calculations of the amount of assets exceeding liabilities in the pension fund on the date the corporate merger became final.

The ex-Gulf employees say Chevron management wanted to divert those funds for other corporate purposes – such as putting a dent in the billions of dollars of debt it incurred to buy Gulf.

It is a detail they asked U.S. District Judge Simeon Lake of Houston to clarify in the biggest class-action pension suit in history.

On Wednesday, Judge Lake issued a 143-page opinion ordering Chevron to pay the 40,000 former Gulf employees and their families about $180 million in back pension benefits. This is in addition to a $25 million settlement reached in January by Chevron and some Gulf employees fired between Jan. 1, 1984 and June 30, 1986.

Chevron claims that the Gulf plan was merged with its own but never terminated and that it made no move to divert those pension funds.

"Every person who has retired and who is eligible for a pension from Gulf has been paid their pension," said Chevron attorney William G. Duck, a former Gulf employee. "Gulf retirees have been maintained in all of the health plans, life insurance plans and medical plans that are applicable to people who are retired."

Former Gulf employees from Texas, Louisiana and the company's home state of Pennsylvania said pride in their company faded to disillusionment because management did not protect many key elements of their employee benefits package after the merger.

"It was truly a life-shattering experience for these people," plaintiffs' attorney H. Lee Godfrey said.

"They all tend to be people of modest means," he said. ... These are not people making arrangements for their retirement beyond what they've invested in this plan."

From oil-field hands to chemists to quality control personnel, they all believed Gulf management would take good care of its own. In the end, workers like Derrell Smith of Orange, Texas, said they felt betrayed.

"Each benefit you had with Gulf was a part of your salary," said Smith, who retired last year after 32 years with Gulf and Chevron. "If (the surplus) is part of my salary, that surplus is part of my money."

Gulf was spawned by the legendary Spindletop gusher near Beaumont, Texas, in 1901. It eventually grew into one of the industry's powerful Seven Sisters.

With the acquisition of bountiful foreign holdings, Gulf peaked as the world's second-largest seller of crude oil. But the mid-1970s nationalization of Kuwaiti and Venezuelan oil fields staggered Gulf, dropping it to No. 5 among crude producers.

Through Gulf's highs and lows, its career employees developed tremendous faith in their company. Among the features that bred this loyalty was the employee benefits package.

The provision returning excess assets to the employees in the event of a plan termination was rare for corporate pension funds. By comparison, the Chevron plan returns excess assets to the corporation if it is ever terminated, a more common approach.

Gulf management regularly pumped into its pension fund several million dollars a year more than needed to cover the plan's liabilities. James Lee, Gulf chairman at the time of the merger who became a Chevron vice chairman before his retirement, said that was a protection for Gulf employees.

TRUMP: Funds would pay off debt

(From 6C)

Ivana Trump, the developer's former wife, who is now in charge of running the hotel, will soon be removed from that position, a person in Trump Organization said.

Out of the Plaza's 813 rooms, nearly 800 condominium units would be created, some of which would still function as hotel rooms part of the year.

Although the hotel, which faces Central Park in Manhattan, is a landmark, the conversion plan will not require the approval of the city's Landmarks Commission because no structural changes would be made on the building.

Some time ago Trump received permission from the commission to build 18 apartments on top of the hotel in space that is now essentially an attic. The developer plans to build large apartments in this space that would be among the highest-priced condominiums.

The conversion plan calls for the Plaza to be divided into two operations.

The commercial unit would be the hotel, restaurants, retail space, and ballrooms and would be owned by Trump; the current hotel rooms would make up the second unit. These rooms would be sold to buyers in their present condition. No additions or joinings of rooms to create larger units would be allowed.

Owners of the units would have use of all hotel services, like maid service and a concierge.

The hotel would continue to be run by a Trump company.

The plan calls for the condominium prices to average $1,500 to $1,600 a square foot, with the larger hotel suites that overlook Central Park selling for substantially more, Bollenbach said. Thus the small units, around 500 square feet, would probably sell for about $750,000 and the largest for several million dollars.

By contrast, a typical 1,100-square-foot one-bedroom apartment in a prime residential building, like Metropolitan Tower, a residential skyscraper near Carnegie Hall, or Trump Tower and Olympic Tower, both on Fifth Avenue, averages between $530,000 and $600,000.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company has filed two separate applications with the Public Utility Commission of Texas to introduce two new optional directory services. One service is Directory Assistance Call Completion (DACC) and the other service is Multiple List Directory Assistance (MLDA).

DACC is an optional service that provides customers the option of having their Directory Assistance call completed to the requested number (when they call Directory Assistance for a number) by either the Directory Assistance operator or a mechanized audio response system.

The proposed rates* for fully-automated DACC calls are: $.30 if the call is sent paid or billed to a calling card, $1.00 if the call is collect or billed to a third number and $.25 from a coin telephone.

The proposed rates* for semi-automated (operator assisted) DACC calls are: $.85 for calls that are sent paid or billed to a calling card, $1.20 if the call is collect or billed to a third number and $2.60 for a person-to-person call.

Multiple List Directory Assistance (MLDA) allows the customer to request more than two listing requests per call to Directory Assistance. Customers can either call on "demand" and receive up to 10 listings, or schedule an "appointment" and receive the assistance of a Directory Assistance operator for as long as required. The rates for "demand" MLDA are $.30 per listing request (after applicable allowances), with a maximum of 10 listing requests per call. The rates for "appointment" MLDA are $1.00 per minute, with a 15-minute minimum.

The optional services DACC and MLDA are intended for use by both residence and business customers. Those persons who qualify for exemption of Directory Assistance charges because of visual or physical handicaps will be able to use DACC and "demand" MLDA free of charge. If approved by the commission, DACC and MLDA will be available beginning May 13, 1991. First-year projected revenues for DACC are approximately $9.6 million. First-year projected revenues for MLDA are approximately $1.7 million.

Persons who wish to comment on these applications should notify the commission by May 3, 1991. Requests for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, or you may call the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Southwestern Bell Telephone

*The charges for DACC are in addition to the charge for the Directory Assistance Listing (if applicable) and/or any local or intraLATA toll charges that would apply to the completed call.

Fashions show 'The Way We Wore'

By Linda Anderson
Staff Writer

Human nature may not change, but fashions certainly do. A nostalgic look back at styles from the pre-Civil War years to the 1930s is the focus of "The Way We Wore" fashion show and luncheon to be presented noon April 18 at Odessa Country Club. Tickets are $30 per person, and proceeds will benefit the Art Institute for the Permian Basin. For more information call the Art Institute at 368-7222.

During the show, models will be men, women and children who will present the clothing, complete with historically appropriate accessories, in an entertaining and educational way. Included in the presentation will be a "reverse striptease," demonstrating undergarments, such as corsets and bustles, necessary for fashionable ladies of yesteryear.

Pat Stark of Carefree, Ariz., owner of the antique clothing, earned a bachelor of science degree and a masters of science degree in clothing and textiles, and has been a clothing consultant and high school and college teacher for more than 20 years.

As owner and operator of The Way We Wore, Ms. Stark conducts workshops on care and restoration of textiles. Her publication, "The Care and Restoration of Our Ancestors' Apparel," has been accepted as the manual for clothing workshops and conferences.

Ms. Stark uses her large collection of Godey Ladies Magazine, the 19th century ladies fashion authority, as well as her own research in university and museum libraries, to authenticate each item of clothing. Many of her anecdotes about the clothing were gathered from her interviews with original owners.

Ms. Stark, who also is consultant for clothing collections at the Old West Museum in Cheyenne, Wyo., and for the University of Wyoming at Laramie, has performed for Flying Physicians Association; the Masons; Federated Women's Clubs of America; the 75th anniversary of Home Economics Department of the University of Wyoming; National Convention for Amusement and Music Operators; National Association of Broadcasters; Sesquicentennial Celebration of Melrose Park, Ill.; annual convention of Loretto Federation of Chicago; and the convention for Lake of the Woods Rosary and Altar Society of Chicago. She is recipient of the first Distinquished Alumni Award for outstanding support from the University of Wyoming College of Agriculture, presented September 1989.

Malaysian designer wins Mouton-Cadet Young Designer Award

Associated Press

Zang Toi, a Malaysian who came to the United States ten years ago to study fashion design, has won the third annual Mouton-Cadet Young Designer Award.

"My trademarks are the way I play with color, the texture of my fabrics, and my buttons," says Toi, who began his own business in 1989. "My clothes have a very classic shape, but the buttons give a punch."

Toi, 29, was selected by a panel of fashion and retail experts on the basis of originality, wearability, construction and marketability. Baroness Philippine de Rothschild, owner of Chateau Mouton Rothschild, the winemaker, presented the award, which her company sponsors.

Path to health takes a few curious turns

By Erma Bombeck

With the high cost these days of physical and mental health maintenance, it's no wonder people are resorting to some pretty weird remedies.

Bombeck

The side effect: The engine stalls after 10 seconds and must be restarted.

Most of these solutions have trade-offs. The following creative treatments are no exception. They are all actual stories that have made the headlines.

■ ACUTE INFIDELITY. Two British psychiatrists say they have cured husbands of wandering by giving them 70-volt shocks every time they looked at pictures of their paramours.

■ MOTIVATIONAL DIETING. A man in Minneapolis found what he called the ultimate incentive for staying on a diet. For every pound gained, a persen would be bound by contract to make a contribution to the American Nazi Party or the Ku Klux Klan.

Side effect: inability to find adult clothes to fit a 4-year-old body.

■ FRISBEE FINGER. A medical journal reported that abrasions of the middle finger of the throwing hand are caused from using a Frisbee on hard surfaces, which produces jagged edges. The condition can be alleviated through abstinence.

Side effect: convulsive laughter from health insurance agents and unemployment authorities when claims are filed.

■ UNDERWEAR ITCH. Seven patients were tested by a dermatologist from Virginia when their underwear caused a rash. It was determined the cause was a chemical reaction that occurred when the rubber in the elastic waistbands clashed with the bleach. He recommended throwing away all their underwear, purchasing new ones and staying away from bleach.

Side effect: an underwear fetish.

■ COMMON COLD. Psychologists at Harvard revealed that love and caring bring about increased levels of IG-A, an immune agent effective in fighting colds and other viruses. They discovered this while showing a documentary on Nobel Prize-winning humanitarian Mother Teresa, as opposed to films on gardening and Nazi war movies.

Suburban Lions name queen

Staff Report

Miss Adams and 20 other queens from other clubs will compete for the title of 1991 District Queen of District 2-A1 on April 26-27 in Sweetwater.

Miss Adams is a junior at Lee High School, where she is a member and officer of the Lee Rebel Band. She earned a Rating I in the UIL Ensemble Contest.

Miss Adams, a feature twirler, has been a competition twirler at local, regional, state, national and international levels for 13 years. She is a five-time World Twirling Champion, a title she currently has. She has participated in the annual competitions at Notre Dame University 10 times, beginning when she was 5 years old.

Midland woman selected finalist in American Quilters' contest

Staff Report

Betsy Haney of Midland has been selected as a finalist in the 7th annual American Quilter's Society Show and Contest April 25-28 at the Executive Inn Riverfront in Paducah, Ken.

Haney joins approximately 400 quilters from throughout the United States and several foreign countries competing for $55,000 in total cash awards in a variety of amateur and professional categories. It is considered one of the most prestigious quilt show and contest in the nation.

More than 30,000 quilters are expected to attend this year's show in Paducah known as "Quilt City, U.S.A." and home of the American Quilter's Society.

In addition to displays, workshops, lectures, seminares and a fashion show, activities for this year's American Quilter's Society Show and Contest include the grand opening of the Museum of the American Quilter's Society April 25.

The 30,000 square foot museum has three climate-controlled galleries designed for displaying up to 200 quilts, spacous studio classrooms, a book and gift shop and a reference room.

Grand Opening festivities for the museum include a special performance by the Paducah Symphony Orchestra, a 7½x10 foot quilt cake, a fireworks display, a 27x28 foot American flag made out of helium balloons, special guests and other surprises.

Vinyl clothing new trend for spring

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

It's hard to miss the thing that makes this season's trench coats, jeans, shirts, T-shirts and even the occasional dress look new. It's vinyl, and you can spot the shine a mile away.

Designers and manufacturers have taken up vinyl with a vengeance. The newest versions of vinyl gleam with a glow more potent than patent leather's, while stretch fibers make them just about as malleable as any other clothing material.

Those who are daring and have gorgeous bodies can try stretch-vinyl leggings or jeans. They fit like skin and look as if something molten and black had just been poured over the wearer's lower extremities. Thank the French designers Jean-Paul Gaultier and Thierry Mugler for coming up with this concept. Gaultier also makes a tank-top bodysuit of white vinyl that's pretty terrific too.

For more conservative dressers, lots of companies make polyurethane vinyl trench coats and other kinds of water-repellent outerwear that gleam like sunshine in the rain. These come in plenty of colors but, for whatever reason, yellow looks particularly good this spring.

A manufacturer called Item uses this stretch vinyl for designs ranging from a zip-front tent dress to a skimp of a skirt that is half black, half white. The clothes are priced fairly reasonably — $72 to $295 at Bloomingdale's and other stores.

DEAR ABBY

Buckling up prevents fatal second of crash

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I've been reading your column for lo these many years, for information as well as entertainment. I've read many worthwhile articles submitted by your readers, but never has anything startled me as much as the enclosed article from the Adirondack Advertiser in northern New York. Please print it, Abby — it may save a life. It certainly opened my eyes. — FRANCIS BOURASSA, LATHAM, N.Y.

Van Buren

DEAR MR. BOURASSA: It opened my eyes, too. But first a disclaimer to my readers: This is a very graphic description of what happens when an automobile going 55 miles an hour hits a solid object.

BUCKLE YOUR SEAT BELTS

by the Georgia Paramedics Against Drunk Drivers (submitted by Lucille Groat)

1. In the first 10th of a second, the front bumper and grill collapse.
2. The second 10th finds the hood crumbling, rising and striking the windshield as the spinning rear wheels lift from the ground. Simultaneously, fenders begin wrapping themselves around the solid object. Although the car's frame has been halted, the rest of the car IS STILL GOING 55 MILES PER HOUR. Instinct causes the driver to stiffen his legs against the crash, and they snap at the knee joint.
3. During the third 10th of the second, the steering wheel starts to disintegrate and the steering column aims for the driver's chest.
4. The fourth 10th of the second finds two feet of the car's front end wrecked, while the rear end still moves at 35 miles per hour. The driver's body is still traveling at 55 miles per hour.
5. In the fifth 10th of a second, the driver is impaled on the steering column, and blood rushes into his lungs.
6. The sixth 10th of a second, the impact has built up to the point that the driver's feet are ripped out of tightly laced shoes. The brake pedal breaks off. The car frame buckles in the middle. The driver's head smashes into the windshield as the rear wheels, still spinning, fall back to earth.
7. In the seventh 10th of the second, hinges rip loose, doors fly open and the seats break free, striking the driver from behind.
8. The seat striking the driver does not bother him because HE IS ALREADY DEAD. The last three 10ths of the second mean NOTHING to the driver.

P.S. Readers: I suggest that you make several copies of this grisly piece, and the next time you ask a passenger to please buckle his or her seat belt and said passenger replies, "Oh, we're less than 10 minutes from where we're going," counter with, "I'm not moving until you buckle your seat belt." Then hand the passenger this piece.

Cutter

Goast Guard crew patrols vast waters of the gulf

By David Emswiler
The Brazosport Facts

AP Laserphoto

USCG Petty Officer Corey Callier studies for damage control school after boarding a shrimper in the gulf. He's waiting for a breakfast of grilled cheese sandwiches.

ABOARD THE USS POINT MONROE (AP) — Coast Guard Petty Officer Allen Dodgen cracked a dozen eggs, dropped the yolks in a bowl, topped some bread with butter and cinnamon and set the bread on top of a skillet.

French toast isn't to the liking of some.

"I try to make everybody happy ... But I make what I want to make," said Dodgen, who as a cook, is more in demand in the Coast Guard than are engine mechanics. "I can make anything I want within the budget."

But what about those inevitable complaints that must come with hungry stomachs? he was asked.

"They often say, 'My Mommy made this different,'" Dodgen explained. "But I'm not your Mommy."

Cooking at sea must be something like bowling during an earthquake. Three-inch high railings are welded to the stove to contain hot pans. Plates and cups that are cleaned are placed inside protective racks, safe from the rocking motion of the vessel.

And despite how hungry the crew gets at sea, a regular-course meal isn't always top on each man's list.

The 82-foot cutter sways front to back, side to side, on and on and on, seemingly without end. Saltine crackers are the food of choice for some. They apparently soothe the stomach and are jokingly referred to as "burgers."

Dodgen understands the jokes and the routine.

"Over the last four years I worked a good eight years," he quipped.

Dodgen's story is just one on board the cutter. And it is just one that goes to sea several times a week to patrol the vast dark waters of the Gulf of Mexico.

It was about 7 a.m. when he prepared the French toast. Most crew members had been up most of the night during patrols that stretched nearly 40 miles out from the Freeport jetties. Swells that reached 10 feet rocked the boat for much of the night and although the men periodically laid on their cots, most did not sleep for long periods at a time. The cots, held by thick chains, don't escapethe affects of motion.

Petty Officer Albert Ramos is a machine technician. Ramos and Lt. j.g. David Crowley, commander of the cutter, agree that grappling with the extreme emotional highs and lows is a battle for those in the Coast Guard.

The men on board the cutter combat long periods of inactivity by playing Nintendo, said Ramos.

Point Monroe Fireman Antone Perry would rather pop a movie such as "Hard To Kill" into the VCR to pass his time.

After a late-night boarding of a shrimp trawler 35 miles out to sea, Ramos and fellow officers, Executive Petty Officer Don Cavanaugh and Chief Petty Officer Jeff Harris settled down to a game of Spades in the mess decks.

Cavanaugh had been at the helm of the ship for much of the evening, or he had been continuously eyeing the ship's radar screen. The card game seemed to give him much-needed relaxation.

"I guess that's sort of the nature of the beast," said Crowley. "We do so many hours of patrolling. It runs from moments where all your adrenalin is flowing because you have a high-level search and rescue case. You got to get people immediately off (a sinking vessel). Or, it's just hours of routine patrolling."

He referred to an exciting rescue that Point Monroe was involved in about two months ago.

"We had a big crewboat sinking about 20 miles out. We had to go out there and help him," Ortega said. "His whole engine room was flooded. They had estimated about 18,000 gallons was in the engine room.

"We had all kinds of pumps and things in there. It's fun, because you are trying to fight it. You go down there and do what you have to do," he said.

While being at sea it is inevitable that the crew of any Coast Guard cutter will have the pleasure of experiencing wonders of nature, including dancing dolphins, colorful jellyfish and unobstructed star formations from high above.

With the absence of city lights, the night skies seem to glow extra brightly.

Cavanaugh said the crew enjoyed a meteor shower in October that lasted several hours.

"I was on morning watch. And we saw over a hundred shooting stars," he said. "It was great."

Another enjoyable sight comes from the water itself. At night, a phosphorescence emanates from the waves caused by the cutter. As the cutter slices through the water, the foam that would otherwise be white during the day, is normally a phosphorescent white. But last week it was a special occasion when the waves caused by the cutter were a glowing blue hue.

Arizona-Mexico crisis of waste casts doubt on trade agreement

NOGALES, Ariz. (NYT) — Little more than a muddy creek when it starts flowing down a hillside in Mexico, the Nogales Wash passes by factories, shantytowns and noisy commercial streets before it reaches an invisible line and then suddenly becomes a swirling, stinking foreign policy problem for the Bush administration.

When it crosses the border into the United States, the Nogales Wash is laced with toxic industrial pollutants and laden with untreated sewage.

A public health emergency has been in force on the Arizona side for six months because the incidence of hepatitis there has climbed to 20 times the national average.

The runaway pollution and accompanying health threats can be found in virtually any city along the U.S.-Mexico border, which has undergone an economic explosion in recent years with the construction of hundreds of highly profitable American-owned factories operating under special trade rules.

The American owners pay very low wages to the nearly half a million Mexicans they employ and are not obliged to use expensive anti-pollution equipment.

The pollution problems have become so grave that they have emerged as a major issue and potential obstacle to the free trade agreement that President Bush wants to negotiate with Mexico as a way to compete economically with Europe and Japan.

The Mexican government's environmental effort is in its infancy, and it is struggling with standards and enforcement.

Influential environmental groups, like the National Wildlife Federation, and others who oppose the free trade agreement, like the AFL-CIO, have contended that the contamination of the Nogales Wash and other pollution problems along the border are just previews of what will happen across Mexico if tariffs and other trade barriers are removed, igniting a rush to develop new industries.

Moreover, Democrats in Congress have said they would resist efforts for a speedy approval of a free trade agreement unless the White House agreed to address environmental issues in the negotiations with Mexico. The White House has not said whether it would.

But in American border cities even the most committed advocates of free trade insist that existing environmental problems should be addressed before free trade become a reality.

"We who breathe the air and drink the water along the border are the first to say we support free trade and that we also want a long-term plan for the environment," said William F. Joffroy Jr., chairman of the Border Trade Alliance, an organization that promotes economic development on behalf of local governments and businesses on both sides of the border.

The contamination along the border runs the gamut from raw sewage to wood smoke to highly toxic industrial chemicals.

Across the Rio Grande from El Paso, for instance, firewood is the chief cooking and heating fuel for most of the 1.2 million residents of Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

Rubber tires are burned in kilns to produce decorative bricks and tiles. Along with pollution from motor vehicles and industry, the smoke from these fires produces an acrid cloud over both cities under certain weather conditions.

Furniture-making plants and metal plating shops that fled environmental restrictions in California now flourish in Tijuana, Mexico, producing toxic wastes from their use of solvents.

Recreational use of the Rio Grande below Laredo, Texas, has long been considered unsafe because its sister city in Mexico, Nuevo Laredo, dumps about 25 million gallons of untreated sewage into the river every day.

Much of the development and growth along the border came as the result of the 1965 agreement between the two countries that allowed American companies to set up operations on the Mexican side.

The American factories and assembly plants, called maquiladoras, import almost all raw materials and export almost all products virtually exempt from tariffs and other trade restrictions.

Administration pushes plan to end Cambodia's civil war

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration said Wednesday a plan sponsored by the United States and four other countries offers the best hope of ending Cambodia's civil war without returning Khmer Rouge communists to power.

"The worst possibility for the future of Cambodia would be a collapse of current diplomatic efforts and a period of unconstrained warfare," Assistant Secretary of State Richard H. Solomon told a House Foreign Affairs panel.

The United States and the four other permanent members of the United Nations Security Council are pressing for a settlement under which a U.N. peacekeeping force would disarm warring factions in Cambodia.

Some lawmakers worry that American aid to noncommunist rebels in Cambodia could ultimately help the Khmer Rouge in its bid for a return to power. It is blamed for more than a million deaths in Cambodia when it ruled the country from 1975 to 1978.

Vietnam's invasion in 1978 and 11-year occupation ended the Khmer Rouge reign and launched a civil war that has been going on ever since.

Solomon appeared before the subcommittee on Asian and Pacific affairs subcommittee one day after meeting with Vietnamese diplomats in New York.

He said he told the Vietnamese normal ties with the United States could follow if Hanoi helped in ending the strife in Cambodia and accounting for American servicemen still missing from the Vietnam War.

The United States has declared an embargo on trade with Vietnam and an end to it would help Hanoi with its faltering economy.

"We discussed a four-phase road map to political and economic normalization that could, in relatively short order, end the trade embargo and our opposition to International Monetary Fund, World Bank and Asian Development Bank loans to Vietnam," Solomon said.

Not only members of Congress but the Vietnamese have expressed concern about the possibility that the Khmer Rouge could return to power.

Several lawmakers and humanitarian groups objected to inclusion of the Khmer Rouge in the settlement formula sponsored by the five permanent Security Council members — the United States, Soviet Union, China, France and Britain.

Solomon testified, however, that a period of all-out fighting would give "the Khmer Rouge its best chance at a return to power."

Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, asked if the administration favored bringing leaders of the Khmer Rouge to trial for acts of genocide when they held power.

Solomon said a legitimate Cambodian government would be able to prosecute such cases and "we would be absolutely delighted to see (Khmer Rouge leader) Pol Pot brought to justice."

"The only way the Khmer Rouge can win is if the settlement process is blocked and the military struggle continues," Solomon said. That is because the settlement is backed by China, the Khmer Rouge's main supplier, he said.

Solomon said the key to an acceptable peace in Cambodia will be "a very aggressive role" for United Nations peacekeepers in demobilizing all the guerrilla and regular military forces in the country.

The proposed U.N. Transitional Authority in Cambodia would have the power to act whenever the proposed Supreme National Council made up of Cambodian factions — including the Khmer Rouge — could not agree.

Rep. Chester Atkins, D-Mass., reminded Solomon that U.S. law bars aid to any group that collaborates with the Khmer Rouge.

Meanwhile, President Bush met Wednesday afternoon Gen. John Vessey Jr., with his special envoy to Hanoi on the issue of U.S. servicemen missing since the Vietnam War.

The meeting came prior to Vessey's departure on his third special mission to Vietnam on the issue. He is scheduled to be in Hanoi on April 19-21.
