Connally Opens Bid For GOP's 1980 Presidential Derby

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a platform emphasizing budget cutting, free enterprise and a strong defense, John B. Connally on Wednesday entered the race for the 1980 Republican presidential nomination.

The former Texas governor declared his candidacy in a speech at the National Press Club and said he would enter every primary his campaign funds permit.

There will be about 35 presidential primaries next year. Declaring he has "no apologies to make for having served in the Nixon administration," Connally said he has faith the American people will accept the not guilty verdict in his Watergate-related bribery trial.

"I have faith in this country and I have faith in the American people," Connally said when asked if he feared the charge would damage him politically.

Connally's declaration drew quick comment from two likely rivals.

"He's welcome to the list (of candidates)," said Ronald Reagan. "He's in the fray, now."

The former California governor was in Washington meeting with Republicans and lining up support for his candidacy, expected to become official before long.

Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee called Connally "a distinguished public servant," and added that "he has had his trials and his difficulties, but he will be one whole of a candidate for the Republican nomination."

Baker is expected to announce his plans sometime next summer.

In his speech to the press club, Connally endorsed amending the Constitution to require a balanced federal budget except in time of emergency.

He also recommended a constitutional amendment to limit presidents to a single six-year term.

Connally, who rose to prominence in politics as a Democrat and protégé of Lyndon B. Johnson, switched to the Republican Party in May, 1973, with the GOP bruised and battered by the Watergate scandal.

"I didn't switch parties to save a sinking ship or help the fortunes of any individual," he said on that occasion. "I thought the leadership of the Democratic Party had forsaken its principles."

At the press club, Connally said the Carter administration "lacks the national and international perspective to cope with the multitude of problems that confront the United States and the world."

He accused the government of undermining confidence in the economic system.

"Business has been stifled, berated and ridiculed, while labor has been painted as monolithic and avaricious," he said.

Connally said he would support a five percent across-the-board cut in the federal budget, including defense.

Iran Party's Departure Put Off

By CANDY SAGON

PREPARATIONS CONTINUED Wednesday for the departure of some members of the royal Iranian family, but sources in Washington say it is doubtful the family will leave before Friday.

There was some speculation Wednesday that Iranian Ambassador to the United States Ardeshir Zabeti will arrive in Lubbock at the end of the week to accompany the shah's children and his mother-in-law to Morocco, where the monarch and his wife have been staying.

But other sources, who said the ambassador has not confirmed that he will travel here, speculated he may meet family members when their plane stops on the East Coast for refueling.

The shah's mother-in-law and three of his children have been staying with Crown Prince Reza Pahlavi, the shah's eldest son, since Jan. 16. The 18-year-old crown prince has been here since midsummer, undergoing pilot training at Reese Air Force Base.

Throughout Wednesday, crates of the royal family's personal belongings were loaded into a dark blue U.S. Air Force truck that then was escorted by Iranian personnel and state department agents to Reese, where the boxes were loaded onto an Iranian Air Force jet.

Luggage also was loaded into the crown prince's car and into other private automobiles that were escorted as they traveled the approximately 12 miles from the 21st Street home to unload the suitcases at the military base.

The plane containing the baggage has been under tight surveillance by armed guards since it landed here Tuesday afternoon, flying in from Dover Air Force Base in Delaware.

Security has been stepped up at Reese since the arrival of the jet, with no one allowed on the base without an escort or proper identification. Civilian personnel with business on the base were warned away from the plane's vicinity.

Reports have circulated recently that the shah might visit Lubbock. But an Iranian Embassy spokesman said Tuesday the shah's American trip has been postponed.

Khomeini Delays Return Exile Agrees To Three-Week Postponement

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Self-exiled religious leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has agreed to delay his return to Iran for three weeks at the request of Prime Minister Shapour Bakhtiar, a high government source said early today.

Khomeini had planned to end his 14-year exile and return to Tehran from Paris Friday to begin efforts to replace the Bakhtiar government with an Islamic republic, his aides in France said Wednesday.

The government source, who asked not to be identified, said the need for special security for Khomeini's arrival and protection here led Bakhtiar to suggest that he delay his arrival for at least three weeks.

representative said the ayatollah still planned to come here and would try to land at another airport if Tehran was closed, Rhimi ordered all airports closed.

Even before the closure was announced, Khomeini aide Ibrahim Yazdi had said in Paris that the trip was a "calculated gamble."

Government sources said Bakhtiar had approved the plan to close the airports, but the prime minister told reporters he had no objection in principle to sending a plane to pick up Khomeini.

Thousands of pro-Khomeini demonstrators went to the airport Wednesday morning in hopes of seeing the Iran Air Boeing 747 jet take off. But they found troops and British-built Chieftain tanks blocking the airport. Onlookers were dispersed by armed soldiers.

Iran Air crews, who had suspended their month-long anti-government strike to fly Khomeini's plane, accused government agents of sabotaging the jet and a backup aircraft, both of which had been disabled by the removal of the engine starters and fuel pressure transmitters.

Meanwhile, Bakhtiar said he had sent a special envoy to Khomeini in an attempt to reach a reconciliation. But Yazdi said Khomeini would refuse to see any Bakhtiar representative unless he carried the prime minister's resignation.

In a tough speech to Parliament, Bakhtiar said his representative was carrying a letter to Khomeini indicating that "I would be willing to do anything within the framework of the constitution, including any desired changes in the constitution."

Inflation Slows In December; '78 Consumer Prices Rocket

WASHINGTON (AP) — California's tax-cutting Proposition 13 helped slow inflation in December, but consumer prices still rose 9 percent during 1978, the second biggest leap in 30 years, the government reported Wednesday.

The Labor Department also reported that a typical American wage earner fell behind in the race to keep up with inflation in 1978, as workers' real buying power declined 3.4 percent on the average during the year.

The inflation rate for the year, fueled by sharp increases for food, housing and medical care, was the highest since a 12.2 percent rise in 1974, when the economy was reacting to soaring price hikes for imported oil.

Food prices were up 11.6 percent in 1978, housing costs 9.9 percent and medical care 8.8 percent. The year's biggest bargain was clothing, which rose only 2 percent.

Home heating fuels and other utilities rose 5.9 percent, while gasoline increased 8.5 percent.

Costs for entertainment rose 5.8 percent during 1978 and for transportation 7.7 percent.

Excluding 1974, the last time consumer prices rose as much as 9 percent in a year was 1947. Prices rose 6.8 percent in 1977, but wage earners increased their buying power in that year.

The year-end consumer price report affects the pay of up to 2.6 million workers, whose labor contracts provide for cost-of-living wage increases based on the December or fourth-quarter figures.

At the White House, press secretary Jody Powell said, "It is the view of the president that the continuation of inflation at this rate is unsatisfactory. It underscores the need for congressional support for the tight budget he has presented."

The Labor Department said California's sharp property tax cut was a major factor in holding December's consumer price rise to 0.6 percent — equal to an annual inflation rate of nearly 7.5 percent. Consumer prices rose 0.5 percent in November.

Had it not been for the tax cut, prices in December would have gone up 0.8 percent, closer to the average inflation rate for the full year.

Voters in California, the most populous state, triggered a nationwide tax revolt last June when they approved a referendum to slash property taxes by more than 60 percent.

William Cox, deputy chief economist for the Commerce Department, said the December figures were "substantially influenced" by Proposition 13. But he said the impact of the tax cut on consumer prices would be limited to the one month because the tax reduction for all of 1978 was figured into December's report.

Labor Department economists said similar tax-cutting moves by other states would not have as great an impact on overall consumer prices unless the states were very populous, like New York. "A tax cut in Maryland wouldn't be felt nationally," one economist said.

Nine percent inflation is considerably higher than the 6.1 percent rate forecast a year ago by the Carter administration, which has made its campaign against inflation the top domestic priority for 1979.

The administration predicted this week that inflation in 1979 would be 7.4 percent, a figure raised from a 6.5 percent estimate made only last fall.

Government economists took heart in the latest figures, which showed that inflation had slowed from an 11.4 percent rate during the second quarter of 1978 to a 7.9 percent rate during the final three months.

Cox cautioned that the favorable trend doesn't "indicate we're out of the woods," but he said it should help President Carter win support for his anti-inflation effort, which includes voluntary wage-price guidelines.

According to the government's latest report, the Consumer Price Index ended the year at 202.9, meaning that a group of products costing $100 in the base year of 1967 cost $202.90 in December.

Food prices jumped 0.8 percent in December after rising only 0.3 percent in November. The Labor Department said December's rise was due mainly to sharp

Clements To Meet Border Governors

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Texas Gov. William Clements met with President Jose Lopez Portillo on Wednesday and announced a meeting will be held with border state governors to propose a bilateral treaty on U.S.-Mexico problems.

"We discussed four areas," Clements told a news conference after the meeting in the national palace, "energy, illegal aliens, the tortilla curtain and drug traffic."

He called the meeting "fruitful. We are in accord in a conceptual sense although we did not discuss details, which will be done later between our staffs and Mexican border state governors."

Clements arrived a month before President Carter is to meet with Lopez Portillo to discuss the same problems.

"It is curious," said a source close to the president, "to say the least that a Republican governor is here four weeks before a Democratic president."

Clements told reporters he did not want to reveal conclusions reached with

Lopez Portillo "because I don't want to pre-empt President Carter."

The day before, Clements met with the director of Mexico's national oil monopoly, Petroleos Mexicanos, Jorge Diaz Serrano to discuss "Texas' needs for billions of cubic feet of natural gas daily within the next few years."

Clements said he proposed a solution to stem the flow of illegal Mexican aliens, which he called "undocumented workers," by a revival of the bracero program, under which Mexicans were allowed to enter the U.S. for brief periods, until the program was canceled in the mid-1960s.

Clements said Lopez Portillo supports the idea.

Mexico's population has been rising at 3.2 percent a year and jobs are scarce. Although the U.S. Border Patrol says it apprehended more than a million illegal Mexican aliens in 1977, its officers believe twice that number get through un-

Hance Fears Budget Cuts' Farm Effect

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

FRESHMAN U.S. Rep. Kent Hance lauds President Carter's State of the Union pledge and budgetary intent to curb inflation but worries that agriculture may carry a disproportionate share of the proposed money cuts.

In a telephone interview at his Capitol offices, Hance, in his first term as the 19th District's representative, said, "I think the best thing the president said was his recognition that the fight against inflation is our number one problem."

But, he added, he is "concerned" that Carter's only mention of farmers and agriculture was "at the very first when he said farm income last year increased 25 percent."

"Well, in our area, farm income was not up 25 percent," countered Hance, who then said he actively will support the president's budget while working to ensure agriculture programs don't bear an unfair portion of the appropriation cutbacks.

Carter proposes to reduce the agriculture budget from $20.2 billion in fiscal 1979 to $18.4 billion in fiscal 1980. His explanation for the reduction is that "average" weather is expected for farmers next year.

Most other major segments in the fiscal 1980 budget show increased appropriations, especially in the areas of defense, social programs and foreign aid.

Hance said he and fellow Agriculture Committee members will "try to make sure that if a percentage is cut in agriculture, other areas will be cut in the same percentage."

He explained he believes across-the-board reductions are the "only fair way,"

Midwest Gets Another Hefty Dosage Of Snow

By The Associated Press
Wind-swept snows dealt another severe blow to crippled Chicago and paralyzed much of the Midwest on Wednesday, while gale-force winds and tornadoes wrecked dozens of homes on Florida's Gulf Coast.

In Nebraska, where cattle are dying of starvation, Gov. Charles Thone signed an emergency proclamation dispatching National Guard helicopters and trucks to evacuate stranded farmers and open roads to get food to the stricken herds.

Paul Saftig, the mayor of Kenosha, Wis., summed up the feelings of millions of storm-weary Midwesterners who awoke to find a heavy blanket of snow on top of that left by a fierce blizzard a week and a half ago.

"We had it just on the brink of being cleaned up, and now we have to start over," he said. "The men are tired, the machinery is tired and I'm tired."

"I keep praying to St. Jude, the patron of hopeless cases, but he hasn't helped."

A cold front pushing toward the Great Lakes region dumped 7 inches of new snow on Chicago, where 20 inches fell 11 days ago. Drifts formed by winds gusting to 40 miles an hour blocked roads and crippled operations at O'Hare International Airport, the nation's busiest.

Many highways in Wisconsin and Illinois were impassable and many schools and factories were closed.

"It's bad news," said John Burke, a spokesman for the Illinois Department of Transportation. "Travel in the northern half of the state, for all practical purposes, is impossible and nearly impossible in the northern two-thirds."

President Carter had declared much of Illinois and parts of Wisconsin disaster areas following the Jan. 13 blizzard which left snow waist-deep in cities such as Milwaukee. But the deadline for federal aid for removing snow expired at midnight as the new snow was falling.

Wisconsin Gov. Lee Dreyfus on Tuesday had withdrawn National Guard men and equipment which had been sent in to help open the roadways and tow away abandoned cars blocking the paths of snow plows.

An all-time record high of 32 inches of snow was on the ground in Milwaukee and Richard Cajeski, a supervisor with the Milwaukee Bureau of Sanitation, said it was the worst he has seen in 32 years with the city.

"We're on a full-scale plowing operation right now," Cajeski said. "We have about 215 pieces of equipment on the road now. We're using our own manpower, plus men from other departments and emergency people hired to shovel snow."

It was weather of a different kind that dealt destruction to two communities on Florida's central Gulf Coast. Gale winds spawning twisters damaged about 50 mobile homes in Bradenton. Roofs were ripped off, carports were crumbled and porches were torn away in the pre-dawn storm.

Farther south, in Fort Myers, another

Light Rain Possible Over Area

Hovering cloud cover over the South Plains should release light rain over the Lubbock area today, and forecasters say some snow may mix with the moisture this weekend before the clouds move out of the area on Sunday.

Although the National Weather Service is issuing a 30 percent chance for rain today and tonight and predicting a slight chance for mixed rain and snow Friday and Saturday, no more than .10 of an inch of precipitation is expected from the upper level disturbance.

Temperatures today will rise into lower 50s before the system pushes the mercury down to the upper 20s tonight and holds it below 40 on Friday.

A slight warming trend should bring gradually increasing temperatures reaching to near 50 by Monday.

Thursday, winds swept over the South Plains at 10 to 15 mph, as temperatures in Lubbock rose from 18 degrees at 6 a.m. to a high of 47 about 4:30 p.m.

Across the state, temperatures at 4 p.m. ranged from a mild 60 degrees at Laredo to a chilly 37 at Dalhart.

Rain and snow showers predicted for the Lubbock area, and much of Texas, also may fall on parts of the Rocky Mountain region, the Pacific northwest coast and southern Arizona.

Snow also is expected for the lower Great Lakes Region, Eastern Ohio Valley and New England.

Less Paperwork Plan Growing

WASHINGTON (AP) — An organization dedicated to the idea of cutting down on government paperwork said Wednesday it is winning converts in the Senate.

The Citizens Committee on Paperwork Reduction said four Democratic senators have indicated their support.

Truckers Oppose Kennedy's Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — An organization representing truckers is fighting Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's move to repeal an industry exemption from antitrust laws.

Under a 30-year-old law, truckers regulated by the Interstate Commerce Commission have a special exemption from federal antitrust laws. They may meet privately in so-called rating bureaus and work out rates which they then submit to the ICC for approval. Kennedy, D-Mass., is seeking passage of legislation that would end the exemption.

22 mobile homes were damaged, 11 of them severely.

Carnival worker Wayne Whidden was asleep in his truck, which was anchoring a fun house, when the storm hit the Bradenton fairgrounds.

"It lifted the cab three feet into the air," he said. "It bounced me around for about 30 seconds. It scared hell out of me, but I wasn't hurt."

In the isolated "range-cake" region of the Nebraska Sandhills, an estimated 50 head of cattle have died because ranchers are unable to obtain hay and other feed. Most ranch roads in Cherry County are blocked and the forecast Wednesday called for even more snow.

Adjutant Gen. Edward Binder of the Nebraska National Guard said state snow removal equipment was being sent to the region and helicopters were assigned to assist in evacuations and to airlift food and medicine to the stranded ranchers.

A command post was set up at Valentine Airport and the helicopters quickly got their first assignment. Two were sent to the aid of two heart attack victims in Cherry County.

In the Northeast, Civil Defense units and municipal officials braced for scattered flooding late Wednesday as the second wintry rainstorm in four days rambled up the coast from Virginia through New England.

Very heavy rain and lowland flooding were predicted into Thursday morning throughout the metropolitan New York area and in Boston and surrounding areas.

The National Weather Service in Boston said the Charles River was running more than a foot above flood stage at Dover.

The Northeast was soaked last Sunday by up to three inches of rain, causing widespread flooding.

The highest temperature in the country

Wednesday afternoon was 83 degrees in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. The low was 15 degrees below zero in Grand Forks, N.D.

N.Y.P.D. Has First Official Hypnotist

NEW YORK (AP) — Two men entered a Brooklyn man's home, tied him up and repeatedly raped his wife. They fled, and police despaired of catching them. Enter Police Sgt. Charles Diggett.

"We hypnotized her, and she remembered the names the two men called each other," Diggett recalled. "We caught one of the two guys."

Incidents such as that led officials on Monday to appoint Diggett as the New York Police Department's first official hypnotist.

His job is to dredge the minds of witnesses to crimes, seeking evidence and information that could lead to arrests and convictions.

For years, Diggett and Detective John McGrath fought to have hypnosis accepted as a tool of investigation, and they have used it experimentally since November 1976. In 62 of 100 cases, police say, they developed new evidence.

"We feel that in another five or 10 years, all departments will use hypnosis," Diggett said. "It's just too invaluable not to use. You know, you think about all of the time and money that you can save by having somebody remember a license-plate number."

Before witnesses undergo hypnosis, they are asked if they are willing, and are tested to determine whether they can be hypnotized.

Diggett said hypnosis cannot be used to induce a criminal to reveal damaging information about himself.

Diggett, 51, said he has been interested in hypnosis for 30 years. He and McGrath trained at the Columbia School of Physicians and Surgeons and at the Law Enforcement Institute of Hypnosis in Los Angeles. Diggett also operates a hypnosis center on Long Island for people who want to lose weight and quit smoking.

Oldest Dairy Cow Dies In Wisconsin At Ripe Age Of 39

ASHLAND, Wis. (AP) — A grand dame named Star who became a heroine of Wisconsin's cheddar cheese industry, gave birth to 30 offspring, made television appearances, and was written about in magazines, is dead at the age of 39.

Her owner, Emma Dahlstrom, says Star was America's oldest cow.

Mrs. Dahlstrom, who with her 80-year-old brother Gust runs a dairy farm here, says 39 bovine years are the equivalent of 234 human years, and that she tried to register Star with the Guinness Book of World Records.

But she said the compilers wrote her that little is known about records for bovine longevity, and that they do know of a case of a 40-year-old cow in Wales.

Nevertheless, over the years Star became a celebrity in her own land. She was written about in farm journals, and twice appeared on television.

Last year alone, some 200 tourists from 10 states came to see her.

Mrs. Dahlstrom, who is 78 and is known for the meticulous records she keeps, says Star produced 325,000 pounds of milk in her lifetime. In her best year she sent 16,000 pounds of milk to the local cheese factory.

She produced the last of her 30 calves in 1970 and was still producing 15 pounds of milk a day in 1975.

But age finally caught up with Star, and on Jan. 16 she died in the weathered barn in which she was born July 17, 1939.

Polo Disallowed As Business Expense

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Tax Court has decided that the costs of playing polo are not a business expense.

The decision came in the case of Robert J. Sieber, a custom builder in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Sieber was president of the Queen City Polo Club in 1973 and sought a business deduction for what he termed "advertising through polo."

His team was successful, winning championships in several seasons, leading to newspaper coverage which sometimes mentioned that Sieber was a builder, according to court papers.

Sieber contended that he was entitled to the business deduction for the costs of playing polo because this activity enabled him to meet people who might require his services as a custom builder and thus polo was a means of advertising.

For such costs to be deductible, however, the court noted that they must be "primarily for a business, not a social or personal purpose."

And noting that every member of Sieber's family also participated in the polo club, it denied the deduction, commenting that "the weight of the evidence strongly suggests that petitioner played polo primarily because it gave him personal satisfaction and helped him maintain a close relationship with his family."

Area Courses To Aid Taxpayers

Taxpayers can deduct non-reimbursed expenses incurred while using their automobiles for business, moving, charitable and medical purposes.

Taxpayers who maintain records of actual costs can claim operating expenses and fixed expenses, such as depreciation and insurance, for allowance method, taxpayers can deduct 17 cents per mile for the first 15,000 miles and 10 cents per mile for each additional mile when their automobiles are used for business.

However, taxpayers using their automobiles for moving, medical or charitable purposes may deduct only 7 cents a mile. Parking toll fee may be claimed in addition to the mileage rate.

Some moving expenses connected with job-related relocations may be deductible on this year's income tax return also.

Those expenses which can be deducted include the cost of travel to the new location; moving household goods and personal effects; pre-move house hunting trips; temporary living costs at the new location and certain expenses related to the disposition of an old residence and acquisition of a new home.

The distance between a taxpayer's new job and the old residence must be at least 35 miles farther than the former home was from the former job.

These and other questions concerning your 1978 tax return will be answered in the Taxpayer Education program. This public service course, jointly-sponsored by the Lubbock Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants and the Internal Revenue Service will be offered Feb. 6 and 8, 7-10 p.m.

CPAs volunteer their time to assist taxpayers during a two-night informal program, which provides both instruction and question-and-answer sessions. The course is available to the public at a charge of $1 to cover administrative costs.

AN EDITORIAL:

Not Then, Not Now, Not Ever

ONE OF the best arguments we've heard lately against President Carter's (voluntary) wage and price guidelines has been advanced by a man who endorsed them last time.

Former Texas Gov. John Connally told American Enterprise Institute scholars in remarks published this week that:

"Wage and price controls will not work, never have worked, and never will work over any protracted period of time. They should be applied only in case of war or an emergency."

Furthermore, the former Treasury secretary labeled the wage and price controls imposed in 1971 as "a mistake." None of Nixon's economic advisers, including Connally, thought that wage and price controls were the road to utopia, said Connally.

NIXON'S ADVISERS counseled him right-ly, Connally told AEI, that controls were the easiest thing in the world to get into, the most difficult to administer, and almost impossible to get out of.

"I would hope," added Connally, "that President Carter's advisers will give him that kind of advice."

Controls may work for a while, but the longer they are kept, the greater the inequities that inevitably build up in a complex society such as ours.

"Inevitably," in Connally's words, "they result in an eruption that is worse than the situation that prompted them."

Carter, in Connally's estimation, has some hard choices and he ought to face up to them.

"In the field of agriculture, (Carter) ought to ask Congress to develop a long-range marketing program in cooperation with other nations, for agricultural commodities..."

"If we ask the American farmer to produce in excess of our needs in this country, then this government, it seems to me, must have some kind of a foreign policy of marketing."

ANY CREDIBLE voluntary policy to control inflation in this country, asserted Connally, has to start with the federal government. "Let it deny itself something," he suggested. "Let it reduce its spending first. Let it set the example."

America has too much inflation, basically caused, as Connally sees it, by too much bureaucracy. "There are too many regulations in the country," he said. "This is what is upsetting...And the federal government has it within its power to start a trend away from every single one of them."

Most of us think, rightly or wrongly, that the biggest contributing factor to inflation today is the size of the federal budget and the deficit in that budget—both of which the administration has the power to do something about.

Right now wouldn't be too early to start.

AN EDITORIAL:

Body Politic Not Dead Yet

TRYING TO measure freedom on a world scale in a way is not unlike the task of the blind men asked to describe an elephant. It's not easy getting the picture of the whole subject from component elements subject to such varying interpretations.

The complexity of the task, however, is not such as to daunt Freedom House, a private political research organization keeping vigilant watch on the state of liberty throughout the world since World War II.

Since 1973, it has been issuing an annual "Comparative Survey of Freedom" rating the relative freedom of the world's nations. According to the latest edition, 1978 ended up as one of the better recent years.

FREEDOM LOST ground in a few countries—eight with a combined population of 144 million. But it gained in more—24 with some 363 million people.

It was the second consecutive year for which the Freedom House scale registered a net gain.

The year's final balance for the world's estimated 4.23 billion inhabitants of 158 nations and 59 related territories was 35.1 percent "free," 24.7 percent "partly free" and 40.2 percent "not free."

ART BUCHWALD:

If You Can Call It That Is There Life After 30?

WASHINGTON—I was at a magazine office the other day and one of the publishers said to me, "I have to reduce my average-age readership by another five years."

"What is the average age of your reader now?" I asked.

"Thirty-five. As far as my advertisers are concerned 35 is much too old an age to appeal to. It's the under 30s who are spending most of the money in this country. When you hit 35 you start pinching pennies."

"That's because the people who are over 35 have children who are spending money, and we senior citizens don't have as much to spend ourselves."

"Don't think the advertisers aren't aware of that. The money power in this country belongs to the kids. They spend more on records in one year than their parents do on grass seed."

"THEY ALSO go to the movies and the quick-snack bars, and buy make-up and pantyhose that come in eggs, and jeans and leather jackets."

"They make the American way of life what it is today. That's why the advertisers want to please them so much. People over 35 are drags on society as far as buying power goes. Advertisers don't like that."

"It isn't our fault," I said defensively. "At one time we used to spend money like water too. I think advertisers owe us some loyalty. We supported them for a long time."

"You can't let sentiment get involved when you're selling. You have to aim your copy at the person who has the money burning a hole in his or her pocket."

"IF YOU PUBLISH a magazine or put on a television program that appeals to people who are mature, you could drive this country into a recession."

A Mexican chap had difficulty in going to sleep. His problem was finally solved when he got a picture of his girlfriend Esta. Everybody knows that when you see Esta, you sleep.

"You must target your ads for that vast ignorant segment of the population which will buy anything, anywhere, any time. The advertiser does not want to waste his money on someone who is worried about tomorrow."

"So just because we're discriminating, people over 35 are bad advertising risks?" I asked.

"I would say those over 30. When you cross the 35 age barrier the advertiser wants you off our subscription list, 10 feet from the newsstand, and doesn't care if you're sitting in the room when he's selling beer on television."

"As far as he's concerned you're just taking up needless room on the planet. When you get into your 40s and 50s, the advertiser insists that our computer spit you out."

"WAIT A MINUTE," I said. "let's backtrack a bit. It's true that those of us over 35 are not the big spenders we once were. But where do you think the money comes from that your advertisers are fighting for?"

"If we didn't supply the dough to our kids, they wouldn't have a dime for all that junk that makes them such important consumers to the advertising world."

"It's our money that is making them the hot prospects of the business community and forcing magazines, movies and television shows to cater to their idiotic tastes."

"That's quite true," my publishing friend agreed, "but let's be sensible about this. On a cold snowy evening, would you prefer to stay home or go to a Pizza Hut?"

"STAY HOME."

"And your son and daughters?"

"Go to a Pizza Hut."

"So there you are. You might read an ad for a Pizza Hut in my magazine or see one on television. But it's your kids who will go out on a snowy night and buy one. So why the hell should we talk to you?"

"Why are you talking to me?"

"Because you're a friend and I wanted to tell you personally, that because of your age I can no longer carry you on our subscription list."

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOYAK:

The Jewish Defection

WASHINGTON—Leaders of the American-Jewish community are showing unexpected resistance to the new strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT II) based on Soviet failure to live up to previous agreements, particularly on human rights and the plight of Soviet Jews.

That fact, deeply disturbing to the Carter administration, is becoming apparent to high officials now lobbying American-Jewish leaders—along with other groups of citizens—to line up pro-SALT support for the bitter Senate battle ahead.

The depth of Jewish resistance to the new treaty, expected to be ready for signing in the spring, is another hurdle for the President's long-stalled SALT II hopes: few if any groups of Americans are better qualified to judge Soviet performance on past agreements than the American-Jewish community.

There is not likely to be public opposition to the new treaty, but private hostility.

Such leading and influential organizations as the American Jewish Committee, the American Jewish Congress, B'nai B'rith, the National Conference on Soviet Jewry and others have no intention of taking a hard-line, public posture against SALT.

"We're not about to get out front," one influential Jewish leader told us. "SALT is not a peculiarly Jewish issue but an American issue. We just won't be doing anything to help."

That shades the hard truth that any new agreement with Moscow is, in fact, of more intense interest and concern to Jews than to non-Jews.

THE REASON: Soviet restrictions on the emigration of Russian Jews, plus what officials of Jewish organizations here describe as "growing anti-Semitism" in the Soviet Union.

Soviet conduct toward the West and particularly Soviet performance on carrying out previous agreements with the U.S. have great importance on how the influential Jewish community reacts to any new agreement, SALT or other, with Moscow.

As of today, the reaction is strictly negative. That argues for formal neutrality in the bitter Senate battle now looming, a neutrality that will cloak opposition.

One showcase that dramatizes this anti-SALT attitude was a paper prepared by the National Conference on Soviet Jewry at the specific request of Sen. Howard Baker, the Senate Republican leader, for his talk with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev early this month.

BAKER TOOK the paper with him to Moscow, but decided at the last minute not to use it in the long session he and fellow senators had with Brezhnev.

Baker told us he felt his generalized warning to Brezhnev Jan. 10 that the Senate would definitely invoke "linkage" in studying the new SALT treaty was enough to make his point.

"Linkage"—disavowed by the Carter administration—means that such Soviet actions as staging a coup in Afghanistan, subsidizing a Cuban mercenary army in Africa or exploiting turmoil in Iran will be fully considered by the Senate in deciding whether to approve the new SALT treaty.

Approval requires a two-thirds vote.

In addition, Baker and other senators with him left on a Kremlin desk the almost ritualistic list of pressing cases of Russian Jews denied emigration visas to leave the country.

WITH THAT demonstration of purpose, Baker kept the paper composed for him by the National Conference on Soviet Jewry in his pocket during the Brezhnev meeting, but he is prepared to use it in questioning administration witnesses when the treaty comes before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, of which he is a member.

The paper establishes this premise: that "evaluating Soviet credibility in adhering to a strategic arms limitation document" depends on "an examination of past Soviet performance on international accords."

The "examination," said the national conference paper, shows "total disregard" by the Soviet Union for "the aims and principles" of the 1975 Helsinki human rights document and "systematic deception" on the question of Jewish refusniks denied emigration.

NOT ALL Jewish leaders in this country, and not all Jewish members of the Senate, will agree that this performance record should play so large a part in the SALT II Senate debate.

But those who do will cost Jimmy Carter just the sort of highly-organized support from the American-Jewish community that he may need to win the ratification battle.

Burglars are dumb. Here they are still heisting payrolls when everybody knows the real dough is in the deductions.

JAY HARRIS:

An Open Mind...

THE LUBBOCK School Board has found itself between the horns of a dilemma on its "closed meetings" of late.

By law, the Trustees can go into executive session to discuss certain matters which may involve legal issues, purchase of land, certain discussion of personnel and such.

The problem of late is that the Board has been doing this, in secret that is, on some matters of great public and emotional interest.

On the agenda are three pieces of dynamite, as it were. The Board is wrestling over how to handle the prayer in schools dispute, religion in general in schools and what to do about new boundaries in light of the district's touchy integration status.

The Board could find itself in court over any one or all of the issues. Naturally, the Trustees want the expert legal opinion of their lawyers—without the public, or more importantly, possible litigants looking on.

WE CAN BUY the argument, up to a point. That point is that strictly legal questions are discussed, not general views on the issues.

Part of the Board's problem, in all candor, has been a seeming stubbornness bordering on arrogance over its "right" to conduct executive sessions.

Surely the gentlemen, who went to great lengths to seek the posts they hold, understand that school prayers, religion in the schools and boundaries are all matters which touch vast sections of those to whom they must answer.

As such, the voters, fathers, mothers, students, those with diverse views, all are entitled to at least a more candid explanation of what is going on and why.

Having said that, we also again suggest that the board give serious consideration to holding at least some of its sessions at night. While many other political groups—such as the City Council and County Commissioners Court—meet at "inconvenient" daytime hours for workers, the School Board invites criticism that it is "shutting out" many persons by its early-morning meetings.

SLIDE ROAD Sam Says: It's possible to disagree without being disagreeable.

THE OFFICE Philosopher observes that "People often hear what you say, but not what you mean."

THE PRO-ERA people may have lost an ally with their all-out push, boycott-those-who-won't-go-along stance.

New Gov. Bob Graham of Florida says the boycott of Florida by pro-Equal Rights Amendment forces is wrong and detrimental to the cause of women's rights.

"The economic boycott shouldn't be the reason for ratification of the ERA in Florida," Graham said. Two organizations, the AFL-CIO and the American Federation of Teachers have moved their convention plans from Miami Beach, saying they did not want to meet in a state that has not passed the ERA.

Gov. Graham's criticism of the boycott has pro-ERA forces worried. He had been counted on to follow outgoing Gov. Reubin Askew's support of the controversial hot potato in the state, where the amendment has been narrowly defeated on several occasions.

Well, the pro-ERA bunch can't say they didn't ask for it. And it makes one wonder all the more about the whole setup?

IT'S HARD to argue with a fellow who keeps his mouth shut.

BRAGGART A person who enters every conversation last first.

THERE MAY BE a message for some politicians, police chiefs and judges in a recent Louis Harris poll on Americans' worry over violence.

By a 77 to 18 percent margin, citizens are convinced that "this country is slow to find ways to control violence." The continued explosions of violence of almost every kind, clearly have the public deeply disturbed.

And if another survey is taken a few weeks hence, the totals may be even higher. Back in 1975, only 34 percent of the citizenry felt the nation was inclined to be "violent by nature," with 59 percent holding the opposite view.

Now, the number who think far too many are "violent by nature" has shot up to 43 percent, although 50 percent do not share this concern.

ANY NUMBER of things have played a part in the feeling.

The assassinations, from those of John F. and Robert Kennedy, Martin Luther King and more recently Mayor George Moscone and City Supervisor Harvey Milk of San Francisco, have left deep scars on the nation's conscience.

No one solution to the growing problem is offered, although a majority of persons feel that "violence is played up too much by the media." And while most persons oppose censorship over the display of violence on television or in the newspapers or magazines, there is a feeling that an over-emphasis of violence, in the entertainment medium and news, begets more violence.

What the public seems to be saying is that more discretion should be shown in the way violence is handled, that while it should not go unreported, it should be more or less muted.

Of course, violence—from terrorist attacks to "the little wars" raging in the Mideast and Africa—have become a daily dose of life over much of the world, whether for political or other reasons. As a result, the public has swung heavily in favor of the death penalty for those who perpetrate violent crime. But, the solution on a broader scale for "the violent century" seems to be missing.

Efforts To Retry Davis Due To Begin Next Week

HOUSTON (UPI) — The presiding judge in the murder-for-hire trial of T. Cullen Davis said Wednesday efforts to retry the Fort Worth millionaire will begin next week when he formally asks defense attorneys whether they want to transfer the case from Houston.

"I can just set it on my docket — and probably will for Friday week (Feb. 2) — and tell them the matter is on the docket and expect them to be there so we can have a discussion," said District Judge Wallace Moore, who declared a mistrial in the 13-week proceeding Monday when jurors could not agree on a verdict.

"They could indicate in some way — it would not be a trial setting — whether they want to try it here or somewhere else."

"If they want to file it somewhere else, they'll have to file a motion for change of venue. I don't know whether they want to try it here or not."

If defense lawyers indicate they are willing to remain in Houston, Moore said he will find another judge to preside.

Perjury Trial Set For Davis Witness

HOUSTON (UPI) — A two-time ex-convict indicted for perjury after he testified as a defense witness in the T. Cullen Davis murder solicitation trial will have his own trial date set March 1, prosecutors said Wednesday.

Larry Gene Lucas of Fort Worth, a convicted marijuana smuggler and burglar, has been held in jail in lieu of $100,000 bond since his arrest Jan. 8. He was indicted by a Harris County grand jury after testifying Dec. 11 that he was offered $20,000 last summer to kill Davis.

Lucas identified FBI informant David McCrory as the person who asked him to kill Davis, but the convict's girlfriend later testified he fabricated the story after reading about the case in newspapers.

Davis' trial on charges he conspired to have his divorce judge slain ended in a deadlocked jury and mistrial Monday.

"I don't want to hear it again," he said. "I don't think I should have to. I'll just find somebody to try it."

During testimony, Moore referred to the case as a "monster" and afterwards said the length of the trial and manner in which it was argued constituted an "abuse" of the judicial system.

Moore said he already had inquired of the willingness of some of the other 17 district judges in Houston to take the case.

"It (the judges' response) was 'positive' no," Moore said.

"No one wants to do it, but just like I took it, somebody has to do it and they all realized that and I think probably we can find someone to try it," he said.

Moore accepted the case on a change of venue from Fort Worth.

Phil Burleson of Dallas, one of four lawyers defending Davis, said he needed "time to sit back and think about it."

"I don't know what impact publicity has had on the county," he said. "We need time to evaluate its impact on the public. Then we will decide if we need to move the trial."

Mike Gibson, another defense lawyer, said Houston "is as good a place as any" for a retrial if publicity didn't make selection of an impartial jury impossible.

Prosecutor Tolly Wilson said he was more concerned with when the case would be retried than where.

Government Experts Say Food Prices Will Soon Decrease

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Consumers who stretched their dollars last year to cover the biggest increase in food prices since 1974 should see some slowdown in the inflation rate in coming months.

That's the view of government experts who predict a 1979 food price increase of 6 to 10 percent, compared to 1978's nearly 13 percent rise, announced Wednesday by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Government officials and industry spokesmen alike warn that factors such as the weather and the success or failure of President Carter's anti-inflation program could mean increases higher or lower than predicted. They note that early in 1978, economists were estimating a food price rise only half as large as the one that actually occurred.

But reports from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the American Meat Institute, the National Cattlemen's Association and others provide some clues to the future. Here is a look at what is expected in some major food categories:

RED MEAT: Beef supplies will continue to drop, with 1979 production estimated at 5 percent below 1978. Ample grain stockpiles should mean increased production of steaks and other expensive cuts from cattle fattened on corn, but the supply of grass-fed beef, used for things like hamburger, will decline again. Pork production is expected to increase 10 percent, taking some of the pressure off beef.

POULTRY: Chicken and turkey production should increase sharply, but prices may not go down. "Growth in consumer income and higher red meat prices will provide upward pressure," says a USDA report.

EGGS: Total production in 1979 may increase slightly but the USDA says "far more of the eggs produced will go for hatchery purposes and slightly less for table use on a per capita basis. Egg prices at retail in 1979 are expected to increase moderately."

DAIRY: Retail prices should show moderate gains, reflecting increases of 6 to 10 percent in the prices paid to farmers for milk.

The food price increases last year took many experts by surprise. At the start of 1978, USDA economists were saying that the average family's food budget would increase 4 to 6 percent. By the end of March, the estimates were up to 8 percent. And by the end of the year, people were talking about a 10 percent boost.

The figures released Wednesday show that the actual increase in food and beverage costs, as measured by the Consumer Price Index, was 11.6 percent during 1978. The cost of food alone — at home and away from home — rose 11.8 percent last year. And food purchased in grocery stores for at-home use only went up 12.5 percent.

That was the worst rise since 1974 when the cost of food at home increased 14.9 percent, following a 16.3 percent boost in 1973. During 1975, 1976 and 1977 respectively, the cost of food at home went up 8.3, 2.1 and 6 percent.

Weather was a big factor in causing the gap between expectation and reality. The major contributors to the larger-than-anticipated food price increases were red meat and fresh vegetables," says the latest issue of the USDA's "National Food Review."

"In both cases, weather was the indirect, if not the direct, cause." Severe cold in hog-producing states cut the pork output. There was a 1 percent increase in pork supplies last year instead of the 10 percent that had been anticipated. Cold weather in the South and rains that delayed spring planting in California caused temporary, but sharp, increases in fruit and vegetable prices.

Consumers, too, played a part in the food price boost. Changing lifestyles, smaller family units, generally improved economic conditions and the increased number of multiple-wage-earner households are having an effect on eating habits and food prices," said Howard J. Hjort of the USDA.

Demonstrators Protest Chinese Premiere's Visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maoist protesters dumped an effigy of Teng Hsiao-ping at the door of the Chinese mission Wednesday and promised an unfriendly welcome when the Chinese vice premier arrives this weekend for a get-acquainted tour of America.

Five men, none of them Chinese, were arrested in a traffic jam a few minutes after they splattered white paint against the brick building, smashed its foyer windows with lead fishing weights and sped away in what police said was a rented car.

Police said one leveled a gun at a uniformed Secret Service officer who was guarding the building. The man, identified as Jim Edwin Lawdermilk, 41, was charged with assaulting a police officer, but police were still investigating whether a shot was actually fired during the incident. The Secret Service guard was uninjured.

As they attempted to flee, the protesters left behind fliers proclaiming themselves to be the "Revolutionary Party Committee to Give a Fitting Welcome to Teng Hsiao-ping."

A few minutes later, eight other persons attempted to demonstrate in front of the building — a former hotel two miles from the White House — but police chased them away. A young woman said they didn't know who damaged the embassy, but said they were allies.

They chanted "Long live the revolution, long live Mao" and carried a red banner proclaiming:

"Hold high the banner of Mao Tse-tung and the Cultural Revolution. Hail the Four who fought to uphold Mao's line. Support the revolutionaries, not revisionists."

The demonstrators handed out leaflets calling for protest activities in Washington and San Francisco Monday, the day of Teng's first meeting with President Carter. One called the 4-foot-11 Teng "a posturing bootlicker and a half-pint pimp." Another called him a "sawed-off revisionist," a "half-pint Napoleon," and "a traitor to revolution in the world."

The leaflet promised a "fitting welcome" when Teng visits Atlanta, Houston and Seattle next week.

Hours after the incident, James Donovan, a spokesman for the Revolutionary Communist Party (USA), telephoned The Associated Press to say that "we wanted to insult the revisionist leadership of China. We wanted it to be a warning to Teng that he can expect a lot of opposition from revolutionaries."

Farmers Gain 40 Percent U.S. Asserts

WASHINGTON (AP) — By most statistical measures used by the government, farmers scored a stunning improvement in their financial situation the past year.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said Wednesday that net farm income soared 40 percent in 1978 to $28.1 billion from $20.1 billion in 1977.

A year ago prices of many commodities at the farm were depressed and farmers were marching on Washington for relief. Some are still planning to march this winter, but Bergland's figures show that overall, they are much better off.

Prices of commodities at the farm, led by cattle, rose sharply in 1978 and altogether averaged 22 percent higher at the end of the year.

Bergland included the income figures and some other statistics in a "State of American Agriculture" report to the Senate Agriculture Committee.

The Agriculture Department previously had said farmers' net income last year would be about $26 billion, up 29.3 percent from 1977.

The higher estimate by Bergland puts farm income at the second highest level on record, behind the $29.9 billion farmers gained in 1973 when income jumped from $17.8 billion the previous year.

Bergland also disclosed that total U.S. farm assets — the book value of land and other holdings — also rose more last year than had been indicated a few months ago, largely because land prices rose faster than had been anticipated.

Department economist Carson D. Evans cited these other changes from a year ago in the "balance sheet" of U.S. agriculture as of Jan. 1:

—Total physical assets of farmers were valued at $752.3 billion, including $588.9 billion in real estate. A year ago, those totaled $672.1 billion, including real estate at $525.8 billion.

—Including other holdings such as bank deposits and investments, the total of farmers' assets was $790.1 billion, up 11.5 percent from $708.3 billion a year earlier.

—Farm debt totaled $135.9 billion, up 14.3 percent from $118.9 billion at the start of 1978.

—The equity farmers owned outright in their land and other holdings rose to a record $654.2 billion from $589.4 billion a year earlier.

Woman Sentenced On Theft Charge

A 43-year-old Lubbock woman has pleaded guilty to a charge of theft in federal district court and has been sentenced to two years in prison.

Sybil Jo Ann Perry of 2310 70th St. was accused of depositing into her account at a Lubbock bank a $5,250 check from a Wheatley, Ark., farmer to the Lubbock implement company where she worked.

Judge Halbert O. Woodward pronounced sentence.

State Department spokesman Anita Stockman said late Wednesday, "We deeply regret that the incident occurred. We note that the alleged perpetrators have been apprehended. We are taking additional security measures to deal appropriately with the problem and we are in continuing discussion with the Chinese concerning it."

A Secret Service man said the hit-and-run attack on the Chinese mission lasted less than a minute.

While a score of police gathered, not a single member of the Chinese delegation came out to see what was going on. The Chinese bought the old Windsor Park Hotel on Connecticut Avenue shortly after Richard Nixon's visit to Peking in 1972.

The eight-story building will become the Chinese embassy in March as part of the normalization of U.S.-Chinese relations announced by President Carter last month.

Charlie Denegal, a messenger service employee, had just left the building and witnessed the incident.

She said she saw four white men in their early 20s jump from the car, leaving behind the driver. She said one of the four threw a bucket of lead fishing sinkers through the windows, another tossed a bucket of paint and a third hurled the leaflets. They dropped the mannequin in the doorway and sped off, driving north in a southbound lane.

One of the demonstrators who arrived a few minutes later said the clothed mannequin was intended as an effigy of Teng, who emerged as China's strongman in the power struggle that followed Mao's death.

Police charged the five with destroying the property of a foreign government.

Only Lawdermilk was charged with assaulting a police officer.

Police spokesman L.D. Soutby said one man identified himself as Mark W. He Jackson of Baltimore. The other three were identified as Curtis Mohr, 31; Gary Ford, 27, and James Joseph Nelson, 25.

Assassin Knew Little About Letelier

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former Chilean secret police agent testified Wednesday he knew little about Orlando Letelier when he attached the car bomb that killed the one-time Chilean ambassador.

Michael Vernon Townley said he knew that Letelier served in the Marxist government of Chilean President Salvador Allende, but read none of his writings and was unfamiliar with articles written about him.

"All I had to know was that my superiors thought he was an enemy of the state," Townley told a U.S. District Court jury. "I was given an order and I carried it out to the best of my ability."

At the time of his death in September 1976, Letelier was writing and speaking extensively about alleged human rights violations by the Chilean military junta that seized power from Allende in 1973. The U.S. government claims that Letelier's criticism was so effective that the junta ordered him assassinated.

Townley is the government's chief witness in the trial of three anti-Castro Cubans charged with having played roles in the Letelier assassination.

Chile's former ambassador to the United States and a co-worker were killed Sept. 21, 1976, when a remote-control bomb ripped through their car as they drove around Embassy Row in the nation's capital.

Townley said when he received the assignment to kill Letelier from his superiors at the former Chilean secret police agency, DINA, he had not intended to take part personally in the murder.

"I was ordered to contact the Cubans, have them carry out the mission themselves, and leave the country," Townley said. "When I left (Chile), I had no intention of going to Washington."

Townley testified previously that the Cuban exiles demanded that he come along on the mission and plant the bomb personally as a matter of faith. The Cubans had suspected that he was a CIA infiltrator, Townley said.

All three Cubans, who the government says are members of the Cuban Nationalist Movement, have pleaded innocent to all charges.

Guillermo Novo Sampol and Alvin Ross Diaz are charged with conspiracy to murder a foreign official, murder of a foreign official, first-degree murders of Letelier and his co-worker, Ronni Moffitt, and murder by use of explosives. Each charge carries a maximum life term.

Guillermo Novo and his brother Ignacio are charged with lying to a grand jury, which carries a maximum punishment of a five-year prison term and a $10,000 fine.

Ignacio Novo is also charged with failing to report the crime, which carries a maximum of three years in prison and a $500 fine.

Under cross-examination by defense lawyer Lawrence Dubin, Townley said he could not recall Alvin Ross Diaz participating in the murder of Letelier.

"Tell me one thing Alvin Ross did to help you kill Orlando Letelier," Dubin demanded.

"Mr. Ross did nothing directly to help me ... kill Orlando Letelier," Townley replied. "What aid he gave to other people I do not know."

Later, Townley admitted that he gave an incorrect answer to Judge Barrington Parker during a hearing last August when the judge asked him if he had constructed a bomb like the one that killed Letelier. At the time, during discussion of Townley's plea bargaining, he said he had not.

But asked about that statement during Wednesday's session, Townley told Parker, "It was an incorrect answer." He said, "I might have been ... confused."

Pizza Parlor Robbed Of $1,200

Two men got away with $1,200 when they held up the manager of Mr. Gatti's pizza parlor about 11:40 p.m. Tuesday. It was the city's 20th robbery of the year.

Shift manager Charles B. Johnson told police one of the two young, black suspects walked up to the counter of the 5028 50th St. business, stuck a gun in the manager's face and ordered him to put the restaurant's money in a bag. Johnson said the other bandit acted as a lookout at the front door during the holdup.

Johnson said the suspects left after getting the money bag, driving off in a 1974 or 1975 brown Chevrolet pickup truck. One of four employees at the parlor during the heist saw the men drive away and gave chase.

He told police he followed the truck down 48th Street, but lost sight of it on Slide Road.

The suspect armed with the .22-caliber pistol was described as about 5-feet-7, weighing 150 pounds and with short hair. He was wearing a floppy hat, denim jacket and multi-colored scarf over his face and dark-rimmed glasses, Johnson said.

His companion was about 6-feet-2, with a muscular build and wearing sunglasses, a baseball cap with an orange T-patch and dark jacket.

Earlier Tuesday night, a 19-year-old Lubbock man said he was robbed of his billfold, containing $38 cash, in front of a discount store at 50th Street and Avenue H.

Alan Lee Benedict of Route 7, Box 564, Lubbock, told officers he drove himself to Methodist Hospital after being cut on the face with a jagged piece of glass during the 8:15 p.m. holdup. He was treated and released from the hospital.

Benedict said he was confronted by two young Mexican-American men who assaulted him in the store parking lot, grabbed his wallet and fled in a 1968 or 1969 brown two-door Pontiac.

One suspect was described as wearing a green shirt and jeans while his partner had on a red pullover shirt.

Acting on confidential information, police went to a 43rd Street residence about 9 p.m. Tuesday and arrested two men and two women suspected of being involved in the Monday night robbery of a 7-Eleven Store at 4201 Boston Ave.

The men, ages 20 and 21, and a 21-year-old woman were booked into the county jail. The fourth suspect, a 17-year-old girl, was released pending filing of formal charges because she is pregnant.

According to reports, two men entered the store about 11:40 p.m. Monday and robbed the attendant of $50 cash, some change and three cartons of cigarettes.

Police said the two women arrested Tuesday are believed to have been in the bandits' getaway car.

Investigators said the two men also are suspects in the Jan. 16 holdup at Town and Country Food Store at 40th Street and Avenue A and the Jan. 11 robbery of the Reddi-Mart at 1601 66th St.

The convenience store robbery resulted in the loss of $100 and the holdup five days earlier netted bandits more than $300 cash.

Two car lots fell prey to vandals and burglars Tuesday.

Bill C. Arnold said that the tires were slashed on 11 vehicles parked on his used car lot at 2001 Clovis Road. He estimated the loss to be about $1,000.

A witness told police he saw a man in his 40s, with sandy hair, strolling through the lot between 2 a.m. and 2:20 a.m. Tuesday. After going from car to car, the man got into his vehicle and drove off, the witness said.

Leon Fink, service manager at Villa Oldsmobile at 5301 Ave. Q, said burglars scaled the chain link fence surrounding the car lot late Tuesday and broke into five vehicles parked there. He said the intruders took tape decks, CB radios and dash radios from the vehicles and he set the loss at about $200.

Robert F. White told officers he discovered Wednesday that two bracelets, worth a total of $2,000, were missing from a bureau drawer at his 7106 Zoar residence.

Billie Lou Creek of 5001 58th St. reported a $1,000 man's diamond ring was stolen from his home Sunday afternoon.

Allen V. Hundley III of 3304-B 33rd St. said he lost several thousand dollars in property, including stereo equipment, a television and gun, when burglars hit his residence during the past week.

Lee Holland listed $700 as the value of the television and stereo stolen from his 2618 Cornell St. residence between 9 p.m. Tuesday and 12:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Army's Plan To Produce Nerve Gas Vetoed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite high-level Pentagon encouragement, the Army has been denied permission to build a plant to produce lethal nerve gas for artillery shells.

Pentagon officials said Wednesday Deputy Defense Secretary Charles Dunlap recommended that the Army seek funds for starting work on a nerve gas plant but the proposal did not survive the budget-making process.

"It fell out" in the course of trimming the defense budget, one official said.

However, President Carter's budget, submitted to Congress Monday, would allow the Army about $3.7 million to continue development work on the new "binary" weapon itself, even though there was no indication that it would ever be produced.

Loss of the construction funds — the fourth time this has happened to the Army since 1975 — disappointed military officials who feel a nerve gas arsenal must be maintained and enhanced to deter any possible Soviet chemical attack.

They note intelligence reports that the Russians have been increasing their capability for that kind of warfare.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown appeared to support the military view.

He once told Congress, "Without an adequate agreement eliminating the threat of chemical warfare, we must insure that there is no real or perceived Soviet military advantage in using chemicals."

The United States has renounced first use of nerve gas or other chemical weapons, but retained the right to retaliate in kind against such an attack.

The nerve gas under discussion disables and quickly kills anyone exposed to it, but supporters of binary nerve gas weapons claim they pose no danger to people living in areas where they would be manufactured or stored.

The Army explains that a binary artillery round consists of two non-lethal chemicals in separate containers and "When fired from artillery, these substances mix while in flight to form the lethal nerve agent GB."

The Army says neither chemical poses a hazard to people or the environment when tested separately.

Despite repeated rebuffs, the Army has persisted in efforts to get ready to produce the new nerve gas.

Congress said "no" when the Army first asked for permission to start building production facilities at the Pine Bluff Arsenal in Arkansas in fiscal 1975. The Army was turned down again the next year.

UFO Investigator To Speak At Tech

To millions of people around the world UFO's are real and the question is "How long have they been visiting Earth?"

Dr. J. Allen Hynek, who has spent more than 20 years dealing with the UFO experience, will shed some light on facts and fictions of UFO's during a talk Feb. 1 at Texas Tech University.

Hynek was recruited as technical advisor for the film "Close Encounters of the Third Kind." He served for two decades as astronomical consultant to the U.S. Air Force in projects "Sign" and "Blue Book," which studied UFO sightings reported to the Air Force. He is author of technical papers in astrophysics and his book "The UFO Experience—A Scientific Inquiry" has become a definitive text on that phenomenon.

A professor of Astronomy at Northwestern University, Hynek also is director of the Center for UFO Studies.

Hynek will lecture on "The UFO Phenomenon" at 8:15 p.m. in the University Center Theatre. Tickets are $2 for Tech students and $3 for the general public. For reservations call the UC Ticketbooth.

U.S. Life 'Surprises' Ex-Labor Camp Inmate

PLAINFIELD, Ind. (AP) — After 20 years in a Chinese labor camp, Daniel Kelly sat down Wednesday to an American lunch of homemade beef stew and carry-out fried chicken. He said he wanted to find a job and build a home — but that American life surprised him at every turn.

"All the way from Hong Kong, we've been impressed with the wealth — and the waste," he said.

"Everything is surprising. Yesterday was surprising. Today has been surprising. Just everything is surprising," he said.

Kelly, 38-year-old son of an American missionary in China, spent 20 years at hard labor there before being released last month. He arrived in the United States Tuesday with his wife, Flora, their three children, and his 74-year-old mother, O Mu E.

His visa specifies a one-year visit — the stated reason is for a visit to his sister, Elizabeth Peabody, in Indiana — but "they (the Chinese) knew that once I got out, I wouldn't come back," he said.

Kelly is an American citizen — in fact, he says, he was imprisoned for refusing to renounce that citizenship and for trying to flee China — but had never before seen the United States.

Wednesday's generous meal was spread on a table in the basement of the Quaker Friends Meeting House. Kelly contrasted it with a lunch in China, which he said would have been "a bowl of rice, some boiled cabbage and hot tea. Meat was rationed, two pounds a month."

On Tuesday night, the Kellys had camped out in the Peabody family room, a space large enough to sleep five Chinese families, according to Mrs. Peabody. "They just weren't used to having all that room," she said, adding that the culture shock has been even harder on their mother and on the Kelly children than on her brother.

Nevertheless, she added, it might have been worse. "They spent a month in Hong Kong, so they've seen the television and the bright lights," she said.

Kelly said faith had helped him reach the United States, and would help him build a future for his family.

"What I want to do is put up a home and let all of us start a new life," he said, "because we'll have to start from scratch and learn from the beginning."

"I hope to do what I can do. What I need is help, for people to help me do something. The only thing I have on hand is my Chinese. I could translate or help with Sino-American relations. I just don't want to sit around and waste our time. I just want somebody to help me find a job or something."

Kelly said he has no preference about where to live, but his sister wants him to stay here. "It's family and all," Mrs. Peabody said. "Everything is so new it doesn't matter where they start. He's perfectly agreeable to anything."

Residents in this community, some 20 miles west of Indianapolis, have begun an effort to help relocate the Kellys in Plainfield.

Kelly, who went to school in Peking until he was 15, was forced to drop out after his father died, and said he wants something better for his children. Lillian, 13, Judith, 11, and John, 8. He also said he is glad they will never know the life of the labor camps.

"A typical day was work. After the work, it was the brainwashing. They didn't want you to think of anything except what they wanted you to think of, just work and brainwashing," he said.

Kelly met and married his wife, a nurse like his sister and his mother, during a leave from the camp for eye surgery. He was allowed to visit his family for two weeks at a time, once a year.

"Coming here is just like a story to them. They know nothing of my background. I never told them of prison life," he said of his children. "They're young. They've got a fresh start. Twenty years from now, they won't even remember they're Chinese, just like my sister."

"Just so they are happy and they get to do what they want to do, I'll be happy."

Deduction For Gift To Church Rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Tax Court has rejected an attempt to take a charitable deduction for gifts to the Christian Churches Church.

The deduction was sought by Mr. and Mrs. Arvin D. Walker of Newark, Ohio, who presented a receipt for a donation of $8,500.

The court noted that there was only a single, undated receipt, with no other records or witnesses of the donation, there were no regular meeting times for the church, the church was not incorporated in any state and there is no evidence with respect to any doctrine or belief of the church.

Judge Samuel B. Sterrett found the contention that a contribution had actually been made "unconvincing."

Court Grants Death Sentence Appeal

AUSTIN (AP) — A Nacogdoches man who confessed to slaying his former father-in-law in 1975 has won the appeal of his death penalty murder conviction.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals said Wednesday there was not enough evidence to show the defendant, Kenneth Julian Palafox, shot Paul Box to death while committing a robbery.

His confession said he and a friend rummaged through Box's house after the shooting and took items "to make it look like a burglary." The court said prosecutors failed to prove a burglary actually occurred.

Palafox said in a confession that he shot his former father-in-law in September 1975 after tying the victim's feet "just like I was tying up a gook."

The appeals court also turned down prosecutor's requests to reconsider its December reversals of the murder convictions of Elmer Wayne Henley and Ignacio Cuevas.

Henley, a Pasadena high school dropout, was assessed six life terms in the 1973 mass sex-torture slayings in Houston. Cuevas had been sentenced to death in slayings that ended the 1974 convict seige at the state prison.

Cuevas, Fred Gomez Carrasco and Rodolfo Dominguez took several hostages and unsuccessfully tried to escape. Carrasco, Dominguez and two hostages died in a gun battle.

The appeals court did not give written reasons for turning down the prosecutors' requests.

Henley was denied due process, the court said earlier, when the San Antonio trial judge refused his request to show evidence supporting his request to move the trial.

The Cuevas case was overturned because of the judge's refusal to grant a defense challenge to a prospective juror.

In other cases, Armando Robles' life imprisonment sentence for burglary was overturned because a San Antonio trial judge compelled him to be his own lawyer.

The high court said Robles was given three choices at his 1976 trial after saying he wanted to fire his attorney, apparently after a disagreement about plea bargaining.

Robles was told he could keep his old lawyer, get another lawyer immediately or represent himself, the appeals court said.

When Robles said he wanted another lawyer but had not hired one, the judge refused to delay the case, according to the trial transcript.

Robles had been convicted of two felonies before his burglary trial.

The court also affirmed the capital murder conviction of Death Row inmate Walter Bell Jr. in the 1974 slayings of a Port Arthur couple found stabbed and strangled in their bathtub.

Bell objected to a court-ordered sample of his blood that was used as evidence. The court rejected his arguments that the blood withdrawal violated his rights against self-incrimination.

—Threw out aggravated robbery convictions and life sentences assessed Horace George Cullum and Steven Ray Clements of Houston because the indictments were defective. In separate cases, Cullum was convicted of robbing Norma Battle in 1974 and Clements was found guilty of stealing jewelry from Charles Mize in 1975.

—Reversed Alton Minix's forgery conviction because of a defective indictment. Minix was sentenced to life in the Jefferson County case.

—Overturned the robbery conviction of Harold Eugene Jackson, accused of stealing money from Glen Burton in McLennan County in 1975. The court said the judge improperly instructed the jury on what legal theory applied in the case. Jackson had been sentenced to 25 years in prison.

In a similar case, the court reversed the aggravated robbery conviction of Charles Ray Gooden of Houston because a trial judge told the jury it could convict Gooden under a law not mentioned in the indictment. Gooden was accused of taking a camera from Jack Robinson in 1973 at gunpoint.

—Threw out the attempted burglary conviction and 10-year sentence shooting

Texas Supreme Court Enters Water Rights Case

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court stepped into a case Wednesday that the attorney general's office said contained the seeds of disruption for carefully drawn lower Rio Grande water rights.

It set a Feb. 28 hearing of the state's appeal from an Austin Court of Civil Appeals ruling that the Texas Water Commission must consider valley irrigators' pleas for higher priorities.

The case arose when the commission refused to consider an application by Crow Iron Works and other irrigators to upgrade from a "B" to an "A" priority for obtaining Rio Grande water.

Both the commission and an Austin judge said a 1969 court decision in a drawn-out case to resolve all Rio Grande water rights prevented consideration of the change in priorities.

That decision culminated a case that began in 1956 and involved 3,000 parties and 2.5 million acres of irrigated land.

But the appeals court said the 1969 decision left open the possibility of changing priorities.

The attorney general's appeal said Crow Iron Works and other parties also seeking higher priorities were basing their claims on "paper rights" to water that they bought between 1956 and 1969.

Former Attorney General John Hill, who filed the appeal, said there was no way to sort rights bought before the valley suit from those — like Crow's — that were purchased while it was pending.

"If all these paper rights retain their potential validity, as the court of civil appeals opinion infers, more than 10 years of judicial effort represented by the Valley Adjudicational, water rights in the lower Rio Grande Valley are still uncertain, and chaos may be anticipated the next time a drought occurs in the valley," the state's appeal says.

In another decision, the court ruled that two Houston oilmen are entitled to a full trial of their suit against their lawyer and a close friend who — they claim — cheated them out of a rich gas lease in Webb County.

A trial judge granted Henry J.N. Taub, the friend, and William A. McNaughton, the lawyer, summary judgments — meaning he ruled in their favor without hearing the full case.

Wilbur L. Ginther and Howard C. Martin of Houston, partners in the oil business since the 1930s, sued McNaughton and Taub, also of Houston.

Without writing a new opinion, the Supreme Court upheld a Waco court of civil appeals decision returning the case to Laredo district court for trial on its merits.

The partners held a mineral lease on 2,716 acres in Webb County, called the Alexander Lease, but fell on hard times and couldn't make their $1-an-acre annual lease payment in 1972.

Taub, after seeing confidential geological data on the lease, agreed to make the payment and received a one-third interest.

Later that year, Ginther and Martin accepted Chapter XI bankruptcy on McNaughton's advice. McNaughton also was Taub's lawyer and sometime business partner.

McNaughton obtained bankruptcy court approval of assigning an even greater interest in the lease to Taub in 1973, saying the oil partners lacked the cash to make that year's lease payment.

The court of civil appeals said, however, Ginther and Martin actually had $13,000 available to them at the time.

"If Ginther and Martin's part of the February delay rental had been paid from these funds, the lawsuit could never have arisen," the appeals court said.

Taub gained full ownership of the lease in December 1973, the court said, while Ginther and Martin apparently believed they could regain control by repaying Taub's loans.

Ginther and Martin continued their efforts to develop the lease, and Good Hope Refineries ultimately brought in gas.

"There is additional evidence that the Alexander Lease has become very valuable and that by the time of judgment in this case, Taub had received more than $300,000 in income from it," the appeals court said.

Ginther and Martin's suit alleged conspiracy, fraud, undue influence and breach of fiduciary relationship by Taub, acting individually and with McNaughton.

The appeals court said it was convinced from the record "that there is evidence supporting every theory" raised by Ginther and Martin in their effort to recover ownership of the lease.

"In fairness to Taub and to McNaughton, it should also be stated that there is proof in the record refuting those theories. But that proof only raises questions of fact on the issues and does not entitle them to a summary judgment," the court said.

Cambodia Government In Exile Vows To Repel Viet Invaders

BANGKOK (AP) — The fallen Cambodian government of Premier Pol Pot vowed Wednesday in a poem broadcast from China to "kill and kill again" until the Vietnamese invaders it claims are murdering infants and committing other atrocities in Cambodia are driven out of the country.

Pol Pot's own government was regarded as one of the most brutal in modern times because it allegedly ordered mass executions and suppressed all dissent.

The poem, broadcast by Pol Pot's radio, the Voice of Democratic Kampuchea, described the Vietnamese invaders as "beasts" and said Vietnamese troops are raping Cambodian women, plundering crops and killing "infants sleeping in their cradles by splitting open their bodies."

"We will continue to kill them even if we have to fight a long and difficult war," said the poem, titled "Everlasting Democratic Kampuchea."

Analysts in Bangkok said forces loyal to Pol Pot were still waging guerrilla war Wednesday against the Vietnamese and their Cambodian rebel proteges near Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital, and around the port of Kompong Som.

The loyalists reportedly were trying to capture an oil refinery and a radar station near Kompong Som. Thai military sources said the Vietnamese still held the refinery and radar station near Cambodia's only deep-water port but were being forced to resupply their troops by air because Highway 4 linking the seaport area to Phnom Penh was unsafe for traffic.

A radio broadcast from Phnom Penh claimed Kompong Som was calm and that the nearby province of Koh Kong had been seized by the rebels.

Western and Thai sources said the Vietnamese are beginning to face serious logistics problems, complicating their efforts to quash the die-hard loyalists.

Vietnamese combat engineers, protected by infantry, reportedly have moved up some of the major highways, including Routes 5 and 6 leading from Phnom Penh to the northwest, to repair roadbeds and bridges that had been blown up or mined by retreating Pol Pot troops.

The analysts say it is difficult to judge the level of the fighting in Cambodia but that Pol Pot loyalists are using guerrilla tactics and employing small units that are difficult to stop, even in areas around Phnom Penh, which was seized by the Vietnamese and their pro-Vietnam Cambodian Communist allies Jan. 7, two weeks after their offensive began.

The analysts said loyalist attacks are occurring in almost every corner of the country and there is some evidence of coordination and a command structure. They also said the loyalist leadership may have been divided into semi-independent regional commands.

Phnom Penh appears to be secure from a major attack, according to observers who note that foreign journalists from Soviet bloc nations sympathetic to Cambodia's new rebel government already are in the capital.

The Voice of Democratic Kampuchea, another name for Cambodia, said Wednesday that loyalist strength is increasing daily and that its "troops, with cooperation of our people and hidden guerrillas, apply all means of offense to crush the aggressors."

"We can destroy the enemy's forces gradually, day after day," the broadcast said. "They have no time to rest, to sleep or to eat."

The analysts said they can only guess about the number of loyalists still resisting the Vietnamese invasion force, which has been estimated at 100,000.

The Cambodian army had an estimated 80,000 to 100,000 personnel before the border war flared in late 1977. The analysts said the Cambodians suffered heavy casualties over the past year and in the initial phases of Vietnam's invasion, which began Dec. 25.

According to the analysts, who admit there are large gaps in knowledge about the situation, communication between the resistance and its primary backer, China, is at best rudimentary if it exists at all.

The new rebel government, the sources say, lacks trained personnel for fighting and governing, and there are mixed reports from refugees about its reception. The principal emotions expressed by some refugees is one of relief that the Pol Pot government was forced from Phnom Penh and anxiety about a takeover by Cambodia's traditional enemy, the Vietnamese.

House Demos Ask Benefits Tax Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats voted Wednesday to push for a reduction in scheduled Social Security tax hikes and told Democratic tax writers to find a way of accomplishing the rollback by the end of 1980.

Rep. Al Ullman, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said after the vote that he will do his best to follow the dictates of the resolution, although he opposes it.

And he predicted that Congress would be able to roll back the Social Security tax increases within the two-year time period.

On a voice vote, the House Democratic Caucus approved a resolution instructing Democrats on the Ways and Means Committee to write legislation reducing Social Security taxes on "employers, employees and the self-employed."

The resolution tells Democrats on the panel to "take any and all actions necessary to assure that legislation decreasing the Social Security tax burden will be reported and passed during the 96th Congress."

Although not legally binding on individual members, the resolution commits the leadership of the tax-writing committee to reconsider the politically unpopular Social Security tax hikes passed in December, 1977 and propose some kind of rollback.

The first of those increases took effect this month. Another hike is planned for next year and an even bigger one is due for Jan. 1, 1981.

The resolution was approved over the opposition of Ullman, D-Ore., and other House leaders, but Ullman said later that he interpreted the mandate of the resolution to mean "there will be no (Social Security tax) increases in January of 1981."

He said that is in line with what he hoped to do anyway, although agreed the resolution puts him under pressure to produce the tax rollback. He reiterated his earlier claim, however, that Social Security revisions can't be accomplished this year.

It's going to take two years of hard work," he told reporters.

He said the $600 million in specific Social Security benefit cuts proposed by President Carter would be considered as one method of offsetting the payroll tax increases due for 1981.

Finding another source of revenue to finance the Social Security system is an even more desirable goal, Ullman added.

"We should address this problem in the 96th Congress, not let it fester," said Rep. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., the author of the resolution.

But Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, in line to become chairman of the Social Security subcommittee, said the scheduled payroll tax increases were needed to keep the Social Security system solvent.

By passing the resolution, "what you're doing is saying we're going to cut benefits," he told the Democratic Caucus.

But sponsors of the resolution denied this, saying there are other ways of reducing the tax burden — including alternative methods for financing the program, possibly including direct tax subsidies.

The measure does not specify what legislation the committee should produce, only that it "shall be in effect no later than Jan. 1, 1981." And it specified that whatever rollback is produced would "still maintain the integrity of the Social Security system."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill was not present when the resolution was approved, but later told reporters he did not approve of it.

However, he noted that the committee planned to make a thorough review of the Social Security system in this Congress, anyway.

Ullman recently said he will review the Social Security tax increases with an eye to possibly reducing them by 1981.

Congress in December, 1977 approved a series of increases in the Social Security tax for the rest of the century in an effort to rescue it from what then appeared to be almost certain bankruptcy.

Under that legislation, the current tax rate is 6.13 percent up to $22,900 of a wage earner's 1979 salary.

Next January, the 6.13 rate will apply up to $25,900.

And in January, 1981 both the rate and the base salary will increase, the rate going to 6.65 percent and the base rising to a salary of $29,700.

Last spring, at the urging of the Democratic caucus, the Ways and Means Committee first voted 19 to 18 for a $14.5 billion rollback of Social Security tax hikes, then six days later reversed itself and voted 21 to 16 against any reduction.

Hance Fears Budget Cuts' Farm Effect

with the national defense budget the sole untouchable.

To those who "criticize the dramatic increase in the defense budget," Hance said, "My answer to these people is that we've got to have a free society and that's the way to do it."

Also on the defense note, the freshman legislator said he is "pleased" at Carter's reassurance during the State of the Union speech that he "will sign no agreement which does not enhance our national security."

Although he generally supports the president's budget, Hance said, "I think it could be trimmed down more." That belief, he added, seems to be shared by most members of Congress, especially those from the Southwest.

His own priorities for further reductions, he said, would include cuts in foreign aid and social programs, especially some in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

In the latter, for example, $11 billion supposedly was "lost" through fraud and mismanagement, Hance said, adding, "I think their budget should be cut by the same amount."

Although he commended Carter's reduction of the federal deficit through the 1980 budget, Hance is not wavering in his support for a constitutional amendment to ensure a balanced budget.

In fact, he said, he and several House colleagues Wednesday introduced a bill calling for such an amendment.

Carter's pledge to submit a surplus-producing budget by 1982 is good, Hance said. But "year in and year out" for almost the last two decades the country has operated in the red, he observed.

Although the motion was made for a mandated balanced budget, the proposal will have to be hashed over in numerous House and Senate committees before it even goes to the states for ratification, he said.

On other aspects of the State of the Union address, Hance said:

—He is "disappointed" nothing was said about the energy situation. "I think a lot of people in Washington realize the one (energy bill) passed last year is not the answer to the problem and I think it will have to be addressed again."

—He will have no comment about Carter's plan for wage insurance until he studies the detailed proposal.

—He supports the sunset legislation idea but will propose a bill "that's a lot stronger" than what Carter suggests.

—He will "wait and see" what Carter proposes on controlling hospital costs before supporting the idea.

—He cannot comment about the cutback on job training programs including those in the Comprehensive Employment Training Act until he studies it.

defense if we continue to see the erosion of the dollar," he said.

Connally is the fourth candidate to enter the GOP race. The others are Rep. Philip Crane of Illinois, Benjamin Fernandez, a Los Angeles businessman, and Harold Stassen.

Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., endorsed Connally and said he has accepted an invitation to serve on the Connally campaign's advisory committee.

"In 1980, if the country is tired of vacillation, and indecision and uncertainty, I believe voters will turn to Republican John Connally for president," Bellmon said.

Papal Trip To Mexico Starting Today Foreseen As Major Event

VATICAN CITY (AP) — On the eve of a week-long papal trip to Latin America, the Vatican said Wednesday that Pope John Paul II will personally mediate a Chilean-Argentine dispute that had raised fears of armed conflict.

Vatican observers agreed the mediator's role was a "gamble" for the new pope.

The pope leaves this morning for the Dominican Republic on his way to open the third Latin American bishops conference with a ceremony at the basilica of Our Lady of Guadalupe in Mexico City. It is his first trip abroad as pope.

The 58-year-old pontiff will travel to Puebla de Los Angeles, 80 miles from Mexico City, on Saturday for the conference. He will visit Oaxaca on Monday, Guadalajara on Tuesday and Wednesday and then will fly back to the Vatican Thursday after a brief stop in the Bahamas.

Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo declared today and Friday official holidays for nearly 100,000 public workers and many private companies also planned to give their employees time off.

In Mexico City, posters of the pope hung on walls, windows and in automobiles. Local Catholic church officials urged residents to decorate their homes and businesses in the Vatican colors of yellow and white.

The New York Times and the New York Daily News reported Wednesday that the pope has said he would like to visit the United States, possibly for the fall session of the United Nations in New York. A Vatican spokesman said he was "not aware" of any plans for such a trip.

Pope John Paul met Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko for the first time Wednesday and they conferred for nearly two hours — one of the longest encounters between a pontiff and a statesman in many years.

A Vatican statement said the pope and Gromyko reviewed issues concerning peace in the world and the situation of the Roman Catholic church in the Soviet Union, where atheism is official policy.

The Rev. Romeo Panciroli, chief Vatican spokesman, announced the pope accepted Argentina and Chile's request to help settle the dispute over territory at the southern tip of the continent.

Panciroli did not say when the mediation effort would begin. Italian Cardinal Antonio Samore shuttled between Chile and Argentina last month laying the groundwork for the effort. The 73-year-old cardinal has said representatives might come to Rome for future talks.

tution," to satisfy the peoples' desires.

But Bakhtiar warned that "as I have said before, I will not leave the fortress of the constitution," repeating his refusal to let Khomeini change the government without following constitutional procedures.

There was speculation that his representative was Jalal Tehrani, former head of the regency council representing the shah. Tehrani announced his resignation from the council Monday in Paris, but political sources said they believed the it was a precondition to being received by the Shiite Moslem leader.

The independent Tehran newsletter "Echo of Iran" said Tehrani had offered Khomeini a six-point compromise under which Khomeini would recognize the Bakhtiar government and regency council, but they would accept Khomeini's advice.

The government announced that it had granted permission for a demonstration today by supporters of the constitution.

The shah and his wife Empress Farah posed for photographers for 15 minutes in their first public appearance since they arrived in Morocco from Aswan, Egypt.

Solons Invite Talks Before Legislature By Carter, Mondale

AUSTIN (AP) — Eyes more on Washington than on Texas, the Legislature invited President Carter and Vice President Mondale on Wednesday to speak at the state Capitol.

The House also adopted a resolution urging a federal crackdown on Iranian student demonstrators.

If approved by the Senate, the resolution would be sent to Congress.

In other action, the House passed and sent to Gov. Bill Clements an emergency bill appropriating $467,118 to finance enlargement of the Dallas and Houston courts of civil appeals.

Voters approved a constitutional amendment in November adding three justices to each of the three appeals courts, enabling them to sit in two panels of three justices each. The emergency appropriation will pay salaries and expenses of the new justices and their staffs through Aug. 31.

Without debate, senators approved a House resolution inviting Carter and Mondale to address a joint session of the Legislature at their convenience.

Rep. Buddy Temple, D-Diboll, sponsored the resolution in the House and said Carter and Mondale should be given an opportunity to justify the administration's policies in a state where they often are criticized.

A House vote of 115-14 sent the Senate a resolution by Rep. Clay Smothers, D-Dallas, urging "swift and sure action" against Iranian students — and any other foreigners — "who destroy property or violate laws and statutes of this country."

Smothers' resolution adds that "this action should include deportation as the law allows."

"Here in Texas we have been directly affected by some of these demonstrations by Iranian students," said Smothers, a black conservative.

He mentioned demonstrations in Houston and in Beeville, where a number of Iranians attend junior college.

increases for meat, milk and other dairy products.

Housing costs rose by a modest 0.4 percent for a second straight month, but the government said housing would have gone up 0.8 percent in December had it not been for Proposition 13.

Costs for medical care rose 0.4 percent in December, the smallest monthly rise in more than three years. Medical care costs had risen 1.1 percent in each of the two previous months.

Prices for clothing showed no change last month, after rising only 0.1 percent in November, while transportation costs jumped a hefty 1.2 percent for a second month in a row due to big increases for gasoline and used cars.

Entertainment costs rose 0.7 percent in December, following a 0.2 percent rise in November.

Real spendable earnings — money that can be spent on consumer purchases after deducting taxes and accounting for inflation — declined 0.1 percent in December, the government said. The 3.4 percent decline for the full year was the steepest drop since 1974. Real spendable earnings rose 3.5 percent in 1977.

One proposal, construction of fences at several border crossing points, caused an uproar in Mexico last year. Editorialists dubbed the fence "the Tortilla Curtain."

Lopez Portillo said "constructing the Tortilla Curtain is not constructive in building better relationships." Clements told reporters Wednesday.

Clements spent an hour and a half with the PEMEX director but said no agreements had been reached. The U.S. government must approve the price of any sale of Mexican gas to the states.

Hospital Official's Trial Opens Today

DIMMITT (UPI) — A misdemeanor trial for a hospital administrator accused of denying emergency care to a dying child is scheduled to begin today.

Jack Newsom, Plains Memorial Hospital administrator, is accused of denying emergency care on Dec. 8 to Isidro Aguinaga Jr., an 11-month-old infant. A hospital staff physician had examined the infant and ordered immediate emergency treatment.

The infant's Spanish-speaking parents said their child was turned away, however, because they could not pay a $400 deposit. Newsom denied the allegation and said an interpreter with the Aguinagas had misunderstood what he told the family.

The child died a few hours later.

A grand jury deliberated 28 hours before returning the indictment against Newsom. If convicted, he could face a $200 maximum fine.

Ruling May Imperil State's Nurses

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas nurses are in a "precarious situation" because of a recent attorney general's opinion about providing medications, says the president of the state nurses' association.

Deanna Sevetyen of Dallas told a news conference Wednesday she is advising nurses to administer medications only if a doctor is present or if a doctor's written order has been obtained.

"The Texas Nurses Association feels that professional nursing and individual registered nurses should not be compromised by being asked or required to perform what appear to be illegal acts," said Miss Sevetyen.

The attorney general based his opinion on the "outdated" Texas Nursing Practice Act, she said.

"In substance, the opinion, which interprets the existing law, said that registered nurses may not generally provide medications to patients under standing or written orders unless the physician has prescribed for the individual patients," she said.

"Consumers should be extremely concerned about the availability of health services. There are many health services delivered today where nurses give the care and where the nurse is working under general standing or written orders for a generalized patient population.

"Statewide, nurses staff clinics for venereal disease detection, well-baby care, tuberculosis screening, nutrition programs for mothers and infants, cancer screening and immunizations."

The TNA recommended that registered nurses immediately take action to protect themselves and the consumer by:

—Asking their employers to get legal interpretations of the attorney general's opinion.

—Obtaining written instructions on all acts delegated by a physician.

—Asking employers or physicians to sign a statement acknowledging that the nurse is functioning under standing orders.

—Continuing to serve the health care needs of their patients while a solution is defined through governmental and legal processes.

Epileptic Denied Children Assails Courts

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Lynnae Moye says the courts are unfair in ruling she can't raise her two young children because she is an epileptic.

"My type of epilepsy is not violent, it would never cause harm to my children," the 24-year-old mother of 2-year-old Tanya and 4-month-old Bret said Wednesday. "I don't thrash about. There is nothing really wrong with me."

Mrs. Moye's seizures of petit mal epilepsy occur only at night, and only after emotional distress, according to Boise neurologist Dr. Michael O'Brien. He testified that Mrs. Moye's epilepsy would not prevent her from taking care of her children.

But District Judge Gilbert Norris granted custody of Tanya and Bret to Terry Moye, 37, whose job as a mapmaker with the U.S. Geologic Survey forces him to travel in seven Western states.

Norris, in his decision, said Mrs. Moye could not act decisively for at least 10 minutes after a seizure. He said she also apparently lacked energy "to properly look after said children" for a day after a seizure.

Mrs. Moye said the seizures, which last from 30 to 60 seconds, prevent her from being able to talk for a half hour and give her migraine headaches.

Mrs. Moye's mother, Mrs. Dee Cady, said the seizures began when Mrs. Moye was 15. From that time until she married at 20, Mrs. Moye had experienced only two or three seizures, her mother said.

The Idaho Supreme Court has suspended Norris' ruling while the high court reviews the case. Mrs. Moye said the court likely will take ten months or more to decide. She has custody of the children while the case is pending.

She filed last October for a divorce from Moye, who, she contended, used to grab her by the neck and throw her down on their bed as she rose from a seizure, contrary to O'Brien's orders not to touch her.

"It seems our marriage was setting them (the seizures) off," she said. "I was very emotional and couldn't do anything about what was happening. With Terry holding me down they were getting worse."

O'Brien testified that since leaving her husband last October Mrs. Moye has not had a seizure.

The divorce is not final pending a property settlement. Meanwhile, she receives welfare assistance amounting to $323 a month.

Mrs. Moye said Norris' custody decision earlier this month is unfair.

"All of a sudden to have a judge say, 'I can't have my kids, I couldn't understand why,'" she said.

Mrs. Moye said her seizures have never affected her children. Only once did one of the children awaken while she was gripped with an attack.

"I don't think it will affect my children at all," she said. "When Tanya gets a little older I'll just tell her what a seizure is. A child is more willing to accept things than an adult."

New Ball Point Pen Erases Like Pencil

BOSTON (AP) — Gillette Co. announced Wednesday that its Paper Mate Division will sell a new ballpoint pen with ink that erases as easily as a pencil lead.

The company heralded the new pen as the first major innovation in the writing field since the introduction of felt tip pens in the early 1960s.

BAD BREAK

LONDON (WNS) — Sharon Patterson, 20, canceled her wedding a few hours before the ceremony because her horse, Aethon, suffered a tendon injury that required attention. Bridegroom Roger Crewe, 27, molds fiber glass for a living and stepped right in to make a cast for the filly's bad leg. For the moment the couple have given up their honeymoon home to live with Aethon in the stable.

The pen works like an ordinary ballpoint, but the company says the ink erases about as well as the lead from a No. 2 pencil. Though it comes off with an ordinary rubber eraser, the ink becomes permanent if allowed to dry for a few days.

The pen, called an Eraser Mate, will go on sale nationally in April and cost $1.69. A refill with an extra eraser will cost $1.19.

Gillette said it has been working on the new pen for 10 years.

Carter, Kennedy Lead Reagan In Survey

By LOUIS HARRIS

If the 1980 presidential election were today and Ronald Reagan were the Republican candidate, President Carter would beat him by a decisive 55-38 percent. If the 1980 contest were between Reagan and Sen. Edward Kennedy, Kennedy would win by 55-39 percent.

This latest ABC News-Harris Survey, taken late last month among a cross section of 1,039 voters nationwide, is significant because most observers feel that Reagan holds a big head start in the race for the Republican nomination in 1980. To be running 16 to 17 points behind the two most popular Democrats is not good news for Reagan. At best, it means he will have a long, uphill battle to close the gap. At worst, these results cast doubt on Reagan's ability to win the election if he becomes the GOP nominee.

For President Carter, the findings of this survey signal a sharp political comeback since last spring, when his standing in the polls took a nose dive. Last May, Carter ran behind Reagan among a comparable cross section of voters by a narrow 47-45 percent. Since then, Carter has picked up a full 10 points, while Reagan has dropped nine points. Instead of being two points behind, the president is now 17 points ahead.

Over this same period, Kennedy has also gained on Reagan, but by much less than the dramatic Carter jump. Kennedy has gained one point, from 54 to 55 percent, while Reagan has declined three, from 42 to 39 percent. Thus, Kennedy has increased his former substantial 12-point lead to a wider 16-point edge over Reagan.

A probing look underneath these overall trends yields vastly different patterns of voter support for President Carter and Sen. Kennedy, even though they both run ahead of Ronald Reagan by almost identical margins.

On a regional basis, Carter wins the East by 59-36 percent and the South by a comparable 59-35 percent. He is ahead by a smaller 54-40 percent in the Midwest and loses the West by a tight 46-45 percent. This pattern parallels the 1976 Carter run, when he won his narrow victory in the big cities of the East and in the South.

By contrast, Kennedy wins the East by 60-34 percent, the Midwest by a sizable 60-35 percent, and the West by a clear 53-40 percent. However, in the South, Kennedy holds a very close 49-47 percent lead, nothing comparable to Carter's 24-point margin. The Massachusetts Democrat emerges as by far the strongest potential candidate in the North, but he would have a hard time carrying the South.

Other segments of the electorate among which Carter makes a stronger showing include residents of rural areas, where Carter is ahead of Reagan by a slim 49-46 percent, but where Kennedy trails Reagan by 50-47 percent. Carter also does better among the college-educated, where he leads Reagan by 57-37 percent, compared with a much smaller Kennedy lead over Reagan of 52-43 percent.

The president is ahead of Reagan among professional people by 55-40 percent, while Kennedy is ahead of Reagan among the same group by a much narrower 51-46 percent. Among voters with incomes of $25,000 or more, Carter leads Reagan by a nine-point 51-42 percent margin, but Kennedy does no better than a 48-48 percent standoff with Reagan among voters in this same group.

Kennedy makes a relatively better showing than Carter among union members, Catholic voters, liberals, and big city and suburban residents. While the Carter strength is most evident among more affluent groups who are more likely to come out to vote, the heart of Kennedy support lies more among the less affluent groups where turnout is traditionally lower. However, past surveys indicate that Kennedy would be far more successful in arousing real interest among lower-income and minority voters to come out and vote for him.

On balance, however, these latest ABC News-Harris Survey results will help President Carter more than they will Sen. Kennedy among Democratic politicians. If Reagan were the 1980 GOP nominee, this survey shows that the president could make at least as strong a run as Kennedy. As the incumbent who was a heavy favorite to win re-election, Jimmy Carter would be a candidate that the Democrats would have a hard time turning down.

Armstrong's Worldwide Church In Jeopardy

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — While Herbert W. Armstrong, an 86-year-old self-proclaimed prophet of God, secludes himself in his Tucson, Ariz., mansion, the fight continues — perhaps the last battle — for control of his crumbling empire, the Worldwide Church of God.

Armstrong is estranged from his son and protégé, Garner Ted Armstrong. He is in ill health. His empire is held together by radio waves, a computer data bank and postage stamps.

And his grip on it is under attack in the courts — by the state and by disenchanted members.

Those critics say plentiful contributions are being squandered, and that the people in control have been recklessly liquidating the church's resources.

Armstrong is being defended by his top aide, Stanley Rader, and by attorneys who file appeals while a court-appointed receiver administers church finances — takes over everything, in fact, except ecclesiastical functions.

This week, hundreds of members sat in at church headquarters, trying to keep the receiver out. The state got a court order to get the receiver into the building, but the members blocked entrance of an aide of the receiver Wednesday — at least temporarily.

It is a long way down the road from the point where Armstrong began during the Great Depression.

A former salesman and advertising man, he broadcast his first radio sermon in 1934, in Eugene, Ore. Influenced at first by Seventh Day Adventists, he devised his own fundamentalist doctrine, which draws also on the Mormonistic belief that man is becoming God, on old Hebrew laws regarding the Sabbath and foods — and on tithing, the giving of 10 percent of one's income to the church.

Eventually, Armstrong would claim that he was the one true church, and that he was the only man to preach the gospel of Christ correctly since the first century. He would make predictions, but they would sometimes prove wrong. He set dates for Christ's second coming and the end of the world: he said in 1936 that Adolf Hitler would conquer Russia and that Benito Mussolini would capture half of Jerusalem; he said in 1940 that the United States and Great Britain would "annihilate the Turks from off the earth."

Believers flocked to him — today membership is 70,000. And they pay.

Members give at least 10 percent of gross income. Many give more than 30 percent. Some people who are not members have contributed heavily anyway.

such as former world chess champion Bobby Fischer.

At the peak of success, though, something went sour. Financial and family problems mounted. Armstrong's strict moral pronouncements and the failure of his prophecies became a point of contention with his son, Garner Ted — along with the son's alleged adulterous conduct.

The final rift came last year, when Garner Ted was "disfellowshipped" and started his own Church of God International.

By that point, observers estimate, the church had become a $70 million annual operation — with a $1 million a year deficit.

For about five years, church funding had been dropping. Disenchanted ministers had left, dissatisfied with responses to their questions about money and to their requests for a voice in church affairs.

There was dissatisfaction, too, among the mostly middle-class members. Two years ago, Armstrong said the church was in financial trouble and asked followers to borrow in order to increase donations. But some looked at members' self-sacrifice and the lavish lifestyle of Armstrong, Rader and other officials — and they balked.

Last fall, six members took covertly obtained documents and personal stories to the state attorney general's office, asking that a suit be filed alleging misuse of public trust funds. The state complied.

"The problem is that Rader and Armstrong have been spending money at such a high rate on themselves and their projects for so many years that they just have run out of money and had to start selling off property," says ex-member John Trechak.

Court documents detail expenditures of $2,000 for a fur coat in Hong Kong, $5,000 for Steuben crystal in Switzerland, Paris hotel bills of $44,000 in one week. Church attorney Allan Browne acknowledged the expenditures, but defended them.

"The members identify with this. Some people go about spreading the gospel in rags. Other people like to do it differently."

There were other complaints — about sales of college campuses in Brickwood, England, and Big Sandy, Texas. Rader says the schools had been cut back, for which he and Armstrong blame Garner Ted. "So much secularity had crept in under the administration of Garner Ted Armstrong, that we wanted to take it back to its original concept, a small college to train ministers for the church," said Rader.

It is only one problem for which the officials blame Garner Ted. Others are blamed on dissidents — or on Satan.

Alvin Earl Timmons, principal plaintiff in the suit, said he is not a dissident, but a loyal member who thinks Armstrong is being misled.

Trechak, who publishes an anti-Armstrong newsletter, says Rader has taken control, seeking personal profit before the bubble bursts.

Meanwhile, the fight confuses the membership. Many members have signed petitions saying they regard Armstrong as an agent of God with authority to spend little money as he sees fit. They vow to send no more money as long as the receiver has control. Others say they won't give to Armstrong until they find out if the charges are true.

"Their beliefs are having a head-to-head confrontation with reality," Trechak says. "They say, 'If Herbert Armstrong is God's apostle, how could God allow this to happen?' They see no angels coming down to rescue him. I think there is an analogy to the reaction in Guyana with the People's Temple. This has been their whole lives and it's threatened."

Church Offices Locked

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — While sheriff's deputies tried to escort a court-appointed receiver into the offices of the Worldwide Church of God on Wednesday, some 400 church members kept the doors locked, sang hymns, and prepared for mass arrests.

The members of the religious sect, which was founded more than 40 years ago by Herbert W. Armstrong, had occupied church headquarters on the campus of the church-owned Ambassador College for two days.

The deputies turned back three times when they got to the locked doors, with church deacon Wayne Pyle telling them at one point, "If you want to get in here, you'll have to break the doors down."

Meanwhile, 2,000 more members were in the student center, singing, reading the Bill of Rights, and listening to speeches by leaders.

The aim was to stop receiver Steven Weisman from taking possession of church assets and records. He was empowered to do so as the result of a suit which alleges that those in control of the church have been squandering funds and liquidating assets. The suit, prompted by dissident church members, was filed by the state.

Armstrong, who is 86, remained at his Tucson, Ariz., home, but the protesters listened to a six-minute radio speech by him in which he said, "I knew nothing of your meetings over the last two days, but we must obey God, not man." Armstrong's top aide, Stanley Rader, urged members to stop sending tithes to church headquarters. "I'm sending mine to Mr. Armstrong in Tucson," he said.

Growth, Success Of Baking Business Icing On Cake For Jacksboro Woman

JACKSBORO (AP) — When 63-year-old Ida Mae Stark begins her baking, the house fills with the sweet smell of icing and dough — lots of icing and mounds of dough.

She looks like a sweet little lady who'd reach out and pinch your cheek with a smile and a greeting. "Hello there, sonny."

But this little lady sells her cakes — fills orders from El Paso to New Orleans — and doesn't have time to pinch cheeks, sonny.

"We deliver most of them by vans or station wagons, but we have used our airplane to make some deliveries," says the grand dame of wedding cakes from this town 60 miles northwest of Fort Worth.

Actually, most of her business comes from out-of-town customers. Her cakes have been served in the governor's mansion for weddings of the daughters of Govs. Preston Smith and Dolph Briscoe. She does business in Dallas and Fort Worth, and occasionally sends cakes to customers in El Paso, Midland, Galveston, and McAllen, as well as to points in Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana.

One customer drove in from Tennessee to pick up a cake.

"The price depends on two things — the looks of the cake and how many people you want it to serve," says Mrs. Stark, who sells four to 12 cakes a week. Her least expensive wedding cake is a "two-story" cake for $95, to serve 75. Prices for cakes with five levels, big enough to serve 1,050 guests, start at $2,000. Delivery is extra.

One that sold for $7,100 was for a Dallas wedding in 1974. It stood 14 feet tall and

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a fairly sensible woman (age 41), and the mother of four fine children. For the last three months I have been avoiding surgery which I need badly. I am running out of excuses.

To be perfectly frank about it, Ann, I'm scared to death of what I might say while under the anesthetic. My husband is the type who would insist on being at my side throughout the entire procedure. When I had the children he didn't leave me alone for a minute.

If I started to talk while under the anesthetic it could be the end of our marriage. There's a part of my life he knows nothing about — as you may have guessed.

Please tell me what to do, Ann. There's got to be an answer but I don't see it. — Lady With A Past

Dear Lady: Talk this over with your physician. He's heard it all before — and so have I. Some people insist on novocaine when their dentists recommend gas, for this same reason.

The simplest solution would be for your physician to bar all relatives from the operating room and the recovery room, and not allow anyone to visit you until you have come out completely from under the anesthetic.

Dear Ann Landers: I think it is dreadful the way some people write and tell you off. If they don't like your advice why do they read your column?

Those crass comments about your lip and your Midwestern twang were totally uncalled for. And that man who suggested dental work to improve your speech should have his subscription canceled.

People praise you when you agree with them but when you tell them things they don't want to hear they lash out and become ugly and hostile.

I'm convinced that a lot of folks who write to you for "help" don't want an honest opinion. They are merely looking for support for their own position. They want to shove the column in someone's face and say, "See, I am right."

I think it's time you were told how much we appreciate the work you do. Your column is must reading in our family and has been for over 20 years. You are as sound as the Liberty Bell. — We Love You In Des Moines

Dear D.M.: Thanks for your beautiful letter — but I ought to tell you, dear, the Liberty Bell is cracked.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a father who doesn't have much hair left but I am ready to pull out the remaining strands. The problem: How can I get my 16-year-old to stop wearing my clothes? You are probably thinking, "All 16-year-old sons like to get into Dad's clothes." Well, it's not my son I'm writing about — it's my daughter.

She grabs my sweaters, shirts, socks, gloves, caps — everything I own seems to wind up on this girl's back. Of course, they swim on her but that doesn't matter — the bigger the better, except for jeans. With them the TIGHTER the better.

Is there a solution to this problem or am I doomed for life? — Soon A Jaybird

Dear Jay: Not for life — just until she gets married. And then you'll miss her like crazy.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? Ann Landers' completely new "The Bride's Guide" will relieve your anxiety. To receive a copy, send a dollar, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (15 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

The Professor let the spade come around to his ace. Then he led a club and double finessed with dummy's 10.

East took his king and led back a heart, whereupon the Professor rose with the ace, repeated the club finesse and eventually wound up with 11 tricks.

"Could we have held you to less?" asked the student who sat East. "Also, why did you play the ten and not the queen of clubs?"

"If you had ducked the first club, I could lay down dummy's ace and pick up the whole club suit. But I was not looking at all the cards. I would undoubtedly have come back to my hand with a high heart to repeat the double club finesse. You would take your king, knock out my other high heart and hold me to ten tricks since I would not have had time to knock out your ace of diamonds."

We are going to answer the student's second question.

The Professor played the 10 of clubs because it was the correct play. With split honors, he would have cost himself a trick if East held the singleton jack and gained one if East held the singleton king.

With both honors in one hand he would pick up the whole suit if West held king-jack-small, which was his extra percentage.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: I have been taking prednisone for almost 10 years now for colon and respiratory problems. Now I have been told I have high blood pressure and have to take Dyazide pills. Also, both of my ankles have become swollen. I understand this can be an effect of the prednisone. Is that true? Do the two drugs work against each other? — E.C.

It is not unusual to have a side effect from one medicine and need another to correct that. Yours is a classic example.

Prednisone is a steroid drug. One of its unfortunate side effects is the retention of sodium and fluid in the body and hypertension (high blood pressure). Dyazide is a diuretic, that helps release body fluid (and sodium), which may have been retained in excess, perhaps accounting for your swollen ankles. The two drugs you mention can be used together in such a situation. You undoubtedly require the steroid to control whatever lung and colon problems you have.

Since steroid drugs, like prednisone, have undesired side effects, it is well to be checked periodically when taking them over an extended period.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MRS. H. — The ball-like protrusion you refer to sounds like a prolapsed uterus. Your frequent urination is probably related to it since a dropped bladder often is. Surgery is the effective treatment. You should get over your shyness sufficiently to seek help.

Dear Dr. Ruble: How is gout actually diagnosed? Can blood tests show it? — J.J.

The one really sure way is to remove (aspirate) some of the fluid from the affected joint to see if it contains uric acid crystals. Uric acid may be elevated in blood tests. The X-ray has a characteristic appearance in some cases. See the booklet, "Gout: The Modern Way to Stop It," for answers to your questions on controls, which I discussed here recently. Send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I have read that camphor is poisonous. Our favorite skin-cream contains it, also material we use for chapped lips. Some rubs contain it. We have stopped using them. Can you please give me more information on this ingredient, and am I right to avoid such products? — Mrs. O.S.

You are right about camphor being poisonous when swallowed, but the proper use of the products you mention should do no harm. The skin creams and rubs are OK.

Camphor is present in a number of other products — moth balls, for example — so they should be kept out of reach of tots, who may eat just about anything they can get in their mouths. Signs of camphor poisoning would be headache, vomiting and excitement. Convulsion and shock may follow.

Dear Dr. Ruble: How dangerous are fatty tumors? My son has one on his back. He has had it for several years. I've had it checked from time to time but the two doctors I took him to didn't seem to be too concerned about it. Can it become cancerous? — Mrs. R.M.

Fatty tumors (lipomas) are benign collections of fat cells that are enclosed in a capsule. They are soft and can be moved around, not being attached to surrounding tissue. They are harmless and painless. Removal is not necessary unless they become a cosmetic nuisance. Fat people seem more prone to develop them.

These most common of all tumors occur chiefly on the trunk, back of the neck, forearms or armpits. They grow to a certain size, stop and remain in place. As long as they do not change or grow rapidly they are not dangerous. Cancer rarely develops in these tumors.

It's not clear just why they form, but most people will develop some form of benign tumor like this sometime in their lives.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

After a very frightening experience last New Year's night, my husband and I want to share it with your readers with the hope that they can avoid a similar, costly, near disaster.

We placed a compressed log on the cold fireplace grate as we had done countless times before. In twenty minutes we had a raging inferno as flames shot up the chimney and smoke billowed into the living room and throughout the house.

The smoke alarm shrieked its warning. As we were running around trying to decide what to do, a neighbor suddenly appeared to say that sparks were shooting from the chimney some twenty feet and falling back onto the wood shingles. Fortunately, the roof didn't catch fire and our home furnishings were insured.

We made it our business to learn more about the use (and safety) of compressed logs and care of the fireplace. Even now, we don't know exactly what caused the "blow-out" as we call it.

The following are some tips furnished by the "Governor's Office of Energy Conservation," Denver, Colo.

Every four or five years your chimney should be cleaned. Chimney sweep equipment can be rented in most cities.

You can use a chemical or water fire extinguisher to put out a compressed log.

To safely use compressed logs, follow these four safety rules:

1. Use only one log at a time.
2. Do not add a second log to one which is still hot.
3. Do not use a broken log.
4. Never use with paper or with a natural log.

We hope our experience will serve as a good teacher for someone else. So, if you use these compressed logs, please be careful and follow the above safety rules. — Mari and Bob James

Thanks for these timely tips. Let's hope that no one else has to learn the hard way, as you did. — Heloise

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:

My girlfriend told me about using those quart bleach bottles, filled with sand, for weights to firm up the upper part of my arms.

I found them a little hard to hold on to so I came up with the idea of using those quart liquid dishwashing detergent bottles. As these bottles are kinda odd-shaped, they are much easier to hold. — J.D. Goodridge

You are smart. I'll bet some of us gals could use a little of these exercises. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I have a good use for leftover carpet scraps.

Make a wall decoration with the carpet as the background — with dried flowers, leaves, or any kind of driftwood you can scrounge up out of the woods.

This makes a beautiful arrangement for the winter. — Jane Smith

DEAR HELOISE:

I have read your column for many years. Now, as a newby, I have read and how helpful and valuable it is. Thanks!

I'd like to share a tip with you. We like to keep a magnet clip on our refrigerator for notes. But with a new fridge, the thought of scratching it with the magnet made me cringe.

My husband took out a small coffee filter and put it between the refrigerator and magnet. It is this enough to allow the magnet to still be effective — and no scratches. Fantastic! — M.K.

THIS COLUMN is written for you, the homemaker. If you have a hint or a problem write to Heloise, 226 E. 65th St., New York, N.Y. 10017. Because of the tremendous volume of mail, Heloise is unable to answer individual letters. She will, however, answer your questions in her column whenever possible.

150 Foster Care Children May Have Died In Guyana

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional panel, opening hearings on child abuse, announced Wednesday it is investigating whether as many as 150 foster care children were placed in the Peoples Temple before the mass murder-suicide last November in Guyana.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said that at his request, the General Accounting Office is examining county foster care records in California and the list of the dead from Jonestown, the jungle commune founded by temple leader Jim Jones.

"Names turn up on both lists," Cranston said. "It means the Rev. Jim Jones may have received hundreds of thousands of dollars in government child support and that some of those children died in the Jonestown tragedy."

Cranston said one such death already has been verified. He did not identify the victim.

Cranston, chairman of the Senate Human Resources subcommittee on child and human development, disclosed the inquiry by the GAO, the investigative arm of Congress, as the outset of his panel's hearings on child abuse in government-sponsored and private institutions.

"Millions of federal dollars spent each year for institutional care of American children end up financing virtual hellholes where children are beaten, starved and sexually abused," the senator said.

Kenneth Wooden of Princeton, N.J., an authority on juvenile delinquency, gave the subcommittee documents he said show that the Peoples Temple and some of its members operated foster care homes for children in California.

The late Reverend Jones was receiving from the federal government and the state of California $137,000 annually for the operation of Happy Acres, an institution for 13 young retarded persons," Wooden said.

A copy of the lease for the Mendocino County institution "substantiates that all profits from Happy Acres were to be remitted to the Peoples Temple," Wooden said.

"Also, while Jones operated in California, his numerous 'child care homes' for foster children — public wards of the state — netted hundreds of thousands of dollars," he said.

$9.6 Billion Spent On CETA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said Wednesday more than 3.3 million persons got public or private sector jobs or job training in the fiscal year that ended last Sept. 30.

Marshall said most of those enrolled under provisions of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) — more than 2.1 million jobless or unemployed persons — were in training programs and related services.

Marshall said the total cost to the taxpayers of these jobs and job training efforts was $9.6 billion.

Some of the young bodies found at Jonestown remain unidentified, Wooden said, because Guyana did not require fingerprinting of anyone under age. More than 900 persons died in the Guyana tragedy.

Cranston said his subcommittee had found that the "apparent misuse" of federal child support payments to the Peoples Temple might obscure an even larger problem.

"Some institutions for handicapped, abandoned or delinquent children are apparently providing abysmal living conditions for children in return for millions of dollars in federal support," he said.

"We have heard reports of children being strung up by the arms and legs in iron cages, held in solitary confinement in leg irons and handcuffs, tear-gassed and placed as punishment in dormitories with older inmates who sexually abuse them," Cranston said.

"But despite repeated stories of incidents of brutal treatment of children in some of these homes, there does not appear to have been any systematic examination of the scope of the problem on a national basis."

Cranston and Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., have introduced legislation that would authorize the attorney general to initiate or intervene in actions on behalf of certain institutionalized individuals — including children — whose constitutional rights may be violated.

Ashland Selling Domestic Oil, Gas Operations

NEW YORK (AP) — Ashland Oil Inc. said Wednesday it was working on an arrangement to sell most of its domestic oil- and gas-producing operations to an unidentified bidder for about $750 million.

Ashland, which has been divesting itself of its less profitable operations in recent months, said "negotiations will proceed to finalize sales contracts" for the properties.

Excluded from the sale, for now, are operations in the eastern part of the nation and some royalty interests owned by the company. Royalty interests are shares of other companies' operations.

Ashland, based in Ashland, Ky., said bids for the Eastern properties exceeded $100 million, but it decided to wait until it could determine how new natural gas pricing regulations would affect the properties.

The company, the nation's 15th-largest oil firm, said it would consider the sale of the royalty interests "in the near future."

for its oil and gas operations. John-Manville Corp., which had said it was interested in the properties, said Wednesday it did not know what its status was in the negotiations.

Analysts said Ashland's motive in divesting itself of its less profitable operations was to improve its earnings base.

"Most of the major companies, if you split them up and sold them in bits and pieces, would be worth a lot more than their market price," said Eugene Nowak, who follows Ashland and other oil companies for Blythe Eastman Dillon. "That's what Ashland's doing."

Ashland Chairman Orin E. Atkins said last June that the company would "critically examine every segment of the company which hasn't been a net cash generator or doesn't possess a high potential for growth."

The segments, he said, included domestic and Canadian exploration and production operations, a construction subsidiary, and several chemical divisions.

Although most of the divisions were turning healthy profits, analysts said, they weren't nearly as lucrative as other areas of Ashland's business. Headed on an aggressive and expensive exploration program, Ashland decided to put all its eggs into the more profitable baskets.

"They're saying, 'Why don't we just get rid of them, get the billion dollars and put it into something more profitable, like coal,'" said Nowak. "They want to improve their return on investment capital and improve their rate of return to stockholders," he said.

"We were going in the hole, although it looked as if we were making money," Atkins said recently. "You report great earnings, but you're not generating any cash."

Ashland went looking for buyers for its unwanted subsidiaries, charging the 25 potential customers $25,000 each to examine its wares.

In September, Ashland sold the Canadian subsidiary to Kaiser Resources for $316 million. A few weeks later, two chemical companies were sold to Textron Inc. and Germany's Schering A.G. for a total of $80 million.

The proceeds from these sales were used to buy back $272 million of the company's stock and to settle $100 million worth of debentures, clearing up large portions of the firm's debts.

The divestitures leave Ashland with emphasis on its strongest divisions: coal, chemicals and gasoline and oil refining and marketing.

Although the production companies sold accounted for 10 percent of the crude consumed by Ashland's seven refineries, the firm feels it can make up the difference from other sources.

Ashland increased its dividend in November and announced a 3-for-2 stock split.

On Wednesday, it said net income for the first fiscal quarter ended Dec. 31 was $50.7 million, or $1.33 per share, compared to $39.9 million, or 88 cents per share, a year earlier. Revenues rose from $1.32 billion to $1.51 billion in the quarter.

Energy Czar Calls For Increased Gas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger urged state regulatory commissions on Wednesday to encourage new residential hookups with natural gas systems.

Residential gas for new homes has been discouraged or banned in many areas because of past shortages and the uncertainty of future supplies.

Schlesinger's letters to the chairmen of the commissions were part of a recent campaign by the Carter administration and the gas industry to increase natural gas consumption which was depressed by the shortages of the past few years.

The industry says additional gas will soon become available as a result of the new Natural Gas Policy Act, which created a market division that discouraged some gas sales, and that new gas will be developed under the act's pricing structure.

Schlesinger has begun promoting new gas marketing primarily as a substitute for imported oil, with the aim of reducing the nation's dollar drain to foreign oil producers.

But his letters suggested that home gas hookups would be a good idea even if the gas were diverted from industrial use.

The letters said an Energy Department study shows that encouraging residential gas use provides a net economic benefit because it is cheaper for industries to switch from gas to oil than for new homes to use oil or electric heating.

Five Men Arrested For Burning Cross

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Five young men have been arrested and charged with criminal mischief and disorderly conduct for burning a cross outside the home of a black man on Christmas Eve, police said Wednesday.

Officers said they believe the incident was a prank but Edward Browne, on whose property the cross was burned, was not amused. "I don't consider it to be a prank," said Browne.

Those arrested ranged in age from 20 to 15 years.

Police Chief Thomas Rotunda, during a news conference announcing the arrests, said he felt the cross burning should not reflect on the community.

However, Browne and the president of the state chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Bernard Fisher, said the charges were not serious enough.

"I certainly don't think it's a mere mischief matter," Browne said. "This has been a frightening thing in my household ... It's going to take me some years to straighten our minds out. I tell you one thing — Christmas won't be the same for a long time."

Browne said that Tuesday night was the first night since the cross burning that he had not barricaded his house.

"You never know what's going to happen next," he said. "If someone burns a cross in front of my house, it has a lot of definite meanings, like get out or something," he said.

Browne has told police that shortly after midnight Dec. 24, he was talking with his wife and two children when he noticed a light coming from the front yard. He said he looked out and saw the cross in flames.

He said a woman's coat and other clothing were draped over the cross.

Browne, his wife Barbara, who is white, and their children, moved to their home last summer. Browne is a self-employed employment agent who finds and places executives for large corporations.

Those arrested were identified by police as Robert E. Bryant, 20, Ridgefield; Robert Stewart, 18, Ridgefield; Brian Keenan, 17, Bethel; Mark W. Swan, 17, New Fairfield; and a 15-year-old Danbury boy whose name was not released because of his age.

Farmworkers' Austin March Begins Saturday

Members of the Texas Farmworkers Union will begin their "March for Equality" Saturday in Muleshoe and will end the journey at the steps of the state Capitol on March 10.

The march to Austin, via Dallas-Fort Worth, was organized for the purpose of seeking publicity and support for the Agriculture Labor Relations Act.

March participants plan to make camp in front of the Capitol building until the end of the legislative session.

The bill, if approved by the legislature, would allow Texas farmworkers to conduct elections to determine what union should represent the workers in collective bargaining situations with employers over wages, working conditions and benefits.

Farmworkers were specifically excluded from the 1933 Wagner Act which allowed most other workers the right to determine union representation.

March organizers hope to use publicity from the cross-burner to argue what they term the "intimidation" right-to-work law.

A rally for march participants will be conducted at 7 p.m. Friday at the Chicano Unidos y Campesinos office, 214 Ave. D, in Muleshoe.

The "March for Equality" will begin at 6 a.m. Saturday with a mass celebration by Bishop of the Diocese of Amarillo, Lawrence De Falso. Saturday's activities also will be conducted at the Chicano Unidos y Campesinos offices.

The parade of farmworkers is expected to arrive Wednesday in Lubbock, where they will spend the night at the Christian Renewal Center, 303 Toledo.

Persons completing the course will be qualified to work for a jewelry store or to be self-employed in jewelry repair.

Judge Opposes Releasing Killer After 14 Months In Mental Hospital

HARLINGEN (AP) — A South Texas county judge says he's upset at a system that will free an accused killer after 14 months in a mental hospital.

Fernando Davila is due to be released from Rusk State Hospital Thursday. The 21-year-old man had been committed to Rusk by Jim Wells County Judge T.L. Harville for evaluation after Davila was found innocent by reason of insanity of a November 1977 slaying here.

Now, after an extensive evaluation, doctors at Rusk say that Davila is sane. Harville does not think Davila should be freed but added he is probably powerless to keep him in custody.

"I don't know any way he can be held on these temporary commitments. Whenever the doctors say he is no longer apt to hurt himself or someone else they can turn him loose," the judge said in a telephone interview from his Alice office.

Davila was arrested and charged several days after the mutilated body of Emuel Davis, 67, was found in a local church. The victim had been stabbed more than 100 times and parts of his body were missing.

Davila made a statement to police about the slaying and led investigators to butcher knives believed to be the murder weapons.

"I think there's something wrong when a man can brutally murder someone, suddenly declare he's insane and get off with 90 days," Harville said. "He should have been sent there until such time as he was competent to stand trial."

Alice District Attorney Arnold Garcia, also upset at the pending release, said he planned to file a county court petition aimed at insuring Davila will not be freed. But Harville said he saw little chance of meeting the requirements for such an order.

Davila was committed to Rusk after State District Judge Woodrow Laughlin sent the case to county court for a commitment hearing. In October 1978 Harville ordered an evaluation at Rusk.

Paul Kaufman, acting superintendent at the state hospital, said Wednesday, "there's no indication of mental illness."

Kaufman also said he was not permitted to say whether doctors thought Davila was mentally ill when he arrived at the East Texas hospital.

Harville said Davila had come before him in the past.

"I sent that boy to reform school twice. I just don't know what can be done about it."

Testimony Concluded In City's Federal Suit

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Testimony concluded Wednesday in the federal court suit challenging Lubbock's at-large method of council members as one rebuttal witness and a witness testifying about attorneys' fees took the stand.

Final arguments in the case tentatively are scheduled for 9:30 a.m. on March 22. U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward asked the plaintiffs to file post-trial briefs on the case by Feb. 9, with the city's answer due on Feb. 26. The plaintiffs' rebuttal brief must be filed by March 5.

Mary Louise Ruiz, who works for the Slaton city attorney, testified Wednesday that minorities have been elected to the Slaton City Commission from single-member districts.

Slaton's Ward 4, which she said was about 60 percent Mexican-American and 40 percent black, has elected either a black or Mexican-American commission member for the past 10 years.

Currently the ward is represented on the commission by a black woman, she said.

Since the six plaintiffs' attorneys are asking the judge to require the city to pay their attorneys' fees, as provided by federal civil rights statutes, Lubbock attorney Warren Goss testified Wednesday on what would constitute a reasonable fee.

Goss testified each of the attorneys is entitled to $75 to $100 an hour for work performed outside the courtroom, and between $800 and $900 per attorney for each full day spent in court.

Goss cited the complexity and sophistication of the case in justifying the fees and noted all attorneys except one will have handled the case without compensation unless attorneys' fees are awarded.

A controversial case such as this could harm the private practice of the attorneys involved, Goss said.

"The case is extremely undesirable," he explained.

However, Travis Shelton, one of the attorneys for the City of Lubbock, noted most attorneys know at the outset of the case "if it's going to be unpopular or if they're not going to get paid."

The class-action suit, filed on behalf of all Mexican-Americans and blacks in Lubbock, seeks to have city council members elected from single-member districts rather than from the city at-large.

Man, 31, Charged For Threat

A 31-year-old Lubbock man was charged Wednesday with retaliation against a state witness by threatening to kill him and was placed under $100,000 bond.

Raul Davila of 5014 Ave. G, charged Jan. 4 with felony possession of marijuana, was accused of threatening a police informant on Jan. 22.

Gerald Darthard, 19, of 1316 E. 17th St. was charged with aggravated robbery in connection with a Jan. 17 gun-point robbery at Kwik-O Foods at 1528 E. Broadway Ave.

Darthard had not been apprehended

Wednesday afternoon. The criminal district attorney's office has recommended a $100,000 bond for him.

Margarito George Carrillo, 23, of Scottsbluff, Neb., was charged with felony possession of marijuana and placed under $5,000 bond. He was one of three men arrested Monday near New Deal. Law enforcement officers said they found 15 pounds of marijuana in the car.

Theft charges were filed against Shawn Gable, 18, of Lubbock; Kenneth Lee Cates, 17, of 2217 25th St.; Paul Putnam Jr., 33, of Eunice, N.M.; and Rudy Raul Gonzales, 18, of 608 Salem Road, No. 11.

Gable is accused of stealing a color television from a Lubbock woman last May 12; Cates of stealing a motorcycle from a Lubbock man; Putnam of stealing about $900 from an office at L&H Drugstore at 34th Street and Slide Road; and Gonzales of stealing an automobile from a Lubbock woman.

Possible Ag Department Spending Cut Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — If farmers get just "average" weather and crop yields, the Agriculture Department could cut its total spending next fiscal year by 8.9 percent, according to President Carter's budget plan released.

Much of the projected drop in spending would be in reduced federal price support expenditures for key crops, budget analysts said.

In the new budget, total department spending was projected at $18.4 billion in fiscal 1980, which will begin Oct. 1, compared to an estimated $20.2 billion this year.

Department budget experts said price supports and income payments for key crops — and other programs financed by the department's Commodity Credit Corp. — are projected at $2.55 billion, down from about $4.78 billion this year.

But Stephen B. Dewhurst, the department's acting budget director, told reporters the projection was based on an "average yield" estimate and assumes for planning purposes that farmers will get normal weather this year.

However, Dewhurst said it would be "misleading to the American people" not to include other possibilities. So, figures prepared by his office show that if farmers get "bad weather," government payments would decline or, in some cases, disappear entirely.

That could mean an actual net saving of $377 million to the government for those particular programs affecting the major crops.

This is because there would be smaller crops, which would drive up market prices. That means federal payments would not have to be made to farmers to make up any deficiency between the market price and a target price set under farm programs for such big crops as wheat, corn and cotton.

On the other hand, Dewhurst said, if there is "good weather" and super-large crops are harvested market prices would tumble and the government would have to step in with larger subsidies.

If that happened, he said, costs of operating the programs could soar to an estimated $5.58 billion next fiscal year.

That, in effect, would shatter the conservative budget Carter proposed to operate the Agriculture Department next year.

A budget book prepared by Dewhurst's office said "many 1980 estimates are very tentative at this time" and that various Agriculture Department programs "are sensitive to uncontrollable factors, including the weather and changing economic conditions."

Government food programs, including food stamps and child nutrition, will cost more next year and at a projected $10.8 billion will account for almost 59 percent of the department's total proposed budget, compared to $9.6 billion or 48 percent in fiscal 1979.

Although costs of crop programs are highly variable, other proposed outlays in other Agriculture Department areas were more definite, including these cuts for next year:

—$18.6 million less for science and education, including reductions in research assistance.

—$80 million less for the Agricultural Conservation program, putting it at $110 million next year against $190 million currently.

—A $107.4 million reduction in operations and programs of the Soil Conservation Service, including cuts for watershed planning, resource conservation and development, and watershed and flood prevention operations.

—$61.7 million less for Food for Peace shipments of farm commodities to needy countries.

—A $201.1 million cut from the Forest Service, primarily due to a reduction in timber sales preparations, proposed termination of the Youth Conservation Corps and the cooperative fire control program.

Department budget officials said tightening up on programs of the Forest Service and the Soil Conservation Service would eliminate about 1,000 jobs in each agency.

The proposed budget also calls for significant reductions in the "program levels" of operation for the Farmers Home Administration, which depends heavily on making guaranteed loans, grants and direct loans for a variety of rural and community development purposes.

For example, the agency — FmHA, as it calls itself — would make farm credit loans totaling $2.93 billion next year, down from more than $5 billion currently.

Much of the decline would result from gradual depletion of a special $4 billion loan apparatus set up by Congress to help hard-pressed farmers refinance their debts.

Other savings would be realized from the proposed elimination of a number of smaller programs, including: programs for the control of fire ants, noxious weeds, range caterpillars, Tri-ly in Hawaii, West Indian sugarcane root borer, contagious equine metritis (a venereal disease of horses) and poultry diseases.

McGraw-Hill Wages Battle In Courts

By The Associated Press

McGraw-Hill Inc. continued its battle against an $830 million takeover bid from American Express Co. on legal fronts in New York and Washington Wednesday.

The big publishing firm, whose magazines include Business Week, filed a reply in U.S. District Court in New York to an American Express suit charging McGraw-Hill with making "false and misleading statements," and asking that the firm's management be enjoined from trying to block the takeover.

In its reply, McGraw-Hill asked that the giant credit card and travelers' check firm be forced to end its merger bid. McGraw-Hill has made a similar request in a suit filed in New York State Supreme Court, the state's lowest court.

McGraw-Hill's other legal action Wednesday was a formal request that the Federal Communications Commission take action to halt or delay the takeover attempt until disposition of McGraw-Hill's four television stations could be worked out.

McGraw-Hill had made the request informally last week, and American Express at that time asked that it be rejected.

Spokesmen at American Express could not be reached for comment on the two legal actions Wednesday.

The two companies are engaged in one of the most heated takeover battles in some time. McGraw-Hill is balking at the takeover on the grounds that it would compromise the journalistic integrity of the firm's 60-plus magazines, its financial advisory services and its book-publishing operations.

One of McGraw-Hill's key contentions in its suit in New York Supreme Court is that American Express President Roger H. Morley, a director of McGraw-Hill until announcement of the takeover bid Jan. 9, had used confidential information to aid American Express in formulating its offer.

On Tuesday, McGraw-Hill got an order from the State Supreme Court directing Morley to appear before the court Feb. 1 to show cause why the court should not issue a preliminary restraining order to stop Morley and American Express from "making any use or disclosure whatsoever without (McGraw-Hill's) consent of any confidential ... or proprietary information" about McGraw-Hill "which derives from Morley's service as a director."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have had a problem with my broker. I sold some stock a few days before it went "ex-dividend." A few weeks later, I received a dividend check. According to my broker, I am not entitled to that dividend. I guess that's right. But, meanwhile, the company whose stock I sold sent me a Form 1099, stating that the dividend had been paid to me.

The broker keeps telling me, on the telephone, that I must send the dividend to his office. I have told him — repeatedly — that I will do that only after I receive a letter from his brokerage firm stating that the dividend was not mine. I feel I need that letter to show the Internal Revenue Service. Am I right or wrong?

A. I'm on your side. The broker's right about you not being entitled to that dividend. You sold that stock before the ex-dividend date. So, the person who bought the shares you sold is entitled to the dividend.

But, as often happens, the transfer of the stock certificate and the change in record of ownership on the company's books evidently did not take place until after the "record date." Your name was on the record as the owner of those shares. Naturally, the company sent the dividend check to you.

Then the company sent you and the IRS copies of that Form 1099. If the IRS computers go "tilt" because you didn't report a dividend their magnetic tapes show you received, you know you'll be called on the carpet.

At that point, the letter you want from the brokerage firm would square things away between you and the revenooers. You have made that brokerage firm a very reasonable proposition — the dividend check in return for the letter. Stick to your guns.

Q. In previous years, when filing my income tax return, I always deducted my capital losses on stocks from my capital gains on stocks. But the 1978 Federal Income Tax Form says, on page 19, "The limit on capital losses that can be used to offset other income is $3,000 for tax years beginning in 1978."

Does this mean that I can deduct only $3,000 of capital losses from the capital gains I made on the sale of stocks in 1978?

A. No. All of your capital losses can be used to offset capital gains. So if you realized $10,000 in capital gains and $5,000 in capital losses last year, the $5,000 in losses can be deducted from the $10,000 in gains — giving you a net taxable capital gain of $5,000.

Now if you had a bad year in the market and your capital losses were bigger than your gains, you can use up to $3,000 of your capital losses to offset your "other income" — salary, dividends, interest and such. That means you can reduce your other income by up to $3,000 and, thereby, pay less taxes.

The capital gain offset against other income was jacked up to $3,000, beginning with the 1978 tax year. It was $2,000 in 1977 and $1,000 in 1976 and previous years.

That increase provides a tax break for stock market losers.

Q. Why should I be in the stock market, at all, when my broker wants me to buy

Shell Oil Reports Higher Earnings

HOUSTON (AP) — Shell Oil Co. said Wednesday that unaudited figures show 1978 net earnings of $814 million, up from $760 million in 1977, but fourth quarter earnings were down despite higher revenue.

Per-share earnings were $5.45 compared with $5.28 in 1977.

Fourth quarter earnings of $192.3 million were down from the $192.7 million reported for the comparable quarter of 1977.

Per-share earnings for the quarter were $1.27, compared with $1.32 for the last quarter of 1977. Revenues were $2.9 billion in the 1978 quarter, up from $2.6 billion in the previous year's fourth quarter.

John F. Bookout, president, said audited figures will be available in late February.

Bond Rating Drops On Pacific Telephone

NEW YORK (AP) — A major bond rating firm on Wednesday lowered its rating of Pacific Telephone Telegraph Co. debentures to "A," the lowest rating ever given to a Bell system issue.

Moody's Investors Service cited the company's continued fight with the California Public Utilities Commission in announcing its decision.

"The company's potential tax liability is at $1 billion and it's growing," said Peter Jadosich, an assistant vice president of Moody's. "It's estimated to be around $3.2 billion by 1983."

An "A" rating is the third highest rating assigned by the service, denoting "upper medium grade obligations." The Pacific Telephone issues had been rated "Aa," or "high quality."

No other Bell System issue is rated below Aaa, the highest rating. Bell issues have long been considered to be the most secure private investment available because of American Telephone Telegraph Co.'s financial strength. Pacific Telephone is a 90 percent-owned subsidiary of ATT.

Standard Poor's, the other major bond

Scientists believe wild dogs were the first animals to be tamed by people, some 12,000 years ago, according to the National Geographic Society.

rating firm, previously lowered the Pacific Telephone rating to "A-plus." It will decide within a week whether to change the rating again, a spokesman said.

Pacific Telephone's fight with the California regulators concerns a tax break voted by Congress for utilities. The state regulators voted to require the company to pass the tax reductions on to customers and a company appeal to the courts failed to overturn that decision.

But the Internal Revenue Service claims that decision violates tax laws and is trying to void the tax break. A final court decision on that case is not expected until 1983, causing the uncertainty cited by Moody's. The company will have to pay the additional taxes if it loses.

The Moody's action came when Pacific Telephone asked for a rating on its proposed $300 million debenture issue. The firm also lowered the rating on 27 existing debenture issues and three issues of short-term notes.

Debentures are a form of bonds, paying specified interest rates. They differ from bonds in that they are backed by a company's credit, rather than by a specific asset.

The decision to drop the rating only to "A" reflects the Bell System's financial muscle.

"If it weren't a Bell company, it wouldn't be an 'A,'" said Jadosich.

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Cake Requests Come From All Over

included electric lights. "They were those tiny low-voltage lights, and we covered each one with ic-ing so they glowed through," Mrs. Stark says. She says the electric wires were sprung so that no one would slice into them.

"Only the back two-thirds of the cake is served at the wedding anyway," she says. "The front of the cake is for decoration only. It is never eaten (until later)."

Mrs. Stark, who works in a converted house that's her bakery and office, says she started decorating cakes as a hobby 20 years ago.

"It was just for fun. I had studied cake decorating in Oklahoma City. At first, I didn't do any baking — customers would bring their own cakes to me to decorate in my home."

But her reputation grew, and her business was launched.

"I'm a prime example of what you can do when you're middle-aged," says Mrs. Stark, who was in her early 40s when she turned professional. But she admits the growth of her business has been gradual and the venture has been anything but a piece of cake.

"Twice, I've made cakes for weddings that were called off at the last minute," she says. On one occasion, "500 guests had already arrived and another 500 were at the gates about to come in when this little girl just decided she wasn't going to get married that day. And she didn't."

"I had worked my heart out on it and then I had to dismantle it. I could have cried. I left it with the family. I imagine they ate it later — I don't know," says the silver-haired lady.

As she spoke, other workers bustled from room to room in the brightly lighted, steamy house, making sugar-dough flowers, answering phones, spreading icing on high wheels of cake and grinding pecans.

Agency Director Says Services Duplicated

AUSTIN (AP) — Executive Director Omar Harvey of the Texas Department of Community Affairs said Wednesday his agency duplicates services of other agencies and maybe lawmakers should abolish it.

In fact, Harvey told the Senate Subcommittee on Nominations, five legislators have introduced bills to do just that.

Harvey, a private consultant in Dallas who retired from IBM in 1969, was the first appointee of new Republican Gov. Bill Clements to appear before the predominantly Democratic subcommittee.

The subcommittee voted, 6-0, to recommend Harvey's confirmation by the full Senate. He succeeds former Corpus Christi Mayor Ben McDonald Jr., who resigned.

"I don't have to tell this committee" of the department's problems, Harvey said, but he added he did not have a "grandiose plan" to make immediate changes.

"I will try to instill good business practices and establish a communication link with the Legislature, as well as with the communities," he said.

The TDCA has a $59.6 million budget this year, but only $3 million is state money. Most of the money is federal, and the department channels the funds to local community programs in drug abuse, manpower training, early childhood development, anti-poverty and housing.

The department was criticized in early 1978 following a court of inquiry into alleged mismanagement of federally funded manpower training programs in Harlingen and elsewhere.

TDCA — which is almost directly controlled by the governor's office — became an issue in the Democratic Party primary for governor, and some claim the criticism contributed to Gov. Dolph Briscoe's defeat.

Subcommittee chairman Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler, told Harvey he had once introduced a bill to abolish the agency, and Harvey replied, "You make the fifth one in the House and Senate."

Harvey said state law requires TDCA to be an advocate of smaller communities, which puts the agency in conflict with other programs.

He added that the agency duplicates so many state governmental functions that "I know of nothing that isn't duplicated somewhere in other agencies."

"Maybe it should be abolished somewhere down the line — I don't know," said Harvey. "If I find that it should, believe me I'll recommend it."

Clements has recommended reducing the state payroll by 25,000 in the next four years, and Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texas, asked if the TDCA might be an agency in which employee cuts can be made.

"I'd like to think that I'll be coming back to both houses," Harvey said.

Obstruction Of Justice Alleged

LAREDO (AP) — Capt. Jose Campos Davila, 66, the No. 2-ranking police officer of this border city, was charged with obstruction of justice Wednesday. He was accused of being the middle man in an attempt to bribe another officer to change sworn testimony.

Davila, a 35-year veteran of the police force, was charged along with two other men, one of them an Austin-area attorney.

Police and federal Drug Enforcement Administration agents arrested the trio in a raid in a Laredo motel Tuesday night. Officers seized $14,800 in cash and a small quantity of marijuana in the raid.

Attorney Robert J. Kuhn of Del Valle, Texas, and private investigator Doyle Darwin Huckabee of Austin, were also charged with obstruction of justice. Bond was set at $30,000 for each man.

The case involved an alleged attempt to bribe a former Webb County sheriff's deputy, Florentino Rendón, who now heads the Nueces County Major Crime Task Force in Corpus Christi.

Rendón's testimony concerning fingerprints helped convict a man accused in a Laredo drug case. The defendant has been free on an appeal bond. Authorities allege Kuhn, the defendant's attorney, and Huckabee offered Rendón money to retract his testimony.

But Rendón tipped authorities to the bribery attempt and officers set the Tuesday night trap, the culmination of a four-month investigation.

Museum President Resigns Position

Charles Verner has resigned as president of the West Texas Museum Association and the WTMA Executive Committee has named Vice President Coffee Conner to succeed him in the presidency.

Eugene Alderson, a member of the executive committee, was named vice president.

A committee announcement said that Verner expressed regret in resigning and cited a conflict of time and travel as his reasons for necessitating the move.

The WTMA is a volunteer organization that works in behalf of The Museum of Texas Tech University.

U.S. Chamber Head Praises President

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce praised President Carter Wednesday for his drive to cut federal spending.

In assessing Carter's State of the Union address, Richard L. Leshner, the chamber's president, also said, "We applaud the president's efforts to improve the nation's posture in international trade and his promises to reduce government interference in the American economy and to make the federal bureaucracy more responsive to the American people."

Leshner said, however, that the Carter administration's fiscal 1980 budget shows an increase of 11.7 percent for regulatory agencies. "This is hardly a sign that government regulation will be reduced," he said.

REGIONAL ROUNDUP

Stanton Chamber Elects Officers

STANTON (Special) — The Stanton Chamber of Commerce honored new and outgoing officers at an annual banquet Monday night.

Newly elected officers presented at the event were Ronnie Christian, replacing Terry Neill as president; Latrell Welch, starting her second term as vice president; and Susan Hall, succeeding Jess Miles as secretary.

New directors honored are George Harrell, Donnie Hull and Raymond Walton. Retiring directors are Bill Young and Hulen Todd.

June Reid, head nurse at Martin County Hospital, was honored as Woman of the Year. Man of the Year is Preston Farris, Martin County agent.

Gerald Hanson, owner of Stanton Chemical and an active farmer, received the award of Outstanding Person in the Field of Agriculture.

The Outstanding Service Award went to Charlie Pinkerton, a junior high school teacher.

County Judge Jimmy Mathis served as master of ceremonies, and entertainment was by the Koonce Family.

Skeleton Found At Big Spring

AJ Correspondent

BIG SPRING — A human skeleton found over the weekend on the Woody Robinson ranch has been tentatively identified by Howard County Sheriff Department officers, who linked it with a small gold cross found near it.

A local couple has identified the two-inch gold cross which was found near the remains south of here, as one which belonged to their son, who disappeared about a year ago.

The Forensic Department of the Department of Public Safety must document the man's identity before his name can be released, said a spokesman for the sheriff's department. The bones will be moved to Austin later this week, he said.

The skeleton was found in a pasture near Midway Road, about two miles south of the Robinson ranch, by Lyle Carpenter, while he and his father were searching for a bobcat.

The skull was under some trees, while other bones were scattered a far as 200 yards away, they said.

Calligraphy Beats Print Hands Down, Artist Says

AUSTIN (AP) — Linda Lowenthal had a direct hand in the licensing of more than 4,000 lawyers, dentists, dental hygienists and psychologists last year.

In the age of the photocopying machine, the Austin commercial artist hand-lettered names of the licensees on their professional certificates.

The 32-year-old woman specializes in calligraphy, the art of hand lettering, and has added the personal touch to numerous state certificates since 1970.

"It's really more economical than typeset printing," she said during an interview in her northwest Austin home. "It's more flexible to have someone letter it."

She also has done work for the University of Texas and former President Lyndon Johnson.

The California native learned calligraphy at Hollywood's Immaculate Heart High School. The art teacher, Sister Corita, has since established her own reputation for commercial illustration.

"The only art course I've ever had was in the ninth grade, mixed media," Mrs. Lowenthal said. "After it, I still couldn't draw or paint, but I could letter."

After obtaining a bachelor's degree in English from Pomona College, she spent a summer on a Colorado ranch.

"Then I read an article in Time magazine that said Austin had the lowest cost-of-living and the university had a graduate school," she said.

Moving to Austin proved a good decision, she said, but graduate school was terrible.

She quit the University of Texas and started working at a downtown art supply store. When business was slow, she doodled stylized lettering on a note pad. Customers soon noticed.

"I made up a portfolio and went to state offices, advertising agencies, department stores, university offices," the artist said, "and then just waited for business."

A friend told her the Texas Supreme Court was redesigning lawyer certificates, and that's where her state business began.

She met President Johnson while working at the art supply shop, which was near the Johnson family's television station.

Mrs. Lowenthal saw him standing outside the store, gathered her nerve and rushed outside to introduce herself and give him a business card.

"A week later I got a call from his secretary," she remembered. "It was right after Eisenhower died and he wanted several copies of a memorial statement hand-lettered."

LBJ again called her to execute several hundred name badges for dignitaries when his presidential library opened in Austin on May 22, 1971.

"I had to go down to the federal building and sit in the same room with the Secret Service watching. I guess so I wouldn't add any names," she said.

The night before the opening, she got a phone call.

"Somehow they had lost all the cards," Mrs. Lowenthal said. So the Secret Service brought extra cards to her house and she repeated the lettering.

She works out of a studio-print shop in her basement, an arrangement that lets her keep an eye on her 9-month-old daughter, Sarah.

The studio includes an offset press, copier machine and work desk. For many commercial jobs, she hand-letters the design and then prints large quantities on the press.

For certificates, she charges the state $1 per name, plus 20 cents for dates and other entries on the standard form. The arrangement is informal and not in a written contract.

Mrs. Lowenthal has no ambition to broaden her work.

"I'm not by nature aggressive. It used to be a crisis in my life to sell Girl Scout cookies," she said. "I have no wish to become a great entrepreneur. I'm really content. Calligraphers are not the most ambitious people in the world."

No Tax Break For Commuting

WASHINGTON (AP) — The costs of commuting to college classes are not deductible educational expenses, according to the U.S. Tax Court.

Starr Q. Zimmerman of Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., had sought to deduct the costs of taking courses at Hunter College in New York City in 1973. She was a teacher, although she was not employed at the time she took the classes.

The Internal Revenue Service allowed the deduction for the college costs, but not for the expense of commuting the 30 miles between her home and the school.

The court agreed with the IRS, ruling that "unlike her other educational expenses, Starr's transportation expenses were not essential to the improvement or maintenance of her skills in the teaching profession."

ERA SUPPORT

ATLANTA (AP) — Actress Mario Thomas, stumping President Carter's home state for the Equal Rights Amendment, said Wednesday that Carter's confrontation with Bella Abzug apparently reinforced his support for ERA. She said the confrontation served to break down earlier communications barriers between Carter and feminist forces so that now "we're back together in the fight for ERA." Miss Thomas is one of 25 women who resigned from the president's National Advisory Committee for Women.

Mrs. Billy Carter Tells Of Visit By Writer Accused Of Assault

ATLANTA (AP) — Billy Carter's wife said Wednesday that the freelance journalist who is accused of attacking her husband with a tire tool was wearing two bullet-proof vests during the run-in.

Sybil Carter also said she had warned the man to get away from her house before he approached Carter at his service station.

Mrs. Carter said the journalist, Pete Peckarsky, 31, came to her home Tuesday demanding to see her husband. When she refused and threatened to summon police, the man "hollered something" and drove off, Mrs. Carter said.

A few hours later, following a dispute at Carter's service station in Plains, Ga., the president's brother swore out a simple assault warrant against Peckarsky.

Carter, who has had run-ins with reporters before, said, "He had a tire tool, man. They say he swung at me, but I didn't see it."

Peckarsky, who works in Washington, was arrested and later released on $2,000 bond. He reportedly was in Sumter County to gather material for a series of articles about the Carters.

Describing the incident in a telephone interview from the Carter home in Draneville, Ga., near Plains, Mrs. Carter said she was home with her 2-year-old child and a maid when a strange car pulled into the driveway and drove around to the back of the house.

"He didn't get out," she said. "He'd look down and look up and then look down. It was like he was writing."

Mrs. Carter said that after about 10 minutes she went out and asked the man what he wanted. She said earlier threats against the family had her worried.

"He said he wanted to see Billy and started to open the door to get out. I told him Billy wasn't here."

"He said, 'Are you Sybil?' and I said, 'Who are you?'"

Mrs. Carter said the man identified himself as Pete Peckarsky. She said she told him, "If you are a reporter, I would appreciate it if you would leave. You were not invited here."

Mrs. Carter said she had her hand on the car door and Peckarsky said, "Get your hand off my car." She said she then told the writer, "This is my driveway, my property and you'll get off or I'll call the sheriff."

Mrs. Carter said as she walked back toward the house, the man "hollered something at me. I'm not sure what it was."

Later, Mrs. Carter said, Peckarsky was waiting at the service station when her husband walked up. She said that after a brief exchange her husband told Peckarsky:

"I don't appreciate you going to my home and talking to my wife the way you did."

Mrs. Carter said, "Apparently the guy picked up something but Billy stepped out of the way. They found out later he (Peckarsky) had two bullet proof vests on."

Peggy Brown of the Plains police department said that Carter and Peckarsky ran into her office Tuesday afternoon.

"This guy was hollering, saying that Billy was going to hit him," she said. "We just kept them apart until we found out what was wrong. And then they went over to the sheriff's office and Billy took out a warrant."

Flood Accused Of Accepting More Bribes

WASHINGTON (AP) — An envelope with 20 $100 bills was handed to Rep. Daniel J. Flood in his home just before the 1974 election in order to accelerate his efforts for a $5 million housing loan, a Hazleton, Pa., home-builder testified Wednesday.

Robert Gennaro, testifying under a grant of immunity from prosecution, told the jury hearing the bribery, perjury and conspiracy charges against Flood that the money was passed on the evening of Oct. 31.

Gennaro said he waited in Flood's Wilkes-Barre house with the congressman's administrative assistant, Stephen Elko, for more than two hours to deliver the money, which he hoped would help him get federal financing to save his financially troubled Crestwood Hills housing development in Mountaintop, Pa.

The loan sought from the Farmers Home Administration never was granted, and Gennaro said that a $100,000 kick-back that Elko demanded if the deal was made never was paid.

Gennaro acknowledged under questioning by Flood's lawyer, Axel Kleiboecker, that he began to cooperate with the government after the FBI warned him a year ago he was under investigation for alleged bank fraud and embezzlement.

Q. Didn't you tell an official of the First Valley Bank that you had given Mr. Flood $40,000 in bribes?

A. Yes, but it was a mistake on my part. I was trying to enlist the sympathy of the bank in my difficulties.

Q. In fact it was an outright lie?

A. That's correct, sir.

Gennaro said that he actually made a $5,000 contribution to the Flood campaign — $3,000 in checks signed by his relatives and the $2,000 in cash.

Longhorns Nip Baylor 77-76

By The Associated Press

Jim Krivacs sank two free throws with eight seconds remaining here to secure a 77-76 victory for the Texas Longhorns over the Baylor Bears in their showdown for first place in the Southwest Conference.

The victory left Texas alone at the top with a 6-1 record, one game ahead of Texas A&M. The two crucial free throws by Krivacs plus four free throws by Phillip Stroud earlier in the last minute of play, helped the Longhorns stave off a furious Baylor rally just in time.

The game was tied at 59-59 with 8:53 remaining and sharp-shooting by Tyrone Branyon and Krivacs kept Texas in front the rest of the way.

Leading 71-70 with 40 seconds to go, Stroud hit his first two free throws for a three-point margin. Vinnie Johnson scored for Baylor, cutting the count to one before Stroud added another pair of free throws. Johnson gave Baylor another one-point deficit with 10 seconds showing and Krivacs drove home the final nail. Baylor scored at the buzzer to shave the margin to one point.

Branyon scored 26 points and Krivacs 23 as Texas maintained first place in the standings.

Texas led by 10 points early in the second half as Baylor failed to score for the first six minutes after intermission.

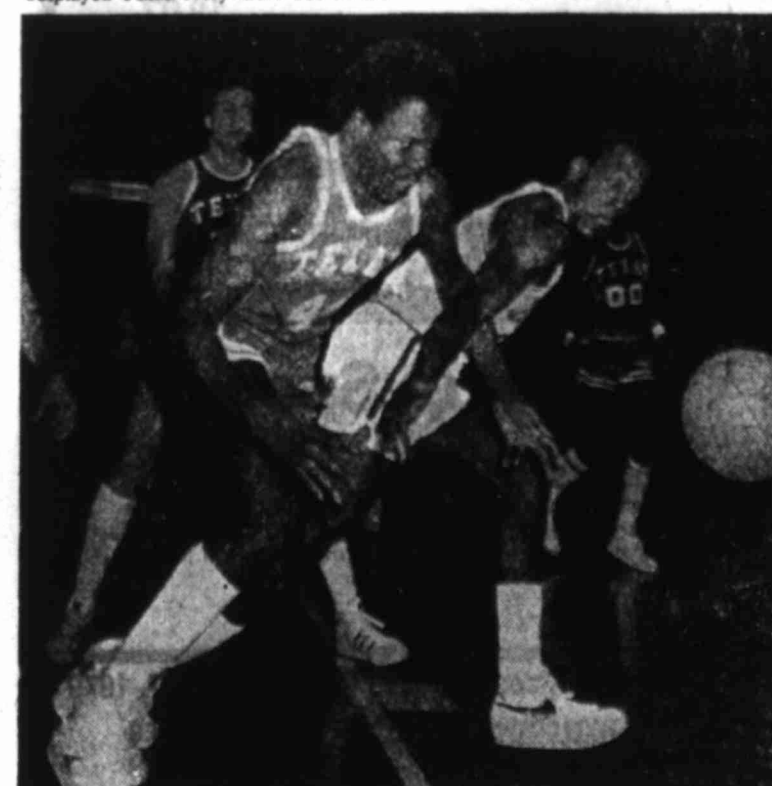

But Johnson, with 27 points, and 21 by Wendell Mays rallied the Bears within winning range before 9,200 fans, the third-largest crowd in Baylor history.

The loss dropped Baylor's SWC record to 4-3 and 10-7 for the season. Texas is now 13-4 for the year.

"It was a rough game, a lot rougher than our game Monday night with A&M," said Texas Coach Abe Lemons. "There were a lot of hacking fouls that weren't called."

"Baylor for some reason always gets fired up when they play Texas. They beat us last year but then they couldn't beat Rice. They always play us like they're mad at us. Maybe they're mad because their football team hasn't won the SWC in football in just once in 50 years, I guess."

Baylor Coach Jim Haller said his Bears outplayed Texas everywhere but on the

Tech Snaps Losing Ways

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Long after Texas Tech had beaten the University of Houston 70-68 Wednesday night, the tongues were still flapping a good 90 mph.

With six seconds left in the Southwest Conference basketball game and the game tied at 68-68, Houston's Victor Ewing was called for fouling Tech guard Geoff Huston.

It was one of those plays that could have gone either way, as they say.

"Are you asking me did he (Huston) charge him?" asked Houston coach Guy Lewis. "I certainly thought he did. But I guess it doesn't matter what I think, the official called it the other way."

That's one vote for charge.

Needless to say, Tech coach Gerald Myers didn't agree. "It was strictly a judgment call by the official," said Myers. "It could have easily gone either way. There are usually about 10 calls that go like that in a game. I certainly thought he (Ewing) fouled him. But like I say it could have gone either way."

Let's see, that ties the score at one-to-one.

Huston was called on to break the tie. "He (Ewing) never had position," said Huston. "There wasn't any way they could have called it on me, I don't think."

So Tech wins the unofficial vote almost as narrowly as they won the basketball game, two-to-one. Well, if you count the official its three-to-one.

The win, which broke the Raiders' three-game losing streak, upped Tech's SWC mark to 4-3, while Houston dropped to 3-5.

"Hey," said Myers. "This was a big for us. It breaks that losing streak and puts us back on the right track."

Myers added that he feels the victory will "give our moral backup and help with our confidence."

For almost the evening both teams played a game that was almost completely free of fouls. In fact, the Raiders went to the free throw line only once in the first half (guard Kent Williams hit both ends of a one-and-one with 35 seconds left to cut UH's lead from six to four). Meanwhile the Cougars were 9-for-four from the line, on their way to a 34-32 first-half lead.

Tech ended the night by hitting 16-of-17 free throws, while UH went 16-of-22 from the line. However, Tech outlived its guest 27-26 in the two-point department.

In the first half, the largest lead was held by Houston—and that was only six points. However, Williams hit the free throws and Ralph Brewster connected on a four-foot jumper after taking a nice fed pass from David Little to cut the UH margin to two. And that's how the half ended, 34-32.

Then with 3:39 left in the second half, the whistles came out.

During that period, only three field goals were hit, a three-footer by Brewster that upped Tech's lead to three, 65-62.

and another shorty by Huston at the 59 second mark. Huston also had one field goal.

Huston, who ended the night with 11 points, was fouled on the play with 30 seconds remaining by Abe Davis. The cool senior stepped to the line and hit the free shot, converting the three-point play and giving his team a two-point lead, 68-66. Before the play, the Raiders had trailed 66-65.

Talking about the clutch freebies, Huston commented: "I never doubted I wouldn't make them," he said. "Anything you go up there (the free-throw line) with any doubts, you're going to miss."

Incidentally, Huston said it was his biggest points of his career. Well, college anyways.

After Huston helped Tech to its lead, ten seconds later Raider Ben Hill, a man playing with the flu, fouled George Walker, sending the bigman to the line with a chance to tie the game at 68-68—which he did after canning both ends of the one-and-one.

Then 34 seconds later, Huston came through with his heroics.

Writer Claims Stabler Frame

GULF SHORES, Ala. (AP)—The police chief here confirmed Wednesday a California reporter's story that he had been arrested on an apparent drug frameup while trying to get an interview with Oakland Raiders star quarterback Kenny Stabler.

Stabler, who makes his off-season home on a coastal strip of Alabama known to some as the "Redneck Riviera," said Wednesday that he didn't know anything about the arrest or the apparent frameup.

"Even to be associated with this is absurd," Stabler told the Mobile Press. "This is going to hurt me in my work with youth."

Stabler admitted he had invited Padecky to visit, but denied he ever said, "I don't think I can ever trust a sports writer

The police chief, James Maples, said an investigation was continuing.

Maples, in a talk with the Mobile Press, confirmed a story by Sacramento Bee sports writer Bob Padecky that a packet of cocaine was planted on Padecky's rented car Monday — the day Padecky said he came for an interview and got something of a runaround instead.

Padecky said Stabler voiced irritation with him and accused him of being "the first reporter who came into my town trying to dig up dirt." Padecky earlier had written a three-part story on Gulf Shores' view of the Oakland quarterback.

The police chief also confirmed to the Mobile Press that, after it was determined Padecky was the target of a cocaine frameup, charges against the writer were dropped and he escorted Padecky on a hurry-up exit from Gulf Shores.

Padecky, in a copyrighted account of the incident in Wednesday's Sacramento Bee, said Maples had a submachine gun beside him in his car as he drove him to the Pensacola, Fla., airport for his departure. Maples said Wednesday he felt it was in the writer's best interest to leave town.

Stabler told the Mobile Press Wednesday that he didn't have any knowledge of Padecky's arrest.

He was quoted by Padecky earlier as saying, "I don't mind telling you it's strange, but it's not strange for Gulf Shores."

The police chief said Wednesday, "We have no suspects as to who put the stuff on his (Padecky's) car at this time but we are investigating."

Padecky gave this account:

While trying to interview Stabler at Gulf Shores earlier this month, Stabler declined and made the comment about never trusting a sports writer again.

Last week, a person identifying himself as Stabler called the Bee and said Stabler wanted to talk to Padecky. After last Sunday's Super Bowl game in Miami, Padecky flew to Pensacola, rented a car and drove the 30 miles to the Gulf Shores area, where he met Stabler and a man identified only as "Randall" at Lefty's restaurant-bar.

Stabler was in and out as the interview moved first to another restaurant, B.J.'s, then to the Silver Dollar Lounge. At the Silver Dollar, Padecky said he found Stabler, Randall and a man introduced as Billy Walker drinking beer.

He said Stabler told him he had not liked the story Padecky wrote about his earlier visit to Gulf Shores.

"I don't know why you are out to get me. I never met anyone like you," Stabler was quoted as saying.

Stabler then left, saying he had to see about his house, and about five minutes later Randall and Walker left, saying Stabler would be back shortly. A while later, Stabler telephoned and said to meet him again at B.J.'s.

Padecky left in his rented car and had barely got out of the parking lot when

'No Regrets,' Says Matthews

NEW YORK (AP) — The pose appeared to be one of disdain, but Vince Matthews insisted it was not a show of protest.

Matthews, winner of the 400-meter gold medal at the 1972 Olympics in Munich, was standing on the victory podium. As the National Anthem was playing, fellow American Wayne Collett, the runner-up in the race, stepped to the top level, alongside Matthews.

The two stood sideways to the flag, Matthews with his arms folded, Collett with his hands on his hips. Neither stood at attention.

When the two stepped off the stand, they were greeted with whistles and boos from the crowd of 80,000. Matthews left the stadium twirling the gold medal around his finger. Collett had forgotten his sweatshirt, and when he returned to pick it up, the whistling and booing resumed.

Then, Collett gave the clenched fist "Black Power" salute in return.

Matthews contended that the salute was similar to the one used by the athletes toward each other in the United States area of the Olympic Village.

But the Executive Board of the International Olympic Committee pointed out to U.S. Olympic officials that it was similar to the Black Power display by Americans Tommie Smith and John Carlos at the 1968 Games in Mexico City, and called the performance "disgusting" and in violation of the Olympic spirit and ethics.

A short time later, the two quarter-milers were banned from the Games by the IOC.

"I don't have any regrets about it," Matthews says now. "I don't think it had to be done, it just was done."

"I'm not saying that it shouldn't have happened. It's something that some people just got caught up in."

At the time, Matthews had said that "the reason Collett came on the stand with me was not a protest. We consider ourselves the best quarter-milers in the world — Wayne Collett, John Smith, Lee Evans and myself."

"On the right day and in the right lane, any of us can win," added Matthews. "Collett stepped up to show that we are a team. If we wanted to protest, we could do a better job than that. People are trying to make something out of nothing."

"I was sick of people saying I would finish fifth or sixth. Winning the gold medal was a kind of vindication."

"There was no way of trying to be disrespectful."

Nevertheless, the stigma of the occasion stuck with Matthews for four years.

"It was not something that I tried to carry around with me," he admits. "But, mentally, I did carry it with me for the first four years. However, I found out that it was no good carrying around hatred for someone, carrying a torch. I'm glad it's behind me now."

Asked if he would act in a similar fashion if he were to win a gold medal in the Olympics, now, Matthews said, "No. These are different times."

Times when sports and politics are not mixing as violently as they did in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

Does Matthews believe that his Olympic behavior closed any doors on him?

"I have had the feeling that I have been shut out from certain situations, but I don't know if it's been a real or arbitrary decision to pick somebody else," he replied.

"Being an Olympian, however, I think helped get me my job in Nigeria," he added.

Matthews taught classes and coached track and field at the University of Ife in Ife, Nigeria, for about one year, beginning in mid-1977. Other American track and field athletes, including Evans, Leon Coleman and Otis Burrell, also went to Nigeria to coach, and still are there.

After returning from Nigeria last year, Matthews worked for about two months for the Police Athletic League in New York, and now is doing program planning for the Queens Shelter for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

In addition, Matthews is doing some writing and etching.

"I feel I have a lot of abilities and I want to use them all," said Matthews, now appearing to be at peace with the world.

Connors, McEnroe Rekindle Feud In Grand Slam Match

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Connors and John McEnroe will continue their tennis feud in the four-man, $300,000 Grand Slam of Tennis Tournament at Boca West, Fla., Feb. 10.

In a blind draw here Wednesday, in which the tournament sponsor was clearly rooting for a McEnroe-Connors semifinal, McEnroe's name was selected out of a hat to be paired with the top-seeded Connors. In the other semifinal, second-ranked Bjorn Borg will play Guillermo Vilas.

The finals will be carried live by CBS on Sunday, Feb. 11.

"All right," shouted Becky Gocke, manager of communications for the sponsoring Pepsi Cola Co. after the McEnroe-Connors match was drawn out of a hat. "Gee, that's super."

The last time the two American left-handers met was in a preliminary round of the Masters Tournament two weeks ago. McEnroe won 7-5, 3-0 (retired) when a severe blister forced Connors to default the match.

The 19-year-old McEnroe, who had scored his first triumph over Connors in five career meetings, did admit: "I don't think one match changes around that he's No. 1 in the world."

Connors, 26, said the injury had hampered his movement and hurt him psychologically, and he laughed off the suggestion that McEnroe had replaced him as No. 1.

"It's only January. We have a long time to go."

The promoters clearly wanted Connors-McEnroe but didn't think it was fair to arbitrarily match them in a single elimination event that carries a $150,000 first prize — the biggest check in tournament tennis. That was the reason for the blind draw.

The format of the tournament is to match the winners of the traditional Grand Slam events — Wimbledon, French, United States and Australia. Since Borg won Wimbledon and the French titles, the Masters Tournament winner, McEnroe, became eligible.

Connors, who has qualified for this 4-year-old event every year, gained entrance by beating Borg at the U.S. Open, reversing the loss he suffered to Borg in the Wimbledon finals.

Watson Debuts Today

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Last year Tom Watson set a single-season money-winning record of $362,429. He won the Vardon Trophy, that prestigious prize to the man with the low stroke average, for the second year in a row. He won Player of the Year honors for a second consecutive time.

He won five American tournaments, more than anyone else. He was in the hunt for all four of the major titles. But you'd never guess it from his observations.

"My standard of performance was not at all excellent," Watson said before kicking off his 1979 campaign in the $250,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open, which begins today at the Torrey Pines Golf Club.

"I was not as consistent as I was in 1977."

So Watson, the outstanding player in the game over the last two seasons, is looking for improvement.

"That's the big goal: improvement," said the gritty redhead who has dominated the game for two seasons.

To that end, Watson has been working with long-time friend and teacher Byron Nelson, a Hall of Famer, in Dallas.

"He said he's more enthusiastic about my progress than he's ever been," an obviously pleased Watson said.

"We're trying to develop a swing that is more consistent, more relaxed. It's not there yet, but it's close. I'll get it. It's not too far away."

He hasn't played competitively since last November and said he was eagerly looking forward to the start of his season.

"I'm ready. I'm excited about playing, getting started again," he said.

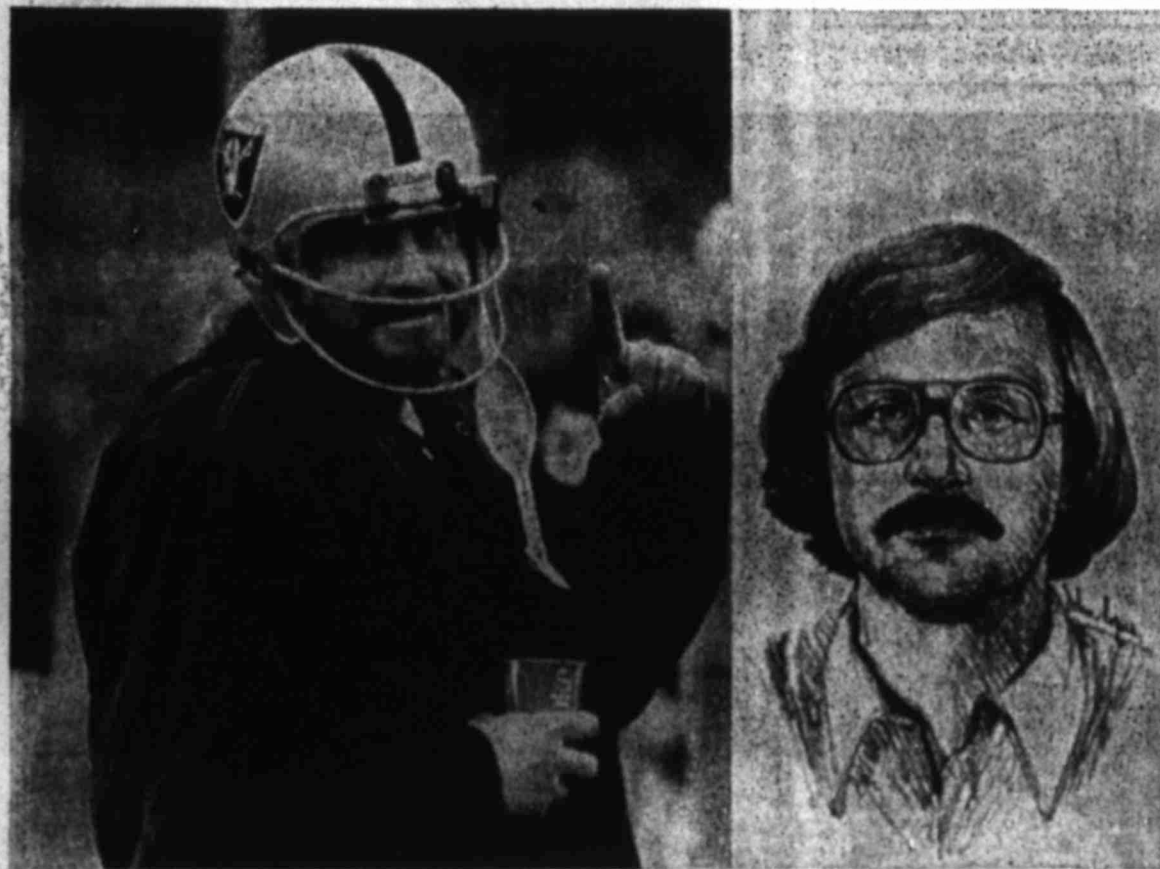

His overwhelming credentials made him a clear-cut choice as the man to beat in the 72-hole chase for a $45,000 first prize in this, the third stop of the year on the PGA Tour.

Neither of the other winners from 1979, John Mahaffey and Ben Crenshaw, are on hand but the 144-man field offers plenty of opposition.

Among the standouts are U.S. Open champ Andy North and defending titleholder Jay Haas, a one-stroke loser to Crenshaw in Phoenix.

Others include J.C. Snead, a two-time winner of the San Diego title, Tom Weiskopf, Lee Trevino, Gil Morgan, Canadian Open winner Bruce Lietzke, Andy Bean, Jerry Pate, Johnny Miller and Ray Floyd.

CBS will provide national television coverage of portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

three police cars stopped him. Five policemen frisked him and one reached under the fender of the car and pulled out a magnetic key case filled with white powder.

BORG RANKED NO. 1
NEW YORK (AP) — Sweden's Bjorn Borg, winner of three straight Wimbledon titles, was the top-ranked player in the world last year, according to World Tennis magazine. U.S. Open winner Jimmy Connors ranked second, followed by John McEnroe and Vitas Gerulaitis.

"I was terrified. My stomach was heaving. My palms were clammy. I am 32 years old and the closest I had ever been to a jail was my television set," Padecky said.

The police chief said Wednesday that the arrest was made after his department received two anonymous tips that cocaine was in the possession of the writer or on his car.

Long took Padecky from his cell to explain the situation to Chief Maples, who became convinced that Padecky had been set up.

After checking with his editor, Padecky agreed to help the police try and catch whoever had planted the cocaine. They put the packet back under the fender and Padecky went looking for Stabler. Unable to find him, Padecky waited with Maples in a motel room, hoping whoever planted the cocaine would try and retrieve it.

No one did. That night, Padecky said, Long told him, "If you run this story your life is in danger." Later Maples drove him to Pensacola.

Ehlo Selected Player Of Week

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

When Lubbock High Western coach Craig Wells called Wednesday afternoon with his team statistics, he was asked for the Westerners' player of the week nominee.

"Oh, you mean one of those also mentioned players," said the Lubbock High coach. Granted, Lubbock High has not exactly been dominating the 4-A district race. Currently, the Westerners sport a 2-19 overall record and are 0-3 in district play. Thus, Lubbock High has yet to have a player named player of the week this season.

Well, this week is no different. The Westerners' nominee is an "also mentioned selection." However, to make Wells and his coaching staff feel better, this week the Westerners' nominee will be "also mentioned" first.

After the Lubbock High coaches discussed the choice while Wells was talking to the press on the phone, the Westerners finally decided on forward Charlie Quade.

What did Quade do last week?

"Nothing," laughed Wells. "Actually, I'm just kidding. Charlie didn't score many points (only six in two games), but he was outstanding on defense."

Of course it wouldn't be right to ignore the remainder of the "also mentioned" selections before choosing the player of the week winner.

So, those also being cited include Estacado's Winston Gipson, and Coronado's Mark Reed.

Gipson pumped in 48 points during two contests against Ok, now that the "also mentions" have been talked about, it's time to name the player of the week.

So without any further adieu, Monterey's Craig Ehlo is the Avalanche-Journal's high school boys basketball player of the week.

The Plainsman forward accounted for 43 points, was 10-for-10 from the free throw line and had 15 rebounds in two games.

Not bad for guy who coach Joe Michalka said was only at 60 percent efficiency last Friday.

"Craig is still limping noticeably," said Michalka prior to Friday night's district clash with the Lubbock High Westerners. "He just doesn't have the mobility he had before he was injured."

Ehlo sprained his right ankle in the final seconds during against of teams the Coronado Mustangs when he tried to knock the ball away during a fast break on the final play of the first half.

Buckeyes Stirring Up Big 10

By The Associated Press
 Ohio State's winging Buckeyes, tops in the Big Ten and ranked 10th nationally, figure to make things uncomfortable this week for such title contenders as Michigan State, Illinois and Iowa.

The young and spirited Buckeyes, led by junior Kelvin Ranney and sophomore Herb Williams, are 6-0 in the Big Ten and hold a two-game lead in the Big Ten race and should hike their record to 8-0 if they don't become complacent.

While Michigan State, Illinois and Iowa — all 4-2 in the conference — are trying to play catchup, Ohio State will be home this weekend against winless Northwestern tonight and Indiana Saturday night. Indiana is struggling with a 2-4 record.

NBA ROUNDUP

Bullets Stop Celts

By The Associated Press
 Charlie Johnson, Larry Wright and Greg Ballard combined for 78 points, each hitting season highs, to lead the Washington Bullets to a 128-106 romp over the Boston Celtics in a mismatch.

Johnson topped all scorers with 28 points. Wright and Ballard, a couple of reserves, connected for 26 and 24, respectively, as Washington's defending NBA champs walloped Boston's lowly Celtics for the third time this season.

 missed a 30-foot shot at the buzzer.

At one time in the second half, the Raiders held a comfortable eight-point lead, 55-47, thanks primarily to a technical foul on Ewing. Williams, Tech's leading scorer with 17 points, hit the T shot to up the lead to four points. Then Brewster bucketed back-to-back attempts to bring the count to 55-47.

Ewing had been given the technical foul for either throwing the ball at Raider Joe or kicking at him after a mad scramble for the ball.

Texas A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf said of TCU's stalling tactic: "The stall is one of those things you want to do on the road. It's a good game plan."

"The first 10 minutes of the second half was the best we've looked for awhile," Metcalf added. "We got out ahead and they had to play with us. It was a good lesson in patience and discipline that we needed."

Suns Sailing Smoothly In NBA

By The Associated Press

The Phoenix Suns are the National Basketball Association's version of "Love Boat," sailing smoothly along near the top of the Pacific Division.

And now they've got a Truck to provide added power. The acquisition of Leonard "Truck" Robinson from New Orleans — for two reserves, two draft choices and a reported $500,000 — gives the Suns three of the league's top 13 scorers and a starting five that brings to mind Portland's 1977 championship team.

The only question is what effect Robinson, who is with his fourth team in three years, will have on the remarkable chemistry that was so responsible for Phoenix' success the first half of the season, when the Suns battled Seattle and Los Angeles for the division lead.

"It's fun to play on this team," says guard Paul Westphal, who is averaging 24.0 points per game to rank ninth in the NBA. "I haven't heard a word of any kind of selfishness all year. There are no jealousies. Even when things aren't going well, this team doesn't fall apart — it pulls together."

The credit for this love-in must go to Suns Coach John MacLeod and General Manager Jerry Colangelo, who have carefully put together a roster of role-players whose talents have meshed beautifully on the court and whose personalities have created a happy atmosphere in the lockerroom.

Robinson represents the final piece in the puzzle; if he fits, it could mean a championship; if he doesn't, it could upset everything.

For years the Suns' major weakness has been a lack of muscle. Other teams felt, justifiably, that they could push Phoenix around under the boards.

Robinson should change all that, because nobody pushes the Truck around. He was the league's top rebounder last year while with New Orleans and currently ranks third behind Houston's Moses Malone and Chicago's Artis Gilmore. At 23.9 points per game, he also gives the Jazz inside scoring punch to complement the jumpshooting talents of Westphal, Walter Davis and Alvan Adams.

Phoenix now has five starters who fit the classic roles, as Portland did two years ago in its title run.

Don Buse is the playmaking guard who runs the offense and plays tough defense. Westphal is the shooting guard who gets points in bunches. Davis, sixth in the league at 24.7 points per game, is the quick forward who scores and gets out on the fast break. Robinson is the power forward who works the inside. And Adams is the complete center, a fine all-around player whose outstanding passing makes everyone else that much better.

Compare that group to Portland's title team and Phoenix gets an edge at three of the five positions.

Buse handles the playmaking chores as well as Dave Twardzik and is better defensively. Westphal is a more prolific scorer than Portland's shooting guard, Lionel Hollins, and Davis is far more of a one-on-one scoring threat than Bobby Gross.

Portland's Maurice Lucas is the power forward against whom all others are measured: Robinson measures up on offense and in rebounding, but is not quite as strong on defense. Adams is as close as any center in the league to the level of team play Walton showed in 1977, but is not quite as solid a rebounder.

This Phoenix five also compares well to last year's champions, the Washington Bullets.

Buse is at least as good a playmaker as Tom Henderson, although he doesn't score as much, and Westphal is several notches above Kevin Grevey at the other guard spot. Davis and Robinson are pretty much a stand-off with the Bullets' fine forwards, Bobby Dandridge and Elvin Hayes, but Adams is far more versatile than Washington center Wes Unseld.

Where Phoenix might run into trouble is on the bench. The loss of hustling Ron Lee, who went to New Orleans along with rookie Marty Byrnes in the Robinson trade, is going to hurt. Lee added a unique dimension to the Suns with his all-out effort and concentration on defense and was happy with his role as the third guard. It's tough to replace players like that.

MacLeod knows the importance of depth. He uses his reserves as extensively as any coach in the league.

Corbett Threatens To Sell Franchise

FORT WORTH (AP) — Texas Rangers owner Brad Corbett, accusing the news media of unfair treatment, says he is on the verge of selling his American League baseball team to an out-of-town buyer.

"I hope beyond a shadow of a doubt that I can unload the ball club," Corbett said. "And it could be to some Arabs. I think the time is near."

He told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in an interview published Wednesday that he feels he is fed up with "pack journalism" that has criticized his trades and personnel decisions.

"When I get out, I'll just have my day with the press," he said. "Do you know what it is to pick up the paper...to have your kids come home and to think that you're a screaming idiot? And that everything you do is wrong?"

But Corbett would not confirm or deny reports he has had talks with former Rangers owner Bob Short about the possibility of Short's re-acquiring the controlling interest. Short, reached at his home in Minneapolis, referred all questions concerning buying back the baseball team to Corbett.

Corbett said, "My closest friends have begged me to get out of the ball club. This is crazy. I said that I would sell the ball club and I've never withdrawn that statement. I think the time is near."

Corbett said his problems with the news media began when he traded pitcher Ferguson Jenkins to Boston after the 1973 season and reporters quoted former General Manager Dan O'Brien as saying the Rangers should have gotten more out of the deal.

"That was the time when it became pack journalism," Corbett said. "It was me against the pack. Why do I get to take this abuse? I mean why? I'm not a saint," Corbett said.

He said pressure from the news media has not let up.

Tech Fems Battle UH

AUSTIN (Special) — The Texas Tech women's basketball team will face the University of Houston today at 10 a.m. in the opening round of the Texas Classic cage tournament in the Special Events Center on the campus of the University of Texas.

The Raiders lost to the Cougars 84-73 in their last encounter. Tech enters the game with a 9-11 record.

Also entered in the three-day event are UT-Arlington, Texas A&M, North Texas, Southwest Texas State, Stephen F. Austin and host Texas.

SFA, owners of a 16-5 record, is ranked second in the nation, while Texas (18-2) is fifth nationally.

"You're killing me," said Short. "I haven't had a kind word. I'm not an animal. I just don't need to be whipped every day. I haven't taken 10 cents from the ball club. All I've given is my money and my time."

Hearsts Separated

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An attorney for Randolph A. Hearst says the newspaper executive and his wife, Catherine, have officially separated after 40 years of marriage. They are the parents of imprisoned heiress Patricia Hearst.

The separation was made final Tuesday during an appearance by Mrs. Hearst and her lawyer before Superior Court Judge Donald B. King, according to Phillip M. Battaglia, Hearst's attorney, who added that neither he nor his client were present.

Last month, Mrs. Hearst petitioned for a separation. Sources said pressure caused by their daughter's kidnapping, trial and imprisonment contributed to the breakup.

Hearst is president of the San Francisco Examiner, flagship of the newspaper organization founded by his father, William Randolph Hearst.

Ballerina Dancing Again

MOSCOW (AP) — Ballerina Maya Plisetskaya, who hurt her back during a tour of Argentina last summer, is back on stage.

On Tuesday night, she starred with the Bolshoi Ballet in the title role of "Carmen," a ballet in which she has appeared frequently.

Miss Plisetskaya, 52, had also made a brief appearance on stage Jan. 5 during a program at the Kremlin Palace of Congresses, indicating she had resumed dancing.

Clark Plans China Trip

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Roy Clark, the country music singer, guitarist, fiddler and banjo picker who took his show to the Soviet Union in 1976, now wants to go to China.

"We're trying to be the first to tour the People's Republic of China," said Clark, who is a regular on the television series "Hee Haw."

"We've sent a telegram to Huang Chen, China's minister of culture, in Peking. We just offered it to them ... Right now we're in the negotiating stage. There's no date or anything like that."

Clark made the statement Tuesday in a telephone interview from Monte Carlo, Monaco, where he appeared in a benefit for UNICEF which Princess Caroline sponsored.

"People, all people, like music," he said. "There was a Chinese man in the audience tonight and he was hootin' and hollerin' and clappin' and stompin' like everyone else."

Tech Student Named Legislative Intern

Linda K. Goehman has been selected as the Elanco Products legislative intern for this session of the Texas Legislature.

Miss Goehman becomes the second Texas Tech student chosen for the internship since the program was begun three legislative sessions ago.

She will be working as a member of the staff of the House Committee on Agriculture and Livestock. The internship, supported by Elanco, gives the student working knowledge of the structural and operational procedures of state government and how those processes affect Texas agriculture.

The 20-year-old junior in agricultural economics was reared on her family's Elm Creek Ranch near Menard and took a hand in working the livestock, book-keeping and preparing income statements.

Hubcap Collection Near 100

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Gaping potholes left in the pavement after winter bouts with ice and snow have made Bob Salmon the city's Hubcap King. As of Wednesday, his collection numbered about 100.

Hubcaps and wheel rings fly into his yard as motorists hit potholes nearby. And since Sunday, when his picture appeared in a local newspaper, the Commercial Appeal, the retired civil servant has been busy returning a lot of them.

He lines up the hubcaps along the curb outside his home, and motorists can stop by to claim them. But he says some callers have been disappointed.

"A lot of people have gotten theirs back," he said. "But I've had some calls from people with Lincoln Continentals and Cadillacs ... I'd already let some of those go."

Restroom Windows Angers

WALDEN, N.Y. (AP) — Employees at the Pierce Industries factory here were miffed when the company installed a 10-foot-wide window on the interior wall of the men's restroom.

Initially, employees of the wrought-iron furniture manufacturer said, the window could give someone outside a view of the sinks — with the rest of the bathroom largely obstructed by a partition that did not reach the floor.

One employee, who wished to remain anonymous, said he believed the idea was to insure that employees don't spend too much time in the bathroom. Another noted that women were upset by the window as they walked past it on their way to the cafeteria.

But Office Manager Bill Scott said Tuesday that the 2½-foot-high window was installed last week "just to give better lighting" in the bathroom. Asked why electric lights weren't used, he said that using light available outside the room was more efficient. "I guess that's just a matter of preference," he said. "It was a management decision."

At some point, though, another decision was also made — to paint the lower half of the window on Monday. That, said Scott, was "so that the only open area between the main plant and the handwashing area is above anybody's vision."

Sculpture Pushed Around

SEATTLE (AP) — For a 1½-ton chunk of South African black granite, Rita Kepner's sculpture, "In Transition is Unity," has done a lot of traveling.

Miss Kepner supervised the placement of her work at the edge of the sidewalk near the Fourth Avenue entrance to the Seattle Public Library last October.

Library officials said that was too close and had the sculpture moved back. Miss Kepner says it was moved "two feet — into the bushes." Another observer says it is about 17 inches from the sidewalk.

Several of Miss Kepner's friends then moved the sculpture up to the sidewalk's edge. Several weeks later, library workers moved it back again.

Now Miss Kepner is irate at the shuffling and is threatening to sue.

Bill Roarty, acting as her lawyer, drafted a letter to the library board claiming violation of the contract with her. City librarian Ron Dubberly insists that the sculpture is where it belongs, as provided by the contract.

"It's a lovely piece of rock. I enjoy it. I like Rita, and I appreciate what she's trying to do," Dubberly said, "but she's making a mountain out of a molehill."

Nursing Firefighter Suspended
A Second Day Without Wages

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Firefighter Linda Eaton returned to the firehouse Wednesday, breast-fed her 3½-month-old son again, and was suspended for another day.

A babysitter brought Miss Eaton's son, Ian, into the firehouse at noon. After nursing the baby, Miss Eaton was called into a meeting with Fire Chief Robert Keating and Assistant City Manager Dale Helling.

"Linda Eaton has been suspended for the rest of the day without pay," Helling said. "The entire case is in court and we're making no further statement."

City officials have said Miss Eaton is violating a department order against having family visitors while on duty.

Iowa City's only female firefighter is scheduled to return to work Friday.

Miss Eaton, 26, who is unmarried, was suspended Monday for one day after a noon-time feeding during her "personal time" at the fire station. Assistant City Manager Dale Helling said then she could face further disciplinary action — including dismissal — if she continued to disregard the department's orders.

On Tuesday, she filed in Johnson County District Court for an injunction to stop the city from punishing her. A hearing was set for next Monday.

The controversy has brought national attention to this university town of 48,000 and has even prompted newspaper editorials.

"There is no chance that fire station locker rooms in Iowa City would be flooded with breast-feeding women if a 'precedent' were established in the case of Linda Eaton," the Des Moines Register said in an editorial. "We hope Iowa City is more adept at fighting fires than it is at stemming the flow of mother's milk on city property."

The Iowa City Press-Citizen expressed the opposite view, saying "the case of Linda Eaton ... is one of work rules and enforcement. The issue comes down to whether the city government can adopt work rules and expect employees to abide by them. The answer, it seems here, is yes."

The Iowa Civil Liberties Union and the National Organization for Women have voiced support for Miss Eaton's cause, as has the LaLeche League, an organization which promotes breast-feeding.

Mary Flanagan, a leader of the Iowa City LaLeche chapter, said that although the league prefers that nursing mothers not work, "if she has made the decision to work, she should have the baby with her as much as possible."

Another LaLeche League member, Mary Kay Wisink, is caught between a rock and a hard place. "My husband is a fireman, so I'm in a real predicament."

In Washington, meanwhile, William Howard McClellan, president of the International Association of Fire Fighters, suggested Miss Eaton could "breast-pump her milk and put it in a bottle and feed her child that way. Thousands of women do it every day."

McClellan expressed concern that the dispute might "discourage women all over the country from entering the fire service."

He said he would ask his board next week to consider taking a position on the dispute.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY

We have the most amazing breakthrough of this century and have created a windfall profit opportunity for individuals nationwide. The creation of some very sophisticated and innovative equipment coupled with an outstanding marketing concept, has not only won for us the ability to change business history but has allowed us to change a complete industry by decentralizing a 150 year old, billion dollar per year American industry. For the first time in the history of America, participation in this extremely profitable industry (often referred to as the "Silent Monopoly") is available to the average American who can meet the high standards we require and demand in our selection of plant owners.

We have taken this ice age industry and put it into the space age, thus creating a demand for new distributors. Our new and unique manufacturing equipment and marketing concept have made possible the decentralization of an entire industry. This makes all the existing companies obsolete and non-competitive.

OUR PLANT OWNERS ENJOY:

1. All cash business
2. Tax advantages
3. Simplicity of operation
4. One man or family assisted operation
5. Ideal absentee owner
6. Immediate cash flow
7. 1500% markup at wholesale
8. Potential of 120% R.O.I. first year

(Our large equipment can create in excess of one million dollars worth of product annually.)

These are but a few of the many advantages that have enabled us to select the most qualified entrepreneurial type of individual, and why the smart investment money is going with us.

We are now in the process of developing this region. We are selecting individuals and groups of individuals who will own our manufacturing equipment and distribute the product to all of the existing retailers requesting service.

We are aware that this innovation has created the most startling profit potential for an investor that this country has ever seen. For that reason, our selection of plant owners is made with great care and selectivity.

NBC Adopts Millionaire Theme In New Program

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In little more than 25 years, it seems television has used up every original idea and now is recycling itself.

Such is the case with NBC's "Sweepstakes," where each week, a lucky winner will go home with a check for $1 million.

Remember "The Millionaire," in which Michael Anthony distributed checks for eccentric billionaire John Beresford Tipton?

The switch in "Sweepstakes" is that this is a state lottery. An added twist, and one that gives this new series some tension and suspense, is that the first half of each episode concentrates on three potential winners. Only one will go home with the million dollars — the other two get consolation prizes of $1,000 along with the other runners-up.

For the remainder of the show, we see how the winner spends the money, and, at the end, what happened to the losers.

The 90-minute pilot for the series was on ahead of the recent attempt by CBS to revive the old "Millionaire" show. It succeeded in building interest in the potential winners, and allowing viewers time to pick their favorites.

The pilot will not air immediately, and the premiere episode to be broadcast Friday evening at 10 EST was not available for preview.

"Sweepstakes" is an anthology show with different guest stars each week. The one continuing thread is the master of ceremonies — the Michael Anthony — who hands out the checks on a TV show celebrating the occasion.

He's played by Edd Byrnes, who, about the time "The Millionaire" was popular, was getting 15,000 letters a week for his role as Kookie on "77 Sunset Strip."

Byrnes' role is a tiny one, but essential to the story.

"They're writing a story now where I have a love affair," the actor said. "I don't know if it'll be with a winner or not. I think it's essential that the viewers get to know my character. I don't have any identity now."

"If it's a hit, we'll have more. If not, they can pull it off after seven shows. My contract runs for 13 shows."

The former teen-age heartthrob, now 42, said, "I'm not running out yet to buy a new house or a new car."

"Sweepstakes" is Byrnes' second series. "77 Sunset Strip," which starred Efrem Zimbalist Jr. and Roger Smith, left the air in 1964. Kookie was the parking lot attendant at Dino's, and is best remembered for constantly combing his hair.

Byrnes all but disappeared from the TV screen after that, except for an occasional guest spot. He bought his contract with Warner Bros. and went to Europe to do a movie called "The Secret Invasion."

Later, Byrnes starred in his own variety show in Germany, and was in such movies as "Yellowstone Kelly" and "Marjorie Morningstar." He's appeared on "Fantasy Island" and in the pilot for "Vegas."

But it was the hit musical "Grease" that really brought him back, and undoubtedly accounted for his role in "Sweepstakes." In "Grease" he played Vince Fontaine, the rock 'n' roll host at the high school prom.

Coincidentally, it was another similar role that brought him to the attention of the producers of "Grease." He played a talk show host in the movie "Star Dust" in England.

Asked if he was still bothered by the Kookie image, he said, "I never think about those things. Naw."

Byrnes said he was attracted to "Sweepstakes" because "I was the only star. I was talking to Universal about a series," he said, "but I was one of nine people. That's not too exciting."

He said there is interest in doing a "77 Sunset Strip" movie. "It would be about three guys meeting 12 years later. NBC is interested, and I think it could get a good rating. After 12 years we could be anything. I could be an international play-boy."

'No Such Thing As Women's Lib In Europe' Says German Actress

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The national preoccupation with women — as opposed to men — in the United States is altogether foreign to at least one European actress who has moved to Hollywood to further her career.

Sybil Danning, a native of Wels, Austria, says there's no such thing as women's lib in Linz, the nearest metropolis to Wels.

Sybil is blonde, statuesque and bemused by America's concern with equal rights. Half German, half Austrian, Sybil divided her time between Munich and Rome for the five years preceding her move to California a year ago.

She is starring with Alain Delon and Robert Wagner in "Airport '79 Concorde" and had a top role in "Meteor." When not absorbed in film work, the Teutonic beauty studies the manners and morals of her new country and sometimes is astonished by the contrasts with her European past.

"The feminist movement is not an issue in European countries," she said. "Men and women are more confident of their sexual roles and more comfortable with what they are."

"This is true in France, Switzerland, Italy and Germany. But that is not to say they are not all different from one another."

Sybil, who has never married, is no innocent abroad.

"I haven't had time to get married," she said. "And I haven't found the right man. I don't have to get married to be taken care of and like most European women I plan to marry only once."

"That's one big difference between American and European women. We don't marry as early over there so our marriages endure longer."

"It's easier for a woman to be single in Germany and Italy and France. One men and women live together outside of marriage than they do in the United States. And less fuss is made over that arrangement."

"Most American women feel if they love the man they are sleeping with they should get married. That leads to quick weddings and quick divorces."

"It is much more difficult to get a divorce in Europe and also more expensive, so we Europeans give more thought to marriage. We think twice before running off to the altar."

"Women are judged more harshly for their behavior in this country. Living with a man outside of marriage is less of a disgrace in Europe than a divorce."

"In that respect we are more old-fashioned than American women. While we think of ourselves as independent individuals, we don't equate that with being 'liberated' because we really don't want to be."

"I am amazed to see married men pushing shopping carts in supermarkets in this country. I see them doing the wash in laundromats and pushing baby carriages. European men very rarely do any of those things."

"I'm old-fashioned. I think there are and should be divisions of responsibilities with the sexes. It is the woman's place to take care of the home and do the shopping and laundry."

"In Germany and Italy especially, the man wears the trousers in the family and is the boss of the house. If he comes home and finds his wife hasn't prepared dinner because she's been in the beauty parlor all day, she may not have any hair to worry about the next time."

"American men want to prove themselves to their women materialistically. They worry about their image as males because their women are as success-oriented as they are. Europeans have no doubts about their roles."

"Both German and Italian men dominate their wives. The Italians are more sophisticated in their marriages than Germans, especially when it comes to mistresses or outside affairs. They boast about such things. German men are more conservative and discreet."

Puerto Rico Audit Not Deductible

WASHINGTON (AP) — The costs of preparing for a tax audit in Puerto Rico are not deductible from U.S. income taxes, the U.S. Tax Court says.

Mr. and Mrs. Laune H. Christensen of New Canaan, Conn., had sought the deduction for legal and accounting costs in connection with an audit of their Puerto Rican income tax returns. They had resided in Puerto Rico for several years, although the audit took place after they moved to Connecticut.

Because income earned in Puerto Rico is not subject to U.S. income tax, the court held that expenses connected with taxes on this income should not be deductible on U.S. taxes.

TV Actress Claims Medium Guilty Of Sexism

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Television is a sexist medium which hires actresses on the size of their bosoms, says Dee Wallace, a TV actress herself.

According to Dee, who has played guest roles in "Police Story," "Starsky & Hutch," "Barnaby Jones," "Lou Grant" and many others, TV producers are looking for leading ladies with large breasts instead of large talents.

Dee, a dazzling blonde, has a beautiful face, fine legs, shapely derriere and, alas, a modest bust.

Because she is less favored in the mammary department than many of her Hollywood sisters, Dee is convinced she is doomed to playing prostitutes, battered wives and other character roles.

"I'm either beat up or knocked up," Dee said. "I play those parts because I'm not as well endowed as actresses who play glamorous, sympathetic roles.

"All women in this country are victimized by America's preoccupation with breast size. TV producers, with rare exceptions, won't hire you for a series unless you've got a big bosom. I'm judged by these men almost every day.

"When you're interviewed, the casting directors look at your chest. That's what the 'fickle shows are all about — 'Charlie's Angels,' 'Three's Company' and the rest.

"They don't say to you, 'Take off your blouse so we can see how you shape up.' It's much more subliminal, but the search for big breasts is constantly there.

"It isn't such an issue in feature movies. Ladies like Jacqueline Bisset, Genevieve Boujold, Jane Fonda and others have small breasts. But in TV they want sex symbols and large mammaries are the standard.

"It's difficult when you want to establish yourself as an actress and as a person to find out what's important. You'd be amazed how many actresses have had breast surgery for that reason."

Dee was approached by the well-known personal manager of a bevy of beautiful TV stars who said he would handle her career if Dee would undergo a silicone implant operation.

Dee recently completed a co-starring role in Blake Edwards' new movie, "10," the title of which refers to a woman who measures 10 on a scale of one to 10 for sex appeal. The top-rated 10 in the picture is newcomer Bo Derek.

Bo is the wife of former actor John Derek, ex-husband of sex symbols Ursula Andress and Linda Evans. According to Dee, Bo is more luscious, beautiful and sexy than either of Derek's former wives.

"Thanks to the value we all put on gorgeous faces and figures," said Dee, "I went through a terrible identity crisis when I started work with Bo."

"It's the old number laid on all women from the time they are two years old and learn what a body is. If you don't have a big bust and a great face, you're not worth as much as a woman. Society has drummed that lesson into us.

"The feminist movement and male attitudes have changed things in the last couple of years. Even so, pretty girls still get all the attention. Bo will come out of this picture a worldwide sex symbol, believe me."

"I'm not saying she can't act, but Bo is one of the most beautiful women I've ever seen. And that's all people will remember."

One might better understand Dee's insecurities if she were homely or even plain. But Dee turns heads herself — at least when she's not with Bo. Her face and voice bring to mind Joanne Woodward.

"Even pretty girls feel like Cinderella before the ball when they're working with great beauties," she said. "It doesn't matter what other people think, it's all in a woman's estimate of herself. If she thinks she isn't attractive, then she isn't." "Working with Bo was intimidating. She represents everything I was always told a woman should look like. When you're accustomed to having people turn to stare at you, and you walk into a room with Bo and nobody knows you're there, it shakes your confidence."

"I got real insecure, a childish emotion, like someone had taken your candy away. I was even jealous because Blake Edwards took Bo out to dinner more often than me on our locations in Mexico. I felt the only way I could prove myself as a woman was by excelling as an actress."

"It's not just show business or male sexists that build insecurities in women. Women are responsible for the pecking order that has always existed. A woman inevitably knows where she stands with other women in terms of being attractive. In any female group the most beautiful woman has the upper hand."

"Any time two women get together there's a subliminal competitiveness. That's why most women prefer the company of men. They don't have to compete. It's a lesson I learned as a little girl growing up in Kansas City."

"And I must say, it prepared me for what I'm facing now in Hollywood."

'Holocaust' Sets German Rating Records

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — "Holocaust," the American TV dramatization of the Nazi extermination of Jews, is setting West German television rating records, the state-run network said Wednesday.

It estimated 14 million to 16 million viewers watched the first two installments of the four-part series on Monday and Tuesday.

The viewing audience Monday was 33 percent of West Germany's 19 million sets and Tuesday it was 36 percent, the network reported.

"This is a record for the Third Channel, where a 20 percent audience is considered high," a network spokesman said.

The Third Channel, unlike the other two West German channels which specialize in mass entertainment programs, usually offers regional entertainment, many of them high-brow.

On the first two channels a detective story often gets an audience of 57 percent.

Everyone from Chancellor Helmut Schmidt to teen-aged high school students was talking about "Holocaust."

It was a subject of conversation in parliament, in schools, in factories.

Schmidt mentioned the series Tuesday in a speech to the Bundestag, the lower house of parliament, defending his 1979 budget.

"I wish the other part of Germany also could see it," he said. "They, too, have a right to be informed about our common German history."

Newspapers interviewed everyone from Mildred Scheel, the wife of President Walter Scheel, to the "man on the street" about the series.

Mrs. Scheel told the newspaper Bild, the country's biggest circulation newspaper: "I was deeply moved. Young people above all should see this film."

Martina Brockhoff, a 16-year-old high school student, told the Hamburg newspaper Morgenpost: "We can never get too much information about the Nazi era. Otherwise the danger would exist that such a thing could happen again."

The American television series was prompting Germans to face up to their past in a way they never quite did before. It was helping them answer the taboo question many had avoided asking: Did we not know what was happening? Did we not want to know?

Even those television critics who found artistic faults in the series said its message was true and necessary.

French Join Geneva Disarmament Talks

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — After nearly 16 years of staying away, France took its seat in the Geneva disarmament talks Wednesday but announced it will not stop nuclear weapons test explosions.

"France has, and will for a long time have the need for an independent national deterrent force," French Foreign Minister Jean Francois-Poncet told a news conference.

"It is quite obvious that it test explosions are necessary they will have to take place," he added. France arouses criticism every time it explodes a device at its Pacific testing ground.

The United States, Britain and the Soviet Union in 1963 banned all but underground tests and have since failed to agree on banning these.

In 1937, the United States presidential inauguration was held in January instead of March for the first time.
