Share your memories of Jessica McClure

October 16 will mark the 10th anniversary of the rescue of Jessica McClure, an event many consider Midland's finest hour.

For 58 hours volunteers from all walks of life joined their efforts to free the child as an entire nation watched and then cheered. Even today many Americans immediately think of Jessica McClure or "that child rescued from the water well" when they hear the name "Midland."

Now, we'd like to know what your memories are of that historic event. In 300 words or less, readers are invited to share their feelings and their recollections.

Letters selected will be published Sunday, October 5, in a special anniversary section. They should be addressed to Jessica Letters, c/o Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Texas, 79702, or they can be faxed to 570-7650.

Angled parking

Today and Sunday city workers will be converting Colorado Street, from Ohio to Missouri avenues, to angled parking. Workers will steam the old parallel parking lines off the pavement and paint new 45-degree angle lines. Parking meters will be replaced with two-hour parking limit signs. The parking spaces will be numbered for time enforcement. All work will be completed by Tuesday morning. After the conversion, Colorado Street will then consist of two southbound lanes with angled parking on each side of the street.

Recall expanded

WASHINGTON — The government expanded its recall of ground beef produced by an Arkansas company to 1.2 million pounds Friday because of new evidence of possible contamination by E. coli bacteria. Anyone who has purchased frozen ground-beef patties since June 4 should check their freezers to determine if any of the Hudson Foods Co. products are there. If so, they should be returned to the point of purchase, Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman said. The tainted beef came from the Hudson Foods plant in Columbus, Neb.

Dow falls nearly 250 points in late selling

■ Point drop marks worst since 1987 crash, but Dow still is up more than 19 percent this year.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Dow industrials plunged nearly 250 points Friday in a late wave of skittish selling that marked the worst point drop since the 1987 crash.

The selloff capped a dizzying tumble of 565 points, or almost 7 percent, from the market's record high reached just last week.

Traders are worried about inflation, interest rates and the outlook for corporate earnings. But investors viewed the drop as the long-awaited correction in an overvalued bull market, not a panic.

At 3 percent, Friday's decline pales in comparison with the 22.6 percent free fall of 1987. And still, the Dow is up more than 19 percent this year, double what many analysts had been expecting for all of 1997.

"This is a bit of a pause after a hell of a run," said William M. Lefevre, senior market analyst at Ehrenkrantz King Nussbaum.

In yet another day of gyrations, the Dow Jones industrial average stumbled badly in the final 30 minutes of trading Friday, closing down 247.37 at 7,694.66.

The point loss for the average of 30 blue-chip stocks was second only to the record 508-point plunge of the Oct. 19, 1987, crash.

Broader market indexes also tumbled.

The selloff extended a retreat from the record 8,259.31 set by the Dow on Aug. 6. It was the steepest slide since the Dow plunged almost 10 percent in March and early April before returning to uncharted heights.

Reagan Hughes Day

Miss Texas returns to Midland for homecoming celebration

Mayor Bobby Burns declared Friday "Reagan Hughes Day" in Midland. Ms. Hughes, a Midland native, is the new Miss Texas and will compete in the Miss America pageant in September.

Midland native says she's product of 'wonderful West Texas people'

The new Miss Texas, Reagan Hughes, returned to her hometown for a homecoming celebration Friday.

The Lee High School graduate first received a proclamation from Mayor Bobby Burns declaring the day "Reagan Hughes Day."

In the proclamation, Burns cited her work with young people, which he said shows she is a person who makes a difference, and said that the city and the Permian Basin are proud of her accomplishments. "Midland is proud to claim Reagan as one of its own," the proclamation concluded.

Ms. Hughes said she has been overwhelmed by the response she and her family have received since she was crowned Miss Texas last month.

"I really couldn't have done this without the support of family, friends and community members who have always backed me in all I've done," she said.

"I am a product of the wonderful West Texas people who taught me to be myself and to strive to do the best I can in everything I try."

The five-year veteran of scholarship pageants is preparing for the Miss America pageant, which will be telecast Sept. 13 from Atlantic City, N.J.

She leaves Aug. 28 for Disney World in Orlando, Fla., where she and the other contestants will spend five days doing promotional work for Disney and getting to know each other.

United Way sets goal 8.5 percent higher than 1996

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

With a more aggressive media blitz, new programs and a 1997 goal 8.5 percent higher than last year's, the United Way of Midland unofficially kicked off its latest campaign Friday with a media briefing.

Arco Permian president Tony Best, this year's campaign chairman, announced that the agency will shoot for a goal of $3,049,009 in the campaign that officially begins with a Sept. 10 kickoff.

Best also unveiled a multi-point plan to help ensure that the higher goal is met. The plan includes full-year fund-raising, market segmentation and leadership giving.

The agency will shoot for a goal of $3,049,000 in the campaign that officially begins with a Sept. 10 kickoff.

Market segmentation draws on certain segments of the community for increased participation.

Best said that the Hispanic community, which comprises 35 percent of Midland's population, will be "invited to join us at the leadership level."

Best said that in St. Louis, market segmentation accounted for $6 million in gifts its first year from women in the business community and an additional $1 million from the African American business community.

Officials also announced that for the first $200,000 raised through leadership gifts, the Abell Hanger Foundation will provide a $100,000 matching gift.

Other dates in this year's effort include:

■ Sept. 2: Public Sector Campaign Press Conference, Air Terminal Post Office.

■ Sept. 10: Campaign Kickoff, Midland Center.

■ Sept. 22: Youth Campaign Week, Various MISD Schools.

■ Sept. 25: "Bid the Basin" Live Auction.

n Sept. 27: "Bid the Basin" televised auction.

■ Oct. 16: Campaign Report Luncheon, Centennial Plaza.

■ Oct. 24: Final Day of Campaign.

■ Oct. 30: Campaign Finale, Green Tree Country Club.

Elvis faithful turn out for anniversary

By Woody Baird
Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — For a devoted Elvis fan, standing at Graceland's front gates for 24 hours is a sacrifice of love on the 20th anniversary of the King's death.

"I stand 95 percent of the time. It would be 100 percent, but I'm 47 now and my legs don't hold up like they once did," said Bill Rowe of Dayton, Ohio.

Rowe arrived at Graceland's front gates Thursday night to be at the head of Friday's annual procession to Presley's gravesite. A paper mill worker who returns to Memphis each August, Rowe wouldn't let himself sleep during the wait.

"In my mind, that would be disrespectful," he said.

Suffering from heart disease made worse by drug abuse, Presley died at his longtime Memphis residence on Aug. 16, 1977, at age 42.

Memphis police estimated that 15,000 fans were gathered at Graceland's front gates by the time the procession began at 9 p.m. They expected more than 20,000 before it's over.

"They'll be wandering in and out through the whole night," said Lt. James Greenleaf.

Sandy Traylor, 55, of Lancaster, Pa., and Joyce Rosenzweig, 51, of York, Pa., also waited through most of the day Friday to get toward the head of the line.

"We love him and we're just coming to pay our respects at his grave, like you'd do for any friend or loved one," Ms. Traylor said.

KING: Elvis fans pay respects 20 years after his death

Many of the pilgrims leave small gifts, teddy bears, flowers and homemade crafts at Presley's grave in a small garden beside Graceland. He's buried there with his mother, father and paternal grandmother.

Karen Glick, 51, of Champaign, Ill., brought a bouquet of silk flowers, a small teddy bear and a card reading: "Silver stars fade and fall."

She said she remembers seeing Elvis, then 21, make his first national TV appearances in 1956 on "Stage Show," the musical variety series cohosted by bandleaders Jimmy and Tommy Dorsey.

"Everybody went to school on Monday and nobody could remember his name. But everybody could remember how he moved and jumped around and we thought that was cool," she said.

Graceland opened to tourists in 1982 and draws more than 700,000 visitors a year. It supports a sprawling complex of souvenir shops and museums and brings in about $15 million annually.

'We love him and we're just coming to pay our respects at his grave, like you'd do for any friend or loved one.'

"I'm part Cherokee like Elvis was," Moore said. "I'm out drumming up business for the show tonight and to let people who never got to meet Elvis get some pictures."

MISD reported only 12 minor bus accidents last year

By Rick Lopez
Staff Writer

School buses are the safest form of transportation in the state, according to a recent report from the Texas Department of Public Safety Accident Records Bureau.

"Fewer than 1 percent of the accidents on Texas roadways directly or indirectly involved a school bus in 1996," DPS Information Officer Laureen Chernow said. "The first day of school is exciting for students, but the new school year could bring tragedy if school safety rules are not followed."

Texas public schools transported an average of 1.62 million students across the state daily, logging 2 million miles in the last school year.

Locally, Midland Independent School District reported only 12 minor bus accidents during 1996-1997, said MISD Director of Transportation Wesley Washam. A total of 157 buses traveled 2 million miles that year, he added.

Approximately 8,500 students from all grade levels are bused to MISD schools everyday, Washam said.

Meanwhile, at the state level, only one fatality — an adult on a school bus — occurred. A total of 1,525 school bus drivers and passengers suffered injuries when their school bus was directly or indirectly involved in an accident. Also, 24 student pedestrians were injured before boarding or exiting a school bus. The most likely time for accidents to occur is when the school bus is loading or unloading students, the study indicated.

DPS troopers remind motorists to obey traffic laws and stop for school buses loading or unloading students. Parents and teachers are urged to talk to children about school bus safety.

"Students should be educated to follow the basic safety rules. Stop and watch for traffic before crossing the streets when preparing to board or exit a school bus," Ms. Chernow said. "Students should also watch for vehicles illegally passing a school bus on the right or left side when they exit."

According to the Texas Department of Transportation, the majority of children killed or injured during unloading and loading procedures are under age 10. Students also should be cautious to avoid wearing clothing or carrying purses or backpacks with drawstrings that could get caught in handrails when exiting a bus.

Feds look at possible civil right violations in border shooting

EL PASO (AP) — FBI took custody of two guns and all other physical evidence Friday in the fatal shooting of an 18-year-old goatherd who was gunned down along the border by a Marine.

The move came as federal prosecutors announced they are looking into possible civil rights violations in the death of Esequiel Hernandez Jr. near the Rio Grande, where the teen had been grazing his goats.

A grand jury determined Thursday that Cpl. Clemente Banuelos was defending a fellow Marine when he killed Hernandez, a decision that outraged the victim's family.

"I think somebody should be held responsible for the death of my brother," Margarito Hernandez said Friday. "They made it look like it was his fault. I don't know, the only mistake he did was to go pasture his goats on that day."

Esequiel Hernandez was killed May 20 after crossing paths with a four-man Marine unit assigned to watch a suspected drug smuggling route at the request of the Border Patrol in Redford, a tiny border community 200 miles southeast of El Paso.

Military officials said Hernandez fired twice at the Marines with a .22-caliber rifle and was about to shoot again at Lance Cpl. James M. Blood when Banuelos killed him with a single shot from an M-16.

'I wanted to introduce you (to Cpl. Clemente Banuelos, shown at left)... so you know he's a real person. He's 22 years old, but I bet he's aged 10 years in the last 3 months.'

—Jack Zimmermann, Banuelos' attorney

Texas Rangers and local prosecutors who investigated the shooting said they had evidence that conflicted with the Marines' reports. The teen's family said he carried a gun to protect his livestock from predators and occasionally to shoot at targets.

The grand jury concluded that although Hernandez might have been shooting in the direction of the camouflaged Marines, he probably didn't know they were there.

Among the evidence taken by the FBI on Friday was the rifle Hernandez was carrying and Banuelos' M-16, said Presidio County Sheriff Danny Dominguez.

"I was asked to turn over all evidence in the case — the physical evidence presented to the grand jury and in my custody," Dominguez said.

Daryl Fields, a spokesman for the U.S. Attorney's office in San Antonio, said the Justice Department's civil rights division had been reviewing the incident but was "taking a backseat role to allow the local district attorney to complete his investigation first."

"Now ... we will probably start picking up on our end," he said.

It is not unprecedented for federal charges to be filed against a person who has already been cleared in the same case by local authorities. California police officers who beat Rodney King were acquitted of state charges, but later convicted of violating his civil rights.

Banuelos' attorney, Jack Zimmermann, said at a news conference in Houston on Friday that the Justice Department inquiry is standard procedure. But Zimmermann, himself a former Marine, doubts federal charges will result.

Banuelos attended the news conference but did not speak or answer questions.

"I wanted to introduce you ... so you know he's a real person," Zimmerman said, adding that the Marine feels bad about the shooting but believes he did nothing wrong. "He's 22 years old, but I bet he's aged 10 years in the last 3 months."

Zimmermann said the grand jury decision was correct "legally and morally."

"But our hearts go out to the Hernandez family because they lost a son," the attorney said.

HOME: 'Pageant is positive reflection of Generation X'

(From 1A)

Then the contestants will travel to Atlantic City, where they will spend a week in rehearsals before the pageant gets under way with the interview phase.

"I wish I could express to you how, over the past five years, how much I have grown personally," she said. "It's the one thing I've gotten involved in that uses all my God-given talents.

"I wish people could know how relevant the pageant system is. It is truly a reflection of good, all-American women trying to make a difference and make the best of their lives. All you win are scholarships and these women use them to go to school and get their degrees and become doctors or teachers. I also like the system because it's a positive reflection of Generation X and we don't get a lot of that right now."

Ms. Hughes said she is very aware of the popular image of Miss America contestants and the pageant itself, as are pageant officials.

"Five years ago," she admitted, "I could not have seen myself in pageants. They have taught me not to judge a book by its cover and to be open-minded. We all have God-given gifts and need the opportunity to utilize them."

As required by the Miss America system, she has developed a platform issue — "Empowering Youth Through Mentoring" — which grew out of her volunteer work with Big Brothers/Big Sisters in Waco, where she is a "big sister" to Jasmine.

"I'd feel I'd done an injustice if I went to schools and spoke to the students or went to service organizations and talked with adults about issues and didn't give them an opportunity to act," she said.

"Anyone can be a mentor and it makes such a huge difference in young people's lives."

She said being "big sister" to Jasmine "has changed my life. You go in wanting to give and end up getting back more."

FALL: Some say decline was overdue

(From 1A)

The market has now given back 30 percent of a nearly 1,900-point upward charge in less than four months.

"You have days like that. It'll be back; it always bounces back," said Lee Bacote, a New York restaurant worker. "The economy is still pretty good."

Stocks were led lower as interest rates rose in the bond market. The decline on Wall Street was aggravated by computer-driven selling typical of "double witching" days such as Friday, when options contracts expire on stocks and stock indexes.

Some investors said the decline was overdue after the market's wild ride to the record books. But there also are more fundamental concerns about the course of interest rates and corporate profits, especially in advance of a meeting Tuesday by Federal Reserve Board policy-makers.

Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan has said that the nation's central bank is prepared to raise interest rates if a pre-emptive strike against inflation is needed.

While the Fed is not expected to push up interest rates next week to cool off an economy that has been growing for seven years, such a move would slow consumer spending and raise corporate operating costs.

"I think what the market is telling us is we need some more time for this correction to unfold," said Anthony O'Bryan, market analyst for A.G. Edwards & Sons in St. Louis.

Boat sinkings leave 16 dead, 65 missing in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Two ferry boats sank in turbulent seas off Manila and the central Philippines on Friday, killing 16 people and leaving 65 others missing and feared dead.

Four of the dead were Hong Kong tourists aboard the King Rogers, which was returning from a sightseeing tour of Manila Bay when it capsized in strong winds and big waves.

Helen Wong said most of the 43 Hong Kong tourists on board became frightened when the boat started shaking.

"We told the tour leader to bring us back to shore because the waves were becoming bigger," Mrs. Wong said. "The leader said not to worry because we were about to end the tour anyway."

Mrs. Wong said the boat suddenly overturned 400 yards from the Manila Yacht Club marina.

Rescuers heard people knocking from inside the hull of the boat but found no one after several hours of searching.

Mrs. Wong's mother-in-law was among the 20 people missing, while her husband, mother and four-year-old son survived.

In the central Philippines, strong winds and high waves overturned a ferry before dawn Friday, killing at least 12 people and leaving about 45 missing.

The weather bureau in Manila said the turbulence was caused by monsoon winds from the southwest and also by Typhoon Winnie.

Lt. Cmdr. Crisolito Agustin, regional coast guard chief, said the Kalibo Star left Cebu for Tacloban city on Leyte island before it sank early Friday.

Danilo Macasling, a ferry crew member, said the vessel's cargo shifted to one side as it was hit by big waves, causing it to capsize near the northern tip of Leyte.

Agustin said at least 32 passengers and 34 of the 35-member crew were picked up by passing ships and navy rescue vessels.

Robert Liles, a coast guard officer near the site of the accident 300 miles southeast of Manila, said the bodies of 10 women, a man and a girl were recovered at sea.

Philippine Navy divers gather close to the hull of the capsized tourist boat, MV King Rogers, hoping to find survivors after it sank just off Manila Bay Friday. Witnesses said the King Rogers was on its way back to port when it capsized after being battered by strong winds and big waves.

Inter-island ferries are a main mode of transportation between the Philippines' 7,000 islands.

In 1987, the Philippines suffered the world's worst peacetime shipping disaster when the ferry Dona Paz collided with a tanker, killing 4,341 people.

Egyptian nurse confesses to killing 18

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A nurse has confessed to killing at least 18 patients so she would not be disturbed at night at work, a newspaper reported Friday.

Aida Nur el-Din allegedly routinely killed patients this year by injecting them with drugs stolen from the hospital dispensary, the Egyptian Gazette said.

The 42-year-old nurse "did not want to be annoyed by their noises during her night shift," the newspaper quoted a police report as saying.

The woman attempted suicide Thursday after confessing, jumping from a third-story window as police escorted her to a prosecutor's office to be charged with murder, the Gazette said.

El-Din was in a coma at the same hospital in the Mediterranean city of Alexandria where she worked, the newspaper said.

India celebrates successes of half-century, notes its failures

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — India celebrated the successes of a half-century of independence with nationwide festivities Friday: Helicopters showered revelers with rose petals, choirs of schoolchildren sang, and hundreds walked barefoot to the shrine of Mohandas Gandhi.

But separatist violence marred celebrations in much of the country, and India's leaders made a point of citing the problems still facing the young nation: illiteracy, overpopulation and — above all — rampant, debilitating corruption.

"Some people think that corruption is their birth right. I am warning them," Prime Minister Inder Kumar Gujral said in an often stern independence day address to the nation from New Delhi.

Before the hourlong speech, fighter jets etched streams of saffron, white and green — the colors of the Indian flag — across a sky lit by the early morning sun.

Helicopters dropped rose petals on the crowd of 10,000, gathered at the sandstone headquarters of the country's former Mogul rulers. At the end of the ceremony, 7,000 schoolchildren sang the national anthem, waving paper flags.

Gujral evoked Gandhi's experiments in peaceful resistance — which forced the British colonialists out of India in 1947 — in urging Indians to refuse to engage in bribery, despite the hardships that might entail.

He promised to reform the nation's election laws to break the link between politicians and criminals and pledged to "make the government functioning more transparent."

His pledge is sure to strike a chord among India's 970 million people, who are increasingly frustrated at having to pay bribes for everything from a driver's license to a water connection.

India is widely considered one of the world's most corrupt countries, and foreign investors say the demand for bribes at every turn has held up its free-market reforms. India's last government lost elections after it was burned by corruption scandals reaching as high as the Cabinet. The former leader of Gujral's party also faces corruption charges.

In his nationally broadcast address, Gujral also said his government would give money to poor families to care for daughters, who are often denied educational opportunities in a culture where boys are cherished.

He declared that primary education would be made mandatory for children up to 14, but offered no details on how the government would pay for it. Similar development programs have failed in the past.

Gujral made no new promises to Pakistan, the western neighbor with which India has fought three wars. He said India wants better relations, but would not compromise its security.

Pakistan's Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif sent Gujral a note echoing his call during Pakistan's 50th anniversary celebrations for an end to the violent feud between their countries. Pakistan celebrated its independence on Thursday.

India accuses Pakistan of stoking a rebellion in northern Jammu-Kashmir state, the country's only Muslim majority state.

The antipathy between the two neighbors has historic roots: the division of the British empire into Hindu India and Islamic Pakistan in 1947 was accompanied by deadly religious riots that left 500,000 people dead.

Independence celebrations in Jammu-Kashmir were restricted to about 1,000 police officers, lawmakers, party workers and military officials, who gathered in a stadium in the state capital to hear political speeches.

The public was barred from the stadium as a security measure, and most Kashmiris stayed in their homes, observing a strike called by separatist militants.

In the remote northeast, the celebrations were attended solely by officials — civilians heeded a boycott call by separatist guerrillas.

In Assam, the largest state in the region, rebels burned three railway stations, killing a station superintendent and leaving an unspecified number of other people with severe burns.

Elsewhere in the northeast, at least four people were killed in attacks blamed on separatists.

In New Delhi, hundreds of people walked barefoot to pay their respects to Gandhi at a memorial built after he was killed in 1948 by a Hindu fanatic who opposed his campaign for Hindu-Muslim unity.

Police reports

Robbery arrest

ODESSA — Police arrested two men Friday in connection with a robbery of a local restaurant that occurred earlier this month.

James David Session, 24, and Deion Morray Watkins, 23, were arrested on warrants charging them with aggravated robbery, a first-degree felony.

Authorities said charges stem from a robbery that occurred Aug. 7 at Carrow's, 105 W. 42nd., at 4:30 a.m. Two armed men allegedly entered the restaurants and robbed employees.

The weapon allegedly used in the incident has not been recovered, authorities stated. A composite drawing of one of the suspects led to the identification of one of the robbers, officials said.

The men were taken to the Ector County Detention Center. Session's bond was set at $15,000. Watkins' was set at $200,000, jail officials said.

Gang assault

A male juvenile reported an assault from 1805 Thomason Drive Thursday night, police reports indicate.

According to the report, the complainant told police that he was cut with an edged weapon. The suspects fled the scene in a low rider vehicle with decorative rims.

Police reports indicated that the incident was gang-related.

Suspect arrested

Local law enforcement arrested a 16-year-old male Friday evening in connection with a stabbing that occurred near Odessa High School on Wednesday.

The suspect was arrested and charged with aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, a second-degree felony. He was taken to the Ector County Youth Center.

His charge stems from the Wednesday afternoon stabbing of Shannon Sotelo, 17. Sotelo was stabbed at 700 W. 11th St. — three blocks from Odessa High.

Sotelo remained in stable condition at Medical Center Hospital Friday, police said.

An investigation by Odessa Police Department and Ector County Independent School District Police Department revealed that a knife was used in the incident. ECISD officials were quoted as saying that the incident was gang-related.

The suspect was identified during the investigation.

Ireland's singing angel-on-earth is on mission to become president

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — As a giggly teen-ager known simply as Dana, she won over Europe with "All Kinds of Everything," a song about the good in butterflies and bees, wedding bells and wishing wells.

Now, Ireland's singing angel-on-earth has come back from her home in the southern United States on a mission to become Ireland's president — a slightly tougher act than winning the 1970 Eurovision song competition.

Dana, born Rosemary Brown and now 44, is a pop-culture cult figure in Ireland, known for her strong views against divorce, abortion and homosexuality. In Alabama, where she moved in the late 1980s, she often appeared on a Christian variety show on cable's Eternal World Television Network.

Dana sees herself as the standard-bearer for old values in Ireland, a country where Roman Catholic authority is ebbing, and where traditional believers increasingly feel marginalized.

But it would take something of a miracle for her to qualify for the Oct. 30 vote, given a party-dominated nomination system that requires formal backing from at least 20 national lawmakers or four county councils.

"If we don't get behind Dana as president, there could be a hot place awaiting us all"
— Gerard O'Mahony
director of Christian Community Center in Dublin

Former Prime Minister Albert Reynolds has declared his candidacy, and other prominent politicians are weighing their chances.

"Dana's a lovely lady. She's an angel really. But she should keep her day job," said construction worker Eamon Moran, 30.

Dana — still widely known by her stage name — decries the system for encouraging many people "not to use their vote, or to vote for someone in their heart they don't really want." But she is trusting in prayer — and publicity.

Since arriving Wednesday from Birmingham, Ala., Dana's been giving interviews 12 hours a day promoting herself as the best replacement for Mary Robinson, the civil rights lawyer who is to become the United Nations' next commissioner for human rights.

"I give Mary Robinson due praise for highlighting the role of the president. She was very active and opened the way for women. ...I do not agree with her liberal outlook," Dana said.

Robinson's election to the mainly symbolic post in 1990 was widely seen as signaling a new era.

In this decade, contraceptives have become widely available, divorce was legalized, and abortion in exceptional circumstances seems likely to be approved. Dana considers all those developments evil.

"To secularize a country, to take God out of the country basically, in an island where 90 to 95 percent and maybe even more of the population are of a Judeo-Christian tradition, is just unbelievable!" she said, raising her usually whisper-soft voice.

"The president's constitutional duty is to be sure that before anything is signed into law it is, without doubt of any kind, the will of the people.

"If I felt that the people of Ireland, that their desire was for abortion, I don't know that I'd want to be president," said Dana, who has four children, ages 7 to 16.

Dana grew up in Londonderry in British-ruled Northern Ireland and won the Eurovision contest when her city was caught up in conflict. Local comedians rewrote her song to include a line about: "Tear gas and Tommy guns, barricades and bombs."

She married Damien Scallon in 1979, shortly before the IRA bombed his hotel in the border town of Newry for the seventh time.

"He'd had enough. You just lose heart. Damien then became my manager," she said.

Gerard O'Mahony, 79, director of the Christian Community Center in Dublin, is Dana's chief supporter.

"This is an opportunity for people who believe in the power of prayer to get the one candidate who is a candidate for the people, who stands by the law of God," said the retired lawyer. "If we don't get behind Dana as president, there could be a hot place awaiting all of us."

U.S. suspends grant to Russian think tank

MOSCOW (AP) — The U.S. government has suspended a $890,000 grant to a Harvard-affiliated Russian think tank, accusing it of stealing a half-million dollars worth of office equipment.

The Moscow office of the U.S. Agency for International Development said the grant to the Institute for Law-based Economy (ILBE) may be restored if the equipment is returned.

"It is my hope that, through your actions, circumstances might once again change and we might be able to continue funding this important program," USAID officer Orion Yeandel wrote in a letter dated Aug. 13.

The Russian institute has denied the charges.

ILBE, a Russian institute set up by Harvard to advise the government on legal reform, was mostly funded by aid funneled through the Harvard Institute for International Development.

USAID funding for Harvard programs was halted in April when a preliminary investigation accused two advisers from the university of using their positions in Russia for personal gain.

Last week, USAID also accused the legal institute of walking off with $500,000 of U.S.-purchased office equipment. The money suspended this week was the only USAID grant to bypass Harvard and go directly to ILBE.

ILBE director Sergei Shishkin said Friday that his organization is considering a possible slander suit.

"If this doesn't stop, we'll have to file suit against USAID," Shishkin said. "I don't think we should be trying to defend ourselves in a subtle way."

USAID has accused the Harvard advisers — economics professor Andrei Shleifer and legal expert Jonathan Hay — of permitting ILBE staff to provide services for investment projects run by Shleifer's wife and Hay's girlfriend. Both men deny the allegations.

In the wake of the charges, First Russian Deputy Prime Minister Anatoly Chubais broke off a long relationship with Harvard and publicly sided with the two advisers. Since May, Harvard has been closing down its projects in Russia, including those at ILBE.

As a result, ILBE was compelled to move this month from offices it once shared with Harvard, which brought up the question of how to divide office equipment bought with U.S. money.

Shishkin contends that while the equipment belongs to the U.S. government, Harvard had transferred the property onto ILBE's books in order to stay clear of Russian taxes.

An official with the Harvard Institute for International Development, who spoke on condition of anonymity, denied his organization transferred the equipment to ILBE.

Shishkin said a letter ILBE sent to USAID on dividing up the property went unanswered.

Japan marks anniversary of surrender with remorse

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese held two starkly different ceremonies on the anniversary of the nation's World War II surrender Friday: The government expressed remorse in one, while flag-waving veterans demanded national recognition in the other.

How Japan commemorates the day is watched closely by China, South Korea and other countries where anger over Japan's brutality during the war remains intense.

This year, as in years past, Emperor Akihito presided over a solemn ceremony at the Budokan hall, an auditorium adorned with a wall of yellow chrysanthemums. In a somber speech, he expressed "deep sadness" for the lives that were lost in the war.

Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto, wearing formal mourning clothes, said Japan felt "deep remorse" about the war, but avoided a direct apology to Japan's victims.

The war "caused tremendous suffering and sorrow not only in our country but also to peoples of many countries, especially those in Asia," Hashimoto said.

The noon ceremony coincided with the moment on Aug. 15, 1945, when Akihito's father, Hirohito, went on the radio to announce that Japan was surrendering.

The prime minister was conspicuously absent from observances held nearby at the Yasukuni Shrine, known as a site of nationalistic and militaristic demonstrations during the war.

AP Photo

Takechiyo Kondo, 73, right, and Ryuzo Hisamoto, 71, join other members of the former Japanese Imperial Navy as they pay tribute to the nation's military war dead at the Yasukuni Shrine in downtown Tokyo Friday. Japan observed the 52nd anniversary of the end of World War II nationwide.

Hashimoto drew angry criticism by visiting the shrine in July 1996. And Japanese news media said he wanted to avoid stirring up more rancor now, especially from China, which he visits next month.

Yasukuni, dedicated to the country's war dead, is controversial because those enshrined there include executed war criminals. The grounds include a war museum that houses a kamikaze plane.

Veterans and right-wing nationalists rallied at the shrine Friday, urging Japan to recognize the shrine as a national monument.

A group of old men marched in Imperial Army uniforms, carrying the army's World War II flag. The roads surrounding the normally quiet shrine were crowded with the black trucks that right-wing activists often drive through Tokyo with loudspeakers trumpeting their views. As usual, the vehicles blared old military songs.

U.S. occupation forces prevented Japan from using it as a national shrine, so it is regarded as a private religious site.

That angers veterans such as 77-year-old Tadashi Yamada.

"Every other country has a place where fallen soldiers are honored," he said. "It's only natural that Japan should have such a national site too."

Although Hashimoto stayed away, seven members of his Cabinet went to offer prayers to the spirits of dead soldiers.

Invariably, the visits rekindle debate about Japan's accountability for the war. Some say the nation hasn't done enough to atone; others say Japan has nothing for which to apologize.

In other parts of Asia, many people believe the Japanese government should pay direct reparations to surviving victims of wartime atrocities, including slave laborers in Japan's mines and factories, casualties of chemical and germ warfare, and women forced to work in military brothels.

In Manila, about two dozen former wartime sex slaves dressed in black protested at the Japanese Embassy to coincide with the anniversary. They demanded government compensation and an explicit apology.

In Taiwan, 12 former sex slaves from Taiwan's aboriginal tribes filed a lawsuit against the Japanese government for compensation, while former Taiwanese soldiers conscripted into the Japanese army gathered in Taipei. They demand back pay, which has not been forthcoming.

North Korea, Japan to resume talks on normalization

TOKYO (AP) — Longtime enemies North Korea and Japan announced Friday they will hold talks next week aimed at eventually establishing diplomatic relations.

The talks, to be held Thursday in Beijing, would be a breakthrough for Tokyo and Pyongyang, which never have had formal relations and often are embroiled in disputes.

North Korea has never forgiven Japan for its colonization of the Korean Peninsula from 1910 to 1945, its support of the United States during the 1950-53 Korean War, and the close relations that Tokyo established with South Korea after the war.

The two countries have held eight rounds of normalization talks without success.

Still, a warmer relationship could help North Korea get more Japanese food aid to help ward off a looming famine. Japan provided $5.2 million in food aid last year, but has refused to pledge any more.

North Korea has been devastated by its worst drought this century, following two straight years of flooding that wiped out much of its farmland. One international agency estimates 5 million of North Korea's 24 million people face possible starvation.

On Friday, North Korea urged its people to ensure a big harvest this autumn.

"We must bring a big harvest this year no matter what," an editorial in the official Rodong Sinmun newspaper said. "Not much time is left before the year ends. All party members and workers must make the final dash in our 'march of hardships.'"

In Tokyo, Foreign Minister Yukihiko Ikeda told reporters the two countries agreed Friday to hold the bilateral talks, a report confirmed by North Korean radio.

Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto welcomed the chance to improve ties. "There have been so many times that similar talks have been put off for one reason or another that I really look forward to their actually being carried out," he said.

Ikeda said North Korea agreed to discuss the possibility of allowing Japanese women married to North Koreans to return home on visits.

The last round of talks was suspended in November 1992, when North Korean negotiators walked out. They objected to Japanese demands for information on Megumi Yokota, thought to be kidnapped by North Korean spies.

Yokota was 13 when she vanished in November 1977 in Niigata on the Sea of Japan facing the Korean peninsula, 160 miles northwest of Tokyo.

As in several 1978 kidnappings, no conclusive evidence has been found. But Tokyo believes that North Korean secret agents abducted the victims to cover their tracks while fleeing Japan.

Hamburger recall expanded to 1.2 million pounds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government expanded its recall of ground beef produced by an Arkansas company to 1.2 million pounds Friday because of new evidence of possible contamination by E. coli bacteria.

Anyone who has purchased frozen ground-beef patties since June 4 should check their freezers to determine if certain Hudson Foods Co. products are there. If so, the product should be returned to the point of purchase, said Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman.

The tainted beef came from the Hudson Foods plant in Columbus, Neb., and government officials are trying to determine if other contaminated products were produced there.

"USDA is conducting a thorough investigation at the plant to ensure that no unsafe product is being allowed to go into commerce," Glickman said.

Much of the ground beef probably has already been eaten, officials said. USDA is assuming the hamburgers were distributed to all 50 states.

The Nebraska plant produces frozen ground-beef patties for such national chains as Burger King, Boston Market, Wal-Mart and Sam's Club, officials with Rogers, Ark.-based Hudson have said.

Wal-Mart Stores Inc. pulled all Hudson's ground beef from Wal-Mart and Sam's Club stores nationwide earlier this week, spokeswoman Daphne Davis said. Customers can return any patties they purchased for a full refund, no matter when it was bought.

Burger King said Friday it had found no evidence that any hamburger it bought from the company on the production days in question was tainted with E. coli. The suspect ground beef was produced at Hudson's Nebraska plant on June 4, June 5 and June 9.

Burger King said it does its own E. coli screening tests on beef patties and also thoroughly cooks every burger at 155 degrees for at least 15 seconds, enough to kill the bacteria.

Another large customer, Colorado-based Boston Market, said it had purchased about 16,000 pounds of Hudson beef produced on the suspect days but that those patties were long gone from its restaurants. It also does extra tests and cooks beef at properly high temperatures, the company said.

Although Hudson had voluntarily recalled some 40,000 pounds of hamburger earlier this week, federal officials say there appeared to be some unwarranted delay in determining how much beef may have been contaminated with E. coli.

E. coli bacteria can cause severe diarrhea, cramps and dehydration and can be fatal, although no deaths have been associated with this ground-beef recall, officials said. The young, elderly and people with weak immune systems are most susceptible.

The initial Hudson recall began after health officials in Colorado traced the illnesses of about 20 people to hamburger patties they ate in early June.

The federal Centers for Disease Control has asked all state health departments to check on local cases of E. coli illness to determine if there are others linked to the ground beef, a spokesman said.

In January 1993, an outbreak of E. coli poisoning traced to contaminated and undercooked burgers from Jack in the Box fast-food restaurants resulted in three deaths and hundreds of illnesses, mostly in Washington state. After that, the government began a public education campaign designed to encourage adequate cooking of burgers.

Officials have not yet identified every batch of hamburger that could be contaminated, but so far, officials said consumers should check specifically for these codes:

- All 48-ounce packages of "Hudson Beef Burgers, Individually Quick Frozen" that contain 12 quarter-pound patties. The code 156A7 is on the bottom of the package.
- All 3-pound packages of "Hudson 100% Pure Beef Patties, Individually Quick Frozen" that contain 12 quarter-pound patties. The code 156B7 is on the bottom.
- All 15-pound boxes of "Hudson 60 — 1/4-lb. Beef Patties, Uncooked Individually Quick Frozen" containing 60 quarter-pound patties. The codes 155B7, 155A7, 160A7 and 160B7 would appear on the bottom.
- All three products contain the code "Est. 13569" in the USDA inspection seal on the label.

Justice Department won't prosecute FBI officials for Ruby Ridge case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department decided Friday against prosecuting senior FBI officials in connection with an alleged cover-up that followed the deadly 1992 Ruby Ridge siege. But it left open the possibility that they could be fired.

The department said there was insufficient evidence to prosecute former Deputy Director Larry Potts and his chief aide at the time, Danny Coulson, on charges they falsely denied drafting orders authorizing the use of excessive force during the siege.

Two other officials at FBI headquarters, Gale R. Evans and Michael Baird, also will not be prosecuted, the department said.

The department's two-year criminal investigation also reaffirmed a 1994 decision against prosecuting Lon Horiuchi, the FBI sharpshooter who wounded white separatist Randy Weaver and killed his wife, Vicki, during the siege of Weaver's remote Idaho cabin.

But "this decision does not preclude the imposition of disciplinary sanctions against these individuals or other FBI officials," the department said in a statement.

The agency's Office of Professional Responsibility will review the results of the investigation to determine if sanctions are warranted "up to and including termination of employment."

Another FBI manager, E. Michael Kahoe, is awaiting sentencing next month on his guilty plea to obstructing justice by destroying a critique of the Rudy Ridge siege written by headquarters officials.

The four FBI officials will remain on administrative leave with pay pending the outcome of the internal review, the FBI said.

The FBI's hostage rescue team was sent to the cabin after Weaver's son, Samuel, and a deputy U.S. marshal died in a shootout. U.S. marshals went to Weaver's cabin to arrest him for failing to appear in court on gun-sale charges.

"I think it's too bad that the Justice Department is not going to prosecute Lon Horiuchi for manslaughter, as he clearly took a reckless shot and killed an innocent woman," said Charles Peterson, one of Weaver's lawyers.

The FBI siege spawned a nationwide debate on the use of force by federal law enforcement agencies. A Senate subcommittee concluded that the FBI gave its sharpshooters rules of engagement that violated the Constitution and that some agents violated orders.

Potts, hand picked by FBI Director Louis Freeh to be the bureau's No. 2 official, was transferred to another job in August 1995 and placed on administrative leave with pay.

At issue in the investigation was whether Potts and Coulson had approved rules of engagement for sharpshooters that authorized an excessive use of force. Both men denied knowing about the rules of engagement, which the on-site commander, Eugene Glenn, said Potts told him he had approved.

At the time, Potts headed the FBI's criminal division and Coulson was his deputy.

The Justice Department said it did not uncover proof beyond a reasonable doubt that Potts and Coulson knew the rules of engagement contained unauthorized wording.

Nor was their "sufficient evidence against either to obtain or sustain a conviction" that they "had otherwise destroyed or falsely created records to cover up such a culpability," the department said.

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, who investigated the siege, said the decision "means accountability has still not been achieved."

"And so, neither has a restoration of the public's confidence in federal law enforcement," Grassley said.

But Howard Pearl, a lawyer for Potts, was pleased. "We always knew this day would come but it's nice to see it finally arrive," Pearl said.

UPS labor winning battle for America's hearts

By Dan Sewell
AP Business Writer

It's the polite, reliable delivery people in the brown shorts you see every day against the white-collared executives in their corporate offices. Across the country, Americans are following and debating the United Parcel Service strike — and largely, taking sides with the brown-shorts folks.

"I'm in favor of the workers," said Heidi Lecklitner, a Panama City, Fla., woman visiting Atlanta on Friday. "It's the way service industries try to push down their costs. The working class loses out."

Several national polls this week consistently show the striking Teamsters are winning the hearts-and-minds battle in their 12-day-old strike that affects much of the population at least indirectly.

On Thursday, for example, a USA Today-CNN-Gallup Poll indicated that 55 percent of Americans supported the Teamsters, compared with 27 percent backing UPS. The poll of 819 adults has a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Jeffrey Sonnenfeld, an Emory University business professor who's studied UPS and is a company consultant, said the negative public reaction is a little bewildering to some UPS executives. Most, including Chairman James Kelly, a one-time driver, worked their way up through a company that claims a 90-year tradition of humility and integrity among its leaders.

Sonnenfeld said most people think of the drivers when they think of UPS. The drivers, on strike with sorters, packagers and varied other employees among the 185,000 Teamsters, have a positive image that goes beyond hard-working reliability.

A sign hanging in the Bluegrass Regional Office of the Kentucky Lottery in Lexington has a message for its UPS driver on strike. It reads: "Phil, come back, we miss you."

But not everyone is on the workers' side. Dave Stone, afternoon drive-time host for WGST-AM radio in Atlanta, said he's gotten as many as 150 calls in a day about the strike in UPS' headquarters city. He said most are siding with management.

"People view people making $20 an hour and complaining about their wages as crybabies," Stone said.

Others watching the labor-management conflict say the Teamsters are favored by public reaction to two key issues — union resistance to the heavy use of part-time workers receiving lower wages and benefits and UPS' push to pull out of the Teamsters' multi-employer pension fund in favor of a UPS-only fund.

The company says that would improve its workers' benefits and stop its subsidy of non-UPS Teamsters; the Teamsters say the company wants to get its hands on pension investment income.

"The pension issue is a complicated one that's hard for a lot of people to understand," said Marick Masters, a business professor at the University of Pittsburgh.

But everyday people are likely to respond to union complaints about heavy use of part-timers, which UPS says is essential for competitive reasons and because of its time-sensitive operations.

Donald Ratajczak, who heads the economic forecasting center at Georgia State University, said "the union has done a wonderful job of saying the problem is the abuse of part-time work, and the American public feels it's unfair."

Postal Service attempts to cope with new business

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's like Christmas, only bigger.

Across town from the UPS strike talks, Postal Service managers gather before a bank of computer terminals, shifting airplanes and trucks nationwide to cope with a tide of new business.

This is the post office command center, a dimly lit war room on the seventh floor of postal headquarters. It usually gears up only during the holiday crunch.

Expecting a tidal wave of new business, the post office put the command center into 24-hour operation the day the Teamsters struck UPS. The expectations were right.

Postal Vice President Nicholas Barranca estimated that the post office is handling between 15 percent and 20 percent of United Parcel Service's 12 million-piece daily business. That means between 1.8 million and 2.4 million extra items per day.

"We had a million pounds of mail in the system the night before last," Barranca said of the network of leased planes handling Express and some Priority mail. That's more than at Christmas time, postal officials report, though the volume of First Class and other mail is not as high as the holiday season.

The center works with 10 regional command canters, linked to a daily meeting here by teleconference.

In Washington, mail managers sit at a bank of 16 computer terminals. Four giant screens line the wall in front of them.

One screen is the Mail Condition Reporting System where they can see the volume of mail on hand at each sorting center, offering an early warning if things start to back up.

Another screen carries the news — useful for reports of any road, railway or airport problems. The managers also have access to the National Weather Service. Weather warnings can be especially important at Christmastime, but are also valuable if summer storms are likely to delay flights.

The Postal Service has a fleet of 29 leased aircraft, mostly Boeing 727s and DC-9s used primarily for Express Mail service. They carry mail from across the country to a hub at Indianapolis where it is sorted in a three-or-four hour frenzy and then sent out again.

If problems develop at the Indianapolis hub, mail can be trucked to Cincinnati or Chicago and flown from there.

That's why the third giant screen in the operations center tracks the movement of the post offices's fleet of planes and the fourth records mail movement on commercial carriers, showing where mail is waiting to go and where it is arriving.

First Class mail moves mostly on commercial planes. Indeed, Barranca says, "we're their biggest cargo customer." At least 15,000 airline flights each day carry the mail, and Barranca's staff tracks them with updates every 15 minutes so receiving offices can be ready for sorting and delivery.

"If Delta has a problem in Atlanta we can shift to other carriers or move mail to another airport," he explained. If storms block the airport in Buffalo, N.Y., a load of mail from Dallas might be switched to a different flight, headed for Boston perhaps, and then brought to Buffalo in trucks.

The UPS strike "has been a good experience for us," Barranca said. "It's an opportunity for customers who didn't do business with us, or only gave us a small part of their business, to experience the service we can offer."

"I think some of it will stay," he said of the new business shifted from former UPS customers. UPS speculates that the company has lost so much business permanently that it will have to cut 15,000 jobs. The walkout by 185,000 Teamsters entered its 12th day Friday.

Maverick court: 'Far from the flagpole' or just far out?

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Big, feisty and liberal in a conservative judicial world, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals is under siege.

The Senate has tried to dismember it, voting last month to carve the nation's largest appellate circuit in two.

The Supreme Court has flayed it, reversing 28 of the 29 cases it accepted from the circuit in 1996-97, compared with a two-thirds reversal rate for all cases.

"We're on the cutting edge of a lot of cases," Chief Judge Procter Hug said. "If a ruling creates a lot of heat, that's why we have life tenure."

The high court overturned 9th Circuit rulings that declared a constitutional right to doctor-assisted suicide and that upheld local records checks under the Brady gun law. And in nine cases — including two rulings favoring abortion rights and another barring sentence increases based on charges that led to acquittals — the Supreme Court reversed without even holding a hearing.

The 9th Circuit is "out of control," say critics like Sen. Conrad Burns, R-Mont.

The court's handling of a death penalty case this month prompted the latest round of attacks. A majority of judges acknowledged that a breakdown of internal review procedures allowed Thomas M. Thompson's case to slip through without a timely vote on whether to grant a rehearing.

Thompson was within 36 hours of execution on Aug. 3 when the court revealed its error in a 7-4 ruling and overturned his death sentence for a 1981 rape-murder on grounds of ineffective counsel.

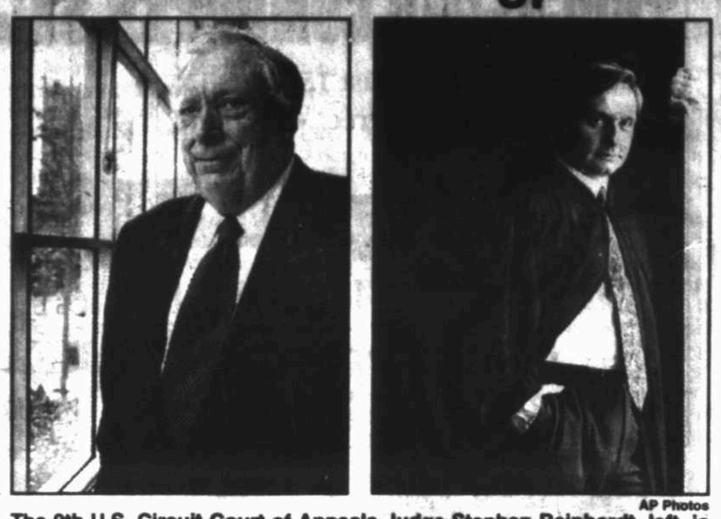
California Gov. Pete Wilson called the judges "judicial scofflaws who apparently do not feel bound by their oath."

"Circuslike behavior," grumbled California Attorney General Dan Lungren.

The case revived memories of the Robert Alton Harris fiasco of 1992, when the Supreme Court lifted four 9th Circuit stays of execution in a single night — one after Harris had been strapped into the gas chamber — and finally refused to consider further stays.

Though the high court has left Thompson alive for now, his case is sure to bolster efforts to break up the circuit. The idea has been around since 1941, and picked up steam in the 1980s with the backing of timber and mining interests opposed to the court's environmental rulings.

Backers of a split say the circuit is too big to work harmoniously and is too California-dominated. Defenders say a region with common economic and environmental problems is best served by one court.



AP Photos

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Stephen Reinhardt, left, is shown in this file photograph taken in 1997. One of the nation's most liberal and outspoken federal judges, Reinhardt unapologetically says that judges should not change their view of the law "in order to please the Supreme Court". The 9th Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Alex Kozinski, right, is shown in his office in this 1995 photo. Kozinski, a Republican who trades rhetorical volleys in court rulings with his close friend and fellow 9th Circuit Judge Reinhardt, says"We're three time zones away from the Supreme Court and thus very far from the flagpole".

The court is the largest of the 12 federal appellate circuits, overseeing federal courts in nine states — California, Arizona, Nevada, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Alaska and Hawaii — as well as Guam and the Northern Mariana islands.

Its 28 authorized judgeships are more than twice that of any other appeals court, but nine positions are vacant. The Republican-controlled Senate has not confirmed anyone to the court since January 1996 and has not scheduled hearings on any of President Clinton's five current nominees.

Chief Judge Hug says the vacancies have postponed hearings in 600 cases this year and are largely responsible for delays cited by pro-breakup senators: about 14 months between appeal and final ruling, compared to a national average of 10 1/2 months.

Last year the House fended off a breakup bill and voted to study the court's size. But last month the Senate rejected a study and instead attached a 9th Circuit split to a budget bill, sending it to an uncertain fate in the House.

The split would transfer the Pacific Northwest states, Arizona and Hawaii to a new 12th Circuit and leave only California, Nevada and the Pacific territories in the 9th.

Although most of its attackers are Republicans, the court has a 10-9 majority of Republican appointees. The three-judge panels that decide most cases can be quite conservative — for example, the panel that issued a strongly worded ruling in April upholding California's Proposition 209, which banned affirmative action based on race or sex preferences.

But overall, the circuit is more liberal than most of the federal judiciary. That is the legacy of 10 appointments made by President Carter when Congress expanded the court in the late 1970s.

Among those appointees is Judge Stephen Reinhardt, a former labor lawyer and Democratic political figure who is one of the nation's most liberal and outspoken federal judges. He has written many of the court's far-reaching decisions, including the assisted-suicide case and a decision striking down Arizona's "official English" law. Reinhardt unapologetically says judges shouldn't change their view of the law "in order to please the Supreme Court."

The circuit's record before the high court isn't a simple question of liberal vs. conservative. Nearly half the overturned rulings last term were written by Republican appointees.

Judge Alex Kozinski, a Republican who trades rhetorical volleys with Reinhardt, his close friend, in court rulings and on debating platforms, offers another explanation: a sort of frontier spirit of independence.

"We're three time zones away from the Supreme Court and thus very far from the flagpole."

Smokey or sham? Your radar detector might not know

LUBBOCK (AP) — Truckers along Interstate 40 this week sniffed out some smokies hiding in construction zones in Texas and New Mexico. Or so they thought.

Their radar detectors, "bird dogs" in trucker lingo, hadn't actually picked up Kojaks with Kodaks. Instead, it was a small drone radar emitter producing a police-like signal that duped them into hitting the brakes.

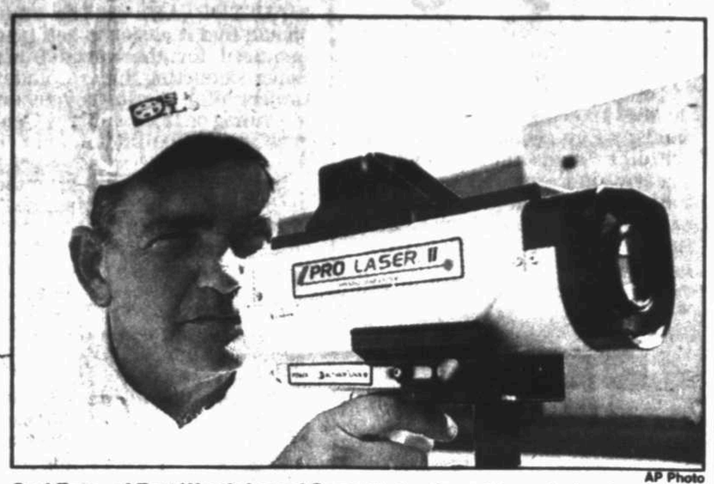
"There are no false alarms," Fort Worth-based researcher Carl Fors said of the K-band signal most Texas authorities use. "If you get a K-band hit, it's showtime. You know it's a policeman."

Or maybe not.

The fist-sized drone, which Fors attached to construction barrels in I-40 tests near Albuquerque and Amarillo this week, discharged radar waves up and down the road. As traffic approached, detectors wailed and drivers slowed.

The drones can be mounted on emergency vehicles, barrels or anything else near or on the roadway. If a driver's radar detector goes off, the theory goes, he'll slow down and look around as if a trooper were prowling.

Fors' monitoring showed that big rigs traveled about 55 mph in the 45 mph construction zones under normal conditions. Once the black box inside an orange barrel began emulating a radar gun, truck speeds dropped by about 4.5 mph.



AP Photo

Carl Fors, of Fort Worth-based Speed Labs, found in a study along Interstate-40 this week that drone radar producers installed on barrels reduced truckers' speeds in construction zones nearly 5 mph.

Automobiles, however, only slowed by about 2.5 mph. Fors, whose company Speed Labs conducts traffic research, said truckers are more likely to use detectors even though they violate federal law.

Fors counted only the lead vehicles in packs traveling down the one-lane construction zones, since the cars immediately behind were captive to the front-runner's pace.

"One theory is that people driving on the highway follow the 18-wheelers," said Fors, who said his study was funded by two automotive related magazines. "They say, 'When he slows down, I slow down.' "

Dayton, Ohio, has installed drones atop the light bars of at least 50 police cruisers, fire trucks and ambulances. The idea is if users of radar detectors slow down during emergencies, perhaps other drivers will, too, detective Chelley Seibert said.

Road construction zones might offer a practical use for the technology, said Charles Graham, a chief with the Texas Department of Public Safety.

DPS figures show 124 people died and 15,261 suffered some degree of injury in construction- or maintenance-related accidents last year. A total of 12,809 wrecks in such zones were reported.

A law doubling the fines for speeding in construction zones takes effect Sept. 1.

Chicago-based Cobra Electronics markets the only federally approved radar-producing drone, Fors said. The company is working with Laidlaw Transit Inc. to develop drones designed to warn drivers that its school buses are loading or unloading.

"What's wonderful is that with this transmitter, 21 million receivers (radar detectors) are already in place which will pick up the warnings," Cobra spokeswoman Jackie Zanfardino said. "They typically slow down and become more aware of their surroundings."

If drones slow at least a few motorists, Graham said, they'd be worthwhile. But beeping boxes still aren't going to solve the problem of speed-related collisions.

"This device may help, certainly," Graham said. "But I don't think it will put us out of business."

Committee appointed to study gang violence

AUSTIN (AP) — Calling violent teen gangs a growing menace across Texas, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock on Friday appointed a special state Senate committee to study the problem.

Bullock also assigned committees to look at state laws regarding sex offenders, state prisons and Texas courts.

But his strongest words were reserved for the gang study.

"Teen-age gangs are no longer isolated to the poorest neighborhoods in the inner cities," Bullock said. "They have become a problem all across Texas, and that requires a statewide study and plan of action."

The committee, which will make recommendations to the 1999 Legislature, will look at coordination of juvenile justice efforts by local and state law enforcement and school officials.

The panel also will examine whether juvenile courts need help to speed up and strengthen the adjudication process, evaluate existing programs for runways and at-risk youth, and try to determine whether community financial grants are working to combat gang violence.

Heading the committee will be Sen. Royce West, D-Dallas, joined by Sens. Chris Harris, R-Arlington; Robert Duncan, R-Lubbock, Mike Moncrief, D-Fort Worth; and Jon Lindsay, R-Houston.

The gang study was one of four criminal justice-related committees appointed by Bullock on Friday.

A second panel, chaired by Sen. Florence Shapiro, R-Plano, will examine state laws on sex offenders, criminals who Bullock said present special problems for law enforcement authorities.

"Sex offenders have unique characteristics that require specialized programs for incarceration, treatment and parole supervision," he said.

"The state must be innovative in dealing with sex offenders and realize that prison time alone in many cases is not going to stop them from repeating this crime again."

Bullock directed the committee to study possible changes in laws regarding court commitment to treatment facilities for adults and juveniles, and to review laws adopted by other states.

Also assigned duties for the legislative interim were committees that will:

- Review the way judges are selected for state district courts, county courts-at-law and probate courts; the drawing of lines for judicial districts; costs for filing civil lawsuits; collection of criminal fines; and ways to improve jury service.
- Look at the state's prison system, which is growing rapidly again, to evaluate safety conditions for inmates and employees, medical and mental health treatment, projected capacity and parole programs such as intensive supervision.

Father convicted of manslaughter in beating death of son

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas man was convicted Friday of manslaughter in the beating death of his 3-year-old son.

James Thornton II was accused of beating his son, James III, after the tot distracted him while he was watching a Dallas Cowboys playoff game on television.

Thornton had been charged with capital murder, but the jury was allowed to reach a verdict on the lesser charge.

The punishment phase begins Monday. Thornton could be sentenced to two to 20 years in prison.

The child's mother, Tonia McCarver, told police she found her son lying unresponsive in a bedroom Dec. 15 when she went to pick him up from a four-day visit with his father. She immediately rushed him to the hospital.

The boy died Dec. 16 during a second surgery as doctors tried to repair a liver damaged by more than one blow to the stomach, police said.

Friends said the boy was an active child who liked to play and ride his bicycle.

Ms. McCarver had said she had been suspicious of her former boyfriend since the child suffered a broken arm in March 1994.

According to court documents, the child and his older sister were placed in temporary foster care while state child-abuse workers investigated the incident.

Two to stand trial in restaurant slayings

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Two men initially arrested on weapons charges will stand trial for the shootings of six people at a restaurant, a massacre that may be related to a drug turf war.

Jorge Perez and Jesus Braulio Guardado were named in a four-count indictment issued Thursday charging them with murder, conspiracy, injuring two bystanders and possessing weapons reserved for the military.

Perez and Guardado, who earlier told authorities his name was Jesus Braulio Hernandez, have been in custody since Aug. 6 after being arrested by police responding to an anonymous phone call about armed men at Perez's home.

Two others arrested with them, Carmelo Mejia and Guardado's wife, Maria Julia Torres Morales, were released. Judge Netzahualcoyotl Zuniga said there isn't any evidence to link them to the killings at the Max Fim restaurant.

Authorities say two armed men entered Max Fim on Aug. 3 and sprayed several people with automatic weapons fire, concentrating on the table of Alfonso Corral Olaguez, a rancher from the state of Durango.

Five people were killed inside. The sixth victim was a prison official who was shot outside the restaurant as he rushed to investigate the gunshots, authorities say.

State police have not commented publicly on a motive, but the El Paso Herald-Post said Friday that some officials have commented privately that the killings may be linked to the July 4 death of Amado Carrillo Fuentes, the head of the Juarez drug cartel.

At least 11 people have been killed in Ciudad Juarez in what is believed to be drug-related violence since Carrillo's death following plastic surgery.

Both Perez and Guardado have denied knowing anything about the Max Fim shootings.

Police said they found 16 firearms in Perez's house the day the pair were arrested. Police experts said they have determined that at least one, a .45-caliber Colt handgun, was used in killings.

Perez has admitted owning the weapons.

The trial could take up to a year. There are no jury trials in Mexico.

Super Collider project land for sale

AUSTIN (AP) — The state should find it easier to sell land acquired for the now-defunct Superconducting Super Collider project after an attorney general's ruling on tax liability, a General Land Office official said Friday.

When land was acquired for the proposed scientific project near Waxahachie, much of it was classified as agricultural for property tax purposes.

The agricultural-use designation substantially reduces property taxes. But when the use of the land is changed, a special liability is assessed.

The liability, called a rollback tax, is equal to the difference between the taxes paid in the preceding several years and the amount that would have been due if the land had been appraised at market value.

Texas Land Commissionen Garry Mauro asked Attorney General Dan Morales whether the state's acquisition of agricultural land constituted a change that would trigger the rollback process.

A previous ruling by the state property tax board had said the rollback would be triggered, but the state couldn't be forced to pay the tax liability. A lien would continue against the land, however, and could be enforced against a later buyer.

Morales said in his legal opinion that state-owned land used for public purposes is not subject to the rollback tax.

EPA says Dallas-Fort Worth smog problem now 'serious'

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas-Fort Worth area's problems with dirty air may be getting worse.

The Environmental Protection Agency said Thursday it wants to change its designation of the area from a "moderate" air pollution violator to a "serious" one.

The change would increase controls on pollution sources ranging from cars to factories, The Dallas Morning News reported Friday.

Final details won't be known for months.

"The ultimate goal is for Dallas-Fort Worth to achieve attainment," said EPA spokesman David Bary of the Dallas regional office. "Today's announcement is the first step."

If the change comes for Dallas, Tarrant, Denton and Collin counties, it would mean that state and local efforts to reduce air pollution violations have failed. A decision will be made in October after the EPA holds public hearings.

Ask the doctor

By Dr. Emilio Bombay
N.Y. Times News Service

DEAR DR. BOMBAY: We want to buy a scanner so we can put pictures on our Web pages. The salesman said we should be looking at a 30-bit scanner with 2,400 dots-per-inch resolution if we want the pages to look decent. Actually, I think half the stuff that guy told us sounded like bull.

—High resolution

DEAR HIGH: It's closer to around 95 percent. Thirty-bit? The only bit this guy is interested in is the one where he gets you to bend over and kiss your wallet goodbye.

Anybody thinking about buying a scanner needs to consider where the scanned images are going to wind up. Are they going in the center spread of National Geographic to dazzle and amaze an international audience, or will they wind up on your cheesy little Web page so Grandma can see how cute Baby Chester looks when he makes poopy-drawers?

Basically, the dpi number is how many chunks the scanner divides the picture into per inch. The fewer chunks per inch, the blockier the picture comes out, like when they hide your Uncle Billy Ray's face on "Cops."

Now, 2,400 dpi would give you some really smooth scans, but not many people will be able to appreciate them. No matter how fine the original, you have to consider where it'll be reproduced. For instance, newspapers and magazines reproduce in the 75-200 dpi range. Web page stuff is best at 75 and below. You want to scan a bit higher than the intended reproduction resolution, but 2,400 is definitely overkill.

As a rule of thumb, figure 300 or 600 dpi for simple drawings to capture the details. For photos, with all their natural irregularities, you can dial that down as low as about 150 dpi.

The bit thingie is a little weirder. It's a natural tendency to want the biggest bundle of bits on the block, but there really is a point of diminishing returns.

The number of bits associated with each little chunk of picture determines how many colors can be displayed. The more colors in the palette, the truer the reproduction is. A one-bit chunk (represented by either 0 or 1) will display in either black or white. At eight bits per chunk (from 0000000 to 11111111 binary — don't try to figure it out, just trust me) we're up to 256 shades of gray or colors; at 16 it's more than 65,000, and at 24 it zips up past 16 million. We'll just have to wonder about 30 bits because my calculator doesn't go that high, and I get a really bad, stabbing pain in my head when I try to do the math.

OK, so if most people don't even realize they can set their systems up to display more than 16 or 256 colors, how valuable is that 30-bit scanner now? Also, the more colors and resolution a scan has, the bigger the file will be. How many people are going to wait around for your 11.2-megabyte closeup of Chester's first tooth to download? I know I'd be hitting that Stop icon after about six seconds.

For what you're doing, you can get by with a 300-buck 300-dpi, 24-bit cheapie. Buy a name brand, because they tend to be bundled with software that actually works, and you'll probably be able to find the company if the thing breaks. As a bonus, the big companies can afford to hire out-of-work journalism school graduates to make the manuals understandable, and I may need a job some day.

Older generation becomes computer crazy

Retirement planning, health, genealogy top attractions

By Maureen Downey
N.Y.T. News Service

ATLANTA — Her computer-savvy son may have jump-started her onto the information highway, but Roberta Gates isn't eating anyone's digital dust.

"My son said that we couldn't be sitting around without a computer anymore and he went out, got it and installed it," says the 62-year-old retired English professor from this Atlanta suburb. "But I found the Pathfinder address before he did."

Gates reflects the growing number of Americans clicking their way through retirement. Their enthusiasm for cyberspace explains the rise in Internet resources on retirement planning, health, finances, travel and genealogy offered by online services and commercial sites, such as SeniorCom and Third Age.

While most users are still younger than 40, the Net is graying with the rest of the nation. Today there are 70 million Americans older than 50; the number will reach 115 million over the next 25 years.

A survey by Packard Bell found that this mature market, with more disposable income and spare time than other age groups, also

Travelers warming to online ticketing

By Dawn Gilbertson and Glen Creno
N.Y. Times News Service

It's 6 in the morning and the hot story in the paper is the new airline fare war. You've been waiting for this, a chance to bag a bargain ticket for the kids' dream trip to Disney World.

You have to work fast because seats are limited and everyone else who waited for a sale is jumping on it. The airlines' toll-free phone lines are hopelessly jammed and the travel agent isn't in the office yet.

Don't panic. There's still a way to book your rendezvous with Goofy. Fire up your personal computer and go cyber shopping for plane tickets.

Most major airlines let customers buy tickets online. Their sites on the Internet's World Wide Web flash flight schedules and fares and allow travelers to book tickets all day and all night.

The service is still in its infancy — fewer than 1 percent of ticket sales will go that route this year — and it's probably not for those who don't leave home without a travel agent's help.

But it's a hit with legions of do-it-yourself travelers, and projections call for many more to sign on in the next five years.

Tempe-based America West Airlines has seen the number of visits to its Web site more than double since fare shopping and ticketing were added to the menu in late May.

"It's an alternative for the consumer," spokeswoman Dianne Segura said. "We're seeing everyone use it, from college students to your home-based business owner."

Southwest Airlines, which has offered online ticketing for more than a year, says its Web site now gets as busy as its phone lines when fare sales are about to end.

"It's convenience, it's speed, it's control," said Kevin Krone, senior manager of marketing automation for the Dallas-based airline.

"You can visually see it all and digest it much quicker than" you can over the phone with a travel agent or airline sales person.

For airlines, it's about staying on top of the technology curve and, most importantly, saving money in a cutthroat business where fare sales and fuel-price swings keep executives up nights worrying about profits.

Tickets booked online are money savers for airlines. They reduce expenses, such as overhead, commissions and computer reservation system fees, at toll-free reservations centers and travel agencies. Fewer tickets are need-

Peeling Apple

A blow-by-blow account of the big computer brouhaha

Dr. Emilio Bombay
N.Y. Times News Service

■ Analysis

It's official: In the Great Microsoft-Macintosh War, Steven Jobs has said "uncle." Bill Gates wins again. Here's a blow-by-blow account of the big computer brouhaha.

———

It was a really wimpy way to end a war, and believe me, there's only one guy truly happy about it. You can guess who.

In case you were heavily sedated last week — or if you just turn off your brain any time news arrives from the geek world — you probably missed an amusing little speech by Apple Computer co-founder Steve Jobs, a man who appears to have been reading up on Faust. Steve stood up in front of hundreds of Macintosh loyalists at the MacWorld love-fest Wednesday in Boston and matter-of-factly announced that oh, by the way, Apple has joined forces with the evil Microsoft empire of Bill Gates, and everybody will be part of one big, unhappy family.

He might just as well have announced he was marrying JoJo, the two-headed dog-girl from the circus. In fact, it probably would have been better received, because at least JoJo could have seen a plastic surgeon — or maybe a vet — about that ugly snout and almost surely could have learned to eat with utensils. Gates, on the other hand, won't disappear so easily.

Microsoft invested $150 million in Apple non-voting stock, which is about how much Gates loses behind the sofa cushions each night. Even though this deal breathes new life into Apple, Big Bill is really the big winner. But what's truly amazing, at least to zealots on both sides of the fence, is that it happened at all.

APPLE: Directors desperate enough to seek mend in rift with PC owners

You have to understand the depth of enmity between Mac and PC owners to realize how truly desperate the directors of Apple must have been to save their sinking ship.

The seeds of battle were sewn back in the mid-'70s when Jobs and fellow nerd Steve Wozniak began building home computers in a garage. The first Apples probably would have been fondly remembered as toys for hobbyists with too much disposable income if it hadn't been for the introduction of VisiCalc, the first spreadsheet program. Suddenly, the home computer became something useful instead of an electric money-waster. It even started showing up in offices that had depended solely on huge mainframe computers until then.

Huge mainframes like the ones sold by International Business Machines, that is. After a lot of harrumphing around the board room about missing the boat, IBM committed to churning out its own desktop computer within a year. The company would have to build most of it out of parts supplied by third parties, but that wasn't the big problem. What IBM needed was an operating system, the software that actually makes all the parts work in a relatively cohesive way.

IBM brass came to Seattle to a new little company called Microsoft, run by a couple of scruffy, geeky Harvard dropouts whose big contribution to the industry to date had been writing computer languages for those hobbyist machines. The head geek, Bill Gates, told the suits from IBM thanks, but no thanks, they didn't really have an operating system to sell. Gates actually sent them to another company that did.

In one of the truly dumbest moments in recorded history, the guy to whom Gates sent them blew off the meeting. IBM went right back to Gates, who said he'd see what he could rustle up, which happened to be a knockoff of the CP/M system called QDOS (quick-and-dirty operating system). Microsoft bought the rights, renamed it and licensed it to IBM.

Now that a desktop computer had "IBM" stamped on it, it was safe for corporate America to buy. The beady-eyed little guys in accounting couldn't really complain about investing in stuff built by hippies anymore. After all, IBMers wore such nice suits and always had their shoes polished.

But while the folks at IBM were busy attending intensive shoe-polishing seminars, they neglected one little thing: Bill Gates. Because the IBM was built of readily available components, there was nothing stopping other manufacturers from slapping together IBM-compatible computers. All they really needed was an operating system, which, as it turned out, Gates was more than happy to license to them for a reasonable fee. Oh, and did he mention that all his company's other programs would run on these clones, too? The market was soon flooded by cheap PCs.

Apple, on the other hand, was very protective of both its operating system and its hardware. The guys at Apple weren't about to allow any sneaky clone-makers to make off with their profits, and that decision probably doomed the company to what would become a niche market. If there had been Apple clones in the early years and Apple had licensed its operating system instead of jealously guarding it, who can say what would have happened? As it was, however, PCs were already beginning to dominate the "serious" slice of the pie, the business world.

The introduction of the Macintosh in the '80s permanently opened the schism. Here was a machine intended to be so user-friendly and simple to use that your cocker spaniel could sit down, boot up and turn out a manuscript. (Of course, the plot, something to do with chasing a car, might be pretty thin, but that's beside the point.) The Macintosh was easy and uncomplicated and didn't require an army of four-eyed doofuses to get it running the way it was intended. The Mac even flashed a cute little smiley face while it was booting up. It was just so precious!

The PC, on the other hand, was — and is — as cantankerous as Don Rickles without his Metamucil. There are about a hundred different ways to set things up incorrectly, any one of which will turn your $2,000 investment into a sulking hunk of nonresponsive plastic and silicon. To make things seem a little easier, Microsoft introduced several versions of Windows, a point-and-click interface that bore a striking resemblance to the look and feel of the Mac operating system. Surely that was entirely coincidental, but it was so coincidental that Apple sued Microsoft.

In the meantime, software publishers were drifting to one camp or the other. Because the Mac was designed with a graphical interface, it was a natural for drawing programs and the first attempts at desktop publishing. Word processing, spreadsheets and other business-type stuff would usually appear on the PC platform first.

And the division between users widened as well. It was still pretty much the counterculture vs. the suits. Mac users feel like they belong to an elite club that has discovered that — surprise! — computing doesn't have to be hard. PC users feel like Mac users are too lazy to learn to run a computer.

Now, nobody is going to win a shouting match like that, but the rivalry is very real, so it was no surprise to hear booing at the MacWorld announcement. Let me just assure you, it's not only the Mac-heads who are upset. PC users would just as soon see Apple's Cupertino headquarters bulldozed to make room for a new Taco Bell.

And that could very well have happened if Big Bill hadn't written that check. Apple's market share was down to less than 3 percent. It hasn't had a really innovative product in years, unless you count the Newton, a hand-held super-duper personal organizer that was innovatively bad. The next generation of the Apple operating system is years off, fewer software companies are developing for Macs, and nobody seems to want to be chairman of the board ("I don't want it. You do it." "I'm not gonna do it. You do it." "Let's get Mikey to do it."), a job that has all the attraction of being captain of the Titanic. Apple was slowly trudging to the scrapheap.

Although it would be wrong to suggest that Gates made the investment for anything but purely altruistic reasons, he does manage to get a thing or two out of the deal. For one, if Apple — Microsoft's only major operating-system competitor — had gone under, it probably would have given all those antitrust lawyers in the Justice Department the idea that they should try to break Microsoft's stranglehold on the world's personal computers — a battle that would rage for years and cost millions of dollars and thousands of lives. By propping the enemy up, Microsoft can avoid all that until the lawyers realize that it's even a bigger monopoly if one company runs — or at least strongly influences — both camps.

As part of the deal, Apple settled its look-and-feel infringement suit against Microsoft, the one that claimed Windows is just a rip-off of the Mac. That must have been a bitter pill, but I guess you don't really have a choice when there's a cocked pistol pointed at your head. Besides, if you want to get technical about it, Apple "borrowed" the idea for a graphical interface from Xerox. At any rate, that's one less major migraine for Microsoft to deal with.

Apple also has to start bundling Microsoft's Internet Explorer Web browser with its operating system, which drives another stake into the heart of browser rival Netscape. I wonder if Gates will bail them out when they start to go under, too.

And to add insult to injury, Microsoft will start developing a version of its bloated Office suite of business applications for the Mac. So much for all your free disk space. These programs are enormous and do much more stuff than most people could ever hope to take advantage of. Hint to Mac users: You are not required to buy Office, and failure to do so is not currently a federal offense.

So the war ends, not with the bang of Apple imploding but with the whimper of Steve Jobs running up the white flag, not admitting defeat so much as the inevitable. It is, after all, just business, not a holy crusade.

On the bright side for you Mac users, it means you won't be orphaned: Apple will continue and the Mac will not die out like the dodo. Just try not to wince too much when the Microsoft logo pops up on your screen.

For PC users, there'll be the satisfaction of knowing they were right — or at least not totally wrong — all along, even though the Mac really is easier to use. You're still going to have to put up with all those artsy types with their one-button mice, but now at least you can hold your head up and proudly say: "Nyah nyah nyah!!! Neener neener neener!!!"

Now, what's really scary is the massive concentration of power. If you read past the headlines, you will have seen that in addition to the unprecedented alliance between rivals, Larry Ellison, longtime Microsoft-baiter and head of the second-largest software company in the known universe, has joined the Apple board. If all you conspiracy nuts out there weren't so busy concentrating on U.N. shock troops, black helicopters and the Trilateral Commission, we'd have some excellent world-domination theories going by now. Only they'd be real.

TICKETING: Airlines reap benefits of online commerce

ed, too, as many travelers choose the electronic, or paperless, ticket option.

"The opportunity to cut out costs is really there," said Bill Burnham, senior research analyst at Piper Jaffray Inc. in Minneapolis, who recently released "The Electronic Commerce Report."

"If you wanted to talk about an opportunity that was in the strike zone of electronic commerce, airline ticketing is it."

America West, which sells about $1.7 billion in tickets every year, estimates it has saved more than $12 million since launching its Effortless Ticketing Online.

"There's very definitely a financial benefit there," said Ron Cole, vice president of sales for America West.

Online ticketing, which requires customers to buy at the time of booking, also cuts down on the guessing game airlines play on a daily basis.

People who use the toll-free reservations line or a travel agent often put seats on hold while they shop around or firm up travel plans. That makes it hard for airlines, which change fares by the minute based on booking trends, to figure out how a flight is shaping up.

"It's (online ticketing) an instant sale, an instant confirmation and instant payment for the ticket," Cole said. "You're not in a position where your inventory has been taken but you really don't have a buying decision."

'(Online ticketing is) an instant sale, an instant confirmation and instant payment for the ticket. You're not in a position where your inventory has been taken but you really don't have a buying decision.'

— Ron Cole, Vice President of Sales, America West.

At this point, there are many more window shoppers than buyers oairline Internet sites, which also offer everything from in-flight movie schedules to frequent-flier balances.

That's why there's a variety of promotions to entice travelers to book online. Northwest and Delta are offering a $99 companion fare. Continental and American have sweepstakes contests offering free travel. And most offer bonus frequent-flier miles.

Industry officials tick off several reasons for the gap between online buyers and browsers: newness; lingering concerns about credit-card security; and uncertainty about whether they've found the lowest fare.

"Initially people come in, check the fares and (then) pick up the phone," Krone of Southwest said. They say, "It says $19. Is that really the lowest fare?"

Those calls have slowed down as travelers have become more familiar with the online service, and Southwest is starting to see a better ratio between shopping and booking, he said.

Tony Riggs, a salesman with Computize in Phoenix, is still wary about online ticketing.

The self-described computer geek scans the airline sites all the time for fare information. But he's never bought a ticket online. He said he always calls the airline to make sure he found the best deal.

Online ticket shopping can also be time consuming and, as with any trip on the Internet, frustrating during peak times.

Most airlines offer booking only on their own flights. So unless you fly only a particular airline or know for certain it has the best deal, you have to surf the different airlines' sites. Many make users sign in, and some require a frequent-flier number.

A call to a travel agent will produce the lowest fare and book a flight in a single swoop. The agent can also handle other travel arrangements, such as hotels and car rental.

Humans also can do something computers can't — suggest alternatives. Several agents turned up a fare deal last week that would have saved shoppers about $100 over the Internet fare on a Phoenix to New York trip. (In general fares found on the Internet matched those offered by the airlines reservations center and travel agents).

"There are the little things that agents offer through that personal interaction that you don't get through on-line reservations," said James Ashurst, spokesman for the American Society of Travel Agents.

He said some travel agents initially were put off when airlines began debuting Web sites. Now, he said, travel agencies are warming up to the technology and rolling out their own Web pages, some of which offer ticketing. The net also features several on-line travel agencies.

"The Internet and online services are not things to be feared," Ashurst said.

Cole of America West says there are plenty of travelers for all the ticketing options.

But he still sees a huge future for online purchases. He compares the limited use today to the acceptance of automated teller machines in the 1980s.

"Some people were using them right away, a lot of people weren't," he said. "If you look at the product today you'd be hard pressed to find anyone who wasn't using an ATM on a regular basis."

Atlanta higher than average

SeniorNet, a San Francisco-based nonprofit organization, estimates that 30 percent of Americans age 55 to 75 own computers. In Atlanta, the percentages are higher. An Atlanta Journal-Constitution poll in May found that 39 percent of people 55 and older live in households with personal computers.

The assumption that the 55-plus crowd dreads new technology is disputed by the hordes of them showing up at computer and Internet classes. Perimeter Adult Learning and Services added a third Internet course this summer when its two scheduled classes at DeKalb Tech filled.

What often brings retirees to computer class is badgering from technophile offspring to "get on the Internet so we can exchange e-mail."

"Seniors are being forced into it by their kids. ... They use e-mail and they want to communicate with their parents," says coordinator Stanley Harshfield.

Modems and mouse pads hold no mysteries for a large segment of retirees coming out of computerized offices. As a physicist, Ken Roach, 68, of Clayton first sat down at a computer in 1956.

But the Internet has opened new doors and a few old ones for him. He experienced the virtual thrill of climbing Mount Everest through a recent expedition documented online. Through an Internet search, he finally tracked one of the 2nd Infantry Division soldiers who spent the winter of 1951-52 with him in Korea.

Catching on quickly

Even novices contend that computer technology is easier than they expected. After her son gave her a computer, Betty Angle of suburban Tucker doused her apprehensions and treaded the virtual waters. She's cruising now.

"Even our 5-year-old grandson knows more about computers than we do," says Angle, 70. "But it's not that hard to learn a few things. I booked a trainer for two hours at $35 an hour. Then, I decided I'm not so dumb. I invested in a book on how to get on the Internet and it's taught me a lot."

Self-educated on computers, Burt Vardeman, 72, of Atlanta credits the Internet with enhancing his recent retirement.

"I was very afraid I would become bored and depressed," he says. "Getting into the knowledge about the computer, plus the excitement about the Internet, has really given me a completely new outlook on life. I look forward to getting on every day and I learn something new each time."

Busy playing with his new PC, 82-year-old Martin Sills of Atlanta says the curiosity doesn't recede with the hairline. "There is so much variety on the Internet," he says. "Trouble is, I'm hopping around from one thing to another, like a bumblebee buzzing from flower to flower. I don't know when to stop."

The Internet can enrich the lives of older people, says sociologist Anne M. Eaton, who has a professional background in gerontology.

"Transportation is the No. 1 problem with older people, and the Internet can give them a connection to the outside world they wouldn't otherwise have," says Eaton, 89. "They can use it to keep in contact with people, to e-mail for information, to do shopping. Its uses are unlimited."

E-mail 'the greatest'

Jack Moye, 68, of Hayesville, N.C., is proof of the Internet's multiple roles. Moye maintains his own home page as well as the Web site for his Masonic lodge, sends e-mail, buys books from a Seattle store, plays duplicate bridge with partners in Japan, participates in beta testing for software developers and dispatches letters to the editor of his newspaper (now, if only he can figure out how to get them all published).

A longtime fan of all sorts of gadgets, Bob Yarborough, 62, of Atlanta relishes the instant communication of the Information Age. "I think e-mail is the greatest invention since sliced bread," says Yarborough. But he still hasn't lured his wife online.

"She stands behind me and says, 'Why I would want to learn about computers when I have you to punch the buttons?'"

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Guest to speak

The Rev. Bob Harrington has worked from Bourbon Street to Wall Street and now comes to Midland for a special guest presentation at 7 p.m. Tuesday at Our Savior's Lutheran Church, 3309 Neely Ave.

He also will speak at 7 p.m. Wednesday at Wilshire Park Baptist Church, 801 S. Bentwood.

Proclaimed by the mayor of New Orleans the "Chaplain of Bourbon Street" and commissioned by the governor of Louisiana as "Ambassador of Good-Will to America," Harrington has shared his message with more than 200 of the Fortune 500 and has delivered more than 200 presentation annually.

A Baptist preacher from New Orleans, Harrington appeared on such national television programs as Oprah, Good Morning America and Hour Magazine. He served as a guest with Jerry Falwell, Rex Humbard, Oral Roberts and James Robison.

He spoke at a National Atheist Convention. American atheist leader Madalyn Murray O'Hair said of him, "Bob Harrington is the only 'so-called' Christian minister I have invited to speak. . . . He did and he's good."

Dr. Norman Vincent Peale described Harrington's ministry saying, "Bob has the street smarts and he's not sheltered from reality. He has dealt with the righteous and the raunchy, the Mafia and the madams, the rich and the poor. The man . . . is a man on fire for God and country."

He is credited with impacting the lives of such personalities as actor Sammy Davis Jr., Hustler publisher Larry Flynt and University of Alabama coach Paul "Bear" Bryant. Later this year, he is scheduled to debate radio personality Howard Stern.

"We are very excited to host Rev. Harrington," said Todd Freese, education ministries director at Our Savior's. "We hope others will come to share this unique experience with us."

The Rev. Harrington was invited to speak at Our Savior's Lutheran Church as part of the church's Rally Days celebration. The annual activities celebrate a new church year with this year's theme being "Carry the Light." Rally Days begin for the congregation Sunday with the installation of Sunday School program teachers, a luncheon, games and other special afternoon activities.

For more information on Harrington's appearance call Our Savior's, 694-4517.

Harrington's talk is free and open to the public.

Building dedicated

The Samaritan Counseling Center of West Texas, Inc., at Midland International Airport is dedicating a new building Sunday and hosting an open house.

The public is invited to attend. The open house is from 1:30 to 3 p.m. with the dedication set for 2 p.m. The new building is adjacent to the existing one, 10008 W. County Road 116, west of the KMID, Channel 2 studio.

Annually, around 500 new people turn to the center for help.

"This year, the Center will provide around 6,000 hours of service, making it the largest provider of outpatient, value-based counseling in the Permian Basin," said the Center's 1996 Annual Report.

A non-profit agency, the Center has an annual budget of approximately $425,000, two-thirds of which is generated by client fees, the report said. The remaining third is donated by individuals, foundations, corporations and area churches.

Governed by a board of directors representing a broad cross section of the communities served, the Center does not receive funds from United Way, nor does it receive any state or federal monies.

The board has equal representation from Midland, Odessa and the outlying communities of Big Spring and Andrews. Representatives from the medical, religious, business and education communities serve on the board.

The board is committed to being inclusive in gender and religious orientation. Currently on the staff and board are members of the following denominations: Baptist, Church of Christ, Disciples of Christ (Christian), Episcopal, Lutheran, Methodist, Presbyterian and Roman Catholic.

This fall, the Center will offer a seminar on Adult ADD on Sept. 13, a free depression screening at satellite locations Oct. 9, and its third annual Family of the Year banquet Oct. 23 at 7:30 p.m. at Green Tree Country Club. The banquet will feature gardening expert Neil Sperry speaking on "Gardening for the Heart."

The Center operates five satellite offices. For more information call 563-4144.

Spiritual Explosion

The 23rd annual Spiritual Explosion hosted by Faith Temple Church of God in Christ, 1605 N. Terrell at Jax, closes Sunday.

Highlighting the Spiritual Explosion is the Founder's Banquet set for 4:30 p.m. today at the Plaza Club, ClayDesta Plaza.

At 7:30 p.m. today the Rev.

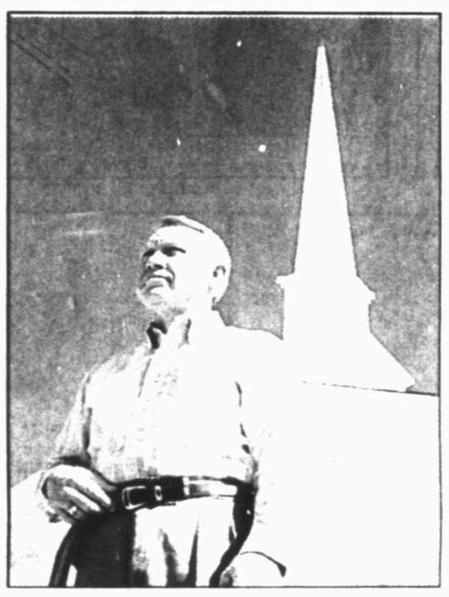
Westside Church of Christ: A commitment to neighborhood, community and family

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer



"By reputation," Montgomery said, "Westside has been known as a 'neighborhood friendly' church and that spirit continues to grow every year.

Neighborhood has always been important to Westside Church of Christ, 4410 W. Illinois, and its evangelist, Gary Montgomery. In fact, the church's outreach program places heavy emphasis on those in the church's community.

"By reputation," Montgomery said, "Westside has been known as a 'neighborhood friendly' church and that spirit continues to grow every year. Neighborhood evangelism is regularly scheduled in every part of the city."

With the help of Don Mitchell, Westside's education and outreach minister, "members talk personally with people and encourage their study of the Bible."

Additionally, Mitchell leads Westside in "devoted Bible-centered classes for every age with the training and development of teachers," Montgomery said.

Montgomery pens a popular weekly column in the Reporter-Telegram, called "Focus For Living," which has gained a large readership since it first began in 1994.

Men's prayer breakfasts are conducted twice monthly and, according to Montgomery, Westside features "aggressive Bible study programs for teens and adults that feature a Sunday curriculum centered on the Bible text with questions to be answered and prepared by each student. The lessons are followed by sermons from the pulpit developing further the study of the week's text. Our intense focus brings deeper understanding and commitment to the Bible."

Youth at Westside recently completed their annual Summer Mission Campaign in the Penasco Valley of northern New Mexico. The church has been affiliated with Penasco since 1994.

The church's first mission efforts began in 1956, and in 41 years, Westside has helped support efforts in Ghana, Rhodesia, South Africa and Thailand. Additional efforts have included the support of preaching school and mission works in Minnesota, Montana and Pennsylvania. Since 1988, Westside has been involved in the Baxter Institute in Honduras.

It was in 1976 that the church's elders identified the need for larger facilities. Land for the building was obtained at 4410 W. Illinois, where the church currently resides.

"Many wonderful programs of work and service have been fulfilled by this loving family of believers these past years," reads a history of Westside. "Now, the future looks so bright. A major asset is the spiritual blessing of family love and unity that reaches every member. These past few years have have brought a resurgence of spiritual and numerical growth due to a growing evangelistic concern. Youth and family programs have brought more and more young families to Westside and they are a continuing blessing. The central focus remains on the Word of God as the power to change lives and save us. Our commitment remains to New testament Christianity and the desire to 'speak where the Bible speaks and be silent where it is silent.' "

SATURDAY AUG. 16, 1997

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Aug. 16, 1997:
Focus on work, health and diet this year. Relationships, whether you want them to or not, will play a dominant role. There is an element of the unpredictable at home, especially regarding family and close personal ties. The unexpected occurs with partners. If you are single, your love life becomes more exciting. You sort through a number of suitors, and find each special in his own way. If attached, your union becomes more volatile as you work through some important personal issues. AQUARIUS is provocative.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Take a stand with a pushy person. Imagination is high, as is your temper. Your words could be hot and salty. Tame yourself! A fresh perspective works wonders and makes you laugh. A friend's invitation makes you forget it all. Tonight: Whoop it up.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Take off in the morning. Don't push too hard to have things go your way. Let your imagination soar. High pressure makes you want to tell another off; select your words with care. A partner supports your decisions. Change your plans if you feel the need to. Tonight: You feel almost superhuman!
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Close ties take up time. Follow through, and smile. Many changes are unexpected and quite delightful. Pack up the car, and prepare to do something unique. You'll enjoy what is going on. An unusual personality walks into your life. Tonight: Have an exotic adventure.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Popularity is high, and you witness testimony to that effect. You work well with what is going on. Romance elicits some kind of jealousy from a child, pet or family member. Be indulgent; let everyone know just how important he is. Tonight: Go for closeness.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ Get errands done. Forge ahead on a project in the morning; by afternoon, you will be distracted and want to play. Creativity and sensuality combine naturally for you. The unexpected delights you, especially on the social scene. Tonight: Tie up loose ends.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Morning is creative and exciting. Your ability to get the point across is high. Use your imagination. Let it all hang out, and doors will open. The unexpected permeates plans. You are determined to do things your way; expect to make an adjustment. Tonight: Relax.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Think before you leap on a chancy money matter. Taking financial and emotional risks could backfire. Be realistic about a child or loved one. When you open up talks, everything can work out. Be willing to admit that you make mistakes. Tonight: Be your live-wire self.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Use the early hours for communication. You don't have the same attitude later in the afternoon. Irritation could explode within you, causing a surprising result. The unexpected marks your behavior and choices. You might have had enough. Tonight: Play it low-key.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Pay bills, and get a head start on errands. By afternoon, you will find yourself diverted. You come from a creative point of view. Your more playful side emerges when dealing with a neighbor or relative. Laughter makes a big difference in the outcome of problems. Tonight: Hang out with good friends.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ The morning hours are favorable for tending to details and work. You are full of happiness, good times and cheer. However, a friend might say something that forces you to rethink plans, especially concerning finances. There are many perspectives. Tonight: It could be costly.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Lie low in the early day if you want to. Later, you discover a marked change in perspective. You are a live wire, exposed to feelings and other's opinions. A partner or someone in power could be angry. Listen, then respond accordingly. Tonight: Stay in the limelight.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Listen to a dynamic offer that comes your way. Because of news, you might want to regroup. Take a long walk, to get yourself centered. Keep your own counsel until you are more sure of yourself. You don't have all the answers just yet. Tonight: Mystery lures another.

Tim Allen reportedly wants $1 million an episode for 'Home Improvement'

LOS ANGELES — It's big-money time for the "Tool Time" host.

Tim Allen, who plays a clumsy handyman with his own TV show on ABC's "Home Improvement," reportedly wants $1 million per episode a la Jerry Seinfeld, according to published reports, citing unnamed sources.

Tim Allen wants to break the $1 million barrier for next season.

He's seeking a considerable increase for the 1997-98 season from the $350,000 he now receives for each episode of the highly rated show, then next season he wants to break the $1 million barrier.

The much publicized "Seinfeld" negotiations fueled speculation that other actors would seek similar compensation.

Seinfeld supporting actors Jason Alexander, Michael Richards and Julia Louis-Dreyfus are said to earn $600,000 per episode, which surpasses the amount of leading actors in other shows.

Allen, who's also had two successful movies and two best-selling books, returned last week to begin work on the show's seventh season.

Allen's spokeswoman, his lawyer and Disney officials declined to comment.

NEW YORK — Natasha Gregson Wagner is beginning to enjoy her reputation as Hollywood's current unconventional It Girl.

The 26-year-old daughter of actress Natalie Wood and producer-writer Richard Gregson and stepdaughter of actor Robert Wagner has appeared in David Lynch's "Lost Highway," and will soon appear in the upcoming "Two Girls and a Guy," which also stars Robert Downey Jr. and Heather Graham.

"I don't even go in to meet on 'normal' movies anymore because they just waste my time and I know I do theirs, too," Wagner tells Movieline magazine in its September issue. "I'm attracted to dark, weird movies."

Wagner, who was 11 when her mother drowned off Catalina Island in California, says she credits her resilience to therapy. "If anybody is a poster child for the fact that therapy works, it's me, because I've been in therapy since I was 11 and my mom died," says Wagner.

NEW YORK — Brendan Fraser is offering classic advice: "Kids, DON'T do this at home."

The reason: his movie "George of the Jungle" — in which his Tarzanlike character clumsily comes face-to-trunk with a tree — is giving kids ideas.

"It's really strange," Jordan Kerner, the film's producer, is quoted as saying in the latest Entertainment Weekly. "Kids come out of screenings, go to the theater lobby, and run into the walls. On purpose. They do the George scream before their face hits the plaster."

So far, no one has been seriously injured, according to the magazine, though some parents understandably have gotten upset.

For his part, Fraser offers his warning and explains: "Those were stunt trees (in the movie). George not hurt himself. George happy monkey."

PITTSBURGH — Elvis fans with suspicious minds can forget the conspiracy theories surrounding the apparent misspelling on his grave marker.

Elvis would have no gripes about the marker's spelling of his middle name, "Elvis Aaron Presley," said Graceland spokeswoman Danna Yarmowich.

He wanted it spelled that way. And several months before he died, he considered changing it legally, she said Thursday.

In the 20 years since Presley died at Graceland, his home in Memphis, Tenn., the King's fans have complained about the marker. Some even took it as a sign that Elvis was still alive.

Daniel Majestic, a manager at the Pittsburgh-based company that cast the marker, said he blames Graceland for the discrepancy.

But Yarmowich said Elvis was named for a family friend, Aaron Kennedy. Presley's family spelled the middle name with one "a" to match that of Elvis' stillborn twin, Jessie Garon.

LOS ANGELES — Grammy-winning composer-producer David Foster has signed a multimillion dollar contract with Warner Music Group and expanded his label deal with Atlantic Records into a joint venture.

Norman on list

Gridiron Greats Magazine has ranked Midland Lee senior running back Josh Norman as one of the top 100 returning football players in the nation.

Norman's nomination to the fourth annual "Super Squad" follows his selection to the second team of Dave Campbell's Super Team. Norman, who stands at 6-feet-3 inches and weighs 205 pounds, rushed for 1,742 yards and 28 touchdowns in 12 games last year.

Norman, who is the only 4-5A player selected to the team, also goes into this season as one of Midland Lee's all-time leading rushers and is capable breaking many school records as well as establishing himself as one of the career leaders in District 4-5A history.

Tennis Rankings

The Midland High tennis team will start the 1997 season ranked as the No. 16 team in Class 5A, according to the Texas Tennis Coaches Association.

The Bulldogs are one of four teams from District 4-5A that made the season's first poll. Abilene Cooper is ranked third while Abilene High and San Angelo Central are 10th and 12th, respectively. Amarillo Tascosa is No. 1 in 5A.

In Class 4A, the Big Spring Steers will take No. 5 ranking into the season. San Antonio Alamo Heights is the top-ranked team in Class 4A.

Rams sign Pace

IRVING — Orlando Pace, the No. 1 overall pick in the NFL draft out of Ohio State, has agreed to terms with the St. Louis Rams after missing most of training camp in a holdout.

The announcement was made Friday night during the Rams-Cowboys exhibition game.

Pace's agent, Kevin Poston, said the seven-year contract was worth about $25.6 million. Pace can opt out of the contract after three years if certain playing time incentives are met.

Janzen rises as Winged Foot suddenly gets tough for PGA

By Ron Sirak

MAMARONECK, N.Y. — Take a deep breath and wait to exhale. The leaderboard at the PGA Championship bunched up into a collection of golf's grinders, promising a gritty weekend of golf.

Suddenly, it was like the air was sucked out of Winged Foot Golf Club on Friday as the fairways seemed tighter, the rough seemed higher, the bunkers bigger and the greens faster.

In a perfect example of the way the pressure increases with each round at a major championship, the leaders came back to the field and the guys who kept the ball in play and had touch around the greens crept up the leaderboard.

At the end of a round that had the desperate feel of watching a person swim for survival in a choppy sea, Lee Janzen — who played 18 holes in 62 strokes beginning with No. 10 on Thursday — shot a 67 to be at 4-under-par 136, one stroke ahead of Davis Love III.

Even Janzen felt the kick of Winged Foot, making bogeys on the final two holes as his tee shots on both

Cowboys' offense earns victory

■ Dallas outscores St. Louis, 34-31, in NFL preseason offensive shootout.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — It appears the Dallas offense will have to score a lot of points this year in order for the Cowboys to be successful.

Troy Aikman threw a TD pass, rookie cornerback Kevin Mathis had a touchdown off an interception return and Herschel Walker showed he can still find the end zone as the Cowboys outlasted the St. Louis Rams 34-31 Friday night in an NFL exhibition game.

"All I know is we can't go to Pittsburgh and play like this in two weeks," Dallas coach Barry Switzer said. "We couldn't run the football. And we couldn't stop their receivers."

Emmitt Smith made his 1997 debut for Dallas but could gain only 24 yards on 12 carries. And Mathis was burned in coverage several times.

"It was a comedy," Smith said. "We didn't play well. At times it looked like 1996 all over again. We snapped the ball on the wrong count and made a lot of other mistakes. I was rusty and didn't run the ball well."

The Cowboys (1-2), using the first half as a dress rehearsal for their season opener on Aug. 30 against Pittsburgh, showed good offense, solid special teams play and slipshod pass defense.

St. Louis coach Dick Vermeil said the Rams have a long way to go.

"I was disappointed we couldn't run the ball and that we couldn't stop their passing game," Vermeil said. "They dominated us throwing the ball. We got to do better coaching."

It was a special teams play, a blocked punt by Billy Davis for a safety, that turned around a 10-3 deficit for Dallas.

St. Louis (1-2) built a 10-0 lead on a 38-yard field goal by Jeff Wilkins and a 33-yard Tony Banks-to-Eddie Kennison touchdown pass on which Mathis was beaten.

"Kennison can make the big play for you," Vermeil said.

After Richie Cunningham kicked a 34-yard field goal for the Cowboys, Davis blocked a punt by Will Brice out of the end zone for a safety.

Then the Cowboys struck for two touchdowns in eight seconds. Aikman threw an 8-yard TD pass to tight end Eric Bjornson, and on the next play from scrimmage, Banks was picked off by Mathis, who returned the interception 27 yards for a touchdown.

Banks then burned Mathis with eight seconds left on the clock, hitting Kennison on another 33-yard scoring pass.

The 95-degree heat got to Aikman, who became dehydrated and was given an intravenous at halftime. Aikman wasn't going to play the second half anyway after hitting 14 of 25 passes for 160 yards, including seven tosses to Michael Irvin for 90 yards.

"With all the talent we have when you have that mental mistakes it's real disappointing," Aikman said. "We've got to

Angels come from behind twice to get past Missions

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The patient is still in intensive care with a deep, panting breath, but survived one more night at the Christensen Stadium hospital Friday.

The Midland Angels came from behind twice to defeat the San Antonio Missions 9-7 Friday to keep slim hopes of second half recovery on the table of hope.

The Angels have just five home games left this season, starting today at 7 p.m. when the Texas League West leading El Paso Diablos roll into town with a six-game lead over Midland.

The Angels will probably have to win four of those five games to keep any realistic hopes of pulling out a second half title. Only 15 games remain for this season.

And the Angels got some unexpected help Friday from its bullpen, which has been more like Gasoline Alley of late. Starter Scott Schoeneweis had to leave the game after giving San Antonio three first-inning runs after a smash up the middle by Keith Johnson hit Schoeneweis in the leg.

That horrifying start turned the game over to the Midland pen. But Chris Hook pitched four innings, giving up only one run and Bob Gamez (6-2) pitched two shutout innings to pick up the win. Nick Skuse recorded his 13th save with two innings of work even though he scared the beejeebers out of everyone by giving up three runs in the bottom of the ninth and had the tying runs on base as the Missions got four hits and a hit batter. Still, Skuse got Johnson on strikes to end the game with runners at first and second.

Midland answered the Missions three-run first with three runs of their own off Mission starter Mike Judd (4-2) in the bottom of the first when Ben Moli-

Tight end Derrick Spiller returns for Texas A&M. Coach R.C. Slocum believes the receivers are the most improved position on the team.

Aggies hope to cut down on turnovers

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

COLLEGE STATION — Coach R.C. Slocum has a formula for Texas A&M to make a better second impression on the Big 12: complete more passes and commit fewer turnovers.

The Aggies will have another stout defense and a bruising running game this season as they try to improve on a 6-6 record in last season's inaugural Big 12 season.

What Slocum wants is added clout through the air. The Aggies believe Brandon Stewart can pass. He just needs a few more targets and better protection.

"This spring I thought that was the most improved area (receivers) on our team," Slocum said. "Sometimes you have to make great catches and in the spring we had guys very consistent catching the ball.

Stewart, a transfer from Tennessee, came out chunking in the season opener against Brigham Young last season hitting 20 of 28 passes for two touchdowns in a losing effort but the Aggies ran into aerial problems later in the season.

He's got a new quarterbacks coach Steve Dorr and a new set of receivers to pick up the catching slack after losing top receiver Albert Connell.

Split ends Aaron Oliver and Chris Cole and tight ends Derek Spiller and Daniel Campbell give Slocum reason to feel good about the passing offense.

Dorr, who has tutored top quarterbacks in college such as Warren Moon at Washington, expects Stewart to do whatever it takes to win.

"You have to know ahead what the defense will do and if that means running 100 times a game to win, what do you do? You run 100 times," Dorr said. "If it means passing 100 times, then you pass."

In the games the Aggies decide to run Sirr Parker, D'Andre Hardeman, Dante Hall and Eric Bernard are primed to do the ground work.

"We lost three games last year by a total of 10 points and those three losses were to three good bowl teams (Brigham Young, Texas Tech and Kansas State)," Slocum said. "BYU was a good 14-1 team that we lost to by four points on the road in the opening ball game."

Cutting down on turnovers and sacks also will increase the Aggies production this season. The Aggies committed 22 turnovers and had their quarterbacks sacked 27 times last season.

"You'll have X-amount of turnovers a year," Slocum said. "We had those and then plus some others that were unusual, particularly in some games. In the USL (Southwest Louisiana) game we had eight turnovers and we had them at the worst times.

"We had them going in to score and we had them coming out. We gave them two

New York's Gooden pitches Yanks to 5-2 win over Texas

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Dwight Gooden rebounded from his worst start of the season with six solid innings and Bernie Williams drove in two runs as the New York Yankees defeated the Texas Rangers 5-2 Friday night.

Tino Martinez had three hits as the Yankees won for the sixth time in seven games.

Gooden (6-4) allowed two runs and four hits, striking out five and walking three. He struggled some with his control, going to full counts on six batters and 3-1 against three others.

In his last outing a week ago Friday, Gooden last just two-thirds of an inning and gave up six runs on seven hits.

Reliever Mike Stanton allowed one hit in two scoreless innings and Mariano Rivera worked the ninth for his major league-leading 38th save.

The Yankees opened the scoring in the first against Terry Clark (1-4) when Derek Jeter doubled past the third-base bag and Williams singled to center.

New York added a run in the second as Charlie Hayes led off with a single, advanced to third on Jorge Posada's single and came home on Jeter's single.

Gooden did not allow a hit through three innings before Texas broke out in the fourth. Juan Gonzalez and Ivan Rodriguez had RBI singles to tie it 2-2, but Lee Stevens and Fernando Tatis struck out with runners at second and third.

New York moved ahead 3-2 in the fifth. Williams walked with two outs, went to third on Martinez's single and scored when Paul O'Neill followed with another single.

Tim Raines led off the seventh with a single and scored on Williams' triple just short of the wall in center field, knocking out Clark. Martinez got his 114th RBI with a bloop double to left off Scott Bailes.

James Baldwin (8-13) allowed eight runs and seven hits in five-plus innings. Rookie Mike Cameron drove in four runs for Chicago, homering twice.

Red Sox 5, Twins 4

BOSTON — Reggie Jefferson singled home the winning run in the 10th, sending Minnesota to its seventh straight loss and 10th in 11 games.

Mo Vaughn opened the Boston 10th with a double off the left-field wall against Eddie Guardado (0-4). Jefferson followed with a single to center that scored pinch-runner Mike Benjamin.

Kerry Lacy (1-1) was the winner.

Royals 5, Tigers 3

DETROIT — Bip Roberts hit a two-run single as Kansas City scored four unearned runs in the second inning. Jermaine Dye homered for the second straight day as the Royals won for just the third time in 11 games.

Damion Easley homered for the Tigers, who have lost three straight and five of six.

Glendon Rusch (5-8) won his second straight start after losing his previous six decision, allowing three runs and five hits in five-plus innings. Jeff Montgomery pitched a one-hit ninth for his ninth save.

Justin Thompson (11-9) allowed five runs — only one earned — and nine hits in 6 2-3 innings.

Angels 5, Brewers 3

MILWAUKEE — Chuck Finley (13-6) won his career-best 10th straight start since June 27, allowing three runs and eight hits in seven innings.

Troy Percival pitched the ninth for his 20th save.

Rickey Henderson, acquired from San Diego for three players on Wednesday and 0-for-5 in his Anaheim debut Thursday, walked three times and singled. He scored two runs and stole a base.

Anaheim went ahead 3-2 in the fifth on Dave Hollins' second RBI of the game off Bryce Florie (3-4).

Brogna, Schilling combine to lead Phillies past Astros

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Rico Brogna homered twice and drove in four runs, and Curt Schilling struck out 10 to lead the Philadelphia Phillies over the Houston Astros 5-1 Friday night.

Brogna hit a solo homer off Chris Holt (7-9) in the fourth and a three-run drive off Russ Springer in the ninth. Midre Cummings broke an eighth-inning tie with an RBI single after Tony Barron's leadoff hit and a sacrifice by Schilling.

Schilling (13-10) reached double digits in strikeouts for the 13th time this season and the 24th time in his career, raising his league-leading total to 242. He allowed one run and five hits in eight innings with one walk, beating his former teammates for the third time this season. Ricky Bottalico followed with a perfect ninth.

Brogna had the fourth two-homer game of his career, the first since May 19 against the Astros in Philadelphia.

Holt, who retired his first seven batters, wound up allowing three runs and six hits in 8 1-3 innings.

After Gregg Jefferies' ninth-inning single, Springer relieved and gave up a single to Scott Rolen. Brogna followed with his 15th homer.

Houston, which has lost two straight following a four-game winning streak, went ahead in the second when Luis Gonzalez doubled and scored on Thomas Howard's single.

Following Brogna's first homer, Holt retired 10 straight before Barron's leadoff single in the eighth.

Notes: Schilling is 7-4 against Houston. He needs eight more double-digit strikeout games this year to tie Sandy Koufax' NL season record. ... The Astros recalled right-hander John Hudek from Class Triple-A New Orleans and optioned pitcher Jose Cabrera to the Zephyrs. ... The Astros been successful in 70 of their last 90 steal attempts and have 117, giving them 100 or more for 12 straight seasons.

■ NL Roundup

Rockies 6, Mets 2

DENVER — Andres Galarraga provided Larry Walker with a batting tip before his final at-bat, and the advice was well taken.

Walker came out of a deep slump with a two-run homer, leading the Colorado Rockies over the New York Mets.

Walker's 36th homer matched his career high and stopped an 0-for-16 slump, which had equaled his season worst. He went 1-for-4, dropping his batting average at .376.

"I knew what I was doing wrong, and he pointed it out for me," Walker said, refusing to disclose what Galarraga told him. "When Cat does badly, I give him advice, and when I'm doing badly, he gives me advice."

Vinny Castilla added his 30th homer to help back Frank Castillo.

"Believe me, no one was more thrilled than I was that Walker hit a homer," Colorado manager Don Baylor said. "I have been ducking things for the last at 20 at bats with him in the dugout."

Castillo (9-10) allowed two runs and seven hits in seven innings, improving to 3-1 since he was acquired from the Chicago Cubs on July 15.

Marlins 6, Pirates 5

MIAMI — Edgar Renteria's bases-loaded infield single with one out in the ninth inning capped a two-run rally, and the Florida Marlins beat the Pittsburgh Pirates despite stranding 16 runners.

Renteria's slow high-hopper glanced off the glove of hard-charging second baseman Tony Womack near the mound, allowing Gregg Zaun to score without a throw.

Cardinals 3, Braves 2

ST. LOUIS — Mark McGwire hit a tying, two-run homer in the ninth to raise his season total to 39, and Delino DeShields homered off Mike Cather (0-3) leading off the 12th.

Tom Glavine, trying for his 150th career win, shut out St. Louis on two singles for eight innings. But Ray Lankford singled to start the ninth and McGwire followed with his fourth home run in four games.

Curtis King (1-0) pitched the 12th and earned his first major league victory, giving the Cardinals only their second win in their last 10 games against Atlanta at Busch Stadium.

Padres 5, Cubs 1

SAN DIEGO — Sterling Hitchcock (8-7) pitched a four-hitter for his first complete game since Sept. 20, 1995, when he led the New York Yankees against Toronto. He struck out three and walked none, pitching his sixth complete game in 97 career starts.

John Flaherty and Ken Caminiti hit solo homers, and Wally Joyner and Steve Finley hit sacrifice flies.

Giants 6, Expos 2

SAN FRANCISCO — Slumping Barry Bonds passed his father on San Francisco's career home run list and drove in three runs.

Bonds' 29th homer was his 187th for San Francisco, one more than Bobby Bonds hit. Barry Bonds had been 2-for-35 in his previous 10 games.

Jeff Kent, appealing a three-game suspension handed down earlier in the day, also homered for the Giants.

Dodgers retire Lasorda's No. 2 jersey

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's official — former manager Tom Lasorda will bleed Dodger blue forever.

Lasorda became the ninth man in franchise history to have his number retired Friday night when the Los Angeles Dodgers mandated that jersey No. 2 will never be worn again.

"Tonight is one of the most prestigious nights of my life," Lasorda said during a 31-minute ceremony before the Dodgers faced the Cincinnati Reds. "What a wonderful reception that you have just given me.

"I never got a base hit, I never hit a home run, I never struck anybody out. Whatever success I achieved as manager of the Dodgers became a reality because of the contributions of our players. They are the ones who put me in the Hall of Fame. They are the ones who made it possible for my number to be retired tonight."

Among others who spoke during the ceremony were team owner Peter O'Malley; longtime announcer Vin Scully; general manager Fred Claire; current manager Bill Russell; Hall of Fame umpire Doug Harvey; former Cincinnati and Detroit manager Sparky Anderson and former shortstop Pee Wee Reese.

"Tonight, we give you the greatest possible compliment by the Dodgers," O'Malley said immediately before Lasorda spoke.

"I was on the veterans committee when you were inducted into the Hall (last March), and everyone there was really tickled to death that you got in," Reese told Lasorda.

"I've only played for two managers here in Los Angeles — Walter Alston and Tom Lasorda," Russell said. "Tommy, it was only a matter of time before you made the Hall of Fame. I'm just glad I was a small part of your success, and I just hope to keep the tradition going."

ANGELS: Midland stands six game back na cleared the bases with a double. However, Molina pulled a leg muscle trying to go for a triple and had to leave the game.

(From 1C)

The Missions took a 4-3 lead in the third with a leadoff triple by Brian Richardson and a sacrifice fly by Kyle Cooney off of Hook.

It looked like the Missions might use that run for a win until the Angels solved Judd in the seventh, scoring four times as the Missions had two errors by second baseman Garey Ingram.

Ty Bilderback started the rally with an infield hit and scored on a triple by Kevin Young. Young then scored on a punch to center by Derek Ryder. The other two runs came as a result of Ingram's miscues.

And that looked to be enough for Midland. Fortunately, the Angels scored two more runs in the eighth, which proved to be the margin of victory.

Bilderback doubled in Danny Buxbaum and later scored on a wild pitch by Mission reliever Joe LaGarde.

Skuse, who now has 13 saves in 13 save opportunities, almost blew this one, but held on once again.

ANGEL DUST: The Missions were playing without first baseman Dan Melendez and center fielder Kevin Gibbs. Melendez left the team briefly to be with his wife, who had a baby girl. Gibbs left the team to attend the funeral of a friend... San Antonio's J.P. Roberge will have to get his 100th RBI somewhere other than Midland. Roberge, who has 99 RBIs, had two hits, but didn't drive in a run. He left a runner stranded at second base in the second inning and was hit by a Skuse pitch in the ninth with a runner on second... Midland's Kevin Young has now hit safely in eight of his last nine games. Molina has now hit in seven straight games...

Elkins has pair of aces

In a span of two weeks, lightning struck twice for Jean Elkins, who made a pair of hole-in-ones on courses in Odessa and Midland two weeks apart.

On July 30, Elkins aced No. 17 at the Club at Mission Dorado with a five-wood.

Then on Aug. 13 at Green Tree Country Club, Elkins turned the trick again, scoring a hole-in-one on the No. 16 East hole with a driver.

Both aces were witnessed by Doris Schultz, Carol Whitsett and Katrina Cain.

John Daly tees off during Friday's second round of the PGA Championship at Winged Foot Golf Club in Mamaroneck, N.Y. Daly, the leader after the first round, dropped into a tie for 10th but not out of contention.

Daly loses his lead but keeps his cool

By Doug Ferguson
AP Sports Writer

MAMARONECK, N.Y. — John Daly lost his touch around the greens, but he never lost his cool — or his focus — in the second round of the PGA Championship on Friday.

There was the 6-footer that slid by the cup on No. 11 — bogey. A three-putt from 25 feet up a ridge on No. 13 — bogey. A flop shop that carried a bunker and stopped 4 feet away from a tight pin, a great shot wasted by another miss from 4 feet.

Bogey.

Daly finally showed his frustration this way: He pursued his lips, shook his head, sighed, and walked to the next tee box.

One day at a time, one shot at a time.

"I missed a lot of 4- and 5-footers. To win a major, you've got to make those," Daly said after a 73 that left him at 1-under 139. "But I'm not out of the tournament."

In the first round, Daly needed only 25 putts to shoot a 4-under-par 66, tying the competitive course record at Winged Foot Golf Club and making him an improbable co-leader with Davis Love III.

He took 33 putts on Friday, 18 of them on the back nine when he shot 39 and watched nine players pass him on the leader board.

"Tomorrow is a new day," Daly shrugged. "Right now, I'll go out and hit some balls. If you'd have told me I'd be 1-under after two days, I'd have taken it."

And not many people would have believed it.

Nearly five months ago, Daly feared for his life when another drinking binge ended with a trashed hotel room in Florida. Since winning the PGA Championship in stunning fashion six years ago at Crooked Stick, he has been suspended once and sat out parts of two seasons because of his outlandish behavior that resulted in the nickname "Wild Thing."

If his first-round 66 was a shot in the dark, Daly at least showed Friday that his calm, sober demeanor was not.

That didn't make his trip around Winged Foot any less exciting. While Daly rarely showed any emotion, a gallery that was three times larger than was on Thursday more than made up for it.

"C'mon, Johnny!" they shouted, holding out hands for him to slap as he walked from the green to the tee.

Daly acknowledged them only slightly, but said later the cheers carried him along.

"It's a wonderful feeling," he said. "Now, if I can just pull off a miracle over the weekend, it'll be great."

He's in position to do just that, trailing Lee Janzen by only three strokes.

Daly looked like he might be the one others would chase when he made the turn at 5-under for the tournament, making a birdie from the short rough on the par-3 seventh hole.

But his round fell apart on No. 11, and only an 18-foot birdie putt on the par-4 15th hole kept him around the lead. He bogeyed from the bunker on the next hole, then three-putted the 18th for his 73.

Faldo flops, hopes to be Ryder pick

By John Nicholson
Associated Press Writer

MAMARONECK, N.Y. — Nick Faldo failed miserably in yet another major championship, leaving his Ryder Cup fate in Seve Ballesteros' hands.

"Played badly. Putted badly. It's been a bad day," Faldo said Friday after shooting an 8-over-par 78 to miss the cut in the PGA Championship.

Three years after setting up shop in Florida to better prepare himself for the four majors, the English star found himself a whopping 43-over in a combined 12 forgettable rounds at Augusta, Congressional, Troon and Winged Foot this year.

"This a course where you can't get away with anything," Faldo said moments after bogeying No. 18 to finish at 13-over 153.

He hopes to get another chance on a major stage in the Ryder Cup, but that's up to Ballesteros.

The European captain might be forced to use one of his two wild-card picks on Spanish countryman Jose Maria Olazabal, leaving either Faldo or Sweden's Jesper Parnevik on the sidelines for the Sept. 26-28 matches against the United States at Valderrama. Olazabal and Parnevik also missed the cut.

"I'm a captain's pick now. It's as simple as that," said Faldo, who will not play in the final two qualifying tournaments. "If Seve picks me, I'll go down the whole week before and have a quite week on the golf course. It's a another couple of more months to work and get yourself prepared."

■ PGA Notes

The 10-time Ryder Cup player won the Nissan Open in March, but has only one other top-10 finish in 14 tour events. He missed the cut in his Masters title defense, was 48th in the U.S. Open, and 51st in the British Open.

COUPLES' 11TH HEAVEN: Fred Couples holed a 140-yard, 9-iron second shot on the par-4 11th. He also holed a 168-yard, 6-iron shot in the British Open at Troon — also on the 11th hole and also with Jesper Parnevik in his group.

"Jesper said, 'You do that every time we play,'" said Couples, who shot a 67 to move into contention at 2-under 138. "I played with him in China, and he made a hole-in-one. We were laughing about that."

MONTY AT WAR: Colin Montgomerie had words with fans on the ninth hole. Actually, the Scot was on the adjacent East Course after an errant shot.

"It was no time to ask for my autograph," Montgomerie said. "They didn't understand I could go down another fairway, but I enlightened them. It's amazing what goes on. Playing with Greg Norman in New York is fun!"

Montgomerie, who also had several confrontations with spectators during the U.S. Open at Congressional, three-putted the hole for his second straight double bogey. He shot a 71 for a 145 total.

BROOKS 0-FOR-4: Mark Brooks, the 1996 winner at Valhalla, missed the cut to become the first player to win a major tournament and then fail to qualify for weekend play in all four majors the following year.

"I'm glad it's over," said Brooks, who followed his opening 70 with a 79. "I'm not frustrated about not making the Ryder Cup team. I haven't been thinking about that. I've played so poorly for so long, I'm only worried about getting my ball to go straight again."

NICKLAUS MISSES CUT: Jack Nicklaus missed the cut, ending his bid to qualify for weekend play in all four majors for the first since 1991.

Nicklaus, 57, a five-time PGA champion, shot 74-76.

"I'm disappointed, but I knew going in that it was going to be a tough course for me," Nicklaus said.

BOYD TOPS CLUB PROS: Former PGA Tour player Bob Boyd led the 26 club pros in the 150-man field with a 147 total, but missed the cut by a stroke.

Boyd, 42, executive manager of RMB Golf Management services in Wilmington, N.C., shot a 76 on Friday. He has made the cut in four of seven PGA appearances, including a 52nd-place tie last year at Valhalla.

DIVOTS: Fuzzy Zoeller, the 1984 U.S. Open winner at Winged Foot, missed the cut with rounds of 73 and 75. ... Ben Crenshaw, playing his last tournament before season-ending surgery on his right foot, also failed to qualify for weekend play with rounds of 77 and 80. ... Three players withdrew Friiday, Mark Wiebe (kidney stones), Frankie Minoza (foot injury) and John Mahaffey (personal reasons).

PGA: Janzen survives tough course

(From 1C)

found the rough.

"I've made plenty of mistakes and I'm still on top of the leaderboard," said Janzen, who won the 1993 U.S. Open.

"It's a game of momentum," Janzen about his turnaround that started with a great 5-iron to the 10th green on Thursday. He shot a 31 on the final nine of the first round and another 31 on the front nine on Friday.

"Confidence is your most valuable weapon," he said. "And you just try to build your confidence."

Love, who survived a double bogey on the 16th hole, was at 137 after a 71, and seven players — including Justin Leonard, Phil Mickelson and Fred Couples — were at 138.

Such tournament-tough players as Tiger Woods, Greg Norman, Jim Furyk, Tom Lehman, John Daly, Payne Stewart and Tom Kite were within five strokes of the lead.

On Thursday, Winged Foot was ripe for the picking, and Daly and Love matched the competitive record of 66 to share the first-round lead.

On Friday, the wing was on the other foot and massive bunkers swallowed up shots, ankle-high rough grabbed clubheads and sent balls off at odd angles, and 15-foot putts rolled 25 feet past the hole on the quick-as-a-wink greens.

"It is playing brutally tough," Daly said after shooting a 73 to be at 1-under-par 139.

"The greens are firming up and the pins are in some tough places," he said. "I didn't play that bad. You just can't get the ball near the hole out there."

Winged Foot was the hardest on the best. Only three of the 22 people who broke par in the first round could match that feat on Friday.

Leonard, one of golf's best grinders, once again showed the grit that won the British Open last month. Six times he hit greenside bunkers, and five times was able to get up and down as he shot a 70. Leonard needed only 25 putts Friday, one more than he used on Thursday.

"To keep myself in the tournament with my short game, I do feel good about that," said Leonard, whose final sand save came on a 12-foot par putt on No. 18.

Woods made a move early when he started with birdies on the first two holes but hit too many wild shots into the sand and high grass as he struggled to his second consecutive even-par 70.

"I didn't really mis-hit a shot," Woods said. "I misplaced some."

Woods said Winged Foot was the toughest by far of the four major championship courses this year.

"You're hitting mid irons and long irons into these small greens and all the pins are tucked behind slopes," Woods said.

The third member of that glamour threesome — U.S. Open winner Ernie Els — stumbled to a 76 and was at 146.

Nick Faldo shot a 78 and missed the cut along with Fuzzy Zoeller, Steve Stricker, Jack Nicklaus and defending champion Mark Brooks. Brooks missed the cut in all four major championships this year, making him the first player to win a major and then miss all four cuts the following year.

Couples and Janzen were among the few who got the ball near the holes tucked in devilish spots. No one did better than the 67s they shot on Friday.

They made the putts when they needed them, and on No. 11, Couples didn't even need to putt, holing a 9-iron from 140 yards for the third consecutive tournament in which he eagled a par-4 hole.

"I didn't play a great round but got the ball around the course," Couples said after he bogeyed the final hole.

Daly, who made birdies on the final three holes on Thursday to shoot a 66, played those three holes 2-over par in the second round.

"The last three holes played the way they are supposed to," Daly said, referring to the fact that they were into the wind.

Webb leads British Open

SUNNINGDALE, England (AP) — Karrie Webb delivered another strong round Friday, a 2-under-par 70 that kept her three strokes ahead halfway through the Women's British Open.

"I tried not to look at the scoreboards too much because I wanted to play for another low score rather than play just to keep the lead," said Webb, who had a 65 in the first round

Scotland's Kathryn Marshall birdied the 18th from a bunker to join England's Trish Johnson in a tie for second.

Duval, Morgan pace seniors

ADA, Mich. (AP) — Bob Duval and John Morgan, a pair of Senior PGA Tour rookies, were atop the leaderboard Friday after the opening round of the First of America Classic.

Duval, who joined the Senior Tour on his 50th birthday in October 1996, and Morgan, 53, who joined the tour this season, shot 4-under 68s at Egypt Valley Country Club to lead four players by a stroke.

Woodforde ends Agassi's run in quarters of RCA tournament

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Andre Agassi's strong performance at the RCA Championships came to an end Friday with a 6-3, 5-7, 6-3 quarterfinal loss to unseeded Mark Woodforde of Australia.

■ Tennis Roundup

Agassi, seeded 14th and playing in his first ATP quarterfinals since mid-February, couldn't recover from Woodforde's 19 aces and strong forehand.

"He was like a surgeon today," Agassi said. "He wasn't missing."

Woodforde, who also is still alive in doubles competition as part of the top-ranked team with countryman Todd Woodbridge, said he enjoys having the chance to show off his singles talents.

"I don't think I'm at the top of my game," said Woodforde, ranked 55th in the world. "I've played well the last week and a half. I've been serving very well, which has gotten me out of very tough, tight situations. I think I can get a whole lot better."

In other matches, No. 5 Carlos Moya of Spain and No. 9 Jonas Bjorkman of Sweden advanced. Moya defeated Jiri Novak of the Czech Republic 6-3, 7-5, while Bjorkman beat his former doubles partner Tommy Ho of Houston 5-7, 6-4, 7-5.

Ho came to Indianapolis with an 0-2 record for the year, but won three matches before stumbling against Bjorkman, who is in the top five on the ATP tour with a 43-18 record.

"I can't say I played a good match," said Bjorkman, who like Woodforde is still alive in doubles competition. "I didn't feel comfortable at all with my strokes.

Moya, ranked ninth in just his fourth year on the tour, is playing well on hardcourts despite limited experience. Earlier this year, he made the finals in the Australian Open, also on hardcourt.

"Now that I'm in the top 10, I realized I have to play well on all surfaces," said Moya, the only player among the top eight seeds to advance to the semifinals. "I don't want to be known as a Clay Court specialist."

No. 10 Wayne Ferreira of South Africa, the 1995 RCA champion, was scheduled to face No. 16 Magnus Larsson of Sweden Friday night. Larsson ousted top-ranked and top-seeded Pete Sampras in a third-round match Thursday.

Bjorkman and Woodforde will play in the second of Saturday afternoon's semifinals, while Moya faces the winner of the Larsson-Ferreira match.

Korda survives scare from Wheaton

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Petr Korda, on the verge of becoming another upset victim of David Wheaton's, fended off three break points and four match points Friday to advance to the semifinals of the Pilot Pen International.

Korda, the No. 5 seed, was facing elimination on his serve in the final game of the second set before he rallied for 4-6, 7-6 (9-7), 6-4 win that spoiled an inspired run by the unseeded Wheaton, the last remaining American.

"He got tight. And I don't want to say I took control. But I just didn't give up," Korda said. "I kept positive ... I kept fighting."

AP Laserphoto

Andre Agassi made it to the quarterfinals of the RCA Championships in Indianapolis, but he lost to Mark Woodforde, 6-3, 5-7, 6-3, Friday.

Korda saved three break points to force the tiebreaker, which he came back and won after falling behind 5-1. Both held serve through the third set until Korda broke Wheaton for the match.

"I felt like maybe I got a little too tight, too much adrenaline going at that time," Wheaton said. "I think in the first couple of games in the third set I was definitely a little discouraged ... Then it was a matter of I just felt like I was getting a little tired out there ... He was playing a little bit sharper than I was in the third set. That was the difference."

Korda next will face top-seeded Yevgeny Kafelnikov, who outlasted No. 7 seed Tim Henman of Britain 5-7, 6-3, 6-4.

Rain delays du Maurier

TORONTO — The weather conditions mirrored the playing performances at the du Maurier Open on Friday — windy and rainy, swirling and sloppy.

Experiencing difficulty with gusts of wind, 10th seed Mary Joe Fernandez overcame 37 unforced errors and seven double-faults to defeat Magdalena Maleeva of Bulgaria 6-2, 6-7, 6-4.

Maleeva, who had 55 unforced errors, couldn't put half her serves in play during the two-hour, 20 minute match on center court.

"It was windy and you had to be ready for anything," said Fernandez, who faces either Germany's Anke Huber, seeded eighth, or third seed Amanda Coetzer of South Africa in semifinals.

Gugelmin places claim on pole for CART race

Associated Press

■ Racing Roundup

ELK HART LAKE, Wis. — Pacwest teammates Mauricio Gugelmin and Mark Blundell stole a little of Alex Zanardi's thunder Friday with the fastest laps in provisional qualifying for the Texaco-Havoline 200.

Gugelmin, whose only PPG CART World Series pole came earlier this season at Rio de Janeiro, turned a record lap of 142.342 mph on the four-mile, 14-turn road course at Road America to take the provisional pole for Sunday's race.

Everybody will have another chance on Saturday to better their position in the final round of time trials.

The previous track qualifying record was 142.206, set in 1995 by Jacques Villeneuve, who has since gone on to Formula One.

Blundell was close behind his teammate with a lap of 142.242 in an almost identical Mercedes-powered Reynard.

"I had a good battle for the top spot with Mark," the Brazilian said. "We've had quite a good basic setup at this track for the last couple of years and, fortunately, it carried over."

Gugelmin led Friday's action despite electrical gremlins that caused him problems in both the morning practice and in qualifying.

"In the morning, I had a misfire," he explained. "The guys did a great job of making it fast for this afternoon, but I didn't have a dash display or telemetry, so I was radioing in to get the (lap) times and where I stood.

"As long as they kept telling me it was faster, we were OK," he added with a laugh.

Zanardi, who has won three of the last four races and came into the weekend with a 27-point lead over Paul Tracy in the season standings, was a solid third at 142.110.

"We came here to test (last month) and I crashed after 12 laps, so we didn't get much help out of that," Zanardi said. "We had to go back to the set-up from last year. The car wasn't perfect. That's why I'm confident we can make it better tomorrow."

The times were amazingly close throughout the provisional lineup for such a lengthy course, with just 1.447-seconds difference between first and 14th place.

"It's truly amazing, just unbelievable that on a track this size the times are so close," said defending race winner Michael Andretti, who was fifth at 141.766. "Normally, you can double the differential that exists between two cars here because it is so long. If you have a car that's a tenth (of a second) better, then it should be at least two tenths better here. But it's not, so it's going to be tougher to pass on Sunday."

Rookie Dario Franchitti was fourth at 141.912.

Al Unser Jr., whose engine blew up here last year while he was leading on the last lap, was 14th at 140.358, with Penske teammate Tracy next at 140.096.

Kite's timing right for IRL

LOUDON, N.H. — Jimmy Kite is fast proving he has a good sense of timing on and off the track, and it has put him in contention for his first Indy-car victory Sunday in the IRL Pennzoil 200.

Kite, 21, an unknown even among the fledgling tour's little-known lineup, picked up a little recognition Friday when he turned in the second-fastest practice lap at New Hampshire International Speedway. He covered the 1.058-mile oval in 159.933 mph, behind only Scott Goodyear's 160.729.

Until then, Kite's only claim to fame was a dramatic victory in the 50-mile USAC Silver Crown race at Phoenix in February. That helped him land a ride the IRL.

The race brings together the top drivers in the four short-track series for a chance to show what they can do on a one-mile track, and Kite stole the show.

Not only did he come from 26th to beat veteran Chuck Gurney at the finish, he sent the crowd into hysteria when he parked at the start of the pits because he didn't know how to find victory lane. He wound up sprinting down the straightaway to the winner's circle as the crowd roared.

Striking while the iron was hot, he returned to Phoenix in March to watch the IRL race and to introduce himself to every owner he could find. They remembered the former midget champion, whose boyish looks and slight build make him appear much younger. He stands only 5-foot-4 and weighs 125 pounds.

"If you're going to win any race, that's the one to win," Kite said Friday, referring to Phoenix, where all the owners come to scout drivers. "All the right people are there.

"I didn't have a name Andretti or a pocket full of money. That one race in Phoenix is the reason I'm in Indy car now."

In June, the week before the IRL race at Pike's Peak, he got the call from Scandia owner Andy Evans, who was looking for a driver after letting go Fermin Velez of Spain.

On Thursday, he climbed into an Indy car for the first time for the rookie test, and passed.

On Friday, he qualified with the fourth fastest time, and on Sunday morning, shortly before the race, Evans signed him to a five-year contract.

"He liked what he saw. He apparently liked it a lot. He wanted a young American driver, and he gave me a chance," said Kite, a native of Effingham, Ill., who lives in Stockbridge, Ga.

"I was very excited, very nervous and very scared,"

But he managed the fastest lap in the race before he spun out and hit a wall on the 41st lap.

Johnson says he would have broken Reynolds' record if not for injury

By Robert Millward
AP Sports Writer

LONDON — Michael Johnson is convinced he would have broken Butch Reynolds' 400-meter world record at the World Championships if he hadn't been injured during his 150-meter race against Donovan Bailey.

"I was in very good shape before and had been running well continually," he said Friday, two days before running in a 200-meter race at Crystal Palace. "I had run 43.75 in April, so I probably would have broken the record (43.29) at the World Championships.

"But I don't want to get into a bunch of ifs and maybes. I just have to face the future and I believe that eventually I will break it."

Johnson, who set the 200-meter world record of 19.32 in the 1996 Olympic final, took up a challenge June 1 to run against 100-meter world record-holder Bailey over 150 meters in Toronto's SkyDome. He pulled up while trailing just over halfway with a leg muscle injury that sidelined him for more than three weeks.

Between that race and last week's worlds at Athens, Johnson ran only one competitive race, finishing fifth in Paris June 25. That ended his streak of 58 consecutive victories over 400 meters.

"The motivation this year has come from the fact that it's been a difficult season," Johnson said. "I had to go to the biggest meet of the year, the World Championships, having not run any races for a month and a half prior to that and not knowing for sure where I was physically.

"Considering the fact that I have been injured, I am happy with my win at the World Championships."

On Wednesday, Johnson won the 400 at the prestigious Zurich meet.

"I'm not particularly pleased with my time in Zurich (44.31)," he said. "I know that I can run faster."

Now, Johnson will concentrate on the 200.

Steelers go through quiet training camp

By Alan Robinson
AP Sports Writer

LATROBE, Pa. — The latest edition of Camp Cowher is almost history, and the Pittsburgh Steelers' sixth training camp under coach Bill Cowher was distinguishable mostly for....

Well, nothing.

No controversy. No confusion. No confrontations. And, despite numerous personnel changes from a year ago, not much competition for starting jobs.

Big change from a year ago, huh?

"I think we're close to being ready," Cowher said Friday as the Steelers prepared to break camp and relocate to Three Rivers Stadium. "If we can stay healthy for the next two weeks, you couldn't have written a better preseason script."

Funny, but a camp that was expected to bring turmoil has been mostly tranquil. There have been few injuries or major off-field problems, with the only disruptions provided by a week-long trip to Ireland and reserve linebacker Carlos Emmons' truck accident.

"We've had more than 70 guys out there practicing every day," Cowher said. "You don't see that very much. How it unfolds, who knows, but we've gotten a lot of things done in camp that we haven't done before."

The lack of major injuries, and a fifth exhibition game added because of the Ireland trip, have allowed Cowher and his staff to install more of the playbook than normal and to more closely evaluate players.

It was much different a year ago, when a potentially divisive quarterback debate dragged into the regular season, so disrupting camp that Cowher vowed to never stage such a competition again.

As a result, Kordell Stewart was designated by Cowher as the starter even before camp began. He has done nothing to play his way out of the job, leading seven scoring drives in nine preseason series.

"He's been everything we expected him to be," Cowher said.

Cowher made two changes on defense last week, promoting rookie cornerback Chad Scott and second-year linebacker Earl Holmes, but both moves had long been anticipated. Other defensive changes, necessitated when starters Rod Woodson, Chad Brown, Willie Williams and Ray Seals left during the off-season, ceased to be news long ago.

"Those things are more frustrating in January, February and March ... when there's nothing you can do about them," Cowher said. "Once training camp starts ... they're just part of the challenge."

Now, Cowher views transition as inevitable in this era of free agency and the salary cap. Rather than worrying about it, he has come to accept it, even if he still cannot embrace it.

"It is a challenge, but it's why you're in this business," he said. "I've told the players that some of greatest satisfaction comes from doing something people don't think you can do. It's been the story of my career here, my life as a sports person."

That shouldn't change as the Steelers prepare to open the regular season with an intriguing rematch Aug. 31 of the January 1996 Super Bowl against the Dallas Cowboys. What has changed is how others perceive them.

After Woodson and All-Pro linebacker Chad Brown bolted, the Steelers were viewed as being on the decline in the AFC Central. Jacksonville supposedly was on the rise after reaching the AFC championship game in January, and Cincinnati looked intriguing after a strong second half under new coach Bruce Coslet.

But with Jaguars quarterback Mark Brunell (knee) out until at least mid-season, and the Steelers once again handling their multitude of changes with a characteristic lack of panic and wealth of patience, they may again be the division's team to beat.

"We think we're pretty good," Cowher said. "We're about to find out if we are."

Meanwhile, the Steelers confirmed that Emmons hurt his left collarbone during his truck accident early Tuesday. Until now, they had declined to say if Emmons was injured when his truck skidded and hit three highway barriers. The injury apparently is not serious but will delay Emmons' return by another week.

eliminate the mistakes and take more pride in what we're doing."

In the fourth quarter, Walker scored on a 13-yard run and third-string quarterback Jason Garrett hooked up with Davis on a 59-yard pass-and-run after cornerback Dexter McCleon gambled and lost on an out pattern. Davis had eight catches for 148 yards.

Third-string St. Louis quarterback Will Furrer hit Kevin Lee on a 23-yard touchdown pass over Mathis in the fourth period. Mathis got toasted again with 2: 17 to go on a 62-yard Furrer-to-J.T. Thomas scoring pass.

However, Furrer, made a gaffe with 17 seconds to go by downing the ball on fourth and 10 at the Dallas 46.

Kennison caught three passes for 78 yards and Banks was 9-of-16 for 160 yards.

'Tennesee' sounds strange to Gilbride

By Teresa M. Walker
AP Sports Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Flying to Tennessee to play the Oilers just doesn't feel right to San Diego coach Kevin Gilbride.

Playing the Oilers should mean heading back to Houston, the town where he got his start coaching in the NFL and spent six years on their sideline.

"But when you say Tennessee Oilers, it doesn't even fit; new uniforms, not going to Houston and not being in the Astrodome. There are so many different faces, it's almost not even the same group," Gilbride said.

When his San Diego Chargers (2-0) play the Oilers (0-2) Saturday night, they will play at Vanderbilt Stadium, a place Tennessee is using as a home away from their temporary home in Memphis.

"It's almost like it's a new franchise now," Gilbride said.

Jeff Fisher, who was defensive coordinator while Gilbride was the offensive coordinator in 1994, is still with the Oilers and entering his third full season as coach.

Only 13 players are still around from Gilbride's term with the Oilers. But preparing for Saturday's exhibition has been a little easier than usual for both teams.

With all the hirings, firings and changing teams that took place during the offseason, each team has its share of coaches or players who used to work for the other.

"Definitely, they're going to be solid," Fisher said in evaluating the Chargers. "But we know their personnel because I have a coach on our staff that was with them. We know the things they can do."

That person is Greg Brown, the Oilers' defensive backs coach. He was left without a job earlier this year when Gilbride hired away Rod Perry to fill that slot with the Chargers.

Oilers running back Ronnie Harmon also spent six seasons with the Chargers before leaving as a free agent after the 1995 season. Running backs coach Sherman Smith played for the Chargers in 1983 and 1984.

The Chargers have the edge in ex-Oilers.

During the offseason they signed Gary Brown, who gained 1,002 yards in 1993 for the Oilers, and added former Oiler linebacker Al Smith last week to help fill in with the injury to Junior Seau. Special teams coach Frank Novak also was with the Oilers six seasons (1989-1994).

Smith may wind up starting because of an injury to Kurt Gouveia's shoulder.

"It's good to go against your old team, but it would have been nicer to have a little more practice time in first," Smith said. "But you got to go with what you got and make the most out of it."

A healthy quarterback may be the edge if the Oilers add a few more plays to their offense as promised.

Steve McNair is only 9-of-26 for 86 yards in two exhibitions, but he's in good shape compared to Stan Humphries, who's recovering from a sore right ankle sustained in victory over the Indianapolis Colts last week.

The Oilers' first team hasn't produced a touchdown while playing the first half of each game. McNair's longest pass has been for 24 yards. Eddie George is averaging just 2.9 yards per carry.

touchdowns on interceptions. We were keeping ourselves from scoring and helping them score."

Four of the five starting offensive linemen return and should be better at keeping the pressure off Stewart, who was often a scrambling target last season.

The Aggies will have another classy linebacking corps, anchored by senior Dat Nguyen, but they must replace the entire defensive front and expect improvement in the secondary.

Zerick Rollins and Brad Crowley were experienced backups last season and should be able to step into the starting roles at defensive end.

"They are unheralded but they've been in the program and did a good job," Slocum said.

But nose tackle is a concern.

"Coming out of spring training, I didn't feel good about that position," Slocum said. "We're looking at Marcus Heard (a 300-pound senior from San Antonio) but we'll look at a lot of freshmen and find out who's ready to play and likely have a freshman starting at that position."

Seattle coach faces decision on 30 cuts

Associated Press

Seattle Seahawks coach Dennis Erickson should have less difficulty getting his team ready for the Indianapolis Colts than in deciding who will remain on his team by Tuesday.

The Seahawks go into the game Saturday night with 83 players. Erickson has to cut 30 players next week, the first 23 by Tuesday. He plans to announce them Sunday and Monday.

Colts coach Lindy Infante also has some decisions to make next week. He'll use Saturday night's game to evaluate his talent.

"There's a good number of players that can make a statement of where they belong," he said.

One player who isn't in fear of making mistakes that could cost him a job is first-round draft pick Tarik Glenn. The offensive lineman from California didn't sign his contract until Monday. Infante said he was planning to use Glenn in the second half against Seattle.

"We want him to play and get his feet in the water," Infante said. "Hopefully, it won't be too hot."

Colts

Indianapolis Mayor Stephen Goldsmith said he s ready to hand over the money the city's Capital Management Board — which manages the RCA Dome — makes from the Colts to keep them in the city

The exact amount is still being determined but it's believed to be between $5 million and $8 million.

"I think it's fair to consider ascribing back to the Colts revenue sources attributable to them," he said. "We're going to lose $8 million either way (if the Colts move)."

Irsay has said he wants to keep the team in Indianapolis, but even $8 million "will not permit the Colts to be competitive on and off the field," said Michael Chernoff, executive vice president and chief financial officer for the team.

Bears

Erik Kramer will get the start at quarterback Saturday night. That doesn't necessarily mean he's overtaken Rick Mirer in the Chicago Bears' quarterback derby.

Kramer will play the first quarter Saturday night against the Arizona Cardinals and Mirer the next two. Both will play with the first team.

"Both Erik and Rick are getting a lot of work and both are doing well. I'm very comfortable with the work they've been getting," coach Dave Wannstedt said.

Giants

Whether the New York Giants continue to train at the University at Albany seems to depend on whether a sponsor being can be found to cover the $158,000 annual cost to run the camp.

■ NFL Camps

The Giants ended their second year of training at the upstate New York school Friday with nothing but praise for the facility. But money will be a factor in whether the Giants stay through 2000 or go hunting for a new site.

Under the five-year contract signed by the Giants and the university in 1996, both sides can opt out of the deal after this camp.

The money goes for security, field maintenance, electrical work and other expenses that can be recouped from parking and other fees.

The city covered the cost last year, and the Times Union of Albany newspaper put up the money this year.

Saints

Fullback Ray Zellars, who missed the team's first two preseason games with a pulled hamstring, should start Saturday against Oakland with halfback Derek Brown. Rookie Troy Davis, who missed last week's game with a sprained ankle, should also be available.

However, Mario Bates, the team's leading rusher last season, was doubtful for the game because of his severely sprained ankle.

Chiefs

Wide receivers Sean LaChapelle and Reggie Jones were placed on the injured reserve list, and nine players were cut to reduce the roster to 70.

LaChapelle, who started eight games and played in 12 for the Chiefs in 1996, has been plagued by a hamstring injury. Jones, a free agent, has a thigh injury.

Players cut by the team were tight ends Oscar McBride and Scott Richards; fullback Michael Blair; tackle Ron Florine; defensive tackle Chris Maumalanga; defensive ends Tim Roberts and Ray Jacobs; linebacker Larry Walker and cornerback Clayton Baker.

Steelers

The team confirmed that linebacker Carlos Emmons hurt his left collarbone during his truck accident early Tuesday. Until now, they had declined to say if Emmons was injured when his truck skidded and hit three highway barriers.

The injury is not serious but will delay Emmons' return by another week. Emmons, a rush linebacker in the nickel and dime defenses last season, has already missed most of camp because of offseason shoulder surgery.

Street Talk

By Mike Fornataro

The "Inz and Outz" of Street Rods.

Building custom cars and cruising is all about style. And just like architecture and neck ties, styles and trends change. I've attended everything from national events to local "burger-joint" cruises to gather observations of the machines, and discussions with the people involved in the street scene to bring you, the reader, news from the front. Most of what this column relates directly to pre-1949 street rods, though style trends often apply in their own way to street machines of 1949 and newer vintage.

OUT: Sacrifice.
IN: Comfort. Automatic transmissions, air conditioning, power windows and killer sound systems are becoming the norm, even in the most traditional "Highboy" rods.

OUT: $20.00 chrome wheels on $20,000 cars.
IN: High-tech, polished alloy wheels, chromed classics like the Cragar S/S or painted "steelies".

OUT: Jacked up rear ends.
IN: A lowered stance at all four corners.

OUT: Protruding, fat rear tires.
IN: Fat tires tucked neatly under the sheet metal. (But not too fat. "Pro Street", with its steamroller rear rubber appears to be losing ground to the more driveable "Pro Road" high speed cruiser look, featuring fat tires all around.)

OUT: Sticking a small-block Chevy V8 in every machine on the road.
IN: Same-make street rod drive trains.

OUT: Tunnel-ram intakes.
IN: Late-model fuel injection units.

OUT: Low gears and 3-speed automatic transmissions.
IN: Low gears and 4-speed overdrive automatics.

OUT: Non-functional hood scoops, outlandish rear spoilers and "ground effects."
IN: The "Smooth as a raindrop" look.

OUT: Excessive under-hood chrome.
IN: Paint - detailed engine bays with a touch of billet aluminum.

OUT: "Tuck - N- Roll" vinyl seats.
IN: Color coordinated tweed interiors.

"OUT": Nova sub frames.
IN: Bolt-in Mustang-style IFS systems.

OUT: Cackling, glass-pack mufflers.
IN: Throaty, "Turbo" or Supertrapp - style mufflers.

OUT: Candy-coated, mega-metallic paint finishes.
IN: Thick, gleaming, pastel hues.

OUT: Radical, neon graphics.
IN: Understated detail and creative two-tones.

OUT: No chrome.
IN: Some chrome.

OUT: White-letter tires.
IN: Blackwall performance tires, 16" or more.

OUT: CB radios.
IN: Cell phones.

OUT: Trailered cars.
IN: Caravans of street rods covering hundreds of miles at speed.

Outlaw Sprint race cars have some pretty outrageous wings perched atop their roll bars, but check out the sheet-metal beauty riveted to the back of this S-10 Blazer. It would be a great awning for a tailgate party, except it prevents the hatch and tailgate from being opened.

That flamed beauty to the right is a 1937 Packard Sedan Delivery, custom - built from a 4-door sedan. Sharing its spot in the shade are some late model machines, and its this variety that makes the street scene so much fun.

The Art of Understated Elegance:
'97 Toyota Avalon XLS sedan

By Kenneth Chester, Jr.

As the flagship sedan for the Toyota brand, the front drive Avalon has the responsibility of being a "move up" vehicle for midsize owners seeking more room, comfort and sophistication. Built on a stretched floorpan of the previous generation Camry sedan, the Avalon is manufactured exclusively at Toyota's sprawling Georgetown, Kentucky assembly complex. I had an opportunity to put the large Toyota though the paces. This is what I learned.

Strong & Silent Type

The Avalon is available in the XL and XLS trim levels. The sedan is equipped with a silky smooth, very quiet 3.0L V-6 bolted to a 4-speed automatic transmission — the only powertrain available. This twenty-four valve six cylinder engine is no wimp — delivering 200 horsepower and 214 ft/lbs of torque at 4,400 rpm. On the road, the Avalon yields a comfortable ride with nimble handling for a large car. In short, the Avalon is an easy car to drive. Inside, the driver enjoys decent all around visibility. This passenger cabin is very quiet, due in part to the asphalt resin sheeting incorporated into the design in the floorpan. Displays and controls are excellent and easy to use. The armrest is to die for, with a deep storage area built in. Buyers have a choice of either a five or six passenger seating arrangement within the spacious cabin. Headroom in the front seats is ample, even when taking the optional sunroof into consideration. Back seat room is cavernous, plenty of room to fit three of the biggest adults that you know, complete with an armrest. The trunk is big and nicely finished. In short, the Avalon is so well equipped, that the option list only consists of three items. A couple of gripes: with the five passenger configuration, one must choose whether to use the armrest or the cupholders, and the underhood fluids, while easy to reach, are not consistently marked.

By the Numbers

EPA Fuel Economy for the Avalon is 21 city/31 highway. Standard safety features for the Avalon XLS include: dual airbags, four wheel anti-lock brakes, remote keyless entry ($395 option on the XL), Alarm System ($220 option on XL), and side door impact beams. Traction Control is a $300 option. Retail sticker prices for the Avalon range from $23,608 to $27,128. Destination charge adds $420. Like most Toyota models, the Avalon is in short supply, so you may have to have your local dealer locate one for you. There are no rebates.

Isuzu Rodeo sport-utility in base edition rates as a bargain

By Bob Plunkett
Special to Midland Reporter-Telegram

Mode of transportation for many today has become an increasingly popular chameleon-on-wheels known by the initials of SW, which means sport-utility vehicle. Buyers snapped up almost two million of them last year, and most manufacturers snow have at least one SW wagon in.the stable.

Isuzu, a Japanese automaker with domestic joint-venture assembly plant in Indiana, builds two SWs -- luxury-lined mid-size Trooper and a compact wagon called Rodeo.

Trooper, with deluxe interior features and rugged off-road hardware, represents the top of Isuzu's line, while Rodeo in base format carries something rare among SWs -- an affordable price tag.

Rodeo comes with a rounded, aerodynamic shell in the shape of a slickly styled 4-door wagon.

It seats up to five adults and has room left over to stow their gear.

Then this SW adds anti-lock brakes and a choice of two powerplants, along with two traction modes with engine torque transferred to either rear wheels or all four.

Rodeo's wheelbase measures the same as Trooper's because they share a chassis, but Rodeo's height dips six inches below Trooper's, and it's two inches narrower.

Rodeo looks like it could slip through thin air with effortless ease, and the lower stance makes it seem like it hunkers down and sticks firmly to pavement or rough ground.

Yet what makes Rodeo stand apart from competitors -- including, you might argue, Trooper -- is that price tag.

With base figure of only S17,340, Rodeo ranks as one of the least expensive sport-utility wagons among compacts.

Variations rigged with 4x4 traction and 6-cylinder power lessen the bargain appeal of Rodeo, but the larger engine boosts output to an impressive 190 horsepower.

Drive Rodeo and you will discover there's value here in a well-developed machine.

The price leader is called Rodeo S. and it only provides a manual 5-speed stick and 4-cylinder engine, which produces 120 hp.

There's a choice of 4x2 or 4x4 traction for Rodeo S. The 4-wheeler packs the larger engine and becomes more pricy, although comparison shoppers will find this edition remains competitive.

With the V6, you may also choose between manual 5-speed and electronic automatic 4-speed transmissions at $28,410.

Top Rodeo LS also gets the V6 with 4-wheel-drive, but then adds luxury gear.

With more equipment aboard, the LS edition with automatic shifter tops out

The Rodeo recently tested amounted to the price-leading bargain model, Rodeo S in 4x2 format with the twin-cam four and manual shifter.

Its lowered stance made this version easy to climb aboard, where the layout includes twin front bucket seats in front of a rear bench wide enough to hold three riders.

Without riders, the rear seatback folds flat to enlarge Rodeo's storage bay to 75 cubic feet.

Still, the tester Rodeo S did not contain perks provided on Rodeo LS -- like air conditioning, power windows and door locks, cruise control, leather-wrapped steering wheel and heated outside mirrors -- and I also missed having a tachometer which comes only with the V6 engine upgrade.

On the road, Rodeo's smaller engine seemed adequate when coupled to the manual transmission.

A ring of glass panes brings excellent visibility, and all instruments and dials stand in close proximity to eyes and fingers for ergonomic control.

It also handles well, due to a clever mechanical plan.

With frame-on-body construction, Rodeo rides on a chassis defined by boxsection rails braced with multiple cross members. The unitized body attaches to frame at 12 points, creating a platform much more stiff and rigid than conventional truck and sport-utility foundations.

Then suspension and drive components mount directly to Rodeo's stiff frame. This allows it to absorb severe suspension shocks -- such as boulders and potholes and tree limbs -- which invariably appear when traversing a punishing off-road course.

Equipped with front independent suspension and a rear live axle, Rodeo's setup also delivers smooth-riding sensations when driving on a pavement course.

Steering, using a recirculating ball mechanism, has a variable-assist power boost.

The power brakes, with front discs and rear drums for the 4-cylinder engine and 4-wheel discs with the V6, tie to an anti-lock system to help corral Rodeo without locking up the wheels.

An optional part-time 4-wheel-drive system has a gear-driven 2-speed transfer case and auto-locking front hubs.

Base Rodeo S carries standard convenience features, such as dual outside mirrors, tinted glass, a rear window defroster, child-proof rear door locks and lockable glove compartment, plus 4-speaker stereo sound with AM-FM radio and cassette tape deck.
