Entrants in Women's Air Derby Delayed by Weather at El Paso

MISS EARHART LEADS OTHERS INTO AIRPORT

Mrs. Blanche Noyes of Cleveland follows closely

ALL SHIPS TO HAVE GUARDS

Tribute Will Be Paid To Miss Marvel Crosson

EL PASO, Aug. 21. (P)—Entrants in the National Women's Air Derby were held at the El Paso airport this afternoon because of bad weather reports around Sierra Blanca, east of here.

The fliers were ordered to be ready to take off at 1 p. m., but a threatening thunder storm in El Paso made it probable a further delay would be ordered. An observation plane was sent out from the airport to survey conditions over the proposed route. The plane was expected home momentarily.

EL PASO, Tex., Aug. 21. (P)—Amelia Earhart, first woman to fly the Atlantic, was the first of the fliers in the National Women's Air Derby to arrive at the El Paso municipal airport this morning from Douglas. Her plane crossed the line at the local field at 10:14 a. m.

She was followed closely by Mrs. Blanche Noyes of Cleveland, who landed at 11:44 a. m. Eleven others followed their ships to a stop at the airport within a half hour at the arrival of the leader.

PORT WORTH, Aug. 21. (P)—A record was set today that contestants' planes in the Women's Air Derby be carefully guarded from the time of their arrival at Port Worth tomorrow afternoon until the takeoff Friday morning. A telegram received this morning by D. W. Carlton, manager of the race, announced that the association of fliers from Floyd J. Logan, chairman of the National Air races.

Plans were made to provide guards to prevent any possible tampering with the planes. Logan's message read: "We are glad to see that all contestants are well and satisfied with themselves before taking off from Douglas."

Arrangements, both for police protection and night watchmen at the airport, were made several weeks ago.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 21. (P)—National tribute will be paid to the memory of Miss Marvel Crosson, aviatix who lost her life in the Women's Air Derby being flown in connection with the Cleveland air races which open here Saturday.

The National Exchange club, sponsors of the race, will hold memorial services at all clubs, numbering about 800, and a 30 second period of silence will follow the opening ceremonies at the Cleveland airport. A vacant seat will be marked for her at the banquet at which the women will be honored at the close of the race.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR LUCY BELLE SKAGGS
Funeral services for Lucy Belle Skaggs, three-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Skaggs, of the Wilcox addition, were held yesterday with Rev. Tom Brabham in charge. The child died Sunday night in an Amarillo hospital. Malone Funeral Parlors had charge of the body.

THE WEATHER VANE

WEST TEXAS: Partly cloudy probably showers in extreme west portion tonight and tomorrow.

NEW YORK—In the opinion of New York cartoonist, New York is a city and America is a machine. That is why he has come to live here for four years in France. It is better to be a crazy New Yorker than a triumph of the boulevards.

Two Large Stills And 6,000 Gallons Of Mash Seized

DALLAS, Tex., Aug. 21. (P)—Four men, arrested in a raid about one-half mile over the Denton County line, were to be arraigned here today for the setting of bond on charges of violating liquor laws.

Two copper stills of 800-gallon capacity were destroyed and about 6,000 gallons of corn mash and 80 gallons of whiskey were seized in the raid, which was participated in by federal prohibition officers.

Location of the stills necessitated the filing of complaints in the Sherman district for the northern division of Texas, but temporary bonds could be made before Lee R. Smith, United States commissioner here.

Little Hope For Swiss Aviators Is Held Today

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21. (P)—Admiral Charles F. Hughes, chief of naval operations today broadcast an appeal to all merchant vessels and an order to all naval vessels in the North Atlantic to maintain a lookout for the lost Swiss aviators, Oscar Kaeser and Kurt Luescher.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21. (P)—The same silence which has shrouded outcomes of most other westward trans-Atlantic flight ventures today cloaked the end of the attempt of two Swiss boy aviators, Oscar Kaeser and Kurt Luescher, to reach New York from Lisbon.

Nothing has been heard or seen of the two airmen and their snow-white plane, the Jungschweizerland, or "Young Switzerland," since it circled a village on Terceira Island, Azores, at 1 p. m. E. S. T., Monday and continued north and west towards Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and New York.

There was some scant hope that either the plane or its crew of two had survived the great adventure, and had not gone the way of other trans-Atlantic failures, to a silent mysterious disaster, somewhere out at sea.

Explosion Wrecks Building at Wink

WINK, Tex., Aug. 21. (P)—The American Glycoline Company's building here was blown to bits yesterday by an explosion of a magazine containing 400 quarts of nitro glycoline and an undetermined amount of dynamite.

There were no casualties but several surrounding acres were littered with debris.

The damage in the blast, of which the origin was not learned, was unofficially estimated at several thousand dollars.

OKLAHOMA FIRE SPREADS
BROKEN BOW, Okla., Aug. 21. (P)—A fierce forest fire was raging today four miles north of Eagleton, McCurtain County, near the Arkansas state line, in a cut-over timberland area ranging from six to seven thousand acres. The blaze has been in progress three days and last night reached alarming proportions.

WOMEN ATTEND NEGRO DANCE
DALLAS, Aug. 21. (P)—Two white women, arrested in a negro cafe after they were alleged to have attended negro dances with negro chauffeurs, were fined $100 each on charges of vagrancy. They were unable to pay the fines and were sent to the county prison farm.

DRUGGIST ASSOCIATION
ELECTS 1930 OFFICERS

SAN ANGELO, Aug. 21. (P)—The convention of the West Texas Retail Druggist Association was brought to a close here today with the election of officers.

Lee Stinson of Snyder will head the organization the next year. Lester Ellis of Abilene was elected vice-president and Lawrence Davis of Sweetwater secretary-treasurer.

E. E. Smith of San Angelo, J. L. Hicks of Ranger, Shine Phillips of Big Spring and John A. Weeks of Ballinger were elected to the executive committee.

More than 3,000,000 trees are planted annually in Ohio.

Zeppelin Takes On Supply For Thirsty Guests

TOKYO, Aug. 21. (P)—Before starting her Pacific flight the Graf Zeppelin's store, were enlarged in Japan by 50 quarts of Champagne and like quantity of wines, besides a plentiful supply of whiskey and liquors.

No beer was stocked here, the Graf preferring to carry her own brew around the world.

The point was being discussed here whether the Zeppelin's "cellar" will be emptied before the coastline of the United States is reached. If not, the problem may arise of how high in the air prohibition extends, together with other questions of enforcement on international air liners.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21. (P)—Such part of the liquor placed in the Graf Zeppelin's "wine cellar" in Tokyo today as is not disposed of by the passengers on the way to Los Angeles will not have to be dumped overboard.

The same customs and revenue rules apply to the dirigible as to any other ship, and the Graf established a precedent about treatment of its liquor stores on its last flight from Friedrichshafen to Lakehurst, N. J.

On that flight champagne and spirits were carried, and such bottles as were not previously emptied into glasses were sealed in bond when the ship passed over American territorial waters.

Collector Struck With Hammer And Left Unconscious

AUSTIN, Aug. 21. (P)—George Hamilton, insurance collector, was in a hospital here today after being found unconscious on a downtown street last night apparently suffering from blows inflicted by a hammer.

A man was held by the sheriff's department, but no charges had been filed.

Hamilton became partly conscious at the hospital and told attendants he had been struck with a hammer, but could not describe his assailant.

Attending physicians were unable to determine the extent of Hamilton's injuries.

Income of County Officials Given In Investigation

DALLAS, Aug. 21. (P)—County Auditor Charles E. Gross, first witness called in the legislative fee investigation here today, refused to give the income of county officials, although he knew it within $100, "unless they refuse to give it themselves." In that event, Gross told the committee he would be glad to testify.

During the questioning of the auditor it was brought out that the law makes it impossible for the auditor to demand of county officials what their unaccountable fees amount to. These fees arise chiefly from collection of delinquent taxes, and a statute makes them private matters.

The best paying office in Dallas county, Gross said, was that of county tax collector, held by John H. Cullum. He said Cullum was the only county official who regularly reported his unaccountable fees.

The witness, who had been auditor for 16 years, gave it as his opinion that every fee should be accounted for, as otherwise there would be no way to tell the cost of county government.

Remission of fees for collection of delinquent taxes came in for heated argument between members of the committee. Senator Walter Woodruff of Houston, after bringing out from Gross that every tax collector habitually remitted fees to his friends or in many cases remarked that such actions were matters for the grand jury to deliberate upon. Representative Jack Keller of Dallas argued no law was inflexible.

County Attorney Joe H. Jones of Eastland county volunteered information and discussed fees accruing to that office and discussed fees accruing to that office.

Victims of Love Tragedy

Death ended their love tryst. Gail Hamilton, wealthy young New York employment broker, and Mrs. Monte Mansfield Ovington, pretty divorcee, formerly of Farwell, Texas, here are pictured together on a recent swimming party. After an all-night alcoholic party at Hamilton's Top Springs Farm, near Poughkeepsie, N. Y., testimony of other guests revealed that the couple engaged in a violent quarrel which ended in the suicides of both. Hamilton was married.

Endurance Plane Lands In Bay— Pilot Uninjured

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 21. (P)—The endurance monoplane San Francisco lay at the bottom of San Francisco bay today, and its pilot, Donald Templeman, former army flyer, was recovered from the effects of the plunge which ended his undertaking last night.

Apparently fatigued, Templeman misjudged his distance from the ground as he was circling Mills field in the 36th hour of his flight. The craft struck an electric transmission line and fell into the bay, a few feet from the shore. Templeman swam out, uninjured.

The flight ended at 9:47 p. m., 38 hours, 38 minutes after his takeoff.

Five Tourists Are Injured In Wreck

AMARILLO, Tex., Aug. 21. (P)—The Rev. A. N. Depew, pastor of the First Christian church of West Palm Beach, Fla., his wife and baby and two women passengers in his automobile were injured in an automobile collision 20 miles southwest of here today.

Mrs. W. B. Taylor, 53, who received a bad cut on the head, was the most seriously hurt. Mrs. Logan Randolph received a broken arm and cuts and bruises about the head and legs.

Depew and his wife were only slightly injured, but the child received an injury to one of its eyes that might be serious. The party was en route to Colorado.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 21. (P)—Announcement of a new trans-continental air-rail route for service September 1 was announced here last night by officials of the Southwest Air Fast Express. Other agencies include the New York Central lines, the Texas and Pacific and the Standard Airlines.

Under present plans the eastern end of the route would be rail travel via the New York Central to St. Louis, transfer to the S. A. P. E. here for Sweetwater, Texas, then on the Texas and Pacific to El Paso, Texas with the Standard Airlines completing the trip to Los Angeles.

West Texas Girl Competing In Air Derby For Women

ABILENE, Texas, Aug. 21. (P)—A West Texas girl, tiny Vera Dawn Walker, 26, is a contestant in the women's air derby.

Miss Walker, who was eighth into El Paso today, was born in Coke county and attended school at Ovalo, Taylor county. In 1922 she went to Los Angeles with her brother to "see the country." She did not return.

The Texas entry made her first solo flight last September after 17 hours of instruction and friends here say she is known in California as "the world's tiniest aviatrix." She is 4 feet 11 inches tall and weighs 85 pounds. Her father, I. B. Walker, is employed by the federal government here.

Petty Thievery Increasing Here

Petty thievery is increasing in Pampa, according to city and county officers. Every morning during the past week, a half-dozen or more citizens have reported looted houses, shops and stores to the police. In some cases only money has been taken.

Last night, O. L. Miller at 1201 Browning chased a burglar four blocks after the thief had stolen a purse containing money and other valuables out of the room where Mr. Miller was sleeping. A few nights ago, Mr. Miller told police, thieves carried away building material from a building under construction at 611 Cuyler. Chief J. I. Downs says the thievery is being done by drug addicts on the south side who transfer the stolen goods for narcotics.

Long, Long Journey Proves To Be Taxi Ride Costing $28

NEW YORK, Aug. 21. (P)—A $28 taxicab ride proved to be the "long, long journey" taken by Mrs. W. C. Edwards, song writer, of Beaumont, Tex., when she disappeared last Saturday, leaving a suicide note.

Police, on the strength of the note and appeals from relatives in Texas dragged the East River in the vicinity of Brooklyn bridge in a search for her body.

Mrs. Edwards, also known as Lola Enloe, was located yesterday at the Hotel Pennsylvania, where she had registered as Lois Kelly. She was traced when she telephoned to another hotel to have mail addressed to Lola Enloe forwarded to "Miss Kelly."

She professed to have no recollection of events since her disappearance other than that she rode "miles and miles in a taxicab." Police found out the fare for the ride was $28.

A week ago Mrs. Edwards appealed to Vice President Curtis to help her reach music publishers who would buy her songs.

J. EVETTS HALEY TALKS AT ROTARY LUNCHEON TODAY
J. Evetts Haley of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Society was principal speaker at the Rotary luncheon today. He gave several interesting historical sketches of Panhandle ranch life and the development of this country, and told of the work of the society which he represents.

TRAIN WRECK INVESTIGATED
MALDEN, Mo., Aug. 21. (P)—Dunklen county officials and the Missouri Pacific and Cotton Belt railroads today were investigating a wreck of the Missouri Pacific freight train operating on the Cotton Belt tracks 7 miles south of here yesterday, in which three men stealing rides were killed.

The dead were: Pay Houston, 19; Trentley Dyson, 20, both of Nettleton, Ark., and an unidentified negro.

One other of the twelve nobodies said by railroad men to have been riding the wrecked train, was missing and four were injured severely.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21. (P)—Secretary Hyde today issued a general revision of the Mediterranean fruit fly quarantine to be effective September 1. The quarantine was expected to be more effective. The quarantine was expected to be more effective. The quarantine was expected to be more effective.

PROJECTS ARE ASSURED WHEN POLLS CLOSE

Will Be Spring Before Construction Can Start

FOUR ISSUES ARE INVOLVED

Approval of Bonds By Commission Next Meeting

Supporters of the $238,000 bond issue won a decisive victory at the polls yesterday when 363 of Pampa's 800 qualified voters cast their ballots for the four improvement projects for overwhelming majorities.

The strongest ballot expression was on the $20,000 parks and playground issue which carried 299 to 64. Bonds amounting to $85,000 for paving to connect city paving with the two highways and for a quantity of other paving in the city were approved by 291 voters and opposed by 67.

The $100,000 city hall issue, carried by a vote of 303 to 51 and the proposal to issue $33,000 in bonds for erection of a fire station and purchase of equipment met with the least opposition. The vote on this proposition was 318 to 37.

A complete canvass of the vote will be made Monday night at the next meeting of the commission, according to City Manager F. M. Gwin, but as near as could be determined last night these figures are accurate. Plans to secure legal approval of the bonds will be made at the next meeting. City commissioners estimate that it will be spring before the bonds are approved, issued, sold, plans for buildings accepted and the contracts let. However, they are planning to start construction of the projects in early spring.

Citizens of the town who advocated and supported the combined bond issue were jubilant this morning as they pointed out the benefits that Pampa would derive from the proposed improvements. That the bond issue had little opposition is indicated by the small vote of its opponents. The city hall issue carried 6 to 1, the fire station project, 9 to 1, and the others by almost as large majorities. A survey of the business district of Pampa this morning revealed that practically every business man cast his ballot for the improvements. It was supported by the civic clubs and other organizations. "Everybody is pleased to see that the bond issue carried," A. H. Doucette said. "We were all glad to vote for what we needed," said M. K. Brown.

Burning Steamer Escorted To Port

BREST, France, Aug. 21. (P)—Fire broke out today aboard the German steamer Delia, as it was leaving the harbor. It was necessary to transfer the passengers to the steamer Arctide. Officers and crew remained aboard.

MORLAIX, France, Aug. 21. (P)—The German steamer escorted by the steamer Arctide reached port today with fire smoldering aboard her. The Morlaix crew had the flames under control but asked assistance from the port authorities of Brest. There were no casualties, but financial loss was expected to be heavy.

TIMES CHANGE—

MEN DO NOT

Times may change, but the fine traditions of heroism of the sea still remain.

One finds the proof in the thrilling story of the rescue of three men and one woman from the wave-tossed waters of Lake Erie after a Cleveland, Detroit, passenger plane had been forced down and sunk the other day. One man—John Kasper, a co-pilot of the airplane—was lost, but the other three were saved.

Weighted down with heavy flying clothes and heavy boots but aided by a life preserver, Cy Caldwell, the chief pilot of the plane, swam four miles through rough seas to the nearest steamship lane.

Caldwell was a mere dot on the horizon, bobbing up and down with the waves, when Allan Emerson, eagle-eyed second mate of the Canadian freighter Midland King, chanced to sight him. Quickly, the ship put about and Caldwell was hoisted aboard where he told of the other survivors still out there in the water.

Captain Roy Burke, master of the Midland King, turned his vessel and raced for the scene. His powerful searchlights penetrated the darkness and revealed Mrs. Robert Little, a passenger, struggling in the water.

One glance at her predicament was enough for Walter Joslin, first mate of the Midland King. Without even waiting to don a life preserver, Joslin dived over the side and swam toward her. She was so exhausted that she could do little to aid him and he soon became exhausted, too.

Sam Wilkinson, a wheelman, saw what was happening and dived overboard to aid the fast-weakening Joslin. Wilkinson, however, was swept around the stern by the strong current and barely managed to save himself by grabbing a life preserver that was thrown to him.

Joslin, with a half unconscious woman on his arm, made his slow and painful way to a rope ladder, dropped over the Midland King's side. Supporting Mrs. Little with one hand, he grasped this. The waves tossed him about as though they were trying to snatch him to his death; but he held on with one hand until his arm was nearly pulled from its socket and the bone nearly broken. Then he passed Mrs. Little up to Second Mate Emerson, who had descended to the foot ladder. Slowly, he followed them up the side of the ship.

Meanwhile, C. A. Lupold, another airplane passenger, was being picked up by another ship where much the same scene was being enacted.

Yes, the glorious traditions of the sea still live, even in this modern day when survivors from ill-fated air liners are rescued from the deep. There are different, but the cry for aid still finds willing and heroic rescuers ready to respond.

Thank God that even in this day of advanced progress and modern science we still have men who are real men!—NEA.

WOMEN AND POLITICS

Women are becoming of ever-increasing importance in politics. They are now serving in all but 10 of the state legislatures, a recent survey disclosed, and eight of their sex occupy seats in Congress.

The old theory that politics is a game meant for men alone seems to have been blasted and women no longer remain at home and let the men steer the ship of government.

With their clubs, political organizations and unparalleled willingness to work for a cause, women have become of vast importance in every election, whether it is in a tiny hamlet or a presidential race. Women have become main arms in both the major parties.

Unhampered by political alliances, in most instances, the successful women candidates are able to come into office with open minds and a sincere desire to improve their government.

But it will be interesting to note what happens when these women have been in office a number of years—when they realize support of party organizations means favors in return.

Many men have entered politics with the highest ideals and defying the political powers. But in the end so many of them turn to the easy way of staying in politics—trading favor for favor and voting like all good party men are expected to vote.

We hope—and yet we are afraid to predict it—that women will be a lot more stubborn when the political bosses crack their whips.—NEA.

WASHINGTON.—On these hot nights in Washington officials and diplomats who must stay in town through the summer are often to be seen in white flannels, dancing and dining outdoors at what appears to be the only bright spot in the capital's night life.

In the absence of any formal social functions, swimming and dancing parties have become popular. There are several pools and dance floors scattered about Washington, but the place the folks out of the Social Register and the Congressional Directory favor is the so-called Plage Deauville, alongside the Wardman Park swimming pool.

The plage, which someone says means beach, is of cement and is dotted with large beach umbrellas which are handy enough in the daytime. A raised dancing floor overlooks the layout and between dances the diners watch the bathers swim and dive.

On an evening recently your correspondent observed an ambassador and two ministers tangoing gracefully there, with smaller diplomatic fry on every hand. So many of the Latin-American diplomats go in for this sort of thing that the Deauville orchestra plays many tangos. The dancers who can't tango seem to get along just the same. Senor Don Eduardo Diaz de Medina, the Bolivian minister, is one of the most enthusiastic tangoists. One can also recommend other dancers, including First Secretary Oscar Blanco Viel of the Chilean Embassy; First Secretary George de la Barra of the Bolivian legation, and Jose Ortega of the Pan-American Union. Among other ad-dicts are Colombian Minister Enrique Olaya and Persian Minister Mirza Khan Meftah.

Among the diplomatic women one likes to watch are Mme. De la Barra, Mme. Samy Pasha—who comes with her husband, the Egyptian minister—and Mme. Popovic, the Rumanian legation secretary.

The home folks also make a good showing, however. George W. Wickerham, head of the Hoover law enforcement commission, frequently entertains on the banks of the pool on evenings when he is here, although he doesn't dance. Senator Sam Shortridge of California also prefers to look on. But Senator Royal S. Copeland of New York does a mean fox-trot and other nationally known figures are to be seen from time to time.

Turning from expensive amusement to cheap amusement, one considers the Japanese at the other side of the world. Consul Leo D. Sturgeon at Tokio reports to the Department of Commerce on the operation of new Japanese department stores.

Instead of organizing theatre parties, groups of Japanese often organize department store parties. The atmosphere of modernity and luxury of the big new stores fascinate the public, and hordes of people come in for sightseeing tours with no intention of buying anything. Tourist parties from the country, family groups and bodies of school students are to be seen in the more attractive stores at almost any time. The store owners like that. In summer they all throw open large roof gardens to their visitors. Visitors to one Tokio store have numbered as high as 200,000 a day, with 60,000 as a minimum for any one day.

Mrs. Jewell Sewell assistant in the office of Dr. Stephen E. Smith, is expected to return today from Clarendon, where she has spent two weeks with a sister who is ill.

Mr. and Mrs. I. S. Jameson of Roswell, N. M., former residents of Pampa, are spending a few days here, during which Mr. Jameson will conduct a sale at White Deer. Mrs. Jameson, in the interest of whose health the family moved to New Mexico, is much improved.

Spuds Slumping With Three Days Lost To Steers

(BY GALYE TALBOT, JR.)
Scarcely broken, but badly bent, the high powered Spudder machine limped out of Dallas last night after three highly distressing afternoons in the Steer sanctum. The club that was supposed to have been geared for the second half crown seemed nothing so much as a bush league outfit in dropping three straight to the nine which may oppose it in the play-off.

Little surcease was seen for the slumping Galawayites today. They found themselves at Buffalo stadium in Houston, which was something like hopping from a skillet into the fire. Their lead slashed from six games to two and a half since they left home Saturday night, the Spuds faced the prospect of having it erased entirely unless they do better the next three days than the last three.

The crushing manner in which the Mavericks lathered the Oilers in the series just closed possibly is filled with potent. It not only transformed the Texas league race from a runaway to a tightly bunched field, but definitely established the fact that the Steers will not be push-overs in the five-game saw-off, no matter what club they encounter.

Sergeant George Connolly took up where Whitley Glazner and Vic Fraser had left off the two previous afternoons in setting the leaders down, 8 to 2, in the series final. In limiting the Spuds to four hits he set their single total for the three days at 11 safeties. Up to the seventh round, when the visitors scored both their runs, he did not allow a blow.

The Spud debacle apparently has spurred the Bufts. For the second straight afternoon Bailey's men swept a double-bill with the Exporters, 4 to 3 and 4 to 2. In order to lick Denny Burns in the first he bisoned him to scrap through 10 innings, scoring one run in each of the last four frames to nose out the Shipper ace. Flint Rhem had the invaders well in hand in the nightcap while his mates bunched their hits off Grimm.

Del Pratt's Cubs tussled through one of the season's longest games before eking out a 5 to 4 triumph over the Indians at San Antonio and Shreveport salvaged its last tilt at Fort Worth, 6 to 5.

WOMEN SWIMMING CHAMPS DEFEND TITLES

Speed and feminine beauty will be on display at Waikiki, August 2-8, at the women's national outdoor swimming championships. Frances Bickerton, one of the island stars, is shown above between two champions from the mainland.

SPORT SLANTS

—Alan J. Gould—

Three years ago, Big Bill Tilden was abruptly checked by the surging rush of youthful Frenchmen after capturing the United States singles championship six times in a row. Over the period of 1920 to 1925, Big Bill was supreme. The record of seven championships, first set by Dick Sears back in the eighties and equalled later by William Larned, appeared well within the grasp of Tilden until he ran into Cochet in 1926 and then Lacoste in 1927. Cochet turned back Frank Hunter for the singles crown in 1928. Tilden being in official disfavor as an aftermath of his player-writer row and was ruled out of action.

Now, the lanky American is back home after his last big campaign abroad, with no more Frenchmen in sight for the rest of the season. As a consequence, Big Bill has a royal chance to wade through the field at Forest Hills, starting September 7, to re-capture the national title and equal the Sears-Larned mark. Should he do so, Tilden automatically would clinch the No. 1 ranking position on the national list for the tenth time in a row. Despite his ups and downs of recent years he has never relinquished that dominating position at home, although he was re-instated just in time to be put at the head of the class last February for the ninth year.

In the 10 national singles championships he has tried for since 1918, Tilden has been champion six times, runner-up three times to R. Lindley Murray, Little Bill Johnston and Rene Lacoste, and quarter-finalist once when he bowed to Henri Cochet.

Little Bill was Big Bill's victim five times in the national finals and once in the semi-finals, in 1921, when Tilden's conquest of Wallace Johnson in the finals represented anti-climax.

When Babe Herman first broke in with the Brooklyn Robins, his awkwardness in the field frequently made it doubtful whether he would block fly balls with his glove or his head. The Babe is still several kilometers short of the Tris Speaker standard of outfielding but his heavy hitting has offset anything his critics may say about his defensive ability. Herman has been batting consistently around .400, threatening to give Brooklyn its first champion batsman since the palmy days of Jake Daubert and Zach Wheat.

Herman is only one of the big surprises this year in the National league's big batting rampage. Chuck Klein and Lefty Frank O'Doul of the Phillies also have been connecting. O'Doul led the grand parade earlier in the campaign. Klein is well on the way to beating Rogers Hornsby's league record of 42 homes for a single season.

Ten years ago Babe Ruth, after hitting 29 home runs for the Boston Red Sox and setting a new record, was sensational enough to be purchased for $135,000 by the Yankees and signed to a $30,000 contract. Klein, well beyond the 30-mark in August, in his first full year as a big leaguer, is understood to be working on a $3,500 contract for 1929.

Spokane Sun God Completes 5-Day Non-Stop Flight

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 21. (AP)—Nick Mamer and Art Walker were home today after having pushed the glistening Sun God across the continent and back in a five day non-stop refueling flight.

The small Buhl sesquiplane's landing gear touched the ground at Felts field at 5:59:40 p. m. (P. S. T.) last night, a minute less than five days after the ship was sent into the west towards San Francisco, the first refueling point.

Mamer brought the ship to a perfect landing and before it had been taxied into position near a temporary reviewing stand, Walker leaped into the arms of the crowd that had broken through a double line of policemen and national guardsmen.

Afe wminutes later Mamer, his legs wobbling, and clothes oil-spattered, climbed out of the tiny cabin of the plane. Both fliers apparently were in excellent physical condition, but were unable to hear ordinary conversation. The Sun God was ordered to the ground by the executive committee of the National Air Derby association which said it believed the object of the flight—to show the feasibility of transcontinental commercial refueling systems—had been achieved.

Mamer and Walker were congratulated by President Hoover.

DR. J. V. McCALLISTER OF PANHANDLE LOCATES HERE

Dr. J. V. McCallister, chiropractor of Panhandle, arrived in Pampa this week to take charge of the office and practice of Dr. A. W. Mann who is retiring from practice and plans to move away soon. Dr. McCallister has lived in Panhandle for the last three years, but is well-known in this community, having maintained an office here for two years before he moved to Panhandle.

Dr. McCallister will continue to occupy the office rooms used by Dr. Mann, rooms 20-21, Smith building.

Mrs. Berona Keller of Durham, Okla., has returned to her home after spending two weeks here with her cousins, Mrs. Joe Shelton and D. E. Cecil.

Phils and Cubs Have Good Lead In Major Races

By HERBERT W. BARKER
Associated Press Sports Writer

The two major league races have developed almost identical situations with the Philadelphia Athletics 12 games in front of their nearest, American league opposition and the Chicago Cubs nine and one-half games to the good in the National circuit.

Although the Cubs got no better than an even break with the New York Giants they increased their lead one-half a game as the Pittsburgh Pirates took another on the chin from the Phils.

Both Cubs-Giant games were pitcher's battles. Freddy Fitzsimmons out-pitched Guy Bush in the opener and the Giants won 4 to 1. In the nightcap Hal Carlson blanked the Giants with six hits and the Cubs won 1-0.

The Phils conquered the Pirates for the third time in a row by an 8-6 count. Brame was shelled for eight Phil runs in the first three innings but Petty and Hill held the Quakers scoreless thereafter.

Thanks to another brilliant pitching performance by Ray Moss, Brooklyn got an even break in two games with the St. Louis Cardinals. After Wee Willie Sherdel outpitched Dazzy Vance to give the Cards the first game, 3-2, Moss blanked the Red Birds with four hits and walked off with a 4-0 triumph.

Red Lucas pitched Cincinnati to an easy 6-2 victory over Boston to record his 16th win of the season.

In the American league the Yankees picked up a game in the Athletics by beating Chicago, 5-4, while the A's were losing to St. Louis, 2-1.

Ralph Kress' homer with one in of the sixth decided a tight pitchers' battle between Alvin Crowder of the Browns and George Earnshaw and Jack Quinn of the A's at St. Louis. Crowder permitted only four hits.

Burke was knocked out of the box in the first inning by Cleveland but Myles Thomas stopped the Indians dead thereafter and Washington walked away with a 6-2 verdict.

The rampaging Boston Red Sox assaulted three Detroit pitchers for 15 hits and beat the Tigers, 12-8.

Ft. Worth Man Is Shot Four Times

FORT WORTH, Aug. 21. (AP)—R. P. Lary was shot four times by a man while in a parked automobile with a woman companion in Morningside Drive late last night.

Three bullets went into his legs and another struck him in the back. The man held up Lary's companion, taking 11 and some change, but did not attempt to rob Lary.

Lary was taken to a hospital by a man who drove past in his automobile.

German Steamer On Fire At Sea

NEW YORK, Aug. 21. (AP)—The radio Marine corporation today received a wireless message from the freighter Yalza stating she had seen the steamer Quimistan on fire and deserted about 1100 miles east of Norfolk, Va.

The Quimistan was well down in the water, the message said, and was a menace to navigation. The ship was formerly a Honduran vessel but recently was sold to German interests to be scrapped. It was bound for Genoa, Italy from Norfolk.

The Yalza is an American freighter from Baltimore.

A. L. Leonard of Beaumont, Grand Chancellor of the Knights of Pythias lodge, will meet tonight with the local chapter.

Attempts Daylight Flight From West To Eastern Coast

MONTELEONE, Calif., Aug. 21. (AP)—Captain Roscoe Turner, with three passengers, took off for New York at 10 a. m. today in an attempt to make the feasibility of a daylight, non-stop flight across the continental airplane passenger route. He planned to stop three times en route.

Turner planned a refuel at Amarillo, N. M., Tulsa, Okla., and Chicago, with seven minute stops at each city. He hoped to make Albuquerque in five hours, Tulsa in 11, Cincinnati in 15, and New York in less than 17 hours and 25 minutes. The record time of Captain Frank G. Carpenter for west to east non-stop flight was 20 hours and 15 minutes.

Passengers making the flight were Mrs. J. C. Trooper and Russell Ficht of Amarillo, and D. R. Lane of Berkeley, Calif. H. C. Gatty of Los Angeles accompanied Captain Turner as navigator.

The ship is a cabin monoplane with streamline "pant" over the landing gear, and stream line motor cowling, and powered by a 245 horsepower motor. It developed 190 miles per hour in tests.

GRAND CENTRAL AIRPORT, Glen Dale, Calif., Aug. 21. (AP)—Captain Roscoe Turner, with his three passengers, landed at Albuquerque, N. M., at 7 a. m. today and took off 20 minutes later after refueling his monoplane. Officials here reported. His next stop was to be Tulsa, Okla.

"Pajama Dance" Is Protested Before Dance Hall Opens

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 21. (AP)—The claim of the pajama is the bed room and the ball room, according to an official pronouncement of the county prosecutor.

A local casino advertised a "pajama dance" for tonight. Women's clubs protested, and Assistant Prosecuting Attorney E. G. Shoffner, issued a manifesto to Sheriff R. A. Cook, notifying the officer he would be within his rights in preventing the event.

Sheriff Cook promptly announced pajamas were "out" as terpsichorean attire and he would halt the scheduled dance.

Promoters of the dance threatened to apply for an injunction to prevent interference by the sheriff.

BODY OF JAMES MCGILL SHIPPED TO WICHITA

JAMES MCGILL, 66, of Wichita, Kans., was last night in Pampa hospital of blood poisoning, following amputation of his left arm. Mr. McGill was confined to the hospital for three months after blood poisoning set up in a bruise on his leg which was amputated. Spread of the poison then necessitated the removal of his hand and arm. The body was shipped by Malone Funeral home to Wichita today, accompanied by his widow. Mr. McGill had been in the McKean and Connor hospital for the past three months. He had lived in Pampa less than a year.

About New York

By RICHARD MASSOCK
NEW YORK—Back in 1918 a more or less obscure cornetist organized what he called a symphonic band and borrowed the green of Columbia university three nights a week for a number of experimental public concerts.

Apparently he found the band concert spirit of the small town preserved in the Metropolitan soul. Thousands turned out for the free music and so the cornetist, Edwin Franko Goldman, set out getting subscriptions for another season.

It was rather a difficult task, especially as he had rehearsals and other artistic details to attend to. Most of the contributions were small, but one woman, Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim, wife of the copper king, promised him $100,000.

Goldman recalls that Daniel Guggenheim demurred. The war's effects still were evident and the money might be needed for more urgent charities. But the couple came to one of the concerts and the next day increased their donation to $3,000, convinced of the man piece.

The most popular march is "On the Mall." The crowd whistles it through-out the playing.

DEPRECATES OWN PIECES

Yet Goldman frankly calls this and other of his compositions "terrible." When he introduced "On the Mall" he refused to let it be announced on the usual placard and he held his nose with one hand, in the familiar gesture of disgust, while he swung the baton with the other. He said he almost fell out the stand when applause roared off at the finish.

The same thing happened this summer when he offered "My Heaven of Love." He thought it was "awful," but his men had to play it three times the first night to quiet the audience of 25,000 persons, mostly families of the middle class.

His method of arranging a new piece is simple. His "Canadian National Exposition" march, for instance, which he intends to play in Toronto for the first time this fall, is composed of Indian and French-Canadian folk music, with bars from "The Maple Leaf Forever," the dominion march.

Goldman, who is 51 years old, was born in Louisville, Ky. He became a cornet virtuoso at the age of eight and, besides playing in Chicago, Philadelphia and New York orchestras, has taught other cornetists. But he has not played his favorite instrument in years.

The Guggenheims attend his concerts several times a season, enjoying as much the public's appreciation as the music for which they alone pay.

No More Rattle Snake "Milking" For This Negro

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 21. (AP)—"Milking" a rattle snake no longer will be a country sport for Jim Spears, negro employee at Medina Lake lodge.

Jim had the scare of his life Monday, when he attempted to follow in the footsteps of Col. M. L. Crimmins, snake expert. He had witnessed a motion picture film showing Col. Crimmins "milking" a snake to obtain venom for the manufacture of serum.

Therefore, when he killed a large snake Monday in a shed at the lake lodge, Jim decided to remove the venom.

Praying open the mouth of the dead rattler, Jim was paralyzed with fear when a stream of the venom shot into his eyes. He was rushed to a hospital where it was explained to the frightened man that venom is harmless unless it is introduced into the blood.

These wives of ours...

We took them from the shelter of their families gave them two or three rooms and a share of our salary—then left them sitting there among the wedding presents, a bit bewildered.

But they knew how—these wives of ours. They knew how to make rooms into homes, and how to get more merchandise out of a dollar bill than we ever could. We're lucky to have wives. How do they do it?

Look through this paper, day after day. You will find advertisements covering almost every human need. They are filled with hints for the household, hints for health, hints for clothing, hints for keeping young. They are virtually little essays on life. No wonder these wives of ours follow them so carefully. As one wise wife said: "It isn't so much that I know house-keeping so well. I know where to learn it!"

Officials Cite The Problems Presented By The Dance Hall

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21. (AP)—Roadhouses outside city limits and parental failure to keep their youngsters from public dance halls were cited today by the United States children's bureau as major difficulties in the "problem presented by the dance hall."

The report based on a survey of cities in 25 states, showed variance in the laws for control of such halls. Echoes of dances long dead were found in still valid ordinances prohibiting the toddle, shuffle, grizzly bear, bunny hug, Texas Tommy, and camel walk.

Children's bureau officials, in issuing the study of which Ella Gardner, bureau recreation specialist, is the author, pointed out there was no attempt to call attention to "so-called dance hall evils," but to discuss how public dance halls may be made a "real recreational opportunity rather than a brighter form of boredom."

The investigations did not reveal uniformly bad conditions in the public dance halls, the pamphlet said, and this fact furnished the best argument for successful regulation.

The report recommends that states and counties pass regulations for roadhouses, pronounced by city authorities "the biggest problem in the protection of young people from the dangers of the unregulated commercial hall."

Mrs. R. B. Haynes and daughter, Miss Juanita, of Miami were here yesterday to attend the open house at Mitchell's store. They were guests in the home of Mrs. J. B. Pafford.

THIS HAS HAPPENED
MOLLY HERNHAM, sob after on a metropolitan paper, is renewing college friendships with her old roommate, RITA HEILNOTTE, and Rita's husband, BOB NEWTON. Molly is having a little dinner party, to which she also invited RUTH WOODS, and Rita's husband, ZIP.

But Ruth protested that she was not feeling well, and that Zip was working late. Ruth has changed a lot since her marriage. Within a few months she lost her little baby. And then all her dreams and safety seemed to have evaporated. Rita, while Molly, who has made a remarkable success during her brief career, has indefinitely postponed her marriage to JACK WELLS, a struggling young architect, whom she loves devotedly, but who has scarcely a penny to his name.

During the dinner party, the door bell rings furiously. Bob goes to see who it is, and returns with Zip. Rita's husband Zip is crying and talking incoherently, and the girls are afraid he is drunk. Molly asks Bob, who shakes his head sorrowfully.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XV

BOB put his arm about his wife's shoulders, and reached for Molly's hand.

"Ruth's dead, girls," he said.

"Poor little kid,"

Zip raised his swollen face from Molly's shoulder. His soft brown hair that Ruth had loved clung to his forehead in moist strands, and his chin trembled like a child's.

"Ruth's dead," he repeated.

"Did you hear Bob tell you?"

They drew him into the apartment, and Molly wondered if the gay, pretty background of her little dinner party would wound Zip more deeply. She knew that when one grieves extravagantly, the gaiety of others seems harsh and heartless. She was sorry that Zip had told her making merry with Rita and Bob. It would have been better if she had been alone. But Rita had heated the coffee, and now she brought Zip a steaming cup.

"It will make you feel better," she said. "Buck up, you know."

He took it obediently, and held it on his knee. His hand was shaking so he could not raise it to his mouth.

"She died in her sleep," he told them. "When I came home she looked like a ghost. And her eyes were red. I know she'd been crying. I told her—Zip's voice broke, and he buried his head in his hands. 'I told her that other women had lost their babies. I told her there wasn't anything unique about her sorrow. That other girls had gotten over it.'"

"Never mind that, Zip. Don't tell us," whispered Molly comfortingly. "Ruth knows you never meant to hurt her."

"Yes," he cried fiercely. "I want to tell you. I told Ruth I was sick of her shivering and crying. I told her she was making my life a regular hell. . . ."

"Zip!" Molly darted from the bed where she had crouched, and flung herself on her knees before him. "Stop it! We don't want to hear those things. Don't torture yourself, poor Zip. Ruth doesn't want you to, dear. She always wanted you to be happy."

"Something in Ruth died, Zip, when she lost her little baby. Perhaps that's why she died. Maybe she's with that little baby now."

ZIP groaned. "I killed her," he said. "I killed her with words. She got all white and trembly, and she put her hand over her heart. And then I was frightened. And pretty soon she let me put her to bed."

"She lay there so white and still. But she wouldn't let me call a doctor. She wanted me to sit beside her, and hold her hand. And when I asked her how she was, she said 'Beautiful!'

All night Molly sat with the book across her knees . . . and conjured a vision of Ruth.

"After a while she wanted to sit up. She was very weak. Whispering then. . . . My God, I ought to have known! I lifted her, and put pillows behind her back. And put my arms around her. I asked her if she was comfortable that way, and she said yes."

"She was quiet then for a long time, and I was frightened again. 'How are you feeling?' I asked."

"'Beautiful!' she said. And she opened her eyes, and smiled again."

"By and by I thought she was asleep. My arms were numb, and I was afraid I might let her slip back on the pillows. I wanted her to sleep, you see. I thought she would be better when she woke. So I took my arms away."

Rita was crying now, with her head against Bob's shoulder.

"And when I stood up," Zip was saying, "I bent to kiss her. I kissed her forehead. And she didn't move. Then I—"

Rita screamed. "Stop! Zip, don't!"

"I kissed her lips," he concluded simply. "And then I knew. I don't know how I knew. I just knew. Ruth was dead."

"And the last word she ever said," moaned Rita, "was 'Beautiful! Wasn't that just like Ruth, Molly? Oh, poor, poor little Ruth!'"

"You called a doctor?" asked Bob.

"Somebody did," Zip said. "The woman upstairs came down. And her husband. Yes, they got a doctor. He said she'd been dead for an hour. Two hours maybe. He was wrong though. Because she smiled at me, you see. And put her fingers in my hair. And when I asked her how she was, she said 'Beautiful!'

Rita's big dark eyes were staring mad.

Bob caught her to him. "Steady, Rita. Steady, dear," he besought. "Careful, darling."

"Zip!" Rita's voice was pleading. "Don't you see?—Ruth lived to make you happy. And she died to make you happy. . . . And she came back from the dead to comfort you."

He shook his head miserably. "I killed her," he said, "with words."

MOLLY had begun, nervously, to clear the dishes away.

"And life goes on just the same," she kept thinking. "Dishes and ash trays, and coffee cups."

"How did you get in town, Zip?" asked Bob practically.

"Drove in."

"Good Lord! They shouldn't have let you out tonight. You should have telephoned us. We'd have come to you. What was that doctor thinking of?"

"He didn't know," said Zip dully. "They'd all cleared out. Left me alone with Ruth. I got scared. Had to get away."

He looked about him wildly. "Ruth wanted me to tell Molly," he said. "Molly sent her flowers today. She had some of them pinned on her dress. She told me they were from Molly. And then, when she died, she said, 'Tell Molly, Zip.'"

Molly, in the kitchen, put her fingers in her ears.

"He'll drive me crazy!" she whispered. And Rita nodded through her tears.

"Do you mind," asked Molly presently, "if I go out for a minute? Will you and Bob stay with Zip? I want to phone Jack."

It took some minutes to get through the call, and when at last she heard his voice, she felt that she was going to faint.

"Oh, Jack," she cried, "Ruth is dead. . . . and I want you!"

"Dead?" he exclaimed incredulously. "An accident, Molly?"

And then, agitatedly, lover-like, "Are you all right? You're not hurt?"

"Oh, it wasn't an accident, dear. Heart failure, I think. Zip is here now. He came a few minutes ago. We're just heard."

"YOU'RE sure, you're all right?" he interrupted.

"Jack, darling, of course I'm all right! But poor Ruth. And poor Zip."

She choked back tears, the feeble impulse of women to be weak when they would be strong.

"Poor Ruth!" he repeated. "Lord, that's tough! How's Zip taking it?"

"Oh, dreadfully," she moaned. "He's simply all broken up. . . . Listen, Jack, I want you more than I've ever wanted you before. Can you come over?"

"Why, of course I can. Surest thing in the world, Sweetheart. I can make the midnight."

"But it's after 11 now," she reminded him.

"That's all right. How long do you think it takes to chuck a clean shirt in a bag. Listen now, Sweetheart, get to bed as soon as you can, and get a little sleep. You must be all shot, you poor little kid. Why don't you get hold of Bob Newton?"

"Bob's here now. Bob and Rita?"

"That's good," he approved. "They'll take Zip off your hands. Take good care of my girl, won't you, Molly? Do it for me, Sweetheart. Don't stay up all night. Let Bob take care of things. Will you be able to sleep, dear?"

"Oh, yes," she lied. "I will. And I'll meet your train in the morning. Hurry now, or you'll miss it. Listen, dear, can you hear me? I love you!"

"And I love you!" he cried. "More than ever, Molly. I was thinking about you when the phone rang. I don't ever do anything but think about you. I guess, it's wonderful to hear your voice. Do you honestly love me as much as you used to?"

"More," she assured him. "I'll tell you tomorrow. Don't miss your train. Goodnight, dear."

She slipped the receiver slowly in place. One of her dearest friends was dead. And she could still talk about love! Was there something wrong with her? Something cold and heartless? Were other people like that!

"Tomorrow!" her heart kept singing. "Tomorrow!"

But she thrust the anticipation from her. And conjured, instead, a vision of Ruth.

Bob and Rita took Zip home with them. And Molly, when they had gone, found the memory book of her Freshman year, with all its heart-wrenching memories of Ruth. For she and Ruth had roomed together that year, and that was the year Zip gave Ruth the moonstone she called her engagement ring. All night Molly sat with the book across her knees.

When dawn came, she put coffee on, and while it was boiling, she took a shower. Then she lay quietly down, not to sleep, but to relax, so that Jack would not know she had not slept all the night.

When his train came, she was waiting.

Texas Company Is Leading Production In The Panhandle

Twelve wells in the west half of section 89, block B-2, and three other wells in sections 91 and 93, block B-2, drilled by the Texas company are producing 24,732 barrels daily. The land on which the producing wells are located is located on the J. B. Bowers land in the Bowers-McGee pool.

The company's total daily production in Gray county soared to 33,001 barrels Saturday to be the greatest production by one company in the Panhandle field. Three months ago Gray county's total production had not reached the amount being produced by the Texas company today.

Last week the county's total reached the new high mark of 85,813 barrels daily to be more than half the oil produced in the six Panhandle counties in the oil territory.

The big increase in the Texas company's production has been during the last two weeks when five tests in section 89, block B-2, have come in for a total daily production of approximately 18,000 barrels. In that section is the company's first well which came in a year ago last January. Since being drilled in the test has flowed nearly

COAL MAGNATE LEAPS TO DEATH FROM WINDOW

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 21. (AP)—Colonel Walter T. Bradley, 74, wealthy coal magnate, clad only in underwear, leaped or fell to instant death today from his apartment on the thirteenth floor of the Warwick hotel.

Police expressed the belief he had committed suicide, after trying vainly to get some sleep. A screen, police said, had been carefully removed from the window.

Henry S. Martin, president of the coal firm which bears the colonel's name, said the colonel had been in ill health for some time.

The SHINING TALENT

THE MAN HAD BEEN MOLLY BURRIDGE, registered, was entertaining old friends at a little dance party, when she learned of the death of ALVIN WOODS. Molly and ALVA MELLOTTE and Rita were closest friends at college. Alva (both is dead, and this is especially disconcerting, for Alva was a very close friend. Their first acquaintance was the "roughneck" days of which they all remember—and even Molly's for is not complete. She is very much in love with JACK WEIR, who has no money, and seems unable to make any. She and Jack started a great deal over money matters, and because Jack hated Molly's work, and is "constant" of her intimates with newspaper men.

But when Rita dies, Molly forgets these last differences, and telephones Jack, asking if he can leave work to be with her for a few days. He comes for the funeral, and to comfort his sweetheart.

Now GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XVI

RUTH was buried in her wedding gown, with her lips touched with scarlet. Molly thought she looked like Isolda, with her white face and her white eyelids, and her little white hands folded so chastely.

She bent to kiss the soft cloud of her hair, and thought of what it was that Tristan had whispered to his Isolda. "— your gold hair. That is not gold. Only God knows, who made it.

What color it is exactly." "Bob and Rita, and Molly and Jack had bought a blanket made of roses, to throw over the casket. And Zip had filled her arms with sweetheart roses.

The people from upstairs came down, and a few curious neighbors called. Their faces were long, and their words were faint.

The neighbors brought in a cold ham and some potato salad, and their voices quivered with the proper degree of feeling.

And Molly, though she despised herself for the thought, wondered if people felt an exhilaration in others' troubles.

She turned fiercely to Jack. "Look!" she whispered. "That woman is fingering Ruth's gown! She's indecent."

"Oh," he admonished. "She means well, poor soul. She doesn't know any better."

"Poor dear!" murmured the woman at the door. And putting her handkerchief to her streaming eyes, leaned a little closer to the dead girl.

THREE buried Ruth in a lonely graveyard, beneath a pine that dropped its needles softly above her head. Everything was quiet and still. And only a little bubble laughed as it ran over the stones and moss.

After the funeral, Bob and Rita took Zip home with them. And Molly and Jack returned together to her apartment.

"You must be hungry," remarked Jack when they had sat in silence for a long time. "Let's go out somewhere and eat. Make you feel better."

She roused herself then, shaking off the apathetic melancholy that had smothered her all day.

"I thought it would be nice to stay here," she said. "I'd love to cook something, to show you what a smart little wife I'm going to be. What do you feel like, juicy steak, big lamb chops, nice fresh lobster?"

"Fine!" he applauded. "Here, let me pay for the stuff." He tried to put some bills in her hand.

"Oh, this is my party," she decreed. "You bought me a million meals, honey. Now I'm entertaining."

"You're too darn smart," he approved lovingly. "No wonder you don't want to marry me."

"Now Molly," he protested, "you can't buy the groceries when I'm around."

He took her hand, and forced a note between her fingers. "You may be rolling in wealth, but you can't buy your old beau his groceries. Say, Molly, how much do you suppose I've saved since I've been in New York?" He grinned ruefully. "Honest there's no such thing as saving."

"Oh, I don't know. Five hundred?" she guessed.

"A hundred and twenty," he confessed.

"That's exactly what Claudia Cabot's wedding bouquet cost," remarked Molly.

Jack flushed. But he did not add that he had also met the last installment on the white and shining little diamond that was lost in the mud and slime of the pond in the Gardens. Molly, he reflected, seemed to have forgotten. She was bustling about prettily. Heaping cushions on the sofa for his comfort. Drawing up a lamp and a smoking stand.

"THERE!" she said. "The magazines are on the floor, and I've some new books on the lowest shelf. They come into the office, to be reviewed, and I've been begging them to let me do some reviewing myself. Next Saturday I'm to have a column on the book page."

"You're too darn smart," he reproved lovingly. "No wonder you don't want to marry me."

"But I do!" she cried, and kissed him swiftly.

She surveyed the luxury of her little apartment complacently.

"And I love nice things!" she breathed. "Really Jack, I couldn't bear to be poor. Could you? It's too severe a strain on love, I think. You see I know lots more about life and love than I used to."

"You and Life!" he bantered. "Run along, child, and buy your banquet."

First she went to the market on the corner. A pound and half of sirloin, with the bone cut out—Jack must be starved. Mushrooms and tomatoes, and some big Bermuda onions.

There was a man standing on the corner, when Molly left the store. She had noticed him before, when she came out of the apartment. A short, dark, dirty-looking person, with pock marks on his face.

On the corner was a woman's exchange, where they sold little warm rolls, and delicious sweets. Molly seldom went there, since fresh bread and pastries, as everybody knows, are awfully fattening.

"I'll tell Jack I made them myself," she thought. "He'll never know the difference."

Smiling, she hurried up the street. The dirty-looking person snatched generously, and trotted along. "Now I'll get some flowers for the table," she decided. "It will be nice to have everything very companionish."

The man with the pock marks was surely following her! Out of the corner of her eye, she saw him shift his position, lounging awkwardly, his hands in his pockets. She darted into a drug store and slipped into a telephone booth near the door. From there she could watch through the window. She opened her bag, and pretended to be fumbling for change.

... ..

THE man had stopped stupidly, and was looking about. Yes, surely he was following her. For the moment he seemed to have lost her.

"The telephone apartment," she thought, "and ask Jack to come and meet me."

She found a nickel and dropped it in the slot. But when the operator said, "Number please," she hung up the receiver. She had remembered an old serial movie called "Perils of Pauline," that pictured the lurid and impossible exploits of a girl reporter.

"I'm acting like a girl in a movie," she told herself sternly. "It's broad daylight, and there's nothing to be afraid of. That man's just feeble-minded."

He had turned now, and was walking back toward the apartment, peering from left to right, like a silly person.

Molly left the drug store, and hurried toward the florist's, deciding to return on the farther side of the street. If the man had not passed the apartment by that time, she would run as fast as she could. Then surely she would have gained the entrance before he could approach her.

"But of course I'm being idiotic," she reasoned. "He won't try to speak to me, I know. And, even if he should, it wouldn't hurt me any. Probably he's a bothead."

(Hophead was a word Molly had recently added to her vocabulary. It was one of the words that made her think she was learning a great deal about life.)

She chose her flowers, thinking of her color scheme. She would use her green linen cover, that showed off the buttercup yellow china so effectively. Callenulas with magnonette would be lovely in her low black bowl. Besides, she could scarcely stand the odor of roses or carnations today. They were so fearfully funeral. She wondered if the smell of them would always remind her of Ruth, and that ghastly brown-earth grave.

"Never mind doing them up," she told the florist. "I can carry them that way."

She shifted the boxes, and took the nosegay in her hand.

Down the street lingered the short, sinister figure. Now Molly was thoroughly frightened. She returned to the flower shop, determined to call Jack. But the telephone was out of order. She thought of asking the salesman if he would walk down the street with her. But in a second she had discarded the

Talks To Parents

ON THEIR HONOR
By ALICE JUDSON PEALE

The boys had built themselves a camp down in the hollow, alongside the brook. Regularly they slept there and cooked their suppers and breakfasts in the fireplace which they had made of stones. They were gloriously happy in their freedom.

But mother heard tales of their staying up 'til all hours and she worried lest they should not be getting the quota of sleep which is necessary for growing boys. Their bedtime was 9 and apparently they were staying up until after 10 almost every night.

"You've been getting to bed pretty late haven't you," she said.

"Kind of. We don't notice much."

"Well, it seems to me that if we allow you to camp out, you ought to agree to get your usual sleep. You don't want me coming down to put you to bed, do you? If you don't it's only fair that you should get yourselves to bed by 9. Will you promise to do that?"

The boys stalled. "Yes, but sometimes the clock might be slow and sometimes we might be late over at Bill's. If we are late just once in a while, does that count?"

"You know what I mean by getting to bed regularly. Do you want to promise or don't you?"

"Yes, but how will you know when we get to bed?"

"I won't. I'll take your word for it."

"All right. We promise."

It is a good idea to take your child's word. The child of 10 or more will keep such a promise, if you have given him a chance to make it of his own free will.

If you trust him enough to put him on his honor he will almost surely live up to your faith in him. Try it and see how it works.

Mitchell's Formal Opening Attracts Many Last Night

More than 1,000 visitors, including a large number from neighboring towns, inspected the beautifully appointed new quarters of Mitchell's store in the recently completed Smith building, corner of Foster avenue and Russell street, as Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Mitchell and members of their staff held open house.

All departments of the store, as well as the beauty parlor on the mezzanine floor, were on dress parade, so to speak, with a wealth of autumn fashions on display. Jack Hunter, interior decorator, planned the special window displays and additional ornamental notes for the evening.

The visitors were greeted by Dr. and Mrs. Mitchell and their daughter, Miss Ruth Anne, and the following of the staff: Mrs. B. J. Renshaw, Mrs. George Gill, Mrs. Joe Langford, Mrs. Marion Derwester, Mrs. Mary Westley, Miss Lillian Newton, Miss Mary Jo Harmon, Miss Esther Stalder, and S. G. Suratt. Music was furnished by an orchestra. Mr. Hunter, wearing an evening gown or shell-pink taffeta, furnished the surprise and amusement of the evening. He served punch to the visitors as they were leaving.

Mr. and Mrs. P. T. McNamara spent yesterday in Amarillo.

Hollywood Sights and Sounds

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—This is a tale of dressing-rooms, with the moral, if any, this: "Greater love hath no man."

Bebe Daniels, while a Paramount star, built herself a swanky dressing room-bungalow on the Lasky lot. Then Bebe's contract was not renewed, and Bebe, maybe with a laugh up her sleeve, figuratively leaped the back fence and landed on the R-K-O lot as a singing, dancing, acting brilliant.

Before she left Lasky's she sold her bungalow to Richard Dix. Ere long Dix, his contract also unrenewed by Paramount, followed her over the fence.

Now at R-K-O young Hugh Trevor had been acting famously. He was the first player under long-term contract by Radio after the passing of its predecessor, F. B. O. The Radio powers called Hugh aside one day and told him how pleased they were with him. He was to have leads in their talkies, and a young man in that position really needed a dressing room befitting his rank.

So they renovated the quarters occupied by the late Fred Thompson, western star, and turned them over to Hughie. Rest rooms, a shower that worked, space a-plenty. Fine, thought Hughie, and moved in.

AND OUT—

Well, when Bebe jumped the fence they gave her the rooms once held by Gloria Swanson, the best on the lot. But when Dix was signed as a star also, R-K-O was faced with a problem. There were no available rooms large enough for a big star. Somebody would have to move. Somebody was Hughie. Hughie moved.

But does Hughie Trevor mind? Well, all he is in pictures today he attributes to Dix, his pal. Dix helped him to become an actor, an ambition he had cherished since childhood. When he was struggling in the insurance business in New York, Dix aided him financially. Dix also got him his movie opportunity.

So Hughie has vacated, and cheerfully. And "greater love hath no man"—not in Hollywood.

AT RANDOM

Universal contributes "The Drake Murder Case" to the already well-stocked talkie library of all-courtroom dramas. . . . There are a few scenes over which the judge does not preside, however. . . . And the late Gladys Brockwell, fatally injured recently in an automobile wreck, makes an auspicious screen farewell in the leading role.

Norman "Chubby" Chasey (no kin to Lon) has placed Joe "Fatty" Cobb in "Our Gang" comedies. "Chubby" came from Baltimore, and "Fatty," growing up, went out. . . . George Lewis, "Collegians series" hero, and Dorothy Gulliver, his leading lady, both have risen to feature-length pictures. . . . Different ones, too. Jiggs, Hollywood's talking dog, has two words in his vocabulary. . . . "Mama" and "Hamburger."

BORGER MEN INJURED

WHEN TRUCK OVERTURNED
Elmer Lane and C. P. Storey, both of Borger, are in Pampa hospital recovering from painful injuries suffered last night when the truck they were driving overturned five miles out of Pampa on the Mobette road. Storey sustained a fractured shoulder, a broken rib and minor bruises. Lane also suffered a broken rib, bruises and scalp wounds. The vehicle overturned as it was rounding a curve in the highway.

SKELLYTOWN GIRL BURIED

Funeral services for Miss Vergil Hill, 18, of Skellytown were held at White Deer today where she was buried in the White Deer cemetery. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Hill of Skellytown. Malone Funeral Parlor was in charge of the body.
