US, Egypt Announce Nuclear Power Sale

JEDDAH, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — President Nixon, fresh from a triumphant Egyptian visit ending with a U.S. promise to sell Cairo nuclear technology for peaceful purposes, was welcomed to oil-rich Saudi Arabia today by thousands of Arabs.

The crowds that lined the three-mile motorcade route from the airport to the royal guest house overlooking the Red Sea where Nixon will reside during his 22-hour stay were considerably smaller than the estimated 5.5 million to 7 million who swarmed after him during three days in Egypt.

But he was greeted warmly by King Faisal—the man who initiated the oil embargo against the United States last winter—and Arabs dressed in flowing white robes lined the streets.

Nixon, the first U.S. President to visit Saudi Arabia, was spending the second leg of his five-nation "journey for peace" at the bustling sea port because Faisal is residing at his summer palace in the relatively cool mountain resort of Taif, 50 miles inland. A state dinner was scheduled later tonight.

One of Nixon's last acts in Cairo was signing the joint communique with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat that promised the United States would sell Egypt nuclear reactor technology and atomic fuel to help the country meet its power needs. Even as he met with Sadat, the Egyptian crowds outside continued their constant chant of "Nixon...Nixon."

"Unquestionably this will help Nixon in the United States," said Nixon's chief of staff, Alexander M. Haig, when asked to comment on the tumultous Egyptian reception and Watergate reaction back home.

U.S. officials in Washington said the United States has been discussing the same sort of a nuclear technology sale to Israel.

The reception in Saudi Arabia was lower key than that in Egypt. Faisal took Nixon into the royal reception lounge at the airport for the traditional cup of coffee before heading for the guest house.

Among the Saudi officials at the airport was Prince Fahd Ben Abdel Aziz, the second deputy premier who led a Saudi delegation to Washington earlier this month for two days of talks with Nixon and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. The talks launched a multimillion dollar plan for SaudiAmerican economic cooperation.

Jeddah Radio welcomed Nixon today, stressing what Sadat had told him in Egypt— that a solution to the Palestinian problem was needed before there could be a lasting peace in the Middle East. "We also hope that America will always stand by the side of what is right and just," it said in a statement.

Nixon's visit will be taken up mostly with private talks with Faisal and there will little of the public appearances that marked his Egyptian trip, like his trip earlier today to the pyramids.

At one point in his motorcade back from the pyramids, Nixon waded into the throngs for the first time to shake hands with blind children who had gathered a band to serenade him. Secret Service men finally persuaded him to return to the car.

King Faisal had American flags and posters of Nixon placed along the President's three-mile motorcade route in Saudi Arabia—the nation that led the Arab oil embargo against the United States last winter.

The U.S.-Egypt accord signed after the final Nixon-Sadat meeting provided for the sale of nuclear reactor technology and atomic fuel to meet Egypt's power needs of the 1980s; development of a joint group working in scientific fields—including space; and major U.S. economic aid including an expected $2 billion in private American investment.

It also endorsed the existing policy of settling the Arab-Israeli conflict on the basis of U.N. Security Council resolutions, taking "into due account the legitimate interests of all the peoples in the Middle East, including the Palestinian people and the right of existence of all states in the area."

But it was the nuclear portion of the agreement that raised the first criticism. Moshe Dayan, former Israeli defense minister, said in an American television interview he was suspect of that section.

Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said the White House expected no protests when Nixon visits Israel Sunday and said any suggestions giving nuclear power to the Egyptians could lead to the production of nuclear weapons was "erroneous."

He insisted the material would be sold under the strictest safeguards. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said the United States has similar agreements for peaceful nuclear use with 30 to 50 other countries and this was "a normal international agreement with safeguards."

Nixon stopped the limousine he and Sadat were driving in and despite frowns from the security officers — American and Egyptian alike—he got out of the car and waded into the crowd for the first time since his arrival.

OVER WIRETAPS

Senate Majority Shows Confidence In Kissinger

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A majority of the U.S. Senate has expressed confidence in Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger in the wiretap controversy, and prosecutors told Congress they found nothing to indicate criminal conduct on his part.

Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., said 52 sernators have signed a resolution calling Kissinger's integrity and veracity "above reproach."

The office of Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski informed the Senate Foreign Relations Committee it had found no incriminating information concerning Kissinger in the course of its general Watergate investigations. It gave the assurance in response to an inquiry from the committee, a source told UPI.

Kissinger has threatened to resign unless he is cleared of any wrongdoing in the wiretapping of 13 former aides and four newsmen during 1969-71. The Foreign Relations Committee has agreed at Kissinger's request to reopen hearings on the subject.

Wiretap Allegations

The Washington Post reported in Friday editions that Kissinger also has asked the State Department's legal adviser, Carlyle E. Maw, to conduct his own investigation of the wiretap allegations.

Kissinger has denied he initiated the taps to find the source of White House leaks of foreign policy information and documents. He told the Foreign Relatons Committee only last week that he merely supplied the names of those he thought may be responsible for the leaks.

Kissinger said he believed the wiretaps were "perfectly legal and proper" and in line with protecting national security information.

But leaked documents — generally reported to have come from the House Judiciary Committee, which is conducting the impeachment inquiry — conflicted with Kissinger's story of his role in the wiretap program.

Foreign Relations Committee Chairman J. William Fulbright is seeking copies of those documents from the Justice Department and Watergate Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski.

The Justice Department, through Deputy Attorney General Lawrence Silberman, officially expressed "concern" to the House Judiciary Committee Thursday over the leaks.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield and Republican leader Hugh Scott both said such wiretapping may be necessary in certain instances when used to protect national security.

House GOP leader John J. Rhodes also said he believed the wiretaps were "justified for reasons of national security."

Scott, in a Senate speech, excoriated the media for reporting the leaked documents concerning Kissinger's role in the wiretap activities.

"People who thought they had a big story have gone too far," Scott said. "Let's not continue to hound, harass and pursue the secretary of state as he pursues the foreign policy of the United States."

Scott called the news media performance on the Kissinger story "a disgrace." Assistant Senate GOP leader Robert Griffin said it was tantamount to "McCarthyism."

Jury Acquits Patrolman, Angry Black Youths Riot

NEW YORK (UPI) — Groups of black youths, apparently angered over the acquittal of patrolmen Thomas Shea who had been accused of slaying a 10-year-old boy, smashed store windows and hurled rocks at passing motorists for several hours Thursday.

Fred Cummings, a community worker who has lived for 38 years in the Queens area where both the slaying and Thursday's violence occurrred, said the youths were angry and frustrated over the jury verdict Wednesday, which found Shea, who is white, innocent in the shooting death of the young black boy, Clifford Glover.

Officer Joseph Michel, 31, was hospitalized with a broken back after he tried to break up a gang of youths who invaded a department store.

One youth was arrested for the assault on Michel and at least four other youths were also taken into custody on charges of disorderly conduct, police said.

Three other policemen, including a captain, and at least six civilians received minor injuries.

Shea was the first policeman in the city's history to be charged with murder in the line of duty.

A second such indictment was handed up Thursday by a Brooklyn grand jury charging a white police officer in the murder of a 23-year-old black college student.

Brooklyn District Attorney Eugene Gold announced the indictment of William Walker, 24, of Elmont, N.Y., for the murder on April 9, 1973 of John Brabham, then a Kingsborough Community College student.

Gold said the indictment against Walker was voted by a grand jury two weeks ago, but the announcement was delayed to avoid prejudicing the jury in the murder trial of Shea.

Gold said the grand jury voted to indict Walker after two fellow officers testified that Walker carried a toy cap pistol similar to one allegedly found near Brabham's body.

Walker reportedly told the grand jury that he chased Brabham and shouted "Freeze!" but that Brabham wheeled around and pointed what appeared to be a handgun at the policeman.

HARRIS FIRM

Poll Indicating Majority Wants Nixon Impeached

NEW YORK (UPI) — For the first time, more than half of those surveyed in the Harris poll say they believe President Nixon should be impeached and removed from office.

The Louis Harris firm said Thursday 52 per cent of the 1,413 persons polled said the President should be convicted, 35 per cent said he should not and 13 per cent had no opinion. The text of the question was: "All in all, do you think President Nixon should or should not be impeached by Congress and removed from office?"

The figures in the previous survey, in early May, were 49 per cent for conviction, 41 against, and 13 per cent not sure. In March, 43 per cent were for impeachment, 41 per cent against, and 16 per cent not sure.

"The public has its own deliberate speed in making up its mind," the pollsters concluded, "and it is now evident that on reflection, after the facts ... have been absorbed, this President is now in his worst trouble on the Watergate matter."

The nationwide survey, designed to reach a cross-section of the population, also reported that 73 per cent felt Nixon knew about the attempt to cover up the Watergate affair as it was going on. Seventeen per cent said he did not know, and 10 per cent said they were not sure.

Fourty-eight per cent said Nixon knew about the plans for the break-in at the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee before it happened. Thirty-seven said he did not know, and 15 per cent were not sure.

Even if Nixon did not know beforehand, Harris said, 64 per cent felt proof of involvement in the cover-up was sufficient grounds for impeachment. Twenty-eight per cent said it was not, and 8 per cent were not sure.

Israel Fortifying Border Positions

United Press International

Israel fortified positions along the Lebanese border today following a bloody Arab guerrilla suicide attack and the government warned of possible new terrorist raids aimed at disrupting President Nixon's Middle East visit.

An Israeli military spokesman said the armed forces on the Golan Heights today would complete the first stage of troop and weapons pullbacks from land captured from Syria in the 1973 Middle East War.

An Arab guerrilla death squad Thursday attacked the Israeli settlement of Shamir near the Lebanese border in the northern Galilee.

The guerrillas killed three members of the commune, including a woman volunteer worker from New Zealand. One other person was wounded.

Submachine Guns

The four terrorists, identified as members of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command, died when the Israeli settlers ran from their breakfast tables firing submachine guns.

Israel has charged that Palestinian commandos who attacked settlements at Qiryat Shemona, Maalot and Shamir, killing 52 persons in the past three months, crossed into the country from Lebanon.

After the Shamir attack, Israeli Information Minister Aharon Yariv warned the nation that more attacks could be expected during President Nixon's tour of five Middle East nations. Nixon is due in Israel on Sunday and Monday.

In Beirut, the defense ministry said Israeli artillery fired around 80 rounds into a Lebanese frontier village near Shamir in a 30-minute attack Thursday.

"Scores of houses were damaged and planted areas on the outskirts of Ebl Es Saqi were set on fire," the communique said.

The firing was aimed at the eastern and western parts of the hill village of Ebl Es Saqui and the road leading to El Khoreiba village, the ministry said.

Returned Fire

The Lebanese guns returned the fire, driving back Israeli vehicles that crossed the border, the statement said. An Israeli half track, a bulldozer, and a bus were destroyed.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said there was artillery fire from Lebanese territory toward Israeli positions near the border but reported no casualties.

In the nearly forgotten withdrawals from the Golan Heights, an Israeli military spokesman said troops and armor will pull out of the southeastern corner of the bulge they drove into Syria in the 18-day October war.

U.N. peace-keeping troops will move into the sector and the Syrians will be permitted into the territory Saturday morning, the Israeli spokesman said.

Both sides are expected to complete all withdrawals and be behind new lines by June 26.

TO AVOID EPIDEMIC

Immunization Level 'Below Necessary'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Immunization levels against such communicable diseases as polio and measles are below what is medically necessary to protect the public against disease epidemics, the General Accounting Office has told Congress.

This is especially true for children aged 1-4 and for blacks, other minorities and poor people living in central cities, the GAO said in a review of government disease control efforts. The agency monitors government spending for the Congress.

The report said factors contributing to the immunization problem included widespread public belief that polio is no longer a problem, apathy by doctors and public health officials, lack of laws requiring immunization before children can attend school and lack of enforcement of those laws in areas where they exist.

It said 85 per cent of the population should be immunized if epidemics are to be averted, but that 1972 Census Bureau data shows only New England achieved that level for immunization against polio, measles, rubella, diptheria, whooping cough and tetanus.

The GAO report said its review covering nine states generally found disease immunization levels far below what federal and state public health officials consider necessary for protection from epidemics. The states surveyed were Alabama, Colorado, Georgia, Massachusetts, Michigan, Ohio, South Carolina, Tennessee and Texas.

In addition, the report said, incidence of veneral diseases is still rising at alarming and epidemic levels.

This conclusion was affirmed in a separate VD report by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which was highly critical of government and private efforts to control gonorrhea and syphillis. Among the HEW report's conclusions:

—New control measures are necessary if the number of VD cases is to be reduced significantly. About 25,000 cases of syphillis and over 800,000 of gonorrhea were reported last year, with about one-third of the estimated cases treated.

Board Expected To Pick Interim Superintendent

At a special meeting scheduled for 4 p.m. today, the board of trustees of Pampa Independent School District was expected to name an interim superintendent to replace Dr. James F. Malone, who resigned Monday.

The board, meeting at Carver Educational Service Center, has indicated it will go into closed executive session to reach a decision, after which the announcement will be made in open meeting.

Dr. Malone, giving no reason for leaving the post he has held here for the past six years, said earlier this week he would leave Pampa on Thursday "for a few days" but would return to assist the interim superintendent in the transfer of duties.

By mutual agreement between Dr. Malone and the board, Malone is to be paid a lump sum of $10,623.42 by June 30, for termination of his contract as of Dec. 31, 1974. He would leave the system here June 30.

His full contract term would have run until July, 1, 1976.

Possible Arson Suspected In City Hall Fire

Fire and police officials were trying to determine today if a fire that was started in Pampa's City Hall yesterday afternoon was the work of an arsonist or a prankster.

The fire was discovered at 1:55 p.m. by Frank Christian, City Hall maintenance superintendent, when it was reported smoke was coming from the women's restroom on the second floor of City Hall.

The fire had been set in two plastic paper towel dispensers on the concrete walls of the room.

Firemen summoned from Central Fire Station across the street from City Hall soon extinguished the blaze.

Fire Chief Finace Dyer said no damage was done except to the plastic towel dispensers and some smoke damage to the walls.

Chief Dyer said it was believed the fire was set during the 12 to 1 p.m. noon hour when City Hall offices on the second floor are closed.

"As it turned out," Chief Dyer said, "it was discovered in time to prevent the fire from igniting the walls and perhaps causing more serious damage."

Had that happened, the fire could have climbed to the third floor, damaged the data processing department directly overhead and, as one city official put it, could have possibly engulfed the entire building.

ON AMENDMENTS

Delegate Claims Daniel Has Too Much Power

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Constitutional Convention rules give President Price Daniel Jr., too much power in determining how many delegates need vote for third reading amendments to the new charter in order for them to be adopted, Rep. Billy Williamson, D-Tyler contends.

Daniel said the convention can make nonsubstantive amendments to the 11 constitutional articles being considered on third reading by a simply majority vote. But it would take a two-thirds majority to make any substantive changes, he said.

Williamson Thursday questioned who would determine which amendments were substantive and which were not. Daniel said the rules give him that sole authority.

"This is an important decision for the convention because the chairman can disenfranchise a number of delegates," Williamson said, "and I do not think the chair should be confronted with this awesome responsibility."

He indicated he might challenge Daniel's rulings on some of the proposed amendments.

But neither Williamson nor any of the other delegates questioned Daniel Thursday as the convention quickly approved three of the 11 articles.

There was only token opposition to the final passage of the articles dealing with voter qualifications and methods of amending the constitution and no opposition at all to re-enactment of the bill of rights and preamble.

The delegates adopted one amendment by Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, that would give the legislature a second chance at getting some of the revision work put into effect even if voters turn down the new constitution Nov. 5 — the date picked by the style and drafting committee to submit the charter.

Jones' amendment, which would go into the old constitution if it is approved and the new charter defeated, would permit future legislatures to propose article by article rewrites of the constitution.

After voting on the three articles Thursday, the convention recessed for the weekend to allow committees to consider re-wording of the eight remaining articles by the Style and Drafting Committee.

Yemen Armed Forces Impose Coup Curfew

BEIRUT (UPI) — The armed forces imposed a state of emergency and an all-night curfew in Yemen today after ousting the nation's president in an apparently bloodless coup.

The Middle East News Agency said a seven-man military command council Thursday replaced President Abdel Rahman Al Iryani because of a deteriorating political situation, administrative slackness and bureaucratic corruption.

The radio station in the capital of Sana said an emergency cabinet meeting had been called today by Premier Hassan Makki, who kept his post after the forced resignations of Al Iryani and the president of parliament, Sheik Abdallah Beh Huessein al Ahbar.

Airports were closed and an overnight curfew enforced. The command appealed to citizens to cooperate to preserve order and stability following the coup. No mention was made of Al Iryani's whereabouts.

The takeover followed several years of skirmishing in the barren desert state between the armed forces and left-wing tribesmen who want union with Marxist Southern Yemen.

The leader of the seven-man military junta, Col. Ibrahim Mohammad Al Hamidi, was formerly deputy commander of the Yemeni armed forces.

Hamidi was a lieutenant when Marshall Abdullah Sallal overthrew Yemen's king, known as the Imam, in 1962.

AT CONVENTION

Libertarian Party Predicting Growth

IRVING, Tex. (UPI) — Libertarian Party members, holding their third annual convention, say they could become the nation's third largest political organization after the 1976 presidential elections.

But the task is made no smaller by convincing persons that Libertarian philosophy — which mixes American Party ideas on economic issues and Peoples Party platforms on civil liberties — can really work.

The Libertarian Party is opposed to taxation, conscription, busing, censorship, alliances with foreign dictatorships and "victimless crimes" laws.

Libertarians on the other hand favor a return to the gold standard, a repeal of all legal tender laws, resistance to gun registration laws, a repeal of compulsory national census, repeal of minimum wage laws and repeal of laws restricting voluntary birth control or abortion within the first hundred days.

"We would like to see all the bureaucratic structure drastically reduced," Toni Nathan, party vice presidential candidate in 1972, said Thursday.

"One of the most serious problems today is the proliferation of power into administrative agencies, and where the power is delegated there is no accountability," she said.

"Let's change the direction of more and more legislation and more and more rules imposed over the people and reverse the direction to go back to more freedom of the people by taking back the power we've given politicians," she said. "Let's keep our own money and make our own decisions. It's cheaper and it's better."

Mona Lisa Pregnant?

LONDON (UPI) — A retired London physician said it is his considered medical opinion that the Mona Lisa was pregnant.

Dr. Kenneth D. Keale, a lifelong student of Leonardo da Vinci and his work, wrote in Nursing Times magazine, the Mona Lisa "probably portrays a pregnant woman whose smile betrays her secret satisfaction and whose full rounded face and figure and beautiful unjewelled hands reveal to a diagnostic eye the endocrine and electrolyte changes of pregnancy."

"It is important to realize that Leonardo was not sexually attracted to women, although he had a great fascination for their maternal characteristics," Keale said.

County Okays Center Funds

During Thursday's meeting of Gray County Commissioners Court, approval was given for allocation of $500 for improvements to the Community Day Care Center.

The money is to come from revenue sharing funds.

The court also approved several items of a routine nature (see Thursday's edition of the Pampa Daily News) then discussed several matters which had been added as a supplement to the regular agenda. No final action was taken on these supplemental items.

These included a request by the Texas Highway Department for review of a Draft Environmental statement for a portion of Highway 40, and a request by the sheriff's department for application to Criminal Justice Council for a planning grant for jail and courthouse improvements.

Also considered was a request from the District Judge for application to the Criminal Justice Council for adult probation program; and a discussion of an independent audit of county offices by Wayne Brown.

Gesell Orders New Trial Date For Ehrlichman

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell today ordered John D. Erhlichman, formerly President's Nixon's No. 2 aide, and three other men to trial in the Ellsberg break-in case on June 26.

Gesell said the White House had complied with federal rules on producing evidence that Ehrlichman had said was necessary to his defense. White House reluctance to produce that evidence had threatened to delay Ehrlichman's trial perhaps until next year.

Gesell also rejected attempts by William S. Frates, Erhlichman's chief lawyer, to put Erhlichman on the stand today to testify that there still were White House documents needed for the defense.

The trial of Erhlichman, the remaining chief defendant in the case, had been scheduled for Monday. But in roller coaster developments during the week, it appeared the trial might be delayed until next year because of White House refusal to turn over Erhlichman's old files.

James D. St. Clair, President Nixon's chief Watergate lawyer, told Gesell during the brief hearing that the White House would turn over memos from June 19, 1971 and June 22, 1971—the documents Ehrlichman's lawyer said two days ago the White House was witholding that were needed for the defense.

St. Clair also said he would complete by Monday a personal examination of a large national security file and a small file about leaks. He said that when Nixon returns from the Middle East next week, he would give the President any material from those files he believes should not be turned over because of content.

Erhlichman has been inspecting his old files at the White House this week, while Frates has been in an adjacent room.

Frates disagreed that he had all the White House documents he needs and he sought to put Ehrlichman in the witness chair to testify. Gesell said:

"I will not hear Ehrlichman. Brady (the federal agent dealing with goverment production of evidence for criminal defendants) has been satisfied."

RADICALS BLAMED

Gulf Oil Building Hit By Explosion

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The "Weather Underground," in an attack against Gulf Oil Corp.'s "racial policies in Africa," claimed responsibility Thursday for a bomb explosion which demolished the 29th floor of the Gulf Building.

It was the second blast in 15 days attributed to the group, a remnant of the radical "Weathermen" student group which caused chaos on the country's campuses in the late 1960s.

The blast, which occurred at 9:41 p.m., 17 minutes after a Gulf switchboard operator received a bomb threat, ripped a gaping hole in the floor, blew out all windows at that level, destroyed several offices rented to physicians, and blew out huge chunks of marble from the building's exterior.

No injuries were reported in the nearly vacant building which houses Gulf's international headquarters. Police said they presumed the device was placed under a chair near the elevator doors.

Another Bomb Threat

Police said they investigated another bomb threat at 11:30 p.m. at the Chamber of Commerce building, but found no device. There was no evidence that the events were related, police said.

The FBI said an eight-page document left in a phone booth described the blast as "an attack on Gulf's racial policies in Africa."

"Gulf finances the Portuguese colonial war against the people of Angola," the document said.

The document was discovered after a woman who identified herself as a member of the "Weather Underground" telephoned a news agency to say where it could be found and warn about the bomb.

Gulf Vice President Paul Sheldon called the document "nonsense."

No Control

"Our position is that we do not become involved in the political situation of any country in the world and have no control over how a government spends the money it collects in taxes."

The 44-story Gulf Building has an unusually tight security system which Sheldon said was set up four years ago during the height of bomb threats by Weathermen and other radical groups.

FOR BEEF INDUSTRY

Hightower Advises Import Restrictions

AUSTIN — Sen. Jack Hightower (D-Vernon), Democratic nominee for 13th District Congressman, said Thursday that beef import restrictions must be improved immediately to prevent further economic loss to the domestic livestock industry.

"President Nixon is now in the Middle East and I commend his efforts to bring peace to that part of the world," Hightower said. "But there is a pressing problem in this country that his administration can no longer ignore — and that problem is the disastrous economic depression which has hit our livestock industry.

"The United States is the only market in the world open to imports of fresh, frozen and chilled beef. The President has lifted all restrictions on imports to increase meat supplies, but now other countries are dumping their beef surpluses on us while American producers suffer tremendous losses. Panhandle cattle feeders are losing between $100 and $200 per animal and the total loss for the past eight months exceeds a billion dollars.

"The President has the authority to limit meat imports after giving consideration to the economic well-being of the domestic livestock industry. How bad does it have to get before he decides to act?"

Hightower said a bill introduced by Congressman Bob Price to establish a loan-guarantee fund solves only part of the problem.

"It will help the banks make loans to cattlemen, but it will not keep the livestock industry from sliding deeper into economic depression," he said.

"This is another case of paralysis in Washington — too little and too late. The Administration made a mistake last year when it singled out the livestock industry for price controls.

"Now it is compounding its mistake by refusing to act against beef imports on the theory that they are protecting the consumer from higher prices. They are not really protecting the consumer — instead they are damaging one of the most important segments of the economy."

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Jody and her Women's Libbers try to equate women and men. But their anatomy, plus glandular secretions, color their outlook differently. For "structure" determines "function," so heed the sex differences below.

CASE A-659: Jody R., aged 27, is a staunch Women's Libber.

"Dr. Crane," she protested, "you take the view that women are very different creatures than are men.

"But if babies were allowed to grow up on a tropical island without any adults to 'brainwash' their attitudes, I feel sure the so-called sex differences would not exist.

"It's the pressure of adults which makes little girls think they should play with dolls while boys are given boxing gloves or footballs.

"Weren't the famous Amazon women warlike and good fighters?"

FICTION VS. FACT

Those Amazon women were fictional creatures, like Daedalus and Icarus, so we must stick to reality!

Our anatomy, plus hormonal secretions, color our thinking and largely determine our activity.

Thus, the "normal" woman differs remarkably from the "normal" man, as follows:

(1) Her anatomy is geared for child rearing whereas the man's is primarily for child procreation.

So she has an innate tendency to "mother" defensely things, whether they be human babies or kittens, injured birds or flowers and goldfish.

Is it the old bachelor or the spinster who thus keeps a cat, plus a parakeet, goldfish and geraniums?

(2) Since structure determines function, then a girl's stomach appetite even differs from that of the male.

For women have a higher percentage of fat vs. protein; hence, they aren't as eager for beefsteak as are the male sex.

Even the old Nursery Rime says Jackie Spratt would eat no fat, while his wife would eat no lean!

Indirectly, this explains why the male gives his girl friend a box of candy on Valentine's Day, for girls crave more carbohydrates and fats.

(3) Girls are not as combative as men and also show much less desire for contact sports, such as boxing or football.

This is due in part to the pugnacious effect of the male sexual secretions, plus the softer, curvacious bodies of the females.

Among lower animals, it is also the male who seems to relish fighting, whether among dogs, bulls or stallions.

(4) Mature adult women still remain emotionally more childlike than do men, as shown by their breaking into tears, being more easily distracted by non-essentials and desire to be cuddled by a man instead of cuddling.

Their greater nearness to children in emotional outlook is a wonderful advantage in rearing their own kiddies, plus teaching and counseling youth.

(5) Being smaller, females also are quicker and more nimble fingered, which helps explain why they relish sewing, embroidering, etc.

(6) Girls are more interested in persons while boys are more concerned with things.

Thus, girls will spend hours with a bubble bath, skin lotions, rouge, lipstick, mascara, eye shadow and false lashes to attract attention.

Meanwhile, the male is more interested in winning ball games or business deals or tinkering with machines.

(7) Girls are more concerned with externals, so they even wrap their gifts neatly and artistically while the usual boy would be more inclined to hand it over in a brown paper sack!

For further basic differences, send for my booklet "Sex Differences Between Men and Women," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of The Worry Clinic, Hopkins Bldg., Mellott, Indiana 47968. Enclose a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

TROUBLESOME

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The most troublesome weeds for gardeners in California, according to the state Department of Food and Agriculture, are Bermuda grass, crabgrass, oxalis, spurge, bur clover, dandelions, morning glory and chickweed.

Women Over 65--Hurry

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Women over 65 years old interested in finding husbands had better get a move on because the pickings are going to get decidedly slimmer, according to a study by researchers at the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research.

Kathleen Luft and Dianne Priddy, research associates, report there are only 72 males for every 100 females over 65 at present.

"Projections to the year 1990 indicate that the shortage of males in this age segment will become more acute, with the number of men dropping to about 65 for every 100 women," the researchers said.

The women reported the overall number of older Texans is increasing, however. In 1970 8.9 per cent of the Texas population was over 65 and by 1980 the total is expected to exceed 1.2 million or 10 per cent of the state's population.

The researchers cited tremendous advances in medical technology over the past 25 years with the greater longevity Texans are experiencing.

They also noted a growing trend for people to retire at age 55.

"If the mass of American workers do choose this earlier retirement, in the year 2020 one person in four will be of retirement status," they said. Census figures for 1970 indicate the proportion of the U.S. population over 55 is 18.9 per cent — up dramatically from the 9.4 per cent level in 1900.

The researchers said figures compiled by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service indicate 71.8 per cent of the 992,059 Texans over 65 at present live in urbanized areas.

Other data indicate a substantial decline in the proportion of the elderly in the central cities, however, with an increasing number moving to suburbs.

One third of Texas' elderly have annual incomes below the poverty level.

The researchers reported nursing home and convalescent facilities for the aged has increased from 913 homes with beds for 45,622 in 1967 to 927 homes with 77,199 beds in 1973.

Education Today

By ROBERTA GOOTMAN

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — For 6-year-old Dennis the closed circuit television camera in his classroom brought a whole new world—a world he can finally see.

Dennis, whose vision is 20-1200, and five other multiply handicapped children at Madison Elementary School are now seeing their lessons on television cameras that can enlarge objects five times.

For the first time, Dennis can see his teacher's face—and his own. Through a zoom lens, her image is projected onto the screen at his desk. And books he could never read before because he could not see the small print are now opening a whole new world for him.

Three-Year Study

The closed circuit system (CCTV) was developed by Dr. Samuel M. Genesky, a mathematician whose eyesight is so poor he is classified as legally blind. It is part of a three-year study by the Rand Corp. on learning problems of the partially sighted.

The CCTV consists of three student stations and one teacher station, all equipped with a zoom lens, lighted moveable projection platforms and a television viewing screen.

Another camera located on the ceiling can be focused on the teacher and can pan the entire length of a chalkboard. A master control panel allows the teacher to project a variety of images on her students' screens.

The children can watch what the teacher is doing, they can superimpose their work over hers, see other children's work or have a split image view of their work and the teacher's at the same time.

Can Reverse Image

Unlike other optical magnification devices, the CCTV can also reverse the image contrast so there is a white image on a black background. The brightness magnification and contrast is also individually controlled to suit each student's needs.

"The thing I like best about the system," said teacher Jadeane von der Lieth, "is that it brings me in close contact with the child. Also, the child gets immediate reinforcement, sees immediate results of his work and can share his work with the other students."

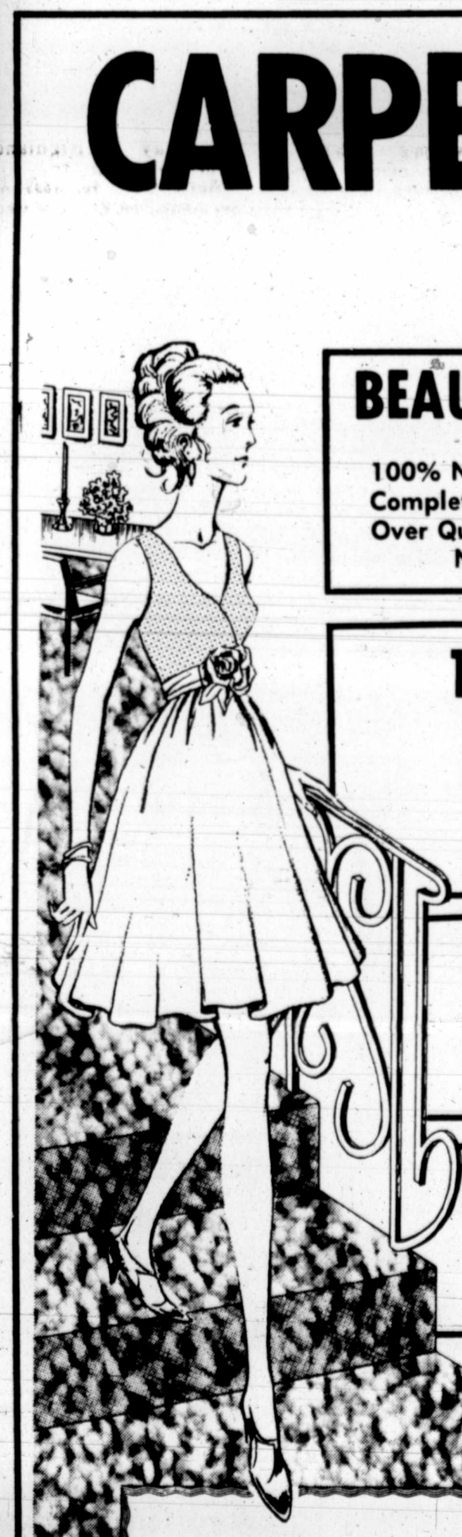

Although primarily designed to aid the visually handicapped child, the CCTV has also proven highly successful with the educable mentally retarded. Mrs. von der Lieth said there seems to be less distraction for the students.

"The system seems to create a separate, private work area and the child's attention is focused on the screen, not the surroundings. There is less distraction because they have direct visual contact with the viewer."

Mrs. von der Lieth explained there is a time lag between the time the teacher writes something on the board and the time the child actually sees it. "This undermines the learning process," she said.

Children And Death

COLLEGE STATION — A child's understanding of death reflects his parents' experiences and attitudes concerning life and death, one authority said this week.

Knowledge of death actually depends on a child's age and maturity, Ilene Carrington, family life education specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, added.

"Before age five, a child doesn't realize death is irreversible. At this level of understanding, he sees death as something gradual or temporary."

The specialist said parents further confuse such children with explanations like, "Grandmother will be gone a long time," or "Granddad is sleeping."

"Children five - to nine - years - old, on the other hand, view death as a separate personality. Although accepting its existence, they don't fully understand its finality.

"After age nine, children can understand that death — cessation of physical life — is an inevitable, universal experience."

Miss Carrington suggested permitting — even encouraging — a child past the age of seven to attend funerals.

Since he's part of the family, he needs an opportunity to participate in this sad, significant family experience, she explained.

She may be family, but three's a crowd

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I think my new husband [age 39] has more than a fatherly interest in my daughter. Lisa is 22. I am 45, but I look about 35.

It all started when I invited Lisa to come along on our honeymoon to make her feel like "one of the family." She is my only child and we've always been very close. She has been away at college, but now that she's graduated she is home, living with us.

Shortly after our honeymoon trip, my husband started taking Lisa out for lunch and buying her new clothes. Then I noticed that Lisa had lost interest in friends her own age. Maybe it's just my imagination, but I've seen some of the looks that have passed between them and I think something is going on.

I don't want to make a fool of myself, but I'd like to clear the air. I don't even know how to bring up the subject. Should I question her? Or him? What if all of this is just in my mind?

NOT SURE

DEAR NOT: If you're not sure, don't question anybody. Keep your eyes open. If there is something to your suspicions, it will come out. In the meantime, you might ask Lisa if she ever considered having her own pad. Three's a crowd.

DEAR ABBY: This will probably throw you. My husband is the best! He's a good provider, we have a nice home, he loves our kids, and spends his time and money on the house and family. The problem is MY frustrations. Our sexual relationship has dwindled to practically nothing.

He gives me the usual goodbye and hello kisses, but they're completely without feeling. He never really holds me, or caresses me. He kisses me like I was his sister.

Should the honeymoon be over after 12 years? Maybe I'm oversexed, but I don't think so. I'd be happy with a once-a-week treat, but it doesn't happen. I'm no sex-bomb, so don't suggest I meet him at the door in a see-through apron.

I mentioned a counselor once, but he couldn't understand why he needed one. Sometimes I'm so frustrated I could scream. I don't want to hurt his masculine ego. Must I learn to live with this, or is there a solution?

FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Don't worry about hurting his masculine ego. Tell him what you've told me. But also ask him if he thinks you're doing your part in the "treat" department.

DEAR ABBY: I met a man four months ago and I fell —but hard. He guessed my age to be "about 65," but I am 72. I guessed his age to be "about 70," but I really don't know how old he is. He acts crazy about me and is giving me a rush. There are a lot of younger women after him and I am afraid if I tell him my right age I will lose him.

If we should ever go for a marriage license do I have to give my right age? Please help me, Abby. I want this man. He makes me feel like sweet 16.

IN LOVE IN L. A.

DEAR IN: Forget about age. Yours and his. And don't mention it unless he does. Then it's truth and consequences.

DEAR ABBY: I've heard of compulsive gamblers, compulsive talkers and compulsive overeaters, but is there such a thing as a compulsive worker? I think I'm one.

LOVES TO WORK

Breakfast Menu Is Important

NEW YORK (UPI) — A bad breakfast is better than no breakfast at all, says nutritionist Margaret D. Simko.

But a good breakfast doesn't have to be routine bacon and eggs or even cereal.

Mrs. Simko, chairman of the home economics department of New York University, believes in matching breakfast menu to life style. If your teen-agers want to start their day with a meal of cold chicken or muffins and cheese, let them.

Or satisfy a child's sweet tooth with rice pudding, baked custard, oatmeal cookies with raisins or steamed rice with brown sugar and milk. A grilled cheese or peanut butter sandwich is good, too. Milk or citrus juice is optional.

Any of these makes a better starter than instant breakfast mix, diet drink, toaster pastries or enriched sweet rolls, Mrs. Simko said in an interview.

"Even though they contain 'all nutrients,' they often don't really equate breakfast. Some mixes are high in fat or very sweet."

They also can be boring. They lack the satisfaction of chewing. And they develop bad food habits by giving children the idea that all fat and sweet foods are good for them, Mrs. Simko said.

"But they generally are a better choice than no breakfast, and they must be evaluated in terms of individual needs and intake for the whole day.

"Nutritional deficiencies don't arise from one meal missed, but from poor food habits continued over a period of time."

She said the ideal breakfast provides one-fourth to one-third of a person's daily nutrients — protein, fat, carbohydrates, vitamins and minerals.

If breakfast calories come entirely from carbohydrate foods like Danish pastries, coffee cake, doughnuts or sweet rolls, they're empty calories.

And if you skip breakfast, you may be so hungry you choose unwisely later in the day, said Mrs. Simko.

"The mid-morning coffee and doughnut break usually stems from missing breakfast."

The National Safety Council reports the nation's accident death toll dropped 1 per cent in 1973 and gives part of the credit to the gasoline shortage.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, JUNE 15

Your birthday today: Your life this coming year is full of sweeping changes caused by conditions beyond your individual control, many of them beneficial, all of them requiring greater confirmation of your faith, larger responsibility. Relationships endure somehow, and late in the year become intense. Today's natives concentrate readily on some specialty, usually succeed at it.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: See today as primarily a vacation, at least in mood. Abstain from career or business decisions. Tonight you can think about how to collect what should be yours.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: With such lively happenings, interesting changes, accept rush and confusion as an inevitable side effect. Make corrections late this evening or tomorrow. No hasty reactions!

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Friends now expect you to go along with them on practically any project regardless of its setup. If it involves serious investment on your part, it's just as well you stay out.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Press for progress on business and career matters. People of influence can be helpful. Make a definite effort to smooth out any family differences, revise budgets.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Personal surprises are the natural order of the day. Spring a few of your own as conditions warrant. Bring home symbolic gifts to supplement declarations of your feelings.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Regular weekend chores are amenable to rapid progress, savings in time and money, if you will proceed early and with vigor. Fresh contacts are available, should be cultivated.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: You begin to climb upward from the bottom of an activity cycle. The world is a strenuous but rewarding proving ground. Take stock of what you are.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: The spirit moves you now to many deeds and expressions you had never considered until lately. Just be sure you follow reasonable ways and think through your projects ahead of time.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: You can't avoid extra work today. You must compensate for special advantage you've enjoyed lately or else help those who have gone the limit to help you.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Gather loose ends, tidy up. There will be extra attention, exposure to public opinion, perhaps an evaluation of your recent ventures. You can improve your lot now. Try!

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: You are probably responsible for many of today's small upsets, so take them all in stride. It's a long day—pause for a brief rest occasionally.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: People are critical, but there's no point in adding to the tension by complaints. Actually many happy developments are possible when you're headed in a healthy direction.

The Consumer Alert

by John L. Hill
Attorney General

AUSTIN — Many people who plan to move do so in the summer. If you're one of those who will be packing up and heading for new territory soon, be sure you select a reliable moving company to transport your belongings.

Because whether it's a cut-glass punch bowl or a well-used tricycle, your household goods probably would be hard to replace.

Attorneys in our Consumer Protection Division warn that some "hot haulers," or illegal moving companies, are in operation and that dealing with them could result in some problems.

For one thing, many of the illegal movers cannot or do not offer proper insurance for your goods.

For another thing, consumers who unwittingly deal with a bootleg moving company could possibly be liable for prosecution under the Motor Carrier Act, enforced by the Texas Department of Public Safety.

There are three classes of moving companies: (1) unregulated ones that can move goods from their base city to another; (2) companies licensed by the Texas Railroad Commission to move goods anywhere within the State; and (3) companies licensed by the Interstate Commerce Commission to move goods between states.

Spokesmen for the Railroad Commission say that many interstate movers have Texas representatives who are also licensed an intrastate movers themselves.

If you plan to move from Wichita Falls to El Paso, for example, will need a company licensed by the Railroad Commission as an intrastate carrier. Picking a company from the telephone book, as many people do, is no guarantee that you'll get a properly licensed mover.

The best way is to check with the Railroad Commission to see if the movers you are interest in are listed as certified companies or as designated agents for such companies.

In order for a company to be certified, it must prove the need for increased service. Public hearings are held and, if the need is demonstrated, a permit can be granted by the Railroad Commission.

Specialized carriers holding certificates or permits for the transportation of household goods must adhere to certain requirements.

If a mover says offhandedly, "I'll move you to Dallas for $200," beware. He's not a licensed mover. If he were, he would hve to take a look at your goods, give you a written estimate of the moving cost, weigh his truck both before and after loading your goods, and check the weight against a fixed tariff rate to determine the actual cost.

He would also have to notify you if the cost exceeded the original estimate by 10 percent of $25, whichever is greater. And, in addition, he would have to inventory all of your belongings and give you a copy of the inventory.

Certified intrastate moving companies must also be bonded, carry insurance, pay a licensing fee, and pay transportation taxes. Individuals employing such movers can also take out additional insurance on their goods, if desired.

If you want to lease a truck and move your own goods, be sure you choose a reputable company for that, too. There are statutes that prhibit the leasing of a truck by one individual to another for a move if requirements regarding such things as proper insurance have not been met.

Any questions about regulations involving a moving comapny can be answered by the Railroad Commission, the Department of Public Safety, or the Attorney General's Transporation Divison. For assistance with other consumer problems, call our Consumer Protection Division, your district or county attorney, or your local Better Business Bureau.

ABC Program Feature Kissinger

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — ABC News had a fabulous scoop to conclude: "Kissinger: An Action Biography," Friday at 9:30 p.m. EDT.

The secretary of state would announce before ABC cameras that he woould resign if he felt President Nixon was manipulating foreign policy to take the heat off Watergate.

This was news, an exclusive disclosure by Kissinger Saturday just before he left Washington for the Middle East with President Nixon..

ABC could pat itself on the back and coast for congratulations.

Unfortunately, Kissinger upstaged the show.

On Tuesday, he announced in Austria he would resign unless cleared of Watergate innuendoes and wire tap charges.

ABC had been scooped by history.

Nobel Prize

Nevertheless, ABC has come up with an illuminating portrait of Kissinger — Dr. Strangelove turned Nobel prize-winner.

During the 60-minute program Kissinger reminisces about his early years as a refugee from Nazi Germany and is followed by ABC cameras as he handles problems in Washington and around the world. In the concluding section, Kissinger tells ABC correspondents Howard K. Smith and Ted Koppel he would resign.

What is crucial about the biography is that Kissinger emerges as a man — warts and all — and not a demigod.

Far too many times, these televised biographies turn out to be a public relations man's dream — a slick, well-packaged production that praises the subject while hiding his faults.

Koppel, ABC's diplomatic correspondent, who wrote and co-produced the program, constantly weaves Kissinger's strengths — Vietnam and the Middle East — with his criticisms.

In one scene, we have a State Department associate criticize Kissinger's morality, which he believes is no better than that of others in the Nixon administration.

In another scene, we see Kissinger praised by the president of Egypt, Anwar Sadat.

Watergate Controversy

Koppel also doesn't sidestep Kissinger's constant involvement in the Watergate controversy.

The only drawback appears to be Koppel's acceptance of Kissinger's methods. Koppel, who accompanied Kissinger on his Middle East peace shuttles, seems to believe that diplomatic successes can justify a lack of morality.

Although Koppel would deny this, he and the other correspondents who systematically cover Kissinger seem to have accepted Kissinger's approach to diplomacy. Some of the men are now questioning this and are attacking the secretary as his possible role in Watergate deepens. The program was coproduced by Stan Opotowski under the supervision of Av Weston, ABC news vice president for television documentaries

DENVER (UPI) — A new aseptic canning process announced by a California company makes it possible to pack fruit and vegetables safely in 55 gallon drums. A drum is comparable to 75 No. 10 cans of the sort used for institutional feeding. The process permits canning in natural juices without syrups, according to the School Foodservice Journal here.

White Elephants

Let's talk about "white elephants;" not the pale, albinic animal venerated in India, but the money - losing projects politicians and bureaucrats love to dream up for the taxpayers to support which, once created, never seem to die.

Coming immediately to mind, of course, if "Foreign Aid" which costs the U.S. taxpayer billions of dollars every year. Ask almost anyone in the street and you will be told that this socialistic project should be either eliminated entirely or drastically curtailed. Yet, despite a widespread awareness, even by some politicians, that "Foreign Aid" is furthering socialism all over the world, is causing us to be almost universally hated and, in short, is a monumental flop, this project goes on and on, seemingly with a life of its own. Why? The answer is simple. Thousands upon thousands of politicians and bureaucrats have come to have a vested interest in the continuance of this "white elephant" and vigorously oppose any effort to kill it or reduce its spending of taxpayer funds; this together with the reluctance of the powers - that - be to admit that they made a mistake in the first place.

Closer to home is the Post Office, now called the U.S. Postal Service. Year after year this federal "white elephant" continues to run up billion dollar deficits for the taxpayers to pay while the quality of its "service" progressively goes down hill. Still, it refuses to die or even, like MacArthur's "old soldier," fade away. Why? Again, the answer is the same. Vested interests which fight, almost with one voice, for the perpetuation of this grossly inefficient taxpayer plundering entity.

Still closer to home is the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission (PRPC) at the local level. Created a few years ago, this new government, superimposed upon all the rest, has grown like the proverbial weed steadily gaining in size, power, and expense to the taxpayers. And this despite a growing realization that PRPC is steadily drawing power to itself from city and county governments, and methodically extending federal control over local affairs. Why? Again, vested interests.

"But," it may be asked, "does private enterprise never create 'white elephants' of its own?"

Of course, it does. Witness the Ford Motor Company's late Edsel; plus literally thousands of business failures every year.

But the difference is this:

No private enterprise can sustain a "white elephant" for long. When the consuming public turns thumbs down on a market place "white elephant" that is its death knell. Private enterprise "white elephants" have a way of eliminating themselves.

While bureaucratic "white elephants," with the coercive power of the tax gun at their command, go on and on, steadily growing in expense and arrogance.

Given this tendency of governmental "white elephants" to perpetuate themselves, what is the answer, then?

The only real answre we know of is: Don't create them in the first place!

INSIDE WASHINGTON

Impeachment Question May Go To Full House

By ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON — There may be a spectacular surprise in the House Judiciary Committee's snail - paced impeachment ruminations.

The Republicans may take the issue directly to the full House.

In a dramatic move, they may abruptly cut short the committee's months - long politics - loaded dawdling and put squarely before the House a "privileged motion" to impeach President Nixon.

Such a motion would be of the "highest privilege" and command immediate consideration.

It would require only a majority vote to approve or reject.

Direct action on it could be blocked by an intervening motion to "table."

Republican strategists anticipate that such a diversory maneuver would unquestionably be resorted to by Democrats to circumvent being freed to immediately go on record on impeachemt.

Whatever the outcome, Republicans figure they would stand to gain.

If the Democrats succeed in "tabling," they would be open to a drumfire of scathing charges of "crassly playing politics with impeachment." If "tabling" is defeated, there would be an immediate "yes or no" showdown on impeachment — thus forthwith completely putting an end to the Judiciary Committee's protracted procedural and legalistic politicking and hemming and hawing.

What's Behind It

Purpose of the possible spectacular GOP move is to torpedo a strongly suspected secret Democratic timetable and plan. The Democrats wish to prolong the Judiciary Committee's wideranging probing and ferreting in an effort to produce a "bill of impeachment" (indictment) based on numerous charges and allegations.

That's the inside reason leftist Democratic committeemen are so clamorous about digging into a lot of matters besides Watergate — the bombing of Cambodia, impounding excessive funds voted by Congress, junking the scandal - smeared Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO), breaking into the office of Ellsberg's psychiatrist, civil - rights, solicitation of campaign contributions, etc.

Vehement aim of the militants is to submit to the House a "bill of impeachment" comprising a dozen or more accusations against the President — on the theory this would greatly strengthen their drive to "get" him.

Under this time - consuming strategy, it would be well into August, if not later, before the impeachment issue could be laid before the House. That means the House would be battling over it loudly and rancorously during the fall state and congressional elections — definitely a break for the Democrats.

The President's supporters are no loss determined to block that — by endeavoring to drastically limit the charges against the President to one or two growing out of Watergate; or failing that, to possibly resort to the spectacular move of going over the head of the Judiciary Committee and laying the issue directly before the House.

This view is held by nine (of the 17) Republican committeemen consistently backing the President — Reps. Edward Hutchinson, Mich., Charles Wiggins, Calif., David Dennis, Ind., Wiley Mayne, Iowa, Trent Lott, Miss., Harold Froehlich, Wis., Carlos Moorhead, Calif., Joseph Maraziti, N.J., Delbert Latta, Ohio.

They plan to force the Senate to act on impeachment this year instead of going over to next year when, very probably, anticipated changes will not be in the President's interest.

From indications, most of the new senators will be Democrats and less likely to be favorable to the President.

Senate Democratic leaders are making no bones they hope to stall an impeachment "trail" until the convening of the new Congress next year; in effect, they have publicly admitted that.

They claim their purpose in such a delay is to "lean over backward in being fair to the President." It's a safe bet they are also thinking politically.

Raw Partisanship

Graphically illustrative of the degree of Democratic partisanship in the Judiciary Committee's proceedings is the following revealing incident at a closed door session the other day:

The committee was listening to a staff report on charges involving large - scale contributions by milk producers to the 1972 Nixon campaign. Representative Wiley Mayne, R-Iowa, asked why the findings were limited to the GOP.

"Certainly it is no secret the Democrats also got a lot of money from this source," he pointed out. "In fact, only this morning it was reported that a number of members of this committee got campaign contributions from dairymen. If we are going into this matter, why limit the inquire solely to Republicans? I fail to understand why there should be such glariong partisanship."

Mayne was brusquely silenced by a vehement bang of the gavel.

"The gentleman is out of order," barked Rep. Harold Donohue, Mass., second ranking Democrat presiding in the absence of Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J.

"What do you mean out of order?" demanded Mayne indignantly. "What is out of order about asking for fair play and impartiality? I raised a legitimate question and I demand an answer."

"The gentleman's time has expired," retorted Donohue curtly, again loudly banging the gavel. "Next speaker!"

And that was that for Mayne's protest.

Under the committee's rules members, in order of seniority, are allowed only a few minutes to have the floor.

INSIDE LABOR

Rodino And Campaign Funds

By VICTOR RIESEL

WASHINGTON — Some sage should seek the elusive answer to the question of when Teamsters' union political contributions are clean and when dirty. This is complex. There are some vocal members of the House impeachment committee who believe that the Brotherhood's donations to Dick Nixon's campaign are tainted.

Yet the House Judiciary Committee chairman, Peter W. Rodino Jr., accepted $1,623, at least, from the truck drivers union for his 1972 campaign. His headquarters also accepted funds from hard-hat unions and others who've been championing the President all through this grim era.

This is traditional. Yet no one impugns the chairman. No one has for years. No one should. He is clean.

He also is even - handed. Traditionally he has accepted campaingn funs from the truck owners' association.

Since many of his favorite unions which have contributed tens of thousands of dollars to his campaigns (ever since 1946 when he ran against the late Fred Hartley, Jr., of Taft - Hartley Act fame) are headquartered in his home state of New Jersey, his home county of Essex and his 10th Congressional District, they're worth a fast glance.

Some of them are rotten. Muscled. One of them, which I won't name here because it's been reformed recently, was the operating headquarters of a brutal thug now dong 10 years in the federal penitentiary. It also was the headquarters for one of the oldest and toughest mobs in the history of extortion.

Don't blame Pete Rodino. Blame the system. Many of these unions also have backed other successful candidates. So the question jack - boxes up — what if the Republican Party controlled the Judiciary Committee and probed Rodino and other New Jersey Congressmen in both Houses?

They would discover that even the uncorruptible federal judge Herbert stern, until recently a legendary implacable and successful racket - smashing U.S. prosecuting attorney in New Jersey, had given Rodino the famed Stern imprimatur of political honesty.

But, looking backwards, with the full wisdom of hindsight, the opposition also would find some weird circumstantial evidence. It might even startle Peter Rodino himself.

There is for example, a self - confessed Mafia money pusher, handler of millions of dollars of real and faked stolen securities, who also made a good dollar as a professional leg breaker. He ran a labor relations "service" in Newark. And he did got to know, he swears under oath, one Dennis Carey, then Democratic "boss" of Essex County (which Rodino represents).

The Mafia money runner, 51 - year - old Louis Pasquale Mastriana, wound up in Trenton State Prison some years ago.

When Mastriana was released, he testified not too long ago, he wanted to set up shop in Miami. So he sought out Carey, whom he had gotten to know through the late Bronx (N.Y.) Democratic county boss Ed Flynn, maker of American Presidents. Mastriana told Carey, whom the Mafiosi days he knew "very well," what was troubling him now that he was footloose.

"I went in to see Mr. Carey about a problem I was having trying to get back to Miami," Mastriana said. "He interceded to Pete Rodino (sic) for me and Rodino got a hold of Congressman Fascell (of Florida's 15th District which includes Dade County) and in the interim Mr. Carey said to me, 'When you go down to Miami look up Elliot Roosevelt.'"

Mastriana then swears he was hired by Elliot Roosevelt as a labor relations consultant.

Probably Rodino never heard of Louis Mastriana. It's the nature of the business known as "congressman" to handle phone calls and favors for friends and constituents.

But it's all there on the record. Such Senators as Charles Percy, Henry Jackson and Edward Gurney heard it form the amazing Mastriana, self - confessed front man for such Dons as Carlo Gambino, Angelo Bruno, and friends.

Further, Mastriana is more easily available than the elusive answer to the question of congressional conduct and its reform. Mastriana now is doing eight years. He was in the federal penitentiary at Texarkana, Tex., when last heard from.

If what he testified to is true — and he did so under grilling from none other than Scoop Jackson's staff — then this swiftly forgotten leg - breaker has ripped open the whole seething mess of the perversion of government of the noblesse oblige of the favor - exchange on the Hill, of the interlocking of clean and respectable men with a nether world crawling with Mastrianas.

Perhaps something worthwhile can come out of the inquisition.

ALL THAT GLITTERS

No More Mr. Nice Guy, Jerry

By VIC GOLD

WASHINGTON — If ever there was a working politician who ought to be thinking, "From now on, no more Mr. Nice Guy," it's our friendly neighborhood Vice President, Jerry Ford.

Readers may recall that several times in past months this column has proffered unsolicited counsel to Nice Guy Jerry on the care and feeding of his political reputation.

For example, not long after Ford was nominated to succeed Spiro Agnew, we cautioned the incoming Veep against the risks of limb - climbing around the White House grounds. This is a venerable game played by White House staff members: a Presidential speechwriter puts the Vice President out on a verbal limb where he hangs until, the following day, the limb is sawed off by one of the resident tree - surgeons — Haig, Ziegler or Warren.

Well, as recent reverberations on the White House lawn and a bruised vice presidential image have borne out, Nice Guy Jerry ignored our counsel. But a dedicated unsolicited adviser doesn't give up easily.

Here then, for the benefit of the Only Vice President We've Got, another memorandum, on how to eliminate that up - and - down, zig - and - zag feeling you've had lately.

Face it, Jerry, your current problems are the result of wanting to make everybody happy. Everybody, in this case, being the White House, your old congressional colleagues, Republican party workers, folds who want the President to come clean with the Watergate investigators, folks who want the Watergate investigators to stop asking the President to come clean — and, of course, the news media.

In this regard, Jerry, you've had dozens of news conferences, sometimes two a day. And interviews by the bushel basket. Oh, yes, the news media's extremely happy with your open door — or as it were, mouth — policy. But on the other hand, ther's that latest poll showing you 11 percentage points behind Ted Kennedy, a man you were running ahead of five months ago.

How can this drop in popularity be explained? Easy. You see, to make the news - media happy these days, a working Republican politician has to keep talking about Watergate. So one day you say something to make the White House happy. And the next day you come back with something to placate friends who want you to be your own man.

A whiplash dilemma, but one you can solve. Are you ready for the unsolicited advice? Here it is then: just stop talking about Watergate.

First of all, it's an overcrowded conversational field, and as Vice President — pardon my bluntness — you really don't have much to contribute to the conversation in a substantive way. Why not leave it to the President's staff and lawyers, along with Jaworski, Rodino and those news leakers from the House Judiciary and Senate Watergate committees, to keep the media happy?

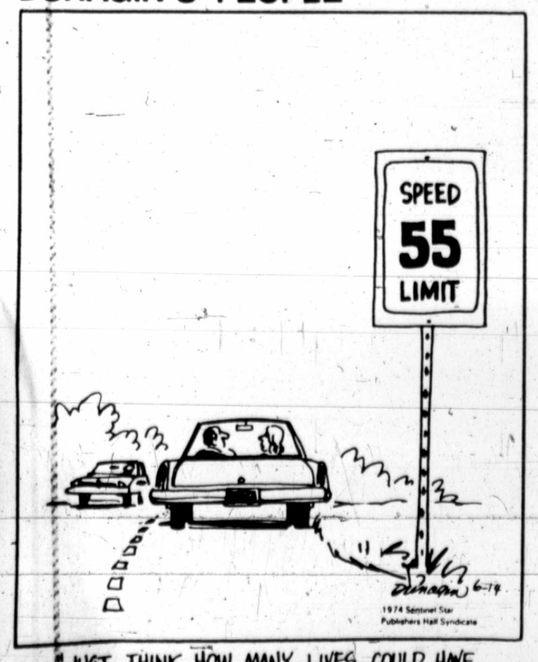

Silence, as Harry Byrd the Elder used to intone, can be golden. In your position, it would be 14-karat. Translated into action, when asked about Watergate, you should reply: "This is a matter pending in the courts and Congress. Until they resolve it, I, as Vice President, have nothing further to say."

Makes sense. After all, haven't you been claiming that too much Watergate emphasis is distracting the country form other important issues? Okay, start practicing what you preach. As Vice President, concentrate your speeches nad news conferences on issures that could use more, not less, public discussion.

True, this may make some people mad. White House speechwriters and some newsmen won't like it, for sure. But it's a course both legally and politically proper. In brief, Jerry, leave Watergate to the Watergaters. If being your own man means being a heel at times, just remember that poll. Nice guys, it seems finish second in the Gallups.

After the GOP defeat in Michigan, candidates are asking Ford not to campaign for them.

Judge Gesell urged an end to public talks about Dean's credibility. That's like trying to gag Martha Mitchell.

Representative Mills may retire because of his physical ailment. For years he kept carrying the committee on his back.

Martha Mitchell said social life in Washington was "deadly dull." And that was when the White House was swinging.

Service stations used to give away glasses to sell more gas. Now they break them to prevent cars from driving in.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle,

H. L. Hunt Writes

WORLD ANTI-COMMUNIST LEAGUE

The World Anti - Communist League recently held its seventh annual convention. The excellent speeches at this convention deserve far more attention than the U.S. press gave them.

Admiral John McCain Jr., former commander in chief of U.S. naval forces in the Pacific and Indian oceans, summarized the gains made by the Soviet Union in vaval strength. Last October, for example, during the Arab war against Israel, the U.S. Mediterranean fleet consisted of 60 ships, while the Soviet Union had 90 warships, including some capable of launching 300-mile surface - to - surface missiles.

Congressman Richard Ichord summarized the gains realized by the communists in the new Soviet-U.S. policy of "detente." The Kremlin has profited from the wheat deal, from an Export - Import Bank loan of $500 million at 6 per cent interest, and from the favorable provisions of the SALT I treaty.

The Anti-Communist League bestowed three "Freedom Fighter" awards. One went to exiled Russian Nobel Prize - winner Alexander Solzhenitsyn. A second was awarded to Hungarian Cardinal Josef Mindszenty, who has uncompromisingly opposed communism in spite of persecution. The third was received by Walentyn Moroz of the Ukraine, an historian imprisoned for criticizing the Soviet regime. He has written to the people in the West: "Tell them only this: I am kept with the insane, they are creating hell for me. They are trying to drive me to the insanity of those with whom they locked me up. I cannot breathe." If government officials were as staunchly anti-communist as the members of the League, the Kremlin would be much less able to create this kind of hell for men who speak the truth.

tips for consumers from your BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU™

At last you've found your new home. It's what youu've always dreamed of, and it looks like you'll be able to get your mortgage at a decent rate.

Then, a few days before you sign the final papers, a letter comes from the broker. Inside, you find the statement of estimated closing costs.

Suddenly, you're staggered by items such as "points," which cost $860, "finder's fee" at $430, "appraisal fee," for $75, "legal fees," costing $250, plus a few hundred extra for mortgage insurance, transfer fees and title search.

You realize that your dreamhouse is costing a nightmarish $1,800 or so more than you thought — and you have three days to raise the cash.

Calling the broker to protest, you find out that these additional costs are "not unusual." "Didn't we tell you about the closing costs?" the broker asks. "We assumed you knew about that sort of thing."

The broker is correct in saying that closing costs are not unusual, but wrong in "assuming" that the buyer would know about them. Closing a house sale can cost several hundred, even a few thousand.

There is no set rule on which items you pay or how much they may cost. In some cases the developer, the seller, the mortgage lender or the real estate broker will pay some of the closing costs. Although the broker should inform you about such costs before you sign the sales agreement, it is your responsibility to ask about them.

COST FACTORS

Here are some costs to watch out for. Some of these may be negotiable, which means you may save some money if you are alert and have a good attorney.

Points — A "point" is 1 per cent of the mortgage. If, for example, you are borrowing form a savings and loan, and they offer you a $45,000 mortgage at 9 percent plus two points, you will pay them $900 at the closing plus 9 percent interest on the unpaid balance for the life of the mortgage.

Finder's fees — This is money paid the real estate broker for finding your mortgage money. It's usually 1 per cent of the mortgage, but can be as high as 2 per cent or 3 per cent, depending on your agreement with the broker. This has nothing to do wit what the lender charges.

Appraisal fee — Some brokers and lenders will charge for appraisal service, some will not. Make sure you're not paying for more than one appraisal.

Legal fees — It's important to have an attorney represent you in the transaction to protect your interests. A person should have a lawyer not associated with the lender.

Local bar associations will recommend a lawyer if a person doesn't have one. Fees vary and although many communities, counties and states place limits on normal real estate legal fees, be sure to ask the attorney what he will charge.

Remember, the total down payment (less your deposit) plus all closing charges must be paid on the date the purchase is closed. Be sure you have enough money to meet these expenses. If you don't try to postpone the closing and make arrangements with the bank and the broker to borrow additional money.

During the closing exercises, make sure you read or have your attorney explain each document you sign. All promises by the seller, the broker and the mortgage lender must be in writing.

If you don't understand something, ask!!

Keep a copy of every document you sign, even after you receive the final warranty deed to the property. You'll need all those papers for tax purposes, and if you resell the property.

Summer Program To Center On Hyperactivity

LUBBOCK — The fidgety child who can't sit still or pay attention may not be just a "problem child." He may be a child with a very real problem.

The problem may be a learning disability diagnosed as hyperactivity — a disability which can be as frustrating to him as it is to those around him.

Scientists are beginning to understand the hyperactive child, but there still is much to learn, according to Dr. Robert P. Anderson, professor of psychology at Texas Tech University.

Anderson, with Prof. Charles G. Halcomb and a team of graduate students, will work this summer with hyperactive children in efforts to learn more about their behavior. Children are being sought to aid in the research.

Some 40 to 50 hyperactive children being sought should be between the ages of six and 11 and seen as hyperactive by their parents and schools.

The children will be asked to come to the psychological laboratory at Texas Tech for one hour to participate in a vigilance task experiment.

In the experiment, the children will watch for a light to flash. When they see a flash, they will press a button in response. The experiment will test the effects of positive and negative feedback toward the behavior of the hyperactive children.

One group of children will hear a signal when they respond correctly to the flashing light. Another group will hear the feedback signal one out of three times for correct responses.

Other children will hear the signal when they respond incorrectly. One group will be signalled for every incorrect response, another for one out of three incorrect responses and another for two out of three incorrect responses.

A seventh group will not receive any feedback signal no matter how they respond.

According to graduate student Cary Mack, there is evidence that too much positive feedback encourages the hyperactive child to respond without considering why he is responding. This can happen in the classroom as well as in less structured situations.

"While too much negative feedback also encourages undesirable behavior in the hyperactive child, some negative feedback may help the child begin to modify his behavior," Mack said. "We are attempting to discover if a limited amount of either positive or negative feedback can help the hyperactive child become fore selective in his responsiveness."

Eventually the results of this experiment and others conducted by psychologists will be compiled and made available to teachers. The information will enable them to approach the problems of children with learning disabilities with something more firm than random judgment which must be used now.

The experiment will be like a game for the children involved, according to Anderson.

The participating children will be able to tour the psychology laboratories and the animal laboratories during their visit to the Texas Tech campus. Each child will receive a certificate of thanks for his assistance in psychological research.

Parents with children who may be able to aid in the experiment are asked to call Mack at 742-6192.

GARDEN SOYBEANS

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) — While mature dry soybeans are a popular source of protein, green soybeans can be used as a vegetable and grown in a householder's garden, says the University of Illinois College of Agriculture. The beans are higher in calcium and vitamin A than peas and contain vitamin C which is lacking in peas. The plants are droughtresistant, productive and easy to grow. Some varieties are better than others as garden plants.

WT Offers Workshops

AMARILLO — West Texas State University and the PESO Education Service are offering college credit workshops for teachers in area cities this summer.

Previously, all workshops sponsored by WTSU and PESO have been held in Amarillo. A bilingual education class for Hereford area teachers is scheduled June 24-Aug. 2.

The Hereford workshop is designed for teachers of first grade bilingual classes certified by the school district.

"We organize these workshops as they are needed," said Dean Jim Kidd of the WTSU College of Education. "It is part of our Teacher Center effort for the pulic schools."

Approximately 25 teachers are now enrolled in a career education workshop at Pampa, said Kidd, and a workshop on individualized instruction began June 10 in Borger.

Bishop Fitzpatrick To Lead Group To Migrant Workers

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (UPI) — Because of concern for the plight of migrant farmworkers from the Lower Rio Grande Valley, Roman Catholic Bishop John Joseph Fitzpatrick is leading a group of priests, nuns and seminarians on a religious mission to the northern United States this summer.

"The migrants from the Valley still belong to the Diocese of Brownsville," Fitzpatrick said. "No matter how long they work out of the Valley or how far away they are. We feel responsible for them while they are working in the fields in the North."

Fitzpatrick, six priests, eight seminarians and 10 nuns will travel north this summer to Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana, Minnesota, North Dakota, Idaho, Oregon, Washington, Illinois and northern California "to bring the word of God, administer the sacraments to the migrants and offer mass for them."

"I grieve for our people who are forced to work under the unjust conditions in the fields in the North," the bishop said. "Some of our people who have gone north are living in a concentration camp left over from World War II. They live without any heating, one light in a room where the entire family lives. Some of the places where they live were chicken coops during the past winter."

Fitzpatrick's diocese contains the four counties of the fruit and vegetable plush valley at the southern tip of Texas which borders Mexico and is regarded as the biggest jumping off place for migrant farmworkers in the nation.

Reported poor conditions for workers who migrate northward each summer has caused concern for Fitzpatrick, who came from Florida to succeed Humberto Medeiros who was elevated to archbishop of Boston three years ago.

"This hurts me," he said of the living conditions of some migrants. "It should hurt any Catholic who is concerned about life in the United States and the lives of his fellow Christians."

Fitzpatrick said the 24 religious leaders from the Valley would live with the migrants in the North two or three months.

"Our clergy will not be involved so much in social programs as in bringing the sacraments, the word of God, the offering of mass and, more particularly, bringing the interest and concern from the people of the Diocese of Brownsville.

"This is to let them know that we recognize they are still our people and we want to do as much as we can for them," he said.

Nearly every parish in the diocese also has a list of Mexican-American migrants who traveled north and have placed the names on their altars and are praying for them at every mass, the bishop said.

"Perhaps next year we can get some lay people to take their vacation time with the migrant farm workers in the North," Fitzpatrick said.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The second generation of Watergate cases now coming before the courts has focused public attention on the ancient and honorable practice of plea bargaining.

Several of the Watergate coverup defendants have struck such bargains with special prosecutor Leon Jaworski. They agreed to plead guilty to relatively minor charges in exchange for having more serious charges dropped.

I don't doubt that the interests of justice were well served by these settlements. But a couple of them reminded me of the old joke about the Boston Strangler getting the charges against him reduced to "illegal use of hands."

And a couple of others reminded me of an old Robert Benchley short story.

I'm referring to the story about a gangster who stuffed a body into a trunk, pasted a "Fragile—Glass" label on the lid and shipped it out of the country.

False Labels

When the crime was discovered, he was arrested for posting false labels.

Anyway, these reflections started me to musing on what it might have been like if plea bargaining had been used to settle some of the famous cases in history and literature.

Robin Hood, for instance.

The leader of the merry men of Sherwood Forest was wanted on a list of charges as long as a bow string.

Had he been captured, the Sheriff of Nottingham almost certainly would have booked him on a morals charge involving Maid Marian.

In addition, he stood a good chance of being indicted on charges of corrupting a clergyman (Friar Tuck).

But by far the most serious allegation accused him of robbing the rich to give to the poor.

Now suppose the sheriff had gone to Robin Hood's hideout for a plea bargaining session. What sort of deal might they have worked out?

Without A License

My guess is that the sheriff would have dropped the robbery rap and Robin would have pleaded guilty to soliciting charity contributions without a license.

And what of Count Dracula, the fun-loving nobleman who changed into a vampire and flew around Transylvania drawing blood from the necks of sleeping victims?

How might he have paid his debt to society short of having a stake driven through his heart?

Why by appearing before a magistrate and pleading guilty to charges of failing to register for the blood donor drive, that's how.

This brings us to Dr. Jekyll, the beloved scientist who turned himself into the unpopular Mr. Hyde by taking some kind of drug without a presciption.

With plea bargaining, he might have reduced the charge to one count of drug abuse and kept the whole thing out of the newspapers.

RICKY W. FRAZIER

Pampa Native Transferred

Ricky W. Frazier, a Pampa native, of the Exxon Company, USA, has been promoted to supervising engineer and transferred from Midland to Oklahoma City.

Continuing his assignment in the Midcontinent Production Division, he replaces Jack E. Coffman, who has been named Oklahoma City district engineering manager.

In 1967, Frazier joined Exxon USA in Midland. Two years later, he transferred to Andrews and in September, 1973, he was again assigned in the division office at Midland as a senior engineer. He holds a bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering from Texas Tech.

Frazier and his wife, the former Louise Richardson, have two daughters, Lara and Liane, and one son, Rex.

Papayas are very rich in vitamin C. They contain a form of sugar that aids digestion.

Senate Bills Hit Companies

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI)— The Louisiana Senate has approved two bills to prohibit major oil companies from operating service stations in the state and to make it illegal for oil companies to cancel leases with station operators without cause.

Oil companies could keep the stations they currently operate but would be prohibited from acquiring any new stations after Jan. 1, 1976.

The sponsors of the bills said they were the result of complaints from indpendent gas station operators who said the major oil companies were suddenly canceling their leases and converting the stations into company-owned self-service operations.

Both measures go to the Louisiana House for consideration.

Commercials On Police Radio?

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI) — Imagine that you're listening to a police-band receiver. The talks in something that approximates a cross between space jargon and a legal brief. Suddenly he says, "back after this message."

On comes another voice, with a sales pitch.

That's not exactly the way it happens in New Haven, but it's pretty close.

And the New Haven police officials think they probably have a first in the country, with their "quasi-commercials."

New Haven policemen are getting "safety alert reminders" on their squad car radios these days, mixed in among the messages to check out a traffic problem here, a parking violation there, and perhaps a prowler somewhere else.

Actually, no dispatcher delivers a "back with this message" over the air.

Guard Up

But when he pushes the right button on his console, warning tones sound and a recording begins. It may remind officers to search suspects carefully, or to approach a vehicle stopped for a traffic arrest from the passenger side, for safety's sake. The idea is to remind officers to keep their guard up at all times.

Deputy Inspector Harold Berg cites communications theorist Marshal McLuhan as an inspiration for the New Haven "Training on Patrol" program.

"McLuhan indicates that the extension of man's arm was the bow and arrow. In this case, with these tapes, this is an extension of communications — communications that are normally given via the written word. Now, the administration has an opportunity to reach each individual subordinate through the oral word —the spoken tape."

Officers from patrolmen to Chief Biagio DiLieto have already recorded spots and had them broadcast on the New Haven police radio.

Most of the taped messages run 20 to 30 seconds in length.

An Emergency

"We work on three basic channels," Farrell said. "These are played on one channel at a time, guaranteeing the policeman in the field two other channels that they could call in on at any time for an emergency."

Farrell said that feedback from the field has been good.

"We've found in talking to policemen that in many cases they have listened to a message, and within an hour or two later they implemented the message —such things as using the patrol wagon to transport prisoners rather than taking them in in a radio car, or handcuffing a prisoner behind his back instead of in front of him.

The number of illiterate adults in the world increased by 53 million to 785 million between 1960 and 1970, according to the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO).

Pampa, Texas 68th Year Friday, June 14, 1974

LDS MISSIONARIES — Elder Leon Bright, left, of Lewiston, Utah, and Elder Dwaine Navratil, of Raymond, Alberta, Canada, are currently serving as the Pampa area missionaries for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon). Among the subjects they discuss with area residents is the Church's family home evening program, a special night of religious instruction and activity for the family.

Pampa LDS Features "Family Home Evening"

As Father's Day approaches, the thought and concern of many turns to honoring, and expressing their appreciation for their father.

This is a time when wives direct special attention to their husbands, and children take the time to express their love to their dad. Fathers suddenly feel important. And the family grows closer together.

The late Richard L. Evans expressed the sentiments of many when he wrote, "Fathers are for giving a name and a heritage to their children — clean and honorable. Fathers are for long, hard work; mostly their own kind of work. For not being home so much as mother; for seeming to be pretty busy; and for trying to give their children the things their fathers never had "Fathers are for talking with, for encouraging; for putting arms around; for understanding mistakes, but not condoning them; for disciplining when needed then loving all the more; for being strong and forceful, and for being tender and gentle."

Fathers are special! And as family members take the time to express their love for him, the whole family grows closer as a result.

For members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon), however, Father's Day is part of a larger effort throughout the entire year to bring happiness through family love and solidarity.

The Mormons have a program called the "Family Home Evening". The program is designed to strengthen family ties through weekly family meetings. It provides an opportunity for family members to enjoy activities such as singing, praying, discussing the gospel, expressing personal goals and activities, and playing.

Because of the success of this program, it is being shared here in the Pampa area by Elders Dwaine Navratil and Leon Bright, local missionaries for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

They are visiting the members of this community, sharing the program in an effort to strengthen homes, families, and to honor fathers at this special occassion. They can be contacted by calling 665-3044 before 9:30 a.m. or after 9:30 p.m.

Local Church Women Will Attend Meeting

Ten First Christian Church women delegates will be leaving Pampa, June 21, to attend the International Christian Women's Fellowship Quadrennial Assembly in Lafayette, Indiana.

The list includes Mrs. Ruth Alston, Linda Baker, Linda Baumgarner, Lottie Burton, Cindy Dobbins, Mary Maxine Palmer, Jo Ann Peiffer, Jaunita Suttle, Nedra Tinney, and Connie Wheeler.

These ladies will be among some 4,000 women of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) at the Quadrennial Assembly held at Purdue University, June 24-28.

Women will be present at the assembly from some 15 countires. During ecumenical day, June 27, representatives from other Portestant and Catholic churches will participate.

Among key speakers at the event will be Miss Ching-Chee Lee, first woman minister ordained in Hong Kong; Mrs. Clarie Collins Harvey, Jackson, Miss., president of Church Women United; and Mrs. Elspeth Rostow, Austin, Texas, chairman of comparative studies University of Texas.

Theme for the assembly is "God Is! Rejoice," recognizing God's existence and rejoicing in it.

Among special events at the assembly will be an original drama, "Mary's Quest," and celebration of the 100th anniversary of organized women's work among Disciples.

Hobart Bible School Will Run June 17-21

The members of Hobart Baptist Church have invited all youth to attend their bible school, which will be in session from June 17 through June 21.

Enrollment is scheduled for Saturday with all pupils bringing sack lunches. Sno-cones will be served.

The enrollment session will open at 10 a.m., June 15. Training sessions of next week are planned to feature plenty of projects in a relaxed, informal atmosphere.

Two Churches Plan Joint VBS Sessions

The Rev. Bobby L. Stalcup, Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, 525 N. Gray, has chosen "The Spirit of Everyday" as his sermon title this Sunday at the 9:30 worship hour. Assisting Rev. Stalcup will be the Ruling Elder, Ray Duncan.

Special music will be a duet entitled "Thanks Be To God," sung by Peggy Reeves and Elaine Whitsell. They will be accompanied on the organ by the church organist, Doris Goad.

Vacation Bible School will be held jointly with St. Mathews Episcopal Church, starting Monday, June 17, to run through Friday, June 21. This will be held at St. Mathews Parish Hall from 9:00-11:45 a.m., for ages 3 through 6th grade. There will be installation of Church School workers this Sunday during the worship hour.

There will be a called session meeting on Wednesday, June 19 at 7:00 p.m. in the West Room. On Thursday night at 7:30 p.m., Dr. Stalcup will continue his class on the study of Romans in Fellowship Hall. The public is invited to join in service of worship.

Fritch Evangelist Will Speak Here

The Pampa Chapter of Full Gospel Business Mens' Fellowship will have Charles Stafford, evengelist, of Fritch, as the speaker for a meeting to be held on Saturday, June 15, at 7:30 p.m. at Stephen F. Austin School.

Stafford has shared the "good news" about Jesus with people of all ages in several states. He was recently a featured speaker at Christ for the Nations Institute.

Many people in our area have heard his teaching in various prayer groups.

The public is invited to attend the non-denominational meeting; to enjoy the worship, fellowship and teaching.

Special music will be provided by Elmo Hudgins. No admission charge.

Pentacostal Church Features 'Trusting'

The United Pentecostal Church continues their studies in wisdom and worship, taken from the books of Job, Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and the Song of Solomon.

This Sundays lesson title "Job In Victory," is a wonderful lesson in trusting and faith in Jesus Crist, and of reaping rewards.

First Baptist Announces Schedules For Coming Weeks' Church Affairs

Vacation Bible School begins Monday, June 17, in First Baptist Church, Pampa. The five - day school begins at 8:45 each morning and closes at 11:45, for three year olds through grade 6. Two buses will run each morning; and all children, whether members of First Baptist or not, are invited to ride the buses and attend Vacation Bible School.

Teen-Time will be for the young people, ages 12-18, and will meet nightly at 7:00. This will be a time of Bible study, missionary education, and many many creative experiences.

This has been a very popular school for young people, and George Warren, Minister of Education and director of the Vacation Bible School, extends an invitation for the young people of Pampa to come to the night program.

The Pastor, Claude Cone, will preach for all three services Sunday. His sermon topic for the 8:30 and 11:00 a.m. services is, "The Man and His Marriage," with the text taken from I Peter 3:7. His 7:00 p.m. sermon subject will be a continuance of the series of sermons on "Prophecy" with this sermon entitled, "That Great Getting Up Morning." He has chosen his text from I Corinthians 15:12-26.

John Glover, Minister of Music, will give direction to the music Sunday. The youth choir will occupy the choir loft in the 8:30 morning worship and sing, "O Jesus Loves Me" for the special music.

Glover will sing a solo "A Life that Sings" in the 11:00 a.m. service. The Junior High choir will be featured in the 7:00 p.m. service as they sing the anthem, "I Will Sing the Wondrous Story."

George Smith, church training director, notes that a drug seminar has been arranged for the summer church training program for 7th, 8th, and 9th graders. This group will meet at 6:00 each Sunday evening, and will be led by Bob Muns. From time to time he will be assisted by teachers in the departments, and special guest speakers. Muns was formerly with the Parks Service in Washington, D.C. and is well trained in this field.

The citizens of Pampa are invited to attend any or all of the services of Pampa where "The Lord of All Is Lord of Our All."

The 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. services are broadcast from radio station KPDN, and the 8:30 and11 a.m. and 7 p.m. services are televised from Channel 9, Cable TV.

FATHERHOOD

The Father chooses the way his family will go.

To Noah God said: "Come thou and all thy house (family) into the ark; for thee I have seen righteous before me in this generation." (Genesis 7:1)

It was the righteousness of Noah that provided protection for his whole household. After the flood, God sought a special kind of man to become the father of a new nation, in fact, many nations. God found that man in Abraham of whom He said: "For I know him, that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the Lord—" (Genesis 18:19)

Of all the man on earth God chose Abraham because He knew He could count on him to train and discipline his children and his household in the way of the Lord.

In sad contrast to Abraham stands his nephew, Lot, who chose to lead his family into the degraded city of Sodom. (Genesis 13:10-13). Lot led his family into Sodom, but the never led them out again! When God's judgement fell upon Sodom, Lot lost his entire family, except two daughters. (Genesis 19:15-26)

Fathers, don't be as foolish as Lot! You may lead your family into sin. Then the day may come when you tire of sin and turn back to God. But remember! Your family may not be willing to follow you any longer. You who led them into "Sodom" may never be able to lead them out again.

What happens when Fathers neglect to learn and fail to teach God's law to their children? The answer is found in Hosea 4:6: "—seeing thou has forgotten the law of thy God, I will also forget thy children."

Why is our land today filled with "God-forgotten" children? Because their fathers have forgotten the law of God!

Bible prophecy depicts, just preceding the end of this age, divided, strife - torn homes, with parents and children alienated from each other. We see this condition today.

However, God promises to send a ministry that will "turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers" (Malachi 4:5-6). This, too, is happening today as fathers are being reconciled to God, then to their families.

Fathers: not because of who you are but because of your office of fatherhood, God has promised to save all your household if you will lead the way: (Acts 16:30-31) — (what a responsibility you have!)

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved, — and thy house (family)."

Father — You choose the way your family will go!

Cairo Welcome Lacked Security

CAIRO (UPI) — The most astonishing thing about the President's massive welcome in Cairo was the lack of security —no barricades, no soldiers — in a country which only months ago considered the United States its most bitter enemy second only to Israel.

The huge crowds thronging the streets of the Egyptian capital showed incredible enthusiasm for an American president whose popularity has fallen to near-record lows in his own country.

But even more astounding was the unusual absence of security precautions for the visiting presidential entourage. Wherever President Nixon went, huge crowds flowed into the streets, greeting him with smiles and emotional cheers.

Nothing Like This

One observer who has traveled with presidents for many years said that he had seen nothing like this since John F. Kennedy went to Berlin in 1963.

As Nixon wound his way down broad boulevards shaded by blossoming flame trees, crowds stood five and six deep for miles chanting, cheering, clapping, dancing and thrusting out their fingers in the "V" for peace sign.

Often the Egyptians pushed into the streets, risking injury by the fast-moving vehicles simply to try to touch the cars and buses in the motorcade.

They swarmed to balconies and rooftops just to catch a glimpse of a man who may have affected their lives and futures directly by helping put them on the rode to peace.

But what doubled the impact of all this was an incredible absence of armed troops in a city full of passionate Israel-haters who also could believe — and some other Arabs do — that the real U.S. aim here is to make Israel a permanent fixture in the Middle East and thus cheat the Palestinian exiles of what they claim is their homeland.

Few Trusted Supporters

In another city —Saigon, say, or even Cairo just a few months ago —it would have been necessary to clear the rooftops and the balconies, line the streets with armed men and barricades and keep out all but a few trusted supporters of the government.

Poison ivy is not a true ivy but a climbing shrub.

Investment Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — "Total net public and private debt has grown to over $2.5 trillion and is being viewed more apprehensively during this time of economic slowdown," according to Moody's Investors Service, Inc. Debt is rising faster than the growth rate of the economy, the firm says, as inflation magnifies the need to borrow in the government, corporate and private sectors. "Excessive use of debt will eventually retard economic expansion and then intesify difficulties during recessionary periods," it warns.

"There is as yet no firm assurance that we have seen the bottom of the worst bear market since the Depression," says Wright Investors' Service, a Bridgeport, Conn. firm. Last week's market upturn was characterized "by less-than decisive volume and a noticeable absence of broad public support," it notes. Interest rates still are to high to support a sustained market advance, the firm adds, but a long-term rally is likely to occur from a lower Dow Jones industrial average price level.

"What the numbers now pretty clearly demonstrate is a marked slowdown in growth of short-term business borrowing and possibly a decline in real — as against nominal —short-term debt," says First National City Bank. Business loans at large commercial banks have been advancing quite slowly since mid-April, it continues. Since the real corporate debt to banks often levels off or dips during a recession, "even allowing for inflation, nominal commercial bank business loans might well decline after June," the bank adds.

BILL LADD

Fields Gains New Manager

Bill Ladd is the new manager of Field's Men and Boys Wear, located at 111 W. Kingsmill.

He replaces Ed McCollum.

Ladd took over managerial duties March 4. He came from Amarillo where he had been at Blackburns for seven years.

Partner in the new duties is John Payne, who has been associated with a Clarendon retail store for 10 years.

The only change in the store, according to Ladd, is an addition to the clothing line. Along with Curlee clothing, Fields will now carry Ratner and Johnny Carson lines.

Drug Penalties Lot More Severe Overseas

United Press International

Keep off the grass—and all other illicit drugs when traveling abroad. Getting busted overseas could cost you your life.

Hundreds of young Americans already have found out the hard way that foreign countries are often tougher than the United States when it comes to enforcing laws against drug use, smuggling or trafficking.

Recent official figures show that about 900 Americans — most of them under 30 years of age—are being held in jails around the world on various drug charges.

They include a man and two women, arrested in December, 1972, who were sentenced to death by a Turkish court last year for smuggling 225 pounds of hashish into the country from Syria. The sentences were later commuted to life imprisonment and more recently reduced to about 12 years under a general amnesty.

Penalties Are Severe

Many foreign countries do not differentiate between the so-called "soft" drugs like marijuana and the "hard" like heroin and possession of "grass" or "hash" can be punished with expulsion, prison terms and heavy fines—up to more than $100,000 in Spain, for instance.

Penalties for smuggling or trafficking are much more severe, ranging up to life imprisonment in Canada and the Philippines and the death penalty in Turkey and Iran.

A leaflet published by the U. S. Department of State notes that "prison conditions in some countries are deplorable." It warns that many countries, including Mexico, have no provisions for bail on drug offenses and that pre-trial detention "can be prolonged—in some cases up to a year."

In many countries, the leaflet cautions, drug pushers are also informers who tip off police or customs officials after making a sale.

No Protection

"The pusher...collects twice in such cases: he receives money from the buyer and a reward... for acting as an informer. Many young Americans have fallen into such a trap."

Americans traveling abroad— except those with diplomatic immunity—are subject to the laws of the country which they are visiting. They are not protected by U. S. law and the authority of American consular officials to intervene when a U. S. citizen breaks local laws is limited.

When informed, consular officials will visit the detained American and provide him with a list of local lawyers and will also notify his family and friends of his predictment.

"The consul may also act as an intermediary where the prison diet is below subsistence level, but prisoners' families or friends must pay for food supplements," the leaflet says.

Drug Arrests Up

At the same time, it stresses that U. S. officials can not ask for or obtain different treatment for Americans than that given other persons under the laws of the country concerned.

In addition, it points out that U. S. laws prohibit the use of official funds to pay legal fees or other expenses for any American held for violating local laws.

Oil Particles Endanger Lungs

By G.C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I just read that oil particles in the lungs could damage them. About four months ago my baby had eczema and on my grandmother's suggestion I bathed him in buttermilk.

I only left the bathroom for a minute but he fell in the tub and I'm sure quite a bit of milk got in his nose.

I am so worried, since reading about lung disease, that he may have gotten some in his lungs, bronchi or sinuses, and later may have emphysema or T.B. or pneumonia.

—L.J.

True that one should be careful about oil particles getting in the lungs, but this occurs chiefly from use of mineral oil drops in the nose.

In your case, remember that the fat content of buttermilk is low, and your baby undoubtedly coughed up any buttermilk that may have gotten in his throat.

It wouldn't cause T.B. even had he gotten some in; if lung irritation were going to develop, it would have done so long before this. And I would forget about any harm in later life.

But I hope that you and everyone who reads this will remember that it isn't safe to leave a baby alone in a bathtub even for a minute. If you have to go to the phone or get something, wrap the baby in a blanket and get him out of the tub. Or take him along with you, which is even safer.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Suppose you were cast on a desert island for a year and had available to you only two foods to keep you alive and healthy. Which would provide the most nutritional strength? Which foods provide the most nutritional punch to the ounce?

—T.E.W.

I'll answer by telling you a little true story. It happened several years ago when I was on a fishing expedition in Canada. A friend and I and our Indian guide had been canoeing all day. It seemed that our guide would never pull up so we could make camp — and eat.

Finally, we pulled into one of those delightful little bits of paradise to be found only on a northern lake, and our guide opened his knapsack which contained our lunch.

He extracted some smoked trout, some oranges and some beer.

It was all there, I thought at the time. This was a perfectly balanced meal this old Indian fellow has prepared.

The trout provided the necessary protein and fat. The oranges the carbohydrates, vitamin C and minerals, and the beer the fluids.

So I guess if I were to have to make my choice, I'd opt for the fish and the oranges and probably forsake the beer in favor of fresh water, which I certainly hope is available on your desert island.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I need your help bad. I'm 18, single, still in school, no job. I thought I was normal until I found out I can't have intercourse with my boyfriend. There is something wrong with me and he can't enter me.

What's wrong with me? I'm afraid I'll never be able to have sex. What can I do? Is there any special doctor I could talk to or see? I don't have much money. I can't tell my parents. Will anybody be able to help me?

—Scared

Two principal causes of this. One is tension — you just can't relax. The other is an unusually tough and thick hymen (the hymen being a membrane at the entrance to the vagina). When that is the cause, it is quite a simple procedure for a physician to correct it.

All I can suggest is that you see a doctor — a general physician often takes care of this problem. Otherwise, see a gynecologist.

"You Can Stop Sinus Trouble!" is the title of Dr. Thosteson's newly revised booklet, explaining what sinus trouble really is and what can be done about it. For a copy write to him in care of Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120, enclosing a long, self - addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT

Gould-O'Neill & Burton-Taylor?

By EARL WILSON

NEW YORK — The surprise lovers, Elliott Gould and Jennifer O'Neill, who'll get married as soon as their divorces come in, have dropped another secret. They'll co-star in two films and a TV special. Could it be they'll become the new Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton?

Jennifer, who's ecstatic about her new romance, is, like Liz, one of the world's great beauties. Gould, who's calm but extremely happy, is like Burton, fearless and forthright.

After parting from Jennifer Bogart whom he married in December, Gould flew from Hollywood to stay with Miss O'Neill in Springfield, Mass., until she finishes filming "The Reincarnation of Peter Proud" June 19. They'll be married at her big farmhouse home at Bedford Village, N.Y.

Gould was hurrying around Broadway yesterday on business then hurrying back to Springfield. It was while they were discussing their own movies, one to be done here and one in Europe that Gould got the idea of changing Jennifers.

Both see great futures. Miss O'Neill thinks "Reincarnation" is her greatest dramatic opportunity; she's also becoming a singer with an album and has written a screen play. "Always." Gould looks forward to being considered normal.

They have been willingly posing for hugging and cuddling pictures. Gould lent her a large heavy wool knit sweater with an overlapping tie, and one member of the film company said, "Jennifer hasn't been out of it."

Shops now have Nixon paintings captioned "Vote for McGovern" ... The Watergate mess is so smelly that one Democratic Congressman said it made him sick: "Like the tomcat making love to a skunk and finally saying, 'I've just about enjoyed all I can stand of this.'"

The Barbizon-Plaza Library Discotheque is a quaint idea. You can actually get a library card and borrow books in a dance atmosphere, then a husband could tell his B.W. at 3 a.m., "Oh, I was just getting some books at the Library."

Julie Andrews flew to Casablanca to join husband Blake Edwards after promoting her book "The Last of the Great Whangdoodles." The word means a mythical beast in her book, but it also means a pulpit - thunger, and is a poker expression. "It also has a very rude meaning," Julie confided ... Robert F. Kennedy Jr., 20, flies to Kenya (where he often went with his father) to narrate "The Last Frontier" on TV for Roger Ailes ... Ed Sullivan is out of Intensive Care Unit at Lenox Hill Hospital ... B'way song hustler Juggy Gayles has the No.1 NY hit reacord, George McCrae's "Rock Your Baby," and will have the next, Willie Henderson's "Dance Master."

NY hotels are bulgin' ... Sonny Bono was with Joey Heatherton at Frank Sinatra's opening at Caesars Palace in Vegas ... Is Columbia Pictures to move most of its NY office to LA? ... Carol Channing took her shoes off so she wouldn't tower over Mayor Beame on a dialation (but she still towered over him) ... The new Mrs. Huntington Hartford didn't go to a party in their honor, and rumors started. "I fell asleep," she explained.

THE MIDNIGHT EARL...

Ernest Rorgnine, filming "Grand St." here, told an interviewer he wouldn't talk about his ex-wives (Ethel Merman, Katie Jurado, etc.): "I'm a member of the NLB club — that means 'Never Look Back'" ... ABC, which'll record the "Mack & Mabel" cast album, wanted to invest $50,000 in the show, but it was already oversubscribed. A group of visiting Frenchmen, here for the D-Day ceremonies, dined at Copain and bought French wine for everybody in the house ... The manager of a plush midtown spot called the cops to oust a prostitute soliciting business at the bar — and they discovered it was a man in drag.

Myrona Loy, asked what she thinks of her old films on TV, said: "I hate to admit it, but some of them are helped by the commercial interruptions" ... Hal Prince is casting an L.A. company of his hit "Candide" — and candidates must be 25 or under ... An elderly woman slowly climbed the steep stairs to Buddy's Place and announced, "I've always loved Buddy Rich's music — and this is where I want to be tonight — on my 84th birthday."

Show Bix Quiz: Name three TV shows (besides the "Tonight" show) hosted by Johnny Carson. (From The Nostalgia Quiz Book). Ans. to yesterday's: "The Invisible Woman" starred Virginia Bruce.

I'D RATHER BE LIGHT

Today's Best Laugh: Myron Cohen told of the woman who spent most of her vacation cruise being seasick. "It was a nice trip," she said, "— but the next time I take a cruise, I'm gonna fly."

Wish I'd Said That: "The only time some fellows are seen with their wives is after they've been indicted." — Abe Martin.

Remembered Quote: "Instead of loving your enemies, treat your friends a little better," — Edgar W. Howe.

Under Twenty

By MILDRED PERKINS

Fortunately — or unfortunately, depending on which team you are rooting for — ace pitcher Tom Seaver has gotten off to an inauspicious start on the baseball mound this year.

He has, however, contributed an exciting baseball book, "How I Would Pitch to Babe Ruth," just published. The book is poorly titled because while he does have a chapter on the great Babe it deals in a highly interesting fashion with other great sluggers and hitters as well as some of Seaver's personal views on the sport of baseball generally.

What Seaver has done is to open each chapter with his own personal comments and they are well written and filled with his pitching and baseball know-how. He has then collected some excellent newspaper articles by top sportswriters about the personalities covered in the book.

This collection on such heroes as Ty Cobb, Joe DiMaggio, Lou Gehrig, Mickey Mantle, Willie Mays, Stan Musial, Jackie Robinson and Ted Williams, among others, make the book fascinating reading in itself.

Then there is Seaver, the thinking man's pitcher. He talks of his hero worship of Henry Aaron and the first time he faced the new homerun king in 1967. He deliberately turned away from Aaron as he walked to the plate and, from memory, mentally saw the great hitter's every move.

"When I turned I was no longer a hero - worshipper. I got him to hit into a double - play with an inside fastball. The next time he came up, I threw him another inside fastball. He hit it for a homerun and I learned that hitters can remember pitchers, too."

Seaver devotes some highly amusing space on hitting (and non - hitting) pitchers, including his statement that he'd rather pitch a no-hitter than win a game by slamming a homerun.

He and writer Robert W. Peterson tell of Josh Gibson, a slamming catcher from the black leagues who never made major league baseball. He played at the same time as Jimmy Foxx, Mel Ott and Hank Greenberg and those who saw him play feel he was better than any of them.

Whether you are a would-be pitcher or a baseball fan, or enjoy reading fine sports stories, "How I Would Pitch to Babe Ruth" is a book to be read now, then laid aside for a while and read again and then, at some future time, read still again.

GM To Hike Model Prices

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors' cars and trucks will cost an average $118 more beginning Monday, but the giant automaker says the car buyer will be getting something more for the extra money.

GM announced that steel-belted radial tires, a high energy ignition system and power steering will become standard equipment on many models. Previously, these items were optional.

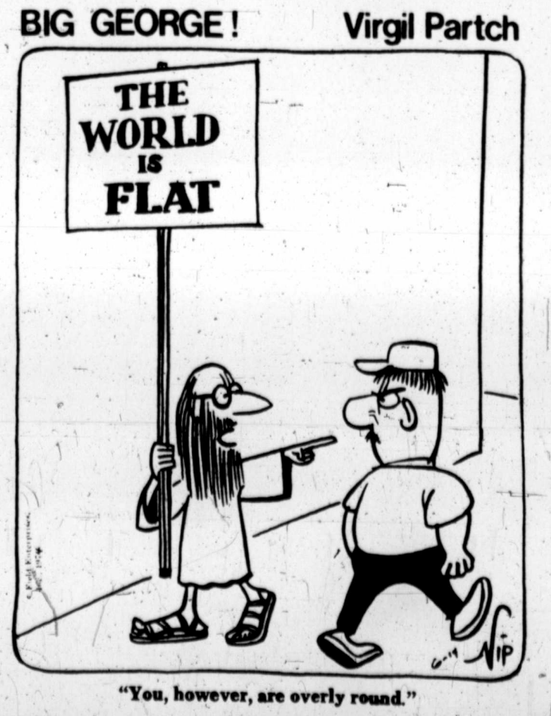

GM said the latest pricing action was not actually an increase, and the Cost of Living Council agreed, saying it's been permissible from the start of price controls to change optional equipment to standard.

"The theory is that when you make options stand, they actually become cheaper," said one official of the council.

In the case of one model, the Chevrolet Malibu Hardtop Coupe with a 350-cubic inch engine, the three items will add $286.10 to the base cost of the car which will be increased to $3,344.10. Not all GM cars will have all three items made standard.

Last month, GM raised the retail prices of its cars, options and destination charges by $105. The new changes amount to a 2.4 per cent increase.

BIG GEORGE! Virgil Partch

"You, however, are overly round."

Player Leading U.S. Open By 1 Shot

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (UPI) — Amid a sea of red faces and a wave of embarrassed golfers, little Gary Player revealed the secret of what it will take to win the U.S. Open.

"It takes a world of mental discipline," said the darkhaired South African, who one day hopes to be recognized as the greatest golfer in the world. "You have to play all the shots in your bag, plus the bag upstairs."

When the opening round of the 74th U.S. Open was completed Thursday evening, it was apparent that just about everyone in the field of 150 was missing some piece of their equipment, whether physical or mental. No one was able to break par of 70 and only Player was able to equal it over the tortuous, 6,961-yard Winged Foot Golf Club.

Hard Day's Work

This gave Player, seeking to complete a second Grand Slam of the world's four major tournaments, a one-stroke lead over Mike Reasor, once a caddy to Arnold Palmer, and Lou Graham, neither of whom owns a tour victory. It also left a number of the other top pros with egg on their face and little more than a few wisecracks to show for a hard day's work.

"This course really makes you feel like a dog," laughed Johnny Miller, the defending U.S. Open champion who came in with a 76 and complained the pin placements couldn't have been more difficult. "I'm beginning to think the only way I can play this course well is in a fog."

Even the imcomparable Jack Nicklaus, who holds the all-time record of 14 major victories, was reduced to human frailities as he bogeyed his first four holes and had to scramble for a five-over 75. On the first hole, Nicklaus tapped a 28-foot putt that rolled 18 feet beyond the cup, and as he said later, "That's some way to start an Open. It was ridiculous."

And so it was on Day One of America's most prestigious golf event. Only five players—Bobby Nichols, Bruce Crampton, Barney Thompson, Jim Colbert and Ray Floyd—managed a two-over-par 72, and Palmer found himself in excellent position with a 73, bracketing him with Jerry Heard, Hale Irwin, Tom Watson, Rod Funseth, Mark Hayes, Dave Graham and John Buczek.

Tom Weiskopf was in a group with Miller at 76, Lee Trevino was at 78, Billy Casper, winner of the Open the last time it was played here in 1959, had an 80 and Hubie Green, winner of three tour events this year, including last week's Philadelphia Golf Classic, opened with a hair-raising 81.

Get Even Worse

And, in the opinion of many, the scores can get even worse as the weekend activities proceed.

"This is the toughest course I ever played, and it was on a perfect day," said Colbert, a 33-year-old graduate of Kansas State. "If we get some bad weather, I'd hate to see what happens. We'll all be embarrassed."

Only a bogey on the 18th hole prevented Player from turning in a sub-par round, and he admitted he "really wanted it bad."

"I have such respect for this course, it would have meant something," explained the 38-year-old physical fitness addict. "I really attacked on that hole and it didn't come off. It was the worst looking drive you ever saw. If you followed it, you would have had a sore neck.

Player, in response to a question, said he would like to be recognized as the world's best golfer, but he added that it isn't fair to start making comparisons until a man's career is over. In addition to winning the PGA, Masters and British Open twice each and the U.S. Open once, his bag of victories also includes the South African Open eight times, the Australian Open six times and the Piccadilly World Match Play championship five times.

Thinking Man's Tournament

Palmer, in a relaxed and happy fram following his 37-36 round, agreed with Player's assessment that this is a thinking man's tournament.

"It's very difficult, no question about that," he said. "But I think it's one of the best courses we've played in a long time. You have to think about every shot you take. You can't be reckless.

It Sims To Me...

By PAUL SIMS

Saturday night is Pampa Night at the Amarillo Giant - Alexandria baseball game, which starts at 7:30 p.m. in Memorial Stadium.

Any Pampa Little League or Babe Ruth player will be admitted to the game free if he wears his uniform. Game tickets can be purchased for $1.00 from any Little League or Babe Ruth player.

Following the game, a reception will be held for ex-professional ball players (oldtimers) from the West Texas area. Several Pampa Oilers are expected to attend that reception, which will be held at the Villa Inn in Amarillo.

At 1 p.m. Sunday, prior to A-Giant action, the "oldtimers" will play a three - inning exhibition game. Ex-players from the Pampa, Borger, Amarillo and Clovis, N.M., teams will take on Lubbock, Lamesa and Abilene.

Pampa's Warren Hasse (KPDN) and Amarillo's Putt Powell (Globe-News) will MC the contest.

There isn't going to be a minimum limit on the Golden Spread Basketball Camp as previously reported and there isn't a deadline for signing up either, according to Ron Ekker, head basketball coach at West Texas State University.

The camp, which will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 12 noon daily June 24-29 at the Pampa Youth Center, will cost $35.00 per youngster. Kids will be able to sign up at the camp's start, but it is preferred they will register prior to that. George Smith at the Youth Center or Warren Hasse at KPDN will register interested people.

Only those youths between the ages of eight and 15 who will not be in high school or be a member of a varsity team can sign up.

Those eligible for participation will receive 21 hours of instruction. The ratio of youngsters per instructor is expected to be approximately 15 to 1. "It is our intent to keep a favorable ratio in our camp so that each boy will receive the proper and necessary attention and instruction," said Ekker, who will coach the camp along with Rick Starzecki and J.D. Barnett of West Texas State and Smith.

Pampa riders came away with two first places and a second, making them the second - winningest group in last Sunday's Antelope Creek MotoCross motorcycle races held at Fritch.

Amarillo had two first-place finishers, four seconds and four thirds.

In the 100 cc Class, Pampa's Brad Houck was victorious with Amarillo's Donnie Westfall and Greg Williams in second and third respectively. Thad Slaton of Pampa won first in the 250 cc Class. Kurt Kelly of Pampa captured second in the Open Class behind Kelly Fenwick of Fritch.

Other Pampa place-getters were Donnie Bennett, fourth in 250; Tim Epps, fifth in 125, and Rocky Thomas, sixth in 125. Kyrle Ferrell led the 125-cc Class most of the race before having to leave the event because of mechanical trouble.

Longhorns Eliminated By Trojans

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — The Miami Hurricanes, losers to Southern Illinois Thursday night, were winners in the draw for a bye immediately after the game, automatically thrusting them into Saturday's championship game of the 1974 College World Series.

With each of the three remaining teams tagged with one loss, tournament officials conducted the drawing to determine the pairings to wind up the double-elimination tournament.

Defending four-time champion USC, 48-20, and Southern Illinois, 50-11, will tangle tonight at 7:30 p.m., CDT, for the right to meet Miami, 51-10, co-ranked with Texas the No. 1 team in the nation before coming to Omaha.

In Thursday's second game, pinch-runner Claude Crockett scored the winning run in the eighth inning on Miami third baseman Jim Crosta's throwing error as the Salukis defeated previously unbeaten Miami, 4-3.

Southern Illinois struck for a run in the top of the first inning when designated hitter Bert Newman singled, stole second, went to third base on starting pitcher Tom Baxter's wild pitch and scored on an infield out.

The Salukis pushed two runs across in the fourth inning when junior right fielder Ken Wolf drove home Jim Locascio, who had walked, and Mike Wilbins, who had reached first base on an error.

But Hurricanes first baseman Orlando Gonzalez turned the tables in the seventh when, with two men on base, he clubbed a 3-2 Robin Derry pitch over the 370-foot marker in right field to tie the game, 3-3.

It was the first home run of the year for Gonzalez, the nation's stolen base leader with 62.

USC survived two late-inning charges by Texas in the first game to defeat the Longhorns, 5-3, and eliminate them from the tournament.

Texas sophomore Keith Moreland's two-run double in the eighth narrowed a four-run USC lead to 5-3.

Then in the ninth, Ty Meyer, the third Trojans' pitcher, was summoned with one man on base and a 3-0 count on Longhorns' batter Bobby Clark. Meyer walked Clark on the next pitch, but then retired the lead runner on a grounder to the mound. Terry Pyka then lined to Trojan first baseman Mark Carpenter, who doubled up the runner at first.

SF Slips Past Chicago By 1-0

United Press International

Jim Barr may have found the secret to fulfilling the promise predicted of him when the San Francisco Giants signed him off the campus of Southern California four years ago.

The 26-year-old righthander, who has posted a rather undistinguished 20-28 record in his first three major league seasons, thinks he might have been tiring himself out before the game begins by throwing too long and too hard in the pre-game warmups.

Barr accidentally came upon that idea last year in Chicago when rain delays twice interrupted his pre-game warmups. When play finally got underway Barr pitched one of the best games of his big league career. He thought nothing about it, however, until Thursday when he decided to try the same routine prior to a start against the Chicago Cubs.

Worked Again

He cut down his warmup considerably, pitching for a few minutes then sitting down and pitching again. The experiment worked again as Barr allowed only six hits in pitching the Giants to a 1-0 victory that snapped a four-game losing streak. The complete game performance was only the seventh turned in by the Giants' staff this season.

Barr said he was able to get loose in only six minutes so he saw no need to continue throwing hard before the game.

"If Barr could pitch that well all the time," said Giants' manager Charley Fox, "we wouldn't have a care in the world. It was as good a game as anyone could pitch and it came at the right time."

Gary Thomasson, the Giants' "super sub," knocked in the only run with a single in the seventh inning. An error by first baseman Billy Williams enabled Steve Ontiveros to reach second base and a wild pitch moved Ontiveros to third before Thomasson singled sharply to center.

IN BASEBALL

North Texas Girls Ahead Of Others

SHERMAN, Tex. (UPI) — Baseball for youngsters is ahead of its time in North Texas.

National Little League officials, bowing to the changing times, have said they will ask Congress to amend their charter to allow girls to play in the previously all-boy league.

For those little girls who have not had a chance to play organized baseball, Sherman has good news ahead of schedule — 11-year-old Margaret Avard and 10-year-old Debbie Fleming.

Neither is the star of her team, but they aren't the traditional rightfielder, last to be picked in the playground either.

"Some of the boys are better than I am," Debra said. "But I'm not the worst."

"I just wanted to play," said Margaret, "because I like baseball and there's no reason why I can't play."

Margaret plays in the main team (11-12-year olds) in the Pee Wee Reese division of the American Amateur Baseball Conference (AABC), a separate organization from the National Little League which does not allow girls to play. Debbie plays in the national farm team (10-11-year olds). There is one other division, for 8-9-year olds.

Debra is the closest thing to a star among the pair. She has started five of the Jaycee teams six games, and has a 3-1 record (the team is 4-2), and has seven hits in 10 official times at bat with several walks and plays a credible defensive game.

In her best game pitching, she struck out six, threw two other runners out on grounders and gave up only one hit.

"In her last game, we won 15-3 and Debbie only gave up three hits," said her father, Sherman attorney Bob Fleming.

Margaret's career with the Sanders Sporting Goods team has been a bit rockier, but she has had her moments.

"I've been playing mostly out in the field, but a little at first base and I started one game off," Margaret said. "I put one guy out on a fly ball. It was just two feet over and I caught it, but I haven't missed any balls. Most of the time they come on the ground."

At the plate, she has had just spiritual victories.

"I didn't get to first but I hit it twice," she said. "One went to the shortstop. It was in the air and he caught it. The other one went to the pitcher and he threw me out at first."

Fleming said the two careers began with Margaret.

"Last year Debbie wanted to sign up because one of our best pitchers was our neighbor and she played with him all the time and she knew she was as good as he was," Fleming said. "But I wouldn't let her sign up. She wanted to play this year but I wouldn't let her. But then her girl friend (Margaret) signed up and as soon as that came out in the papers she had to play and so I let her."

"But I went down to her coach (Wilmer Kinsey) and said, 'Now, I'm not a women's libber or rights guy' and I told him if he didn't want her to just tell me and I'd make her stop. But he said no and that if she could cut it that's all that mattered. She was the starting pitcher the first game of the year."

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (UPI) — Oh, did they all complain!

All except one, unflappable, unconquerable Gary Player, and if some of his fellow pros had gotten wind of one of his little asides, a remark he meant with all his heart, they would've hit him with a five-iron.

"This course really makes you feel like a dog," wailed Johnny Miller, the defending champ, who felt like digging a deep hole for himself somewhere after three-putting three different times and limping in with a six-over-par 76 in Thursday's first round of the U.S. Open at unspeakably difficult Winged Foot.

"There's only one way to describe it....awesome," said Jerry Heard, more than satisfied with his 73. "You know what I was doing? I was playing survival of the fittest out there."

Then there was Ralph Johnston, once an assistant pro here and a spunky little fellow you may remember for his opening round 68 in the U.S. Open at Merion, Pa., th[illegible] years ago.

Gru[illegible]g Everytime

He was down at the other end of the pole, playing with a pulled tendon, grunting everytime he got good wood on the ball. He had an 87 and withdrew.

"If I hadn't chipped and putted I would've shot a 95," Johnson confessed. "How tough is the course? It's the toughest one I ever played."

Now comes Gary Player, the first round leader with an even par 70 which puts him one stroke up on everybody else.

Gary Player has a little devil in him.

He knows Winged Foot is excruciatingly tough, and the majority of his colleagues are complaining.

Publicly, he had this comment:

"This is the way golf should be played."

Privately, he went even better.

"Make it tougher," he whispered, impishly, to one of the officials here, Frank Hannigan, assistant director of the USGA.

Gary Player means it.

Kissinger's Role In Watergate Unclear

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon said a year ago that he "authorized" selected wiretapping of government officials and newsmen in 1969-71 and that Henry A. Kissinger, then his special assistant for national security, helped determine the targets.

But Nixon's language May 22, 1973, in describing the operation, and that of White House spokesmen since then, have left unclear who it was that actually initiated and ordered the secret surveillance and just what was the depth of Kissinger's involvement.

And that is part of the reason for the current controversy and confusion, as evidenced by remarks presidential counselor Dean Burch made Wednesday at a news conference.

National Security

Asked if Nixon personally ordered the wiretaps, Burch seemed surprised. "The President said that on May 22, that he instigated the wiretaps," he replied. "There's nothing new about that ... I don't think there's any serious dispute about that or that it was done for national security reasons."

But when a reporter pointed out that Nixon had said he "authorized" the wiretaps and not that he had ordered them, Burch responded: "Well, we are in semantic quibble here about the word authorized, initiated or whatever."

Asked if the words should be taken to have the same meaning, Burch acknowledged that he didn't know how to interpret the language "under these circumstances."

Nixon's May 22, 1973, comments on the wiretapping were given little attention at the time because they were included in a long-awaited statement by the President detailing his handling of the effort to get at the bottom of the Watergate break-in and subsequent cover-up.

Nixon said the "special program of wiretaps was instituted" in mid-1969 because of administration fears that "a number of highly sensitive foreign policy intiatives," including efforts to settle the Vietnam war and achieve an arms control pact with the Soviet Union, were being compromised by leaks of classified information to the news media. The goal of the wiretaps, he said was to find the source of the leaks and "fewer than 20 taps" were involved.

Kissinger's Subordinates

As for the targets, many of whom were Kissinger's subordinates on the National Security Council, Nixon said:

"The persons who were subject to these wiretaps were determined through coordination among the director of the FBI, my assistant for national security affairs and the Attorney General."

That meant the late J. Edgar Hoover, Kissinger and John N. Mitchell in that order.

But Nixon made no further mention of Kissinger's role at that time and White House officials have given no clear additional information since then to clarify the situation.

TV Notes

NEW YORK (UPI) — CBS isn't going to let anyone forget that the American Bicentennial is coming in 1976. Beginning this July 4, the network will inaugurate a "Bicentennial Minutes" series, which consists of 731 one minute spots at the conclusion of prime time network shows through July 4, 1976. Each item will involve an historical incident that occurred just 200 years ago on the date of the broadcast. Entertainment stars and other notables will be involved.

A two-hour musical adaptation of Charles Dickens' "Great Expectations" novel that will be seen on NBC during the coming season will have British stars Michael York, Sarah Miles and James Mason in leading roles.

Returning ABC series of veteran status are "Marcus Welby, M.D.," about to begin its sixth season, and "The Streets of San Francisco," due for a third season.

David Niven will star in a dramatization of Oscar Wilde's humorous story, "The Canterville Ghost," for NBC in 197475.

The CBS Television Network and CTW Productions, Inc., a subsidiary of the Children's Television Workshop, have agreed on a long term, exclusive deal for development of prime time family drama specials. CTW-P is expected to be a profit making subsidiary that will turn over revenues to the nonprofit parent to finance the latter's educational programs.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®
...it tells you how

Here's one of those "why didn't I think of that?" ideas that is soooo simple . . . but which can make chopping weeds out of the vegetable patch a whole lot easier this summer.

Cut and sharpen a "V" notch into one side of your garden hoe and you'll find it almost a pleasure to nip off the unwanted plants that seem to delight in growing in tight corners. The V won't slip off as you bear down on a particular weed and the edges of the notch—protected as they are from constantly hacking into the ground—will stay sharp an uncommonly long time.

Veterans Embark On Program To Insure GI Check Delivery

The Veterans Administration has embarked on an all-out program to insure prompt delivery of GI Bill education and training checks.

The 58 VA Regional Offices have been directed by Donald E. Johnson, administrator of Veterans Affairs, to start recruiting and training programs for 1,300 VA "Men on Campus."

Vet-Reps will be assigned full-time to schools with large veteran enrollments and will assist in distributing GI student checks and serve as agency liaison in contacts with colleges and veteran students.

The program, announced by the President, will involve expenditures of about $2 million in the current fiscal year ending June 30, and more than $24 million in the next fiscal year. The program was developed by a crack management team of VA and Office of Management and Budget officials in response to a Presidential directive of last March 31.

The new Vet-Reps will be available to college campuses having large veteran enrollments in advance of the heavy Fall enrollment. Most Vet-Reps are expected to be Vietnam veterans now employed by VA or recruited from outside the agency.

The on campus Vet-Reps will assist in the delivery of advance payment checks covering the first two months payments to veteran students when they first enroll and will assist with the administrative work needed to insure that subsequent checks are delivered to addresses supplied by students.

Duties will include the full range of assistance to veterans and cooperation with campus veterans organizations and the school's own Office of Veterans Affairs.
