Voters to sift 13 propositions on Nov. 5

Lottery issue draws mixed response

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A lottery is nothing but gambling that preys on the poor, according to slightly more than half the Midlanders polled Monday in an informal survey.

But respondents in favor of a lottery said they thought spending a dollar for a chance to win is all in fun — and for the good of the state.

And the few who held no strong opinion about a lottery said they would probably buy a ticket at one time or another if the proposal passes.

Whether or not a state-operated lottery will be allowed in Texas will be decided by

AUSTIN — Texans will vote Nov. 5 on 13 constitutional amendments that would legalize a state lottery, authorize $1.1 billion in bonds to build prisons, create an ethics commission, and provide $250 million for sewage and water in poor areas of South Texas.

The ballot also gives voters a second chance to approve $300 million in loans for college students.

Since its adoption in 1876, the Texas constitution has been amended 328 times out of 489 amendments submitted to voters.

Extended voting began Oct. 13 and runs through Nov. 1.

In Midland, early voting is being conducted at the Elections Administration Office, 709 W. Washington Ave. Hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday-Friday. On Oct. 31 and Nov. 1, the hours will be expanded from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

TUESDAY NEWS WATCH

Brown's hat in race

PHILADELPHIA — Lashing out at both major political parties and at what he called the evils of incumbency, former California Gov. Edmund G. "Jerry" Brown Jr. announced his third campaign for the presidency in front of Independence Hall. In a speech that never mentioned President Bush and heaped scorn on Democrats as well as Republicans, Brown, a Democrat, expressed his intention on Monday to stake out an anti-establishment theme.

Case stymies court

WASHINGTON — A Supreme Court apparently deadlocked in a high-stakes dispute over health warnings for cigarette smokers Monday ordered the case reheard, presumably so Clarence Thomas can cast a tie-breaking vote. In a brief order, the justices said they will hear new arguments in the case to help them decide whether cigarette manufacturers may be sued for allegedly misrepresenting the dangers smokers face.

Autopsy of killer

KILLEEN — The gunman who killed 23 people at a cafeteria here last week and then killed himself did not have narcotics or alcohol in his system, nor did he suffer from an aneurysm, according to an autopsy report. The report, released Monday, leaves the authorities still struggling to determine a motive for the killing spree by George J. Hennard Jr., said Sgt. Michael DeHart, a spokesman for the Killeen police./6B

Myerson mugged

NEW YORK — Former Miss America Bess Myerson was recuperating Monday from a broken leg suffered during a mugging attempt in a Moscow airport. Myerson, 66, who in 1945 became the first Jewish woman to be crowned Miss America, had been in the Soviet Union helping Jewish children and fighting anti-Semitism. She arrived at Manhattan's Lenox Hill Hospital on Wednesday, reportedly with her right leg broken in several places.

U.S. hostage Turner's cut free in swap

■ Confirmation of release follows hours of confusion about his whereabouts.

N.Y. Times News Service

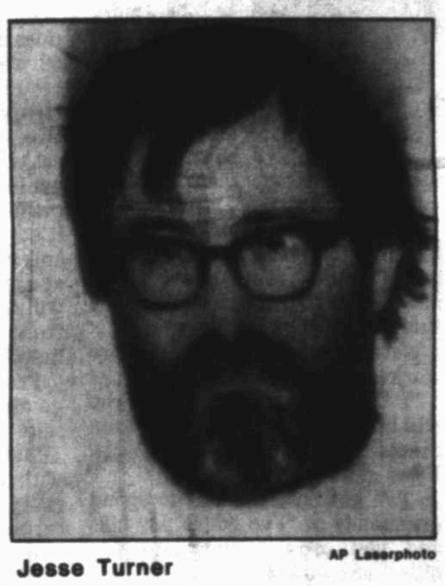

UNITED NATIONS — The United Nations on Monday night announced the release in Beirut of Jesse Turner, 44, an American professor who has been held hostage in Lebanon for almost five years. His release was apparently linked to Israel's freeing of 15 Arab detainees earlier Monday.

A brief statement issued at the United Nations said Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar had been informed of the release by his assistant in the area, Giandomenico Picco. Perez de Cuellar "understands" that Turner is now "on his way to Damascus," the announcement said.

The confirmation of Turner's release followed hours of confusion about his whereabouts. Although earlier reports from Beirut said Turner had been freed, U.S. and Syrian officials had said they had not seen him.

Perez de Cuellar expressed satisfaction about the release of both Turner and the 15 Arab prisoners, who had been held at a jail inside the security zone that Israel maintains in southern Lebanon.

Perez de Cuellar thanked "the groups in Lebanon" for their cooperation in bringing about the release of Turner. He also thanked the governments that had assisted him, "notably the governments of Iran, Libya and Syria." He said he was "grateful to the government of Israel for the release of 15 Lebanese detainees."

Finally, the secretary general seemed to hold out a new ray of hope for the eight other Western hostages that are believed to be detained by extremist groups in Lebanon.

He said he hoped "this process will continue and that, in the near future, hostages of all nationalities detained in this part of the world will be freed."

Perez de Cuellar said he was "prepared to pursue his efforts with all concerned for a comprehensive solution of

At least 14 die in $1.5 billion fire

By Robert Reinhold
N.Y. Times News Service

OAKLAND, Calif. — Firefighters succeeded Monday in containing the wind-driven fire that swept the parched hills above Oakland and Berkeley on Sunday, but not before it caused enough death and damage to rank as the worst fire in California history.

The Alameda County coroner confirmed 14 people lost their lives in the fast-moving blaze, including a 49-year-old Oakland fire battalion chief, who died while battling the flames.

There were fears the death toll could go still higher, and investigators Monday began searching the 1,000 or so burned houses, condominiums and apartment buildings for more victims.

Hospitals reported treating 148 people for burns, smoke inhalation and other injuries. Many of the estimated 1,000 families left homeless by the fire were taken to four shelters, three in Oakland and one in Berkeley.

By Monday morning, 7,800 customers were without electric power and 8,000 without gas service. Authorities put the total damage to property at $1.5 billion.

Officials said about 2,000 vehicles were destroyed and that firefighters were checking to see if they contained bodies. Oakland Police Chief George T. Hart said at a Monday night news conference that the area affected by the fire had been closed off and that several people had been arrested for looting.

After viewing the blackened 1,800-acre area by helicopter Monday morning, Gov. Pete Wilson pronounced the disaster worse than the devastating fire in Santa Barbara County last summer, which leveled

Gramm cautiously embraces Bentsen's tax cut proposal

By James R. Owen
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Republican Sen. Phil Gramm, rushing Monday to join other lawmakers eager to divvy up the nation's "peace dividend," cautiously embraced a tax cut proposed by fellow Texan Lloyd Bentsen but said it wasn't enough to "dig us out of the recession."

A day after Bentsen unveiled a five-year, $72.5 billion package of tax cuts aimed at helping middle-income Americans, Gramm endorsed the idea but said tax incentives, such as lowering the levy on capital gains, are needed to "jump start" the nation's faltering economy.

Gramm

Gramm said Bentsen's idea might even have a "slightly depressing effect" by taking money out of the nation's economy rather than stimulating growth.

However, he said he probably could support the Bentsen plan as a starting point be-

Poll: State of the nation troubles more Americans

By Richard I. Berke
N.Y. Times News Service

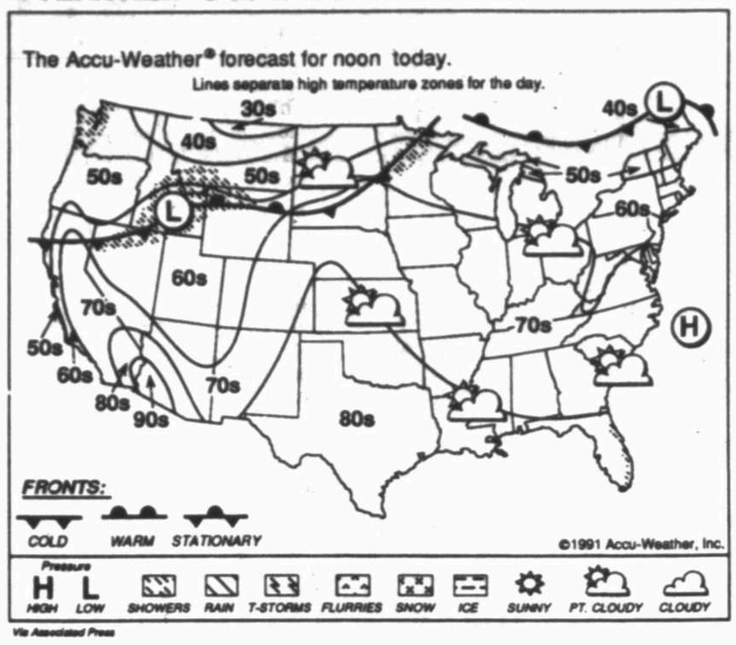

As the presidential campaign season begins in earnest, Americans are even more deeply troubled than they were earlier this year about the state of the nation in general and of the economy in particular, according to a New York Times/CBS News Poll.

The number of Americans who say that "things" in the country have "pretty seriously gotten off on the wrong track" has increased from 31 percent in January to 42 percent in March and to 60 percent in the latest poll.

And a plurality of 44 percent says things in the country are generally going worse than they were five years ago, up from 31 percent who expressed the same view in

LOTTERY: Voters to decide issue in the Nov. 5 election

(From 1A)

Texas voters on Nov. 5.

"I don't like it. It's a sleazy way of raising money as far as the government's concerned," said Roy Roach, 66, retired.

Roach

"And I just don't believe in gambling in the first place," he said.

A lottery would cause the indigent to gamble their money rather than feed their families, said the majority of those who opposed the amendment.

"I feel too many people will use bread money that should go to more essential things," said Mary Rainwater, 60, a secretary.

Nora Kiser, 76, a child care worker, agreed.

"I think there are people who will buy lottery tickets rather than meals for their children," Ms. Kiser said.

"I've got better things to spend my money on. I've got to pay bills and you can't gamble and pay bills," she added.

But for some, the cost of a lottery ticket is a small price to pay for fun.

"I'm not a gambler but I might buy a ticket. I buy them at the fair. It's something for a good cause and this might be a good cause, hopefully raising revenue for the state," said Jesus Gonzales, 57, a church sexton.

Other lottery supporters also saw the game as a way to raise state revenue.

"I'm all for it. The other states are doing it and their finances are improving. And it's a better source of income than a state income tax," said Mike Fowler, 47, president of an advertising company.

Gonzales

"This is oil and gas country. This is where we made our living gambling. It's in our blood," Fowler added.

Many pro-lottery respondents recalled the benefit in other states where they had once resided.

"I lived in Colorado for a couple of years and it worked up there," said Glen Aaron, 17, a student, who added that he would "buy a couple of tickets every once in while" if a lottery becomes a reality.

Not everyone polled agreed with what the lottery could do for Texas.

Don Handley, 48, a retail store clerk, spent a couple of years in Massachusetts, where there is a lottery.

"It never seemed to help the state financial situation there, so what's the use?" said Handley, who said he would not buy a ticket even if the amendment passes.

"The odds are just too great of ever getting a payoff," he said.

Among those who think the lottery won't generate funds, some addressed the cost of running the game.

"I'm totally against it, I just don't think it accomplishes goals it sets out to," said Dennis Bowers, 32, a mudlogger. That's because the administrative cost to run the lottery are too high to make it feasible, he explained.

"In New York, where I'm from, it never returned the promised benefits," he said.

"And I don't think the state should be involved in legalized gambling," Bowers said.

Lee

Neither does Bill Judd, 58, a manager.

"I don't think that's the way the state should get involved in raising money. It's gambling and (the government would be) taking money away from people they are trying to help," Judd said.

Problems caused by the lottery go even deeper, some respondents said.

"It causes too many problems with families. One (member) gets rich . . . families go apart," said Ricardo Ochoa. 23, an assistant restaurant manager.

Ricky Johnson, 33, a draftsman, addressed the benefit of winning.

"They need to get one started here in Midland. It would help a whole lot of people out if they win," said Johnson, who said he would play every chance he got.

Some of those polled have heard the pros and cons but are not sure whether the lottery would be a good thing or not.

"I probably would vote no unless it can be proven there can be a substantial reduction of taxes or if we can say ahead of time where this money will go," said Jana Lee, 38, a librarian.

"I lived in Colorado for four years and bought five tickets and sent them to my brother in Florida," Ms. Lee said.

Mary Copeland, 33, self-employed, had some reservations as well.

"I'm not sure about it, the type of people it would bring in. At first I was for it, now I'm not sure," Ms. Copeland said.

Johnson

Would she take a chance at the lottery if passed? "Probably not. I don't gamble," Ms. Copeland said.

Some folks were somewhat more indifferent about the lottery.

"I'm just kind of up in the air about it," said Kathy Mundy, 23, a loan officer. Ms. Mundy, who recently moved to Midland, said she played the lottery every week in Indiana.

"I didn't win anything," said Ms. Mundy, but added she would probably play if the lottery comes to Texas.

Joe Mills, 54, an architect, who doesn't buy any argument against the lottery, talked about taking his chances.

"Sure I'll buy a lottery ticket. I once won a cake in a cake walk. What's the difference? I don't see any difference in buying a ticket in a cake walk at a church fair," Mills said.

VOTERS: Ballot to determine fate of propositions

(From 1A)

The amendments, in the order they will appear on the ballot, are:

Proposition 1: A city with a population of 5,000 or more can adopt a charter and become a home-rule city. Laws enacted by the Legislature govern cities with fewer than 5,000 people.

If a city's population drops below 5,000 it cannot amend its charter. Yet some charters of the 37 home-rule cities that have fallen in population require periodic amendments. This proposition would allow home-rule cities to amend their charters regardless of population.

Proposition 2: This amendment would allow the Texas Department of Transportation to provide state and federal funds to the Texas Turnpike Authority to build toll roads and bridges. If the money comes from the state highway fund, it would have to be repaid from tolls.

Voters defeated a similar amendment in 1987, primarily because it made no provision for repayment and would have allowed local governments to raise property taxes to cover turnpike bond defaults.

This amendment does not have that tax-raising feature, but it is controversial in part because of the tricky wording.

The ballot reads: "The constitutional amendment mandating the repayment to the Department of Transportation of monies expended to assist the Texas Turnpike Authority. . . ."

This implies money has been spent and the amendment is calling for its repayment. Instead, no state money has been spent on toll roads. The constitution forbids it. This amendment would allow it.

Proponents contend the amendment would give the highway department more flexibility. Highway officials say plans for dozens of projects cannot begin because the money is not available, but toll roads would allow development. They say toll roads can be built to meet rapidly changing metropolitan transit needs more quickly.

Opponents argue the state has enough demands for highway taxes for state arteries without using money to subsidize toll roads and bridges that benefit local areas. Foes also say the change would lead to a big increase in toll roads in the state, and roads based on projected growth may be unprofitable if that grow does not occur.

Proposition 3: This amendment would remove constitutional limits on investing from the Veterans' Land Fund and the Veterans' Housing Assistance Fund and allow any investment approved by the state Treasurer. Currently, money can be invested only in U.S. bonds or certificates.

The Legislative Budget Board estimates land fund income could increase by $1 million a year through additional investments.

Proposition 4: This amendment would authorize $1.1 billion in general obligation bonds to build prisons.

The legislation would create space for 25,300 new prison beds, including 13,300 maximum- and medium-security beds and 12,000 beds for alcohol and drug-abuse rehabilitation. It also would allow the state to buy abandoned military bases for housing inmates.

The Texas Criminal Justice Policy Council reports that if no new prisons are authorized beyond those already provided for in previous bond issues in 1987 and 1989, the state will be short by 35,000 beds in 1997. That would mean the number of felons being held in county jails would nearly tripple from a backlog of 10,000 to more than 28,000.

Because of prison overcrowding, state officials say many felons serve only 10 percent of their sentences, and violent offenders only 20 percent, before being released to make room for new prisoners.

Opponents cite the price tag, and say the cost will double to $2.2 billion because of the interest on the bonds over a 25-year period. Also, it will cost $1 million a day to operate the prisons after they are built.

Citizens United for the Reform of Errants says prisons are totally counter-productive and are schools for crime. CURE argues that the money should be spent on education, jobs and crime prevention.

"We're building prisons right now for our fourth graders," a CURE official says.

Proposition 5: Cities, counties and junior college districts could exempt property that is processed or stored within an enterprise zone from taxes if voters approve this amendment.

Supporters say the measure would revitalize economically depressed areas and create new jobs.

Opponents say it would create unequal taxation and is not needed because businesses in enterprise zones receive other kinds of tax breaks.

Proposition 6: Perhaps the most controversial amendment, this new law would create an eight-member Texas Ethics Commission. However, the Legislature also approved a bill that would create a commission by statute if voters do not approve the amendment.

Three issues are involved in the differences in the two laws.

One is whether the ethics law would be a part of the state constitution, and therefore more difficult to change, or be put in place by legislation and, therefore, easier to revise.

Another is that the amendment would allow the commission to set the salary of legislators, and then ask voters to approve it. Legislators now must set the amount of a proposed pay raise and ask voter approval.

Finally, the amendment would allow the commission to set a per diem amount to cover legislators' expenses, without voter approval as now required.

The League of Women Voters, Common Cause and Public Citizen oppose the amendment, primarily because the commission would be selected from lists of people submitted by the Legislature.

The groups believe the ethics law is weak and protects politicians more than citizens. They say the bill should be strengthened in the next session of the Legislature in 1993 rather than freezing current abuses in place in the constitution.

Gov. Ann Richards supports the amendment, but has been keeping a low profile. Barbara Jordan, the former congresswoman who is the governor's special adviser on ethics, says the amendment raises some questions but she will vote for it "as a first step."

Proposition 7: This amendment would permit the Employees Retirement System and the Teacher Retirement System to invest in any manner their boards consider prudent — which basically means real estate — rather than just in securities.

The Teacher Retirement System already is losing money on several indirect real estate loans through mortgages, which are considered securities.

The amendment would allow direct investment in real estate, as well as commodity futures, venture capital, oil and gas, and timber.

The 14,000-member Texas Public Employees Association opposes such use of pension funds as too risky.

Supporters, however, say the funds could make much more money with prudent real estate investments and could buy many quality buildings now at bargain prices.

Proposition 8: Because the constitution prohibits the state from incurring debt, every bond proposal requires a constitutional amendment. This one would permit the state to issue bonds by propositions submitted to voters, rather than by amendments that remain a part of the constitution.

A two-thirds vote of the House and Senate would be needed to authorize a proposal, which could be ratified by a majority of voters.

The proposition would have to describe on the ballot the amount and purpose of the debt and the source of repayment.

Proposition 9: This amendment is cited as further proof that the state is hamstrung and governs by constitutional amendments rather than by legislation.

The amendment will be voted on to benefit one person in the state, and is the second time such an amendment has been necessary on the same issue.

A rancher once homesteaded 62 acres, but missed an 1889 deadline to acquire clear title to the land. The state quietly put the land into the fund that benefits public schools. Unaware of that, the rancher lived on the land for many years and eventually sold it.

Lawrence Stoepler learned in 1988 that he did not have clear title to the land that his father had purchased in 1929. Because the Permanent School Fund is in the constitution, Stoepler needs a constitutional amendment to get title to his land.

Proposition 10: Approval of this amendment would exempt from taxes any non-profit water or sewer corporation's property used to acquire, treat, store, distribute or sell water or wastewater services.

Supporters say such entities provide a vital service to rural areas of the state that otherwise would not be served, and exemption from taxes would encourage formation of such corporations.

Opponents say the amendment would overturn a Texas Supreme Court ruling against exemptions for such water suppliers and that counties and school districts with water companies would have to raise taxes to make up for the losses.

Proposition 11: For the first time, voters will decide whether to repeal the constitutional prohibition against a lottery.

Gov. Richards and most state officials back the proposal as a revenue-raising measure. Comptroller John Sharp estimates a lottery would raise $462 million for the 1992-93 budget cycle if put into effect by July 1992, and would raise $1 billion every two years once in full operation.

Opponents argue is is morally wrong for the state to promote gambling, and that a lottery is a regressive tax on the poor and the hopeless. A government should not be in the business of taking advantage of its own citizens, lottery opponents say.

Supporters point out that, unlike a tax, buying a lottery ticket is voluntary. They also say more lottery players come not from the poor but the middle-class.

Proposition 12: This amendment would earmark $250 million rather than $100 million of a previous $500 million bond issue for loans and grants to provide water and sewer services to economically distressed communities known as "colonias" along the Texas-Mexico border.

An estimated 250,000 people live in such slums, and the lack of water and sewer systems has led to outbreaks of disease, including cholera.

Opponents say more money should not be transferred to colonias from the 1989 issue until use of the first $100 million is evaluated. They say colonias are a local problem, and homeowners in those areas should organize utililty districts.

Proposition 13: On Aug. 10, by less than a 1 percent margin, voters turned down this proposal for $300 million in tax-exempt, low-interest bonds to make loans to low- and middle-income college students.

Supporters contend voters didn't understand the measure. Former Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Barbara Jordan are part of a blue-ribbon committee formed to urge voter approval.

They point out that no state money ever has been used to retire student loan bonds. The loans have a low 6 percent student default rate, and defaults are more than made up by interest earned on the loans.

An increased enrollment and spiraling education costs have increased loan demand from $12 million in 1986 to $80 million in 1990. As of June, the program provided loans to 22,577 students. Without the bonds, the program would expire in March 1992.

The Higher Education Coordinating Board says the 7 percent interest rate, compared with a maximum 8 percent by private lenders, saves the average student more than $1,000.

Private lenders, led by the Association of Texas Lenders for Education, say the state can't afford to support an unnecessary student loan program while the state struggles for money for schools, prisons and health care.

Private lenders provide 90 percent of students loans and say they easily could provide the other 10 percent.

In addition, Midland County residents — not including those within the Midland city limits — who reside south of Interstate 20 will be voting on whether to join the Permian Basin Underground Water Conservation District. The district now includes Martin County and the Knott area of Howard County.

Approximately 2,000 Midland County residents will be eligible to vote on that proposal.

POLL: More Americans believe nation's off track

(From 1A)

March.

Underlying this wave of pessimism is anxiety about unemployment and other aspects of the economy about which they were asked. Forty-one percent of Americans say the health of the economy is the most important problem facing the country, and many predicted it will only get worse.

The public still overwhelmingly approves of the way President Bush is handling his job and many people indicate they know little or nothing about the current Democratic presidential contenders. Bush's overall approval rating stood at 67 percent.

But the poll indicated that the president could be vulnerable next November if the economy does not rebound. Just 33 percent said they approve of Bush's handling of the economy, while 57 percent disapproved.

Although Gov. Mario M. Cuomo of New York is not an announced candidate for president, he was the favorite among those polled who say they usually vote in Democratic primaries. These respondents say by a 2-to-1 margin that he should run for president in 1992.

For the telephone poll, 1,280 adults from across the political spectrum were questioned nationwide from Oct. 15 to Oct. 18. It included 991 people who said they were registered voters and 420 people who said they vote in Democratic primaries or caucuses.

The survey carries a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 3 percentage points for all registered voters and plus or minus 5 percentage points for Democratic primary and caucus voters.

In this first temperature reading on attitudes about the 1992 Democratic presidential field, it is clear that most voters are not yet paying much attention to the campaign.

Asked to choose among the six declared candidates at this early stage, 47 percent of the respondents who say they vote in Democratic primaries said they had no preference and 64 percent said that they were not satisfied with the candidates now running and that they wished there were more choices.

When these participants were asked in a separate question to choose among eight possible contenders, the two who drew the most support may not even run: Cuomo was preferred by 27 percent; the Rev. Jesse Jackson followed with 13 percent, and each of the others tallied in single digits. Although Jackson was second in the polling, respondents by a 2-to-1 margin said that he should not run.

Support for the six declared candidates reflects mainly name recognition. Edmund G. Brown Jr., the former California governor who announced his candidacy on Monday, led with 12 percent, followed by Gov. L. Douglas Wilder of Virginia, with 8 percent; Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska, 7 percent; Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, 5 percent; Sen. Tom Harkin of Iowa, 3 percent, and Paul E. Tsongas, a former Massachusetts senator, 2 percent.

In a hypothetical trial heat, Bush enjoyed an advantage of about 20 percentage points over an unnamed Democratic opponent; 49 percent of registered voters said they would probably vote for Bush, while 28 percent said they would probably back his opponent.

But in an indication that Bush would be vulnerable if the economy does not rebound, 79 percent of registered voters said domestic issues "will matter more in deciding how" they vote next year than would foreign policy matters.

HOSTAGE: American Jesse Turner is released

this humanitarian problem."

A computer science and mathematics professor from Boise, Idaho, Turner was kidnapped by a pro-Iranian group called Islamic Holy War for the Liberation of Palestine on Jan. 24, 1987 from Beirut University College along with another American professor, Alann Steen.

Up to eight other Westerners are being detained after disappearing in Lebanon: five Americans, two Germans, a Briton and an Italian businessman who some reports say may be dead.

Turner was the fourth long-held Western hostage to be released since mid-August, when complex negotiations began under the aegis of Perez de Cuellar to bring about freedom for all Middle East captives. The focus of the talks are the Westerners, some 300 Arabs held prisoner by Israel and its surrogate militia in Lebanon, and four Israeli servicemen who were part of an original group of seven missing in Lebanon for years.

It has been a painstaking, step-by-step process, with an understanding that a move by one side will lead to reciprocal actions from others.

In Turner's case, the path for his release was smoothed Monday morning when Israel freed 15 of its Lebanese captives, bringing to 66 the number of Arabs that it has let go since August. A release had been expected after the Israelis received definitive word over the weekend that one of their missing men, Pvt. Yossi Fink, had been killed.

Danny Naveh, an Israeli Defense Ministry spokesman, described the Israeli action as "a gesture" intended to advance the hostage negotiations undertaken by Perez de Cuellar. But Naveh said, "I can't tell you that it's part of a deal where we did this and then we expect something tomorrow morning."

Even so, Israeli officials have repeatedly made clear that if Israel is to free the Arabs still in its hands, it will expect the return of its servicemen — or at least reliable information about them, especially if they may be dead. By the same token, hostage holders in Lebanon insist that the freedom for the Westerners hinges on Israeli action.

The negotiations have been accompanied by finger-pointing, with Arabs and Israelis accusing each other of deliberately blocking a comprehensive deal for political gain. Further complicating matters are the internal rivalries reported among various groups of hostage-taking groups and their patrons in Iran and Syria.

Earlier Monday it was thought that Turner's release might have been delayed or scuttled when Islamic Holy War denounced Israel for staging an air strike Monday morning on a Lebanese camp of the Party of God, a pro-Iranian Shiite group.

GRAMM: Plan 'falls short'

cause it is based on the idea that any reduction in defense spending should be handed back to taxpayers.

The plan offered by Bentsen, who chairs the tax-writing Senate Finance Committee, features a $300 tax credit for each child 18 and younger and would restore fully deductible $2,000 Individual Retirement Accounts for all taxpayers.

Such IRAs now are limited to those not covered by a pension plan as well as people with individual incomes under $25,000 or family income under $40,000.

Bentsen claimed his plan would reduce the tax burden on middle-income taxpayers and also encourage Americans to bolster the sagging U.S. savings rate.

Bentsen said his tax cut could be paid for by a 5 percent reduction in defense spending over the next five years. "I think the taxpayers of the country ought to have at least 5 percent of that (peace) dividend," he said during a television interview on Sunday.

The Bush administration, in the process of crafting its own tax relief package, reacted warily to Bentsen's program.

"We are looking at a growth package that has a more immediate response," said Fitzwater. "But at this point, we haven't made decisions on what it will contain.'

Referring to Bentsen's proposal, Gramm said, "That's good long-term policy for America, but it won't dig us out of the recession...there is nothing in this proposal that's going to stimulate economic growth."

Instead, Gramm refloated his own "economic growth act," offered jointly last month with Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., a tax package including a capital gains cut.

FIRE: Million-dollar homes become charred ruins

about 500 homes.

He asked President Bush to declare a federal emergency, and officials of the Federal Emergency Management Agency were already gathering in San Francisco on Monday afternoon to aid the those left homeless.

By Monday morning firefighters, struggling in the steep, densely wooded terrain, managed to confine the fire to an area about a mile-and-a-half wide and three-miles long. There were many smoldering hot spots within it, but with the winds having died down to just a gentle breeze the hope was that they could be extinguished quickly.

"My hope is that by nightfall the hot spots will have been addressed," said Oakland Mayor Elihu Harris.

But the winds picked up to about 20 mph again Monday afternoon, and Chris O'Rourke, an Oakland Fire Department spokesman, said he feared the fire could yet spread south into the Montclair section of Oakland and Piedmont, a city of mostly expensive homes surrounded by Oakland. "There's still a great potential of fire blowing up and jumping lines," he said.

Oakland Fire Chief Lamont Ewell, who has been on the job only 10 days, said, "We are praying we don't get the winds we experienced last night." He said the cause of the fire appeared to have been a rekindling of a brush fire thought to have been put out Saturday.

The fire delivered another tragic blow to a region still recovering, physically and psychologically, from the earthquake that struck the Bay Area two years ago almost to the day.

The instrument of the suffering this time was another natural insult, an unforgiving drought that for five years has withheld water from the eucalyptus-studded hills and canyons crowded with homes.

What started out as a quiet fall Sunday of church going and car washing in the affluent suburbs across the bay from San Francisco turned suddenly into an inferno from which 5,000 residents fled in a frenzy, carrying pets and whatever valuables they could scoop up.

The smoke was so dense it drifted as far as Sacramento, almost 100 miles to the east.

The fire disrupted commuter patterns in the East Bay area.

Earthquake survivors in India cremate dead, salvage homes

UTTARKASHI, India (AP) — Survivors of an earthquake that rocked the Himalayan foothills cremated the dead Monday and salvaged what they could from shattered homes while awaiting help to reach the remote region.

The official death toll was put at 361, but other estimates were as high as 670.

Thousands of people huddled outside the ruins of houses or along narrow, winding roads waiting for food and medical help distributed by soldiers and medical teams.

Sunday's quake hit along the Tibetan border in a remote and rugged corner of Uttar Pradesh state, where lush valleys undulate between foothills that rise into the majestic Himalayas.

State government officials said they had confirmed 361 deaths, while a federal government team reported 415. An Indian Red Cross worker in this town at the center of the devastation said she counted 670 names on death lists compiled by the headmen in 125 villages.

Uttar Pradesh's top elected official, Chief Minister Kalyan Singh, said at least 1,200 people were injured and 7,000 houses destroyed.

The earthquake was measured at 6.1 on the Richter scale by Indian seismologists, while the U.S. Geological Survey put the magnitude at 7.1, about 10 times stronger. A reading of 6 is considered a severe earthquake, while 7 or more is a major quake.

The worst-hit area was the Uttarkashi region.

Gorbachev's warnings fall on deaf ears

The World

MOSCOW (NYT) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev surveyed the shaky remains of the Soviet Union before its shrunken new Parliament on Monday and found his warning about the dangers of forming separate republic armies falling on deaf ears.

In a tone that seemed funereal at times, the weary-looking Soviet leader inaugurated the weakened Parliament, whose session was ignored by five of the 12 Soviet republics, and delivered a state of the union message that went unacknowledged by applause.

The session was a far from rousing demonstration of the fact that power in the post-communist Soviet empire now resides with the separate republic executives and hardly with the depleted Parliament of a nation whose very identity is increasingly in doubt.

"To move the country out of crisis we must settle a number of fundamental problems — primarily the fate of the Soviet state," Gorbachev told the legislators, whose law-making role was made secondary to a new emergency State Council of republic leaders soon after the failed coup d'etat in August.

"Do we go ahead together or does each republic search for a way out of the crisis on its own?" he continued. "Until we clarify that issue, any programs will remain just good intentions."

The mood in the Kremlin debating chamber seemed a mix of confusion and weariness as Gorbachev warned of the "dangerous, irresponsible and illegal" action by several republics now threatening to form their own separatist armies with little regard for Gorbachev's authority as national commander in chief.

Gorbachev told the Parliament there would soon be another proposal to create a new union of sovereign republics.

Iraq admits weapons research

BAGHDAD, Iraq (NYT) — The Iraqi authorities for the first time have admitted in a written declaration that they conducted research on building atomic bombs, the chief of the United Nations inspection team said here Monday night.

Dimitri Perricos, the head of the seventh U.N. team to visit Iraq to supervise the disposal of Baghdad's weapons of mass destruction, said on the eve of his departure that the Iraqi authorities this week "made a declaration they had launched a research and study program on the weaponization process."

Perricos added that Baghdad had merely confirmed what a previous U.N. inspection team discovered, "so in a way, this has been a proven thing now."

The previous team, led by David Kay, an American official of the International Atomic Energy Agency, seized large quantities of documents last month from the offices of the Iraqi atomic energy department. They showed that Iraqi scientists were actively pursuing a program to produce weapons-grade, highly enriched uranium and reprocessed plutonium for use in various nuclear weapons designs, officials said.

In addition, U.N. teams have found evidence that Iraq obtained from Western and other foreign suppliers technology to test various industrial processes that could lead to large-scale production of bomb-grade uranium by the mid-1990s.

But until now, Iraqi officials had insisted in their official statements that their nuclear program amounted to research into "peaceful" uses of atomic enrgy.

Perricos, speaking to reporters outside his hotel, said he would not discuss the contents of the Iraqi declaration, but he characterized the significance of the letter by saying, "It was the first time that they themselves admitted that they had research and studies launched into a program of what they say we call weaponization."

PLO announces it will declare membership at peace talks

JERUSALEM (NYT) — Brushing aside Israel's warnings that it will not negotiate with anyone tied to the Palestine Liberation Organization, the man widely understood to be the designated chief of the Palestinian delegation to the Middle East peace talks said Monday that he and his colleagues were prepared to declare openly that they are PLO members.

"If we need to say this at any juncture, we shall not hesitate to say it if necessary," Dr. Haider Abdel-Shafi of the Gaza Strip told the Israeli army radio. "Certainly, we are not going to refrain from affirming we are PLO supporters."

In Cairo, the organization's chairman, Yasser Arafat, made clear that even though his group would have to stay in the background at Israel's insistence, it intends to exert great influence on the 14 Palestinian representatives who will go the conference in Madrid next week as part of a joint delegation with Jordan.

"Each and every person among the Palestinian people represents the PLO," Arafat told reporters on Monday.

A six-member advisory committee has been established to go to Madrid and serve as a link between the official Palestinian delegation and the PLO leadership. According to knowledgeable Palestinians in Jerusalem, this panel includes two experienced negotiators here, Faisal al-Husseini and Hanan Ashrawi, who have often met with Secretary of State James A. Baker III over the last half a year and who speak openly for the PLO.

The increasingly high profile that the organization has chosen to show in the last few days, if carried far enough, could push the Israeli government to a point where it feels that it has no choice but to walk out of the peace talks. Thus far, that point has not been reached.

Israeli officials chose Monday to dismiss the new assertiveness as posturing by a group frustrated over its lack of an official role in Madrid.

"The more the PLO is deprived from being in the process, the more it will do to be perceived as being involved," a senior official said. "As far as Israel is concerned, there is no role for the PLO."

Other Israelis, however, remain unpersuaded. In a newspaper commentary on Monday, a former coordinator of Israeli operations in the occupied territories argued that the government, by agreeing to go to Madrid, "has in essence lifted the taboo on negotiations with the PLO."

While the Palestinians in the Israel-occupied territories have gained strength, "it is clear that the decision-making process passed through Arafat and his aides," said the former official, Efraim Sneh.

U.S., Vietnam to establish relations by 1993, official says

By John P. Wallach
Hearst News Service writer

WASHINGTON — The United States will establish diplomatic relations with Vietnam "by 1993" if Vietnam cooperates on the POW/MIA issue and supports free elections in Cambodia, a top administration official said Monday.

Richard Solomon, the assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific Affairs, said in an interview that this U.S. position will be conveyed to Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Manh Cam when he meets Secretary of State James Baker in Paris on Tuesday or Wednesday.

This is the first time the United States has given Vietnam a specific date for recoginizing the Asian nation. The current nation of Vietnam came into existence in 1975 when North Vietnam conquered South Vietnam. Since then, U.S. policy has been to shun Vietnam.

More than 55,000 Americans died in the Vietnam war and more than 1,700 more are still listed as either prisoners of war (POWs) or missing in action (MIAs).

Solomon said the time frame for resuming official U.S.-Vietnamese ties is "one of the things that's going to be done in the next couple of days" when Baker and Cam meet in Paris to join representatives of 17 other nations to sign the United Nations-sponsored pact ending the 13-year-old civil war there.

He said the resumption of normal ties with Vietnam will occur in a "step-by-step" manner with the administration moving soon to begin dismantling the trade embargo against Vietnam and then supporting Vietnamese applications for loans from the World Bank. Full diplomatic relations could be established with Vietnam "by 1993 if there's a lot of cooperation" on the POW/MIA issue and Cambodia, he said.

Solomon said Vietnam has been cooperating on both issues.

In the case of POWs/MIAs, he said the Vietnamese regime has broadcast appeals to its citizens to provide any information they may have on Americans living in their country. Solomon said there is no hard evidence that any Americans are being held in captivity or against their will.

However, he added that "there is some possibility that there are a handful of Americans over there who went AWOL (absent without leave) or otherwise decided to stay." He said any such ex-GIs are not POWS but Americans who elected to stay "voluntarily."

The assistant secretary quickly added that there is "no hard information" that this may be the case. "It's just my gut instinct," he said.

On elections in Cambodia, Vietnam plays a crucial role because the regime in Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital, was put in place by Vietnam after it invaded Cambodia in 1978 and ousted the murderous Khmer Rouge regime. Several hundred thousand Vietnamese troops were deployed in Cambodia to protect the puppet government.

Court upholds Pennsylvania abortion law

PHILADELPHIA (NYT) — A federal appeals court upheld on Monday most provisions of Pennsylvania's abortion law, one of the strictest in the nation, and set the stage for an appeal to the Supreme Court that could provide the first direct test of the 1973 Roe v. Wade decision establishing the right to an abortion.

"For the first time since 1973, a federal court of appeals has directly said that Roe v. Wade is no longer the law of the land," said Kathryn Kolbert, the lawyer for the American Civil Liberties Union's Reproductive Freedom Project who argued the case for the plaintiffs, Planned Parenthood of Pennsylvania.

In Monday's ruling, a three-judge panel of the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturned a federal district judge's decision that two central provisions of Pennsylvania's Abortion Control Act of 1989 were unconstitutional. The district court judge had ruled that the provisions would impose an undue burden on women seeking abortions.

One of the provisions found constitutional on Monday by the appellate court was a requirement that women under 18 years of age have parental consent for an abortion or a court ruling that parental consent was not required.

The other provision was a requirement that women seeking abortion must give their "informed consent," which according to the law requires a doctor to give them pre-abortion counseling and the women to wait 24 hours after such counseling before an abortion is performed.

But the appellate court upheld the lower court's decision that a requirement forcing women to notify their husbands before having an abortion was unconstitutional.

Ms. Kolbert said Planned Parenthood is considering an appeal to the full appellate court or to the U.S. Supreme Court. She said she believed the risk inherent in appealing to the Supreme Court — giving it an opportunity to throw out Roe. V. Wade — would no longer inhibit groups favoring the right of women to choose an abortion from appealing because, in her view, the Third Circuit effectively overturned Roe v. Wade in Monday's ruling.

Kate L. Mershimer, an assistant state attorney general who argued the case, said she had not yet had time to study the opinion, but added, "It looks like it's going to be a very, very significant decision."

Ernest D. Preate Jr., the Pennsylvania attorney general, issued a statement saying, "We argued that the Pennsylvania statute is a middle-of-the-road statute, that it provides reasonable controls on abortion but does not ban abortion."

High court to rehear cigarette case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Supreme Court apparently deadlocked in a high-stakes dispute over health warnings for cigarette smokers Monday ordered the case reheard, presumably so Clarence Thomas can cast a tie-breaking vote.

In a brief order, the justices said they will hear new arguments in the case to help them decide whether cigarette manufacturers may be sued for allegedly misrepresenting the dangers smokers face. The new arguments will be held in January on a date yet to be determined, court officials said.

The court gave no indication it wished to expand the scope of its inquiry or focus on a particular question that may have been left unanswered when the case was first argued Oct. 8.

Woman's AIDS vendetta a hoax, Dallas police say

DALLAS (AP) — "C.J.," who jolted the city with her anonymous claims that she was deliberately infecting men with AIDS, was a hoax created by a teen-ager and copied by up to six other women, police said Monday.

"We want to assure the community that this purported danger does not exist," said Deputy Police Chief Ray Hawkins.

The hoax began with the letter published in the September issue of Ebony magazine. In it, a woman who claimed to be infected with the AIDS virus said she was having sex with men to deliberately spread the virus in retaliation against the man who had infected her.

A woman who claimed to be C.J. later called Dallas radio and television stations to repeat the claim.

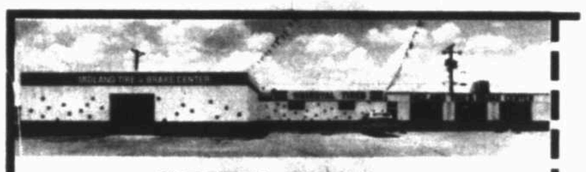

But Hawkins said the mother of a 15-year-old girl told police Oct. 10 that her daughter wrote the letter. The girl, who wasn't infected, wanted to raise AIDS awareness after a family friend died of the fatal disease, he said.

There also were six or seven other C.J.'s calling radio and television stations. Police have identified one of them, a 29-year-old Dallas woman.

"She did it as a joke, a lark," Hawkins said. "She didn't intend for it to hurt anyone. . . . We fail to see the humor in it." He wouldn't say how she was caught.

The woman is being tested for the HIV virus, Hawkins said. No charges have been filed, but if she tests positive, she could be charged with knowingly transmitting AIDS, a felony.

Police wouldn't name the 15-year-old or 29-year-old, but said they didn't know each other.

Four proposals deserve approval

In addition to the lottery proposal, which was discussed in an editorial in the Reporter-Telegram on Sunday, Texas voters also will be deciding the outcome of 12 other propositions in the Nov. 5th constitutional amendment election. Following is our view on four of the remaining propositions.

Most important is Proposition 4, which would authorize the issuance of $1.1 billion in general obligation bonds to be used for acquiring, constructing or equipping new prisons and substance-abuse felony punishment facilities. There's no question that this expenditure is needed, even though the state now must carefully weigh every additional expense. County jails across Texas — including Midland County Jail — are overcrowded because of the burgeoning inmate population in the Texas Department of Corrections (TDC). The fact that TDC cannot take more prisoners means the county jails must hold them or the prisoners must be released early.

That's a deadly situation because it means many prisoners get turned back out onto the streets to prey on society. It also undermines the strength of our judicial system by weakening the punishment element of our criminal justice system. This tragedy cannot be allowed to continue. Those who have endorsed the approval of this amendment include the Midland County Commissioners Court and Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, among others. Voters should cast their ballots for Proposition 4.

Proposition 5 would permit a taxing jurisdiction, such as a county, junior college district or municipality, through agreement with a qualified business located in an enterprise zone to exempt that business's property from taxation if the property stays in the state only 175 days. Basically, this proposition is a variation of the "free-port" amendment. This amendment would offer a way to revitalize economically depressed areas of the state and should be approved.

To qualify for the exemption, a business must be new or expanding and located within the enterprise zone. Even though it grants a tax exemption at a time when exemptions may not be favored, this measure will encourage the revitalization of economically depressed areas and provide a way to improve a local tax base.

Proposition 13 would keep the state's college loan program alive. Although there are other sources of funding available, the college loan money made available to prospective students by the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board permits some students to attend an institution of higher learning who otherwise could not attend. The proposition would authorize the issuance of up to $300 million to students.

The funds would continue the Hinson-Hazlewood College Student Loan Program. The program has been a good one, and money from repaid loans will be applied to the retirement of the bonds.

This money is needed now more than ever before. If the bonds are not approved, the loan program will run out of funds for student loans by the end of March 1992. Voters should cast their ballots "for" this amendment.

Proposition 9 is similar to one that was on the books until Jan. 1, 1990, when it expired. Under this proposal, the commissioner of the General Land Office is authorized to issue patents to individuals for Texas public school land that has been in dispute. This will relieve an inequitable situation for a few landowners who bought land in good faith and have paid taxes for years, only to learn that the title to the land belongs not to them but to the permanent school fund.

This amendment will provide a resolution to that inequitable situation.

For several decades now, the trend in Texas has been toward the movement of population from rural communities to urban areas. That has resulted in the need for Proposition 1, which would allow cities that have operated under "home-rule" but now have dropped below the required 5,000 population level, to amend their charters.

This is an understandable problem for the 36 communities in Texas that now have dropped below the 5,000 population mark. Those communities should have the ability to adopt or amend their charters without regard to their population level.

This amendment removes the population restriction regarding the amendment of a city charter but leaves intact the population restriction regarding adoption of a charter. A better way would have been to repeal the population restriction altogether, but voters should go ahead and approve this measure in the interest of helping the 36 communities involved.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The remaining eight proposed constitutional amendments will be addressed in Wednesday's Reporter-Telegram.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 22, the 295th day of 1991. There are 70 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 22, 1962, President John F. Kennedy went on radio and television to announce he had ordered U.S. air and naval forces to blockade Cuba, following the discovery of Soviet missile bases on the island. Kennedy demanded the Soviets dismantle the rocket sites.

On this date:

In 1746, Princeton University in New Jersey received its charter.

In 1836, Sam Houston was inaugurated as the first constitutionally elected president of the Republic of Texas.

Arab unity still only a pipe dream

WASHINGTON — The new-world-order fantasy of an all-Arab security force protecting Kuwait from another Iraqi invasion has been abandoned. Secret U.S. intelligence reports coming out of the Middle East reveal that the region is so fractious since the end of the Persian Gulf War that "Arab unity" is now a dead issue.

Anderson

We predicted in January that the war would mean the end of "Pan Arabism" — the uniting of all Arab countries as a single empire. Experts in the National Security Council and the State Department told us then that the alienation of Iraq and the Palestinians from the rest of the Arab world was the death knell.

But even those experts have been surprised by the level of bad blood between Arab countries since the war — even countries that were united in their opposition to Iraq.

The biggest evidence of this, though secret, is America's futile effort to leave an all-Arab defense force in Kuwait. It proved impossible.

According to a secret agreement made during the war, Egypt and Syria pledged to provide the bulk of the troops for ongoing defense of tiny Kuwait once Saddam Hussein was put back in his place. The United States was anxious to have Arabs do the job rather than basing British and American troops there permanently and face accusations of colonialism.

Everything was fine until Kuwait lavished too many multibillion-dollar reconstruction contracts on the United States and Britain. Kuwait not only trusted Western workmanship, but felt that a debt was owed to the leaders of the alliance that drove Iraqi soldiers out of Kuwait.

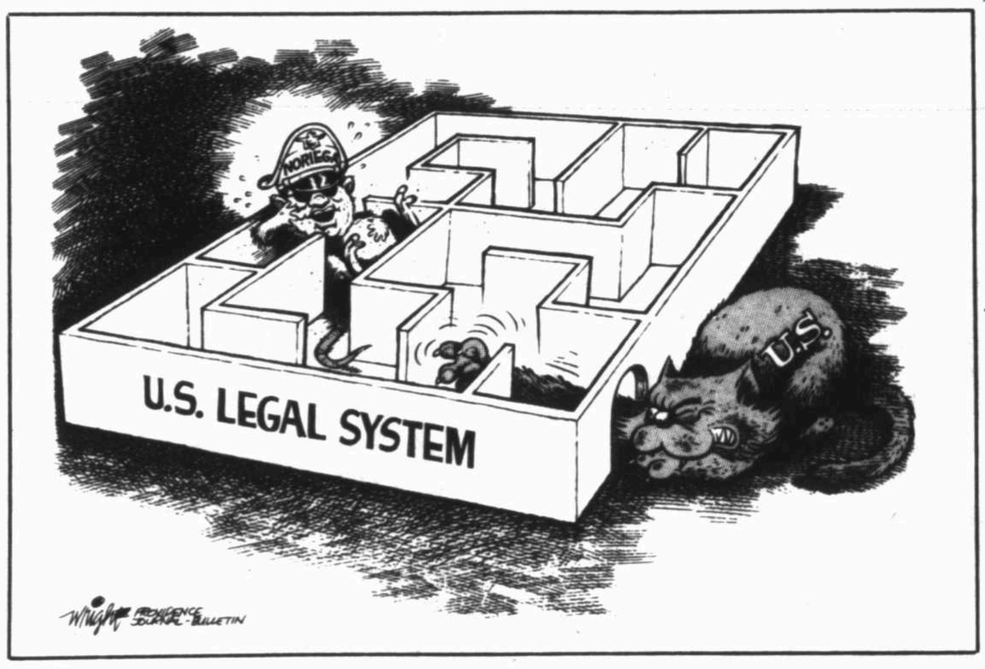

But Egypt didn't see it that way. Poverty-stricken Egypt had expected a big chunk of the reconstruction work and complained mightily in secret communications to the White House and the State Department. Though the Bush administration was anxious to keep Egypt happy, it couldn't shift enough post-war work to Egypt to satisfy that country.

Egypt signaled the United States several months ago that it was no longer willing to join the defense force. It felt unwanted, and annoyed about Kuwait's standoffishness, so Egypt pulled out of the deal. Then Syria, unwilling to be the only major country providing defense forces, dropped out, too.

That is the story behind the story that led to the signing of a 10-year American-Kuwaiti defense treaty last month. The United States will remain the primary defender of Kuwait. There will be no permanent bases in Kuwait, but the United States will have access to Kuwaiti harbors, will carry out joint military exercises and will rush to Kuwait's aid again if Iraq threatens to overrun it.

The deal couldn't have made the Kuwaitis happier. In an opinion poll several months ago, only 3 percent of Kuwaitis said they would feel secure if other Arab nations were their only protectors. A whopping 66 percent of Kuwaitis said they — the beneficiaries of a remarkable inter-Arab effort to save their hides from Saddam — no longer believed in Arab unity. Some 33.5 percent said they would agree to the stationing of Western troops in their country.

The final nail in the coffin of Arab unity is the secret refusal of some of the smaller Gulf states to join an Arab peacekeeping force in Kuwait. Bahrain and Oman refused to sign any mutual defense pact that didn't include Iran. These small states, once fearful of Iranian Shiite fundamentalism, are now asking Iran for help. Turning to the Persians for approval of an inter-Arab pact would have been unthinkable a year ago.

Feminists want revenge on Democrats

Hell hath no fury like — aw, shucks, as we old-fashioned males like to say; there go the sexual stereotypes again. Forgive. Because the intended point is, here come the feminists, blood in their eyes and in their voices. They want revenge on those Democratic senators who voted to confirm Clarence Thomas.

Murchison

"We'll remember in November," anti-Thomas women chanted at the Capitol after their best efforts had failed to procure the nominee's resounding humiliation. Republican MCPs — what could you expect of such reprobates anyway? But pro-Thomas Democrats, 11 of 'em at that! Hang the traitors! Boil 'em in oil!

"Women have been the most loyal of the Democratic voters," explains Jeanne Clarke of the National Organization for Women. "We gave them our votes. We gave them our money. And they gave us Clarence Thomas. We're fed up."

What stirs these passions? In part, the Senate's implied rejection of Anita Hill's testimony about sexual harassment. A male — leave race out of it — prevailed in the credibility department over a card-carrying female.

That's not the whole of the matter, though.

The feminist outcry against Thomas has been likened by some Thomas supporters to McCarthyism. Not so, ripostes historian Thomas C. Reeves of the University of Wisconsin, the nation's leading expert on McCarthyism. "It isn't McCarthyism unless it's false ... I do not know whether Clarence Thomas was guilty or not of what was said about him." Reeves sees at work a more significant force — feminist backlash against the disappearance of the permissive, unprincipled 1960s.

"At war," says Professor Reeves, author of a current national best seller about President Kennedy's character, "are two whole views of looking at the meaning of life, and it has to do with the '60s, which are, thank God, fading away. It's driving the far left crazy. An example of how crazy they are getting is political correctness on campus."

As for the anti-Thomas furor, Professor Reeves says, "My guess is that 80 percent of it was really about abortion. That's the great issue. That's why they were really after this man, because they knew damn well that he is not going to be an abortion sympathizer. Abortion is at the root of so much of feminist ideology. Where is the moral balance between a man who allegedly talks dirty and people who have justified the destruction of 27 million unborn children?"

Professor Reeves thinks it high time to widen the meaning of harassment. The sexual kind (though hard, even dangerous, to define) is deplorable. As is "leftist harassment," visited on such as Judges Thomas and Bork.

The latter species is thoroughly predictable in the context of the times. Yes, the free-and-easy, gimme-everything-I-want '60s are dying. The beneficiaries, residents mostly of the political left, are angry and irrational. They would cut off their noses to spite their faces. Who is helped most if Democrats lose elections? The party and president who put Judge Thomas on the court.

Roe vs. Wade is contrary to our constitutional scheme. It should fall. When it does, state legislatures, acting with the voters' consent, may decide what is prudent and desirable to do about abortion. We'll all fight over it, but we'll know that elected officials, rather than Olympian judges, are making our public policy.

What a change from the fast-fading '60s — a change we should hope Justice Thomas will embody in his jurisprudence, the way he already embodies courage in the face of bullies.

CHARLEY REESE

Columbus doesn't deserve recent attacks

The attacks against Western civilization by some intellectuals — typified recently by attempts to picture Christopher Columbus as a villain who brought destruction to paradise — has more to do with urban neurosis, self-hate and political ideology than scholarship.

Reese

In the first place, the pre-Columbus Western Hemisphere was no paradise. Relatively clean water and virgin forests do not a paradise make, and even those claiming that it does admit the lie by their own actions. They continue to live in cities instead of moving to Sasketchewan or Alaska where even today one can live in a wilderness "paradise".

Moreover, the population of the Americas which Columbus found were engaged in pretty much the same activities human beings elsewhere practice — war, empire, tyranny, superstition. It is another characteristic of modern American urban neurotics that they have tenaciously adopted the fantasy that somehow the Indian populations were tribes of angels not subject to the same frailties as the rest of the species.

It is proper that Indians be shown in all their human complexity rather than depicted as mindless savages. But substituting a new myth for an old myth doesn't get us anywhere.

One critic of Columbus complains that he was seeking wealth. Why else would one undergo the hardships of sailing toward the unknown in 1492? Certainly not to watch birds. Unless one finds some mystic starvation, misery and poverty, searching for wealth is a fairly rational human pursuit. I doubt if any of Columbus' current critics have ever turned up their noses at a book contract or a federal grant.

Columbus was what he was — a man with the vision to want to sail west and a man tough enough and competent enough to pull it off. No, he wasn't Mr. Sweetie Pie. But then Mr. Sweetie Pie would never have sailed, and if he had would never have controlled the tough crewmen on the three ships. Moreover it is simplistic to imagine Columbus had only a single motive when hardly any other human being on earth ever does anything for just one reason.

I think people who hate Western civilization should leave it. That's the rational thing to do. If something is hateful, the rational person wishes to avoid it. It is irrational, not to mention unseemly, to sit around enjoying the comforts and fruits of Western civilization in a place made liveable by Western civilization and to complain all the time about how evil it is.

Granted that Western civilization has been so beneficial to mankind that it is difficult to find a place untouched by it, but I think there are still a few backwaters in Asia and Africa where one might save oneself from being corrupted by W.C.

As for me, I love Western civilization. It's not paradise either but humans never have and never will live in paradise on this little cinder of a planet. If it's paradise you want, then you will have to try dying or building a better spaceship than any currently available. You may not find paradise in either event, but you sure as heck won't ever find it in this solar system.

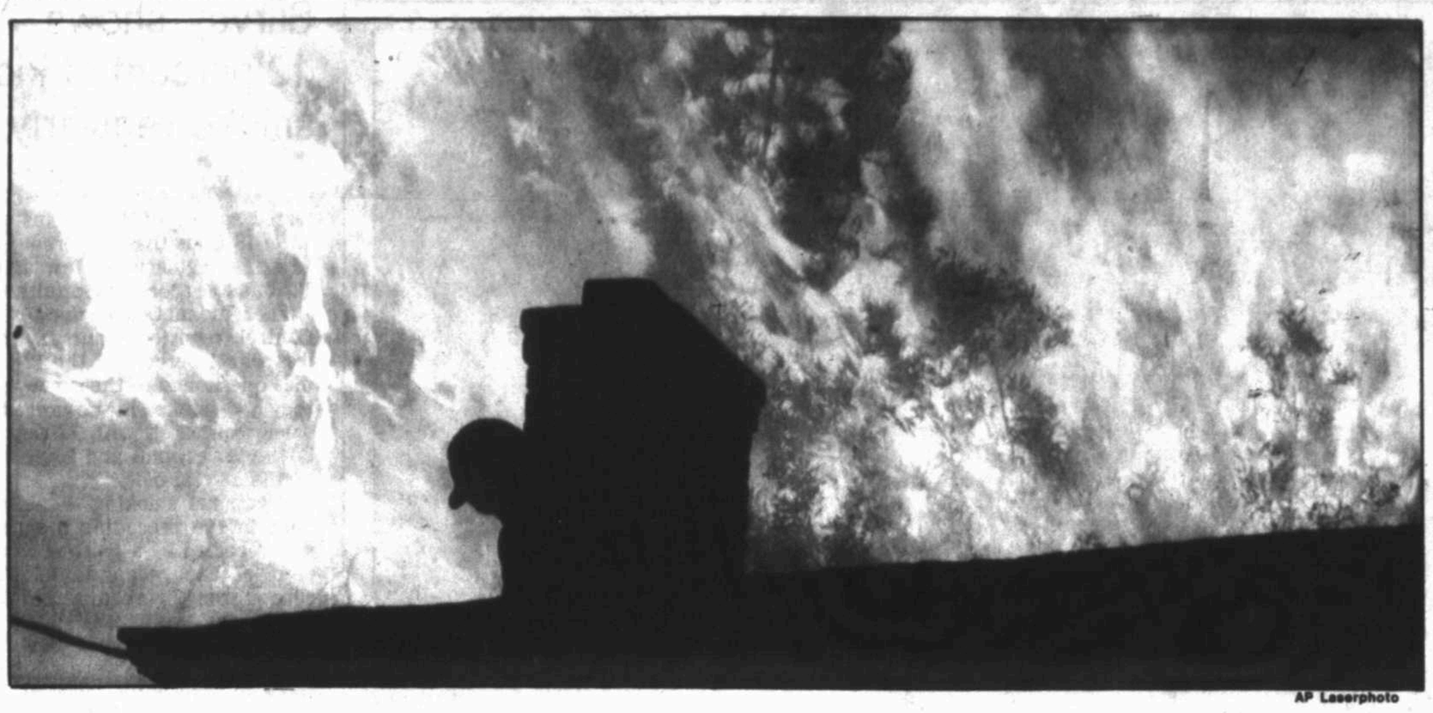

Western civilization has done a fine job of bringing knowledge and freedom from misery to masses of people. Every civilization and every culture has both good and bad characteristics.

For the majority of Americans their ancestors are European. Their civilization is European. Their country is a derivative of that European civilization. Its religions, its philosophy, its institutions, its government all stem from the experiences of the Mediterranean and European people.

If your ancestors are Asian or African or something else, be proud of them but don't knock European civilization. We can't teach tolerance by being intolerant or respect by being disrespectful.

Columbus and his voyage are still worth celebrating.

Nowhere to hide

A firefighter ducks behind a chimney to escape the wall of flames in the trees behind him as thousands of firefighters struggle to control a raging fire in the Oakland and Berkeley hills Monday. The fire has burned 1,700 acres of land, damaged 600 buildings, killed 10 people and injured 150. Ten people are missing, and estimated damages are $1.5 billion.

Study shows whites, Asians have better mortgage odds

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Federally insured lenders are more likely to approve home mortgage applications from whites and Asian Americans than from African Americans and Hispanics with the same income, says a large-scale study released Thursday by federal regulators.

Federal regulators said they will need more study to learn why the pattern, found earlier in a more limited study of mortgages issued by savings and loans, was also found in the new, more comprehensive study of all home mortgage applications considered in 1990 by federally regulated S&Ls, mortgage bankers, credit unions and banks.

House Banking Committee Chairman Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, said he already knows why: racial discrimination by lenders overseen by "regulators who have failed to vigorously enforce" fair lending and anti-discrimination laws.

"It matters not whether the discrimination is intentional," Gonzalez said in an open letter to President Bush. "Discrimination by ignorance is just as hurtful and just as destructive as discrimination by design."

Based on more than 3 million applications for home-purchase mortgages considered in 1990 by 9,300 financial institutions, the study by the Federal Financial Institutions Exam Council showed:

- Only 12.9 percent of Asians and 14.4 percent of whites who applied were denied mortgages. The rejection rate was 21.4 percent for Hispanics, 22.4 percent for American Indians and 33.9 percent for blacks.
- Among low-income applicants (those with incomes below 80 percent of the median in their metropolitan area), the rejection rates followed the same pattern among the four groups for which the comparison was made: 8 percent for Asians, 14 percent for whites, 16 percent for Hispanics and 25 percent for blacks.
- Among high-income applicants (those with incomes more than 20 percent above the median in their metropolitan area), the rejection rates were similar for those four groups: 8.5 percent for whites, 11.2 percent for Asians, 15.8 percent for Hispanics and 21.4 percent for blacks.
- The same racial pattern appeared for government-backed loans and conventional loans, for refinancing and home improvement loans, and for every one of the nation's 19 largest metropolitan areas.

"Now I find these differences very worrisome," said John LaWare, the Federal Reserve governor who heads the council that compiled the data.

Louisiana politics heat up center stage

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Suddenly, the high theater of Louisiana politics has become deadly serious to both parties.

For national Republican leaders, the second-place finish by State Rep. David Duke in Saturday's primary for governor, which puts him in the runoff election on Nov. 16, is a source of deep embarrassment. Even as the White House and the Republican National Committee sought to distance themselves from the former Ku Klux Klan leader on Monday, he was making the rounds of the morning talk shows — as a Republican, he insisted.

"I think there are millions of Republicans who agree with me," Duke said on ABC's "Good Morning America."

Democrats were quick to reach for the moral high ground on Monday, asserting that Duke's success in Louisiana is the logical outgrowth of years of Republican attempts to build on racial divisions, with issues from busing to prison furloughs to the present debate over racial hiring preferences.

But there was little partisan chortling in the capital on Monday: the Louisiana governor's primary had daunting lessons for both parties. Both Republican and Democratic analysts cautioned that Louisiana is the most idiosyncratic of states, with a long history of protest politics and an economy that has been ailing for years.

But these analysts also said that the primary reflected, in extreme form, a powerful anti-establishment mood building around the country.

The Duke phenomenon obviously has much to do with race, these analysts said, and the way economically insecure white voters can respond to angry talk about welfare and affirmative-action programs. But it also transcends this, some argued.

U.S. confirms stand against repatriation

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The State Department Monday repeated its position opposing the forcible repatriation of Vietnamese boat people, but it did not specifically protest Britain's plan to send back 222 Vietnamese emigres now in Hong Kong.

A spokeswoman said the United States understood Britain's decision to send back those boat people who had fled to Hong Kong, agreed to return to Vietnam and then gone back to Hong Kong.

But State Department officials said they hoped that force would not be used, and they hinted that the Bush administration would not acquiesce in the involuntary return of other Vietnamese.

Genetics research poses discrimination threat, experts say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Advances in human genetics, now the focus of a massive government-backed project, pose serious threats of discrimination and violation of privacy rights, a House panel was told Thursday.

Experts led by Nobel laureate James Watson — who discovered the molecular structure of DNA — warned that people could lose employment, education and health insurance as a result of genetic discrimination.

The question is what could happen when science is able to pinpoint genes for diseases such as Alzheimer's disease, cystic fibrosis or alcoholism in individuals.

"One of the most serious and most immediate concerns is that genetic information may be used to create a new genetic underclass," said Rep. Bob Wise, D-W. Va., who chairs the House Government Operations Committee's subcommittee on government information, justice and agriculture.

"Genetic information should be totally confidential," said Watson, who directs the National Center for Human Genome Research at the National Institutes of Health.

Congress is spending more than $3 billion on the 15-year Human Genome Project, an attempt to identify the more than 100,000 genes in the human body that could lead to understanding and cures for thousands of hereditary diseases.

Dr. Nancy Wexler, president of the Heredity Diseases Foundation, said employers might be tempted to discriminate against a carrier of sickle cell disease, which is more common among blacks, because they don't want to shoulder the medical bills if the employee's child becomes sick.

Wexler said some people are paying up to $4,000 for private testing for Huntington's disease so insurance companies won't find out and deny them health insurance.

"It would be a bitter irony if people who can benefit from early diagnostic tests are dissuaded" from doing so from fear of losing their insurance, said Wexler, whose mother and grandfather died from Huntington's disease.

Wexler chairs the joint NIH-Department of Energy Working Group on Ethical, Legal and Social Issues (ELSI) aimed at guarding against the misuse of genetic information. ELSI receives about 3 percent of the project's total budget.

Jeremy Rifkin, president of the Foundation on Economic Trends and a longtime critic of genetics research, warned that violations are already occurring. He cited a Pentagon plan to maintain DNA "dogtags" on all service personnel and a $600,000 government grant to study genetic links to I.Q.

"We are embarked on a very dangerous journey," Rifkin said.

Little left

Frank Easter finds only bricks left standing as he surveys the fire damage in Chattaroy Hills, about 20 miles north of Spokane, Wash. Wildfires destroyed more than 100 homes in Washington Wednesday.

Survey shows 12 percent of kids smoke regularly

ATLANTA (AP) — A newly released survey of Americans ages 12 to 18 finds that 12 percent are smoking regularly — few at age 12, but one-fourth by adulthood.

The national Centers for Disease Control reported Thursday that less than 1 percent of the 12-year-olds questioned in the survey said they had smoked in the preceding week, compared with 12 percent of the 15-year-olds and 25 percent of the 18-year-olds.

Occasional smoking — at least once in the preceding month — was reported by a total of 16 percent of the respondents. That ranged from 2 percent at age 12 to 31 percent at 18.

The findings, from a 1989 telephone-mail survey, were similar to those of a recently released 1990 national survey of high school students.

In that survey, 13 percent said they smoked often — at least 25 of the preceding 30 days — and 32 percent said they had smoked at least once in that time period.

Removing lead from homes costs money, workers' health

WASHINGTON (AP) — Getting rid of lead-based paints in American homes could cost half a trillion dollars and contaminate untrained workers with the very poisons they are trying to clean up, a Senate panel was told Thursday.

While everyone agreed that lead paint is harmful, real estate agents and home builders dislike part of a proposed law that would require lead testing in homes being sold by the government.

The National Association of Home Builders complained that these tests are expensive and can be inaccurate.

"Mandatory testing reduces the value of existing, older housing and needlessly raises the cost of all housing," the association told a Senate Banking subcommittee on housing and urban affairs.

Young children are particularly susceptible to lead poisoning by eating paint chips that have flaked off or by breathing air contaminated by lead dust. Lead poisoning causes brain damage.

A 1990 survey by the Department of Housing and Urban Development estimated that 57 million privately owned homes in the United States are contaminated with lead-based paint, the Senate panel was told.

The department estimated it would cost $499 billion over 10 years to remove the hazard.

The United Brotherhood of Carpenters asked for strong federal standards on certification of contractors and training of workers.

Beijing University officials ban public hugging, kissing on campus

By Kathy Wilhem
Associated Press writer

BEIJING — Young love is out at Beijing University.

School officials have banned hugging and kissing in public as an "offense against decency," and campus police are energetically enforcing the rules.

Students and teachers said more than 100 people have been taken in for failing to contain their affectionate impulses since the ban took effect Oct. 5.

They said police reprimand and record the names of first-time offenders, but repeat offenders may be fined an undetermined amount or given school demerits.

Traditional Chinese abhorrence of public displays of affection has relaxed considerably in recent years, nowhere more so than on college campuses. Beijing University's Weiming Lake has become a favorite spot for amorous couples, apparently to the dismay of school authorities.

The ban on public hugging and kissing has been posted prominently around the campus as well as read on the school loudspeaker system.

One poster proclaims: "In order to improve the educational environment and build a good school spirit beneficial to students' healthy development, we must resolutely stop uncivilized behavior on campus."

Other new rules require students to wear "clean, neat, simple and tasteful clothes," ban men from walking about bare-chested or in undershirts and forbid whistling and shouting after 11 p.m.

There also is a new ban on bottle-breaking. Students at Chinese colleges have smashed bottles as a form of political protest because "xiao ping," the word for "little bottle," sounds like the name of China's leader, Deng Xiaoping.

Beijing University, one of China's most prestigious schools, was at the center of the 1989 pro-democracy movement. Many of the movement's leaders and participants were students and instructors at the school.

Political education has been intensified since the movement was crushed, and Beijing University freshmen now must spend a year at a military academy learning discipline before beginning regular classes.

Council to approve road project funding

■ Councilmen expected to authorize issuance of $1.25 million in certificates of obligation to pay for street and drainage work.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

The Midland City Council at its meeting today is expected to authorize the issuance of $1.25 million in certificates of obligation which, if approved, would primarily fund street and drainage projects.

The council meets beginning at 10 a.m. in its chambers at City Hall.

Finance Director Troy Gifford said the council's action would effectively "sell" the certificates in two parts.

Certificates of obligation differ from bonds because a citizen vote is not required to authorize their issuance. Projects to be funded by the issue were chosen from a list of $2 million in proposed purchases, repairs and remodeling.

Certificates worth $890,000 — slated to fund engineering improvements on city streets and drainage channels — will be sold by the bid process at the meeting. Gifford said the city will award the bid to the organization that offers the lowest interest rate.

Of that, $238,000 has been designated for a study to determine the feasibility of a drainage utility in the city.

A drainage utility would assign a "user fee" to local property owners based on the size of their land and its propensity for creating water runoff. Revenues would fund drainage improvements and flood prevention.

Several Texas cities are considering the measure, which is currently in use in Austin and Euless.

Of the remaining drainage funding, $77,000 is as yet undesignated. Engineering Director Harvey Hansen said undesignated money will be assigned by the council at a later meeting.

Streets will get $575,000 in work, including a protective coating to be applied on roadways throughout the city.

Improvements on Mockingbird Lane — an east-west roadway north of the loop — will be funded by the issue as part of an agreement with developers in the Mockingbird Heights Addition. An extension of Wadley Avenue west of Loop 250, where a new junior high school is to be built, will be funded by the issue as well.

An additional $360,000 in certificates would be issued to fund the purchase of a parking lot at Loraine Center, the building now being remodeled to house the Midland Police Department. Gifford said the certificates will be effectively traded for the deed to the land, issued to MWJ Producing Co. of Midland.

MPD needs more patrol officers, lieutenant says

■ Ten to 20 additional officers are needed, study indicates.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

Citing a rapidly increasing call-load and a major project scheduled for January, Midland Police Lt. John Urby believes there is a dire need for additional patrol officers in Midland.

Urby hopes the mayor and city council will agree with him by the time the city budget is reviewed next April.

"We're not just going to ask the mayor and council, we're going to justify our need. We don't plan to go ask for more officers for no reason," said Urby, who works in the field operations division.

"We're all backing the chief on this. That's our number one goal for next year," said Urby.

On an average day at the Midland Police Department, eight patrol officers are on duty during the day shift, with several additional personnel available during the more active night shift.

Additionally, about six more officers patrol during the 7 p.m. to 3 a.m. overlapping shift, Urby said.

"The 5 p.m. to 2 a.m. shift is normally the heaviest time and there is a definite need for the extra. We try to have at least five extra guys work it," Urby added.

In Odessa, there are normally 20 patrol officers on duty during the day shift.

"Odessa has three times the crime that we do, so obviously we don't have the same type of deployment needs," said Urby. "But still we have to make a sacrifice and we have to decide in what area that will be made."

According to Urby, the department has received more than 60,000 calls so far this year. A department workload study indicated a need for 10 to 20 additional officers, he said. The study analyzed the number of calls and the amount of time needed for each call.

In January, the department will unveil a community police project designed to help make the police more accessible to the public.

The project will divide the city into three areas, with a lieutenant in charge of each. Urby believes the additional manpower is essential for the success of the project.

"We want to establish a relationship with the community and become reactive rather than pro-active," said Urby. "We want to find out what the citizens want in that particular community. The needs of one section are always drastically different than another."

While Urby supports the push for additional manpower, he admits the patrol officers will always say they are shorthanded.

"They will always tell you that they want more patrol out there," said Urby. "Sometimes they remember the peak times. But we're doing the best we can with what we have. Sure they want more, but they also want more money."

Cisneros' wife files for divorce

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Mary Alice Cisneros has filed for divorce from former San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros after 22 years of marriage.

The divorce petition contends that Cisneros committed adultery.

Mrs. Cisneros, 41, is asking for custody of the couple's three children, according to divorce documents filed Friday. She also is requesting child support.

The couple has two daughters, Teresa, 20, and Mercedes, 16, and a son, John Paul, 4, who was born with a heart defect and requires constant medical attention.

"The marriage has become insupportable because of discord or conflict of personalties," according to the petition filed in the 244th state District Court in San Antonio.

At the couple's home Monday, Mrs. Cisneros, 41, spoke in veiled terms of her decision to seek a divorce, but implied that the split was prompted by her husband's continued link to Linda Medlar, a political aide, with whom Cisneros acknowledged having an affair.

"I love Henry very much, and we have been through an enormous amount," Mrs. Cisneros told the San Antonio Light. "It is my intent to no longer live under a circumstance that involves adultery."

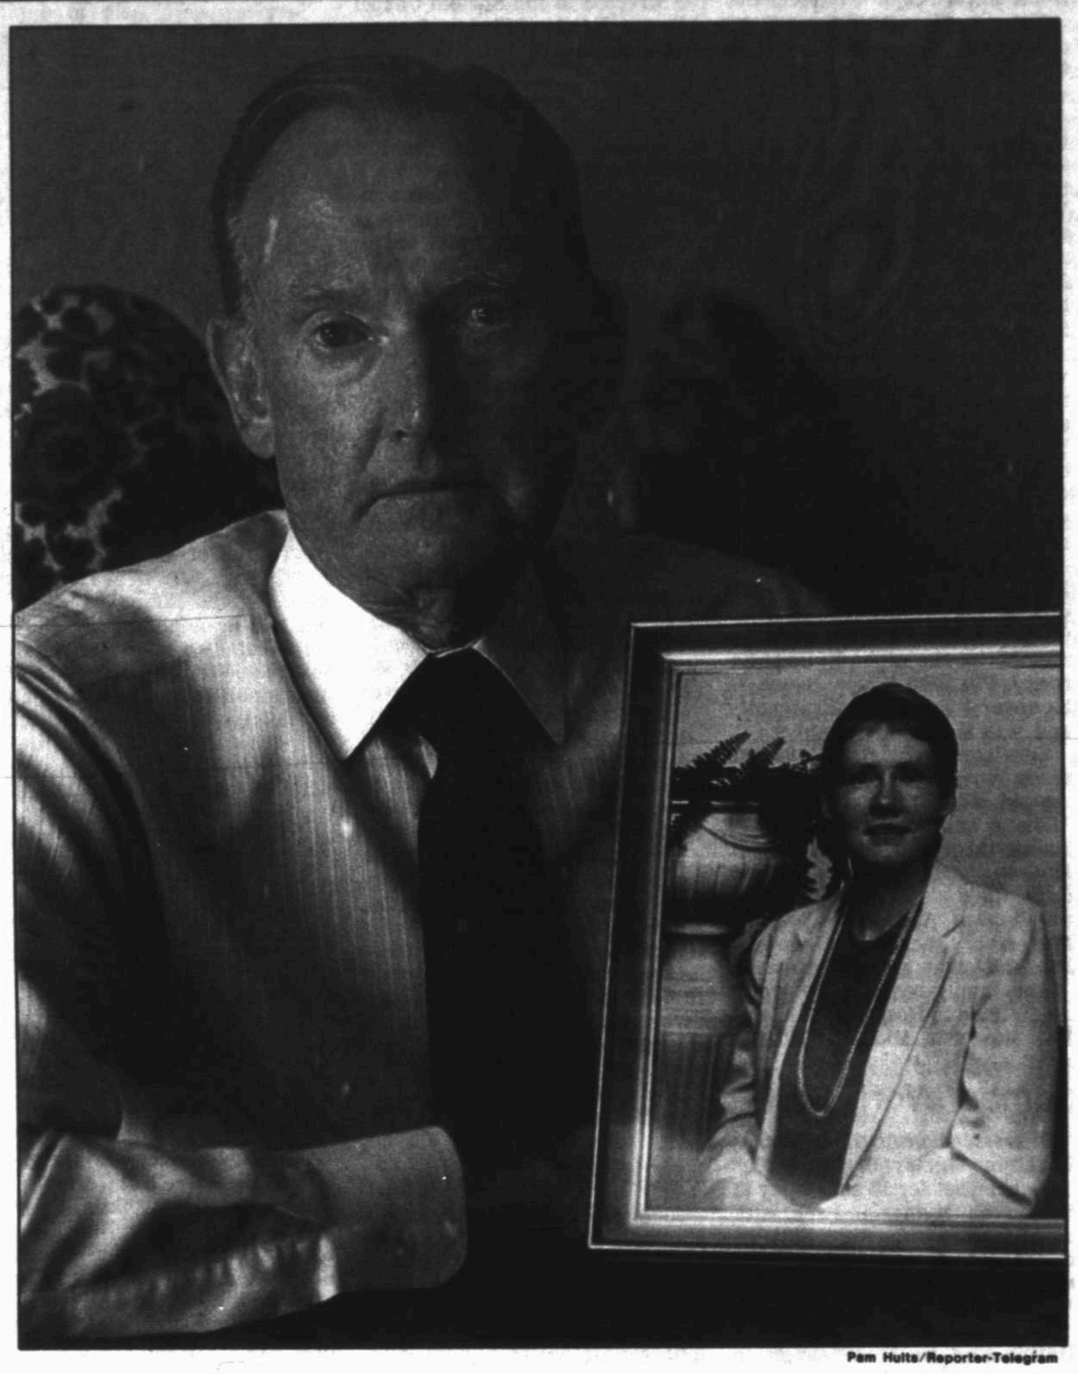

In a statement released Monday, Cisneros, 44, termed the divorce filing regrettable, saying "it is not what I want, and it would not have been my choice."

He also protested the petition's language, which he called "unnecessarily harsh and adversarial."

Ed Johnson, managing partner of the law firm filing the suit on Mrs. Cisneros' behalf, told the Light he prefers to let the petition speak for itself. He declined further comment.

Cisneros, 44, a popular Hispanic leader once considered a potential Democratic vice presidential candidate, left politics in 1989. He now serves as a business consultant, running Cisneros Asset Management Co.

Pam Hults/Reporter-Telegram

Larry Lawrence, a retired Midland businessman, said his life was blessed by the work of his daughter, a pioneer in the fight to erase the stigma associated with both AIDS and mental illness. She died in Houston on Sept. 28 of AIDS-related complications.

Mentally ill woman's dad considers her a miracle

By Debbie Lincecum

To others, she was a crusader, a pioneer on the trail to eliminate the stigma associated with both mental illness and AIDS.

To Larry Lawrence, Cara was just his little girl.

Nancy Cara Lawrence died Sept. 28 in Houston of AIDS-related complications. To her father, a retired Midland businessman, her life is a story of courage and hope in the face of immense challenge.

Suffering from schizophrenia for the last 13 years of her life, Ms. Lawrence had become an advocate for others with mental illness. She created a support group and social club known as Both Sides Now, designed to offer much-needed companionship to psychiatric patients.

"She was one of the lucky ones," her father explained. "She could function with her illness and could live day-to-day. I feel so sorry for those who aren't as lucky."

His daughter broke new ground in 1986, when she told the Houston Chronicle she had schizophrenia and encouraged the mentally ill be treated "like everybody else." She soon lost her job, her father says, but kept her faith.

"She had this drive in her. This was what she wanted to accomplish, to erase the stigma," Lawrence said.

Ms. Lawrence's continuing commitment earned an award named in her honor: The Harris County Alliance for the Mentally Ill established the Cara Lawrence Award, given annually to a person who followed her lead to increase public awareness of the facts about mental illness.

After conquering alcoholism, kicking a heavy cigarette-smoking habit and living with schizophrenia, the seemingly tireless Ms. Lawrence learned five years ago she had been infected with AIDS. Rather than give in, she used the tragedy to continue her crusade, establishing a support group at a local church for women affected by the disease.

Her father is convinced his daughter touched many lives. Unfortunately, Lawrence said he only recently learned the immense scope of her influence.

"It wasn't until her funeral, when so many people came up to me then to tell me how much they thought of her," he said. "I was so surprised. I never knew really how much effect she had on people.

"It was such a surprise to me to learn ... that this father's sweet and loving little girl, when she came to visit here in Midland, could become this strong and dedicated woman when she returned to Houston," Lawrence said.

When his daughter was born, in 1948 in Midland, Lawrence said he never dreamed what a remarkable person she would turn out to be. But through her visits and now, after her death, he says he has come to see her as unique and beautiful as the silver unicorn she often gave to outstanding members of her support group.

Midland native fights in Gulf War, helps keep peace

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is a feature story on Midland native Jeffrey B. Young provided by the U.S. military's Combined Task Force Public Affairs office.

INCIRLIK AIR BASE, Turkey — From a classroom to a combat zone in less than a week. That's a journey most people wouldn't care to make.

But that's exactly what happened to Pfc. Jeffrey B. Young, 25, of Company A, 6th Psychological Operations Battalion, Fort Bragg, N.C. He arrived in Saudi Arabia on Feb. 9, six days after reporting to his unit from Advanced Individual Training.

Then two months after fighting a war, he was helping win the peace by adding humanitarian service in Operation Provide Comfort to his list of military accomplishments.

Young, a native of Midland, has traveled a long way in his brief 15 months of service. It's a journey partly inspired by his father, a veteran of the 101st Airborne Division from the early 1960s, before its "Air Assault" days.

"I always wanted to follow in my dad's footsteps, and be in the Army in some kind of airborne slot," Young said.

"I also wanted to be in the MI (Military Intelligence) field, he added.

He initially delayed his service plans because of a high school ankle injury and three years as a dual physical education and finance major at Texas Tech University. Then early in 1990, Young enlisted for airborne duty as a 37F, Psychological Operations Specialist.

The battalion he was assigned to at Fort Bragg is part of the 4th Psychological Operations Group, the only unit of its type on active duty.

Six days after reporting for duty, Young landed in Saudi Arabia with other soldiers from his unit. The war was in full swing, and the threat of Iraqi attack was very real.

"Everything happened so fast, I really didn't know what to expect," Young said of his introduction to the war zone. "I didn't have too much time to think about it.

"I remember that when we landed, I felt a little fear," he said. "Everyone was checking their masks and NBC gear."

Young supported different units during his service in Operation Desert Storm. But all the training and experience both he and his unit had undergone were put to the test during Operation Provide Comfort, one of the largest military multinational relief efforts in history.

At its peak, the operation involved more than 21,000 military members from 30 nations and provided more than 17,000 tons of relief supplies to Iraqi Kurdish refugees in northern Iraq.

A detachment from Young's battalion arrived at Incirlik Air Base, Turkey, on April 29, and were soon on their way to the Kurdish refugee camps in northern Iraq. There they became an invaluable component of the Provide Comfort mission.

The psychological operations soldiers used were a combination of Kurdish-language pamphlets, descriptive drawings and signs, and loudspeaker teams that included Kurdish linguists to convey vital humanitarian relief information to the people of northern Iraq.

"We knew how to get the information out to the people," said Staff Sgt. Robert B. Leonard, noncommissioned-officer-in-charge of the psychological operations detachment. "We told them where to get potable, and what to eat and what not to eat in MREs, like pork, for example, which is sacred to Moslems."

Other problems came up through Kurdish use of some re-

DEATHS

Louise St. Clair

Services for Louise C. St. Clair of Midland have been set for 11 a.m. Wednesday at the First Presbyterian Church sanctuary with Dr. Dick Bruan officiating. Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

St. Clair

Mrs. St. Clair died Sunday at a local hospital.

She was born April 23, 1910, in Syracuse, N.Y., and was reared in upstate New York. She graduated from Syracuse University with bachelor's and master's degrees in botany.

Following graduation, she worked in that field for a brief time before her marriage to Donald W. St. Clair on June 17, 1936, in Fayetteville, N.Y. She and her husband lived in a number of places while he was doing geological exploration for Shell Oil Co. They moved to Midland in 1945.

Mrs. St. Clair was a member of First Presbyterian Church and was active in the Presbyterian Church Circles. She also was a member of the Alpha Xi Delta Sorority, Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Xi Honorary Scientific Fraternity and was a PTA life member.

Survivors include her husband; three sons, Robert A. St. Clair of Arnold, Md., William C. St. Clair of Midland and John B. St. Clair of Dallas; three daughters, Donna S. Moore of Los Alamos, N.M., Jean C. St. Clair of Austin, and Ann E. St. Clair of Austin; one brother, Foster R. Crocker of Glenshaw, Pa.; and eight grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, Midland 79702.

James Worley Sr.

Graveside services for James Franklin Worley Sr., of Dallas have been set for 10 a.m. today at Resthaven Memorial Park with Loren Larkin officiating. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Worley died Sunday in Irving.

He was born Dec. 20, 1924, in Dallas and he was reared in Quanah. At age 15 he moved to Lubbock with his family. He served in the U.S. Army in the South Pacific and following his discharge he attended Texas Tech University.

He married Anna Belle Meadows on Aug. 10, 1947, in Lubbock. In 1950 the couple moved to Midland where he owned and operated Western Fence Company. He retired in 1984.

Worley moved to Dallas, where he was residing at the time of his death.

He was a life member of the Midland Optimist Club. He also was a member of First Baptist Church, where he served as a deacon. In addition, he was associated with Shalom Chapel, an outreach ministry to the Jewish community of First Baptist Church of Dallas.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, Jim Worley of Ennis and John Worley of Dallas; two daughters, Becky Garner of Palacios and D'Anna Weyandt of Garland; one brother, Richard Worley of San Angelo; one sister, Rachel Sanders of Andrews; 11 grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Shalom Chapel Library Fund, 1707 San Jacinto, Dallas 75201.

Arthur Henson

Services for Arthur B. Henson of Midland have been set for 1 p.m. Wednesday at the Ellis Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield officiating. Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Henson died Saturday at a hospital in Mesquite.

He was born Feb. 8, 1927, in Mondamin, Iowa. At the age of 17, he entered the U.S. Navy and served in Guam. He married Paula Clay on May 31, 1950, in Tacoma, Wash. In 1950, he entered the U.S. Army and served during the Korean War. Following his discharge, the family lived in Southern California until moving to Nebraska in 1958.

In 1972, the family moved to Midland. Henson worked for Machen Construction and later joined Shenandoah Oil Company, which later became Southland Royalty Company. He was a lease maintenance supervisor.

Henson was a member of VFW Post 7208.

Survivors include his wife; three sons, A. Lynn Henson, Gregory Paul Henson and Jeffrey Alan Henson; two daughters, Tresa Hekrdle and Lorna Pride; three brothers, Charles Henson, Robert Henson and Raymond Henson; three sisters, Carol Vandehoef, Martha Ballman and Ann Bradway.

The family requests memorials be directed to a favorite charity.

Jack Nini

Jack Edward Nini, formerly of Midland, died Sunday in League City.

Services will be at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Geo. H. Lewis & Sons Funeral Home. Interment will follow at Memorial Oaks Cemetery.

Nini was born Oct. 26, 1926, in Bay City. He graduated from Lamar High School in 1944, where he excelled in track and field. Before and after joining the Navy, Nini raced power boats, eventually earning a national championship. He later worked as a salesman in the oil and gas industry.

Nini moved to Midland in 1965, following a brief stay in New Orleans. He later returned to Midland and formed the first of several companies in the oilfield service business.

He was an avid outdoorsman and golfer.

He recently retired to the Clear Lake area.

Survivors include his wife, Barbara Bowles Nini; one sister, Dorothy Greer; three sons, Mark Edward Nini, David Bowles Nini and Steven Greer Nini; three daughters, Diane Elizabeth Nini, Julie Ann Nini and Lisa Karen Nini; and three grandchildren.

Malvin Teague

Malvin Glenn Teague, 55, of Graham died Saturday in Brownfield.

Services were held at 4 p.m. Monday at the Morrison Funeral Home Chapel in Graham. Burial follwed at the Graceland Cemetery in Jermyn. Arrangements were handled by Morrison Funeral Home.

Teague was born June 22, 1936, in Olney. He married Lynette Hutchins on April 14, 1989, in Graham.

He was an oil field superintendent for Snyder Oil Company. He was a Baptist.

Survivors include his wife; one son, Alton Lee Teague of Odessa; one daughter, Janet Yvonne Teague of Austin; his mother, Lou Teague of Wichita Falls; two stepdaughters, Sheri Widner of Graham and Shayla Dewbre of Fort Worth; three brothers, John Teague of Chickasha, Okla., Robert Teague of Wichita Falls and Floyd Teague Jr., of Waskom; one sister, Oletta Elkins of Graham and two grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to the American Heart Association or the American Cancer Society.

VOLUNTEERING

Fall is here and Midland nonprofit agencies are gearing up for a busy season. Your talents and time are needed now to help these agencies provide their programs to those in need.

■ Several agencies have special needs during the holiday season such as parties for children and senior citizens, toys, caroling, and whatever spreads the cheer of the season. Call the Volunteer Center today for more information.

■ Make a world of difference for a homebound or disabled person by picking up a few items at the store or a prescription drug and delivering them to the person's home. This is a flexible opportunity, so set your own schedule.

■ Volunteers are needed at a local agency two weekday afternoons a month from 2:30 p.m. until 5:30 p.m. These few hours will go far in assuring the safety and well-being of our children. Older student volunteers are welcome.

■ Several precious little girl dolls need your special touch to dress them so they can be given to needy children for Christmas. These dolls will be displayed the first week of December at Midland Park Mall. If you, your club or group would like to assist with dressing the dolls or setting them up for the Mall display, call the Volunteer Center today for more information.

■ This vital nonprofit agency needs your help with a variety of office activities. Assist with donor file updating, answering the telephones and filing. Just an hour or two of your time weekly would help this agency help others.

■ 697-HELP. The only number you need to remember when you have a question or problem and do not know where to find the answer. Call Information and Referral Midland. 697-HELP.

For more information on how you can volunteer, please call the Volunteer Center of Midland 697-8781.

Touching memory

Sabas Gonzales touches his son's name enscribed on the new memorial at the Phillips 66 Company plant in Pasadena. The son, Eloy Gonzles, was among 23 workers killed in the Oct. 23, 1989, explosion and fire at the plant. Behind the senior Gonzales is Eloy's widow, Minnie.

Committee to probe hospital fraud

DALLAS (AP) — A Texas legislative committee is expected to hear testimony from hundreds of people this week when the panel opens a series of hearings into allegations of fraud and abuse in the private psychiatric hospital industry.

Stories of financial fraud and bounty fees, medical abuse and patient intimidation, even coercion are expected when the hearings start Friday before the Senate Interim Committee on Health and Human Services. The panel is chaired by Sen. Mike Moncrief, D-Fort Worth.

Many of the complaints to be aired at the hearing will likely be directed against Psychiatric Institutes of America, named in a lawsuit filed last month by Texas Attorney General Dan Morales.

The private chain of for-profit psychiatric hospitals is owned by National Medical Enterprises Inc. of California, one of the country's largest health care conglomerates with assets of more than $4 billion.

The chairman of PIA's corporate parent had begun an internal investigation of the charges, but now claims Morales' suit is a vendetta that has crippled his hospital's business.

"If the attorney general had wanted to have some legitimate complaints, all he had to do is come to us and talk about it," National Medical Enterprises chairman Richard Eamer told The Dallas Morning News last week.

"We don't know what his political ambitions are, or what is going on in his mind, but the way he's doing it certainly indicates that he is not exercising good faith."

National Medical Enterprises has continued to defend its patient care and business practices. The company's officials refuse to discuss individual cases, even when the patients had allowed them to do so.

"We're putting the needs of the patient first," spokesman David Olson said. "PIA has helped, literally, thousands and thousands of people overcome their problems and resume functioning lives."

the disease, leaving her bed-ridden and near death, her father was at her side.

"It was so hard for her, her mind was affected and she couldn't put words together — could hardly talk," Lawrence recalled. "But I thought it so amazing, the afternoon before she died that next morning, she opened her eyes for a minute. She looked at me and said, 'Daddy, It's close.'

"And it was close. She got weaker and weaker. Her lips moved, but she was never able to speak again. I just thought it was a miracle."

Indeed, Lawrence said he considers his daughter a miracle that he was allowed to share. He remembered the words of a friend and former president of the Houston Alliance for the Mentally Ill:

"In Cara's short life, she was loved and gave love, support and help to a number too enormous to count. Her goodness touched more lives than someone granted God's full measure of a lifetime."

lief supplies for other than their intended purpose. "Some of them used powdered orange juice to wash their clothes in," Leonard said.

Young worked with one of the loudspeaker teams. These teams traveled throughout the area broadcasting in the Kurdish language essential information about where refugee camps were open, and where to go to obtain certain types of relief supplies.

One situation called for immediate action. Several Kurdish children were injured from playing or running on the roads in front of oncoming traffic. Young and a fellow soldier devised an innovative solution.

"We went out on Kiddie Patrol," Young said. "We took along a translator, and played Kurdish music to get their attention.

"We danced with them, then put on skits to show them how dangerous it was to play in the road. Our translator would tell them the message, we'd dance some more, and then send them home," Young said.

"It was all his (Young's) idea," Leonard said.

"The kids were getting bored with our standard messages. Young's team started it, and our other teams picked it up.

"After that, there were no kids in the streets," Leonard said.

Young has applied his Army-acquired skills in both combat and a lifesaving humanitarian operation. His journey has already taken him farther and faster than many soldiers experience in an entire career.

Rich and famous among Pinkie's friends

EDITOR'S NOTE: He was a gambler and a bootlegger and as crafty and cunning as a West Texas coyote. The late Tom "Pinkie" Roden was also a widely admired civic and political activist who wove his unique magic behind the scenes. As both a legal and illegal whiskey merchant, he cast a long shadow over the lives of many Texans. Maybe longer than even he knew. Part three of a five-part series examining Pinkie's life.

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press writer

ODESSA — It would be difficult to fault Pinkie Roden's choice of political cronies, since one, Bob Bullock, is arguably the most powerful person now in state government. And another, state Sen. John Montford, is headed that way.

Bullock was the state comptroller until his election as lieutenant governor, a job that rivals the Texas governor in influence. He liked to say he opened every campaign in Odessa with his friend Pinkie at his side.

Shortly before his death, Pinkie contacted Bullock on behalf of a friend, a bright, locally popular, black ex-convict named Willie Hammond. Willie needed a job.

"Bullock caught hell but he brought Willie to Austin," said his friend Gene Garrison.

Another of Pinkie's Austin contacts was Montford, a widely respected Democrat from Lubbock. Montford knew Pinkie favored parimutuel horse race betting, but the legislator also knew supporting it could be political suicide.

"The Avalanche-Journal would crucify me," Montford reportedly told Pinkie, referring to his hometown newspaper. "What can I do? They'll eat me alive in Lubbock."

THE TWO hit on a grand idea: an amendment to the bill setting aside a percentage of the revenues for water construction projects in West Texas.

"That was a typical Pinkie solution," brother Bill Roden said. And the next day Montford was a hero.

Montford delights in recounting his first meeting with Pinkie, who was supporting an opponent in Montford's first primary campaign.

"This old redfaced man in a fuchsia shirt, green slacks and two-tone shoes is waiting at the airport," Montford said. "He picks me up in a beat-up Ford that looked like it had been stolen and shipped back and forth across the border three or four times. And it missed about every third cylinder."

As they lurched along an Odessa thoroughfare, Montford spoke.

"Do you work for Mr. Roden?"

"That's me," Pinkie replied.

Although difficult to pinpoint exactly why and when, Pinkie's lifestyle took a dramatic change in the late '50s and '60s. That's when, among other things, he married and divorced his first wife, Jackie.

And for some reason, he apparently decided it might be more fun to make, change or solidify Texas liquor laws than to break them.

"Pinkie wrote an awful lot of liquor law in Texas," says Gene Garrison. "I'm a buyer, not a seller, and I don't understand it all."

Pinkie helped found the Texas Package Stores Association and for three decades was a major force in the organization although, by choice, he never served as president.

He and fellow liquor kingpins Sidney Siegel of Dallas and James Leggett Jr. of Fort Worth comprised the group's legislative committee and soon became known as "The Three Musketeers" of the industry.

They were powerful and popular and a familiar sight at the state capitol when the Legislature was in session.

TEXAS BEVERAGE News, a trade publication, sent a reporter to Austin once for a story on a legislative controversy involving the package store association and another retail group. The reporter asked the lobbyist for the opposition to assess his chances.

"Well, I tell you," he replied. "Sometimes when Mr. Roden and Mr. Sigel and Mr. Leggett are prowling the halls of the Capitol, it's just mighty hard to move a liquor bill."

Fred Niemann Sr. of Austin, the store owner's legal counsel, called the trio "my three lawyers" because of their working knowledge of Texas liquor laws.

Austin associates said Pinkie spent as much or more time resisting challenges to old laws he liked as he did creating new ones he wanted, and he was unaccustomed to defeat.

"You just didn't cross him on liquor law," said Bill Cox of Abilene, a former employee.

Associates say Pinkie played a leading role in shaping package store legislation, including hours of operation, and a less visible but pivotal role in a Texas mixed drink law that could mean more business for him and fellow store owners.

The liquor-by-the-drink legislation allowed local option elections, which in turn set the stage for wet-dry skirmishes across the state.

LIQUOR-WISE, Lubbock was, is and may always be peculiar, thanks in part to Pinkie.

AP Laserphoto

Pinkie Roden owned a chain of liquor stores in many West Texas towns. The chain is now operated by his brother, Ted, and sister, Anne Deadrick. Pinkie's Inc. was the first liquor retailer in the nation to install computers to control inventory and chart sales by brand and price.

Historically bone dry except for private clubs, Lubbock was probably the bootlegging capital of the world until the mid-Sixties. That's when a precinct on the southern tip of town approved the sale of beer and liquor for off-premises consumption.

Pinkie was probably the first liquor baron to open a store on the mile-long "Strip," so-named for its similarity to the neon glitter of Las Vegas.

Owners paid handsomely for the lucrative leases, and to protect their investments they vigorously resisted efforts to legalize liquor in Lubbock, either by the drink or the bottle.

Hotels, restaurants and others obviously wanted to sell mixed drinks.

Eventually, insiders say, Pinkie realized that a compromise might be the best bet. He joined forces with liquor-by-the-drink advocates in exchange for preserving the off-premises sanctity of the Strip.

To this day, Lubbock's 185,000 residents can drink freely in clubs or restaurants but must drive to the Strip to buy liquor by the bottle or six-packs of beer.

AND THEY sometimes pay the highest prices in Texas.

Off and on, Pinkie and other Strip owners were accused of conspiring to rig prices, and a federal grand jury did in fact indict several of them.

Eight defendants entered pleas of no contest to the criminal price-fixing charges and paid fines. Three persons received jail sentences, but Pinkie was not among them.

"It was pretty rough out there for awhile," says a longtime Lubbock resident. "Several stores burned down. They used to say, 'If you have a sale, you have a fire.' "

Bill Cox insists to this day that Pinkie got a bum rap.

"I don't believe Pinkie ever did it," Cox said. "He wasn't going with their prices, they were going with his. Sure, prices were high, but they had to be. You paid a ton for that property..."

In another pricing episode, at Post, a small town southeast of Lubbock, Pinkie demonstrated that while he dealt usually with the big picture, he was not above personally tending to details.

Recalls Wanda Mitchell:

"The first time I met Pinkie was right before we opened our liquor store in Post. He and his wife came in and told us how to price our whiskey. I told my husband, 'How nice of them.'

"Well, they priced our whiskey like they wanted it priced. Pinkie was cutthroat to do business with. Tough. But I really did like him."

Years earlier, Pinkie masterminded a stunning, incredibly profitable scheme to incorporate a tiny precinct totally surrounded by Abilene, the so-called Buckle on the Bible Belt.

Its name: Impact.

With a 1960 metropolitan population of 120,000, Abilene, in the very heart of a dry area, was a prime target for whiskey merchants of whatever stripe.

Project Impact involved 50 or so people in a tiny, isolated, largely overlooked or ignored part of Abilene. In effect, they quietly voted to incorporate, then legalized off-premises sale of alcoholic beverages.

By no means as simple as it sounds, Impact was the forerunner for any number of similar booze-related schemes across the state.

As always, Pinkie spurned the limelight, though privately pulling the political strings. A colorful local figure named Dallas Perkins, Impact's first mayor, got the credit but Pinkie and Abilene attorney Beverly Tarpley got it done.

"Dallas was the originator of Impact but Pinkie had the expertise of liquor laws and politics to make the operation successful and keep it running for a long period of time," Ms. Tarpley said.

According to James Leggett, Pinkie didn't give Perkins much choice in dealing himself into the Impact caper, declaring:

"I'VE BEEN selling liquor in Abilene all my life and I intend to keep selling it."

Perkins refuses now to comment on his relationship with Pinkie.

Still, said Ms. Tarpley, "Pinkie was never the strongarm, roughshod type...He was just fascinating and completely different from the public perception.

" Pinkie insisted that the operation be run exactly right. He wouldn't sell cold beer because he wanted to discourage people from driving up, buying a six-pack and throwing cans all over that side of town."

On weekends and holidays in particular, motorists lined up for blocks to buy beer and booze, and Pinkie and Perkins made millions, tax figures showed.

"All it took to defeat it was for Abilene to go wet, but it took a long, long time to do it," Ms. Tarpley said.

Abilene's churchgoers and Pinkie, their unlikely ally, saw to that.

When the city did vote wet, presumably dooming Impact as an oasis, a reporter telephoned Pinkie for comment.

"Will this break you?" the reporter asked.

"It would have, had I not long prepared for it," Pinkie replied grandly. "But thanks to the good Christians of Abilene, I will die a wealthy man."

Grocer revives his business by selling barbecue

By L.A. Lorek
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — What began as a "mom and pop" grocery store in 1920 has expanded into a trendy barbecue restaurant.

Carranza's Grocery & Market began selling barbecue to revive its struggling business, said Rick Carranza, one of three brothers who run the store and restaurant along with their father, Florencio Jr.

"The grocery store business has been kind of tough because mom and pop grocery stores are kind of fading," Rick Carranza said.

With the growth of big grocery store chains such as H-E-B and the decline in downtown neighborhood customers, the Carranza store, located near downtown on the east side of Interstate 35, suffered sales declines.

Several of the store's customers paid on credit accounts and when the company took a hit, so did the store, Florencio Carranza said.

In 1987, Rick Carranza and his brothers, Raymond and Robert, started selling barbecue sandwiches across the meat counter in the back of the grocery store.

At the same time, they began building an elegant dining room and kitchen next door. Despite its roots in the grocery business, Carranza's Grocery & Market had a long history when it came to feeding people.

"When Zachry (construction company) was building the expressway back in 1968, my mom would cook a pot of chicken and take it to the workers," Robert said. "That's when we really began to sell hot meals."

The Carranza brothers tried to secure a small business loan to expand into the restaurant business but could not, Robert said. They ended up tapping their father's resources and pouring more than $180,000 into their new venture.

After a painstaking renovation, the restaurant officially opened in November 1990. The majority of the 5,000-square-foot building, located a block north of where Interstate 35 crosses over Jones Street, served as apartments.

To build the restaurant, the brothers hired carpenters and laborers to restore the original interior, including uncovering 14-foot-high glass doors with oak frames.

The restaurant offers counter service during noon hours and table service with silverware and china during the evening. The menu features slow-cooked barbecue but it also includes some Italian and Mexican dishes.

Rick says the key to the process was to serve as his own project supervisor and architect. The brothers also scanned antique stores across Texas. The restaurant features several unique pieces, including a wooden telephone booth, oak-top tables and chairs, meat scales and antique signs and fixtures.

Now the success of the restaurant overshadows the little grocery store whose history dates back to 1920. Florencio Carranza founded the store at 801 Austin St. and moved it 14 years later to its current site. In 1956, he bought the picturesque two-story limestone building. Florencio Jr. still runs the store, while his sons take care of the restaurant.

The restaurant opens Monday through Saturday at 11 a.m. and closes at 8 p.m. except on Friday and Saturday when hours are extended to 10 p.m. The restaurant offers counter service during noon hours and table service with silverware and china during the evening. The menu features slow-cooked barbecue but it also includes some Italian and Mexican dishes.

The restaurant also does catering and rents its upstairs rooms for private parties and business meetings.

Carranza's Grocery & Market plans to expand further if business remains good, Rick said. The restaurant's business on Saturday has increased from $250 a night when it opened to $800-$1,000 now, he said. Menu items range in price from $2.95 for a sandwich to $9.95 for a red snapper dinner. Barbecue sandwiches and plates cost between $3.50 and $5.50.

Judge denies motion in Lewis case

■ District judge refuses to move speaker's ethics trial to county court-at-law.

Associated Press

The State

AUSTIN — Indicted House Speaker Gib Lewis lost a bid Monday to move his misdemeanor ethics case to a lower court but said he is anxious for a jury to hear the case.

"We want to go to court," Lewis said. "We are trying to get in the courtroom as soon as we can."

Lewis was indicted last December on two charges: that he accepted a gift from a powerful San Antonio law firm and did not report it on his public finance disclosure statements.

The indictments are the only charges from a Travis County grand jury investigation into ties between legislators and special-interest lobbyists at the Capitol.

Lewis had asked that his case be moved from state District Judge Bob Perkins' court to a county court-at-law. Perkins denied that motion Monday and scheduled a pre-trial hearing for Nov. 13.

Lewis' lawyer, Tim Evans, appealed Perkins' ruling to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Because a trial date apparently can't be set immediately, Evans said the higher court should have time to consider the appeal without delaying the case.

"We're looking forward to a jury examining this case. We don't want any more delays," said Evans, who took over the case earlier this month after Lewis was jailed for 3½ hours after missing an Oct. 1 hearing.

Evans said the legal question was whether a district court should be considering a misdemeanor charge. But he said it made little difference to Lewis.

"There's going to be a jury in there, and (whether it is) a jury in one room or a jury in the other room, we're anxious for them to hear this case," he said.

Lewis, who has pleaded innocent, said he didn't consider the accusations weighty enough for district court.

"We're talking about a traffic ticket, a failure to pay a traffic ticket, something on that level," he said. "This thing has been blown out to where it's almost like I was in Killeen the other day" when a gunman killed 23 people.

The judge indicated that only a few weeks are available before January for jury trials and other cases are scheduled on those dates.

The deadline for filing for the 1992 elections is Jan. 2. But the five-term House speaker said a January trial date would have no bearing on whether he will seek re-election.

"I'll be making that decision in just time," Lewis said. "If it's a November trial, that makes it even better for me. If it's January, that's OK also."

Lewis said his legal problems made him sympathetic for U.S. Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas, who faced public hearings over an allegation that he had sexually harassed a former employee.

He also said such troubles are keeping qualified people from serving in public offices.

Lifetime Siding & Window offers big savings in two ways

Those who recently received an estimate for storm doors and windows and thought it too high, or keep painting and repainting the outside of their home because they think maintenance-free siding is too costly might think again.

Because just one more estimate might change their mind.

Neil Letkeman, owner of Lifetime Siding and Window Company, encourages anyone interested to call 689-0307 for a free estimate and special savings. Through November there's a $500 discount on siding and trim (400 sq. ft. minimum).

He's able to offer lower prices on home improvement products and expert installation with screws and rivets, rather than staples, thanks to smaller overhead costs.

Cecil Hernandez, who lives at 4605 Thomas Dr., refers Lifetime Siding & Window Company to his friends and neighbors. "I got several quotes on soffit, fascia and storm windows from other businesses, but no one came close to Neil's bid," he said. "We are extremely pleased with his work."

"I had other friends who had some bad experiences with other contractors," Hernandez said. "One friend had soffit and fascia installed with staples and before long, it was warping. I won't have to worry about that on my house because Neil uses screws and rivets in his installations. The job Neil did for us has really improved the appearance of our home."

"If you've ever had an estimate," Letkeman said, "Be sure to call and get a money-saving estimate from us. We find that the people who are most pleased with our estimates are those who have had previous estimates from other companies."

"We offer the same materials to our customers that the bigger companies have," Letkeman said. "Our craftsmen have many years of experience and specialize in installing a variety of improvements."

Those who own a brick home may not be aware that they, too, can benefit from steel or vinyl siding, Any problem areas that require painting, such as eaves and overhangs, can benefit from siding.

All siding products come with a lifetime warranty system. Insulation can also be installed under new siding. Lifetime Siding & Window Company also sells and installs at reduced prices other home improvements such as storm and replacement windows and storm doors.

Letkeman's experience as a home-improvement products manager and installer makes him both experienced and dependable.

There's no better time than now, with the special incentive of savings, to give Lifetime Siding & Window Company a call. For a free estimate, call 689-0307.

Neil Letkeman of Lifetime Siding & Window Company stands outside the recently completed Hernandez home at 4605 Thomas Dr. in Midland.

Mid-West Door & Window: save on storm windows and doors

Mid-West Door & Window has an impressive showroom. Customers are invited to stop in, browse, ask for information.

Now is the time to think about winter chills, drafts and heating bills. And to take steps to prevent them. Mid-West Door & Window is going to make it a lot easier. From now through November, they're offering 20 percent off storm windows and storm doors.

Mid-West Door & Window sells only custom-fitted windows, which means they will provide the best fit and least amount of air infiltration. Custom-fitted storm windows and doors do more than keep the warm air in and the cold air out. They also create a quiet, more dust-free home — a generally more enjoyable atmosphere.

Storm doors and windows have many advantages. First, as a protective investment in reducing fuel costs while both heating and cooling. Then, by creating a cleaner environment, reducing noise pollution and protecting windows from hail and other weather elements.

Mid-West Door & Window offers a wide selection of storm windows in all different shapes, finishes and prices. Enough to suit a considerable number of home designs and budgets.

Also, Mid-West Door & Window offers the Peerless storm door for extra insulation, beauty and security. These doors come with tempered safety glass, adjustable door sweeps and double locksets with keyed exteriors. And to back up this door, Mid-West Door & Window puts a one-year limited warranty on it.

Other services offered by Mid-West are complete door sales, service and installation. Mid-West Door & Window offers a full selection of beautiful wood doors with leaded beveled glass or just panels for a more conservative application.

Is your patio door not working properly? Mid-West Door & Window can repair or replace worn-out doors with hinged doors or new sliding doors, depending on individual needs.

Regardless of style chosen, doors will operate properly, be airtight and beautify a home.

Mid-West Door & Window also offers complete skylight sales and installation. The company can replace broken domes and install complete new units. They can also install vinyl and steel siding, whether it's the trim on a brick home or an entire exterior.

Custom-made aluminum screens and rescreening of existing frames is also offered by Mid-West Door & Window.

Mid-West Door & Window has been providing quality sales and service in all these areas since 1976. The showroom is located at 2400 West Front St. in Midland.

Commercial Ice Machine Company keeps Flowerland cool

When customers walk into the front door of Midland's Flowerland (413 Andrews Highway) they're greeted by a pretty spectacular display. A floor-to-ceiling walk-in refrigeration unit tastefully fitted into the corner of the shop — filled with spectacular floral arrangements.

The refrigeration unit consists of a highly glossed, obsidian black cooling "box" with with mock gold-trimmed 6-foot by 6-foot display windows and glass door. Inside, the natural beauty of the flowers is enhanced by pale green walls and lush green carpeting.

The refrigeration specialists at Commercial Ice Machine Company custom-built the box for Mark and Jane Knox, owners of two Permian Basin Flowerland locations — one in Odessa and one in Midland,

"When they asked us to build the unit, we asked them to dream a little about what they wanted," CIMCO's Harold Lewallen said. "And then we tried to bring those dreams to life."

Flowerland's customers think CIMCO succeeded, said Norma Risinger, Flowerland store manager.

"People who haven't been in the store since the unit was built always comment on it when they see it for the first time," she said. "They say, 'I really like it.' "

Harold Lewallan of Commercial Ice Machine Company in Odessa holds the door of a custom-built, walk-in floral refrigeration unit for Midland's Flowerland's tore manager Norma Risinger.

It's convenient, too. Customers can walk through the cooler, admire the floral display, then reach in and pick out the arrangement they want.

"It has also done what we hoped it would do," Risinger said. "We'd hoped it would make it possible for us to have more floral selections on display. And it has."

The unit, kept at slightly cooler than 40 degrees, prolongs the life of the cut flowers. That "near perfect" atmosphere is created by 3.5-inch thick walls, triple-pane glass guaranteed not to sweat and airtight doors, according to Lewallen. It is cooled by an outside unit on the top of the building. Six blowers work constantly to circulate air inside the sealed room.

Walk-in coolers may be another of the firm's many refrigeration specialties, but Flowerland's unit is regarded as a masterpiece,

It's obvious that the folks at CIMCO take special pride in it,'For more information about CIMCO's quality refrigeration work, call 563-2462 or, toll-free 1-800-592-4554.

Chaparral Wash & Lube prepares cars for rigors of winter

The quickly cooling weather reminds us all that it's time to prepare for winter. A maintenance check at Chaparral Wash & Lube is a good place to start. Not only will the trained technicians check, and, if necessary, install antifreeze, but also check hoses, tighten belts and give automobiles a general check-up.

For years, Midlanders have chosen Chaparral Wash & Lube Center for the convenient combination of a free car wash with the purchase of a quality quick oil change and preventive maintenance check. Midlanders trust their cars on the inside and out to Chaparral Wash and Lube Center, located at the corner of Big Spring and Scharbauer.

Since opening in 1984, Chaparral Wash and Lube Center has enjoyed a well-earned reputation for the best car wash and oil change service in Midland. A strong commitment to meticulous attention and detail from long-time employees are Chaparral trademarks.

"For the last three years I've brought all our cars here," said Kelly Woolard of OXY USA. "We have 12 automobiles. Chaparral does a good job of keeping them all running. I'm very pleased."

The Chaparral Lube Center carries major brands of oil, including Pennzoil, Quaker State and Havoline. Prices for the oil change and lube range from $18.50 to $23.50. For those who prefer using Mobil One, the price is $36.50.

A free car wash is included with each oil change. Those who are in a rush or notice threatening clouds overhead will receive a car wash rain check for use at a later date.

Also included with the oil change is a thorough examination under the hood. Technicians check battery, power steering, transmission and windshield washer fluids.

As a part of this service, these fluids are replenished, if needed. For an additional charge, technicians will install transmission oil, freon, light bulbs and windshield wiper refills.

A regular maintenance schedule at Chaparral Wash and Lube Center is good insurance against expensive car trouble in the future. Owner Leon Jeffcoat recommends a minimum maintenance schedule of every 3,000 miles or every three months. A reminder sticker is placed on the inside of the windshield. Visits to Chaparral Lube mean not only professional, but also personal service from dedicated employees.

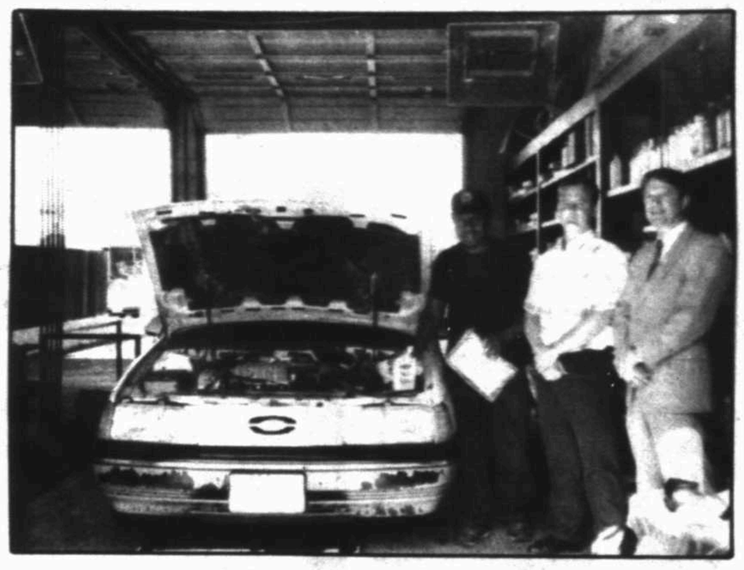

Among them are lube center technician C.C. Banks, car wash detail supervisor Guillermo Portillo and detail specialist Gilbert Guiterrez. These men, who take pride in their work, have a combination of more than 20 years of experience with Chaparral Wash and Lube Center.

A full-service car wash, which includes a wash by gentle cleansers, chamois brushes and soft water is just $7.95. Add wax for just $2.00. Washes for standard vans and Suburbans are $2.00 extra. Vacuuming, hand drying and window cleaning are included in the low price.

A great timesaver: customers getting a car washed can have the tank filled with Texaco gasoline and receive a discount toward the wash. More than 18 gallons means a free wash.

Chaparral also offers the advantage of a professionally administered detail job. It includes spraying the engine to remove oil and grime, a thorough cleaning under the hood, hand waxing, carpet and upholstery shampooing, interior dash and door treatment and tire treatment. Prices for this service start at $59.00.

Chaparral Wash and Lube Center welcomes Texaco, Visa, MasterCard, American Express and Discover credit cards. Hours are 8 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays. Call 682-8013 for more information.

Autopsy shows no evidence of drugs, police say

The State

KILLEEN (AP) — An autopsy of the gunman who killed 23 people in the nation's worst mass shooting showed no signs of drugs or alcohol nor evidence of brain tumors, police said Monday.

Meanwhile in Nevada, the National Park Service reported it had arrested George Hennard last June after he was found drunk in the same truck he drove through the Luby's Cafeteria window last week.

Ranger Chuck Latrelle said Hennard was arrested for being under the influence of alcohol. He pleaded guilty later in June to the DUI charge and was fined $100 plus $10 in court costs.

Hennard also was arrested for possession of a loaded firearm after two guns were found in the truck. The guns were the same ones used in last week's rampage. Hennard pleaded no contest on the firearm possession charge and was fined $50 and assessed $10 in court costs.

The guns were not impounded because they were not used to commit a crime and Hennard voluntarily told Latrelle he had them, according to Dale Antonich, chief ranger at Lake Mead National Park.

"He could have impounded them, but (Hennard) would have gotten them back at the end of June when he paid the fine," he said.

Elsewhere Monday, more families buried victims of the massacre and police who confronted Hennard said they did not have time to be frightened during the gunfight that ended with Hennard shooting himself.

"There is no way to describe the battle carnage that we were witness to that day," officer Charles Longwell, 29, said of the Wednesday shooting spree.

Hennard, 35, was shot by law officers before he shot himself in the head, according to results of an autopsy performed in Dallas and released Monday by Killeen police. A spokeswoman for a Dallas funeral home said Monday Hennard's body had been released for "direct cremation."

Hennard had a history of drug use, having been kicked out of the Merchant Marine for marijuana use on board ship. But the autopsy found no evidence alcohol or drugs were in Hennard's body when he crashed his pickup truck into the cafeteria and started shooting customers, police said.

Hennard's father, a doctor, also had suggested last week a brain tumor may have caused his son to commit the killings.

"To address the issue of a possible existence of a brain tumor, or aneurysm, the autopsy shows that other than the self-inflicted gunshot wound, the rest of the brain shows no abnormalities," said a statement issued by the Killeen Police Department.

Meanwhile, three Killeen police officers who cornered Hennard in an alcove of the restaurant said they did not feel like heroes, even though they drew his fire and he did not shoot anyone else after they arrived.

Alex Morris, 49, said the scene was as bad as anything he had seen during the Vietnam War. "We saw those people being hurt and dead. We had to do something to stop this man," he said.

Officer Ken Olson, the first lawman to enter the restaurant, said when he first saw Hennard, the gunman appeared to be "stalking" people who were down on the floor.

Before entering the restaurant, Olson fired a round from his Browning 9mm pistol, which he believes hit the gunman.

At that point, Olson said, the killer changed "from this Mr. Bad Guy with this power to a scared animal." He said Hennard looked crazed. "You could see the whites around his eyes," he said.

Days after the shooting, the three officers said they were still trying to cope with the incident.

"We're all pretty strung out emotionally. We don't know where we're going day to day with this thing," Longwell said.

Meanwhile, a Dallas funeral home took Hennard's body from the Dallas County medical examiner's office Saturday afternoon. But officials at Laurelland Funeral Home would not confirm whether Hennard's body had been cremated. Laurelland president David Clayton said Monday details of the arrangements were being kept quiet at the family's request.

On Monday, other families were burying their loved ones. Three victims were buried at Fort Sam Houston National Cemetery in San Antonio, and several other services were held in Killeen and Austin.

At Fort Hood in Killeen, about 350 friends, relatives and colleagues of Lt. Col. Steven C. Dody gathered at a chapel on the Army post for his funeral. Red, white and blue carnations adorned the front of the sanctuary near Dody's flag-draped casket.

Dody was the only member of the military killed in the massacre.

"All of us have been touched by the tragic events of the last week," said Lt. Col. Kenneth Carpenter, the presiding chaplain. "An attack on one of us is an attack on all of us."

Carpenter talked about Luby's Cafeteria and how many townspeople enjoyed going there after church on Sundays. He said his family would return if and when the cafeteria reopens. The company has said it will be several weeks before a decision is made on whether to reopen.

"Luby's of Killeen was a wonderful place, full of joy and fellowship," Carpenter said. "I hope it survives as a symbol of the indomitable human spirit."

Retired general: MIAs remain in Asia

■ Former Air Force POW changes his position after reviewing documents.

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Robinson Risner, a retired U.S. Air Force general who was held prisoner in North Vietnam for more than seven years, says he is convinced that Americans are being held in Southeast Asia.

Risner, a retired brigadier general, said when he was repatriated in 1973 after torture and brutal treatment in a North Vietnamese prison he felt confident that no fellow prisoners had been left behind.

However, he told the San Antonio Express-News he is now convinced that some American prisoners are still being held.

Risner said he is hopeful that the case of San Antonio Army Capt. Donald G. Carr, whose plane was downed in Laos 20 years ago, may help peel away the mystery surrounding the fate of some missing servicemen.

"You talk about heroes, these guys are heroes because they had guts enough to survive," Risner said. "They probably have given up on our government, they probably feel no one is coming after them.

"I'm amazed that our government, as strong and powerful and far-reaching its influence (is), has not been able to bring home our American prisoners for all these years," Risner said. "I'm not bitter and I'm not condemning anybody, I'm just amazed."

Risner said he is encouraged at what he sees as increased interest by Defense Department officials.

"The fact that Defense Secretary Richard Cheney is personally interested could mean a lot," Risner said.

POW hunter Jack Bailey has said that his sources in Laos have told him that Carr, a Green Beret whose surveillance plane was shot down in Laos in 1971, reportedly was sighted in a prison camp recently.

The Pentagon made the case a top priority in August after Bailey said a photo, smuggled out of Laos last year by a contact he calls "Mr. X," shows a middle-aged man who many are convinced is Carr.

Risner said he is convinced that "sizable numbers" of Americans were left behind, particularly in Laos, and that some of them are still alive.

He said he changed his mind after reviewing files of POW-MIA reports compiled by the Defense Intelligence Agency.

"I saw many cases where action was deemed by the sighting and yet nothing was ever done.

"Until someone brings a live American out of there, they're written off," Risner said.

Although he said he can't explain why the prisoners would still be held, he pointed out some French prisoners from the Indochina War were retained for years after the conflict ended until they were ransomed by French authorities.

UIL adopts 5A playoff plan

■ Three teams from each district in football, basketball, baseball, volleyball and soccer would be allowed under the new proposal to advance to the state playoffs.

AUSTIN (AP) — The Athletic Committee of the University Interscholastic League's Legislative Council has adopted a proposal to drop one game from the schedule of most team sports in Class 5A to allow another team in each 5A district to advance to the state playoffs.

Under the original proposal, the top three rather than the top two teams in each 5A district would advance to the state playoffs in football, basketball, baseball, volleyball and soccer.

However, state Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno opposed additional expenses or time away from class and suggested eliminating one game during the regular season.

Under the proposal adopted Monday, football will continue to play a full schedule of 10 games, while basketball would drop from 22 to 21 games. Coaches associations from all team sports approved of the move with the exception of the football coaches.

Meno said he was pleased with the outcome.

"That's excellent. I was ready to support it before when I discovered it did not have that provision in it to drop a contest," Meno said. "This resolves any problems in my position. All my fears have been removed. I was very clear in what I wanted.

"We have some huge problems in student achievement in this state, and I don't want anything to stand in our way of resolving it," he said.

ABC goes SWC

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — The Arkansas-Baylor football game on Nov. 2 will be televised regionally by ABC-TV, it was announced Monday.

The kickoff for the Fayetteville game will be moved from 2 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. The network's other regional game that day is Florida-Auburn.

Both teams are 5-2. Baylor is ranked 22nd this week and Arkansas is 25th.

Baylor plays Texas Christian University on Saturday and the Razorbacks are idle.

Raycom TV

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Tech-Texas football game is the Raycom regional Southwest Conference telecast for Nov. 2.

Kickoff at Memorial Stadium in Austin was moved from 1 p.m. to 12:06 p.m. CDT.

Permian remains at No. 3

Associated Press

Arlington Lamar (7-0) retained its spot atop the Class 5A poll with a 55-12 thrashing of Burleson. Lamar received 237 points and 16 of 25 first-place votes, edging No. 2 Dallas Carter's 227 points and eight votes for first.

Odessa Permian was third, followed by Waco, San Antonio Marshall, Beaumont West Brook, Alief Elsik, Aldine, Jersey Village and Huntsville.

Garden City remained No. 1 in Class A, the position it has held since the beginning of the year, and Rankin is No. 6. No. 5 Rotan plays Garden City this week in Garden City. Rankin's only loss is to Garden City.

Ask San Antonio Alamo Heights coach Gaylard Fenley about the Mules' 7-0 record and he'll tell you about quarterback Glenn Winship.

The Alamo Heights offense has become one of the most explosive in Class 4A, averaging more than 400 yards and 41 points. Winship, who has a shot at passing for 3,000 yards before the playoffs, has led the Mules' flying circus to a No. 10 ranking in The Associated Press Schoolboy Poll.

Bastrop again was No. 1 in 4A, garnering 241 points and 20 votes for first. The Bears (7-0) beat Buda Hays 31-14 to remain undefeated.

Houston C.E. King is No. 2, followed by McKinney, Waxahachie, Sulphur Springs, Tomball, Austin Westlake, Lamarque, Wilmer-Hutchins and Alamo Heights.

The Mules were 9-1 and the runnersup in District 28-4A last year after winning only four games the previous two seasons.

Despite the success, Fenley changed the offense to rely more on his passing game this season because running backs Bryan Brown and Mark Meador, who combined for 28 touchdowns last year, graduated.

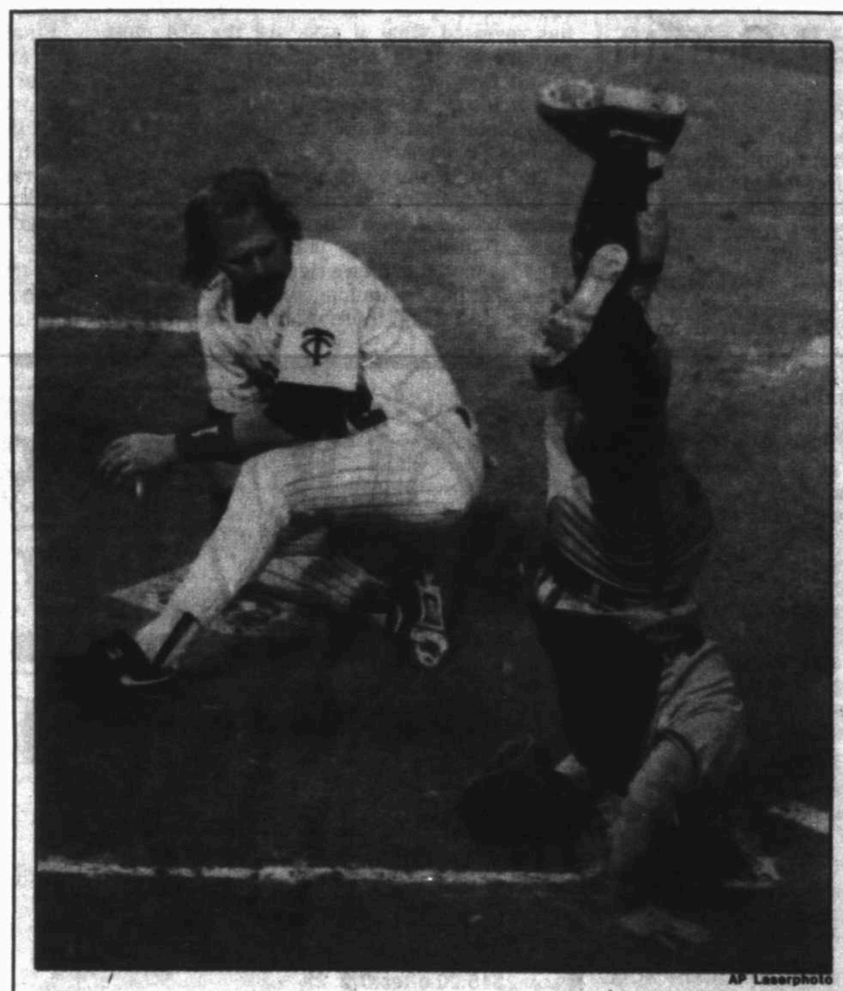

Winship, who passed for 2,298 yards last year, has responded by completing 116 of 188 passes for 2,095 yards and 27 touchdowns. He has run for nearly 300 yards and been intercepted only twice.

"He just seems to rise to a different level on the field," Fenley said. "Some of the things he's done are unbelievable. He's turning what would normally be a sack into a seven- or eight-yard gain."

Fenley said Winship showed his poise in Friday's 37-21 victory over San Antonio West Campus.

"He was facing a weak-side blitz and the guy was right in his face, but Glenn threw a perfect strike for a touchdown," Fenley said. "I didn't think he'd even get it off."

Winship has had help from an experienced receiving corps of Trey Watson and Andrew Maebius.

Braves still feel title is possible

■ Atlanta is down 0-2 to Minnesota in the World Series, but the Twins still have to go through Steve Avery and John Smoltz.

Associated Press

ATLANTA — The Atlanta Braves still like their chances in the World Series. After all, they're back in the land of natural grass and tomahawk chops, and they have two of baseball's hottest pitchers ready to face the Minnesota Twins in Games 3 and 4.

The Twins won the first two games of the best-of-7 series at the Metrodome, 5-2 on Saturday and 3-2 on Sunday. The Braves took a day off Monday after returning to Atlanta, while the Twins worked out at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium.

"It's not a good situation to be in, but we have had our backs up against the wall all season and have come out on top," said Braves first baseman Sid Bream. "It is a pretty good feeling going back to Atlanta having Avery and Smoltz going for us in the next two games."

Steve Avery, who won two games and didn't give up a run in 16⅓ innings in the NL playoffs against Pittsburgh, will pitch tonight when the series resumes. John Smoltz will start Wednesday night.

The 21-year-old Avery, 18-8 during the regular season, has not lost since August.

Neither has Smoltz, who pitched the NL West clincher against Houston as well as Game 7 against the Pirates. He went 12-2 the second half of the season to finish 14-13.

"It's obvious we're in a good position," said Twins catcher Brian Harper. "But now we have to face Avery and Smoltz. It could easily be tied up."

Smoltz likes that idea.

Alliance reviews scenarios

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Officials from four bowls, five conferences and Notre Dame met Monday to discuss their new alliance and review potential postseason scenarios as complicated as the NFL's wildcard playoff system.

"We've probably done a good job of making this sound a little more complex than it needs to," said Chuck Johnson, president of the Fiesta Bowl. "A lot of the things that are going to evolve are not going to be a significant change from what's happened in the past."

The alliance, formed in July, also includes the Orange, Cotton and Sugar bowls, as well as the Atlantic Coast, Big East, Big Eight, Southeastern and Southwest conferences. Officials are optimistic that the Pac-10 and Western Athletic Conference will participate by making their runner-up available to the alliance.

The arrangement takes effect next season. Proponents say it will simplify the process of determining bowl matchups, delay that process until the end of the regular season and increase the likelihood that the two top-ranked teams will meet each Jan. 1.

A framework is in place for determining postseason lineups in the four bowls, but some details remain to be worked out. One question is whether the guidelines will enhance the drama of the regular season or merely confuse fans.

"I guess it's like trying to learn how to ride a bicycle," said Harper Davidson, president of the Orange Bowl Committee. "It can be very complex at first, but once you get going, it's not that complex."

Under the agreement, the Big Eight will continue to send its champion to the Orange Bowl. The SWC-Cotton Bowl and SEC-Sugar Bowl affiliations will also continue.

After the Big Eight, SWC and SEC champions are determined, the other slots for the four bowl games will be filled by a five-team pool, which will include Notre Dame, the champions of the Big East and ACC, and two other highly ranked at-large teams. The at-large teams could be independents or conference members.

"We have indications that the Pac-10 and the WAC are interested in being involved in this," said Mickey Holmes, executive director of the Sugar Bowl.

The highest-ranked team in the pool will be invited to the bowl that offers the highest-ranked opponent. For example, if Texas is No. 1 and bound for the Cotton Bowl, the highest-ranked team in the pool will be invited to play in Dallas on Jan. 1.

If the teams ranked No. 1 and No. 2 are both in the five-team pool, they will go to the Fiesta Bowl.

The Big Ten may be the only major conference not involved in the alliance.

Midland's Tammy Mulanax heads for the barrel racing championship in the 1990 Coors World Finals Rodeo in El Paso.

Midland teacher spends weekends chasing titles

■ Tammy Mulanax will soon defend her barrel racing crown won last year in the Coors World Finals Rodeo.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland's Tammy Mulanax teaches third graders at Burnet Elementary during the week and does her best to avoid knocking over barrels on weekends.

Barrel racing, says the 29-year-old Mulanax, is her "expensive hobby," but she does it quite well — with a little help from Miss Kaweah Diamond, her sorrel mare who has a knack for winning titles.

Mulanax, who has been riding and racing barrels since the age of 11, and Miss Kaweah Diamond have parlayed the partnership into seven titles and around $50,000 in winnings while traveling to rodeos anywhere from 800 to 1,000 miles on a typical weekend.

Mulanax has won three six and a horse trailer to boot with Miss Kaweah Diamond, who is the granddaughter of Easy Jet, one of the winningest quarterhorses in racing history.

Beginning Nov. 1, however, Mulanax faces one of her biggest challenges when she travels to El Paso to defend the title she won last year in the Coors World Finals Rodeo.

"Last year, there were approximately 800 entries in all of the events at this rodeo and there were 72 entries in the barrel racing competition," Mulanax said. "I was the only Texan to win an event. They had entries from all over the United States, Canada, Mexico and Australia. It was quite a thrill to win."

After that event, Mulanax plans to

UIL: Single site football championship plan nixed

(From 1C)

The third-team proposal, like all proposals coming from the committee, must be approved by the 24-member Legislative Council on Tuesday and then passed by the State Board of Education to take effect.

Six-man football coaches and administrators failed in their attempt to stop the implementation of the 75-student cutoff figure and it will take effect during the 1993-94 school year. It has already been approved by the State Board of Education. The previous enrollment cutoff was 95.

John Kelley of Associated Trading Inc. presented the committee with a proposal Sunday in which all six classes of state football championship games would be played at one site over two days.

The UIL has heard several similar types of single site proposals over the past few years and declined to approve the latest one.

The six-member athletics committee did agree, however, to study the one-site concept.

"We do not want some outside entity to be involved," said UIL Director Bailey Marshall. "Until we sit down with all the information, it is going to be difficult to make a decision because of the unknown."

UIL Athletic Director Bill Farney said, "The control needs to be there and this is not going to go away. We haven't had enough input from the schools."

The committee declined to take action on sanctioning wrestling, girl's fast-pitch softball, chess or water polo as UIL activities.

Kelly, Lofton rip Bengals, 35-16

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — The mild concussion Jim Kelly sustained last week seemed to bother him Monday night — for awhile.

What had been bothering the winless Cincinnati Bengals all season did them in for 60 minutes in a 35-16 loss to the Buffalo Bills.

Kelly looked confused in throwing three first-quarter interceptions, but things cleared in time for the NFL's top-rated passer to complete 18 of 27 for 392 yards and five touchdowns, two to James Lofton, who caught eight passes for 220 yards.

Kelly threw the interceptions on Buffalo's first three possessions, but the Bengals were only able to convert the first into points, Jim Breech's 32-yard field goal.

The Bills, winners of 15 straight and 30 of their last 32 at Rich Stadium, improved to 7-1 going into their bye week. At 0-7, Cincinnati is off to its worst start since 1978.

As the losses have piled up for the Bengals so has the frustration and it spilled onto the field Monday night, including a penalty against coach Sam Wyche for running onto the field arguing an official's non-call on a Buffalo touchdown.

Buffalo's first three touchdowns came on passes directed at rookie cornerback Richard Fain, who was making his first start in place of Lewis Billups, the veteran who dislocated a finger Friday night and didn't make the trip to Buffalo.

Two went to Lofton while the other went to Pete Metzelaars on just his second catch of the season.

After Breech gave the Bengals a 3-0 lead following Rickey Dixon's interception of Kelly, Cincinnati got the ball back immediately when Kelly was picked off by Leo Barker, who returned the ball 29 yards to the Buffalo 27.

The game was marred by constant pushing and shoving, the worst after the first play of the fourth quarter when Esiason was hit hard on the sidlines. Wyche again came on the field, this time as an apparent peacemaker. Esiason, who was 13-for-20 for 149 yards, was replaced by Erik Wilhelm, who completed eight of 10 for 80 yards.

As the clock wound down with the Bills just kneeling on every play, Wyche went down the bench and shook hands with each of the Bengals.

Football most popular of American sports

NEW YORK (AP) — From the NFL to squash, the Sports Marketing Group of Dallas has revealed what it says are the 114 most popular sports in America.

Last February, SMG listed only the top 20. The firm said Monday the rest of the list was unavailable until now "due to proprietary business reasons."

The top 20 were the NFL, college football, Winter Olympics, Summer Olympics, major league baseball, high school football, the NBA, ladies figure skating, pairs figure skating, pairs ice dancing, men's figure skating, professional boxing, swimming, college basketball, Alpine ski racing, thoroughbred horse racing, women's gymnastics, college baseball, minor league baseball and high school basketball.

Finally SMG revealed on Monday that No. 21 was men's gymnastics.

The NHL, considered the fourth major professional sport, was 40th in the survey, while PGA golf was 43rd, both behind tractor pulls, which came in 31st.

A random search down the list showed international ice hockey was 50th, World Cup soccer 75th, velodrome bike racing 100th, and a final five of tour bike racing, biathlons, curling, cricket and squash.

Some competitions known more for their television exposure that made the list included: No. 30 professional wrestling, No. 58 Roller Derby, and No. 102 American Gladiators.

A private research company, hired by SMG, conducted more than 2,060 in-home interviews in more than 175 areas of the United States to get a representable sample of the total population, not just sports fans, the firm said. Participants in the survey were asked to give positive, negative or neutral opinions to 114 specific sports "of a spectatorship and viewership nature and the frequency of their participation in 71 sports," SMG said.

The margin of error of the survey was plus or minus 1.5 percent.

Jazz releases Darrell Griffith

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Darrell Griffith, one of the NBA's all-time leading 3-point shooters, was put on waivers by the Utah Jazz on Monday.

Griffith spent his entire 11-year career with the Jazz, the team that drafted him as the second overall pick out of Louisville in 1980.

The 33-year-old Griffith and Jazz owner Larry Miller both wiped away tears during an emotional news conference at the Delta Center, the team's new arena.

Griffith recently asked the team to place him on waivers to free him up to talk to other teams. He began considering such a move at the end of last season's playoffs when he saw limited playing time.

"It's hard, but it has to happen," Griffith said. "My situation here wasn't bright as far as playing."

Development of rookie forward Corey Crowder also was said to have been a factor in the decision.

"As a player you just have to have options, and the option I chose ... was to be put on waivers and see what's out there and who might be interested," he said. "It was just a matter of me making a decision that I think is best for Darrell Griffith."

Miller said it wasn't easy to let Griffith go.

"It's very difficult from an emotional standpoint to have these types of things occur," he said. "One thing that needs to be said is that Darrell always gave the Jazz everything he could."

Griffith and teammates Adrian Dantley and Rickey Green helped take the Jazz to the Midwest Division championship in 1980.

Nicknamed "Dr. Dunkenstein" at Louisville, and "The Golden Griff" at Utah, the 6-foot-4 Griffith was the NBA's 1980-81 rookie of the year and the Jazz' all-time leader in games played — 765.

Chap netters claim titles

Staff Report

Instead of spending an extra day in El Paso for the finals of the Cliff Inn Sun Bowl Adult Open, the Midland College tennis team came home to determine four titles Monday.

Miram Berthe won three events. She beat teammate Sieko Ichioka, 6-1, 6-3, to win the women's singles title. She also teamed with Ichioka to win the women's singles title with a 6-4, 6-4, over MC's Adriana Isaza and Boba Tzvetkova before teaming with Fadel Berthe for a 3-6, 6-2, 6-4 win over Robin van Beveren and Tzvetkova, 7-5, 6-2, for the mixed doubles title.

Van Beveren and Gene Highfield won the men's doubles with a 3-6, 6-2, 6-4 win over Tim Erik Brun and Fadel Berthe.

The MC men will host Odessa College at the MC courts on Oct. 29. Both the men and women will be in the ITCA Rolex Small College National Championships in Corpus Christi on Nov. 1-3.

SERIES: Braves need runs

(From 1C)

"We just have to prove everybody wrong again and go out and win," he said. "We understand what we have to do, and we've learned how to win big games. And we have some big games coming up."

The pitching during postseason play hasn't been the problem for Atlanta, however. It's been the lack of hitting.

In the seven games against Pittsburgh, the Braves batted only .231 and scored 19 runs. So far against the Twins, the team is hitting .226 with four runs in two games.

Terry Pendleton, the NL's leading hitter with a .319 average during the regular season, hit only .167 against the Pirates and was 0-for-6 against the Twins before getting two hits Sunday night.

Leadoff hitter Lonnie Smith is 0-for-6 against Minnesota, and Bream is 1-for-8. David Justice is 2-for-6, but hasn't driven in a run. Ron Gant is hitting .500 with four hits, but failed to produce in the clutch Sunday night.

With the score tied at 2-2, Rafael Belliard at third and Pendleton at first with one out in the top of the eighth, Gant popped out and Justice flied out to end Atlanta's last threat.

In the bottom of the inning, Scott Leius got the game-winner for the Twins with a solo homer off Tom Glavine. Glavine gave up only four hits, but one of the others was a first inning, two-run homer to Chili Davis.

The lack of offense may be starting to get to the players.

"We had some opportunities to score, but didn't get the job done," said Glavine. "Those situations are a little frustrating."

Brian Hunter, who had a three-run homer in Atlanta's 4-0 Game 7 victory over the Pirates, also has taken notice.

"It seems like throughout the whole playoffs, we haven't capitalized. That's the main thing that we're not doing that we did throughout the season," he said.

"It's frustrating because we had been getting those key hits all year. Everybody has gotten used to seeing us get those runs in, but it's not happening now."

RODEO: Mulanax hopes to train horses, give clinics to enter Phase II in her barrel racing career.

"In November, I plan to join the Women's Professional Rodeo Association and compete in pro events," Mulanax said. "I plan to hit some of the big shows in Houston and San Antonio and I plan to ride in Odessa around the first of the year. We'll probably hit some of the major stock shows and get the feel for it and see where we go from there."

Miss Kaweah Diamond is nine years old and Mulanax thinks the horse is reaching her prime.

"She's got a lot of racing ahead of her," Mulanax says. "Charmayne Rodman of California has won the WPRA barrel racing the last six years and her horse is 15 years old."

One of the major problems for Mulanax is that she has no place in Midland to keep Miss Kaweah Diamond.

"My dad lives in Roby and keeps the horse during the week and rides her for me. We have to go and pick her up before we even start on a trip," Mulanax said. "It makes training difficult, but we plan to have a place in Midland soon. That will make things a little easier."

From August to August last year, Mulanax competed in 75 rodeos and her travel may increase when she joins the WPRA in November since events are held all over the United States. Mulanax recently has kept her racing confined to Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico.

"I want to give the professional racing a try, but in the long term, I would like someday to train futurity horses and give barrel racing clinics. That's my real dream," Mulanax said.

Liberty eyes on Mississippi

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Mississippi State and Mississippi play Nov. 23 in Starkville and the winner could get a Liberty Bowl bid.

Liberty Bowl executive director Bud Dudley said the Mississippi State-Ole Miss matchup is one of the games that has been discussed.

"An awful lot can happen between now and then," Dudley said. "That's three or four games down the road."

The Bulldogs are 4-3 after Saturday's 28-23 loss to Memphis State. They play Auburn this week.

Ole Miss is 5-2 after an idle week. The Rebels play Vanderbilt on Saturday in Oxford.

Sherrill said taking the State-Ole Miss winner would be good for the Liberty Bowl in terms of ticket sales and because it would guarantee the bowl a team that ended its season on a winning note.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will feel more settled and secure. A family reunion at Christmas could lead to rekindled romance. Self-improvement activities bring big rewards early in the new year. Set specific monetary goals in February. Sound investments mean lasting financial security. A new partnership will demand the lion's share of your attention next June and July. A vacation should be postponed until early fall of 1992.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Catherine Deneuve, artist N.C. Wyeth, author Doris Lessing, actor Jeff Goldblum.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your plans get moving in a big way. Talks, trips and letters expand your career and domestic horizons. What you do for your family will be richly rewarded. Be willing to make sacrifices.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The career arena provides the proper setting for you to display your competitive streak. Discussions with influential people encourage them to make their financial resources available to you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You and your partners can reach a better understanding today. Share a secret goal to achieve optimum rapport. Your plans unfold beautifully. Help a relative who feels pressured tonight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Success in your dealings with prominent people is practically assured. Adopt a serious, sincere manner to gain favor. Keep an eye on the high costs of living. Show your mate more affection.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): To advance key interests, you may have to reach a wider audience. The path ahead could be difficult; delays and complications are featured. Push on — a big payoff awaits you! Romance beckons.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are irresistible, witty and on top of your game today. A financial transaction or maneuver looks promising. Lend an ear to what an older person has to say. Take a hint.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be on the lookout for a behind-the-scenes opportunity to advance your business aims. Your personal magnetism is a big asset when convincing others to do your bidding. Be generous with praise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It is time to reach a compromise with your mate or another key ally. Do not try to hide your emotions. Sharing your doubts and hopes with loved one brings you closer together.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You have greater control over financial matters now. Investigate recent purchases and investments. You will benefit from making yourself more visible at work. Listen to a woman's wise advice.

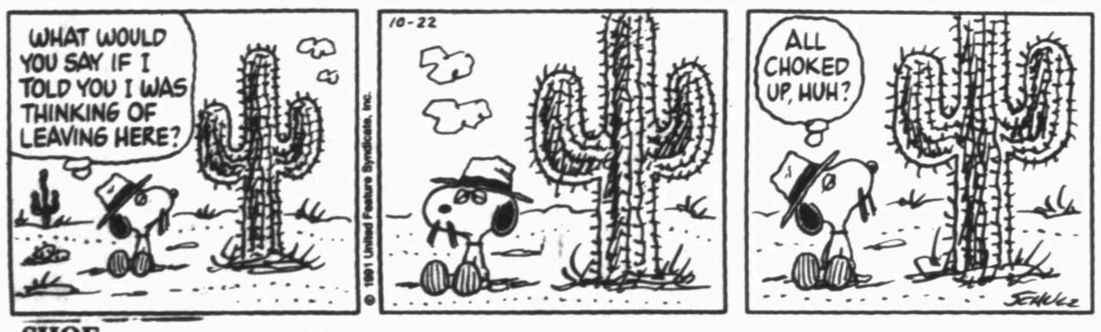

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Any promises you make today will be difficult to keep. Postpone making a serious commitment. Consider a new investment plan. Learn more about stocks, real estate and overseas investments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid relying on other people if there is work to be done, errands to run or messages to send. Everything will go much better if you fly solo today! Listening to music relaxes you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Make the most of a communications network. Your words have special power today. Be careful not to offend someone who would make a good ally. Your involvement in community affairs brings rich rewards.

The expert game at the YMPL Card Group, successor to the Cavendish Club, is one of the strongest anywhere. On a recent weekend, it consisted of one many-time world champion and three players who had represented their countries in international competition. This hand presented declarer with no problem. See if you can duplicate the solution.

North's jump to two no trump was a forcing raise in spades. South applied the Principle of Fast Arrival to show a minimum opening bid with no singleton or void by going directly to game.

West led the king of hearts. What's your line?

At the table the hand was over in two seconds flat. Declarer shot up with dummy's ace of hearts, drew trumps and exited with a heart. Whichever defender won the trick would have to do something to help declarer.

In actual fact, West chose to win the second heart and declarer could almost claim. Had West returned a club, South would have romped home by playing for split club honors. If West cashed a high diamond, declarer would be able to set up a diamond for a club discard.

What if East had won the heart and shifted to a low diamond, ducked by West after declarer followed low from hand? South would win in dummy and return a diamond to the ten. That would either yield two diamond tricks or an endplay no matter how the suit split. As the cards lie, West would have to broach clubs and declarer would again be home by relying on the club honors being split.

That brings up a defensive point of interest. When West breaks the club suit, the correct card to lead is the queen! That might tempt declarer into playing West for both missing club honors, which would result in down one.

Milton Berle to marry for the fourth time this spring

NEW YORK — Milton Berle is engaged to marry a Beverly Hills fashion designer, his publicist said Monday.

"We are both the luckiest people on Earth to have found each other," Berle, 83, said in announcing his engagement Friday to Lorna Adams.

Publicist Glenn Schwartz said said the bride-to-be is "about 50."

They plan to marry in the spring, Schwartz said.

It would be Ms. Adams' second marriage, and the fourth for Berle. Berle married former showgirl Joyce Matthews twice, and his wife of 36 years, Hollywood press agent Ruth Cosgrove, died of cancer in 1989.

ATLANTA — Barbara Bush and former first lady Rosalynn Carter are joining forces to help raise money to convert a downtown shoe factory into housing for 75 mentally ill homeless people.

Mrs. Bush and Mrs. Carter are scheduled to attend a luncheon Wednesday at the Georgia World Congress Center to raise money for the $1.6 million conversion of the 75-year-old, four-story warehouse.

A spokeswoman for Mrs. Bush said Mrs. Carter invited the first lady, who has been involved in homeless issues.

People's Place, scheduled to open in January 1993, is being developed by Project Interconnections, a private, non-profit organization founded in Atlanta in 1986 to build housing for mentally ill homeless people.

WINSTON, Ore. — People who love animals are some of the finest people in the world, says actress Tippi Hedren.

"There's an energy and a charisma about people who care about animals," Hedren said Saturday at a celebration of the 19th anniversary of the Widlife Safari. "It's an honor to have these animals as friends."

Hedren is a member of the board of trustees of the Safari Game Search Foundation Inc., which owns the animal preserve in Winston.

The actress, best known for her starring roles in the Alfred Hitchcock films "Marnie" and "The Birds," is a member of the board of trustees of the Safari Game Search Foundation Inc., which owns the animal preserve in Winston.

She also runs her own big cat preserve in Acton, Calif. The preserve, called Shambala, is home to 57 cats, including African lions, Bengal and Siberian tigers and a cougar.

ELIZABETH, N.J. — Author Mickey Spillane's famous detective, Mike Hammer, has yet to solve the case, but city officials decided not to wait to replace a stolen sign honoring the hometown hero.

City officials on Friday put up a new street sign identifying Mickey Spillane Way rather than wait to find the purloined original that went up last year amid much hoopla. The sign was discovered missing last month, and a $100 reward wasn't enough to recover the sign.

"Thank God, I can face Mickey Spillane if he comes," Mayor Thomas Dunn said Sunday.

The missing sign was removed from the signpost in front of Spillane's alma mater, Theodore Roosevelt Junior High School, now an elementary and middle school. Morrison Spillane, Roosevelt class of 1932, often returns for class reunions, Dunn said.

DETROIT — Singer Aretha Franklin helped the Rev. Jesse Jackson celebrate turning 50 at a combination birthday party and pep rally.

The Queen of Soul joined workers at the Westin Hotel on Sunday in singing "Happy Birthday" to Jackson. The civil rights activist and singer then fed each other cake.

Jackson's Detroit appearance was sponsored by Hotel and Restaurant Employees union Local 24, which is fighting a decertification campaign at the hotel.

Jackson turned 50 on Oct. 8.

NEW YORK — Actress Teri Garr, who plays the evil twin sister in ABC's sitcom "Good & Evil," says she enjoys being on television even after experiencing film stardom in movies such as "Tootsie" and "Mr. Mom."

Garr

"When I started out as a dancer, it was good enough for me just to be maybe in the front a little bit. So I'm not frustrated. I love this work. I never thought I'd get this far," the actress said in this week's People magazine.

And she knows from her film career the difficulty of predicting star vehicles.

When she was offered a comedy role in "Tootsie," she had just finished working on "One From the Heart" directed by Francis Ford Coppola.

"And of course I was like, 'Please, darling, I just starred in a movie for Copploa,' which is the greatest thing in the world," she said. "Who knew it was going right into the dumper? That was my lesson in humble pie."

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?
Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:
1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numberical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key(*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
• You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
• You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key(*). Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
• You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market fell today as an unsurprising wave of profit-taking deflated last week's impressive gains.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 23.93 at 3,053.22 by midafternoon.

Declining issues outpaced advancing ones by about 2 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 518 up, 1,044 down and 519 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 110.38 million shares as of 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

The market opened on a weak note and moved steadily lower as the session wore on. Analysts predicted stock prices would ease today following a week of strong gains, culminating in the Dow's record close on Friday.

At least some of those gains were attributed to the monthly expiration of stock-index futures on Friday. Analysts said stock prices typically retreat in the subsequent session.

Weakness in the bond market also weighed on stock prices.

Among actively traded Big Board issues, Owens-Corning Fiberglass, the subject of several negative analysts' reports, plunged 5 to 19¾.

NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell 1.66 to 214.49. At the American Stock Exchange, the market-value index stood at 381.32, off 1.17.

Prices slip

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices finished mixed Monday in quiet trading.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in November settled at $24.04 per barrel, down 10 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. But oil to be delivered in later months rose.

Traders said the drop in the November crude contract was partly explained by technical trading factors related to its expiration on Tuesday. Many futures-market participants sold November crude and began buying December crude.

Oil had traded much lower during the session, with November contracts falling as far as $23.81 per barrel, but they bounced back near the close.

Traders remain reluctant to sell much oil, with the looming winter and continuing uncertainty over the reliability of Soviet exports setting the tone of the market.

Natural gas prices were mostly lower, with contracts for delivery in November settling at $2.013 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 1.2 cents.

T-bills rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities rose in Monday's auction.

The Treasury Department sold $10.6 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.04 percent, up from 4.99 percent last week. Another $10.6 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.11 percent, up from 5.03 percent.

The three-month bill rate was the highest since they sold for 5.11 percent on Oct 7. The six-month bill rate was the highest since they averaged 5.14 percent on Sept. 30.

Dollar advances

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar advanced against other major currencies Monday, boosted by hopes that U.S. interest rates would move higher.

The dollar closed higher against the Japanese yen, rising to 130.80 yen in New York from 129.65 on Friday.

The British pound fell against the dollar, slipping to $1.7165 in New York from late Friday's $1.7270.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday's prices, included: 1.6933 German marks, up from 1.6865; 1.4835 Swiss francs, up from 1.4750; 5.7750 French francs, up from 5.7490; 1,266.00 Italian lire, up from 1261.25; and 1.12625 Canadian dollars, down from 1.12675.

Minister: Oil fires to be out soon

■ Oil Minister Hamoud al-Rquba originally estimated the oil fires to be out by March. However, because of faster progress than expected, al-Rquba now predicts November.

Associated Press

SABRIYYAH, Kuwait — Oil Minister Hamoud al-Rquba said Monday he expected the last 58 of 732 wells set ablaze or destroyed by Iraq to be capped by early next month.

Al-Rquba also said the faster rate of progress in controlling the wells will reduce losses incurred from lost production time and damage to oil installations. The damage was initially estimated at $75 billion.

"If things go the way they're going now, things could be over by the first half of November," the minister told an impromptu press conference in front of one of the raging wells in this northern oilfield.

Original estimates called for capping the wells by March.

Of Kuwait's 940 producing wells, 732 were damaged by the Iraqis, including 640 set ablaze with explosives.

Firefighting crews have so far extinguished 674 wells, or 92 percent.

The faster rate for killing the blazes was attributed to an increase in the number of firefighting companies, the availability of needed equipment and support, the completion of a water system and the growing experience of firefighters.

Sabriyyah and the neighboring Rawdatein oilfields already looked noticeably different from a few days ago.

Fewer fires were seen in the distance and the smoke drifting from the burning wells was less dense, making the sky look clearer and allowing the sun to shine through more brightly.

"In seven to 10 days you won't recognize this place," said Larry Flak, who coordinates firefighting for the national Kuwait Oil Co.

The initial estimate for losses of the oil sector since Iraq's invasion on Aug. 2, 1990, included $43 billion in lost oil. Al-Rquba said the figure would be less than that because the wells have been capped before the projected date.

He said because of the firefighters' speedy job, Kuwait has lost less than 2 percent of its pre-war 100 billion barrels in recoverable oil reserves — down from a previous estimate of 3 percent.

But Al-Rquba said it would be difficult to estimate how many of the capped wells would be productive until a full evaluation was completed.

Kuwait currently is producing about 290,000 barrels of oil a day from 120 intact wells. Output is expected to rise to about 400,000 barrels a day by the year's end and 800,000 by July.

Al-Rquba predicted Kuwait could reach its previous Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries quota of 1.5 million barrels a day by December 1992.

Some 26 new wells will be drilled by the end of the year and 80 wells will be drilled between January and July to replace those destroyed by the Iraqis, he said.

Early retirees face investment problems

■ Early retirees often face anxiety when having to make decisions sooner than expected.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Corporate belt-tightening has foisted workers into retirement programs long before they're prepared, financial planners say.

"If you're not used to dealing with that kind of money all of your life, do you want to deal with the fact that that is all there is between me and the poorhouse?" said William Burke, an actuary at the Wyatt Co. in Stafford, employee benefit consultants.

It's possible that having earned $40,000 a year for 30 years, an employee may be faced with suddenly handling a half a million dollars in an early retirement deal.

A half-million dollars can be "an awful lot of money for someone who had been making $50,000 to $75,000 all their lives," Burke said.

Planners say the employees first should decide if they want all their money at once or paid out in installments.

If there's one big payment, the employee must pay income taxes on it and invest it. If they invest the money in annuities for a regular monthly income, the insurance company handling the deal could fail or the annuity payment could be eroded by taxes and inflation.

Employees can also roll the money into another qualified retirement plan, such as an Individual Retirement Account, within 60 days. If the money is

Refurbishing for the future

Don Stolzenbach, technical support manager of LINC Equipment Services, Lincolnshire, Il. calibrates a pair of giant vaccuum tubes. These tubes generate and control the X-ray beams in Computed Tomography scanners. LINC Equipment Services refurbishes, remarkets, and maintains a wide range of advanced medical imaging equipment for hospitals worldwide. Refurbished equipment can save as much as 50 percent to 80 percent of the cost of a new unit.

Airline merger faces transition problems

EAGAN, Minn. (AP) — Integrating the non-union work force at Continental Airlines with union-organized Northwest Airlines is the main sticking point in merger talks between the two carriers, Continental's chairman says.

"The primary element holding up a Northwest deal, if one is ultimately to be completed, is an agreement with air-labor groups to ensure a smooth and equitable transition and the integration of our work force with theirs," Continental Chairman Robert Ferguson said in a recorded message to workers. "We all know that this is critical for a successful merger between the two carriers."

Continental spokesman Art Kent said Monday that talks have not bogged down over the issue. "As far as Continental is concerned, the talks continue," he said.

A Northwest spokesman would not acknowledge the talks.

Ferguson's message was recorded Friday but still available Monday by telephone to Continental's 40,000 workers. Ferguson also said the Texas-based carrier still may go it alone as it emerges from its latest bankruptcy.

Meshing the union and non-union work forces is one of the biggest stumbling blocks in a merger or partial merger many experts see as essential to the survival of Eagan-based Northwest.

Northwest will employ about 49,000 workers, most of them union organized, once it completes its acquisition of Midway Airlines of Chicago.

Southwest profit falls 32 percent

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Airlines said its third-quarter profit fell 32 percent due to higher operating expenses.

The airline earned $15.7 million, or 37 cents a share, on revenue of $355.3 million during the three months that ended Sept. 30. Southwest earned $23.0 million, 54 cents a share, on revenue of $316.4 million during the same period last year.

Southwest's capacity increased 13.9 percent from third quarter 1990 but operating expenses rose 15.9 percent.

Traffic in revenue passenger miles on the Dallas-based airline was up 14 percent compared with last year. Southwest officials credited promotions, including free fares for traveling companions, for the traffic increase.

Recession has weakened air travel for most of the year.

For the first nine months of the year, Southwest earned $18.1 million, 42 cents a share, on revenue of $962.7 million. The airline earned $51.7 million, $1.20 a share, on revenue of $885.2 million for the first nine months of 1990.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Annuity isn't rock-solid safe in estate planning

By Bill Doyle

Q. My husband and I are trying to plan our estate so that our 45-year-old single daughter receives monthly checks after our deaths. We have a certificate of deposit that matures in a couple of months and are considering putting that money into an annuity with an old, reliable insurance company. We would use the interest from the annuity, which is a good deal higher than CD interest, until we die. After that, it would go to our daughter.

Doyle

Is an annuity as safe as a bank CD with Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. coverage?

A. No, for the simple reason that FDIC is backed by the full faith and credit of our federal government, making your CD rock-solid safe.

An annuity, like an insurance policy, is as sound as the company that issued it and has the additional backing of a state guaranty fund when an insurance company goes under. The level of coverage varies from state to state.

It must be stressed this does not mean you would take on risk by putting your money into that annuity. As has been pointed out in this column, the vast majority of insurance companies are safe. And there currently is a move afoot to have the guaranty funds of all states provide uniform coverage.

The traditional way to obtain money from an annuity is to "annuitize" and receive steady payments, which consist of both interest and principal. However, you can arrange to receive only the interest from an "income" annuity.

You might want to draw out the interest during your lifetimes and annuitize for your daughter so that she would receive larger payments.

Q. I was terribly frightened by the column in which you wrote, "An annuity can be a sensible way to provide a steady flow of money during your retirement years. But is not a method of preserving capital."

I am a widow, 72. Every penny I have is in an annuity, from which I have already begun to withdraw the required minimum amount annually. I've been assured I can withdraw all or part of my money at any time. What would be the best move for me to make?

A. None. Sit tight and continue to receive the annuity payments. I'm sorry the previous column on this subject upset you. But I suspect you concentrated on the second sentence you quote and skimmed through the rest.

That column explained, because payments from an annuitized annuity consist of principal as well as interest, principal gradually diminishes.

However, you'll continue to receive those payments until you leave this vale of tears. There's nothing wrong with using up your principal during your senior years.

Q. The $100,000 I received from my husband's life insurance is in a credit union (CU) account, covered by the National Credit Union Share Insurance Fund. I've read that some CUs have gone the way of failed savings and loan associations.

A banker recommends I put the money in CDs. A broker advises me to put it in mutual funds. A friend recommends an annuity. My late husband's pension and the interest from the CU account just cover my living expenses.

What do you advise?

A. Yours is another typical case in which no immediate changes are necessary. For the time being, keep that money in the CU, where is it insured up to $100,000. The national insurance fund is as safe as FDIC.

Over the long term, you should invest for income. CDs and/or a mutual fund with income as its investment objective would be sensible choices.

DEAR ABBY

Precautions take fright out of holiday

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: It's autumn again — and Halloween will soon be here. That means it's time to remind readers with small children that:

Van Buren

- Somebody's child will be seriously injured or killed in a Halloween-related traffic accident.
- Somebody's child will be badly maimed or fatally burned due to a flammable costume.
- Somebody's child will be coaxed into an automobile or lured into a secluded area and sexually assaulted.

To make sure that that child isn't yours, I offer these tips to preserve the safety of your children:

- Use flameproof costumes only. If costumes are made at home, treat the fabric with a flame-resistant solution.
- Because masks, floppy hats, wigs and veils often interfere with a child's vision, use makeup instead.
- Accessories such as swords, broomsticks, hatchets, wands, etc., should be made of cardboard rather than plastic, metal or wood. Sharp items are dangerous!
- Provide youngsters with flashlights to prevent falls on sidewalks or porch steps. (Positively no lighted candles should be carried!)
- Decorate your child's costume and trick-or-treat bag with reflective tape to make them highly visible to motorists.
- Remind children that they should never enter the home of a stranger or accept rides.
- Adults can help by keeping their yards well-lighted.
- Parents should check all "treats" before allowing children to eat them.
- Very young children should never be out after dark unless accompanied by an adult.

So, let's make it a safe Halloween for all children, and come Thanksgiving, we will have more to be thankful for.

DEAR ABBY: Like many others, I can't say I've read your column for years because I'm only 11 years old. But I have read it a great many times.

I have a very bad habit. I suck my thumb and bite my nails. In fact, I've bitten one of my nails so low it started to bleed without my knowing it. It doesn't even hurt. I started sucking my thumb when I was about 3 years old; then I started biting my nails when I was about 6.

Whenever I catch myself, I take my hands away, or try to "hurt" my hand. Usually my family catches me when I'm not aware of what I'm doing. Abby, please help me, and sign this ... THUMB IN MOUTH AND NO NAILS

DEAR THUMB: Try this. Put a rubber band on your wrist, and when you get the urge to suck your thumb or bite your nails, snap the rubber band hard enough to remind you to resist those old habits.

Raising children has come long way, baby

EDITORS NOTE: Erma Bombeck is taking a three-week vacation. This column originally appeared in December 1984.

Is it my imagination, or are the babies doing the diaper commercials getting older? I saw one the other day that spoke lines and looked old enough to prepare its own formula.

Bombeck

If this is true, things sure have changed.

A couple of years ago, the push to get your child toilet trained made the arms race look like it was standing still. We went right from seeing a newborn and observing, "How much does he weigh?" to "Is he trained yet?" There was nothing in between.

No matter what your child did, it was nothing if he didn't remain dry all night. I had a kid who could get a bell out of a 3-inch thick rubber ball in 15 seconds. Nothing. He could move a sofa 35 times his weight to get to an Oreo cookie buried in a shag carpet. Big deal. He could fill up an entire grocery cart from the seat using only his feet. So what?

He had kidneys the size of lint. We needed someone like Yogi Berra to give us one of his truisms, like "They're ready when they're ready," but it wasn't there. Instead, we pressured ourselves by setting our kids on the throne for days at a time and describing the water scenes from "Deliverance." We threatened them with a hole in their bicycle seat and with putting a plastic liner in their tux at the prom.

Some of us bought 53 pairs of training pants and lied to ourselves. My kids spent so much time in the bathroom, they thought the sky had a light and an exhaust fan in it.

Why did we try so hard? Because it reflected on us as mothers. Toilet training was a team effort. We coached, and they won or lost the game.

It's possible that the mothers of today are bored with a child's plumbing. Or maybe they have more important things to do and think about. The pressure is still there. It's just a different kind. Can they prop up their 2-year-old in front of a computer terminal and have him push the right button? Can he amuse himself for a whole day with a roll of toilet paper? Does he remember his Sprint code number before he starts to school? Can he adjust the color on a videocassette recorder?

Toilet training just isn't a priority of child-rearing anymore. That much is reflected in the diapers. They hold more every day. They absorb more with each month. They fit tighter every year and come in larger sizes with every decade.

Where does that leave me? Eaten up with bitterness and an old bicycle with a hole in the seat in the garage.

Bite is back for Soviets looking for aid

MOSCOW (AP) — The bite is back in the Moscow air, the days are getting darker sooner and the thoughts of pensioners naturally turn to tonight's meal.

With another hard winter hurtling toward the Soviet Union, planeloads of Western food also are on the way.

"What food?" asked Zinaida Suchkova, shaking an empty paper bag she brought out of an almost empty store on a crowded street in this crowded, cranky town. "I keep hearing about the Western food, but I never see it."

Mrs. Suchkova, 57, gets a 100-ruble pension each month, the amount a tourist receives when he changes $3 at the Moscow airport. Her deaf, disabled husband gets 132 rubles.

Every kopeck goes to finance her perpetual shopping forays. There is no money left to replace the ratty brown coat she wears or buy the 250-ruble Bible she wants.

"For dinner I'm eating bread tonight!" she shouted, drawing stares near the cabbage stand outside the state-run store. "The Communist Party gets it all!"

Identifying the people who need relief and surmounting the red tape that can tie it up — or the corruption that can divert it — are tasks facing myriad nations, relief agencies and churches gearing up for the second annual feed-the-Soviets drive.

The European Community says it will contribute $2.4 billion in relief. The United States and other industrial nations are ready to follow suit.

The Soviet Union pulls at so many heartstrings these days that, last year, even poor India sent 26 tons of powdered milk, jam, instant soup, canned vegetables and medical supplies.

In the last 12 months, the Soviet Union received nearly 310,000 tons of food, clothing and medical supplies, according to its own figures.

About 265,000 tons came from Germany, which keeps thanking the Kremlin for allowing its reunification. The United States sent 730 tons. The little island of Malta sent 85 pounds.

"We expect even more this winter," said Dr. Andrei Kisselev, chairman of the Russian Foundation for Social and Health Assistance and a member of the World Health Organization's emergency relief board.

Kisselev, who coordinates relief aid for the Russian republic, anticipates fewer amateur participants than last year, when saving the Soviets was very chic.

"They wanted limousines, they wanted to meet the big names," he said. "They didn't care where their aid went. They just wanted to tell their friends."

Some governments believe the Soviets overstate their needs. There is plenty of food, but also much evidence that affordable essentials are increasingly beyond the reach of average households.

Republics are reluctant to send products beyond their borders. Farms are reluctant to feed a state distribution system when they can profit more from the open market.

People like Lubov Gormarova, 65, one of Russia's 26 million pensioners, say they can only shop in the state stores or borrow from relatives.

"My pension would not last a week in a private market," she said.

Quality is better in private markets, but common foods like tomatoes, cabbage and eggs can cost 10 to 15 times the price at a state store, when it has them.

In July, Kisselev said, 106 million of the republic's 148.7 million people were living below a "poverty line" of 290 rubles a month. President Mikhail S. Gorbachev is trying to seal economic agreements that would make sure republics distribute their food evenly.

Edward Madigan, the U.S. agriculture secretary, just completed a week-long mission to see how badly the Soviet food production, processing and distribution system is crumbling.

Madigan said he doesn't think there will be famine this year, but he expects shortages of some essentials.

Besides food, much of the humanitarian aid this winter will be medicine. The Soviet Union imported about half its pharmaceuticals trading partners in the former East bloc, which now demand hard currency.

Americares, a medical relief agency based in Stamford, Conn., delivered 1 million pounds of medicine last winter and said pains were taken to make sure it wasn't just unloaded at the state bureaucracy.

"That's asking for trouble," said Ty de Cordova, the agency's director of Soviet relief. "Anybody who didn't have anybody on site had no way of knowing where it went."

He said Americares delivered its materials directly to the republics, and made spot inventory checks at hospitals and orphanages, "but what I can't do is watch every pill being swallowed. I can't prevent a nurse from taking them home to her family."

AP Laserphoto

Two Soviet orphans receive a packet of rice and a box of medicine this week at a Moscow orphanage. While relief aid from the U.S. and Western European countries is pouring in, average Soviet poor pensioners complain they have received none of it.

De Cordova said relief groups learned from the 1988 earthquake in Armenia, when some aid meant for the region wound up at a Moscow flea market.

Last year, a truckload of meat from Finland was stopped in a Soviet border town, classified as "poisoned" and confiscated, Finnish media reported.

Private U.S. foundations flew 60 tons of food and medicine to Moscow this month and gave 25 percent to city police in return for help with distribution, said J. Reiff of Free Congress, one of the foundations. He said the effort was organized hastily and the police were enlisted to save time.

An official of a Western relief agency, who insisted on anonymity, said Soviet bureaucrats threatened last year to tie up medical shipments in red tape unless they could control the deliveries.

Kisselev said the vast majority of shipments get through, and insisted "diversions" in the Russian republic were few. De Cordova also gives the republics high marks.

Interviews with half a dozen elderly women who receive pensions revealed that only one got Western aid last year.

Maria Rodinova, 67, received a package from Germany filled with jam, meat, fruit, "even salt and sugar," and something very unusual: tea "in little bags."

"We enjoyed it very much," said Mrs. Rodinova, who is back to eating porridge and bread for dinner. "But it didn't last very long."

Scientists grow tomatoes that won't go rotten

N.Y. Times News Service

Government scientists think they have genetically altered tomatoes so they turn ripe only when people want them to, and then stay that way much longer without overripening.

The discovery, if it works as well as hoped, may also lead to other genetically altered fruit. They could include bananas that do not go brown, squishy and oversweet within a few days after they first ripen and turn yellow.

If marketers can manipulate ripening of fruit, varieties that have more flavor and better texture may displace those that are on supermarket shelves now mainly because they are so tough they can take the rough and tumble of mass marketing without bruising or splitting.

The study of genes that control ripening and its aftermath — plant senescence, or aging and rot — may even lead to flowers that stay fresh longer after cutting.

For many years, commercial tomato growers have picked their crops green, when chances of bruising or crushing are minimal, and then artificially ripened them by dosing them with the gas ethylene — the same gas that many fruits generate naturally when ripening.

However, such artificially ripened tomatoes also produced their own ethylene, and often turned soft and overripe within a few days, cutting the amount of time that markets had to get them sold, and that consumers had to get them eaten. Further, because they are picked green, today's mass market tomatoes often do not have their full, mature flavor.

In October's issue of the journal Science, researchers at the Plant Gene Expression Center, operated by the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Albany, Calif., in conjunction with the University of California at Berkeley, described a way to prevent tomatoes from making their own ethylene.

"You pick a normal tomato and you turn it on with ethylene so it ripens, then it will quickly rot. This one will last much longer," said Athanosios Theologis, the molecular biologist in whose laboratory the work was done.

Co-authors of the work include graduate student Paul Oehler, who did most of the work, plus Lu Min-Wong, Loverine Taylor and Deborah Pike.

The team has left fully developed tomatoes on the vine for as long as three months, with no spoilage. Treated with ethylene, the fruit turns red and ripe, and then stops ripening when the gas is no longer around it.

The fruit smell and look just like normal, ripe tomatoes. By regulation, the scientists are not supposed to eat their experimental fruits until they do more tests. However, sources at the lab said the tomatoes taste fine.

Animal rights activists go ape over love

NEW YORK (AP) — Animal rights activists are going ape over a plan to turn a monogamist into a swinging single. Timmy, a lowlands gorilla who's happily attached in Cleveland, is headed to the Big Apple to mate with four potential new friends.

While this sounds like good news for Timmy — at 33 years old and 500 pounds, he's not a real looker — some folks believe the change in surroundings will have the ape climbing the walls. Timmy is due at the Bronx Zoo next month to begin his simian sexcapades.

"It's time we started realizing animals do have family situations and emotional ties, that they are not simply objects or things," said Dr. Elliot Katz, head of the California-based rights group In Defense of Animals.

Timmy is one of only 301 lowlands gorillas in captivity in North America. But since his arrival at the Cleveland Metroparks Zoo in 1966, Timmy's had trouble finding a partner with real appeal — until he met 32-year-old Katy last year.

Before Katy, Timmy was "unable to maintain a close relationship, lived in an isolated, depressed state," said Katz. But when Timmy and Katy met, the fur really flew.

"They sleep in each other's arms, enjoy sexual relations. Timmy is outgoing, playful, and there's a joy to his life — something we'd call love," said Katz, who has spoken with zoo gorilla keepers.

'It's time we started realizing animals do have family situations and emotional ties, that they are not simply objects or things.'

— Dr. Elliot Katz

But their match is not completely perfect. Timmy's "fertility evaluation is excellent," said Peter Glankoff of the Bronx Zoo. Katy is sterile, said Sue Allen of the Cleveland Zoo.

Officials at the zoos came up with a solution: bring the single silverback male to meet four fertile new flames in the Bronx — Tanuka, 28; Pattycake, 19; Huerfanita, 18; and Julia, 11. This is not necessarily good for Timmy, Katz said.

"The zoos are just looking at it from the point of view of the gene pool, as opposed to what is good for the animal," said Katz. Allen disagrees, saying Katz is making the mistake of "attaching too many human qualities to a gorilla."

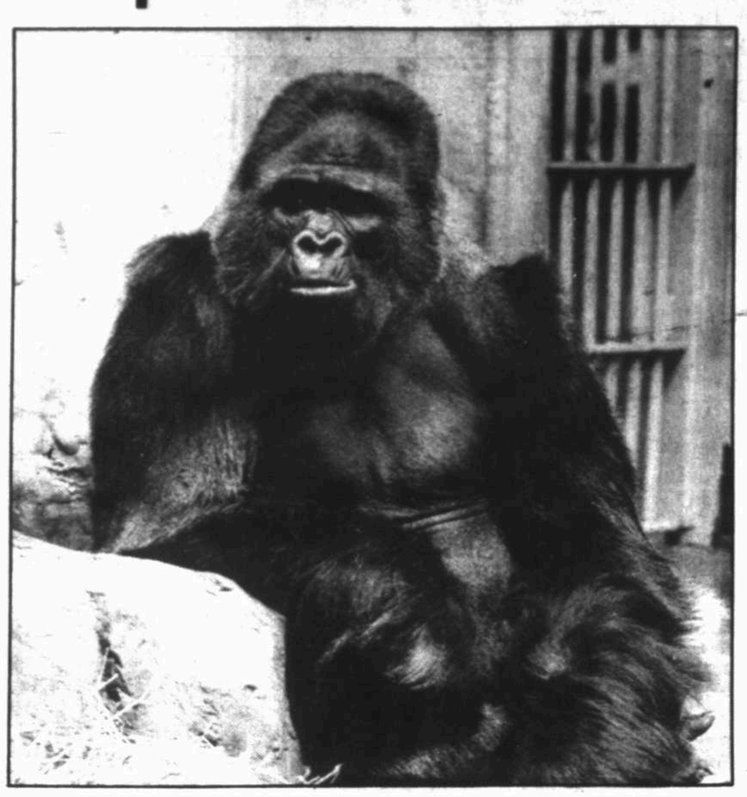

"This is an opportunity for Tim to pass on his legacy. His biological clock is ticking," said Allen. "Every day, every week that we wait is a day or a week he's not getting introduced to these females."

Zoo officials in Cleveland have heard mostly from the up in arms crew. A "keep Timmy" petition signed by 600 people and a steady flow of pro-Timmy phone calls came in after news of the move became public.

Homolak will meet next week with zoo officials to discuss Timmy's fate. Among the alternatives Homolak will suggest there: bring the gorilla girls to Cleveland, or let Katy come east with Timmy.

Wait a minute. Wouldn't Timmy be a bit — er, ummmm — inhibited with Katy coming along?

"My gut feeling is no," said Katz. "If he feels his oats, feels happier and more outgoing with Katy there, he would be in more of a .... well ... gregarious way to deal with the other females."

Drug drives woman to murder her grandmother

NEW YORK (NYT) — The only relative who never gave up on Tracey Bowe was her grandmother. In return, Tracey stole her grandmother's good silver, a radio, cameras, clothes, a silver chain, a diamond ring and a set of dishes.

She and her boyfriend lived rent-free with the grandmother in her Brooklyn apartment, where they smoked crack.

Last month, the police say, Tracey and her boyfriend took her grandmother's life, smothering her with a pillow as she slept, then slitting her wrists to make it look like a suicide.

The killing occurred after Mary Bowe threatened to press charges against her granddaughter for stealing a $2,400 retirement check.

The slaying devastated Tracey's hard-working, church-going family who had supported her efforts in a drug-treatment program where she earned a high-school diploma.

They still mourn the death of a family matriarch who quit high school to help raise her brother and sister after their father died, then went on to earn a certificate in restaurant management at New York City Community College when she was 54.

And they grieve over what has become of the child whose family struggled to provide her with dance classes, horseback riding lessons and trips to the theater.

Although Mary Bowe's killing stunned her family, experts who work with the elderly and addicts say it is an extreme example of a disturbingly common phenomenon — the victimization of the elderly by grown children or grandchildren who are addicted to drugs or alcohol.

When researchers first began studying abuse of the elderly in the early 1980s, they thought abusers were family members overwhelmed by the burdens of caring for aging relatives, said Prof. Karl Pillemer, a Cornell University gerontologist.

But Pillemer, who is studying programs to aid elderly people who have been abused in California, Hawaii, New York and Wisconsin, said new research had found that abusers are often addicted or mentally ill people who live with elderly relatives and are financially dependent on them.

He said studies had found that about 1 million people, 3 to 4 percent of the national population over 65, is abused.

In New York City, complaints of harassment, assault, robbery and other crimes lodged by elderly parents against their children soared to 4,432 in 1988 from 551 in 1984, according to the the Police Department's most recent statistics.

Detective Joe Ryan, the department's expert on family violence, said crack use was an important factorin the increase.

Judge Karen S. Burstein of Family Court in Brooklyn said that rarely a day goes by without addicts' relatives appearing in her courtroom, pleading for protection from threats and physical abuse.

Some addicts receive treatment and repair their family bonds. But others continue to take advantage of relatives because of their need for money to buy crack.

"Their life is focused down to that little piece of drug that they put in a pipe and smoke," Judge Burstein said. "It is an alienation from the family that has no parallel."

"What you see on the part of the family is a desperate weariness and despair," she said. "If someone asks 'What do I do?' I say, 'Honestly, you have to save yourself.'"

'Their life is focused down to that little piece of drug that they put in a pipe and smoke.'

— Judge Karen S. Burstein

The only person Mary Bowe ever tried to save was her granddaughter. She raised Tracey's son, Damon, and allowed Tracey and her boyfriend, Thomas Steed, to live with her.

They repaid her kindness with meanness, using her apartment in a drug-saturated housing project in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn as a crack pad, the family said.

Even so, her relatives said, Miss Bowe believed until the end that love would redeem her first grandchild — once a plain, well-mannered girl. She refused to listen when her family advised her to kick Tracey out.

"She always saw good and that's crazy," said Yvette Brown, Miss Bowe's daughter and Tracey's mother. "I always told her, 'You let Tracey in your house, everything will be gone.' If they give you hell, you've got to give them tough love. But Mary never listened concerning Tracey."

Neither Tracey, 24, nor her boyfriend, Steed, 21, responded to written requests for interviews. Both are being held without bail in city jails. They have been indicted on charges of second-degree murder and face up to 25 years to life in prison if convicted. The lawyer for each declined to comment.

Planet Hollywood opens to serious New York hype

Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — Let's talk concept. You've got your movie angle. You've got your stars — Arnold, Bruce, Sly. You've got your California thing — turkeyburgers, exotic salads. Most important, you've got The Buzz.

Welcome to Planet Hollywood, the restaurant-slash-event opening on Manhattan's trendy 57th Street tonight. Planet Hollywood: The movie, the restaurant, the T-shirt. We're talking mega. We're talking serious hype.

"Planet Hollywood will be a worldwide cultural phenomenon," declares publicity prepared by Bobby Zarem, public relations guru and investor in the aforementioned Event.

Keith Barish, the movie producer who dreamed up the Planet Hollywood concept, says: "We caught lightning in a jar."

After months of hype, the formal opening of Planet Hollywood features a big party for its Hollywood investors and any other celebrities that feel it's important To Be Seen there. Most likely, the tabloid photographers will be out in force. The Common Man will line the sidewalk nearby and gape in awe as the Stars come out.

So what gives?

Here in New York, where it takes a lot to get your average subway rider to look up from his tabloid headlines, we have a "major event" and a "worldwide cultural phenomenon"?

First, the facts. Planet Hollywood is a restaurant: 240 seats, 20,000 square feet, "classic California cuisine," a nice bar. Planet Hollywood is owned by Big Names: Barish, producer of "Sophie's Choice," "9 and 1/2 Weeks," and "Endless Love;" Robert Earl, Hard Rock Cafe president; and John Hughes, writer-director. Actors are major investors: Arnold "Terminator" Schwarzenegger, Bruce "Die Hard" Willis and Sylvester "Rambo/Rocky" Stallone.

Second, the Hype: Planet Hollywood — the name — is everywhere. Regis Philbin, a television talk-show host, holds up a Planet Hollywood sweatshirt in front of the camera and declares, "This is THE shirt of the 90s."

"Knots Landing" actress Michelle Phillips wears a "PH" robe in a New York Post gossip column picture. Arnold donates his Terminator motorcycle, the TV cameras roll. Esquire magazine puts down the hype, then runs a three-page color spread depicting the entire PH wardrobe. Ripoff Planet Hollywood hats sell on Fifth Avenue for $25, when the real things have yet to go on sale.

Barish asserts that the creators of Planet Hollywood didn't solicit the attention, that he didn't ask Regis Philbin to hold up the sweatshirt: "We didn't seek out the hype. The hype sought out us. When you have an exciting idea and an exciting partnership, people are interested."

Others aren't so sure, noting that Zarem made sure to send out Planet Hollywood wear to just about everybody who is anybody in the New York City gossip press. Zarem gushed to Esquire, for instance, that he had begged gossip columnist Suzy for a month to get the Michelle Phillips shot in the Post.

Third: the Comparison. Planet Hollywood is looking more and more like its cousin just down 57th Street, the Hard Rock Cafe. Invented by two Americans in London in 1982, Hard Rock expanded to cities around the world, from Orlando, Fla., to Reykjavik, Iceland. Its name is plastered on tee shirts and sweatshirts everywhere. Planet Hollywood is simply a movie version of Hard Rock's rock and roll restaurant theme.

Its inventors downplay the comparison. Earl, president of Hard Rock and the man who will run Planet Hollywood, says the only valid comparison is: "We decided to be as successful as Hard Rock."

MOONLIGHTING!
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.
OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:
Is it worthwhile for adults also?
Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
• ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
• MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
• COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
• SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.
How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!
How long does it take?
The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!
When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.
Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!
