The first load of 1966 wheat delivered in Wellington Wednesday, June 1, is being unloaded at Warrick Feed Store as Gary Judd, left, and Earl Keller examine the quality. Heber Brantley grew the wheat on his farm a mile north of Wellington and it averaged just under 20 bushels per acre.

Control Program Explained

Grasshopper Infestation at "Moderate Level" in Pastures

Grasshopper numbers have reached a moderate level in many Collingsworth County pastures, County Agent Sam Helmers said Monday, June 6. This means that counts made recently average 8 to 14 grasshoppers per square yard. "Areas to the west of us in Floyd, Briscoe and Armstrong Counties have reached an abundant count which is based on more than 28 grasshoppers per square yard," he said.

Below, Helmers explains the co-operative grasshopper control program proposed in these three counties.

Several questions have been asked in the county agent's office about the co-operative program for grasshopper control which is currently being initiated in the three counties mentioned above. This program is operated jointly by the State and Federal Departments of Agriculture, Extension Services and property owners or operators. Requirements for the program are:

1. The county must have sufficient infestation as indicated by the fall adult and egg survey to warrant control. Advance contracts will be made with local land owners to present the information as shown by these surveys and to determine their interest in participating in a co-operative control program.

County Pioneer, John E. Reynolds, Dies Sunday

John E. Reynolds, one of this area's earliest settlers and a resident of the Fresno and Dodson areas for three-quarters of a century, died in St. Joseph's Hospital at 7:05 p.m. Sunday, June 5. His death, attributed to a heart condition, followed an illness of only a few hours.

He was 83 years of age.

Mr. Reynolds was a retired farmer and only a few years ago moved from his farm near Dodson into Wellington.

Born at St. Jo on Aug. 20, 1882, he was the son of Elmina and John Taylor Reynolds.

Mr. Reynolds' mind was a treasury of memories of a pioneer Collingsworth County. The family reached Collingsworth County June 17, 1890 and settled two miles east of Fresno. He recalled, too, that the family "lived under the shade

Salt Control Projects May Affect Collingsworth County

Collingsworth County will be affected by two brine dams recommended by the Army Corps of Engineers to control the flow of salt waters into Red River, as shown by a report issued June 1.

These recommendations are one part of the survey report on the Arkansas Red River Basins in the interest of water quality control.

One of these dams is proposed on Dry Salt Creek, a tributary of Salt Creek, and would have a total storage capacity of 134,840 acre feet, at the spillway crest. The other is on Elm Creek a short distance east of the Oklahoma state line.

Salt Creek is unknown to most local residents, but it heads less than a mile south of Buck Creek at a point about 12 miles west of Wellington, then flows south into Childress County into Red River. Near the point of junction it flows through salt beds. Jonah Creek in Childress County also flows through these salt beds.

Counties are not indicated in the Corps of Engineers report, but the scale of miles on the accompanying map indicates this reservoir would be in Collingsworth or immediately south of it. The creek which residents of the area know as Dry Salt flows into Salt Creek just west of Swearingen.

The size of this proposed brine reservoir would be one-third larger than the proposed Salt Fork River reservoir.

The report says: "The brines would be collected from the source area by use

J. D. Wilson Resigns as Quail School Head

J. D. Wilson, superintendent of the Quail schools since February and re-elected for the 1966-67 year, has submitted his resignation to the school board according to Carl Wischkaemper, president.

Mr. Wilson underwent major surgery in Baylor Hospital at Dallas in May and he was moved to St. Joseph's Hospital in Wellington during the week end.

The Quail school board has not met to act on the resignation since it was received, said Mr. Wischkaemper.

The board is taking applications for superintendent of schools and also for high school coach to succeed Lee Churchwell, who told the board earlier he is not returning.

Mr. Wilson told the board in part:

"During the few months in which I have been with the Quail Independent School District I have become genuinely attached to the community, the teachers, the employees and the students. In my 42 years of teaching I do not believe that I have ever witnessed such generous co-operation and community devotion to a school district, and I count it a privilege to have ended my career in such a system.

"I hope that you will express my gratitude for their co-operation to the members of the board, the faculty and employees, and the student body. It is my sincere wish that the Quail Schools will continue to prosper and improve during the coming years."

120 Enrolled in Wellington Summer School

Approximately 120 boys and girls of the Wellington Independent School District are enrolled in summer school, in departments ranging from pre-school through high school and driver education.

Because of the larger than expected number enrolling for the remedial reading course, Mrs. Bernice Welch was transferred to teach that subject full time. Her students range from the first through the seventh grades and all classes are limited in numbers in order that the children may receive more individual attention. Thirty are enrolled.

E. W. Clement, high school principal, is teaching high school courses in government and American history, which were originally scheduled for Mrs. Welch. Fifteen have enrolled for these courses.

A called meeting of the Samnorwood Ex-Students has been called for Friday, June 10 at 8 p.m. to make final plans for the reunion to be held Saturday, July 2.

Plans were announced by Jimmy Bowen of the VFW. Both sessions will be held in the VFW Rodeo Arena beginning at 8 p.m.

Both boys and girls events are slated. For girls there are two divisions of barrel racing, one for those 9 through 13 years, and 14 to 17 years. There are also two divisions of pole bending, with the same age brackets.

For boys there will be calf riding for youngsters 9 through 13 years, steer riding for boys 14 through 17, breakaway calf roping for 9 to 14 years, tie down calf roping 15 to 17 years and open division calf roping for those 20 years and under.

First place trophies will be given in the finals for the best average in all events. Each night first, second and third place ribbons will be awarded. Bowen explained that accepting one of these prizes will not affect the Interscholastic League standing of any high school athlete, either boy or girl.

In the calf roping for young men 20 years of age and under, a belt buckle will be the prize, since it is believed that most if not all of these contestants will be out of high school.

Trophies will go to the best all around cowboy and best all around cowgirl at the end of the rodeo.

Practice ropings are held

Fabric Finishes Now Help Control Static Electricity

COLLEGE STATION, Newly developed fabric finishes are designed to control static electricity, moths, mildew and water and oil-borne stains, says Mrs. Jane Berry, Texas A & M University Extension housing and home furnishings specialist.

These new finishes do not alter color or texture, nor can they be seen with the naked eye.

The most economical, effective and durable finishes, however, are applied by the textile finisher, says Mrs. Berry. Spray-on finishes can be applied at home, but home applications usually are more costly, less thorough and less durable.

Gail Henard Weds Larry Oswalt in Formal Church Ceremony Saturday

Marriage vows were spoken by Miss Sandra Gail Henard and Larry LeRoy Oswalt Saturday, June 4 at six-thirty in the evening in First Methodist Church. The Rev. Ellis Todd, pastor, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Edward Henard. She is also the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Henard, a pioneer ranching family in this area, and of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Burkhalter.

Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Oswalt of Ruidoso, New Mexico, formerly of Wellington, are the parents of the bridegroom. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Ward, and the great grandson of Mrs. W. R. Ward, who was also present for the wedding.

Church decorations were an arch entwined with lemon leaves and white stock, and at each side were branched candelabras and beyond them arrangements of stock.

Miss Carol Blain, the organist, played the pre-nuptial concert and accompanied Miss Betty Jo Wolvoord of Amarillo as she sang.

Mr. Henard gave his daughter in marriage.

The bride wore a formal wedding gown of satin peau de soie. The bodice was accented with appliques of Alencon lace and seed pearls, which extended into the front panel of the semi-controlled skirt. The back skirt fullness fell into a chapel sweep.

Her headpiece was a peau de soie rose with pearl accents and held her bouffant fingertip veil. She carried a crescent bouquet of glamelias.

Mrs. Dan Langford of Canyon, cousin of the bride, was her matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Vicki Oswalt of Ruidoso, New Mexico, Miss Cindy Hightower of Houston, Miss Jan Cudd and Miss Donna Allred. The attendants wore all-white dresses designed with white lace bodices and crepe skirts. Their headpieces were white peau de soie roses with leaf accent.

The bridesmaids carried a garland of greenery and stock florets and all the attendants had bouquets of white carnations.

Harvey Purcella of Roswell, New Mexico was the best man, and groomsmen were Dan Henard, Kyle Lindsey, Terry Wade of Cleburne and Doug Ward of Pampa. Ushering were Jim Henard, Joe Henard, Johnny Henard and Elmer Keller of Lubbock.

Airport Improvements Will Be Step in Up-Dated Transportation

With the approach of the farm spraying season the importance of the upcoming modernization of Marian Airpark increases.

The city administration is studying plans for surfacing and lighting the runways, which must be done if Wellington is to keep pace . . . which becomes vital when industry and Salt Fork Dam become reality rather than prospects.

At present, Marian Airpark is home base for several ag spray planes, necessary in our way of farming today. It is also the base of operations for Morrow Flying School—and how many towns the size of Wellington have flying schools? Likewise, one of the few ambulance planes in all West Texas flies out of Marian Airpark.

Besides these the number of individuals using the facilities of the air park is surprisingly large.

When Airpark improvements are completed, Wellington and Collingsworth County will be in better shape transportation wise than in many years, with airport, highway, bus, motor freight and rail service all offered.

Farm Policy May Fail During Need

The nation may be getting a sample of what could happen under the government's new plan for keeping farm output in step with the demand for farm commodities.

As recently unfolded, the plan is to use land primarily as the nation's food "reserve," increasing acreage when demand rises, decreasing it when demand weakens. This has replaced the old system of leaving crop acreage at a high level and keeping the surplus production in storage as the nation's reserve.

The "what could happen" of this plan is that nature could fail to cooperate with it. Demand could rise, the government could increase acreage allowances and the farmers rush to the fields to plant.

Then it could fail to rain. Or plant diseases could take an unexpected toll. Or there could be a locust invasion or hailstorms or late freezes. Any one or a combination of these events could result in less than the needed production and, as a consequence, cancellation of export commitments or skyrocketing food prices at home.

Under the new system, wheat reserves have dwindled from an absurdly large 1.4 billion bushels in 1961 to 550 million bushels. This is less than many experts consider to be a prudent reserve against the possibility of severe drought or war emergency. It cannot safely be reduced to meet the current demand.

In the face of rising demand for wheat at home and abroad, the administration recently jumped acreage allotments 15 per cent for next year's crop. But nature was already pulling her first double-cross.

Drought and freeze damage have cut heavily into this year's crop in Kansas, Colorado, Oklahoma and Texas. Experts already have begun to doubt the nation's ability to fulfill its export commitments this year. With a shortage this year, the 15 per cent boost in next year's crop would be insufficient, even if nature decided to be on her good behavior.

The current problem is far from an emergency. But it should be a warning that the new plan of relying so heavily on unplanted acreage as the store of reserve needs modification. It could lead to some serious problems, indeed. A bird in the hand, as the old saying goes, is worth two in the bush.

Air Conditioner More Than Cooler

COLLEGE STATION, A room air conditioner is much more than a "room cooler."

If it is correctly chosen and functions properly, W. S. Allen, Extension agricultural engineer at Texas A&M University, says it does four things: cools, dehumidifies, cleans and circulates conditioned air in providing more comfortable surroundings.

In maximum cooling units, a fan draws in the warm, moist air through a filter removes dust and lint before it reaches the evaporator. The cold surfaces of the evaporator cools the air and removes the moisture by condensation, explains Allen. A thermostat maintains the desired temperature, and grills are used to direct the conditioned air so it will circulate efficiently without causing drafts. Such units, he adds, can also be set to ventilate and exhaust air from the room.

BABSON'S POINT OF VIEW:

DE GAULLE'S POLICY By Roger W. Babson

Twice in this century, France has been laid prostrate by German conquest. Both times—at tremendous cost in men and materials—the U.S. has been a mighty help in recapturing French soil from its despoilers and in restoring French sovereignty. Why then does President de Gaulle so distrust us? Why is he so intent upon pursuing what seems to be an anti-American campaign?

The Secession from NATO

In both World Wars I and II our efforts in behalf of France were veritable crusades, reflecting not only our horror of aggression but also our affection and gratitude for the oldest of our nation's allies. Without French help there might well have been no successful end to the American Revolution. So it is that President de Gaulle's decision to have France withdraw from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and to direct NATO officials to remove their military headquarters from French soil not only surprise us, but hurts us deeply.

President de Gaulle is an ardent nationalist, a complex personality, a man of mystery. On the surface, it would appear that in his disenchantment with NATO he is obsessed with the idea of breaking up the whole alliance. Certain it is that NATO's operations will be severely crippled if France persists in her withdrawal, and especially if she should forbid NATO flights over her territory.

The Pilgrimage to Moscow

While de Gaulle's government and the 14 other powers belonging to NATO are busy jockeying for position as the withdrawal of NATO forces from France is arranged and accomplished, President de Gaulle himself will go to Russia. What he expects to accomplish there is not yet clear.

Of course, France and Russia do have two things in common: (1) A mutual distrust of German power, and (2) a mutual interest in promoting Franco-Russian trade. Some observers claim that the de Gaulle visit to Moscow is in the nature of a pilgrimage, but many others find it hard to picture the French leader as a pilgrim seeking advice, or solace, or help. For all his isolationism, de Gaulle is not stupid. He knows very well that in the larger sense and for the longer term, there can be no broad Franco-Russian accord. But de Gaulle is a realist, too, and he will be probing for the chinks in the Russian armor and for whatever opportunities there may be to strike a short-term bargain that will at least have good propaganda value.

What Price Glory?

By and large, Americans view de Gaulle's upcoming withdrawal from NATO as stemming from the man's stubbornness. Here in the States, the popular portrayal of de Gaulle is of a leader preoccupied by his own importance and by the grandeur of France. The glory of his nation's past is said to be ever present for him. His ambition to restore that glory ought not to be scorned. Would that America had more patriots of such caliber!

No matter how you view it, de Gaulle's decision to get out of NATO and to force the military arm of NATO out of France is a failure for U.S. diplomatic policy. It marks the beginning of a split in the Western alliance that makes the Communist world rejoice

CROSSROADS REPORT

A top-flight Great Mind has suggested that all of our youths had ought to be drafted for national service, either in the military, the Peace Corps, picketing, or other public works.

Theory is that this would discharge their obligation to their country, but my quibbling neighbor says it wouldn't work out that way.

Says he got drafted for four years of fighting once, but that didn't fulfill his obligation to his country. The tax collectors still draft him for three or four months work every year.

My all-seeing-eye neighbor says the only trouble with Progress is that it obsolesces human skills so fast.

Like boys learning to be sure and that ought to make us uneasy.

America's Opportunity

The postwar establishment of NATO was a significant diplomatic achievement. It was the right move at the right time. Also, it was eminently right that the young NATO should be dominated by the powerful U.S., since most of its other members had been corely ravaged by the war.

But the years have passed, and Western Europe — aided in great measure by the security and the opportunity provided by NATO itself — has grown strong in manpower and in resources.

De Gaulle should not be criticized for having perceived the short-comings and the inequities of NATO in today's awakened and more sophisticated Western Europe. One day we may be glad he has now ruffled our feathers, for he has presented America with a challenge and an opportunity.

NATO needs a new thrust, a new dimension, a more realistic power structure. What a chance this crisis provides for President Johnson who is so well versed in the arts of persuasion and of compromise!

geons are hardly out of school before new techniques and problems in the field of cutting and charging are invented, so they have to get busy and splice out their learning.

For example, now that ladies' clothing is getting highly expensive, even our most skilled surgeons need to take a post-graduate course in pop art, so they can close their incisions with more displayable stitches.

News is that Welfare is paying the bill in some places to move families cross country to where there are jobs for them.

But when the Early American type of deprived citizen had to get out and hunt a job, the government didn't even furnish the axle grease for his covered wagon.

And my reminiscence neighbor says also back in that pre-Great Society era, when a town's street light burned out, Washington just ignored the problem, and the citizens had to make up money among themselves to buy a new bulb.

I see where it has now been officially decreed that from here on out the U.S. government is biased against racial and political injustice anywhere in the world.

My justful neighbor says of course now that we have got injustice whipped in the U.S.A. it's our bounden duty to drive it out of this world entirely.

Says we mustn't rest until justice is plentiful all over like it is here, where a citizen with an extra $1,000 a year to put in the Party kitty can even get himself a measure of over-justice.

More Cattle Now on Feed

Cattle and calves on feed for slaughter market on April 1 in 32 major feeding states, totaled 9,556,000, 13 percent more than a year earlier. Most of the increase from a year earlier was in cattle weighing between 700 and 1,099 pounds.

Number on feed decreased 3 percent from Jan. 1 to April 1 this year compared with 9 percent decrease during the same quarter last year.

Water Death Toll Stirs Safety Men

SAN ANGELO.—Advised that Texas ranks sixth among the states in drownings, game wardens grimly studied water safety routine at a Texas Parks and Wildlife Department seminar here.

Emphasis by instructors was on the fact that most drownings occur because simple safety rules are ignored.

With water recreation expanding, the wardens were told to caution sportsmen to check boating equipment and to make certain that their craft is equipped with an approved life preserver for each occupant.

Poison Control Centers Listed

Texas county agents have been supplied with a revised list of the poison control centers located in the state. The list was provided by the Texas Department of Health.

Poison control centers are designed to provide information, treatment and public health information. The services are available to local physicians who may not be acquainted with the proper treatment and antidotes for specific pesticides or other poisonous materials. Entomologists of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service emphasize the importance of keeping doctors informed on what pesticides or other chemicals are being used in an area. The time interval between onset of poison symptoms and initiation of treatment is often critical.

Miss Allen To Wed

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Allen of Canyon, formerly of Wellington, are announcing the approaching marriage of their daughter, Vicky Ann, to Hugh Lee Simmons of San Marcos, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Simmons of Dickinson.

The couple will be married at eight in the evening

Saturday, July 2 in the Hill Chapel on the campus of West Texas State University. Miss Allen, the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Starr, attended The University of Texas during the last year. Her fiancé is a graduate of the University of Houston.

Bridal Showers Add Lighthearted Touch to Wellington Social Scene

Almost every bride enjoys an elaborate wedding shower given by her friends or those of her mother or mother-in-law to be. Wellington's late spring brides are no exceptions.

Here are four showers given in the last week, one for a bride whose marriage was announced, the others for girls whose marriages were only a few days away.

Mrs. Chester McLain

Women of the First Christian Church were hostesses at a miscellaneous bridal shower honoring Mrs. Chester McLain, a winter bride whose marriage was announced recently.

She is the former Miss Linda Cobb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Cobb of Lubbock.

The shower honoring her was given in the Fellowship Hall of First Christian Church at seven thirty Monday evening, June 6.

Upon being received, the guests were presented to the honoree, Mrs. Chester McLain, her mother, Mrs. Cobb, and the mother of her husband, Mrs. Chester McLain.

The hostesses chose to receive a custom of many years, and during the evening the honoree opened her gifts and they were displayed to the guests. Later games were played.

A white damask cloth covered the serving table and the decorations were a crystal candelabra and an arrangement of spring flowers in shades of pink, orchid and white.

Guests were served by Mrs. Ovel Lovell, Mrs. Floyd O'Donnell and Mrs. Joe Bartlett.

Sammie Thompson

Miss Sammie Thompson, the fiancée of Kenneth Allen Davis of Dallas, was honored with a bridal shower in the home of Mrs. Hiram Cudd on Saturday, May 28.

Sharing hostess duties with her were Mrs. Louis Allred, Mrs. L. E. Ward, Mrs. Velman Warrick, Mrs. Vernon Peters, Mrs. Edd Henard, Mrs. Grant Wooldridge, Mrs. Dan Henard and Mrs. Donald Curry.

Electric Utility Mobile Display Comes Friday

WELLINGTON. — General Electric's "Volt-Liner", a new mobile display of electric utility distribution products, rolls into Wellington Friday, June 10 for a visit to the Greenbelt Electric Co-op.

The road show on wheels is being used to acquaint electric utilities with key products in G.E.'s line of distribution equipment. General Electric's local electric utility sales division office hosted the visit.

"Customer response to the Volt-Liner has been running high," reports J. O. Sweeney, general manager of G.E.'s Voltage Regulator Business Section, sponsor of the tour.

"The Volt-Liner enables us to bring significant products to the customer in a manner that could be duplicated only by a visit to our plant facilities in Pittsfield, Mass.," Sweeney said.

Completely self-contained, the Volt-Liner is an adaptation of a motor home. Its 35 feet of display area contains a number of products and animated exhibits which stress new benefits and features of the products.

Major display in the liner is G.E.'s new ML-32 voltage regulator, used by electric utilities to maintain steady and reliable power.

Other products displayed include a Seal-Pac distribution transformer, and an HR recloser used by utilities to protect distribution systems.

Supplementing the actual products are color transparencies of other product lines and a sound and screen unit which depicts the assurance of reliability of G.E.'s ML-32 voltage regulator.

Frank Fuson Jr. Receives Degree

Frank C. Fuson, Jr., received his bachelor's degree from Oklahoma University June 5, during the spring graduation ceremony.

With this, the former Wellington man enters a second career, for only a little more than two years ago he retired from the Air Force with the rank of lieutenant colonel after 22 years service.

He and his family then moved to Norman in order that he might finish his degree. Fuson now lives at 1042 Leslie Lane in Norman with his wife, Norma, and their two sons, Larry and Jeff.

During his career in the Air Force, he flew 35 combat missions over Germany and served in practically all parts of the world.

Before entering the Air Force in 1942, he completed two years of college work at Bethany Nazarene College at Bethany, Okla.

Upon receiving of the degree, he will be eligible for an Oklahoma teaching certificate in social studies.

Mr. Fuson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Fuson, Sr., who are long-time Collingsworth County residents and now live at 1211 West Avenue in Wellington.

R. T. Reeves Visits Friends

R. T. Reeves of Corpus Christi, manager of Cicero Smith Lumber Co., before he moved from Wellington in 1956, returned for a short visit with another former employee, Elvis White, last week.

Reeves is now vice president of a Corpus Christi-based life insurance company, which has branches in most of the states and in South America. He will visit South America later this year, White said.

After leaving Wellington, Reeves was with an insurance company in northern New Mexico before going to Corpus Christi.

Last week he and his family were visiting relatives in Amarillo.

SALT FORK SOIL CONSERVATION DISTRICT NEWS

POND FERTILIZATION Lynn Courtney

Fertilizing farm ponds is often necessary for maximum fish production. A highly fertile pond will support more pounds of fish than one of low fertility. Experiments in the Southeast show that fertile ponds support less than 100 pounds of fish per acre, average ponds support 150 pounds, highly fertile ponds support 400 pounds.

Fertile water sheds out submerged weeds. It is greenish opaque, because innumerable tiny plants are present. Light does not go any deeper into such water than you can see. Weeds cannot grow without light, although some people may object it is perfectly safe to swim in fertile water.

Fertilizing costs money—$10 to $30 per acre per year. It will pay you dividends only if you fish the pond heavily or if you need to control water weeds.

Fertilizing must be done systematically. Good results cannot be obtained by haphazard methods. Fertilizing, once begun, must be continued because the fish in the pond quickly put on weight when it is started. If fertilizing is stopped the amount of fish food is sharply reduced and the fish must lose weight to get down to the lower amount of food present.

If you plan to use fertilizer, you should apply it at 1 to 2-week intervals beginning early in the spring. Continue to apply it until the water becomes so cloudy that you cannot see the bottom in water that is 12 inches deep or you cannot detect a 50¢ piece in your hand at elbow depth. Additional applications should be made until frost whenever the water begins to clear.

Each application of fertilizer should consist of 100 to 200 pounds per surface acre. You need nitrogen and phosphorus in about equal parts with one-half to one-fourth as much potash. Desirable formulas are 8-8-2 or 8-8-4.

Check with any Soil Conservation Service personnel assisting the Salt Fork Soil And Water Conservation District for technical assistance in planning pond fertilization.

Deck's DIDACTICS

—By Deskins Wells

You have been reading about the heavy infestation of grasshoppers in Floyd, Briscoe and Armstrong counties which seemed to be a comfortable distance away with Hall and Donley forming a barrier. Tuesday Charles D. Jackson reported that the insects had invaded Wheeler County in potential plague numbers: but that is not the worst part of the news. The grasshoppers are here.

Seeing large full grown grasshoppers on the sidewalk in front of my house and more on the sidewalks on the square in Wellington, I ask-Sammy Helmers about the extent of the pestilence here. He said it is already bad and that individual land owners with crops near drying grass may be forced to take preventative action on their own initiative since they are too large to poison by aerial spraying. In another part of the paper is a story from the county agent giving more details about the threat of the hoppers. It is said to be the worst the area and perhaps the state has faced since 1953.

Millions of Americans were thrilled and awed as Astronauts Stafford and Cernans, after many difficulties and some portents that brought misgivings to the untrained listener and reader, succeeded in making the most accurate landing of any of the space flights attempted by the U.S. or any other nation for that matter. They landed only half a mile off target and only three and a half miles from the carrier Wasp—a heroic carrier in World War II and a legend name in the naval history of the United States for there have been many fighting ships which bore the proud name of Wasp.

It was my good fortune, from the standpoint of learning something about the Navy, to spend approximately four weeks aboard the Wasp as a guest of the Navy as a newspaper correspondent in 1952. This was the naval and military maneuver, simulating warfare held by members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization which is known to you as NATO. In the operation Mainbrace the Navies of many of the NATO nations took part.

Some years later, Louise, Henry and I visited aboard the Wasp while attending a convention of the National Newspaper Association when the carrier was based in San Diego. It seemed rather tame in California; but it was much more vital and living as seen on TV when the Astronauts were brought on board. The Wasp is of the Essex class of carriers, considerably smaller than those of the Coral Sea class such as the Roosevelt, etc., and even these are dwarfed in size by the Forrestal and the later giant carriers.

For the past twenty years or more the case for the carrier in the Navy has been that it was a floating airfield. It is a mobile airfield. It is not subject to the corrupt rules of politicians who could nullify the usefulness of our airfields or military installations in foreign lands by a simple decree. Some thinking has it that the carrier is obsolete in this day of guided rockets; but I notice that after Cerman had completed his gamut there in the infinite sweep of space that it was a carrier that was used to recover the astronauts from the sea. More significant such ships are being used off the coast of Viet Nam.

On this trip the fleet encountered a major storm near the Arctic circle. An officer told me to put up the safety guards on my bunk; but I neglected to do it. About 0200 hours a giant wave struck the side of the ship and I was thrown completely out of the bunk and found myself clinging to the pipes that ran along the ceiling. I put up the guards as soon as I could work my way back into the bunk. The storm was still raging the next morning and green water completely covered the escorting destroyers at times. The crew had only sandwiches, soup and coffee for two days. The Midway, a carrier of the same class as the Roosevelt and the Coral Sea, had her side caved in and had to turn from the course to avoid shipping too much water. It was an excit-

Horses Injure Two in Family

Two members of a north Collingsworth family are at home after suffering injuries from horses in separate accidents.
Gib Martindale, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Martindale, is home after being hospitalized in Amarillo about two weeks after being kicked in the face by a horse at the family home May 19.
He underwent surgery and latest reports are that his eyesight will be all right.
Gib's grandfather, Hugh Grogan, has returned from the McLean Hospital after being injured when he was thrown from a horse.
This accident occurred Monday, May 30.

Salt Control

of subsurface cut-off walls and collection conduits located downstream of the brine emission points. These collection systems would have attendant pumping facilities to pump the brines north to an evaporation reservoir located on Dry Salt Creek, a tributary of Salt Creek.

The brine dam on Elm Creek would not touch Collingsworth County, but control of salt from the Salton beds would make the waters of Elm usable in Lake Lugert, something that Oklahoma seeks.

This ties in with the proposed allocation of the waters of Elm Creek below Wolf Creek to Oklahoma by the Red River Compact.
The report says the proposed plan would utilize subsurface cut-off walls and collection conduits at the mouths of the three canyons, Salton, Robinson and Kiser Canyons, for collection of brine with attendant pumping facilities and pipelines for disposal into the Fish Creek brine reservoir. The concrete subsurface walls, extending about 7 feet from the streambed to bedrock, would stop brine flows in the alluvium. Brine entering a perforated conduit at the upstream side of the cut-off wall would flow by gravity to a sump on one side of the stream. From the sump, the brine would be pumped into an evaporation reservoir on Fish Creek about 5 miles downstream.
The project is known as the Red River Chloride Control Project.

The election was canvassed by members of the County Democratic Committee Tuesday, June 7 at 3 p.m. and at its conclusion County Chairman Paul Spillman said the county was the same as that announced on election night.
He expressed his pleasure with the work of the committee and of the election judges and clerks.
Mr. Thomas farms in the Lillie community and is president of the Chamber of Commerce.
Judge Bishop has had one of the longest tenures as county judge in Collingsworth history.
Seale farms in the Indian Creek community, just north of Salt Fork. Knoll, who farms at Nicholson, will end 18 years as commissioner of Precinct 2 when his term expires Dec. 31.
There were only four mutilated ballots in the entire election, Spillman said.

ing three days for a landlubber.

A. G. Tyler says the cattle went down Salt Fork into Oklahoma as predicted but that they got out in the middle of the river bed and walked on dry hot sand. Just wait, Mr. Tyler, it rained six inches in Turkey last night and that is not very far away.

Roy Horn must have had some trouble at his house early Tuesday morning. I saw him run into Ross O'Hair's plumbing shop and drag him out as if he were taking him to a fire and I am quite sure the Horn home was not on fire for I had driven by there only minutes earlier.

Beene Speaks at Rotary

Bill Beene, Wellington high school head football coach, spoke at Rotary on Tuesday, June 7, giving a rundown of plans for the next season and telling of his own background.
At the business meeting, Rotary submitted a check to John Coleman, Adjutant of Frank King Post of the American Legion, to help pay expenses of Collingsworth delegates to Boys State.
The club also discussed their project of completely restoring the piano used in the auditorium of Wellington high school. The project, due to start not later than July 1, is to be dedicated to the memory of the late Quinton Brewer, a Rotarian.
"We feel that if the people who use the piano would realize the tremendous expense of this project, they would take greater care of it in the future," said Elvis White, secretary.

of a tree until my father could haul material from Childress for a dugout—not a half dug-out, but a dugout.
They raised no crop that first year, but the next year, his father broke out land with a 9-inch turning plow and oxen and planted corn and a little grain.
Mr. Reynolds was perhaps the last man living here who helped break young oxen for farm work. He recalled some years ago that he did this for 50 cents a day—an 18-hour day. He never considered oxen hard to break.

He attended the country schools of the area, some almost forgotten, Fresno two terms, then Brewer School, located on the place where Mr. Reynolds lived many years. It was moved a mile and a half south to be nearer the center of the district and called Red Hill. He attended that school, too.

On Sept. 24, 1908, Mr. Reynolds was married to Miss Lessie Hamman in the home of "Preacher Thompson," near what is now Dodson.
Funeral services for Mr. Reynolds were conducted at the Kelso Chapel Tuesday at 2 p.m., with the Rev. A. B. Earnest officiating. Burial was in the North Wellington Cemetery under the direction of Kelso Funeral Home.
Pallbearers were Danny Ammons, Earl Jones, Bill Jones, Tommy Lewis, Garland Hightower and George Scott.
Mr. Reynolds is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lessie Reynolds of Wellington; a daughter and son, Mrs. W. S. Berry of Skellytown and Wayne Reynolds of Wellington.
Also surviving are a brother and sister, L. M. Reynolds of Plainview and Mrs. Mary Presnal of Gainesville, and there are two grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Wheat Harvest

These first loads were harvested from fields yielding around 20 bushels per acre.

Yields through the south part of the county and in all areas where harvesting is under way range from 10 to 30 bushels per acre, and buyers are estimating the county average will be between 16 and 20 bushels, one of the better yields of recent years.

The county will probably harvest around 14,000 acres of wheat, according to Millard Brown, manager of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Office.

Approximately 15,000 acres was available for harvest and the ASCS estimates that not more than 1,000 acres was abandoned.
Almost all of the 70 cars of wheat delivered during the first week of harvest is testing No. 1. Only a small amount is shriveled from the hot winds a few weeks ago—much less than had been expected.

In Wellington, wheat was selling for $1.63. The government loan is $1.25.

2. If sufficient interest is shown, a county committee must be organized by the Extension Service.

3. Early and adequate surveys will be made to determine areas needing control. These surveys will be made by the plant pesticide division of the Texas and United States Departments of Agriculture.

4. Nymphal infestation maps will be prepared, showing populations and areas where control may be required and copies furnished to the county agent for immediate release to individual landowners.

5. If, as a result of these surveys, it is determined by the county committee that there is sufficient interest in the development of a co-operative control program, the contracting agencies shall establish an office and landowner sign-up should begin.
