Tornadoes plow U.S. midsection

A tornado, photographed by a local resident, is seen hitting the southern portion of Hesston, Kan., before doing heavy damage to the downtown and residential areas of the south central Kansas town.

Associated Press Writer

Tornadoes in the nation's midsection tossed tractor-trailers around like toys and a record-breaking heat wave wilted plans for the annual cherry blossom festival in Washington. Heavy rain threatened flooding in the Midwest.

In Florida, a bishop asked God for rain to relieve the region's 19-month drought.

Near Columbia, Mo., a tornado damaged five businesses Wednesday night, blowing tractor-trailers "like matchsticks," said Richard Head. He said his auto dealership was damaged by an 18-wheeler dropped onto the roof.

Gideon denies he told stories as Smith slander trial continues

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

Former Midland Police Chief Wayne Gideon Wednesday denied ever telling stories that Gail Mabee Commagere had been beaten or hospitalized as a result of force used by her ex-husband.

Day two of the $4 million dollar slander trial found Gideon on the stand three hours Wednesday as he recounted the events that led up to November 6, 1982 — the day former Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith supposedly beat his wife.

The trial is being held in 238th District Court before retired Judge James Gregg of Granbury.

Gideon said he never told former Midland County Attorney Scott Henderson that Mrs. Commagere had been beaten to the point of needing hospitalization.

In earlier testimony, Mrs. Commagere said she had heard the wife-beating rumors as early as 1976. "We laughed about it at the time," according to Mrs. Commagere in a 1984 deposition.

At one point, Mrs. Commagere testified that she was contacted by a friend who heard the sheriff had "beaten her beyond recognition."

In deposition, Mrs. Commagere said she was unfamiliar with Smith's alleged violent behavior, with the exception of one incident involving a prisoner who supposedly was pistol-whipped after attempting to kick the sheriff in the Part of a well-rounded marketing campaign involves billboards that dot the skylines of Midland and other cities. Beer brewers alone spend hundreds of millions of dollars each year to get their message out. Some special interest groups want to see that stopped.

SOBERING IMAGE:

Beer's sales pitch grows less spirited

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

Since the early 1980s, a virtual revolution has occurred in society's attitudes toward the use of alcohol and tobacco.

In Part Two of our five-part series, we look at how the alcohol industry — especially in its advertising messages — has responded to changing social values.

Budweiser tells customers to "Know When To Say When."

It's no longer business as usual for the nation's alcoholic beverage industry, which spends hundreds of millions of dollars each year on advertising for what analysts call "new market share."

And it is a new — sometimes hostile — market that demands responsible messages and market practices.

As more Americans trade their appetite for alcohol for health clubs and healthier foods, companies such as Anheuser-Busch and Phillip Morris, the maker of Miller beer, wrangle for a bigger slice of a smaller pie.

Take for example Adolph Coors Co., the Golden, Colo., brewer and marketer of the widely known "Silver Bullet."

This year, the nation's No. 4 brewer will try to shore up volume growth through price cuts and perhaps even acquisitions. Both efforts have become an industrywide trend — one that's expected to continue as the pool of new customers dries up.

According to industry analysts, the competition is so stiff that most large brewers may have to restructure — a situation already facing three of the top six.

Supply and demand could lead to the demise of two of the largest — Detroit-based Stroh's as well as G. Heileman Brewing Co., the maker of Old Style and Lone Star brands.

Even the decline in sales of imported brands — down in 1989 for the first time in 20 years — shows just how competitive the situation has become.

And it isn't only beer. Sales of distilled spirits and wine are falling, partly because of cost, but more so due to changing attitudes toward drinking and driving.

"Americans are aging," laments Janet Flynn, a spokeswoman with the Distilled Spirits Council of the United States. "A lot of them are just drinking less out there."

And that's been a trend for the last 10 years, according to the council, which estimates U.S. per capita consumption at just 1.54 gallons annually.

"The bad news for us is consumption of liquor in Texas is down 20.8 percent over the last five years. In fact, it's falling faster than the MARQUETTE, Mich. — A Midland couple is angry that Michigan law doesn't allow police to charge a man in the death of their unborn grandchild.

R.J. Hill, 21, and his pregnant wife, Amy, 20, were injured in a Feb. 24 automobile accident in Marquette County and Mrs. Hill's 7-month-old fetus was born dead.

Willie Williams, 22, stationed at K.I. Sawyer Air Force Base, has been charged with drunken and felonious driving for allegedly causing the accident.

Bush calls to congratulate Williams on landslide win

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican gubernatorial nominee Clayton Williams' wake-up call Wednesday came from President Bush, who phoned the fellow Texan to congratulate him on his primary victory.

Williams said the president, a former Midland resident whose adopted hometown is Houston, told him the country is watching and talking about his race for governor.

"He said, 'Congratulations. You are the talk of political circles nationwide,' " Williams told supporters over breakfast at a Mexican food restaurant the morning after he won Tuesday's Republican primary with 61 percent of the vote.

Williams, a colorful oilman and rancher from Midland who has never before sought political office, said the call from Bush was a delight for him and his wife, Modesta.

"It sure made me feel good," Williams said with a chuckle. "Modesta just laid in bed and giggled."

■ Democrats still have decision to make — 1B
■ Attorney general vote to be canvassed — 3B

Bush reportedly promised to campaign for Williams between now and November, when he will face either state Treasurer Ann Richards or Attorney General Jim Mattox.

Ms. Richards and Mattox will face off in an April runoff for the Democratic nomination.

Bush wasn't the only prominent Texan that Williams said he'd spoken with.

"I just visited with Boone Pickens," Williams said. "He said, 'Claytie, you have the potential to be the best governor the state has ever seen because you have communication with the people. You have the power of the people.' "

City may pursue outstanding warrants

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Municipal Judge Robin Smith said Wednesday that police officers armed with fistfuls of outstanding traffic warrants may descend on thousands of Midlanders within the next month.

Pointing to a widening gap between warrants issued and warrants served, Smith has asked city of Midland officials to allow him to launch a legal assault on those with unpaid tickets.

The city has about 12,800 outstanding warrants which could be worth more $1.5 million if those receiving the tickets ever paid their fines, Smith said.

"I would say it's the highest we've ever seen," he said. "I think it's very important that we tackle this problem while it's still early. We have a lot of money on the table that we can gather."

Smith said off-duty police officers and another bailiff may be used for the crackdown.

The city has about 2,828 cases, worth about $489,900 in fines, in which people have either attended court but never paid their fines, are on a payment program or are being processed for a warrant.

About $372,400 of that is from 2,351 warrants on people who have attended court but never paid their fines.

The city has 40 cases, worth about $11,500 in fines, in which people have past-due citations but no warrants have been issued, he said.

Another $106,000 in fines are being paid by 437 people put on a payment program, Smith said.

In addition, there are about 10,500 warrants on people who never showed up for their court date, he said. Payment on those warrants could mean more than $1 million for the city, he said.

"Every one of those warrants adds up to be about $100 for the city," Smith said.

Earlier this week, Smith asked city of Midland officials to implement a three-point plan for the crackdown.

The first step would be to spread the word about the warrant roundup through the media and other sources, he said.

Second, off-duty officers would be used to serve the warrants, Smith said. "We want to hire as many officers as the council's budget can handle to take care of this backlog," he said.

The third point would be hiring an additional bailiff to maintain security when those arrested on the warrants appear before either

Cool but fair days likely

Staff Report

Fair skies and cool temperatures are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport, with the low reaching down into the lower 30s and winds from the northwest at 5-10 mph.

Friday will be much the same with the in the middle 60s and winds continuing from the northwest at 10-20 mph.

Wednesday's high of 55 was 34 degrees cooler than the record high of 89 set for that date in 1989. The overnight low of 30 was eight degrees warmer than the record low of 22 set for this date in 1962.

STATE

Weather forecasters say a cold front that moved into moist, unstable air from the Gulf of Mexico is what caused twisters, high winds and torrential rains in Central and East Texas.

On Wednesday, tornadoes flipped mobile homes and cars and tore roofs off buildings while winds exceeding 50 mph downed power lines and highway signs.

No injuries were reported from the series of tornadoes, which began south of Hillsboro when a department store roof was torn off shortly before 10 a.m.

Another tornado overturned a mobile home, uprooted trees and toppled power poles near Belton, briefly closing U.S. Highway 190, the Texas Department of Public Safety said.

Two miles east of Garrett, a garage was damaged and a vacant frame home moved off its foundation by strong winds possibly from a twister.

A tornado watch was issued by the National Severe Storms Forecast Center for 41 counties in the north and northeast portions of Texas until 5 p.m. Wednesday

Warnings were issued for Rains and Van Zandt counties in northeast Texas after storm spotters reported conditions favorable for funnel cloud formation. But sheriff's officers said no twisters touched down.

Flash flood warnings were posted for Dallas County and Henderson and Limestone counties, south of Dallas. More than 4 inches of rain fell at Lake Mexia, with 1.5 inches in one hour, and 2 to 3 inches in Henderson County.

The weather service also issued a flood warning for the Sulphur River and the Cypress Creek basins in northeast Texas.

NATION

Snow plagued the Plains states today and thunderstorms drenched the Midwest, while skies shone in the East.

A tornado touched down Wednesday night in Columbia, Mo., but there were no reports of serious damage or injuries. Thunderstorms kicked up gusts that damaged trees and shattered windows near Bentonville, Ark.

Snow also fell in Colorado and Idaho.

Rain and thunderstorms were spread over portions of California, Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Wednesday was another unseasonably warm day in the East, where many record high temperatures for the date were set. Among them: Allentown, Pa., 81; Atlantic City, N.J., 75; Baltimore, Md. 85; and Binghamton, N.Y, 78.

The high Wednesday for the Lower 48 states was 89 degrees in Charleston, W.Va.

man for the Boone County, Mo., Fire Protection District. "We've got debris all over the place." At least four tractor-trailers were blown about 100 feet across a road, he said.

A tornado or high winds also damaged several mobile homes in the area. No injuries were reported.

"I was scared. Really scared," said Santiago Munoz, whose trailer was damaged. "My wife, she said, 'God, God, God, God, God take care of us.'"

In Fordyce, Ark., about 40 miles southwest of Pine Bluff, five people were injured by a tornado Wednesday. Bill Setterman, chief sheriff's deputy, said three homes were destroyed and roofs and porches were ripped off other homes.

He said rescuers found one of the injured "wrapped up like a pretzel" in his home.

Two twisters in central Texas flipped mobile homes, tore off roofs and toppled utility poles Wednesday.

In Nebraska and Kansas, volunteers spent Wednesday clearing up debris from dozens of tornadoes that ripped through on Tuesday. In one town alone, Hesston, Kan., twisters killed two people and injured 23. About 1,000 people, including volunteers from the Mennonite Disaster Service, helped Hesston clean up.

"We feel as Christians this is one way of sharing God's love with people who are hurting," said Marvin Toews, a farmer who coordinated activities.

East of the Mississippi Valley, at least 31 cities reported record or record-tying high temperatures Wednesday, the third day of unseasonable warmth.

The records included 85 at Baltimore, 75 at Detroit, 76 at Indianapolis and 86 at Washington's National Airport. The high at Indianapolis erased a record on the books since 1875. Buffalo, N.Y., registered 78 degrees.

Cherry blossoms in the nation's capital will peak today and Friday because of the unseasonable warmth and will be gone by the April opening of the annual Cherry Blossom Festival, said National Park Service spokeswoman Marja Morris.

"They'll only last four or five days," she said.

Tulips, though, are about three weeks ahead of schedule and will flower in time for the cherry blossom festival, she said.

A cold front was expected to end the record-breaking warm weather tonight.

Fruit farmers in New Jersey fear the heat may have fooled their blueberries, peaches and nectarines into budding before freezing temperatures end.

Thunderstorms in the Midwest dumped heavy rain, which was compounded in Wisconsin by a dam burst on a pond leading to the Trempealeau River. But Arcadia, Wis., Police Chief Patrick Grzadzielewski said the river was receding.

WARRANTS: Those unpaid tickets may come back to haunt many Midlanders

(From 1A)

Smith or Municipal Judge Gordon Marcum.

The municipal court has been using only one bailiff since January 1989, when a second bailiff retired and the city cut the position.

"Right now we have to pull warrant officers off the street to do bailiff duties," Smith said.

He said that the additional staffing will pay for itself through increased revenues after the tickets are paid.

No timetable has been set for the crackdown, but Smith said he would like to see it finished before May, when the new county jail is scheduled to open.

"Once we move to the county jail, we have to pay the county for housing our prisoners," he said.

Smith said it also will be important to continue serving warrants in a timely manner, usually within 30 days.

"The quicker you can serve a warrant, the better you have a chance to catch the person," he said. "They're apartment hopping and we're chasing rabbits all over town."

Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said the crackdown will be nothing new to the city.

"It's something that is done every three or four years to encourage people to come in and clear up their warrants," McGregor said. "The warrants need to be disposed of. It's not intended to be done to generate revenue."

However, McGregor said the court may have to work with existing staffing until the new budget is formed later this year.

"I don't think it will be something done in the next month or two," he said.

Councilman J.D. Faircloth said City Council is supports the crackdown. He urged those with past-due tickets to pay their fines immediately.

"I think the council will do whatever is necessary in the way of manpower," Faircloth said. "Those warrants represent money we need to collect. It's a fairly sizable amount, and it's growing."

Smith said the understaffed court has been unable to serve an increasing number of warrants issued, although the number of cleared warrants also is rising.

Court revenues are also up from 1987, going from $915,000 that year to $765,000 in 1988 to $1 million in 1989, Smith said. The revenues are mainly from ticket payments, he said.

"We still can't keep up with all the warrants," Smith said. "It's just a matter of manpower versus the amount of work."

One reason the number of warrants has increased is because police are issuing more traffic citations, city records show.

The number of tickets gradually dropped from 38,246 during the 1984-85 fiscal year to 19,568 in 1987-88. Since then, ticket issuance has been on the rise again, hitting 29,553 during the 1988-89 fiscal year.

The number of tickets took a slight dip in the fourth quarter of 1989 — after voters turned down a election bid in November for a 10 percent salary hike.

The number of tickets dropped from 8,197 in the third quarter of 1989 to 5,291 in the fourth.

Czech said officers may have been slightly depressed over the loss, causing them to write fewer tickets.

But Smith estimated that 7,790 citations will have been issued when the first quarter of 1990 ends this month. Tickets for the the first quarter of the 1989 calendar year numbered 6,308.

Czech said, "Lately I've been emphasizing a little more enforcement." He said officers have been asked to be more watchful for motorists who exhibit the types of driving habits which lead to accidents.

However, Mrs. Commagere recalled rumors that the sheriff had beaten up girlfriends after they were seperated. "But I can't recall him trying to intimidate anyone while we were married," she said.

Gideon is accused of spreading the wife beating rumors that supposedly led to the downfall of Smith, who was defeated by Sheriff Gary Painter in the 1984 Republican primary.

In deposition, Mrs. Commagere admitted that Smith dragged her into the house and pinned her by the throat. And that he slammed her hand in the front door. But she recalled no other acts of violence, either at that time, or at any other time.

Gideon, who received a phone call from Mrs. Commagere shortly after the couple's argument, said he described the incident as a "shoving match" to former Midland County Attorney Scott Henderson.

Gideon denied ever telling anyone that Smith had put his ex-wife in the hospital or that he caused his wife to have a miscarriage.

"I take it then that you're saying the four men who testified here yesterday are liars?" asked Smith's attorney, Tom Sims.

Replied Gideon: "They certainly are mistaken as far as I'm concerned."

Smith was referring to earlier testimony by Henderson, former KOSA-TV reporter Conrad Coleman, former Midland detective J.D. Luckie and Vince Conklin, a former Midland police officer.

Gideon called Coleman an "agitator," who was close friends with Smith and who wouldn't "hesitate to create friction" between the two departments. Gideon admitted he didn't care for Coleman, and cared less for Smith.

Smith and Gideon's running feud escalated shortly after the sheriff's divorce, according to various testimony, including that of the former police chief.

According to Gideon, Smith and his deputies interfered in numerous investigations that heightened tensions between the two men.

One investigation involved a police officer who allegedly forced a couple to perform sexual acts in front of him. The officer, who was later fired, became the target of a Smith investigation.

"We were perfectly capable of resolving our own internal problems," said Gideon, who felt Smith meddled in police department business at every turn. "I was never so frustrated in all my life," he testified.

He said when Smith wasn't interfering in police business, he caused other havoc, such as refusing city prisoners at the county jail or belittling other officers at his department.

According to former Midland City Councilman Tom Sloan, Smith believed that Gideon had "cost him his family."

During one particular incident, Sloan testified that Smith told him it was time to get rid of the police chief. "He was pretty mad and white as your shirt," Sloan replied on questioning.

Sloan, who recalled the Nov. 6 incident involving Smith and his wife, said Gideon never mentioned anything to him about Mrs. Commagere needing hospitalization or that she had a miscarriage.

"I heard she went to the hospital, but that was later on," said Sloan about the rumors that were being spread around town.

Sloan said the bickering between the two departments got to the point where the situation "couldn't get any worse, it just kind of leveled off."

"Some of the problems that went on between them were just juvenile sometimes," Sloan testified. "He (Gideon) would come to me with problems he was having with him (Smith). It got to be pretty petty after awhile."

Sloan said while he never heard from Gideon about Smith's reported beatings of his wife, but he added "there was no doubt that everyone in town was talking about it."

ANGER: Michigan law decried

(From 1A)

Pipeco in Midland, and the father of Mrs. Hill, said he was outraged when he heard that the driver wouldn't be charged in the death of his daughter's unborn child.

"I think it's wrong," Cox told the Reporter-Telegram today. "I expressed very strongly how I felt about it with the Marquette Police Department and the newspaper there."

The two were returning home when they were hit head-on by the other vehicle, according to police.

Cox's daugther almost didn't make it. The accident left her with a collapsed lung, a damaged liver and a ruptured diaphragm. Her spleen, which was also damaged, was removed. Her husband suffered a broken leg.

"If they (Michigan lawmakers) had to go to the morgue (to see the fetus) like me, they'd feel differently," said Cox. "I think there should be a stricter penalty."

Cox said he understands giving DWI offenders a warning on first offense, but said on any recurring offense they should be given a six-month mandatory jail sentence, stiffened each time after.

"If they got stronger (on DWI) maybe people would think twice about drinking and getting behind the wheel," he said.

Michigan's Supreme Court overruled a 1980 lower court case by ruling that a driver accused of causing the death of a 9-month-old fetus was not guilty of homicide because the child hadn't been born.

Texas law also would not allow criminal prosecution in such a case, according to assistant district attorney Ralph Petty.

To prove manslaughter, the prosecutor must show that the death of an individual was caused by another. The state penal code defines an individual as "a human being who has been born and is alive."

Investigation reveals child labor law violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole said today a special three-day investigation focusing on service industries has found many violations of child labor laws.

Dole

She declined to give specifics in advance of a news conference later today, but said on NBC's "Today" that "a number of violations" were uncovered by 500 inspectors conducting "thousands of investigations in every state across the nation."

"The idea (of the recent initiative) is to indicate to ... everyone across the country that the cop is on the beat and we are not going to permit abuse of our children whether it's because of greed or whether it's because of ignorance of the law," Mrs. Dole said.

Educating businesses is another element, she said, adding that "we believe that most will certainly adhere to the law if they understand what the laws and regulations are."

Part of the problem, she said, is the slowest rate of growth in the labor force in 40 years.

"We expect that through the end of the century that (growth rate) is going to decrease about 8 percent, or by 2 million, in the age category 16 to 24 so in some cases employers are reaching into prohibited areas to get workers because of that slow growth," she said.

Mrs. Dole said last month she wanted to stiffen penalties for child labor violations and planned to increase the department's enforcement.

"What we have done already is to try to maximize our fine structure and we have increased it to the point that the range will be an increase of anywhere from 60 to 300 percent," she said today. "Now we're looking at regulatory changes which would enable us to fine not only up to $1,000 per violation, but per work week."

She declined to say whether the administration would support tougher child labor legislation pending in Congress, saying the matter is under review.

The 500 officers visited a variety of industries but concentrated on where they believe violations are most prevalent — places such as restaurants, laundries, nursing homes, supermarkets and small grocery stores.

Federal law forbids 14-year-olds and 15-year-olds from working more than three hours on a school day or 18 hours during the five-day school week. Eight hours is permitted on weekend days and 40-hour weeks are permitted in summer and during vacations.

Those youngsters may not work outside the hours of 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., or 9 p.m. from June 1 to Labor Day.

Violators may be subject to civil fines.

Ex-CIA counsel faces Iran-Contra prosecutor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The former chief CIA lawyer faces questions from Iran-Contra prosecutors about a politically embarrassing document he drafted that then-national security adviser John Poindexter ultimately destroyed.

Stanley Sporkin, now a U.S. district judge serving in the same courthouse where Poindexter is on trial, was taking the witness stand today to testify about the controversy surrounding a November 1985 shipment of Hawk anti-aircraft missiles to Iran.

The CIA-assisted shipment was carried out without a presidential document to authorize it and the legal staff working for Sporkin, then the spy agency's general counsel, was called in to write one.

The hurriedly drafted document, known as a "finding," depicted the U.S. government as being involved in a straight arms-for-hostages deal with Iran. Poindexter presented it to President Reagan for his signature two weeks after the missiles were sent to Iran.

Poindexter tore up the finding a year later when the administration's Iran initiative was exposed. He destroyed the paper the same day he told the House and Senate intelligence committees that he hadn't known about the Hawk shipment until five weeks after it occurred.

The prosecution contends that Poindexter's knowledge that the finding existed was his motive in concealing the U.S. role in the Hawk shipment from Congress.

Oliver North and his former secretary, Fawn Hall, testified Wednesday at Poindexter's trial. It was North's fourth and final day on the stand.

North, Poindexter's former aide on the National Security Council staff, underwent a blistering round of questioning by prosecutor Dan Webb, who focused on North's lies to congressmen at a meeting which Poindexter had ordered North to attend.

Poindexter is accused of conspiring with North to alter, destroy and remove documents in November 1986 after the Iran initiative and Contra assistance became exposed.

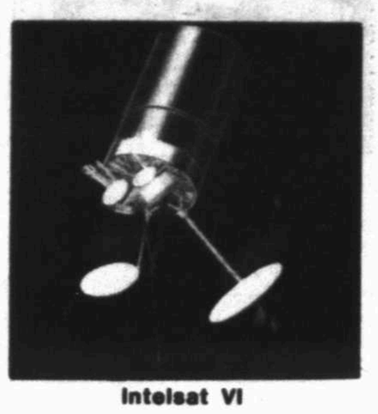
$150 million Intelsat VI may go down in flames

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — An uninsured $150 million communications satellite whirled uselessly around the Earth in a dangerously low orbit today as its owners raced to diagnose the problem and devise a way of saving it before it burns up.

The Intelsat VI satellite was propelled into space Wednesday in the fourth commercial launch of a payload by a U.S. company but wound up in the wrong orbit after failing to separate properly from the giant Titan 3 booster rocket.

Intelsat was considering various options to save its satellite, including a space shuttle recovery, Intelsat spokeswoman Martha DiSario said. She declined to elaborate on what other options were available before the satellite burns up in about 12 days.

"What kind of decision may be made would be pure speculation at this time," Intelsat spokeswoman Sigrid Badinelli said today. "It won't be going into geosynchronous orbit from where it is now, but we just have made no decision as far as I know as to what the prognosis is."



Intelsat VI

Ms. Badinelli said Intelsat was receiving some signals from the satellite, but she was not sure whether the spacecraft was functioning properly.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman Dick Young said a shuttle rescue attempt would be unlikely in the near future.

Early data indicated the satellite could last 12 days before crashing through the atmosphere, said Army Maj. Thomas Niemann of the U.S. Space Command near Colorado Springs, Colo.

DRINK: Alcohol use drying up

national average," said Flynn.

That agrees with a recent report by Jobson Beverage Alcohol Group, which found a 2 percent drop in 1989 spirit sales, to 141 million cases from a peak of 166 million cases in 1979.

According to Jobson, the nation's per capita consumption worked out to 0.8 cases per adult in 1989, down from 1.1 cases a decade earlier — the lowest level since 1965.

So why the change?

What Flynn and other industry officials are seeing is a new awareness of the drunken driving issue, as well as an American penchant for physical fitness and health.

"The best way I have of measuring it is no one's joking about drinking and driving anymore," remarked Karen Thorell, state administrator for MADD-Texas, a group currently pushing for tougher measures on the state's open container act.

Today the message is simple — if you drink, don't drive.

It is a message Mothers Against Drunk Driving and other groups such as the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism would rather hear than "Go Spuds Go."

They think the days are over for television advertisements that link beer and wine coolers with good times.

Beer and wine companies are the only ones permitted to advertise on TV. The liquor industry, according to Flynn, voluntarily limits marketing efforts to billboards and print.

"We already choose not to use the most powerful media," said Flynn. "After Prohibition, we were just glad to be back in the business."

Prohibition, which outlawed the sale of alcoholic beverages in the U.S. under the 18th Amendment, lasted from 1919 to 1933.

Alcohol proponents claim the industry is getting a bad rap, despite its intensive efforts to educate the general public about responsible drinking.

Jeff Becker, vice president of The Beer Institute, a Washington, D.C.-based trade organization, said the industry is doing more to educate drinkers.

"That's part of our solution to the alcohol problem," said Becker. "Like everything else, if used responsibly, alcoholic beverages aren't as deadly as (illicit) drugs. Public interest groups are going around saying the problem is getting worse, but the fact is all indicators point to consumption going down."

"Just how these groups will influence legislators is difficult to read at this time," said Becker. "But having taken that tack, they now realize that even they are at an impasse on how to deal with the problem."

Concurring with that was Rob Cook, director of Beer Drinkers of America, a three-year-old grassroots campaign aimed at educating drinkers and protecting their rights.

Cook and other industry officials openly object to proposed legislation aimed at increasing the federal excise tax on beer by 300 percent.

"I call it a regressive tax," said Cook. "You're talking about taking the biggest bite out of the people who can least afford it. ... These people are already paying their fair share (in taxes) and then some."

The distilling industry knows that better than most. According to Flynn, in 1985 alone, the excise tax was bumped up 19 percent, accounting for 50 percent of the product cost.

"Our philosophy has been to educate new generations about alcohol, especially among that group that chooses to drink."

Flynn said the Distilled Spirits Council already is working with anti-drunken driving advocates on campaigns as well as advocating more research into the problem of alcohol abuse.

"We think we're part of the solution, not part of the problem."

Agreeing with that was Nancy Olenick; national education director for Beer Drinkers of America (BDA).

"There's a heightened awareness out there, and that's good. Alcohol in itself isn't bad, it's just when it's abused."

Recently, BDA embarked on a nationwide "Party Smart" campaign aimed at adults, encouraging responsible handling of alcohol and promoting designated drivers.

According to Olenick, the U.S. Jaycees have already adopted the "Party Smart," idea. BDA also works with a number of college campuses and law enforcement.

"We believe education is the best way to handle the problem," she said. "We discourage underage drinking, but at the same time, we feel we have an obligation to talk with college students as well," said Olenick.

Even brewing giant Anheuser-Busch has gotten into the act.

According to the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA), the beermaker agreed to limit its advertising to "Know When To Say When" commercials during the NCAA Final Four basketball telecast scheduled for later this month.

The popular tournament, which draws millions of viewers, also forced the NCAA to limit advertising to no more than 60 seconds per hour beginning next year.

FRIDAY: Firms increasingly are developing strategies to curb employees' smoking and drinking as health care costs go through the roof.

To fight anti-alcohol sentiment, Anheuser-Busch and Phillip Morris are reshuffling their dollars, pumping them into other marketing efforts and new products.

Last month, PM reintroduced "Sharp's" to its Miller line-upwhile Anheuser-Busch added "O'Doul's" — both non-alcoholic brews.

Anheuser-Busch group manager Bob Merz said the time was right for O'Doul's, since more adults are searching for healthy alternatives to beer.

"Most restaurants depend on the sale of alcohol. They push it as a policy. We don't. In my opinion, there's a difference between an alcohol user and an alcohol abuser."

Tobacco industry strikes back against reformist pressures

By Chris Van Wagenen

"Smoking by pregnant women may result in fetal injury, premature birth and low birth weight."

"Smoking causes lung cancer, heart disease, emphysema and may complicate pregnancy."

To smoke or not also is an individual decision — one tobacco makers believe should be made by an individual, not a government.

But there they were at it again on Capitol Hill in February as Health and Human Services Secretary Dr. Louis Sullivan fired off shots at the tobacco industry over smoking's deadly toll on society.

The relationship between health and smoking is not something cigarette makers debate. What they object to are threats of censorship and government meddling in their marketing strategies.

Tobacco companies do understand that to survive they must diversify.

Take, for example, Phillip Morris, listed as one of the 10 most admired companies in America by Forbes' magazine.

As the nation's 10th largest corporation, PM decided it was time to spread its wings. With a bank balance fattened by tobacco profits, PM began acquiring companies such as General Foods, Miller Brewing and Seven-Up.

But the real gem was secured two years ago, when management pulled a $12.9 billion hostile takeover of Kraft Foods.

While a single brand — Marlboro — still pulls in better than 50 percent of its profits, Phillip Morris is trying to gain respect, fully realizing smoking is a dead-end game.

RJR-Nabisco hasn't been as fortunate.

Since its record-setting $22 billion leveraged buyout by Kohlberg Kravis Roberts two years ago, RJR has fallen on lean times, finding itself in hock to banks and bondholders.

This might explain why cigarette makers are largely dependent on their own habit. These days RJR and Phillip Morris — which control 70 percent of the entire tobacco market — have found it necessary to battle for survival in a system where shareholders ask: "What have you done for me lately?"

Enter the tobacco argument.

And fighting, they claim, for the rights of people who do choose to smoke.

Never mind that tobacco kills an average of 45 people an hour. Or that 90 percent who start smoking do so by age 18, according to the American Cancer Society.

Tobacco is a business — a legal business that operates on the principle of earning a profit to satisfy shareholders.

To remain that way, the industry uses a number of marketing tactics, from advertising to new products aimed at specific markets.

Therein lies the debate: do tobacco makers have the same right as other legitimate businesses to use marketing?

Dawson, who testified before the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, denied claims that cigarette makers are targeting women or young children.

In a recent "Larry King Show" interview, Dawson said tobacco makers are trying to increase brand loyalty or change it. "The cigarette market is a stable, mature market."

Stable? Maybe. But mature? Opponents disagree on whether the market has stopped growing.

They claim companies like RJR purposely are going after target markets, primarily minorities.

Earlier this year, RJR dropped plans to sell "Uptown," after a test scheme aimed at Philadelphia blacks was leaked to the press.

That might have been the end of it, but a month later RJR announced plans to test market "Dakota," a smoke, the company said, aimed at its chief competitor, Marlboro.

Anti-smoking advocates went through the roof.

Dr. Allen Blum, who heads the Houston-based advocacy group Doctors Ought To Care, was sickened by the news.

"Cigarette makers don't deserve polite terms. They deserve the most vilifying language. They say they don't target advertise. ... They target everyone. All they're doing is keeping people down."

While tobacco makers won't openly admit using it, target marketing is a common tool among consumer manufacturers.

"Obviously as the percentage of smokers has declined, it has become much more fashionable to be militant against smoking."

Merryman said the 101st Congress is already looking at 68 House-sponsored bills and another 42 Senate bills aimed at either restricting tobacco advertising or tacking on new excise taxes.

"In terms of public policy, our response is to get out in front to oppose any legislation designed to make it tough for our member companies to do business," he said.

Restaurants sandwiched in controversy

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

Midlanders who drink and smoke and those who don't have joined the debate.

Just ask the food and beverage industry.

"It has certainly complicated the lives of (restaurant) owners," observed Richie Jackson, executive vice president for the Austin-based Texas Restaurant Association.

For restaurant owners, it's a compromise.

"They're really two different subjects," said Jeff Sharifi, owner of Cafe West, whose restaurant limits smoking patrons to one small section. "I personally don't think smoking's a good habit, but we respect them the same way and we treat them the same way as our non-smokers."

Since entering the business 11 years ago, he said, Midlanders' smoking and drinking habits have changed.

Even the bar is separated from the main restaurant to purposely discourage heavy drinking.

"Most restaurants depend on the sale of alcohol. They push it as a policy," he said. "We don't. In my opinion, there's a difference between an alcohol user and an alcohol abuser."

Mike McMahan, owner of the Wall Street Bar & Grill, agreed.

"It's a moral dilemma. What if the guy is right on the edge? What if he leaves here and kills someone? We understand that. A few years ago a person would have gotten irate if we cut him off. Now they're not. Everyone understands the situation a little better."

"Everyone" includes the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission (TABC), which licenses 45,000 retail locations in the Lone Star State.

"I believe it's getting better out there. There's a different attitude about drinking. ... People aren't setting out to get drunk," observed Billy Flynn, district supervisor for TABC's West Texas Region.

More restaurants and bars are implementing training programs aimed at spotting customers who may be overindulging.

"Ideally, you hope everyone serving alcohol has had training. If they don't, you certainly hope they know what they're doing," said Flynn.

For example, all 7-Eleven store employees — both part time and full time — receive alcohol-server training.

McMahan's employees are trained, too, although he thinks it's gotten a little out of hand. He cited special interest groups that two weeks ago pushed the TABC to have owners and their employees count the number of drinks they serve to each patron.

"I think they've gone too far when they ask us to keep track of every drink that's sold during a night," he said.

However, that proposal, one of three made by Texans for Responsible Alcohol Consumption, recently was voted down.

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, the fatality rate per 100 million miles traveled dropped from a high of 3.3 deaths to 2.2 last year.

Federal officials attribute the decrease to the nationwide war on drunken driving. In 1980, drunken driving deaths numbered 28,000 versus 23,500 in 1988 — a 17 percent drop.

And those statistics have caught the eyes of drinkers as well as people like Bill Bergman and David Harrison, owners of The Bar in Midland.

"I've noticed a lot of our customers have switched from liquor to beer," said Harrison. "That's evident by our sales."

Bergman believes his employees are quite concious about the number of drinks they pour each day.

"We've got a pretty focused crowd here ... a lot of professionals. That kind of lessens our risk, but on the other hand, we are a bar more than a restaurant."

The liability factor has made bar owners more likely to discourage heavy drinking, say those interviewed for this series.

"The fact of the matter is most people aren't drinking as much as they used to," said Fred Phillips, Western Regional Manager for Taco Villa and president of the Permian Basin chapter of the Texas Restaurant Association (TRA).

Locally, the TRA sponsors four alcohol training seminars a year for members and non-members. "If an employee has been through our program they should be able to spot someone" approaching intoxication, he said.

Still, notes TRA's Jackson, the first line of defense is individual responsibility. "When that doesn't work, the industry steps in."

What he and other owners are seeing is a move toward non-alcoholic beer and wines as well as frozen mocktails, containing no alcohol.

"One thing you're seeing in this industry is a lot more awareness and focus on this issue," he said.

There's also more focus on smoking.

"Five years ago, you might have found 75 percent (of the customers) smoking. Now that's flipped around," said Jackson. "I don't think it's anywhere near the problem it once was. For one thing, smokers are now more accommodating to non-smokers."

At Taco Villa, Phillips said, the restaurant chain's decision to create non-smoking sections was part of a growing response to changing attitudes.

"Personally, I'm glad to see it," he said. "I think restaurants have made the change with ease."

Still, not every restaurant has.

Wall Street's McMahan said, as a businessman, he has to cater to both types of customers.

"We try to place them at tables where they won't be bothered."

Nor does The Bar have a set policy. "At lunch there's just not that much smoking going on," said Harrison.

Bergman agreed with that.

"Obviously it's been a problem for a lot of establishments, but we're a bar. ... People expect it."

"Like drinking, smoking is going down. All your surveys show it," said Harrison.

Admen fume over possible ban

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

Whether it's beer or a new cigarette brand, Texas and the Permian Basin long have been test markets — barometers that the rest of the country follow.

"Texas is a beer-drinking state. They know it. They test market here," observed Dr. Gary Wilcox, an expert on alcohol and cigarette advertising at the University of Texas at Austin.

This year, brewers will spend more than $800 million nationally pitching their products, while tobacco interests will fork out about $2.6 billion doing the same, according to analysts.

Advertising and marketing comprise a big business — one that touches the very core of the alcohol and tobacco industry.

Dr. Joseph Wolpmann recognizes this.

Wolpmann, medical director at Midland's Clearview Hospital, said alcohol is West Texas' No. 1 problem.

"Consumption is so high in this area that Midland and Odessa are recognized as good test markets for these companies," said Wolpmann, who is disturbed by the trend.

In the case of beer brewers, Wolpmann claims Miller Brewing Co. alone spends more money promoting its "Lite" product line than the total combined budgets of all alcohol treatment programs in Texas.

Dr. Allen Blum, head of Doctors Ought To Care, a 5,000-member advocacy group opposing the tobacco and alcohol industries, thinks it's high time for lawmakers to get serious about current marketing practices.

"They're having it both ways. My favorite commercial was a Father's Day ad for a Stroh's 60-pack. ... All these advertisements suggest drink first and ask questions later."

Blum said tobacco companies are no different, getting their message out by sponsoring sports events and promoting other public activities.

"Cigarettes and alcohol kill more than all the illegal drugs combined each year. ... That's 5,000 versus 500,000," fumed Blum.

But Wilcox believes censoring advertising and marketing practices isn't the answer.

"Restricting information in society isn't a good move. More information is better than less. ... Any good marketing is going to respond to public concerns."

Wilcox said history has proven that advertising bans don't work. After the 1964 Surgeon General's Report that eventually led to banning cigarette ads from radio and television, cigarette sales shot up dramatically three months later, he claimed.

"Lawmakers think bans will reduce consumption, but we know better than that. Bans don't work very well," he said.

In a recent study due to be published by the University of Texas, Wilcox and two other associates found no significant relation between advertising and consumption from 1964 through 1984.

"A first-class marketing arm is always going to be two steps ahead of the pack," Wilcox said, regardless of popular opinion favoring tighter controls on alcohol and tobacco products.

Technology already has allowed firms to reach markets that weren't available just a few years ago. According to Wilcox, industry pros have been quick to take advantage of the facsimile machine and the videocassette recorder.

One way or another, the advertising message is getting out.

Sometimes, however, it backfires.

Dr. John Murphy, advertising professor at UT Austin, said industry professionals have gone too far, particularly when they promote events such as spring break blowouts at South Padre Island.

Another killing force has been the Spuds MacKenzie debacle.

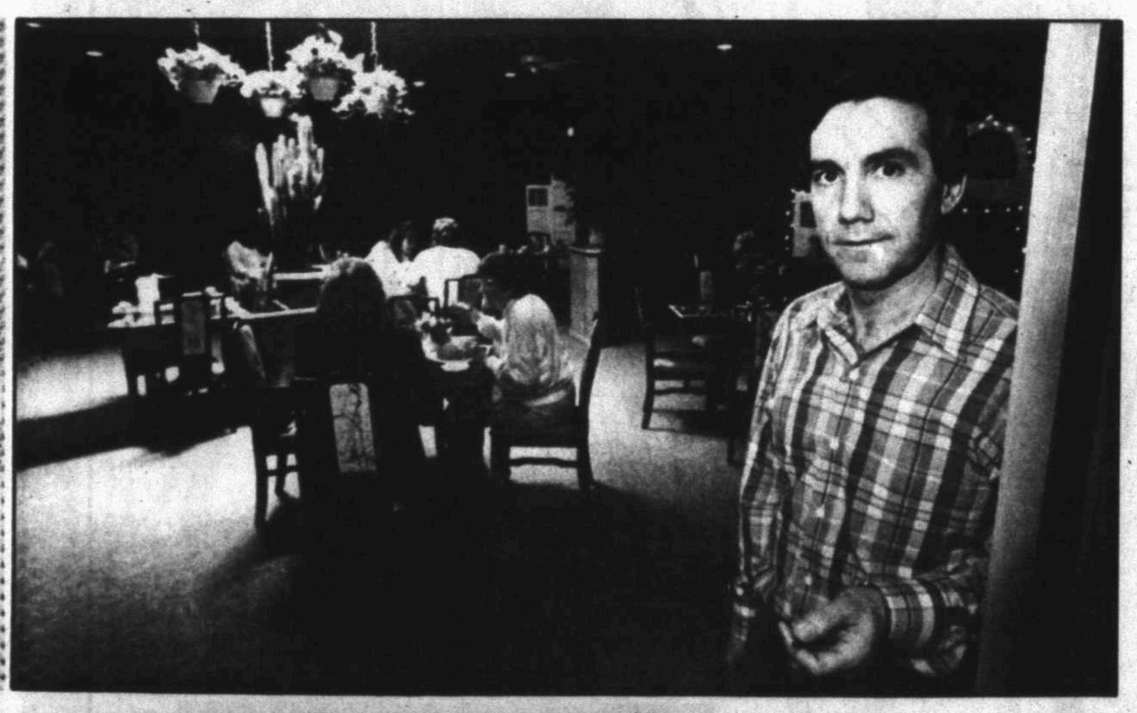
"Anheuser-Busch really took the heat in the press for that one. Initially, he was Spuds the party animal, now he's Spuds, the animal who knows when to say when."

Like Wilcox, Murphy doesn't see a need for banning advertisements.

"When do you regulate free speech? My position is, if it's a legal product and it's advertised honestly, it should be allowed."

Still, the pressure is on from local chapters of Mothers Against Drunk Drivers to Capitol Hill, where lawmakers are pondering numerous bills that could change advertising practices.

"I predict the marketers of these products are going to become increasingly sensitive as time goes on," said Murphy. "I don't think you're ever going to see another promotion like Spuds MacKenzie again."



Jeff Sharifi, above, owner of Cafe West in Midland, said he's noticed a definite decline of smoking and drinking among his patrons. Dawn Garrett, a bartender at Wall Street Bar and Grill, is one of a number of area professionals who are trained to spot inebriated patrons.

Multibillion-dollar tabs for treatment and lost productivity associated with smoking and alcohol abuse have captured the attention of employers; but a smoke-free workplace is not without cost -- in money and morale. Snuffing out smoking is not the end of tobacco-related health hazards, either.

Intoxicated drivers have mothers and others fighting MADD. From highway sobriety checkpoints to stiffer enforcement of laws prohibiting tobacco sales to minors, citizens are pushing for greater government involvement, while other grassroots groups offer resistence.

As attitudes shift against them, smokers and drinkers are struggling to maintain their rights. But the wounds inflicted upon families by drunken drivers are slow to heal. However, heightened awareness of these problems means help is easier than ever to get.

TO READERS: You're invited to SOUND OFF on the issues of smoking and drinking when our new reader-participation feature debuts. Letters received by April 3 will be considered for SOUND-OFF. They should be addressed to Anntoinette Moore, Associate City Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, PO Box 1650, Midland, TX 79702. The special community forum will be published April 8.

NATION IN BRIEF

Nuclear foes lose appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court ruling leaves the way clear for the Seabrook, N.H., nuclear plant to receive its commercial operating license after a 20-year fight with anti-nuclear activists.

The federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission could begin preparations as early as today for licensing the $6.5 billion plant.

The U.S. Court of Appeals, in a unanimous decision Wednesday, refused to place a stay on issuance of a license for the plant.

The plant will go through a three-month acceleration process before reaching full power and sending electricity to customers across New England.

"This hearing is not the last word that the NRC will hear from Congress on the Seabrook issue," said Rep. Peter Kostmayer, D-Pa., chairman of the investigations subcommittee of the House Interior Committee. "In fact, it may only be the beginning."

Gas tax raised

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Gov. Booth Gardner on Wednesday signed into law America's highest state gasoline tax, 22 cents a gallon as of April 1, saying it "keeps us from drowning" in traffic congestion.

Gardner said lawmakers who backed the $1.1 billion tax package — intended to raise money for highway and public transit improvements — may feel the heat from voters in November.

Flanked by key legislators, the state Transportation Commission and citizen activists, the governor signed a revenue package that features a two-step, 5-cent increase in the state's 18-cent-a-gallon gas tax.

FAA tightens rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal inspectors will be retrained to make sure they know what to do if intoxicated crew members try to fly an airliner, the Federal Aviation Administration says.

A Northwest Airlines jet took off last week with a legally drunk cockpit crew while an inexperienced inspector in Fargo, N.D., was telephoning his supervisors to ask what to do, Associate FAA Administrator Anthony Broderick told the House Public Works aviation subcommittee Wednesday.

The FAA will make sure that airlines are notified immediately of allegations that flight crews have been drinking, Broderick said.

Hunters confronted

• WEST YELLOWSTONE, Mont. (AP) — Activists protesting a limited buffalo hunt along the borders of Yellowstone National Park smeared one hunter with the blood of his prey in one of several confrontations this week.

Eleven protesters recruited by the Fund for Animals used snowmobiles and cross-country skis in efforts to get between hunters and the bison, which had strayed across the park boundary into Montana. Despite their efforts, three of the 18 bison were killed Tuesday.

The state approved the bison hunt because half of Yellowstone Park's buffalo carry brucellosis, a disease that can be transmitted to domestic cattle and cause them to abort their young.

11-day mush ends

NOME, Alaska (AP) — With her fourth victory in the Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race behind her, Susan Butcher already is anticipating No. 5, but a more immediate concern was ensuring that her dogs got proper credit.

"This team had power coming out of its ears," she said Wednesday, minutes after winning the 1,158-mile Anchorage-to-Nome trek in record time.

Hazelwood earns high marks for seamanship during trial testimony

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — An Exxon tanker captain who once sailed with Joseph Hazelwood gave him high marks for seamanship but said he might not have drunk as much as Hazelwood is alleged to have done before the Exxon Valdez spill.

Ivan Mihajlovic, testifying Wednesday in Hazelwood's defense, said he found no fault with the skipper's navigation nor with his decision to leave the bridge while his tanker crossed Alaska's Prince William Sound.

On cross-examination, Assistant District Attorney Brent Cole gave the witness a prosecution scenario in which Hazelwood had five drinks during seven hours ashore in Valdez on March 24, the day his ship sailed.

"Do you have an opinion whether that is proper conduct for an Exxon master?" asked Cole.

"That's probably something I wouldn't do," said Mihajlovic.

Defense attorney Michael Chalos objected to the question because of a dispute in testimony as to how much Hazelwood actually drank.

But Superior Court Judge Karl Johnstone said Cole was entitled to ask questions "based on his view of the evidence."

Chalos then asked: "You said your own personal preference wouldn't be to drink ashore. Does the fact someone else would (drink) make it improper?"

"No," responded the witness.

Mihajlovic was among the final witnesses in the defense case, which is expected to conclude by week's end.

Hazelwood, 43, of Huntington, N.Y., is the only Exxon Valdez crew member charged in the March 24 grounding, which caused the nation's worst oil spill.

The former skipper is charged with criminal mischief, reckless endangerment, operating a vessel while intoxicated and negligent discharge of oil.

Bush reviews Pentagon 'hit list' to finance Nicaraguan aid plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush wants to cut construction funds from military bases in Democratic congressional districts — facilities on the Pentagon's proposed hit list — to help pay for $300 million in aid for Nicaragua.

A letter from the Defense Department to Congress detailed the possible sources for the aid to help incoming President Violeta Chamorro rebuild the Central American nation's struggling economy.

High on the letter's list, which The Associated Press obtained Wednesday, were military construction projects at Fort Ord, Calif.; Fort Knox, Ky.; Fort Hood, Texas; and the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard.

Those four installations were among the 72 domestic bases and 14 overseas facilities that Defense Secretary Dick Cheney recommended closing or scaling back in January. The initial proposal drew criticism in Congress where lawmakers accused the Bush administration of putting together a partisan list.

The criticism was renewed Wednesday as Rep. Glen Browder, D-Ala., complained, "While claiming publicly that the hit list is only a proposed group of candidates for study, the defense establishment itself has already begun attacking and devouring those facilities without proper authorization from Congress."

Meanwhile, Democratic leaders, after a two-hour, closed-door session Wednesday, said most party members want to cut the proposed $303 billion fiscal 1991 defense budget but are content to wait for drastic cuts.

Part of the Republican strategy to counter the Democrats' proposed defense spending cuts is to paint the Democrats as willing to slash major military programs but not pet projects in their own backyards.

"I think everybody understands this is not the same game on defense," said Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., chairman of the House Budget Committee. "This is a changed ballgame, because it's a changing world situation."

"Whatever happens in the Soviet Union, you aren't going to get that Humpty Dumpty back together again" to become the military threat it once was, said Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.

The Pentagon, in proposing its sources for Nicaraguan assistance, said cancellation or deferral of some military construction programs could total $81 million.

Meanwhile, the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee has begun mailing a fundraising letter signed by House Speaker Thomas S. Foley seeking help in blocking the White House's defense budget request.

"The White House public relations machine has been working overtime to convince Americans that major defense cuts are on the way," the letter said. "But just the opposite is true. A powerful coalition of right-wing organizations, White House foot soldiers and Republican congressmen have mounted a major campaign to spare the Pentagon from major cutbacks."

Amnesty law's motive suspect

At first glance the amnesty law passed Saturday by the Nicaraguan General Assembly appears to be a worthwhile move made in the interest of national reconciliation. But on further inspection, the true purpose of the law becomes suspect.

Without question both the Sandinistas, who attempted for 10 years to rule the country, and the U.S.-backed Contra resistance force bear blame for the divisiveness present in Nicaraguan society today. Through the amnesty law, which was proposed by Sandinista President Daniel Ortega, both sides will be absolved of their "crimes against public order and against internal security of the state."

Of course, under any amnesty law enacted following a period of war there is always the possibility that criminals will be pardoned along with those for whom the law was intended. While that would be tragic, the larger need in Nicaragua now is to foster national reconciliation. After a decade a warfare, it would only agitate the various factions if such an amnesty were not approved.

But Carlos Nunez, president of the Legislature, stressed that "the law is not to protect criminals," but to benefit "people who have worked more than 10 years protecting the revolution."

The amnesty covers public employees who presumably committed crimes of failing in their duties, fraud or theft and have not been prosecuted between July 1979 and when the Sandinistas came to power.

In the Feb. 25th presidential election, Nicaraguan voters turned thumbs down on continued leadership by the Communist Sandinistas, electing instead Violeta Barrios de Chamorro, who had headed the National Opposition Union's ticket.

The Sandinistas are to turn control of the government over to Ms. Chamorro on April 25, but many observers are watching carefully to see what happens between now and then. Scattered reports have indicated that the Sandinistas are delivering truckloads of assault rifles to poor residents in various parts of Nicaragua, although they have contended they are only building a self-defense network, and giving away large amounts of government property to Sandinista followers.

Those reports remove some of the luster from Ortega's concession speech in February and his pledge to help in the transition of power to Ms. Chamorro.

Passing an amnesty law may generate good press, but in light of what's taking place in Nicaragua behind-the-scenes it makes the motive of the Sandinistas suspect.

Seabrook a victory?

If the Seabrook nuclear power plant in New Hampshire finally goes to full generation, someone ought to mount a plaque dedicating it as a triumph over misguided environmental extremism.

When the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission granted the plant an operating license, the expected start-up was 12 years behind schedule and exceeded the original cost by nearly $5.5 billion.

This is a familiar refrain to San Antonians, who struggled with cost overruns and delays brought on by environmentalists' maneuverings in the fight over the South Texas Project nuclear plant. After many delays, the plant came on-line last year but cost six times what had been estimated.

The anti-nuclear crowd's fight against Seabrook and several other plants around the country nearly wrecked the nuclear power industry. Not a single new nuclear plant has been ordered since 1978. ...

It's ironic that many of those fighting nuclear plants also are among the most agitated about the possibility of global warming through the burning of fossil fuels — coal, oil, gas and wood.

Nuclear-generated electricity creates none of the carbon dioxide and other gases said to produce Earth warming. And unlike coal-fired generators, nuclear plants do not contribute to acid rain, another bugaboo of environmentalists.

Cavazos right, wrong

U.S. Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos raised a few hackles among the Texas Legislature last week. Cavazos had the temerity to suggest that money isn't the only solution to the state's educational woes. In one particularly biting phrase, Cavazos said "Texas is a full partner in the decline that has produced America's education deficit."

Cavazos is both wrong and right. The Texas educational system needs more funding. There are far too many school districts in this state that have high tax rates and not enough money to maintain their buildings, to buy decent materials or to offer anything but the most basic curriculum.

Texas cannot, as Cavazos seems to think, simply utilize its existing resources to solve the equity problem. The pie isn't big enough. And no matter what Gov. Bill Clements says, it's going to take some type of tax hike to come up with the money. Any solution that tries to do it with present funding is going to get thrown out by the Texas Supreme Court. ...

But Cavazos was right about a lot of what he said. If accountability is not built into the educational system; if legislators do not institute real reform of the system; and if they simply chunk a pile of money at school without restructuring the system, then the quality of education in this state will not improve. More money doesn't guarantee higher test scores, or increased literacy. If it did, there would have been a marked increase in educational quality in this state since House Bill 72. And there has not. ...

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, March 15, the 74th day of 1990. There are 291 days left in the year. This is Buzzard Day in Hinckley, Ohio.

Today's highlight in history:

On the Ides of March, 44 B.C., Roman Emperor Julius Caesar was assassinated by a group of nobles that included Brutus and Cassius.

On this date:

In 1767, Andrew Jackson, seventh president of the United States, was born in Waxhaw, S.C.

In 1820, Maine became the 23rd state.

In 1875, the Roman Catholic archbishop of New York, John McCloskey, was named the first American cardinal, by Pope Pius IX.

Congress' pension plan generous

WASHINGTON — Without working a day, former president Gerald R. Ford will pocket more money from the federal government next year than will President George Bush.

Anderson

While Ford lounges at his retreats in Vail and Palm Springs, he will collect a yearly federal pension of $219,199 — the combined pension for his years as a congressman and president. Bush, who must show up at the office every day, will receive a salary of $200,000.

Why should an ex-president cost the taxpayers more than the current one? In its self-serving wisdom, Congress has devised a retirement program that may be the most generous in the land. If Congress were a private business, the IRS would disqualify this pension plan.

Congress gives full benefits to workers who would be considered ineligible, early retirees in the private sector. In the real world, former Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., would not have been cleared for hefty pension benefits when he left his post at the age of 47. Nevertheless, when Coelho turns 50, the government pension checks will start arriving in the mail.

Congressional pensions are based on a variety of factors, including the member's three highest years of income. The pay raise Congress gave itself last year runs up the pensions. By the first of next year, serving House members will be making almost 40 percent more money in raises and cost-of-living increases than they were at the beginning of this year.

Because of that pay raise, pension checks for retirees after 1993 will be based on an income of at least $125,218 for House members.

Consider what that means to House Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash., who promoted the pay raise. If Foley decided to throw in the gavel in three years, he would immediately start receiving a pension of about $101,000 a year.

The pension plan faithfully keeps pace with inflation. Just ask Albert Gore Sr., the father of Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn. Since Al senior retired from the Senate in 1970, he has been eligible for more than $1 million in pension payments. He is entitled to $88,564 a year now, and his last salary in the Senate was only $42,500.

If the entire Congress were to retire in 1993, the National Taxpayers Union has estimated that the government would pay at least $1 million each to more than 300 retirees before they died. "Most average Americans dream of earning $1 million in their lifetime," said David Keating of the NTU. "These retired members of Congress will receive that without working."

In these days of smothering budget deficits, one would expect Congress to set an example — but no.

Rep. Howard Coble, R-N.C., stands alone. He has refused to participate in the pension program and says he will take only Social Security. He has introduced a bill to cut the pension plan, but he says his colleagues tell him to "put a lid on it."

Coble told our associate Jim Lynch, "I just think we could do a whole lot of sacrificing that would play well with our constituents back home and would bring some fiscal sanity to this town."

Now, that's a novel idea — fiscal sanity. But the insanity is likely to win out. Just ask Gerald Ford. As of March 1, Ford had received more than $1.8 million in federal pension payments.

Baseball sinks to jumble of egos, avarice

WASHINGTON — When baseball's current debacle began, the moral high ground (never higher than a pitcher's mound — 10 inches) belonged to the players. But they, who as entertainers should know when an act has gone stale, have, by pouting and overreaching, reduced themselves to the owners' level.

Will

The owners spent the 1980s proving themselves dishonest and dim-witted (in thinking they could get away with the dishonesty). They conspired to stop abruptly all bidding on free agents. They reaped what they sowed — financial penalties and the players' animosity. Then, shattered attendance records and having struck a gusher of cash from a billion-dollar television contract that begins this year, the owners planned a lockout as part of an aggressive attack on the players' rights: mobility, bargaining power.

The owners justified this by pointing to a crisis that is (trust us, they said) just over the horizon. And they spent the months before the lockout spending like fury, awarding many $3 million contracts, and $21.7 million in signing bonuses.

Furthermore, they spent the 15 years prior to 1990 predicting that players' free agency would destroy competitive balance because rich teams in large markets would monopolize talent. Those 15 years have seen better competitive balance than ever before.

Even if the owners are correct about the coming crisis, they are wrong about the way the world works.

Nevertheless, the owners submitted a cockamamie proposal, the ramifications of which they could not explain. They quickly beat a retreat, and immediately the players' side began behaving badly.

On that side are 650 men, most of them young, all of them intensely competitive, none of them schooled by life in political skills. A test of political maturity is knowing when not to press an advantage. The players, and their union leader Don Fehr, flunked that test.

Fehr, 41, and his fire-breathing associates use stridency to substitute for plausibility when claiming that large issues of equity are at stake in the scramble for the last marginal advantage for players averaging $557,000 a year. Fehr's passion for distributive justice deserves a larger cause or a smaller spotlight. He evinces slight affection for, or understanding of, baseball, which he seems to regard as an industry like any other, which it is not.

"I don't think" says Fehr, "American culture would collapse if baseball collapsed." That flippancy is trivially true and utterly foolish. Symphony orchestras, steel mills — American culture could survive without lots of things. But baseball, unlike, say, the textile industry, depends for its health on a perishable hold on the public's imagination. Fehr does not understand the industry that provides his constituents their enviable livelihoods.

Players cannot be faulted for making, or their union faulted for helping them make, millions from an industry with three commas in its gross. But by now, both owners and players are myopic, battling about minute monetary differences and "philosophic" differences that prove there are few philosophers in baseball.

The owners are afraid to begin the season without an agreement because the players could strike in August when the players have made most of their money and the owners have not. However, the owners should start the season, stipulating that everything agreed to so far (and it is a lot) will be implemented retroactively in a final agreement. Then let's see if the players will wreck the remainder of the season over the unsettled issue (how to make some second-year players eligible for salary arbitration). Will they inflict that cost on baseball, not least on the perhaps 200 players who in August will have reasonable hopes of getting into lucrative post-season play:

Today, with grim appropriateness, the national pastime replicates the pathology of the nation's governance. It has sunk into a shortsighted, elbow-throwing jumble of egos and avarice, an unseemly clamor about rights, with responsibility toward institutional health given short shrift.

Unified Germany makes some people nervous

There are a few people, not many, who are slightly nervous about a unified Germany. These folks suffer from deja vu and, while the world has no reason to shiver, we should address their fears.

Buchwald

Feldman, my watch repairman, is certain he knows how the trouble is going to start. He thinks it will be something like this:

It's eight years from today, and Germany is united. Schultz, a former East German bricklayer, and now a prosperous orthodontist, is building a new house at Schnitzel Gardens, which is east of Leipzig.

Schultz's architect, Mendelsohn, comes to visit him with the plans. "Schultz, I can get the house on your land but I don't have room for a garage."

"I have to have a garage," Schultz insists. "My new Mercedes-Benz is being delivered in six weeks."

Mendelsohn says, "Look for yourself. Where are we going to build a garage?"

Schultz studies the plans. "How about here?"

"But that's Poland!"

"It was Germany before it was Poland. The people of Poland stole it from us after World War II. We must be allowed to build German garages on German soil."

Mendelsohn explains, "If we built your garage in Poland, we would be violating the Treaty of Perrier, which states that Germany cannot covet any territory that belonged to somebody else in the year 1990."

Schultz says, "A bunch of old men who sold us out signed that treaty. We have a new Germany now, and that Germany permits us to build on any part of the fatherland that we want to."

Mendelsohn tells him, "I'm not suggesting that you are wrong. Admittedly, there are a lot of German-speaking Poles living on the land where we want to build our garage. At the same time, I don't think that Berlin will give us a permit to construct a garage so close to Krackow."

Schultz slams down his fist. "It is not Polish soil, it is German soil. To teach them a lesson I should put the whole house in Poland, and the garage in Germany."

"They could try to stop you."

"Then Germany must rebuild its air force and its Panzer divisions and have a crash submarine program. I will not park my car in the driveway to satisfy the scavengers of World War II."

"If you feel that strongly about it, Schultz," Mendelsohn said, "I'll build the garage in Poland while no one is looking."

"I want everyone to be looking. This is my house, this is my garage, this is my land, this is my Europe. Heil real estate."

Mendelsohn responded, "Heil real estate. Now can we talk about the cost of the land we're going to take from Poland?"

"Why should we pay for what was originally ours?" Schultz asks him.

Mendelsohn agrees. "Good point. Schultz, you told me last time to get some estimates for the cost of building a hunting lodge in Czechoslovakia. I have two estimates. One, if Czechoslovakia remains independent, and another if it is annexed to us."

"Just give me the annexation figure. Why would Czechoslovakia stay independent when all our German citizens still live there?"

Gorbachev elected, pledges reform

WORLD

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev won election today to a strengthened presidency and promised to wield its broad powers to advance his reform program and tackle the country's economic and ethnic crises.

The Congress of People's Deputies gave Gorbachev, who ran uncontested, the five-year term he sought by a vote of 1,329 to 495, although there was surprisingly strong opposition to handing him expanded powers.

He needed approval by more than half the 2,245 deputies in the Wednesday balloting.

Many deputies had wanted the people to select the country's first chief executive in a direct vote. About 350 deputies abstained, mainly lawmakers who consider their republics to be independent nations.

When the vote was announced today, parliamentarians stood to applaud Gorbachev and he stood on the dais, hands folded in front of him, to acknowledge them. He took the oath of office and spoke to the Congress.

"The necessity for a more radical perestroika policy is obvious, and it is for these purposes above all that I am going to use my powers as president," Gorbachev declared.

He said the Soviét Union was living through "difficult times" and that his reforms may initially cause "painful phenomena." Gorbachev promised to drastically cut the budget and attack inflation. He offered few details.

He did however, say that "the Cold War is over" even though that did not mean the end of "military confrontation" in the world. He said use of the Red Army outside the country "without the sanction of the Supreme Soviet or the Congress shall be ruled out."

Gorbachev noted "the changes of historical significance" across Eastern Europe where Communist regimes have been swept away and democratic governments are being formed.

He said "decisions are being prepared" for a meeting with President Bush in Washington later this year.

Gorbachev, whose election as president crowned a week of hard-fought political victories, also pledged not to follow decades of Soviet practice by taking more and more power.

"I want to underscore especially that I will use my presidential powers for really decisive advancement of perestroika processes on a democratic basis," he said. "I think it necessary to say this, because both before and during this Congress, apprehensions were voiced that the presidency might threaten to usurp power."

After Gorbachev's term, the country will conduct its first nationwide presidential campaign.

The new president will have wide powers to propose legislation, negotiate treaties, veto bills and decisions of the Council of Ministers, appoint a Cabinet, declare war if the country is attacked and, under certain conditions, impose presidential rule.

Since taking office five years ago, Gorbachev has repeatedly shaken up the Soviet political system and improved personal liberties, but the country is beset by worsening ethnic strife and economic paralysis.

Strong independence movements and bloody clashes between ethnic groups also threaten the union. Lithuania declared independence Sunday, and Estonia, Latvia and Georgia have all moved in that direction.

Gorbachev has been pressed for more radical solutions and this year has led the Communist Party to renounce its lock on political power and accept some forms of private property.

Both those decisions were confirmed this week by the Congress.

He said the only solution to the continuing problems is to search for even more radical solutions. "The greatest barrier to change remains ossified thinking," he told the deputies in a firm, strong voice.

"We need to pass laws urgently aimed at de-monopolizing the economy," he said. The tax system must be reformed, and the balance of payments and interest rates must be regulated, he added.

"Above all state expenditures should be drastically cut in the near future to overcome budget deficit and counter inflationary processes," he said.

Gorbachev promised to be president of all of the country's more than 100 nationalities. He pledged to work to keep the Soviet Union together while pressing for a new agreement of union among the country's republics.

"Our country is going through a difficult time, but if we act together we will overcome these difficulties," Gorbachev said.

WATER QUALITY NOTICE

Water Quality is a growing problem in West Texas. Municipal Water is, for the most part, safe to drink, however it is extremely hard and it often tastes bad. Many area water treating companys are using less than desirable tactics to sell their systems. This in turn gives the water quality industry a bad image and makes it hard for honest, reputable dealers to represent their products in a straight forward and dignified manner. We at Jack Holt and Associates/Best Water Products have been helping West Texas people solve their water problems for the past 15 years. We don't sell bells & whistles, use scare tactics or offer free gifts. We simply sell quality water treating products at the lowest possible prices and service what we sell. If you are interested in improving water quality for your family or business please give us a call for a free estimate at 1-800-342-5419 or 332-8939. Thank You. Jack Holt & Associates - Odessa.

Iraq rejects appeals, hangs reporter it accused of spying

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — The government today defied international appeals for mercy and hanged a London-based newspaper reporter who was arrested near a military complex and convicted of spying for Britain and Israel.

Bazoft

Britain said it was appalled by the execution of 31-year-old Farzad Bazoft, an Iranian-born journalist who was working for the British weekly The Observer and traveling on British documents.

Bazoft was convicted Saturday by a revolutionary court in a closed trial.

He was arrested in September near a plant where ballistic missiles are reportedly being developed. He was investigating reports that hundreds of people had died in an explosion.

Robin Kealy, the British consul in Baghdad, spent more than an hour with the condemned reporter before the hanging. He told the British Broadcasting Corp. that Bazoft looked "hollow-eyed and subdued."

Information Minister Latif Nassayif Jassim said the body was turned over to the British Embassy. "(British Prime Minister Margaret) Thatcher wanted him alive. We sent him in a box," he told journalists.

"There have been few occasions when there has been such a universal appeal by world leaders for mercy to be shown," British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd said in London. "We are appalled that despite that worldwide appeal, the Iraqi government has gone ahead with this barbarous act."

The execution came despite pleas for clemency from Britain, U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, Amnesty International, the European Community and international press groups.

In Strasbourg, France, the European Parliament observed a minute of silence in Bazoft's memory and condemned the execution, which it said "discredits the Iraqi government."

David Anderson, foreign affairs spokesman for Britain's opposition Labor Party, said Britain should immediately withdraw its ambassador, cancel a trade mission and press for further action from European allies.

In London, the human rights group Amnesty International said the execution was the latest in a long list of "severe and systematic human rights abuses," in Iraq.

U.S. denies role in Libyan plant fire

By Stewart Powell
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A chemical weapons plant that has been the target of U.S. threats and condemnation for 18 months caught fire Wednesday, the White House announced. Bush administration officials said the blaze was not set by agents of the United States.

"We deny we had any involvement," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said. "We just dare not speculate on the cause."

President Bush told reporters in a hallway at the White House that "we don't know" what happened in Libya.

The White House, while attributing information to "diplomatic sources," was the first to disclose the incident.

U.S. intelligence officers have described the plant as the world's largest chemical weapons complex capable of producing up to 40 tons of chemical agents per day.

The Pentagon maneuvered an orbiting spy satellite into position over Libya late Wednesday in order to photograph the mysterious fire. A senior Pentagon source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the high-powered satellite would be in position to take pictures of the burning plant at Rabta at dawn local time — roughly midnight Eastern Standard Time.

Senior U.S. officials said word of the fire was relayed to the United States by Italian intelligence sources at mid-afternoon Wednesday, well after nightfall in Libya.

The Rabta plant, about 40 miles outside the Libyan capital of Tripoli, has been the subject of American saber-rattling since late 1988.

Fitzwater said last week that the plant, which apparently began producing chemical weapons in recent months, was "dangerous" and was "becoming more so."

The United States was seeking "vigorous efforts to stop the operation" of the plant, Fitzwater said.

Quoting unidentified Libyan sources, ABC News reported Wednesday night that Libyan authorities were claiming the fire was ignited by the action of U.S. and Israeli agents.

Mattox, Richards ready for slugfest

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Clayton Williams Jr. Wednesday basked in his victory in the Republican primary for governor while Ann Richards and Jim Mattox prepared for a slugfest both say they do not want in the Democratic runoff.

"I want this campaign to get on a positive footing, but if she doesn't, I have no choice but to respond in kind," Mattox said at a Capitol news conference.

"I said in my announcement speech, I wanted this campaign to be conducted on the issues and I wanted it to be held on a high plane," Ms. Richards said later. "But I also said that if I was attacked, I would respond. And I have. And I will."

In the primary campaign, Mattox "ran the first negative ad, he ran the last negative ad and he ran the most negative ads in between," she said.

"Jim Mattox is trying to rewrite the history of this campaign and come riding out of it on a white horse," she said. "I think that horse's legs were muddy up to the neck."

She held out little hope the campaign would stay positive. "Mattox has never run a campaign that was a positive one, so it would be a dramatic break with history," she said.

With one precinct remaining to be reported Wednesday evening, Ms. Richards had 39.4 percent of the primary vote to lead the seven-candidate field, while Mattox received 36.9 percent. Mark White received 19.3 percent and four other candidates split the remaining 4.4 percent.

The winner of the April 10 runoff will meet Williams, who swept all regions of Texas as he won the Republican nomination with 60.7 percent of the vote.

Williams received a congratulatory phone call from President George Bush Wednesday morning and had breakfast with campaign staffers at a Mexican restaurant in Austin. He said he would seek the support of Mark White and conservative Democrats who supported the former governor in the Democratic primary.

"I'm going to ask Mark White to endorse me. I'm going to ask for his help," Williams said.

Ms. Richards said Williams was engaging in "wishful thinking," and noted that with 517,563 votes in the Republican primary he finished third, behind her 572,630 votes and Mattox's 537,408 votes in the Democratic primary.

She expects a hard-fought runoff, but she thinks the party can regroup in time for the general election.

"I think the Democratic party realizes the crucial nature of this election in November and we will be solidified and support each other in November," she said.

She already has talked twice with White, who before the election said he was personally insulted by her commercials that accused him of profiting from his government sevice. They agreed to meet, she said.

Mattox said he expects the bulk of White's supporters to switch to him. "His voters will have a tendency to come over to me," Mattox said. "I will talk with him, but losing is a painful thing for him and his family and I will wait a reasonable period of time."

Mattox also said Ms. Richards' refusal to say if she ever used an illegal drug would remain an issue. "It's a significant issue," he said. "You can't have a war on drugs if the commander in chief takes the 5th Amendment."

Ms. Richards, who said she refused to answer on principle, said that statement was "just further evidence of the very positive kind of campaign that Mattox says that he wants to run."

Ms. Richards ran strongest in Central Texas, where she got 50.4 percent of the vote, North Central Texas, where she got 46.1 percent, and the Upper Gulf Coast, which includes Houston, where she got 40.5 percent.

Mattox was strongest in the Panhandle with 54.3 percent, East Texas with 46.6 percent, West Central Texas with 42.9 percent and West Texas, including Midland and Odessa, with 43.7 percent.

Ms. Richards said she hoped to concentrate on organization in areas where her campaign did not do well, particularly in East Texas and West Texas.

She noted that she split the vote in South Texas, where Mattox got 39 percent and she got 36.5 percent. "I felt good about that," she said.

Ms. Richards attributed Mattox's lead in West Texas to her lack of advertising in that area. She hopes to raise $1 million for the runoff, while Mattox simply said he drained his reserves.

The election also showed how a small number of votes can make a difference, as Republican state Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown of Lake Jackson finished 142 votes shy of the number he needed to win the GOP attorney general race outright.

Brown's 358,089 votes were 49.98 percent of the total, while state Rep. Patricia Hill of Dallas got 198,998, or 27.8 percent, to win a spot in the GOP runoff.

Parents say Straight saved children's lives

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Midland businessman Vincent Vinegoni remembers how he felt about his teen-age son 21 months ago.

"Before, we would argue, we would get in fights with each other," he said. "He was constantly getting high."

After almost two years in the Straight drug treatment program in Irving, though, things have changed.

"Today, we can sit down and talk about our relationship and how we feel about each other," Vinegoni said. "We talk about school, he talks about how he feels. He's someone I like to be with. I have a lot of respect for him now."

Vinegoni and other Midland parents gathered at the Straight Family Service Center Wednesday to call attention to the program which they credit with saving their children's lives.

Don Green, who has a 16-year-old son in Straight, said he chose the program because it was the only one he could find which didn't employ the "we help people who want to help thesmselves" philosophy.

"We were looking for a program that would take our son unconditionally and would keep him there," Green said. "Many programs wouldn't take Chad unless he said he was willing to be helped."

Green said his son, Chad, has changed dramatically from the youth who had taken up shoplifting and car theft to support his drug habit.

"He has come back to a lot of the basic values that we hold dear in our family," Green said. "And today those are the true values that he tries to live by."

Chad is not the only one in his family who has changed, though. His parents and parents of all Straight participants must undergo therapy of their own to learn how to communicate with their children and cope with their childrens' drug problems. Siblings of drug abusers in Straight also spend time in "rap sessions."

Jeanne M. Colton, Straight administrator from Irving, credits Straight's family orientation with its high success rate. She said that 75 percent of Straight graduates are drug and alochol free two years after the program.

"We have the highest success rate and we are also a very cost-effective operation," Ms. Colton said. "Our whole mission is to treat as many children as possible, so we make it our goal to get the necessary funds from contributions rather than demanding all of it from families."

She said that about 30 percent of Straight operating costs are covered by corporate donations, with 70 percent coming from clients. She said the program, which is non-profit, costs about $30 a day per child. That compares favorably with programs that charge $300 to $500 a day, she said.

Straight treatment averages 18 months for completion, she said, and even at $30 a day that can become expensive when insurance runs out.

"We try to work with every family," Ms. Colton said. "We try to guide them to resources they can go to for financial support. For example...maybe different loans that they can go for."

Straight, which has nine treatment centers nationwide and has treated 14,000 children since its 1976 inception, places children in homes with host families during treatment.

After the first treatment phase, children are allowed to return to school in the city where they are being treated. Parental visits are encouraged, but the idea is to take them out of negative home environments.

Midland's Straight family service center opened three years ago and has referred about 60 Permian Basin children to the Irving treatment center since then. Ms. Colton said about eight Midland children are in Straight now.

Exchange Club honors volunteer

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Maxine Hannifin has a lengthy history of quietly volunteering her time to help out in numerous Midland organizations.

Hannifin

And she was rewarded for her efforts Thursday when the Midland Exchange Club held the Golden Deeds Award Banquet at Midland Country Club in her honor.

"I feel very honored because I know there are so many volunteers in Midland," she said. "They do so many things for the people of Midland.

"It's nice that they (Midland Exchange Club) honor volunteers. I was grateful that I was the one who was chosen."

Ms. Hannifin's activities include working on various organizations dealing with crime prevention and substance abuse.

The organizations include the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officers Standards and Education, Midland Crime Stoppers, the Council Against Substantive Abuse Inc., Midland Crime Prevention Commission, Neighbors Against Burglars and Drugs and the Permian Basin Law Enforcement Academy.

She has also served with the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, American Red Cross Disaster Shelter, Friend to International Club at Midland College and Friends of the Library.

She has served in varying capacities with those organizations, including board member, counselor, instructor and charter member.

Ms. Hannifin said some of her most rewarding work was with Battered Women and Their Children.

"I think it has been interesting," she said. "When I realized the women had no sanctuary and their livers were in danger, I decided to join."

Midland Exchange Club member Wilbur Rocchio, chairman of a committee which chose Ms. Hannifin, said she has exemplified the model volunteer spirit.

"She was deserving," Rocchio said. "She's done a lot for the community and hasn't gotten a lot of publicity. We always try to find those who don't get that much publicity."

Ms. Hannifin's history of community service in Midland goes back to 1960, when she was a PTA member, school library worker, Sunday school teacher and Cub Scout leader among other activities until 1976.

She and Bob Hannifin, her husband for 37 yearsthree sons: Mark, Matt and Dan. She also has two daughters-in-law: Linda and Nancy. Her granddaughter's name is Kelly Elizabeth Hannifin.

Ms. Hannifin received a bachelor's of arts degree in English from California State University at Sacramento, where she also received a minor in journalism, art and psychology.

She was named women of the year by the Altrusa Club in 1984 and received the Trimble Award in May 1986.

ED TODD

Texas' land should be revered

There are "miles and miles" of Texas.

Todd

In the east, the land takes in blackland, forests, wilderness, the Coastal Plains and, toward the west, the Hill Country.

Back home, in West Texas, the land is motley: Flat, laden with grassland and mesquite, marked by playa lakes and settlements both highly rural and quite citified, dotted by houses, buildings, traffic, concrete and asphalt, and graced by mountains and valleys.

But miles and miles of Texas is dwindling. The space is the same, but restrictions are getting tighter, as more and more people move in and over.

The land is grand.

To those who thrive on aesthetics, the land is fraught with beauty: from the resplendent sunrises and sunsets to the life-sustaining rainstorms and the restful nights when coyotes howl, the big cats stalk, and birds and reptiles rest or seek prey, depending on their roles in nature.

The land, like the oceans and rivers, is to be revered.

And land, however seemingly barren and without immediate economic impact, is not, contrary to the perceptions of some, a "wasteland" anymore than is the harvest moon.

How can anything which causes the heart to sing be a waste?

Neither are the oceans a "wasteland" anymore than are remote mountains or deep caverns "wasted" space.

But often the waters and the land, particularly if deemed "remote" by the standards of some, are treated as if they were destined for degradation, something akin to Gehenna hell.

No. No longer if that were the viewpoint.

They are all part of this world wherein life and beauty are precious and are to be revered.

Slaying of man who killed girlfriend may be justified, authorities say

DALLAS (AP) — The slaying of a man who had fatally shot his ex-girlfriend at a suburban shopping mall might have been justified, said a police captain after questioning and releasing a suspect who said he was just trying to help the woman.

"There is such a thing as justifiable homicide," said Irving Police Capt. Travis Hall. He said a Dallas County grand jury will be asked to review the case for possible charges against the 25-year-old man.

Police Wednesday questioned Todd Allan Broom, who, accompanied by his lawyer, surrendered two days after Eddie Edwards, 41, was shot while fleeing Irving Mall.

"I'm not Charles Bronson. I'm not going to save the world. I feel bad someone died," Broom, a copy machine repairman and co-owner of a pizza parlor, told the Dallas Times Herald in a copyright story. "I watched him chase her down and shoot her ... I was just trying to help a lady."

Bronson starred in a movie "Death Wish" that told the fictional story of a vigilante who killed several criminals.

"I didn't want to kill him," he told the newspaper. "It wasn't my goal in life to kill someone. It's something I'm going to have to live with now."

Hall said after officers heard Broom's story, they decided not to file charges against him.

"The issue is whether it was appropriate for him to have shot and killed Mr. Eddie Edwards," Hall said. "Those are all things the grand jury is going to weigh."

Hall said police believe Broom was merely acting on impulse after witnessing the slaying of Edwards' former girlfriend, Demetria Yvonne Taylor, 28, as she walked to her car.

"Edwards violently murdered this woman," Hall said. "She's down, she's wounded, and he (Edwards) goes and shoots her in the head again after she's down."

Broom said he saw Edwards chase Ms. Taylor as he pulled into the mall parking lot.

"At first I thought it was two lovers playing," Broom said. "Then she started to yell."

He said he was "stunned" when Edwards shot the woman.

"I couldn't move. That's when I realized what was happening. I saw the revolver and it was like ...

Bennett says drug question up to voters

AUSTIN (AP) — National drug czar William Bennett said voters must decide how important it is for Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Ann Richards to disclose if she has ever used illegal drugs and suggested that past drug use shouldn't disqualify a person from office.

"I think that when you run for public office your obligations for disclosure are greater, obviously, than if you're an ordinary citizen," Bennett, national drug control policy director, said Wednesday after a speech to a joint House-Senate session.

"People expect to know a whole lot about you. They expect to know where you stand, vis-a-vis the law, and that's not unusual."

Bennett, former U.S. education secretary, spoke to lawmakers the day after the primary elections propelled Ms. Richards, the state's treasurer, into an April 10 runoff for the Democratic nomination with Attorney General Jim Mattox.

Ms. Richards, a recovering alcoholic, has repeatedly declined to say whether she has used illegal drugs on the grounds that raising the issue might discourage others from seeking treatment.

The question of whether someone who has ever used illegal drugs should hold public office is a difficult one, Bennett said.

"Is it wrong to use illegal drugs, whatever it was? Sure. But how wrong? How much do you want to make out of it?" he said.

"There are lots of things I'd have to know first — When? How old was the person? Was the person a student, for example, or was the person a teacher? Was it 1968, or was it 1978, or was it 1988? Was it once, or was it 50 times? Was it done in the presence of children? — They're all relevant questions to determine whether somebody's history with drugs should be a bar to public office," Bennett said.

Bennett praised Texas' boot camp programs for drug offenders, and the state's testing for parolees and probationers.

He also urged suspending the driver's licenses of people found in possession of illegal drugs and the professional licenses of doctors, lawyers and teachers convicted on drug charges.

Two ex-bank tellers admit embezzlement

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Two former bank tellers who admitted their guilt in embezzling funds from banks in Midland and Odessa in 1989 are to be sentenced April 10 in Midland by U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

Sheri Lynn Allison, 23, of Odessa pleaded guilty to misapplying $7,920 from Texas Commerce Bank (TCB) of Odessa.

Holly Jeanne Kinney, 28, of Midland pleaded guilty to misapplying $6,000 from NCNB Texas National Bank of Midland.

Punishment for each offense ranges up to a 20-year prison sentence and a $1-million fine.

However, both women will be sentenced under the Sentencing Reform Act of 1984, which sets guidelines, keyed to the offense, intent, and background of the defendant. No provisions for parole are in the Reform Act. Punishment could range from probation to months or years of imprisonment. The guidelines offer a range of punishment for the judge to consider in setting sentence.

"You're looking at the possibility of 20 years incarceration and a fine of up to a million (dollars)," Bunton told Ms. Allison.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Bill Torrey of Midland told the judge that embezzlement of the funds was "confirmed by" a confession by Ms. Allison and by a review of bank records.

"Did you take it (the money) for your own benefit?" Bunton asked the woman.

"For my children," she wept.

Ms. Allison, who is married, has two daughters, court records show.

Even so, Bunton said, "that was for your benefit."

At the April 10 noon sentencing, Bunton said he wanted Ms. Allison to say "anything you think I should hear for mitigation of punishment."

Ms. Allison has made "full and complete restitution for the known shortage in her assigned cash drawer," according to a TCB letter signed by TCB Senior Vice President J. Pat Scarborough and in possession of Ms. Allsion's attorney, David Greenhaw of Odessa.

As did Ms. Allison, Ms. Kinney said no one forced her to take the bank funds.

"Anybody make you do this?" Bunton asked.

"No, sir," replied the tearful woman, who was represented by Midland lawyer Ray Moudy.

The prosecutor, Torrey, said that missing funds were confirmed by Ms. Kinney's "confession" and by an examination of bank records.

Both bank cases were investigated by FBI special agents in Midland.

6 people charged with marijuana possession

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Five men and a woman, charged with possessing about 300 pounds of marijuana with intent to distribute the contraband, are to appear before U.S. Magistrate Robert Sykes at 2 p.m. Monday in the federal courthouse in Midland.

Meanwhile, Martin Tovar, Janet Moreno, Hector Garcia, Jose Valenzuela, Jose Acosta, and Esau Franco, all in their mid-20s, are jailed in Midland in lieu bail.

The prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery of Midland, on Wednesday afternoon asked the magistrate to detain the six without bail on grounds because there is a "serious risk" they will flee, that each of the defendants "represents a danger to the safety of the community," and that the alleged offense calls for a maximum prison sentence of 10 years or more.

The six were arrested Tuesday following a surveillance of a 1974 Chevrolet tank truck, which law-enforcement officers "suspected of containing a secreted compartment within its tank," according to a complaint prepared by the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) in Midland.

Odessa Police Department officers, who were in on the surveillance, suspected that the tank truck had carried marijuana "from an area south of Alpine, Texas, to" to Odessa.

The six defendants are being represented by Midland-Odessa lawyers Tony Chavez and Richard Alvarado.

"What we're finding of course is because of the big oil crunch, the funding...we need is getting harder to get," Ms. Colton said.

She said the Midland family service center, directed by Jaye Jean Foster, will be working with corporate donors and local counselors and psychologists to encourage referrals and donations.

it started sinking in."

"I shot the back of his car, hoping to disable it," Broom told the newspaper. "I shot another time."

He said he believed the second shot penetrated the door and struck Edwards in the abdomen. Edwards pulled over and was taken by ambulance to a Dallas hospital, where he later died.

Broom gave police a .44-caliber magnum pistol with a scope he said he used to shoot Edwards, Hall said.

"This is not something you could stick in your belt or under your car seat," Hall said of the gun.

Police initially said they believed Edwards shot himself, but witnesses later reported Edwards was killed by someone else.

Broom told the Times Herald that he fled the scene because he was afraid of being treated like a criminal. He first talked to the newspaper Tuesday after it published a report that a third person may have been involved in the incident.

Broom said he told his girlfriend, parents and some co-workers about the shooting Monday, but asked them to keep it a secret. Police said, however, they received telephone tips that identified Broom.

Vote canvass due in GOP nomination for attorney general

Brown

Hill

Morales

AUSTIN (AP) — A re-check of unofficial election results showed State Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown collected just over half the votes for the Republican nomination for attorney general.

But Brown won't actually get the nomination until GOP officials have canvassed the vote and his lead challenger, state Rep. Pat Hill, says she won't concede until the results are official.

The Secretary of State's election division re-checked the race tally Wednesday, said spokesman Mark Toohey.

"We called literally all 254 counties to verify the numbers in that race," Toohey said.

He said the unofficial returns indicated Brown had 355,116 votes, or 50.1 percent of the ballots cast. Ms. Hill had 197,543 votes, or 27.9 percent, followed by Dallas lawyer Tex Lezar, 107,594, or 15.2 percent, and Houston lawyer Bobby Steelhammer, 48,080, or 6.8 percent.

"Based on the unofficial returns, it would appear Sen. Brown has received enough votes to win without a runoff," Toohey said.

Brown refused to declare victory, however, and Ms. Hill said she would prepare for the April 10 runoff for the right to face Democrat Dan Morales, who beat John Odam in Tuesday's primary.

"In a 60 percent to 30 percent race, you don't worry about a 3 percent margin of error, but when there's 100 votes between you and a majority, suddenly a tenth of a percentage point is very important," Brown said from his Lake Jackson home Wednesday night.

Ms. Hill, of Dallas, said she thinks the vote totals will change as the canvass proceeds. GOP party leaders are scheduled to certify the vote next Wednesday.

"I have to assume there's a runoff and proceed," Ms. Hill said. "I think there's at least a 50-50 chance that there will be."

State GOP Chairman Fred Meyer said settling on a final vote tally is difficult.

Morales, a state representative from San Antonio, gathered 660,425 votes, or 53.6 percent, to beat Odam, a Houston lawyer who had 570,856, or 46.4 percent.

Incumbent Attorney General Jim Mattox faces State Treasurer Ann Richards in a runoff for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

House education bill calls for $450 million in state aid

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — With primaries out of the way, lawmakers Wednesday were back in Austin and on track with education bills intended to satisfy a Texas Supreme Court decision.

However, high-dollar aid figures proposed in both chambers kept the Legislature on a collision course with Gov. Bill Clements, who has pledged to veto any measure needing new taxes.

In the Texas House, sponsors of compromise legislation aimed at providing 95 percent equity among school districts within five years filed a bill that calls for $450 million in new state aid next school year.

While the amount is less than the nearly $800 mill! Senate sponsors of a competing bill are proposing, at least one key House member said even the lower amount would need a tax increase.

"I don't see how you're going to afford anything we do here, basically, without a tax bill," said Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownsville and chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

Another bill sponsor, Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice, said the $450 million amount is not enough to fix the state's education ills.

"I've told you that I don't think this is enough money, but it's certainly better than what was proposed by the task force," said Ms. Glossbrenner, chairman of the House Public Education Committee. The representative referred to a $230 million proposal recommended by the Governor's Task Force on Public Education this past February.

The Texas Supreme Court last October ruled that the state relies too heavily on local property taxes to provide money for public education. Such over-reliance amounts to discrimination against students in poorer districts, the court said.

Ms. Glossbrenner, a former teacher, said that "there's no point in pretending" the bill will accomplish all she would like for education.

Clements has said repeatedly he will veto any education bill that needs increases in state revenue. House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said the governor reiterated the point during a Wednesday lunch that he and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby attended.

"And the lieutenant governor said, 'Well, you do what you have to do, and we'll have to do what we have to do,'" said Lewis.

The governor later predicted that newly chosen Republican gubernatorial nominee Clayton Williams will be unhurt at the polls should Clements take his veto pen in hand.

"I don't think the people of Texas in any way, shape or form want more taxes," said Clements. "The people of Texas are sick and tired of this tax, tax, tax business," he said.

In other legislative news, Clements said he may announce today what issues besides school finance he will allow lawmakers to consider during the special session. Lewis said legislator ethics may be among those issues.

Ms. Glossbrenner said House education bill sponsors plan an informal public hearing on the legislation this morning to allow lawmakers a chance to ask questions and determine its effect on their home districts.

The bill should be out of committee by Friday and ready to for floor debate by the full House next week, she said.

The legislation includes provisions that would strip the state Board of Education of policy-making authority and power to appoint the commissioner of education.

However, similar provisions in the prime Senate response to the Supreme Court decision were greatly watered down prior to a committee hearing Wednesday.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur and co-chairman of a Senate committee holding hearings on the measure, said that appointment of the commissioner would remain in the hands of the state board, with the consent of the Senate.

Parker said he felt satisfied that the Senate legally could maintain such veto power, although usually it exercises that power in response to gubernatorial appointments.

While Clements said maintaining gubernatorial appointment of the commissioner is not necessary for his support of an education bill, he said he, Hobby and Lewis have agreed any measure should include such a provision.

But Parker said he could not count enough votes in the Senate to support the position. "I believe the Senate is heavily to the contrary, including the Republicans I talked to," Parker said.

Parker told committee members Wednesday that the bill also no longer calls for the Legislative Education Board, a 10-member panel of House and Senate lawmakers, to pick up the policy-making duties of the state board.

To avoid a constitutional violation of separation of powers, Parker said the LEB only would review policy decisions made by the board.

If the LEB determines that board action conflicts with legislative intent, it would have four options: request additional information, equest a joint meeting, request a reconsideration or notify the governor, lieutenant governor, House speaker and Legislature at large.

Other amendments attached to the Senate bill included an additional round of student testing beyond the current TEAMS tests.

Hobby predicted the Senate will hold a rare Saturday session to consider the legislation after it is voted out of committee. Hobby is co-sponsoring the measure with Parker and Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan.

Risks decreasing for older mothers

By Daniel Q. Haney

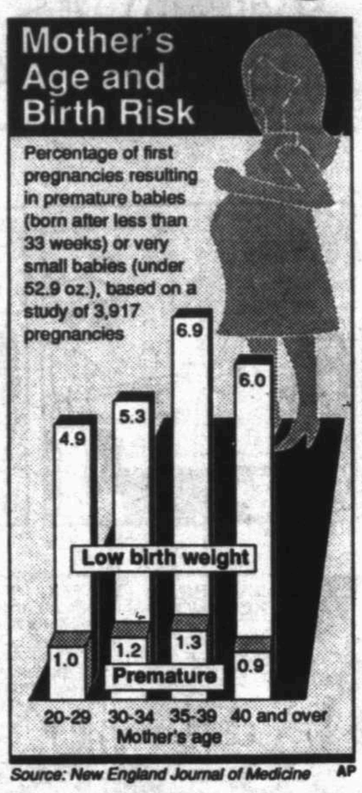
BOSTON (AP) — A study seen as "very good news for women in their 30s" concludes that those who delay motherhood until they establish their careers face little unusual risk of delivering premature or stillborn babies.

The researchers did not check for Down's syndrome and other genetic disorders — which are more common among babies of older women — because virtually all the mothers underwent testing for such problems during pregnancy.

The study in a recent New England Journal of Medicine shows that if those in their late 30s and 40s successfully get pregnant for the first time and avoid miscarriages, chances are good they will have healthy children.

The number of women delaying their first pregnancies until late in their reproductive lives has increased dramatically. According to federal statistics, the rate of first births among those in their 30s has more than doubled since 1970, and among those in their early 40s, it has increased 50 percent.

"Most, although not all, previous studies suggest they might be at an increased risk of low birth weight infants and stillbirths as well as certain other complications," said Dr. Gertrud S. Berkowitz, who directed the latest study.



"That's why women over the age of 35 have generally been considered to be at high risk."

But her study, based on 3,917 pregnancies, shows that older women have only a slightly increased risk of producing unusually small babies, and they are no more likely than younger first-time mothers to deliver prematurely or have stillbirths.

"Overall, their data represent very good news for women in their 30s who are contemplating their first pregnancy," Dr. Robert Resnik of the University of California, San Diego, said in an accompanying editorial.

Berkowitz, an epidemiologist at Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York, said her findings should reassure women who were like those who took part in the study — largely white, well-educated non-smokers who had private insurance, received prenatal care and delivered in sophisticated medical centers.

"Even though this is a very unique group, it typifies women who are delaying childbearing," said Berkowitz. "By and large, it is women who are doing it for career reasons."

The findings do not mean, however, that women can postpone childbearing indefinitely and still be assured of having a baby. As women age, they become less fertile, and even when they get pregnant, they are more likely to have miscarriages.

The study also showed that those older than 35 are twice as likely as younger women to have some health complications of pregnancy, including diabetes and high blood pressure.

At Boston's Beth Israel Hospital, Dr. Henry Klapholz said many doctors have come to accept that women can safely have babies into their 40s. But, he cautioned, women over 40 may unexpectedly go through menopause, ending all chances of pregnancy.

"If you are going to do it, you should do it as soon as you can," Klapholz said. "But if you want to put it off until you are in your 30s or 40s, there is a very good chance of getting pregnant and having a successful outcome."

In his editorial, Resnik said that the message of the latest research "is clear and highly optimistic."

"Given sound genetic diagnosis and counseling, together with appropriate prenatal care and the judicious management of labor and delivery," he wrote, "the increasing number of women postponing first pregnancies can look forward to excellent outcomes."

Young adults vulnerable to weight gain

CHICAGO (AP) — Young adults face the greatest risk of becoming fat, and black women are especially vulnerable, according to a decade-long study of nearly 10,000 people from age 24 to 74.

Women of both races were twice as likely as men to gain a lot of weight, and women from 25 to 44 years who began the study overweight gained the most weight of all subjects, researchers found.

Among both sexes, those ages 25 to 34 were most likely to experience a major weight gain, according to the study in this month's Archives of Internal Medicine, published by the Chicago-based American Medical Association.

The findings "suggest that among adults, those in their 20s should be in the primary target group for obesity prevention efforts," said the study, led by epidemiologist David Williamson of the nutrition division at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Prevention, rather than treatment, is the key because so many people have trouble losing weight, Williamson said by telephone.

He recommends "just regular sensible exercise, like walking," and eating a diet low in fat and high in fruits and vegetables.

Williamson noted that while women may be more likely to gain weight than men, previous research has found that men face a greater risk of developing weight-related problems such as heart disease and diabetes.

Women tend to carry excess weight in the buttocks and hips, while men's extra poundage usually is concentrated in the stomach area, nearer the heart and other vital organs and thus more likely to cause problems, he said.

Among women 25- to 34-years-old, blacks were 40 percent more likely than whites to gain a lot of weight, Williamson's study found. For women from 35 to 44, blacks were 80 percent more likely to face a major weight gain, the researchers found.

As many as one-third of the 9,862 subjects were overweight when the study began.

Women ages 25 to 44 years who began the study overweight gained the most weight of all subjects.

Researchers defined a major weight gain as an increase of about 20 percent, or an estimated 30 pounds for a person of average height.

The findings (of the decade-long study) "suggest that among adults, those in their 20s should be in the primary target group for obesity prevention efforts."

Among all women ages 25 to 44 who were overweight at the start, 14.2 percent experienced a major weight gain, compared with 5.6 percent among men of the same age.

Among women of that age group who were of normal weight when the monitoring began, 6.2 percent gained a lot of weight, compared with 2.9 percent among men.

After age 55, weight levels in men and women studied began declining.

The researchers did not attempt to explain the weight-gain differences among women, men and blacks, Williamson said.

"Factors related to the excess risk of major weight gain that may be different in men and women include childbearing, diet, physical activity, and patterns of morbidity and mortality," the researchers wrote.

But they added, "The question of why women in the United States are at substantially greater risk of major weight gain during adulthood than men warrants further study."

Although women tend to live longer than men, they also tend to suffer more illnesses, which can affect activity and eating levels, Williamson said.

Black men were not studied individually because too few of them participated in the study, he said.

By Jean Carper

Variations in Oat Bran Effectiveness

Oat bran can lower cholesterol, declares a new study from Syracuse University. But how well it works varies among individuals, says researcher Dr. Wendy Demark-Wahnefried.

Carper

Her study of 71 men and women with high cholesterol found that a low-fat diet as well as 1.7 ounces a day of ordinary oat bran or 1.5 daily ounces of cold oat-bran cereal all reduced cholesterol about the same — an average 10 percent to 17 percent.

Much, but not all, of the decrease from oats may have come from substituting oat bran for fat in the diet, she said.

In some individuals, oat bran made an enormous difference, driving cholesterol down 80 to 100 points. So did a low-fat diet. But in others, neither regimen worked. For example, 27 percent on the low-fat diet and 33 percent on plain oat bran still had cholesterol higher than 90 percent of Americans their age.

The message, says Demark-Wahnefried, is that oat bran is not, as many people think, a universal cholesterol cure-all, but neither is a low-fat diet. Nevertheless, both work in many cases. "If it works for you, use it," she advises.

Olive Oil vs. Blood Pressure

It's looking better than ever that olive oil can lower both systolic (higher number) and diastolic blood pressure. Scientists think olive oil works because most of its fat is from monounsaturated-type fatty acids that are chemically unique.

At Stanford Medical School, a few years ago, a study of 76 middle-aged men with high blood pressure concluded that the amount of monounsaturated fat in 3 tablespoons of olive oil a day could be expected to lower systolic pressure about nine points and diastolic six points.

In a recent Dutch study, eating high amounts of olive oil drove blood pressure down slightly even in those with normal blood pressure.

The latest such evidence: A major analysis of the diets of nearly 5,000 Italians noted that those who ate the most olive oil had lower blood pressure by three or four points, especially men.

The study also suggested, as do others, that cutting down on saturated-type animal and dairy fat may also depress blood pressure. For example, among the 5,000 Italians, those who ate lots of butter had higher blood pressure.

Mom's Cancer Legacy?

There's some scary news from animal labs suggesting that pregnant women who eat high-fat diets might pass on a greater risk of cancer to their daughters.

Bruce E. Walker, at Michigan State University in East Lansing, reared female mice from sexual maturity on diets varying in fat from 6 percent of calories to 49 percent. Then he observed their offspring.

Fully half the daughters of mice that ate high-fat diets developed cancers of the breast, ovary, uterus and pituitary gland. This was five times the expected rate.

Furthermore, to Walker's surprise, such female offspring were much more apt to develop reproductive cancers than mice whose mothers had been given the drug DES during pregnancy. DES is a well-known cancer-inducer in female offspring.

Perhaps, theorizes Walker, the high-fat diet meddles with the growing fetus' hypothalmus, setting the stage for the release of hormones later in life that promote such cancers. Walker sees "no justification for high-fat diets during pregnancy."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will find the strength you need to make a go of a special project. Share the bounty with those who have stayed by your side through thick and thin. Career changes in July will increase your earnings. You will be able to do something you have planned for a long time. September brings you a chance to go back and do something differently. A romantic relationship deepens. Take advantage of an unexpected opportunity to travel for business or pleasure.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Not seeing is not believing for many people. Put on a convincing demonstration for any doubters in the crowd. This is no time to act reckless in finance or romance. Slow down.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Better cash management is the key to greater financial security. Get your spending under control. Stop hiding something. Your offspring deserve to know the truth. Guard your valuables.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Financial servies tailored to your needs will help you build savings. Conduct a careful investigation before making a financial commitment. A career decision is best postponed. Romance requires time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Given your track record, there should be no question that you will succeed once you land a coveted assignment. Do your homework diligently. You want to be ready when opportunity knocks.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A customized approach wins plaudits from your clients or friends. Guarantee a quick decision by following all the rules and meeting a deadline. Call home frequently when traveling. Nurture close relationships.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Changing times mean good times for you. Go with the flow. All your planning was worth it. New career and financial gains are featured. A record-breaking effort means higher profits.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A scholarship or grant could still be possible for a deserving student. Those who excel in math and science get good news. A family gathering is a huge success. Past grievances are forgotten.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Buy things for your home that express how you want to live. Those looking for traditional furniture could find a real bargain. Take an afternoon nap if you feel your energy flagging.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Set a larger share of your income aside for creature comforts. Take advantage of travel that may open new doors of opportunity. Logic helps you solve a domestic problem. Think!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Expand your repertoire and people with wealth and power will help your career. You may want to work with several financial backers. A special project brings you and your loved ones closer together.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A tailored look impresses conservative buyers or clients. A friend could be entirely off-base. Rely on your own intuition and you won't go wrong. Romance brings a rich new dimension to your life.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A scholarly talk gains the audience you want. Your financial fortunes improve, thanks to a once-in-a-lifetime deal. Family differences could slow progress. Encourage intelligent compromises.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West

4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ◇

Among our least favorite partners are habitual falsecarders. On defense, every hand becomes an adventure because we cannot trust any card partner plays. However, there are some situations where a defensive falsecard cannot hurt; indeed, it might even be mandatory to protect a holding. This example is from last year's World Team Championship.

With two four-card majors, North routinely checked for a 4-4 fit over partner's two-no-trump opening bid. When the heart fit was located, North opted for the suit contract because of his ruffing value in clubs.

West's normal lead of the ten of diamonds was taken in the closed hand and declarer led a trump to the queen. West produced the six and, had East routinely followed with the deuce, declarer would probably have continued with the king of hearts since, if both cards were honest, West's six was more likely to be a singleton. However, East made the obligatory falsecard of the seven!

Declarer knew one of his opponents was trying to pull a fast one, but he had no idea which. In any event, he elected to continue with a heart to the ace and as a result lost a trump trick in addition to two spades and a club.

Despite East's excellent defense, declarer should not have committed himself in trumps until he knew the fate of the club finesse. If it fails, he needs to ruff a club on the board and will not be able to pick up the trumps if West started with four unless declarer takes a deep position. Therefore, he should have led a club to the queen at trick three. When West wins the king, declarer takes any return, ruffs a club in dummy and the trump position clarifies itself when the king of trumps is cashed.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Miss America Debbye Turner has agreed not to sing Christian rap songs to public school children, a pageant official says.

Turner

The decision follows a complaint Feb. 12 by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith in New York, said pageant director Leonard Horn.

Jeffrey Sinensky, civil rights director for the league, said Wednesday that pageant officials satisfied questions his organization raised after seeing a newspaper article in Detroit about Miss Turner's appearance at a public school.

"She delivered an overt Christian message in terms of Jesus Christ being the truth, light and way," Sinensky.

Miss Turner, a veterinary student from Missouri, has been a born-again Christian since she was 7.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lynne Cox, who swam the Bering Strait between the Soviet Union and United States in 1987, plans to swim a river from East to West Berlin in a symbolic act of reunification.

The 10- to 15-mile swim across the Spree River will be attempted May 18-20, Ms. Cox, 33, of Los Alamitos, Calif., said Wednesday.

She said her goal is to "symbolically link the two Germanys."

In swimming the Bering Strait from the United States' Little Diomede Island to the Soviet Union's Big Diomede Island, Ms. Cox endured water as cold as 38 degrees. The islands are 2.7 miles apart, but currents forced her to swim at least four miles.

Koop

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — Former Surgeon General C. Everett Koop has joined the advisory board of Trevor's Campaign for the Homeless.

The campaign is the brainchild of 11-year-old Trevor Ferrell, who in 1983 began handing out blankets to people sleeping on the streets. The program has expanded with volunteers delivering food and clothing to the homeless in 16 cities nationwide.

Koop served as surgeon in chief of Children's Hospital in Philadelphia from 1948 until 1981, when he was sworn in as surgeon general. His appointment to the homeless campaign was announced Tuesday.

Davis, 64, was released from Cedars-Sinai Medical Center on Tuesday.

"The initial chemotherapy has been completed. His spirits are up and he continues to fight," said spokeswoman Susan Reynolds.

Davis was diagnosed as having throat cancer in September and was forced to drop out of a concert tour with Liza Minnelli and Frank Sinatra so he could undergo radiation treatment.

Ms. Reynolds said no further treatments were planned. "Right now the doctors want him to concentrate on building his strength," she said.

Lehmann

LONDON (AP) — Rosamond Lehmann, whose novels of love, betrayal and family rivalries were critically acclaimed from the 1920s to the 1950s, died Monday. She was 89.

The cause of death was not disclosed.

Her first novel, "Dusty Answer," won immediate fame for the young author when it was published in 1927.

Other books included "A Note of Music" in 1930, "Invitation to the Waltz" in 1932, "The Weather in the Streets" in 1936 and "The Ballad and the Source" in 1944.

Nolan

CHICAGO (AP) — Larry "Big Twist" Nolan, who rose to international acclaim as the leader of the Chicago-based rhythm and blues band Big Twist and the Mellow Fellows, died Wednesday of heart failure. He was 53.

Nolan sang and played drums for the original Mellow Fellows band in the 1950s. He also backed James Brown, Big Joe Turner, Little Milton and other performers on the "chitlin' circuit," playing clubs from East St. Louis to Cairo in southern Illinois.

In the early 1970s, Nolan founded a new Mellow Fellows band with two students at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale. They recorded four albums.

Teen's conviction overturned

DALLAS (AP) — A state appeals court set aside the conviction of a teen-ager who has been illegally confined in an adult prison for four years.

Dallas County prosecutors said Wednesday they are reviewing the case to determine if they can certify Luan Van Hoang, a Vietnamese youth, who records show was only 13 when he was convicted of armed robbery in 1986, can stand trial as an adult.

"It's difficult for us to determine, or anyone else, how old this guy really is," First Assistant District Attorney Norm Kinne.

"Really, right now, my heart's beating," Luan said. "I'm really happy that the Texas system does its job right. I'm really happy I have a chance to get home and be with my family."

Luan had been sentenced to 38 years in prison following his conviction in connection with a series of gang robberies in the dallas area. He was tried as an adult after giving authorities a false name, Michael Nguyen, and a false age, 17, to avoid being returned to a juvenile home in California from which he escaped.

The Dallas newspaper reported Feb. 18 that Luan had been wrongfully sent to an adult prison since records show that his actual age was 13 at the time of his trial.

The appeals court ruled that District Judge Jack Hampton, who presided at Luan's trial, never acquired jurisdiction over Luan because he was a juvenile.

Prosecutors say their records show he was 16 at the time of the crime. He could have, at 16, been certified to stand trial as an adult.

It could take Luan several months to get his freedom because in addition to the conviction that was overturned, he also is serving three 10-year sentences assessed in plea bargains on companion robbery cases.

Defense lawyer Bruce Anton said that the four years Luan spent in prison should qualify him for release on the three remaining cases.

"He ought to be released in the next six to eight weeks, and maybe sooner," Anton said.

Janice Warder, chief of the Juvenile Division of the District Attorney's office, said if Luan is found to have been 15 at the time of his trial, he could be retried in juvenile court. If convicted, the maximum sentence would keep him in confinement only until his 21st birthday.

Warder added that if it is determined that he was 16 at the time of the crime, he could be certified as an adult and be tried again. If convicted, he would face a total of 38 years in prison.

Immigration records indicate that Luan, who was born in Vietnam and came to the United States with his family in the early 1980s, was born in 1972. That would make him 13 when he was tried.

Luan was sent to a juvenile home in California after he was arrested for auto theft and joy riding. He escaped from the home in 1985 and came to Texas.

BEE SMART

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through March 30. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

antique (noun or adj.) — To qualify as an antique, U.S. Custom laws say, an item must be at least 100 years old. However, an antique may also be valued because it is beautifully made or serves as a reminder of another time. The word comes from the Latin word, "antiquus," and the word,"ante" which means "before." Antiques can include almost everything from old kerosene lamps, candle snuffers, farm tools, advertising signs and automobiles, to porcelain, rugs and books. Many families preserve their heritage by passing prized antique possessions on from generation to generation.

Principal back after suspension

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston school officials reinstated an elementary principal after he agreed that spanking a special education student was a mistake.

LaSalle Donnell, principal of Douglass Elementary School, returned to school Wednesday after being suspended with pay for two days.

Donnell, who is eligible to retire in six months, admitted he spanked the student after watching him shove other children.

Donnell reportedly used a belt to spank the 10-year-old student. HISD policy prohibits spanking a student with a belt or anything but a paddle, and it is against federal regulations to spank a special education student.

The principal said he recognized the prohibitions that existed but had permission from the child's mother to discipline the student.

Linda Curry, the mother, agreed that the principal had her permission to use such punishment to discipline her son.

Ms. Curry helped organize the classroom boycott Monday by more than 150 students. Several parents also were on hand to protest Donnell's suspension and praised the principal as a strict but beloved father figure in the impoverished southeast Houston neighborhood.

Chlordane ban sought

AUSTIN (AP) — The state's top water official has called for a prohibition on the use of the pesticide chlordane, which was once used to kill fire ants and termites, but has since been banned from the market because it accumulates in the aquatic food chain.

Texas Water Commission Chairman Buck J. Wynne III said Wednesday he has asked the Agricultural Resources Protection Authority to prohibit the use of chlordane or any pesticide containing chlordane as an active ingredient.

The authority was created by the Legislature last year to deal with pesticide regulation. The panel will consider the recommendation March 27.

Chlordane has not been commercially available since 1988, but many individuals still have supplies of the pesticide that they purchased before the ban on sales, Wynne said.

"We do need to make it clear that there's nothing illegal about possessing chlordane. We just want to inform the public that it is not environmentally safe to use," Wynne said.

Anti-drug spending listed

AUSTIN (AP) — Nearly $500 million will be spent in 1990-91 by Texas state agencies on anti-drug measures — including incarceration of drug offenders, the state comptroller reports.

But excluding prison costs, nearly three-fourths of that spending will be funded through federal grants, according to a published report.

Upset-minded teams hope to crash party

Associated Press

NCAA tournament time means everyone is in an upset state of mind.

So who will pull it this year? Murray State? East Tennessee? Coppin State? Towson State? Southwest Missouri?

Last season, Middle Tennessee did the trick, surprising Florida State in the first round. So did Siena, stunning Stanford. South Alabama did the same to Alabama and, in the big one that got away, Princeton came within a point of disposing of Georgetown.

Starting today, teams that basked in the spotlight all season will try to fend off those hiding in the shadows.

"Ball State? I think I heard somebody say it's in Indiana," Oregon State's All-American guard Gary Payton said. "Isn't that right?"

Ball State, which beat Pittsburgh in the opening round last season, was matched against Oregon State today in the first round of the West Regional. The Cardinals, from Muncie, Ind., are 24-6 and have the second-best record in Division I in the last two years (53-9), trailing only La Salle's 55-7.

One of Ball State's tougher victories this season was against Coppin State, a commuter school from Baltimore with an enrollment of 2,000 and twice as many women as men.

Coppin State (26-6) also won at Maryland, although it might be in bigger trouble Friday against No. 6 Syracuse (24-6) in the Southeast Regional. The Eagles, though, aren't worrying.

"What do we have to lose?" Coppin State's Ron Mitchell said. "That's what it's all about, making a name for yourself. This is fun.

"This has been a teacher's college. Most alumni have been women," he said. "We don't have the pressures most school have of alumni banging on the doors."

Syracuse, which lost by a basket in the 1987 championship game, has had its share of struggles in the NCAA tournament. The Orangemen barely got past unheralded Colorado State in the second round last season and, in 1988, hit the skids against Thode Island.

"We've had our share of tough games against smaller schools in the tournament," senior Stephen Thompson said.

"It doesn't really matter who you're playing. You don't look at the names when you're playing people now," he said. "Everybody is here for a reason, because they beat some good teams or they won a tournament. You know that."

Murray State (21-8) lacks the reputation of its first-round opponent in the Southeast, Big Ten champion and No. 4 Michigan State (26-5). But Ohio Valley Conference teams, and Murray State is that league's champion, have done plenty of damage in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

Last season, Middle Tennesse stopped Florida State. The year before, Murray State upset North Carolina State. In 1987, Austin Peay dumped Illinois and, back in 1982, Middle Tennessee wrecked Kentucky.

"We're not marking this one up in the win column before it's played, I guarantee you," Michigan State coach Jud Heathcote said. "We've looked at the track record of the OVC teams in past NCAA tournaments and we don't want to be another victim."

Tonight, East Tennessee State (27-6) will try to sneak up on No. 9 Georgia Tech (24-6) in the Southeast.

East Tennessee won both the Southern Conference regular season and tournament titles with the same lineup that lost 72-71 to Oklahoma in the NCAAs last year.

First the NCAA gives him Loyola Marymount, those run-and-gunners from the West Coast. Arkansas was so exhausted after winning 120-101 last year they fell 93-74 to Louisville in the second round.

Tonight the seventh-ranked Hogs get the opposite, those 45-second clock milkers, those 12 passes-a-possession Princeton Tigers of the Ivy League.

At least the Razorbacks (26-4) shouldn't get tired in their 7:07 meeting with the slowdown Tigers (20-6). In other first round games of the NCAA Midwest regional at the Special Events Center today, No. 1 ranked Oklahoma (26-4) met Towson State (18-12) at 12:07 p.m, Southwest Missouri (22-6) faced North Carolina (19-12) at 2:37 p.m, and Illinois (21-7) met Dayton (21-9) at 9:37 p.m.

Princeton coach Pete Carril stretched the patience of the Georgetown Hoyas to the limit last year, losing 50-49 in a game John Thompson said he was lucky to win.

"We're going to play as hard as we can and as smart as we can," Carril said.

Towson State, making its first appearance in the NCAA tournament, has the lowest power rating of the 64-team field.

Oddsmakers have made the East Coast Conference champions 29-point underdog to the Sooners.

"We know what everyone is saying, they're counting us out against Oklahoma," said senior foward Kennel Jones. "That's what they said about Buster Douglas when he went against Mike Tyson, too. We're not apologizing for being here."

Jones even issued a challenge to the basketball Goliaths from Oklahoma: "We're going to play our running style of basketball and see who's in the best shape."

Towson State coach Terry Truax said he could understand why the Tigers were such heavy underdogs.

"They (the Sooners) are the No. 1 team in the nation and we have the lowest power rating in the field," he said."It makes sense to me. In fact, it sounds reasonable."

Oklahoma players aren't sure what city (a suburb of Baltimore) or state (Maryland) Towson State of Baltimore, MD., is from.

"I don't know what state they are from," said Sooner William Davis.

"That's allright because some of our players are sure where Oklahoma is," Truax countered.

Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs was trying to quieten down all talk about a Sooner first round rout.

"I didn't come to town on a turnip wagon," Tubbs said."I know what's going on. First round games are always the toughest. Look what happened to us against East Ten-

Ray returns for Bulldog thinclads

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland High's boys begin the track weekend Friday with a trip to Levelland for the Lobo Relays while the other three head for Snyder and the Canyon Reef Relays Saturday.

The Bulldogs will probably go with the sprint debut of Albert Ray, who was a Region I qualifier a year ago. Ray has run on the sprint relay, but hasn't run in an individual event since joining the team late from an extended basketball season.

Ray said he was ready to run the sprints at the West Texas Relays, but MHS coach Johnny Williams decided to keep him out one more week.

Meanwhile, the Bulldogs hope to gain more progress from Chris Spratt in the shot put and John Braun in the discus. Spratt is nearing the 52-foot mark and may be ready to soar in that event. Braun, too, seems ready to start climbing in distance after a 151-0 last week.

Both had second place finishes in the West Texas Relays last week and those were the top events for all of Midland's entrants.

The Lee girls and boys and MHS girls hit Snyder Saturday with hopes of getting back in the win column after failing to do so in the WT event last week.

Lee sophomore sprinter Brett Sullivan, who could be the next notable Rebel running back in football, had a third place in the 200 last week and a fifth in the 100. He isn't ready to challenge a Dallas Cowan of Odessa High, but his times have been impressive for a sophomore.

Another Lee sophomore, K.C. Jones, appears ready to break the 50-foot mark in the shot put after coming close in a third place finish in Odessa last week. He can only improve.

Lee's Mary Ann Isom is also looking to return to the winner's circle in the discus and back to

Chaps shake off injuries, OC

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

The Midland College women entered Wednesday's dual tennis match at Odessa College with nagging injuries and without Allison Bradford.

But the Chaparrals would not allow their No. 1 national ranking to be swept away by the Wranglers or by the 40-plus mile-per-hour winds of the day. Instead, they posted a 6-3 triumph and moved to 6-0 for the season.

Bradford - an important cog in both singles and doubles - had long since been excused from the match to attend a wedding in Utah. Meanwhile, MC's top player Janneke Garos, ranked No. 1 nationally among junior colleges, was just coming back from a sprained knee.

Add the tendon problems that have recently plagued the left hand of Maria Jimenez and it's obvious why MC tennis coach Joe Williams smiled as his charges won four of six singles matches, then took two of three doubles events to secure the victory.

Brown becomes Attila the Coach

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The regular season was a holiday for Louisiana State compared to preparing for the NCAA tournament.

Before the Tigers resumed practice, having lost three of their last four games, Coach Dale Brown passed around a black lunch bucket. Brown then explained what kind of person carries a black lunch bucket. He illustrated his point with three grueling practices, a definite departure from how he has worked his team this season.

"Compared to my dad (Brown) was kind of nice," Tigers freshman Shaquille O'Neal said. "My dad was like, 'SON! IT'S EIGHT O'-CLOCK. TIME TO GO TO SCHOOL.

"So, with Coach, I was waiting for him to get on us because we were messing up. The last week he got on us good. Real good."

The change in Brown's approach has the Tigers (22-8) keyed up to play Villanova (18-14) tonight in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

"He probably was too easy on us at the beginning," Louisiana State sophomore Chris Jackson said of Brown. "But the last three days he came out more aggressive and that's picked us up a notch. When he comes out more aggressive, it makes us more aggressive."

Brown said he is to blame for Louisiana State's problems. By starting four sophomores and a freshman, he tried to go easy on them.

"These guys are probably too nice because I've been carrying an Easter basket rather than a lunch bucket," Brown said. "I can't tell you who is going to win this game, but whoever does win will leave with band-aids. We're coming to play."

The Tigers will pose a big problem for Villanova. Make that two big problems — O'Neal, a 7-foot-2 freshman, and the 7-foot Stanley Roberts.

"Hopefully playing against the guys in the Big East, guys like Rony Seikaly, Alonzo Mourning and Derrick Coleman, gives me a little bit of an edge," said Villanova center Tom Greis.

Greis and Rodney Taylor both were starters on the Villanova team that made it to the final eight two years ago.

"Tom and I were sophomores and we really just rode the coattails of the older guys like Doug West and Mark Plansky," Taylor said. "We were outsiders looking in. The young guys on this team are a lot like that. They don't know what an NCAA tournament is all about."

Louisiana State-Villanova is the featured game at the Thompson-Boling Arena on the University of Tennessee campus. The four-game card finishes with Georgia Tech (24-6) playing East Tennessee State (27-6).

The bracket's afternoon session pitted Big Ten champion Michigan (26-5) against Murray State (21-8), and Houston (25-7) against UC Santa Barbara (20-8).

Tagliabue continues to take charge

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Dress the new NFL commissioner in a striped topper, paste a beard on his face and aim the poster at the problems facing the NFL. Then caption it "Paul Tagliabue Wants You!!" and watch things jump.

Tagliabue's whirlwind makeover of the league he took over in late October continued Wednesday when he took aim at two major trouble spots — steroids and the lack of a labor agreement. He also took a little time on the side to try to lessen the gap between coaches and officials.

Steroids he attacked head-on, implementing a tough new policy calling for year-round random testing.

"Most experts agree that the way to eliminate steroids is to test on an unscheduled basis," Tagliabue said in announcing the new plan, which replaces one instituted last year by his predecessor, Pete Rozelle. That plan called for tests only in training camp and resulted in 13 four-week supsensions.

This one, developed with the aid of Atlanta Falcons guard Bill Fralic, an outspoken opponent of the body-building substances, calls for tests in training camp and four times during the regular season as well as in the offseason. Players will be selected at random.

"If a player knows he's going to be tested, he'll have to stay off them," Tagliabue said.

As for labor, the commissioner intensified his effort to breach the 2½-year gap between the owners and the NFL Players Association by appointing a new committee of working club executives, rather than owners, to tackle the problem.

At the same time, he disclosed he met three times with Gene Upshaw, the NFLPA's executive director, in an effort to set a framework for a new labor contract by settling the antitrust suit filed by the union at the end of the 24-day strike in 1987.

He also oversaw meetings between a group of five officials and the 27 head coaches present, the first such meetings ever. "I think we answered a lot of questions about issues that separate us," said referee Jerry Markbreit, the head of the officials' delegation.

But Tagliabue's impact, which was made evident at the start of this week's meeting with the new $3.64 billion, four-year television contract he helped negotiate, was most evident in the new steroid policy.

Venerable NIT continues tonight

Associated Press

Massachusetts coach John Calipari says his Minutemen have nothing to lose when they make their first National Invitation Tournament appearance since 1977 against Maryland tonight.

"I don't see how we can possibly beat them, but we will be there," Calipari said.

In other first-round NIT games tonight, Baylor is at Mississippi State, Louisiana Tech is at Vanderbilt, Wisconsin-Green Bay is at Southern Illinois, Stanford is at Hawaii, Tulsa is at Oklahoma State and Southern University is at Fordham.

The 32-team tournament began Wednesday with three tight games. Penn State edged Marquette 57-54, Tennessee nipped Memphia State 73-71 and New Orleans slipped by James Madison 78-74.

The opening round will be completed Friday night with Holy Cross at Rutgers, Oregon at New Mexico, Bowling Green at Cincinnati, Kent State at St. Louis, Creighton at DePaul and Long Beach State at Arizona State.

Maryland, meanwhile, wishes it was playing in another tournament. The Terrapins improved to 18-13 from last season's 9-20 mark and had hoped for a NCAA tournament bid.

"The reasons don't matter, we're not in the NCAAs. ... I've come to terms with it," Maryland coach Gary Williams said. "There is no great satisfaction in going to the NIT. We wanted to go to the NCAA. We put ourselves in a position to get there, but we didn't get it done and that was disappointing."

The NIT will be Maryland's last postseason appearance until the 1993 season because of NCAA sanctions announced last week for recruiting violations. The university has appealed the sanctions.

"Yes, it's disappointing because I really wanted to play in the NCAAs," said 6-foot-9 senior center Tony Massenburg, who led the Terps in rebounding at 10 a game and is second in scoring at 17.7 points.

Like the Terrapins, Massachusetts had a better year than had been expected, posting its first winning record since 1978. The Minutemen, 10-18 last season, are 17-13 after losing 53-51 to Temple in the Atlantic 10 tournament final on the Owls' home floor.

"We're going down to their court, with their fans and their officials. It's going to be difficult for us," Calipari said. "But we've been underdogs in just about every game this year. You just go in, play hard and play loose, and see what happens. We've got nothing to lose."

Tennessee 73, Memphis State 71

At Memphis, Allan Houston scored 20 points and Jay Price hit four three throws in the final 38 seconds to give the Volunteers a measure of revenge against Memphis State. Tennessee (16-13) was beaten 91-72 by Memphis State earlier in the season.

New Orleans 78, J. Madison 74

Penn State 57, Marquette 54

At State College, Pa., DeRon Hayes scored four of Penn State's final five points and grabbed an offensive rebound in the final minute to seal the Nittany Lions' victory over Marquette.

Penn State (22-8) was down 51-45 with seven minutes remaining in the game before Hayes sparked a comeback. Hayes finished with 10 points.

Purdue enjoys first-round site

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Although a 2-point loss to Michigan State cost Purdue a share of the Big Ten Conference championship, the "consolation prize" has eased the pain.

The consolation is the No. 2 seed in the NCAA Midwest Regional and a first-round tournament assignment to the Hoosier Dome, an hour's drive from the West Lafayette campus.

"I hadn't thought much about being sent to the Hoosier Dome, because every time I think we're going to do something it doesn't turn out that way," said Coach Gene Keady, who had to start previous NCAA tournaments from such places as Tampa, Memphis, South Bend, Baton Rouge and Syracuse and only once made it past the second game.

"I haven't been concerned about where we'd play or who we would play. We're just happy to be in the tournament," Keady said.

Purdue (21-7), which missed the tourney last year due to its first losing season since 1966, plays 15th-seeded Northeast Louisiana (22-7) Friday. In other first-round games at the same site, Georgetown (23-6) plays Texas Southern (19-11), Xavier of Ohio (26-4) faces Kansas State (17-14) and Georgia (20-8) meets Texas (21-8).

Purdue, whose best tourney finish was runner-up to UCLA in 1969, led the Big Ten most of the season, surprising most of the pollsters who picked the Boilermakers as low as seventh in the conference after last year's disappointing record. But 6-foot-9 muscleman Stephen Scheffler, who led the nation in field goal percentage and was named the Big Ten's most valuable player, keyed a turnaround.

"We always work to make our players better, and we work very hard on fundamentals," Keady said. "We think our philosophy is sound and we have good kids. So when you have that combination, you know you are going to get better."

Scheffler, who shot 73 percent from the field and 79 percent from the foul line, led Purdue with a 16.5-point average.

The two other senior starters, guard Tony Jones and forward Ryan Berning, averaged 14.9 and 8.7, respectively.

Northeast Louisiana, which lost the first game in each of its two previous tourney appearances, won the Southland Conference championship but hasn't received much respect, Coach Mike Vining said.

"Purdue is very much like us in that respect. To start the year, they were not picked very high," Vining said. "They had to something to prove all year long."

The Indians are led in scoring at 16.5 a game by a 26-year-old guard, Fred Thompson, who spent three years in the Army and two years at a junior college before coming to Northeast Louisiana.

"He's very mature," Vining said.

Georgetown, ranked No. 5 in the nation but seeded third in the Midwest behind Oklahoma and Purdue, is the only former NCAA champion assigned to the Hoosier Dome. The Hoyas finished third in the Big East Conference.

Georgetown won the tournament in 1984 and was runner-up in 1982 and 1985. The Hoyas are led by senior guard Mark Tillmon at 19.9 points a game and 6-10 sophomore Alonzo Mourning at 16.7.

"We won't be intimidated," Texas Southern coach Robert Moreland said. "We might get our brains beaten out, but we won't be intimidated."

It will be the first NCAA tourney appearance for the Tigers, second in the Southwestern Athletic Conference.

Their top scorer is 6-7 forward Charles Price at 9.2 points a game. Their tallest player is 6-9 Fred West, who will have to contend with Mourning.

NAIA

Last year competing against the likes of Oklahoma and North Carolina in NCAA Division I, the Titans were 8-20. This year, doing battle with such programs as Lemoyne-Owen and Fort Hays State, they're 35-5.

"This is the way basketball is meant to be played," Coach Ken Trickey said Wednesday night following a 93-79 victory over King's College in the first round of the NAIA Tournament. "This is fun."

Trickey, who has also coached at Iowa State and taken teams as far as the quarterfinals of the NIT, admitted many of his players pouted when the decision was made to de-emphasize basketball and leave the NCAA.

"It bothered them a little bit when we dropped down. But none of them left," he said. "Now they like it better because this is what basketball really is. It's a game, and it's supposed to be fun."

Vincent Knowles scored six of Oral Roberts' first eight points of the second half as the Titans went on an 18-5 run to put away the college from Briar Cliff Manor, N.Y.

"We really didn't play very well," Trickey said. "We looked slow. But we'll get it back together. We'd better, because there are some fine teams in the field."

"One advantage we have over some teams is the arena we play in. It's a lot like Kemper Arena here," Trickey said.

Associated Press

It was a victory that the Philadelphia 76ers wanted, although it proved to be costly.

"It was a huge win for us," Coach Jim Lynam said after the 76ers defeated the Los Angeles Lakers 116-110. "They are the best in basketball. They have the best record."

Charles Barkley had 35 points, 19 rebounds and six assists as Philadelphia snapped a three-game losing streak Wednesday and ended the Lakers' six-year masters over the 76ers.

"Tonight we caught a good team that is on their way to be a great team," Lakers coach Pat Riley said. "They were in a desperate situation and came through."

The 76ers suffered a blow with 3:04 left in the game when Rick Mahorn, after blocking a Los Angeles shot, collided with Barkley and crumpled to the floor. Mahorn strained his lower back and sustained contusions to the left hip and will be lost for about a week.

"We really needed this game," Barkley said of Philadelphia's first victory over the Lakers since Dec. 7, 1984.

Johnny Dawkins tied his career high with 30 points and Hershey Hawkins had 24 as the Sixers held off a final-period rally by the Lakers.

"Their guards (Dawkins and Hawkins) just killed us," Riley said. "We just let them get confidence outside. We focused on Charles too much, and Johnny and Hersey just drilled us."

After Hawkins sank two free thows to give the 76ers a 111-106 lead, Magic Johnson, who scored 34 points, hit a driving layup to pull the Lakers within three points with 24 seconds remaining. Dawkins missed two free throws, but he grabbed a rebound of a Johnson miss and was fouled with 15 seconds to go. This time, he made both shots.

Barkley then stole the inbounds pass and converted a three-point play, sealing the victory.

"Dawkins and the gang shot the ball well," Johnson said. "We were right there at halftime, but they had a big third quarter. The only thing I can say is that we had our chance and didn't convert. When you are on the road you have to convert."

Heat 113, Clippers 108, OT

Miami rookie Sherman Douglas scored nine of his season-high 33 points in overtime and made a key steal as the Heat defeated the Clippers for the fifth straight time. The victory ended a nine-game road losing streak for the second-year expansion Heat, which won for the 15th time this season, equaling its victory total of last season.

Rookie Glen Rice added 24 points and Kevin Edwards 21 for Miami. Danny Manning scored 28 points and Winston Garland 20 for the Clippers.

Mavericks 113, Celtics 102

Sam Perkins scored 30 points and Roy Tarpley 25 as Dallas defeated Boston for only the third time in 20 games. Herb Williams had 20 points and Rolando Blackman 18 for the Mavericks, who have won 11 of their last 12 home games.

Kevin McHale scored 30 points and Larry Bird 21 for Boston.

Suns 138, Nuggets 108

A decisive third-period run helped Phoenix defeat the Denver Nuggets for the Suns' 18th consecutive home victory. The win was sparked by Tom Chambers, who had 31 points, and Kevin Johnson, with 29.

Dan Majerle added 20 points and Eddie Johnson 19 for the Suns, who won for the seventh straight time overall. Denver's lost was its most lopsided ever against Phoenix.

Sonics 103, Hornets 100

Jim Farmer scored a career-high 26 points, including six free throws in the final minute, as Seattle handed Charlotte its seventh straight loss. Farmer's three-point basket snapped an 82-82 tie with 8:05 left, giving the Sonics the lead for good.

Seniors seek to keep San Antonio tourney

He hasn't won on the Senior PGA Tour since taking the Vantage at the Dominion tournament here last year. He's also hungry for some of that San Antonio food that pleases the pocketbook as well as the palate.

"This is the most well-received tournament we have," Mowry said. "The players are the ones who get behind a tournament, and we want a tournament in San Antonio. We enjoy going to a nice restaurant and not spending $100 on a steak."

Mowry needed a record score to win last year's tournament, shooting three consecutive rounds in the 60s to finish at 201, one shot better than Gay Brewer. Mowry put together rounds of 66, 67 and 68 over the 6,814-yard, par-72 course at The Dominion Country Club.

The task of winning the tournament again was made a bit easier for Mowry when the senior tour's hottest player, three-time winner Lee Trevino, opted to use this week to rest before embarking on a trip to Japan. Another pretty fair senior newcomer, Jack Nicklaus, isn't scheduled to begin playing in over-50 events for a couple weeks.

Also absent is Chi Chi Rodriguez, one of the tour's most popular players and the 1987 Dominion winner. He's spending the week with his wife celebrating their 25th wedding anniversary.

The Dominion course is reported in good shape, tournament director Tom Gaither said, and the only possible problem would be continuation of the rain that has pelted the area recently.

Kite touts Players tourney as new major

PGA

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — Tom Kite ranks the Players Championship as one of golf's "majors," right up there with the Masters, U.S. and British Opens and the PGA.

And it's not just because he scored the most significant victory of his career in this event a year ago.

"I said the same thing three years ago," Kite reminded after a final practice round for the tournament that got underway today.

"It has all the ingredients of a major, except history. And that's something you can't rush. The tournament just isn't old enough to have that history.

"It has everything else. It keeps growing in stature. With good players winning the title, that only helps it grow," Kite said.

There is, however, a little bit of a down side this year. Four major European players — Seve Ballesteros of Spain, Masters champ Nick Faldo of England, Bernhard Langer of West Germany and Ian Woosnam of Wales — bypassed the tournament.

"It would be nice if they were here," Kite said. "But the tournament doesn't have any particular one or two players to be successful. The game is bigger than any one player."

And, he said, the loss was the Europeans', not the tournament's.

"I personally think they're making a mistake," he said. "You only have a chance to play in a limited number of majors in your career. It's a small number. If you don't take the opportunity to play when you can, you're just hurting yourself.

"One of the prerequisites of winning a tournament is that you enter. You can't win if you don't enter," he said.

Kite, of course, has fulfilled that prerequisite. And he got the word — actually, the lack of a word — from his old teacher, Harvey Pennick, that his game is ready for the test.

"He watched me hit about 15 putts and two drives," Kite said. "I looked at him. He didn't say anything. That means he didn't see anything wrong."

Kite said he actually may have benefitted from a rare occurance two weeks ago. He missed the cut at Doral and had the weekend off. It marked the first time since 1988 he'd failed to qualify for the final two rounds of a tournament.

"I went home, rested up a little, practiced a little," he said.

"I won the shootout a couple of days ago. That helped. I do like the golf course. I feel very good about my game. I'm playing well.

Swimmers travel to Dallas

Staff Report

DALLAS — The City of Midland Swim Team will send 25 athletes to the Texas Age Group Swimming Championships here March 16-18.

COM coach Brad Swendig said this year's group of qualifiers is the largest in his tenure at COM.

Stacy Fennell qualified for nine events in 13-14 girls; Clay Brown will swim in eight 13-14 boys events; and Cody Marcum is eligible for seven events in 10 and under boys.

Freestylists Carrie and Blake Henry return after state championship swims in 1989. Carrie was the long course state champion in the 50 freestyle, while brother Blake was the state champion in the 11-12 boys freestyle.

COM will also seek points from 13 relay teams entered this weekend, including two each in the 11-12 girls and 10 and under boys divisions.

Ware reported to be NFL-bound

HOUSTON (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner Andre Ware's future is in the National Football League, according to published reports.

The Houston Post quoted sources Wednesday as saying Ware had decided to seek the NFL's riches rather than return to the Cougars this season.

Houston Coach John Jenkins called the report premature but said a news conference could be called as soon as today for Ware to announced his plans.

Ware was unavailable for comment Wednesday but he told Jenkins he still had not made a decision.

The Post said the possibility of an entry-level wage scale being considered by the NFL was a major factor in Ware's decision.

"I truly believe it's still 50-50 with Andre," Hazard said. "I talk to Andre a lot and I really don't think he's decided."

Jenkins said he has no indication Ware has made a decision.

"It's premature to declare anything for Andre," Jenkins said. "There is a proper time and place to make the announcement either way and he's going to be the guy that will make the statement."

Ware established 25 NCAA records and led the Cougars to a 9-2 record last season before winning the Heisman Trophy. His records included 4,699 passing yards, 365 passes completed and 4.2 touchdowns per game.

Ware has been participating in the Cougars' spring drills and was scheduled to practice Wednesday but Jenkins cancelled the workout.

HOUSTON (AP) — Oilers owner Bud Adams wants the Texas Showdown at the Astrodome now that the facility has more seats for fans.

"We've been going north every year long enough," Adams said of the annual Oilers-Cowboys preseason matchup at Texas Stadium in Irving. "It's time the game came back south. Houston fans deserve to have the game in the Astrodome."

Twin Cities fills a void

Staff Report

The Twin Cities Speedway will be filling a void this weekend in the TIDA late model racing series with the TIDA-sanctioned 100-lap Super Stock race and the Lone Star Chevrolet 100 Pro Sedan event.

Usually, racers could be found at the Texas World Speedway in College Station for the Texas Grand Prix, but the past couple of seasons TWS owner Dick Conole has been unable to round up sufficient sponsors to keep the spring splurge successful.

This year, however, Neil Upchurch and the Texas International Drivers Association has set up this major pre-season race Saturday and Sunday at the Twin Cities ⅜-mile track, located on Highway 80 between Midland and Odessa.

Qualifying races at Twin Cities Speedway will be held Saturday from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. and is free to the public. Sunday's race day tickets are $8 for adults and $2 for children 11 and under. Sunday's time trials are at 10:30 a.m. and racing begins at 1 p.m.

Twin Cities has announced that it has received the largest field of super pro stocks in the history of the speedway with 30 entrants from Texas and Oklahoma. Seventeen entries have been pre-entered for the 50-lap Pro Sedans.

Also, the Sunday program will have local divisions of street stock, pure stock and all new mini stock races.

Staff Report

He used a four-wood on the 180-yard par-three for his first ace in 26 years. Witnesses were Doc Hanley and Pat Mackey.

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball owners and players are fighting over their old contract, instead of trying to negotiate a new one.

The sides in the bitter baseball negotiations did meet on Wednesday, but not to negotiate. They appeared before arbitrator George Nicolau to testify on the union's motion that owners be ordered to put $51.6 million in escrow as part of the collusion cases.

Management's lockout starts its fifth week today and the opening day of the regular season, scheduled for April 2, probably will be postponed on Friday. No negotiations are scheduled, although Commissioner Fay Vincent said the sides are talking by telephone.

"I'm sure each side is trying to figure out a compromise that it believes will make an agreement, make the deal," he said. "I just hope it doesn't take too long."

Kansas City owner Ewing Kauffman inflamed the situation further Wednesday when he said he may prefer no games at all is year.

"If they don't settle soon, from my viewpoint, it would be my nature to withdraw everything that's been offered and close the season down," Kauffman said during a news conference at Kansas City. "There comes a time when you cannot keep giving and giving and giving."

"I think it's Howard Rubenstein trying to scare players," Fehr said, referring to the public relations consultant for the Player Relations Committee.

Bill Murray and Dick Wagner of the commissioner's office sent a memorandum to clubs on Tuesday telling them that minor league teams could play in major league spring training ballparks.

The memorandum said that if major leaguers picket those games "under no circumstances, should club officials confront picketers."

"If there is a disturbance involving picketers, club officials should not become involved but should contact local police officials and Kevin Hallinan," baseball's director of security.

"Under the labor laws, minor league players have the right to refuse to cross a picket line, and therefore, clubs should make no effort to require players to cross," the memo said.

The union knew of no plans for playe. to picket those games. Only players on the 40-man roster of major league teams are in the union.

Analysis

Major league baseball is a bright patch in the rich tapestry that is the sport.

The owners and players can soil the patch, but they cannot unravel the tapestry.

George Steinbrenner, owner of the New York Yankees, talking recently about the dispute between the owners and players, said, "the thing is to get baseball to the American people."

Listen up, George. The American people will always have baseball, no matter what is done by you and the other Lords of the big-league game and the prima donnas who play it.

While the fields of greed will remain quiet past the scheduled major league opening on April 2, many fields of dreams are busy right now with college and high school teams.

Soon "Play ball!" will be heard at minor league parks, and throughout the summer men and boys will be swinging and hitting, pitching and catching, running and sliding in parks, sandlots and Little League fields all over America.

The business of baseball cannot sully the sport of baseball, although at least one Little League could feel the effects of the major league owners' lockout of the spring training camps.

Network won't offer advertising refunds

TV Sports

NEW YORK (AP) — Even though CBS and ESPN won't be televising baseball games, there'll be no refunds.

Baseball's four-year national television contracts — $1.06 billion with CBS and $400 million with ESPN — contain no provisions for refunding money for missed regular-season games, according to television officials and past and present baseball officials, all of whom spoke on the condition they not be identified.

CBS is scheduled to televise 16 regular-season games this year, starting with a split telecast on April 14 of the Chicago Cubs' game at Pittsburgh and the Los Angeles Dodgers at Houston.

"Any games that are missed, we will make up in subsequent years," Jeremy Handelman, CBS Sports vice president of program planning, said.

According to a source familiar with baseball finances, the television contracts with CBS and ESPN and the national radio contract with CBS total $345 million this year, with the television money providing more than 98 percent of the money.

Network and baseball sources say that approximately 80 percent of the CBS contract is for the league playoffs and the World Series. Without confirming the split, management negotiator Chuck O'Connor has cited the large postseason money as one of the reasons for the owners' lockout.

O'Connor has said that owners fear a midseason strike would place the World Series, and the CBS money, in jeopardy. According to a source involved in the CBS negotiations, the payments from the contract are made throughout the season in five 10 percent installements plus a 50 percent payment sometime near the end of the season.

Handelman would not confirm the details. Bryan Burns, the senior vice president for broadcasting of the commissioner's office, did not return telephone messages.

Oil prices continue seesawing

West Texas Intermediate jumped 16 cents in midmorning trading to $20.21 while the posted price remains at $19.00. Crude oil futures prices fell Wednesday amid concern about growing inventories in the nation's storage tanks, while gasoline and heating oil futures rallied.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the April contract for West Texas Intermediate, the main grade of U.S crude, lost 17 cents to settle at $20.05 a 42-gallon barrel. The contract lost 2 cents in the previous session.

May crude oil fell 7 cents to $20.32 a barrel and June ended 6 cents lower at $20.45 a barrel.

Analysts said a report by the American Petroleum Institute released after the close of trading on Tuesday showed a sharp increase in crude oil stocks. For the week ending March 9, crude oil supplies rose 6.9 million barrels to 350.8 million barrels, according to the report.

Meanwhile, gasoline got a lift from the API report, which showed a 417,000 barrel decrease in storage supplies last week to 6.3 million barrels.

The April contract for unleaded gasoline rose 0.98 cent to 55.85 cents a gallon, May surged 1.46 cents to 60.94 cents a gallon and June gained 0.82 cents to 61 cents.

Dollar mixed, gold drops

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mixed against other major foreign currencies in cautious early European trading today.

Gold prices were lower.

Traders said the dollar was higher against the yen on disappointment over Japan's unwillingness to raise interest rates, but was quiet against other currencies.

- 1.18 Canadian dollars

"The dollar is motionless and seems to have settled into a very tight range," said one trader in Milan.

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose 0.27 yen to a closing 152.47 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at a higher rate of 153.18 yen.

In London, the dollar fell against the British pound, and was quoted at $1.6093, compared with $1.6090 late Wednesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $397.40 a troy ounce, down from $399.05 bid late Wednesday. At midmorning, the city's major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $397.60.

Stocks regain Tuesday losses

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices gained ground Wednesday, rebounding from Tuesday's mild setback with assistance from a drop in interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 12.16 points on Tuesday, climbed 13.29 to 2,687.84.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 5 to 4 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 828 up, 642 down and 492 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 145.06 million shares, against 145.44 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 172.90 million shares.

Geffen will receive preferred stock worth about $550 million at current prices. The agreement announced Wednesday allows him to sell the stock over a four-year period and makes him the single largest shareholder of MCA.

Group touts horizontal drilling

Horizontal drilling holds great promise for the Permian Basin both as a means of exploring for new oil and developing new reserves in old fields. That was the concensus Wednesday at the first meeting of a new Society of Petroleum Engineers Drilling Study group.

Over 200 engineers and interested parties were present at the study group which was organized as a forum to disseminate information on drilling technology in the Permian Basin. Case histories of horizontal projects were presented by representatives from Mobil and Arco, and an industry panel was present to field questions.

Case histories presented conclude that horizontal results to date in the Permian Basin have generally been costly and noncommercial, but that great potential still exists.

Moderator T.B. O'Brien, an engineer and principal in O'Brien-Goins Engineers of Midland said horizontal drilling held promise in the area of waterflood development.

"Nearly every major waterflood field in the Permian Basin is highly fractured. There is also the possibility that some of the carbonate fields will be candidates," said O'Brien. He noted that there were frequently pockets of unproduced oil to be found in old fields.

Kendall Manning, a panelist and business development manager of horizontal drilling for Smith International Inc., a company which makes horizontal drilling tools and motors noted that there was the distinct possibility that multiple horizontal laterals could be drilled from the same vertical hold.

"It is simply a matter of moving up the hole 100 feet and taking off from there," said Manning. He noted that multiple laterals could be very beneficial as injectors in a field under waterflood.

Manning said Smith International was now drilling an injection well with multiple laterals in Qatar and would soon be able to present the results of that project to the industry.

He also noted that longer laterals would also be effective for exploration and development. "The longest lateral to date is 4,500 feet, but we are beginning a well this

Florida, Ohio monitor buses

Associated Press

Spurred by sniper attacks on Greyhound buses across the nation, Florida has joined Ohio in agreeing to keep watch on the vehicles during the drivers' strike.

The violence continued Wednesday evening when at least two shots were fired at a bus traveling on Interstate 24 outside Chattanooga, Tenn., police said.

The bullets struck a side window and the door frame but did not penetrate the vehicle, said Officer Tim Chapin. A woman and child who had been seated near the window got off the bus; the 46 other passengers stayed on board, he said.

Dallas-based Greyhound Lines Inc. on Wednesday said it would equip its Florida buses with citizens band radios to allow drivers to call for help.

In a letter to Greyhound, Florida Gov. Bob Martinez said he has asked state troopers to "pay special attention to Greyhound buses as they travel through our state."

Greyhound also agreed to put CB radios in its Ohio buses and provide route lists to the Highway Patrol. Gov. Richard Celeste had recommended both actions.

Numerous incidents of vandalism and violence have occurred since the strike began March 2, including a sniper attack Sunday that

N.Y. Times News Service

DETROIT — Sales of domestically produced cars and light trucks continued to decline in early March, falling 3.8 percent compared with the comparable period of 1989.

That follows a 7.9 percent decline at the end of February. But some analysts said the latest weak results were balanced by strong sales in January, giving the first quarter a generally healthy appearance.

New-car inventories currently stand at relatively healthy levels, but auto companies have given up profits by cutting production and paying hefty customer incentives.

"After the strong sales in the beginning of the year, it's normal to see some cooling down and for rebates to lose some of their magic," said Scott Merlis, an analyst at Morgan Stanley.

Car sales fell 3.3 percent and sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 6.3 million in the first 10 days of the month, falling behind last year's lackluster rate of 6.4 million for the similar period. The current rate is well below the 7.1 million rate for the first two months of the year.

Sales of light trucks were down even more, falling 4.6 percent, in early March from the comparable period last year. For the year to date, truck sales are up 3.2 percent.

Police seek input from MHCC

Department planning community storefront

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

The Midland Police Department is trying to improve its services, and has turned to the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce for support and assistance.

At Wednesday's chamber meeting, Lieutenant Jerry Morris described to members a plan to set up a community storefront or substation.

"Folks like you have ideas; you know what you need in terms of law enforcement, and you can give us the ideas, tools and motivation to serve you," he told the gathering.

Emphasizing that the concept is still being shaped, Morris said the department would like to locate a building and, to start with, have one person stationed there for an eight-hour shift, perhaps with volunteers helping operate the center. "If this goes over as well as we think it will, it could be operating 24 hours a day," he added.

He said the department would gladly accept donations of a building, equipment and volunteers. Hopes are that the center will be a place for residents to come to if there's a problem, whether it's not having trash picked up on time, or suspected drug dealings in the neighborhood or needing a ride to pay utility bills.

The reason the department wants to establish the center, Morris said, is "We think there are things we can to do be better police officers. We seek your input, assistance and support, because we want to provide a safe environment for you and your kids."

In other activities at Wednesday's meeting:

- The chamber is sponsoring, with the Midland Chamber of Commerce, Expo '90, set for May 10 at the Midland Center. Midland Chamber members can get, for $75, a 10 ft by 10 ft. booth and 40 free tickets to the Expo as well as free advertising. Those interested in having a booth at the Expo can call either the MHCC or the Midland Chamber.
- Members were introduced to the new staff of the Midland Procurement Assistance Center: Jim Slaton, John Arredondo and Lyndon Marquez.
- Recognized the students of the month: Diana Valerio and Robert Navarrete of Lee High School and Rosalinda Cuellar and Adan Machuca of Midland High School.
- Recognized the teacher of the month, Teresa Marmolejo of Bonham Elementary.
- Elvia Hernandez, executive director, reported that the chamber is sponsoring, with the Midland Chamber of Commerce, a booth at the Small Business Conference in Dallas.
- Hernandez also reported that nominations for Hispanic Businessman and Businesswoman of the year, Member of the Year and Corporate Member of the Year are due April 25th. The awards will be announced at the May 9th chamber meeting at La Bodega.
- Rick Menchaca of the City of Midland urged members to participate in the upcoming Census, and said he has a toll-free number to obtain Spanish-language census forms, and there are centers to assist with the forms at the Dellwood Senior Citizens Center, Southeast Citizens Center and Casa de Amigos.

CARE taking care of capitalism

NEW YORK (AP) — CARE, famous for donating food, digging canals and building hospitals in the Third World, has devised a new form of aid for the 1990s: debt relief, investment banking and venture capital.

The New York-based nonprofit organization has formed a subsidiary aimed at assisting heavily indebted developing countries devise innovative ways to reduce dependence on foreign loans.

CARE's Small Business Assistance Corp. also can help foreign lenders recover some of the money they have sunk into Latin America and other black holes of debt over the years, subsidiary president Donald Nicholson said.

The subsidiary invests in small and medium-sized businesses, from fruit canners in Honduras to shrimp farmers in the Philippines, when invited by the host country. It also is exploring business ventures in other countries undergoing profound political change, including Poland and Nicaragua.

Philanthropy and finance experts said the CARE subsidiary is the first investment banking venture formed by an international relief group to help developing countries become more self-reliant.

Still, with total Third World foreign debt of $1.2 trillion, CARE's effort is expected to have only a symbolic impact at first.

The CARE subsidiary will hold a minority stake in companies it invests in and will concentrate on businesses worth $250,000 to $2.5 million. Foreign banks and other creditors that contribute to the subsidiary's investment fund will receive dividends if the businesses are profitable.

"We're not going to solve the problems of heavily indebted Third World countries," Nicholson said. "But we bring a unique approach to the Third World crisis because we're not for profit."

Nicholson said he has talked with Citibank, Chase Manhattan Bank and Bankers Trust about restructuring part of their Third World debt through the CARE subsidiary.

He said CARE's clean reputation and cultural sensitivity in foreign countries give it advantages that larger, for-profit companies might never obtain.

"We are identifying existing, viable businesses in the developing world and investing in them, especially those that can earn hard currency through exports," he said. "Profits realized from this will be used to fund CARE development projects around the world."

Nicholson

week in which the lateral will extend 7,000 feet." Manning said the well was in the Austin Chalk of South Texas, but declined to name the operator.

It has been suggested that long laterals might make the massive Spraberry Trend of West Texas a likely candidate for horizontal drilling. But horizontal results in the Spraberry to date have not been that encouraging.

Arco, which pioneered the drilling method in the Permian Basin, drilled three wells in the trend between 1985 and 1987 with less than successful results.

"Mechanically the wells were a success," said Arco engineer Pete Edlund, "but the rate and return were less than anticipated." He said the wells were costly, but many lessons had been learned.

That is about the same experience of Mobil which drilled one horizontal well, the John Snowden No. 7, in the Spraberry, says Mobil Engineer Sam Pickett.

While the three Arco wells and the one Mobil well are still producing, the production rates are no higher than they would have been with a conventional vertical well.

Both engineers said they experienced lost circulation while drilling the lower Spraberry. While there are weight advantages to using an oil-based mud, says Edlund. It was also noted that the use of oil-based mud could drive up drilling costs significantly where there were lost circulation problems.

Meridian Oil, however, says it has been encouraged by the results of its horizontal drilling in the Permian Basin. "We will drill six horizontal wells this year," said Les Sinclair who has drilled four previous wells in the Basin for Meridian. "We were encouraged enough to drill additional wells." Meridian has drilled in the Dean formation, but would not reveal present formations being drilled with the horizontal method.

On the technical side, both Pickett and Edlund said they experienced lost circulation while drilling the Spraberry.

Oil based mud and freshwater were used in the drilling of wells. While there are weight advantages to using an oil-based mud, says Edlund. It was also noted that the use of oil-based mud could drive up drilling costs significantly where there were lost circulation problems.

Joe Willmon of MI Drilling Fluids and Gene Grimes of Grace Drilling were also panelists on the horizontal program. MI has provided mud for four horizontal wells in the Permian Basin and Grace Drilling is currently drilling horizontal wells for two operators. Grimes said as a drilling contractor his prime concern was the stress put on the down hole motors and the compression drill pipe string, which was normally a rental item.

Donahue examines Drexel demise

By Stefan Fatsis

NEW YORK (AP) — "The biggest corporate flop in the history of Wall Street. Are you there caller?"

High finance met pop culture when Phil Donahue strayed from topics like satanic rock lyrics and cross-dressing spouses on Wednesday to tackle the collapse of Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

About 150 Drexelites filled an eighth-floor NBC studio to debunk the notion that the Wall Street firm that made junk bonds famous and paid one man $550 million in a single year wasn't a collection of suspenders-wearing greedheads.

AP Laserphoto

Without exception, they said they loved working at Drexel. They said they weren't craven dealmakers and didn't do anything wrong, just better than other investment houses in the dog-eat-dog 1980s. Their financing techniques helped small companies grow. And in the end, they said, they were innocent victims.

Ever the devil's advocate, Donahue painted Drexel employees as a bunch of overpaid, arrogrant, BMW-driving yuppies who got what they deserved.

"There are going to be no telethons for you folks. You're mostly white. Mostly northeast Yale-Harvard types." (Boos and denials from the audience.) "You are mostly Republican." (More boos.) "You were raised in Connecticut." (Boos and laughter.) "You don't even ride the subways." (More laughter.)

Surveying the well-dressed, well-spoken and well-heeled audience: "You're the sons and daughters that we want our sons and daughters to bring home. You're almost nerds. And here you are out of work."

Drexel's parent filed for bankruptcy protection last month, partly because it failed to recover from a deal with Giuliani's office in which it agreed to plead guilty to insider trading-related charges and pay $650 million in penalties rather than face a crippling racketeering indictment.

"We made too much money too quickly," said one Drexelite, claiming the firm's success made Wall Street envious and angered prosecutors and government officials who wanted to bring the firm down.

S&L probe funds unspent, Congressman says

By Dave Skidmore

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of savings and loan fraud investigations are on the back burner because the Bush administration refuses to spend money that Congress offered, a House subcommittee chairman charges.

S&L legislation enacted last August authorized $75 million for pursuing bank and thrift embezzlement this year, but the administration sought and received only $49.2 million from Congress, Rep. Doug Barnard, D-Ga., said Wednesday.

In the meantime, FBI and U.S. attorneys' offices nationwide are 479 employees short of the number they believe is needed to attack a backlog of fraud cases, Barnard told his House Government Operations subcommittee on commerce, consumer and monetary affairs.

"I have some difficulty in accepting that an individual who commits substantial fraud against an S&L or bank may completely escape investigation and prosecution if that person committed the offense in an area which did not receive enough additional resources," Barnard said.

Assistant Attorney General Edward Dennis Jr. was scheduled to appear before the subcommittee today.

Barnard said Wednesday that 2,327 cases of financial institution fraud and embezzlement are inactive, meaning they are open but not being pursued for lack of investigators or prosecutors. Of those, 1,298 are considered major cases involving losses of $100,000 or more, he said.

The Justice Department this year added 557 employees to fraud units, including 201 FBI agents, 118 attorneys and 238 clerks and other support staff. But that was just over half of the 1,036 additional employees that field offices requested, Barnard said.

"Our analysis raises the question whether or not the Justice Department will investigate and prosecute the thousand or more major cases now on the back burner."

Doug Tillett, a department spokesman, said while the S&L law authorized $75 million in spending, Congress actually appropriated only $49.2 million.

"The president's budget proposed that amount and that's what we were given. We are putting every penny ... to work on the problem," he said.

Barnard said FBI and U.S. attorneys' offices in San Diego and Pittsburgh asked for more employees but received none.

Tax on bond redemptions leaves less to buy notes

By Bill Doyle

Q. My Series E and EE, U.S. Savings Bonds, issued from April 1954 through October 1982, have total redemption value over $56,000. I did not report the interest as it accumulated on my annual income tax returns because I planned to exchange these bonds for Series HH bonds.

I now need more income and feel I would get higher interest by cashing $15,000 of the Es and EEs and buying U.S. Treasury notes. Is that true?

A. Probably. But you will have to do some detailed figuring to be sure.

Doyle

If you exchange your Es and EEs for HHs, you will get HHs paying 6 percent annual interest. Recently issued Treasury notes are yielding better than 8 percent. By that comparison, notes are the better deal. But that old demon income tax rears its ugly head.

By exchanging the Es and EEs for HHs, you would postpone the federal income tax bite on the accrued E and EE bond interest until you redeem the HHs received in the exchange. If you redeem Es and EEs, you must pay federal income tax on the interest that has built up on those bonds. That will leave you with less money with which to buy Treasury notes.

Your first move should be to find out exactly how much interest has accrued on your Es and EEs. You can get that information from the "Tables of Redemption Values for U.S. Savings Bonds" booklets supplied to banks and other savings bond paying agents. You can obtain your own copies from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, DC 20402. The E bond version costs $2.25, the EE bond version $1.

After learning the accrued interest on each bond, calculate how much tax you will have to pay — depending on whether you are in the 15, 28 or 33 percent federal income tax bracket. Subtract that tax obligation from the redemption value of the Es and EEs you would redeem and you will know how much after-tax money you would have by cashing the Es and EEs.

Figure you would get about 8.4 percent interest by investing that money in Treasury notes. This has to be an estimate, because Treasury note interest might change by the time you invest.

If that amount of interest is higher than the 6 percent HH bond interest you would get by exchanging your Es and EEs for HHs, you'll come out ahead by redeeming your Es and EEs and buying Treasury notes.

Q. My $13,500 of Series EE bonds are three years old. Would it be better to cash these bonds and buy U.S. Treasury notes or to leave them alone?

A. Leave them be for at least two more years. Never redeem EEs that are less then five years old. If you cash them earlier, you get less than the guaranteed interest rate and miss out on the variable "market-based" rate.

EEs issued since November 1986 accrue interest at a guaranteed 6 percent rate only if held for at least five years. Also, interest is not credited to the bonds at the market-based rate, which changes every six months and has been higher than 6 percent in most semiannual periods, until five years from the issue date.

Let's say you have a $100 face value EE, purchased for $50 three years ago. If you redeem that bond now, you will get $60.60. By waiting two more years to cash it, you will receive $72.28 — and most likely more, depending on the market-based rate.

Q. I plan to exchange my Series E and EE bonds for HH bonds. Will my new bonds include the accrued interest on my old bonds?

A. Sure. The redemption value of each of your Es and EEs includes the price you paid and accrued interest. As long as the redemption value of all the Es and EEs is at least $500, you can make the exchange for HHs.

Each of the HHs you receive will have the following printed on it. "Accrued interest of $ on Savings Bonds/Savings Notes exchanged for this bond and included in its issue price is reportable for federal income tax purposes, for the year of redemption, disposition, final maturity of this Bond, whichever is earlier."

'Healthy' snack food leaves lot to be desired

By Linda Anderson

And now, as they say, for something completely different.

Snack foods are an important of the daily diet at my house, so naturally I'm always ready to try something that we haven't tried before (I just don't want to have to cook it). And though I'm not usually eager to take on any jobs in the kitchen, I am concerned about the nutritional content of what we eat — even if we eat it with our fingers.

Anderson

A health-conscious friend recently found a snack she thought we might be interested in — Cheddar Lites (from Health Valley). These cheese puffs look and feels like regular cheese puffs, but with a difference — Cheddar Lites were made with good health in mind.

Needless to say, we ended up with a bag so we could check out the product for taste, price and advertising accuracy. Journalists are always ready to sample new munchies, so this particular bag ended up at the office.

Price marked on the bag was $1.79 for a 4-ounce bag, but this one was on sale for 99 cents. I guess a bargain is a bargain, especially if the food is a healthy one.

Label advertising claims the product has "Only 2 calories per puff! Baked not fried! No added salt!" The claims continue: "Your choice for healthier eating:

"■ Made with the World's Finest Natural Ingredients
"■ Naturally Aged Cheddar Cheese
"■ Succulent Yellow Corn
"■ No Preservatives"

And on the back of the package, the advertising information goes into even greater detail: "If you're looking for a snack that's crisp and delicious, but still lets you stay trim and look good, Cheddar Lites are for you. ... Besides being great for munching, Cheddar Lites make light and lively croutons in your soups and salads. ... Cheddar Lites get their tangy flavor from the world's finest natural ingredients, including lots of naturally aged, real cheddar cheese. ... We add no salt, to fit your lighter lifesstyle. We never use hydrogenated shortening, antioxidants in the oil, or anything artificial. Instead, we rush these Cheddar Lites into this sturdy bag which protects the full scrumptious flavor and crunchy freshness for you."

Nutritional information lists each ¼-ounce serving (it says, about 17 puffs. No one can eat just 17!) as containing 40 calories (but it also lists each serving as containing 2 grams fat, which works out to about 18 calories (almost half!) from fat. That's a large percentage of fat per calories.)

In taste — well, let's just say that no one wanted to eat a second puff. The kindest taste-testers said the product resembled styrofoam in flavor — most testers just wrinkled up their faces and left the room.

Perhaps this bag is missing its "tangy flavor" — or more likely, the "naturally aged, real cheddar cheese" is spread pretty thin. What good does it do if a "healthy" food tastes bad? Will anyone want to eat it?

These new low-oil products are: Doritos brand Nacho Cheese Flavored and Cool Ranch brand Flavor Light Tortilla Chips; Ruffles brand Regular and Sour Cream & Onion Flavored Light Potato Chips; Cheetos brand Light Cheese Flavored Snacks.

Like all Frito-Lay chips, the new line of Light snacks are cholesterol-free because they are fried or baked with vegetable oils that contain no cholesterol, and are low in saturated fat. In addition, the snacks contain no preservatives.

Tips improve video viewing

Associated Press

Hear a raspy noise when you adjust the sound on your TV set? No, the news commentator isn't coming down with laryngitis. It's probably dirt in the volume control, a problem that can be solved very simply and inexpensively.

This and other technical tips to promote happier video viewing are contained in the current issue of Video Magazine.

Since most volume controls are not sealed, dust, nicotine and other contaminants can interfere with the electrical contacts inside. To cure the problem, first get a spray can of electrical contact cleaner (not WD-40). Remove the knob from the control, aim the spray down the shaft of the control and apply two or three short bursts. While the cleaner evaporates, rapidly twirl the shaft back and forth to distribute the cleaner. The process may have to be repeated a few times before the sound is crystal clear.

When a TV's remote control doesn't work any more, the problem can come from a number of causes.

There's a simple test to locate the problem: Turn on an AM radio and dial it to an unused frequency. Place the remote near the radio and push the function buttons. You'll hear a series of pulses or "chatter" if the batteries are fresh and the electronics in the remote are operating properly. Silence indicates weak batteries or a problem with the control. There is an outside chance the remote will make noise but not send out the necessary pulses of infrared light. But since the light emitters in remotes have a life span of several thousand hours, if the remote makes noise, the problem is probably in the TV or VCR.

The telephone call on Feb. 26 was from California, and the news was tragic. Yet another infant had been found dead, and for Terri Rogers, the circumstances were hauntingly familiar.

Since late December, Ms. Rogers and fellow investigators at the Consumer Product Safety Commission had uncovered a string of nine infant deaths, all involving babies three months old or younger.

In each case, the child had been put to sleep on a foam cushion marketed specifically for infants.

Sold under such names as Mother's Helper, Comfort Tot and Sof-Sak, the pillow-sized cushions look like bean bags and contain small foam pellets that are molded by a baby's body and cradle it.

Investigators had worked doggedly for weeks canvassing coroners, parents, manufacturers and others to try to find out if the pillows were at fault.

The news of a 10th death jolted the commission into action, even before its inquiry was completed.

Citing a suffocation threat to infants, the commission this week warned parents not to use such cushions.

It was an unusual step by a regulatory agency that has been criticized by consumer advocates for failing to move swiftly on safety issues.

"They are dealing with this problem with more dispatch," said Dr. Mark Widome, the chairman of the accident prevention committee of the American Academy of Pediatrics, a professional organization.

OTHERS BELIEVE the agency should have moved even faster.

"They have this casual, laissez-faire attitude," said Sen. Alfonse M. D'Amato, R-N.Y. "They were negotiating with industry when they should have been alerting the public."

The story of the infant deaths involving the cushions highlights some of the problems faced by investigators trying to piece together a terrible puzzle.

But none warned parents that leaving their baby on an invitingly soft cushion could result in death.

Doctors typically warn parents not to let newborns lie on their stomachs on or near pillows. Babies are too weak to lift their heads and may smother.

Industry officials say the labels are adequate and the products were not at fault. For example, Leo Hollander, the president of Hollander Home Fashions Corp., a Newark, N.J., company that produced the Mother's Helper, said it is commonly known that infants should never be left alone on a pillow. He said he was stunned to think that people would do that.

Hollander said he believed the fatalities were related to Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, a mysterious stoppage of breath. Indeed, in several cases involving cushions, the syndrome was listed as the official cause of death.

BUT SAFETY experts like Widome said product labels should also warn parents of the consequences of failing to heed instructions, in this case, suffocation.

The investigation of the infant deaths began late last year when Ms. Rogers received a call from a family living near Dallas. An infant put down to sleep on a beanbag cushion was dead the next morning.

On Jan. 22, an assistant medical examiner in Dallas, Dr. Charles Odom, told the commission of three infant deaths that were suspected of being related to the cushions.

Odom's call prompted a flurry of activity. The commission issued a special nationwide alert to coroners and medical examiners, asking about similar cases.

Two suspicious cases were found in the commission's own files. The deaths were initially described as related to Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, but further inquiry revealed that cushions had been involved in both episodes.

ONE THEORY they developed was that an infant, moving in its sleep, might force the pillow's beads backward, lifting the child's body above its head and thus putting deadly pressure on the throat.

By late January, the commission was aware of at least six possible cushion-related deaths and government officials contacted Hollander.

They told him that the Mother's Helper had been associated with several fatalities, and he agreed to stop making and shipping it.

Hollander said he had learned of a single cushion-associated death in late 1989. Though he did not feel his product was responsible, Hollander said he alerted his customers to the incident.

At least 1.8 million of the cushions had been produced since 1986 by about 10 producers.

Three more deaths came to light, but the inquiry was moving conservatively with investigators not ready yet to blow the whistle, Ms. Rogers said.

"You don't want to start an irrational fear or potentially destroy a product," she said.

Already the pillows had apparently produced more infant deaths faster than any new product in recent memory, and officials decided a public warning was urgent.

THE AGENCY'S three commissioners were made aware of the action and by March 2, all known cushion makers had also been contacted, said Frederick Locker, a lawyer for the Juvenile Products Manufacturers Association.

But because it had not taken any formal action against the producers, its rules prevented it from identifying the cushions or their manufacturers by name.

Commission officials say publicly that the situation is nearing a resolution, but that may be a generous assessment. Only one producer, Hollander, has agreed to stop production, and Locker said that industrywide talks are not likely until next week at the earliest.

DEAR ABBY

Baby's hyphenated name creates problem

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Your response to "Baffled in Boulder" — to use the hyphenated combination of both parents' last names (Zurawski-Slaff) for their soon-to-be-born offspring — was a Band-Aid solution that fails to foresee the ramifications it creates.

Van Buren

Their son is born in 1992. He is named Peter Zurawski-Slaff. In college, young Peter meets his future bride, Kimberly Sue Feinstein-Collarruso. The following year, a daughter is born. They name her Stephanie. She is Stephanie Feinstein-Collarruso-Zurawski-Slaff. The next year they are blessed with a son, whom they name Buster Feinstein-Collarruso-Zurawski-Slaff.

When Stephanie and Buster grow up, they both become lawyers and form a partnership. They can't agree on the firm's name. Stephanie, it seems, has just married a Neanderthal who insists that she assume his last name, which is O'Connor-Goldberg-Wang-Sanchez (the hyphenated combination of the names of his grandparents — all four of whom were devoted Dear Abby readers).

Buster, however, refuses to be a partner in the firm of Feinstein-Collarruso-Zurawski-Slaff, O'Connor-Goldberg-Wang-Sanchez and Feinstein-Collarruso-Zurawski-Slaff. He prefers "Buster and Stephanie, at Law."

The solution, of course: Write to Dear Abby and let her decide.

It is now 2040, and everyone has to pay the price for the lousy advice you gave to "Baffled in Boulder" back in 1990. — A FAN IN KINGSTON, PA.

DEAR FAN: Oops!

DEAR ABBY: For many years, I have been hearing and reading that women need to be told that they are loved.

On the chance that that may be true, one day I told my wife that I loved her. Her response: "Don't tell me, show me."

Actions really do speak louder than words! — LOVER IN OLYMPIA, WASH.

DEAR LOVER: I'm not sure I get your drift, but one cannot "show" love by a single act. Being consistently kind, considerate, thoughtful and loving is the best way to show love.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Lefty" who has only one hand — his left — so he avoids shaking hands because it's such an awkward affair.

Abby, most of the amputees I know do not demand special treatment from others. I have been in the prosthesis business for 46 years and can well remember the old claws and hooks. Most have been replaced by a more sophisticated prosthesis.

Once I danced half the night with a lovely lady before I realized that the hand that was resting in mine was artificial!

There are many amputee support groups throughout the country who will offer a hand to "Lefty." I offer mine. Tell "Lefty" to shake hands and come out fighting! — FRED KARG, TORRANCE, CALIF.

CONFIDENTIAL TO F.K. IN JACKSONVILLE, FLA.: "Good breeding is the art of making those people easy with whom we converse. Whoever makes the fewest people uneasy is the best bred in the company." — JONATHAN SWIFT

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS and getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. AT WIT'S END

Weekends prove to be more pain than pleasure

By Erma Bombeck

At about 7 o'clock every Friday night, my world as I know it falls apart.

My perfectly healthy teeth start to hurt because they know my dentist's office closes at 6. They will not stop thumping until early Monday morning, at which time they will become perfectly healthy again.

Bombeck

The TV cable will go out. Count on it. Repeated phone calls will put me in touch with a recording giving me weekday office hours. By Monday it won't matter. I won't have time to watch it anyway.

Someone in the house will come down with a mysterious malady that I have come to call Friday Night Fever. It's not high enough for the emergency room, but not normal enough to ignore. It's only enough to make you crazy that if you don't act, you may need an attorney.

With all the weekend services available to people, it's incredible how some things sense when you can be brought to your knees.

If I run out of blank checks, it will be on the weekend. If our dog gets lost, it is always between Friday night and Sunday when "Help" falls on deaf ears. Keys break off in doors only on weekends. And I have never had a prescription that needed a doctor's OK expire on any other day except Saturday or Sunday.

At first glance, you might think cars are just inanimate hunks of metal that are incapable of thinking. Get real. Most of them figure you're going to run their wheels off on the weekend, so they just refuse to go. If it is winter, the electric windows will go down and freeze there. They know you have to go the distance to find a mechanic on duty on the weekend.

Probably the worst part about weekends is the house. It dies. Toilets overflow, washers lock, dishwashers overheat, dryers don't and water heaters won't, the septic tank smells, the sliding glass door won't lock, water pressure is reduced to a trickle, and something crawls into the woodwork and expires.

I try to rejoice with the TGIF crowd that crosses off Monday through Thursday on their calendars as if they are serving time, but the truth is I live in dread of those two days when all the things I depend on are no longer there for me.

The ones who gather in a bar named for their favorite day of the week anticipate a glorious two days away from their desks. I have to be realistic and realize that synagogues are open on Saturdays and churches on Sundays. Given my weekends, there's a reason for this.

Identification system for pets

N.Y. Times News Service

A micro chip the size of a grain of rice might make the difference between finding a lost dog or cat (or bird or sheep or cow) and never seeing the animal again.

Here's how it works: the chip, containing a 10-digit code, is implanted by a veterinarian under the skin at the base of the animal's neck, between the shoulder blades.

The code can be read by scanners that Infopet, the Canadian manufacturer of the system, is is in the process of distributing free to animal shelters and veterinarians throughout the United States.

As for conventional methods of identification, "Tags wear out or can be removed, and tattoos are painful to the animal," said Diane Street, director of operations for Infopet. "Our system is safe and permanent."

Under the Infopet system, stray pets brought to shelters or vets are scanned. If the scan turns up a microchip, the shelter or vet phones a toll-free number to report the number of the chip and find out who the owner is.

Infopet is available in Boston, St. Louis, Kansas City, Mo., and most of Florida and California.

The company hopes to have the system available all across North America relatively soon.

The cost is $40 for the initial registration; there is a renewal fee of $11 per year.

There is a phone number: 800-INFOPET (800-463-6738).

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl of the Christian Democratic Union party shakes hands with Leipzig citizens prior to a rally in the East German city Wednesday.

Poland to be allowed in German unification talks

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The six-nation meeting on German unification was billed as mostly an agenda-setting session for future talks, but it produced a major decision: Poland must be included when the subject is borders.

The Bonn announcement aimed at easing Polish fears followed Wednesday's historic preliminary round of talks by the two Germanys and the four World War II victors — the Soviet Union, the United States, France and Britain.

The closing days of East Germany's election campaign turned ugly, meanwhile, as clashes broke out at the close of a huge campaign rally in Leipzig led by West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

The state-run East German news agency ADN said at least two people were hurt in fights between foes of German unification and some of the 300,000 people taking part in Wednesday's rally.

Kohl drew cheers earlier when he spoke of the move toward German unity in a campaign speech for the three-party conservative alliance competing in East Germany's parliamentary elections this Sunday.

Shamir countered with an accusation that Labor made repeated concessions to Israel's Arab enemies, calling this a "shameful act."

The charge brought shouts of protest from Labor ministers including Peres, who angrily wagged his finger at Shamir and accused him of losing opportunities for peace.

Today's bitter Labor-Likud showdown, brought on by feuding over U.S. proposals for starting an Israeli-Palestinian dialogue, could force the retirement of one of the two political leaders who have dominated Israeli politics for most of the last decade.

In an earlier address, Peres called on the 120 members of the Knesset, or parliament, to vote against Shamir on a no-confidence motion that would give Labor a chance to try to form a new government.

"I propose voting no confidence in the man who ended two processes, peace and national unity," Peres said in a bitter speech that seemed to foreclose any further attempts at reconciliation with Likud.

"We can have unity for the sake of peace, not unity for paralysis or evasions, not unity for murdering the peace process," said Peres.

Shamir said he had been the driving force behind creation of the national unity government and that his party was just as interested in making peace as Labor.

"We are not afraid of peace or the peace process. We fear irresponsible concessions," Shamir said in calling on parliament to defeat the no-confidence motion.

Shamir said the United States complicated the peace process by raising the sensitive issue of Jerusalem and suggesting Israel's claim to the captured Arab sector of the city should be a subject of negotiations.

"There is only one Jerusalem, Israel's," he said.

Peres, during his speech, pointed a finger at Shamir and accused him of breaking his commitment to religious and secular parties: "Who will believe you again in this country? You have broken every promise."

Peres was interrupted frequently by Likud heckling, particularly from Likud Knesset member Yehoshua Matza who kept chanting, "Subversive! Subversive!"

During Shamir's speech, Labor member Avraham Burg said, "We're traitors. Why don't you execute us? You (Shamir) are a liar and instigator."

A Labor-Likud coalition, which has ruled Israel through eight stormy years of repeated crises, collapsed Tuesday when Shamir fired Peres and the other 10 Labor ministers resigned.

But Israeli media predicted Labor held a 60-58 advantage in the 120-member Parliament, with both sides needing the support of the two lawmakers in the ultra-Orthodox Torah Flag Party.

The Torah Flag Party, which urged Shamir to restore Labor to the coalition and work out a compromise on a peace strategy, had still not announced which party it would support when Parliament convened.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Brazil inaugurates elected president

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Fernando Collor de Mello was inaugurated today for a five-year term as Brazil's first popularly elected president in 29 years. Thousands of people cheered and waved banners proclaiming a new Brazil.

"I declare empowered, from Mar. 15, 1990 to Jan.1, 1995, President Fernando Collor de Mello," said Senate President Nelson Carneiro. The packed congressional gallery applauded and sang the national anthem.

Eighteen heads of state or government attended the ceremony, including Presidents Fidel Castro of Cuba, Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua and Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez of Spain. The United States was represented by Vice President Dan Quayle.

Also in the galleries were the presidents of Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Venezeula, Bolivia and Peru.

Thousands of people packed the lawns along the concourse outside, cheering and waving flags of green-and-yellow, the national colors, and banners saying "a New Brazil."

Collor de Mello, escorted by white-uniformed guards riding white horses, was driven up the esplanade to the Congress in a black 1953 Rolls Royce convertible, a gift from England's Queen Elizabeth II. People broke through the cordon to greet the president and accompany the car.

Later, Collor de Mello was to receive the presidential sash from outgoing President Jose Sarney and meet visiting dignitaries.

Vatican, U.S.S.R. linked

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican and the Soviet Union established official ties today for the first time since the 1917 Russian Revolution.

The Vatican and Moscow said the two sides have agreed to exchange representatives with the rank of ambassador extraordinary and apostolic nuncio. Initially, the representatives will not have permanent residences.

The ties fall short of full diplomatic relations. Vatican spokesman Joaquim Navarro described them as "pre-diplomatic relations."

The move was the latest of several that have improved relations between Moscow and the Vatican after more than 70 icy years.

The decision was made during the meeting at the Vatican in December between Pope John Paul II and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev. They were the first talks ever between a Roman Catholic pontiff and a supreme Soviet leader.

Egyptian POWs return

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Twenty Egyptians captured by Iran during the Persian Gulf war flew into Cairo after being released Wednesday, an airport security official said.

He said security officials escorted them away for questioning. Reporters were kept from seeing them.

PART-TIME $$$$$ AVAILABLE APRIL 1
Effective April 2, the Midland Reporter-Telegram will become a morning newspaper instead of an afternoon newspaper. As a result we have several routes which will need to be re-filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Due to this one-time large number of routes becoming available, now is the best time ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?
Yes! Our current carrier force is already 50% adult and 50% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a part time job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $150 to $500 monthly! Some motor routes make even more, although currently none are expected to be available. Depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Some collecting in person will be necessary though.

When do the papers have to be delivered by?
6:00 am Monday - Friday, and 7:00 am Saturday and Sunday.

Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
