FNB cancels Friday's shareholders meeting

FDIC approves $100 million loan

From staff and wire reports

In reaction to Wednesday's Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation announcement it has loaned financially troubled First National Bank of Midland $100 million, the bank's board of directors has canceled a shareholders meeting scheduled for Friday.

According to a statement issued this morning by the bank, the board of directors based its decision on the loan and the FDIC's apparent belief a merger or other permanent solution will be worked out.

"The bank's board of directors believes that it is no longer appropriate for the shareholders of the bank to consider and act upon the proposals which were to be considered at the shareholders meeting on Friday, Oct. 14. Therefore, the bank is canceling the meeting."

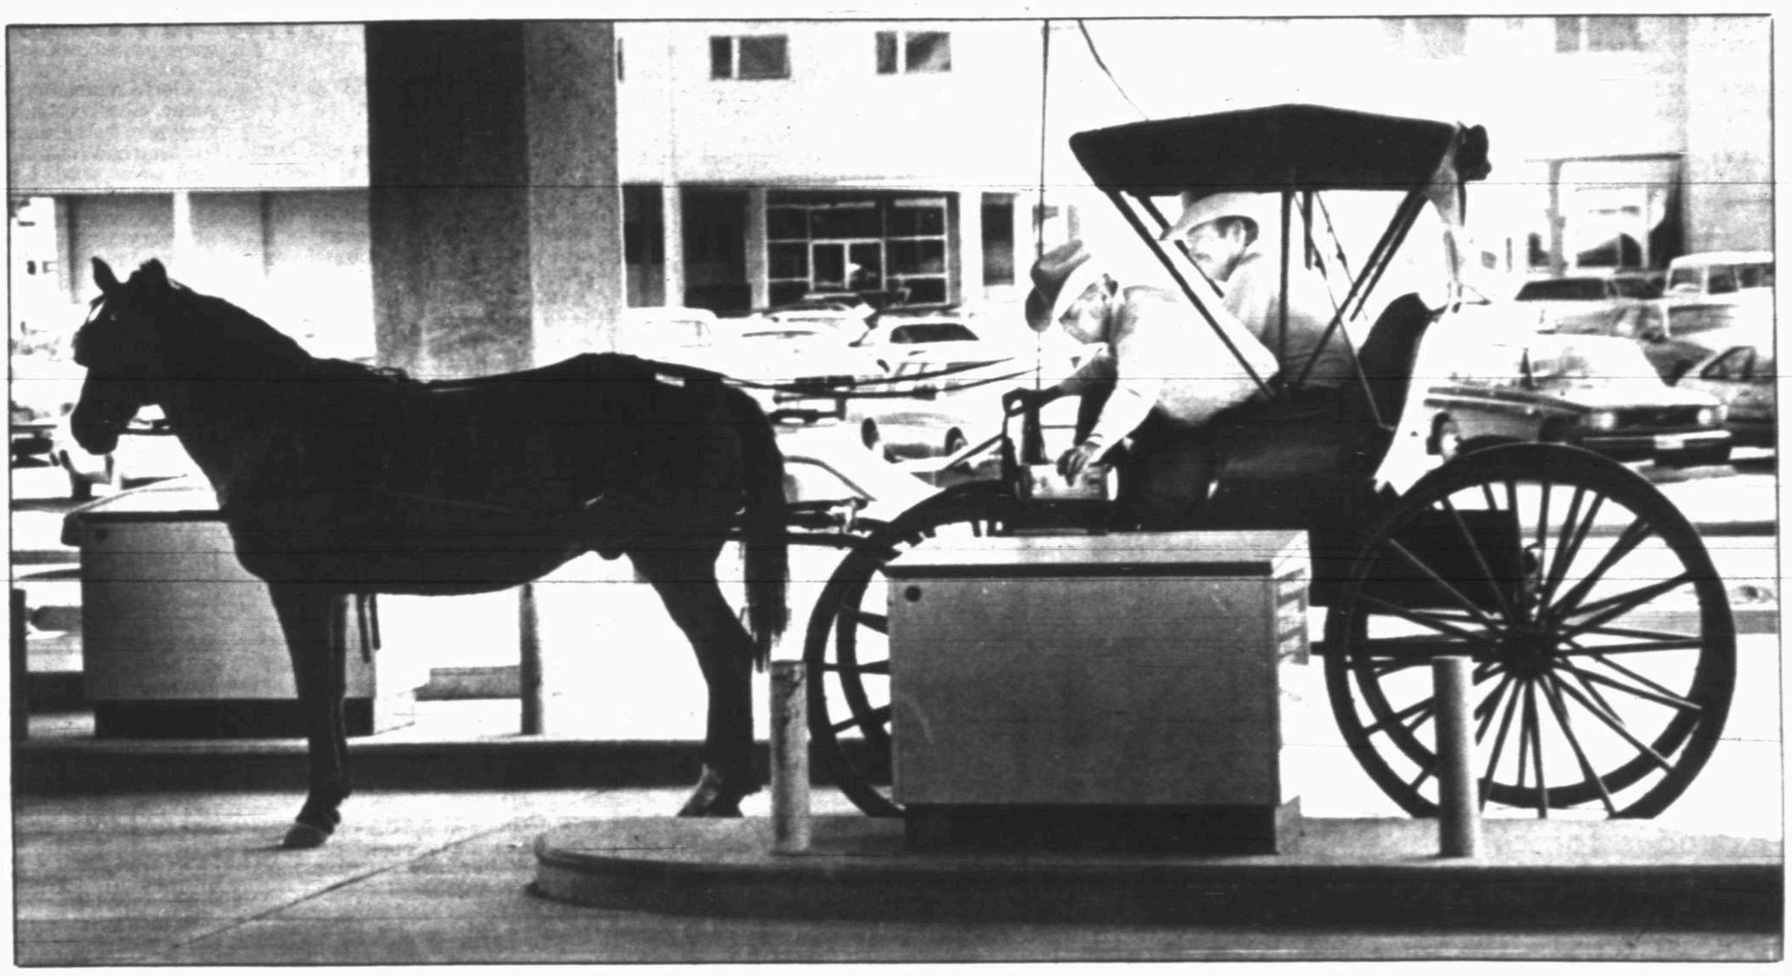

The FDIC announced Wednesday it was loaning the ailing bank $100 million to "maintain stability" and bolster confidence while a merger or buyout is sought, an agency spokesman said.

The loan was announced after the Federal Reserve System advised the FDIC "that the Fed is unable to further support the bank's liquidity needs," Alan Whitney, an FDIC spokesman, said in a statement from Washington.

The loan gives FDIC "leverage" at First National, or the ability to, in effect, force FNB into a merger or other arrangement should the insurers choose to do so.

Options that might be considered are: the outright aquisition of FNB by another banking firm; the merger of FNB with another banking firm; or the "purchase and assumption" of FNB by another firm — in which case the buyer would purchase FNB's assets and aquire any loans of its choosing, but leave FNB holding "bad" loans and and the legal responsibility for them.

Oil lotteries suspended as Interior studies reforms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department has suspended its oil and gas lotteries after allegations that taxpayers have been cheated out of $50 million to $100 million because of government ineptitude and oil company secrecy.

Department officials abruptly announced late Wednesday that they were suspending the lotteries — which attract 2.5 million applicants annually — for at least six weeks while reforms are implemented.

Critics allege that the government sold off oil leases in Wyoming at bargain basement prices — unaware that the land contained large quantities of oil and gas.

Under the law, lotteries are supposed to cover federal land with no known reserves of oil and gas. For this land, much of it worthless, the government holds lotteries every second month in which anyone can compete for a $75 filing fee. The lucky winners are free to resell their leases to interested oil companies.

For land on or near known oil and gas deposits, the government is required to auction drilling rights to the highest bidder.

Interior's Bureau of Land Management said an internal investigation, begun last August, had focused on Wyoming, where 18 leases have been resold in the last two years.

The bureau had no figures on how much these leases brought when they were resold, but NBC News reported Wednesday night that oil companies had paid as much as $7 million a parcel for land which brought the government only a $75 filing fee and $1 an acre in rentals.

Congressional sources said Wednesday the government could have lost between $50 million and $100 million by mistakenly using the lottery to lease land in known oil producing areas.

The NBC report said one problem was that the Davis Oil Co. of Denver discovered a major oil and gas field in Wyoming's Powder River Basin but kept this information secret from the federal government for more than a year. The find was on land Davis leased from the government, in the same area as parcels the government put up for sale through the lottery rather than auctioning to the highest bidder.

A BLM supervisor in Wyoming, Tim Monroe, said the government realized those parcels probably should have been put up for bid after "tremendous activity" was noted around another parcel leased by lottery just eight months before in the Powder River Basin.

Davis Oil official Edward LeFaye said the company had done nothing wrong and the government had "dropped the ball" and was simply looking for a scapegoat.

Another Davis spokesman, who didn't want to be identified, said the company will contest a $4,100 fine the government imposed last month on Davis for allegedly failing to file 41 monthly reports on production from federal oil leases.

Caterpillar's resident retiree still inching along

CHILLICOTHE, Ill. (AP) — When Charlie Gauwitz retired at age 73, he sold his farm to Caterpillar Tractor Co. with one condition: that he be allowed to stay in the house rent-free as long as he lived.

That was in 1956 — and at age 100 he's still alive and kicking.

Caterpillar, as it has done for 27 years, still sends "nice young men" over to mow the lawn, trim the hedges and repair the home's exterior.

This summer, to help put the founder of the Peoria County farmers' co-op in the right mood to meet his century mark, the firm scraped and repainted the two-story, wood-frame house, which was built in 1902 by Gauwitz's father-in-law. Gauwitz has lived there since 1915.

"That's not an unusual arrangement," Caterpillar spokesman Doug Crew said. "Companies often provide rent-free living when buying property from people... getting on in years."

Crew said the company bought Gauwitz's 190 acres and many of his neighbors' tracts to build its huge Mossville plant and an expansive technical center. But the giant earthmoving-equipment manufacturer had plenty of room for the construction and had no plans to disturb the corner acre where Gauwitz's house sits.

"They thought I'd be gone long ago," Gauwitz said one recent afternoon, sitting quietly in a rocking chair on the porch.

"Sometimes I just sit here and think to myself, 'What are you doin' here 100 years?' One hundred years. It don't seem possible,'" he said, looking out over the fields that lay between his house and the Caterpillar complex dominating the eastern horizon. He had worked those fields for 41 years.

His mind sharp, Gauwitz said his lower legs "are shot" and he's given up a daily walk to the mailbox out by the highway to fetch the morning newspaper. "A neighbor throws it on the porch," he said.

"I was in the garden this morning and filled two buckets of dirt. But was I tired," he added, emphasizing the final word.

"I was the oldest child (of six) in the family and I'm still alive. Isn't that funny?" Gauwitz said, his raspy voice bittersweet. "It don't seem right."

Gauwitz's wife, Edna, died 10 years ago at 84. Now he shares the house with a daughter, Virginia, who is a professor at Bradley University in Peoria, 13 miles south.

Another daughter, Leola, took her own life in 1960, Gauwitz said, adding, "Things like that are always sorrowful." But the offspring of three brothers and two sisters fill a strip of settled land along either side of the Illinois River.

Gauwitz said he was born along the river a few miles southeast of the farm on Aug. 15, 1883.

State's sexual assault laws take tougher stand on rape

Editor's Note: From the newborn to the elderly, from the poor to the wealthy, abuse is found in every category of human life. This six-part series explores various forms of abuse and the impact on its victims. Where first names are used, these names are fictitious. But the stories are true. This fifth article looks at sexual assault.

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Rape, sexual abuse and indecency have been wiped from the law books and replaced with the term sexual assault.

"In a way, it's the toughest rape law I've seen," said District Attorney Vern Martin, adding that the tougher, better-defined law went into effect Sept. 1.

Abuse

The unreported epidemic

The Texas Legislature grouped rape of a person and rape of a child 14-16 under sexual assault — a second degree felony carrying with it a sentence of two to 20 years. Also aggravated rape and rape of a child under 14 is aggravated sexual assault, which is a first degree felony, carrying with it a sentence of five to 99 years or life imprisonment.

"I think it will make our job easier. Rape is not a crime of passion, it's not a crime of lust. It's a crime of violence," Martin said.

Experts say rape is one of the most misunderstood and unreported cases of abuse. Only 3 to 10 percent of actual rapes are reported.

According to the Midland Rape Crisis Center, 91 sexual assaults occurred in the 1983 fiscal year. In fiscal year 1982, there were 72. Half of the cases were children under 17. The ages ranged from one to 85 years.

"About 63 percent of the people who are raped know their assailant," said Nan Gordon, director of Midland Rape Crisis Center. "And 57 percent of the sexual assaults occur in the home."

She said most rapists have girlfriends or wives. The rapist is not sexually deprived. He rapes for power. He usually has no idea that he has devastated a life.

Often, the victim experiences a variety of pyschological reactions. Ms. Gordon said women may have feelings of anger, outrage, extreme fear and anxiety, helplessness and embarrassment. Additionally, she may be afraid of being alone and of anything reminding her of the rapist.

Ms. Gordon said about half of the actual rapes reported to the center are also reported to the police.

"Overall, yes, women do press charges," Martin said. "It's one helluva devastating experience for a woman to go through."

Sunny skies for most of the nation and showers for New England are forecast through Friday by the National Weather Service. Most areas will be mild; cold weather is expected for the Great Lakes.

Wind, temperatures up some

Temperatures tonight and Friday will be a mite warmer, but winds will be a little stronger, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight should be fair and not as cool, with lows expected to be in the mid 50s and winds from the south at 10 to 15 mph.

Friday's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies and mild temperatures, with highs reaching into the mid 80s. Southerly 10 to 20 mph winds are expected to be gusty.

Wednesday's high of 69 was nearly 30 degrees cooler than the 98 recorded in 1979. The overnight low of 45 may have seemed chilly, but it was still 11 marks above the record low recorded in 1969.

Explosion rocks Lubbock clinic

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — A patient at a health clinic was killed and seven other people were injured when an explosion in a boiler room blew out a wall and collapsed the roof of the city health department, authorities said.

Norma Castro Guerrero, 25, was pronounced dead at the scene of the Wednesday afternoon blast by Peace Justice L.J. Blalack.

"This was a gory explosion," Blalack said. "Every room was collapsed."

Three other clinic patients, a nurse, a clinic supervisor, a health aide a janitor were also injured. Only one of the injuries was described as serious.

Witnesses said the explosion knocked down a 30-foot portion of a wall on the back of the building, caving in the roof and sending bricks flying out into a parking lot.

Ceiling tiles and light fixtures fell in on laboratories in another area of the building. Health department officials moved into temporary offices at a building downtown.

The blast occurred in a boiler room behind the clinic, but fire investigators would not speculate on the cause of the explosion and planned to continue their investigation today.

Fire officials said they had no damage estimate, but police spokesman Bill Morgan said the building was ruined because the explosion loosened the entire roof.

Blalack said he had ordered an autopsy on Ms. Guerrero's body, but said, "I think she died from the explosion, not from being hit by any particle or anything like that."

Fire department spokeswoman Carmen Salazar said seven units and 20 firefighters were sent to the scene after the explosion was reported at 2:24 p.m., but no fire was reported following the blast.

Only one of the injuries appeared to be serious, said Carolyn Kerpchar, associate director of Lubbock General Hospital.

Rape laws 'tougher'

According to officials at the Midland Rape Crisis Center, the purpose of rape is to control, dominate, degrade and humilate the victim. Studies of men convicted of rape show that most are "normal" men who have sexual outlets, but they show a greater tendency to express rage, aggression and violence, Ms. Gordon said.

Martin said the new law states consent of the other person is not given if physicial force, violence or the threat of such is used. He added: "A lot of things that used to be defensive — how violently did the victim resist — now have become factors in deciding punishment.

"Changing the name (from rape to sexual assault) and grouping the raping of a child with other sexual assaults is going to take a lot of the confusion away in the mind of the public in seeing what's happening in some of these cases."

Americans optimistic

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are surprisingly optimistic about their financial health, but there is an undercurrent of worry about the future, according to a survey on money released today.

About two people out of three also said their standard of living was comfortable and slightly more than half were satisfied with their personal financial situation. At the same time, however, about four people in 10 did not necessarily think the future would bring improved finances.

Gloria: Woman raped as teen must still live with tragedy

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

It happened 17 years ago, but Gloria said she'll never forget being raped.

"You try to put this in the past," she said. "You can't — it will always be there until you die."

The Midland woman was 16 years old when a slumber party transformed into a nightmare. She and some girlfriends decided to take a walk that fall night. Little did they know what was going to happen, an event that would affect Gloria the rest of her life.

As they walked the newly-graveled street in Lubbock, Gloria noticed a convertible seating three men — college boys, two of whom she had recognized from high school.

They whistled and made catcalls. The girls became frightened. They ran.

But Gloria tripped — she fell. The three men stopped the car, grabbed her and dragged her into the convertible.

"They sat on me," she said. "They drove to an apartment building and carried me upstairs where they tied me with belts to the bed."

Gloria remembers her state of panic. She recalls the fear and feeling of helplessness.

"They had control. My imagination went wild. I didn't know what they were going to do — beat me, rape me or what?

"Everything was going in slow motion. I remember them playing cards and drinking while I was tied up in the next room. When they got drunk, they came in.

"One of them took a shower. I remember thinking that was odd."

The men began disrobing. Then each one of them laid on top of the 16-year-old.

"I bit them. I spat. I tried to do everything I could. All three raped me."

When the college boys were through with Gloria, they "dumped me, ironically about two blocks from my house.

"I was bleeding vaginally. It was a brutal rape. I'd never had sex before."

When she got to her house, the other girls told her parents Gloria had gotten into the car. Gloria's father, who was divorced from her mother, was there.

"He started beating me and he told me I was a whore and a slut for getting in that car.

"He said: 'You were dressed in those cutoffs, T-shirt and sandals. You were asking for it.'"

Then Gloria's father said he'd kill her if the boys had sexual intercourse with her.

"I thought — I'm not going to tell anybody what really happened," she said.

Her father took Gloria to the police station. She pointed out the three men from a school annual, but they were never found or prosecuted, Gloria said.

"I was having to deal with being raped by three guys and the abuse from my father. I still have scars on my back where he beat me. I never told anybody. I was afraid. We didn't have a rape crisis center back then."

Gloria tried to rebuild her life. She was squeamish when it came to dating, but she continued to try.

Then she discovered she was pregnant from the rape.

"It was too late to do anything," she said. "We contacted an adoption agency and a home for unwed mothers."

On the last day of her junior high school year, Gloria gave birth to a daughter. The baby was put up for adoption.

"Today the only thing that bothers me is with the new adoption procedures, I wonder if she will contact me. What am I going to do?"

Married 13 years, Gloria has a son. Her family knows what happened to her. She said they are supportive.

For the last five years, Gloria has helped counsel rape victims. If she knew what she knows now, Gloria said "maybe everything would have been different.

"If victims have the support of their family, it's easier to get through a tragic event like this."

Protesters approach base in Germany

BREMERHAVEN, West Germany (AP) — Lines of riot police today kept about 2,500 demonstrators a half mile away from a U.S. military base at the start of a three-day protest against American nuclear missiles in Europe.

All three entrance roads to the Carl Schurz Base were blocked by police about 800 yards from the base, and no protesters were allowed to approach the installation, police said.

Hundreds of policemen, carrying shields and backed by armored personnel carriers, blocked roads leading to the barracks.Police sources said some 6,000 police had been brought in from surrounding areas in case of trouble.

"There have been no incidents reported. Everyone seems to be in a peaceful frame of mind," said a police spokesman at midmorning.

The three-day demonstration in this North Sea port was called to protest NATO plans to deploy 572 new U.S. medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe starting in December if there is no progress in the U.S.-Soviet arms talks in Geneva.

The largest contingent of the U.S.-built missiles — 204 — would be stationed in West Germany, with the rest deployed in Britain, Belgium, Italy and the Netherlands over the next five years.

The organizers had said they would try to block entrances to the base and stage a protest at a nearby port dock used by the U.S. Army to bring equipment into West Germany.

Police spokesmen said the protesters had not been given a permit to hold the demonstration and that none of them would be allowed to get near the installation.

"We didn't expect the police to turn out in such force. We didn't come here to start trouble. It's crazy to have so many cops here," said a 23-year protester who refused to give his name and wore a black ski mask to conceal his identity.

About 1,500 demonstrators gathered on a road leading to the front gate, carrying guitars, peace banners, and singing "We Shall Overcome."

Another 1,000 protesters took up positions on roads leading to the two other gates, unfurling banners that read:

"Either get rid of weapons or the weapons will get rid of us," and "Arms eat up the bread of the poor."

Protest organizers had said more than 5,000 people were expected to take part in today's demonstration and predicted 30,000 demonstrators by the weekend.

U.S. Army sources who requested anonymity said earlier the Army would halt all but emergency traffic to and from the base and order a "lock in" if necessary to avoid confrontation with the demonstrators. A "lock in" prevents personnel from leaving the base.

Anti-nuclear activists have distributed leaflets in recent weeks warning of a repeat of the violence seen at Krefeld, near the German-Dutch border, during a visit by Vice President George Bush on June 25.

Helmeted youths clad in black leather stoned Bush's motorcade and battled riot police at Krefeld, leaving about 100 people injured and 150 arrested. Bush was unharmed, but his limousine was slightly damaged.

The last major blockade by the anti-nuclear movement in West Germany was peaceful. About 5,000 demonstrators sat in front of the gates of a U.S. military facility in Mutlangen last month in southwestern Germany.

The Army halted all ground traffic to and from the facility for three days to avoid confrontation with the protesters.

Texas' growth pattern changing, researcher says

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

ODESSA — For the first time in its history, the way Texas is growing is changing. Beginning in the 1970s, 58 percent of the state's growth was people who looked at Texas and said, "That's where I want to live, work and raise a family," Dr. Victor Arnold of The University of Texas at Austin's Bureau of Business Research told the Permian Basin Ecomomic Outlook for 1984 meeting today.

Dr. Arnold said that previously Texas had grown through the births of new native Texans, but now more than half the growth is in migration. Three years of growth in the 1980s have equalled five years of growth in the 70s. A baby boom has begun to influence the economy and education of Texans, with 60,000 more babies born in Texas in 1982 than in 1981.

The upshot of this situation, Dr. Arnold said, is that Texas will surpass New York as the second most populous state in the country. The state must create 190,000 new jobs per year and build three million more housing units to accodomate its population to the year 2000.

"There will be dramatic growth in all sectors of Texas' economy," he said. "And traditional strengths in agriculture and mining will be tempered by more rapid growth in other sectors of our economy," including important high-technology industries.

Dr. Arnold also said that the Texas economy is tied to Mexico's economy and that "we can set the example by recognizing the interdependence."

"What are our economic communities of interest?" he asked. Texas needs to export industry to Mexico, he said. "There are challenges ahead. Let's find solutions that will work and add new pillars of strength to the Texas economy."

FNB has been hurt by a lack of repayment on loans to energy developers whose businesses have waned under dwindling demand.

Last week, FNB reported six-month losses of $114.7 million and said it would need up to $100 million to stay solvent.

"The FDIC funds will maintain stability until a merger or other permanent solution to the bank's problems can be arranged," Whitney said.

He would not comment on any merger plans, but said "it's safe to assume that if you take this step that the other will be under consideration."

The FDIC's directors approved the assistance under a law allowing the agency to make loans or contributions "to an insured bank in danger of closing in order to facilitate the bank's merger with a sound institution," according to Whitney.

"The purpose is to maintain public confidence in the bank until such time as some solution of a permanent nature is worked out," he said.

Earlier this month, FNB disclosed the Securities and Exchange Commission and the U.S. Office of the Comptroller of the Currency are conducting inquiries into the bank's practices. FNB did not reveal the nature of the comptroller's inquiry, but said the SEC was studying whether its statements adequately reflected its financial condition.

The bank's total deposits as of Aug. 31 had declined to $854 million from $1.47 billion on June 30, 1982.

Bank officials have since retained the First Boston Corp. investment firm to locate a merger partner.

Whitney said the FDIC's subordinated note to the bank bears an interest rate equal to that of a one-year Treasury bill plus 50 basis points, or about 10 1/2 percent. The note is payable on demand but will remain outstanding until a satisfactory permanent solution is arranged.

Having made its loan in the form of a subordinated note, the FDIC becomes third in line for repayment should FNB fail. First to be paid back would be insured depositors, uninsured depositors would be second, and the FDIC's note third, followed by others FNB might owe. The banks stockholders would be last to be paid.

Kissinger warns Salvadoran leaders on human rights

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger warned Salvadoran officials that human rights abuses must be curbed if they want continued U.S. aid for the war against leftist rebels.

With violence by rightist death squads increasing, the former secretary of state told political leaders Wednesday that Americans must not be forced to "choose between security and human rights" in deciding whether the government deserved further support in the civil war.

Elsewhere in Central America, unidentified attackers fired grenades at the opposition newspaper La Prensa in Managua, Nicaragua, and Guatemalan newspapers defied a government order by printing a guerrilla statement as demanded for the release of a kidnapped newspaper executive.

Kissinger heads a bipartisan fact-finding commission on a six-country tour of Central America to make recommendations on U.S. policy in the region. The delagation was scheduled to travel today to Guatemala.

"It is imperative to defend these principles of democracy and human rights, to preserve and expand them. And as the American people cannot be asked to choose between the two, the Salvadoran people must not be asked to make such a choice," he told reporters after meeting with President Alvaro Magana and other political leaders.

A congressional source at the meetings said the commission members were especially critical of the Salvadoran judicial system and labeled their meetings with military leaders "a disappointment."

"They are laying it on pretty thick. They are saying, 'Look, you guys, you had better straighten this out because we can't sell it in America," the source said.

Magana did not comment on his talk with Kissinger, but Jose Napoleon Duarte, leader of the moderate Christian Democrat Party, said his impression was that U.S. aid could be in jeopardy because of an increase in rightist violence.

He said a rise in death squad activity was a major concern voiced by the commission members, adding Kissinger was "very acute in his questioning and tried to go deep into the problems without expressing his own opinion."

Two rightist death squads have intensified activities lately, setting off bombs and kidnapping and killing leftists and suspected leftists. The death squads are widely believed to work closely with military and security forces under the guise of fighting communism.

The El Salvador Human Rights Commissions says 39,000 of the more than 47,000 people killed in the four-year civil war have been non-combatants or suspected leftists murdered by death squads or government security forces. The White House and the State Department issued statements last week deploring the death squad violence.

Foreign Minister Fidel Chavez Mena said judicial and agrarian reforms were also discussed.

The 3½-year-old program to distribute land to peasants is a vital part of the effort to undercut the rebels' appeal, but some landowners and right-wing political parties are trying to weaken it.

Autry speaks out on execution method

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — James David Autry, saved by a stay of execution which came with only 30 minutes to spare, says there was no reason for guards to insert intravenous tubes in his arms an hour before his scheduled death.

Autry told the Houston Chronicle Wednesday he resents having been strapped to a gurney on which he expected to die so far before the execution time of 12:01 a.m. Oct. 5.

"I think it's unnecessary," said the 29-year-old Autry. Tubes which were to carry the deadly solution into his body were inserted in his arms shortly after 11 p.m. Oct. 4.

"If they're going to kill a man, they don't need to put him on the table an hour early," he said. "They could bring him in there at midnight and be done with him in five minutes."

Autry was condemned for the 1980 slaying of a Port Arthur convenience store clerk. He was saved when Supreme Court Justice Byron White issued a stay, postponing the execution until the high court can consider the issue of "proportionality" — whether states punish convicted murderers equally in all cases.

Fellow death row inmate Ronald Clark O'Bryan, known as the "Candy Man," said guards "tricked" Autry into entering the death chamber. O'Bryan, Autry's next-door neighbor on Death Row, was convicted of poisoning his 8-year-old son with Halloween candy in 1974 so he could collect life insurance money.

"Autry told me that the guards came into his cell at 11 p.m. and said that they wanted him to wait in the next room. But when he walked inside there were no chairs, just the gurney," O'Bryan told the Chronicle.

"Then five or six of those big old country rednecks descended on him and strapped him down and he just laid there," he added. "They didn't have to descend on him like a pack of wolves!"

O'Bryan said Autry, who earlier said he would not fight when he was put on the gurney, told him he won't be "quite as willing" to go into the chamber early again.

Autry said he was scared as he lay on the gurney and said his only thoughts were that he "was going to die and never get up off that table again."

He said he has begun receiving letters from total strangers telling him "they are sorry I have to go through this."

Autry was convicted of shooting Shirley Drouet, 43, a Port Arthur convenience store clerk and divorced mother with five children. Mrs. Drouet was shot between the eyes after she asked Autry to pay for a six-pack of beer.

Autry was also charged but never tried in the killing of a former Catholic priest and maiming of a Greek seaman who witnessed the shooting.

If Autry had been executed, he would have become the second person in the nation executed by injection and the eighth to die since the death penalty was reinstated in 1976.

Man called police before he was killed

Eliseo Moreno

HEMPSTEAD, Texas (AP) — The first victim of a 5½-hour killing spree called police minutes before his death and said he was afraid his brother-in-law was armed and heading to South Texas for a confrontation with his estranged wife, according to police.

Juan Garza Jr. called a detective shortly before 6 p.m. Tuesday to tell him his fears about Eliseo Hernandez Moreno, College Station police Capt. Ronnie Miller said Wednesday.

"The officer said that he felt Moreno might possibly be armed and I think he felt that Moreno was probably going to try to find his ex-wife," Miller said. "But he did not, at that time, think Moreno would come to his home."

Minutes later, the 30-year-old Garza and his wife, Esther, 31, both lay dead of bullet wounds in their College Station apartment. Police said there were several witnesses to the shooting.

Moreno was arrested about 11:30 p.m. in Wharton County, southwest of Houston. He was taken to Hempstead, 50 miles northwest of Houston, Wednesday afternoon and charged with capital murder in the slaying of state highway patrol officer Russell Lynn Boyd.

Boyd stopped Moreno about 6:30 p.m. on a routine traffic violation near Hempstead, about 40 miles south of College Station, Waller County Sheriff Ronnie Sitton said.

Officials also believe Moreno killed two Hempstead residents and shot another when he stopped at their house shortly after Boyd was shot; kidnapped a Hempstead couple and their three children and forced them to take him to Pasadena, where he freed them unharmed; and kidnapped a man whom he was holding hostage when he was arrested near El Campo.

Hundreds of officers from the Texas Department of Public Safety and local law enforcement agencies lined Southeast Texas roads during the binge, which covered 160 miles and 5½ hours.

Moreno was charged with aggravated kidnapping in Wharton County Tuesday night.

Hector Nieto, a College Station man who was a friends of the Garzas, told The Eagle, a Bryan-College Station newspaper, that Moreno and his wife, Blanca, had a stormy marriage. He said the couple had lived with the Garzas for a time last spring, but that Garza had thrown Moreno out because he did not help pay bills.

Blanca Moreno, Garza's sister, had left Moreno about a week before and returned to Donna, a Rio Grande Valley town where they grew up, Nieto said.

"Eliseo had told friends that if he and Blanca got into another fight, he'd do away with all her family — and he'd start with Johnny," meaning Garza, Nieto said. He said Moreno had admitted slashing Garza's tires Sunday night and that friends had seen bullets in Moreno's car Monday or Tuesday.

The killings were the third mass murder in Texas in three weeks. Four men were found shot to death at a hangar near Sherman in North Texas on Saturday. On Sept. 23, five people were abducted from a fast food restaurant near Kilgore in East Texas, taken to an oilfield and shot execution-style. No suspects have been named in either case.

Shortly after Boyd's death, officials said, a gunman stole a car at a truck stop north of Hempstead. Moments later, he pulled into the driveway of 79-year-old Allie Wilkens' home in Hempstead and killed Ms. Wilkens and James Bennatte, 71, officials said. Bennatte's sister-in-law, Ann, was shot and critically injured.

"He was looking to change cars," Waller County deputy sheriff Raymond Cooke said. "I guess he wanted hostages. When they opened the door, he opened fire on them."

Moreno then drove a few blocks to the Bill Shirley home in Hempstead and abducted Shirley, his wife and three children. He released the family unharmed in Pasadena, a southeast Houston suburb about 70 miles away, Sitton said.

Juan Garza, 30, and his wife Esther, 31, were shot late Monday afternoon. Garza's brother-in-law, Eliseo Moreno, has been charged with the killings.

Father chases down his son's abductors

PURCELL, Okla. (AP) — The father of a 6-year-old boy taken from a Texas school chased the three abductors, including the child's mother, into Oklahoma, then forced them at gunpoint to pull off an interstate and release his son, police said.

The abductors' car was stopped on Interstate 35 Wednesday morning by the boy's father, Edward Larkins, 25, of Denison, Texas, according to the Oklahoma Highway Patrol. Larkins pulled up next to them and pointed a shotgun at them to make them stop, police said.

Charged with kidnapping Michael Ray Morgan from his school in the north Texas town of Bells on Wednesday morning were the boy's mother, Mary Shah, 23, of Midwest City; Ms. Shah's sister, Linda Richardson, 28, also of Midwest City; and Thomas Gatewood, 27, of Del City.

School officials reported that Michael was taken from the grounds of Bells Elementary School around 8:30 a.m. Wednesday. Another student reported that Michael was pulled into a car by a man and a woman, school Superintendent Ray Smith said.

Larkins immediately suspected who had taken the boy and where he would be taken, and drove north on the interstate to catch up with them, Highway Patrol dispatcher Jay Wall said.

Ranchers can buy hay under new program

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas farmers are cooperating with drought-stricken ranchers in a new Texas Department of Agriculture effort to ease the woes of West Texas livestock raisers.

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower announced the program Wednesday calling it "Operation DIAL-HAY."

In a brief news conference on the Capitol ground, Hillsboro farmer Jerry Bailey sold a truckload of hay to McCamey rancher Edd Hughs in the first deal under the new state program.

Bailey sold his coastal Bermuda hay to Hughs for $1.25 a bale in the field. Loading and transportation costs totaled $1.10 per bale, "meaning that Hughs will receive his hay for a total price of $2.35 — a good 25 percent less than he would otherwise have to pay," Hightower said.

"The state's role in all of this is merely to serve as the telephone operator," Hightower said.

Two state Crime Stoppers programs receive awards

AUSTIN (AP) — The Governor's Office of Criminal Justice announced Wednesday that Crime Stopper programs in Houston and San Angelo received awards at the national Crime Stopper conference in Atlantic City, N.J.

Both programs were recognized for having the best programs for cities of their size.

Houston received the highest rating for cities with more than 500,000 population for the second year in a row, and San Angelo's program was rated the most productive among cities with less than 100,000 population.

Pope won't be at JFK memorial

DALLAS (AP) — Pope John Paul II has declined an invitation to attend memorial services on the 20th anniversary of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, organizers of the ceremony said.

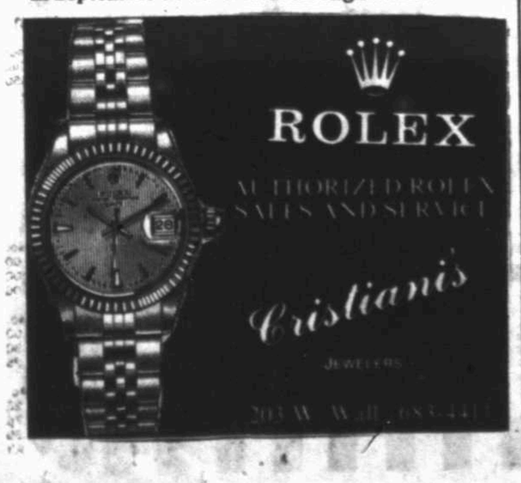

Dallas County Democrats organizing the service said Wednesday that the Vatican secretary of state responded that although the Pope was "favorably disposed to the Kennedy memorial observance, he makes only pastoral visits and delegates no representatives (to such events.)"

The group had announced last week that former Vice President Walter Mondale had confirmed that he would attend. But Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple, a state co-chairman for Mondale's Democratic presidential campaign, said Wednesday that a scheduling conflict might prevent the candidate from attending.

Decrease in crops expected

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas cotton producers expect to harvest 2.25 million bales this year, which would be the smallest crop since 1946, the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said Wednesday.

State statistician Dennis Findley said dryland cotton fields across the state continue to show effects of the hot, dry summer, and some crop losses are expected from freezing temperatures in September in the Northern High Plains.

Karen Carpenter unforgotten

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Richard Carpenter spoke of being "Close to You," saying his late sister Karen was "very much alive in our minds and in our hearts," as the pop music duo was honored with a star in the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

"This is a very sad day and at the same time a special day for my family and me," Carpenter, who will be 37 on Saturday, told about 250 family members, friends, fans, reporters and cameramen gathered for the unveiling of the Carpenters' star.

"My only regret is that Karen is not physically here to share it with us," he said.

Miss Carpenter died last March at age 32 of heart failure stemming from her long battle with anorexia nervosa, a disease characterized by self-starvation.

TANGIER, Morocco (AP) — Jacques-Yves Cousteau, known for his undersea discoveries, has made a breakthrough on top of the waves, a sailboat with no sails.

The explorer is en route to New York on what he bills as the final test of his revolutionary craft called the Moulin a Vent, which means windmill.

It's a 42-ton, 65-foot boat powered by a 44-foot high cylinder that sucks air through perforated "windows" creating a depression and propelling the craft along by deflecting air current. It can travel at up to 9.5 knots.

The 73-year-old inventor and filmmaker hopes to bring his catamaran into New York in four or five weeks with his oceanographic ship Calypso, which he will pick up along the way south of Bermuda. He left this Moroccan port Wednesday.

MILAN, Italy (AP) — President Sandro Pertini got a close-up look at Leonardo da Vinci's most renowned fresco. The 87-year-old head of state mounted a scaffold used by workers restoring a portion of "The Last Supper."

The occasion was the opening Wednesday of an exhibition surrounding "The Last Supper" in Milan's Santa Maria delle Grazie church.

Challenger flight may be delayed by malfunction

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Faulty equipment which one astronaut says came within 2.7 seconds of propelling space-shuttle Challenger into a "catastrophic" spin almost certainly will delay the next shuttle launch one to four months, NASA officials say.

A batch of coating material that failed to protect a rocket exhaust nozzle on the shuttle Challenger in August also was used on a nozzle on the shuttle Columbia, the space agency said Wednesday. Columbia is already on the launchpad for its scheduled Oct. 28 flight.

Test-firings are being done by the coating's maker to see if the problem occurs in other nozzles made from the same batch.

If Columbia cannot be launched as scheduled, the flight would have to wait until Nov. 27 when most conditions will be right for the new $1 billion European Spacelab which Columbia is to carry, or until conditions are favorable again in February.

nation

A decision is likely "within the next couple of days," John MacLeaish, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said Wednesday. However, he added, "There is a likelihood of a delay."

A NASA official in Houston who asked not to be named said, "I don't think there's a chance ... that we'll fly in October." An agency official in Washington, also requesting anonymity, concurred.

About half the 3-inch coating inside the nozzle is supposed to burn away as it dissipates heat from the flaming exhaust during the two-minute firing that lifts the shuttle into its initial climb.

But on one of Challenger's booster nozzles, recovered from the sea, NASA found the coating had burned down to two-tenths of an inch.

If the nozzle had burned through, the rocket's thrust would have spewed out one side, sending the shuttle off course in a cartwheel.

Astronaut Daniel Brandenstein, who piloted the flight, told CBS News that the nozzle would have burned through if the rockets had fired for another 2.7 seconds.

A burn-through would have been "catastrophic" and spelled "curtains" for the astronauts, he said.

A NASA official labeled that conclusion as conjecture.

Kahl stayed in home four days

HARRISON, Ark. (AP) — A woman who tipped authorities to the whereabouts of Gordon Kahl said the fugitive tax protester stayed in her family's home but moved out four days before he died in a shootout because he thought the FBI was closing in.

Karen Russell Robertson, who said she is living on the $25,000 reward money she received for her tip, testified Wednesday in federal court that Kahl stayed at her father's home for three months and left Memorial Day. He was killed June 3.

She testified in the trial of her father, Arthur Russell, and four others accused of harboring Kahl, a member of Posse Comitatus, a militant tax protest group. Kahl was wanted in the deaths of two U.S. marshals in North Dakota.

Man climbs 22-story bank building

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Pulling himself with a homemade device along the tracks used by window washers, a mountain climber made it to the top of a 22-story office building but now faces a hearing on disorderly conduct and trespassing charges.

Mike McGuire, 24, of suburban La Vista, said he climbed the First National Bank building Wednesday to publicize his upcoming attempt to hike across the North Pole.

A group of firefighters helping him onto the roof and police arrested him on the misdemeanor charges, said Capt. Michael London. McGuire later was released but faces a hearing later this month.

Youth gets four years in prison

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A 16-year-old youth was sentenced to four years in prison after pleading guilty to charges related to the murder of "junk food" professor Dr. Howard Appledorf.

Shane Kennedy of Woodbury, Conn., pleaded guilty Wednesday to burglary, robbery and grand theft of a car belonging to Appledorf. First-degree murder charges against Kennedy were dropped because two other youths who admitted the killings said he did not take part, State Attorney Eugene Whitworth said.

Appledorf, a University of Florida professor who touted "junk food" as an acceptable part of a diet, was found murdered at his apartment in Gainesville on Labor Day 1982.

Book's thrust: Civil War swords

KILGORE, Texas (AP) — During the Civil War, officers often valued one possession above any other: their swords.

Elaborately decorated, often having etched blades and silver hilts, they represented more than a weapon to an officer — they were his signature, one item he wanted to take home with him after the war.

David Stroud, a Kilgore College history professor, has written a book, "Inscribed Union Swords," about 41 of the swords and the men who owned them. He selected only swords inscribed with the officers' names, which account for about 15 percent of all swords, he said.

"Men would risk their lives to keep their swords from being captured by enemies," Stroud said. "It was the only item an officer was going to carry that he could not get as a civilian...a civilian could have a horse. He could have a jacket. He could have a cap. He could have a pistol. He could wear a uniform if he was a police officer, let's say.

"But the only item he wouldn't have as a civilian was a sword. It is pure military. By being presented this sword represented a transferral from civilian to soldier."

At the time of the war, the soldiers had to supply their own uniforms, horses, pistols and swords, he said. An officer's pay was only $45 a month and a sword cost about $12. Often, they were given to him by friends or family before battle and were inscribed with his name and a message. The officers also received swords for distinguishing themselves in battle or when they returned home after the war.

Stroud, 39, describes in detail the 41 swords, telling what they were made of, the length (about 32 inches), the weight (about 3 pounds), the etching and the inscription. Eight of them are his — he started collecting swords five years ago — and the rest belong to other collectors.

All of the swords described in the book are Union swords; Confederate ones are much rarer and are worth about five times as much, he said.

The most elaborate sword described has a gold scabbard and cost $1,000 in 1862. Stroud, for security reasons, doesn't like to say how much the swords will bring today.

"People think swords are worth a fortune or they're not worth anything," he said. "They don't have any idea what they're worth."

In his book, he devotes several paragraphs to the owners of each sword.

"Some people say, "Well, did you just pick out the most interesting stories?'" he said. "In a way, I think that's unfair. It gives us a false impression of these people. Not every soldier was at Gettysburg. Not every soldier got shot at in the Civil War. Not everyone was a hero."

Getting the information about the officers was time consuming but not as difficult as one might think. First, Stroud looked at the inscription to see when the sword was given to the officer, then he looked up a newspaper from a town near where the officer lived. Most newspapers of the time ran stories about the officers who were presented swords, he said.

Children's mental health scrutinized

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A major study is starting on the mental health of American Indian children, called by researchers "Flowers of Two Soils" for the challenges they face growing up in two cultures.

The researchers say it is the largest epidemiological study ever to try to understand why Indian children in the United States and Canada, after age 9, receive more mental health treatment and often fare worse in school than their non-Indian counterparts.

Very much alike up to that age, the two groups' divergence broadens as the children grow older, studies have shown.

"We are trying to learn why this happens," said Dr. Damian McShane, a psychiatrist at Oregon Health Sciences University who is the U.S. project director. "Do differences in learning performance cause emotional problems, or is it the other way around?"

He added, "Typically, Indian children are at greater risk ... because of the instability of the cultural contact situation."

The five-year $1.5 million study is being financed by the National Institute of Mental Health, the William T. Grant Foundation of New York and the Canadian Health and Welfare, National Health Research Directorate Program.

Cultural differences in handling certain situations — death, for example — may influence outsiders' perceptions of Indian children's mental health, according to McShane. Indians' problems may be interpreted differently by those referring them for treatment, he said.

In addition, McShane said in a recent interview, "Some of my research suggests that Indian children are referred for different reasons than non-Indian children."

To keep cultural bias in their questionnaires to a minimum, "We're involving (Indian) community representatives to take a look at each questionnaire item-by-item ... For instance, aking an Indian, 'Who discovered America?' could be a problem and a source of cultural bias."

This is the first time such a technique has been used in a research project, he said. Two thousand Indian children between the ages of 7 and 14 will participate.

"We're asking the community panels to help us interpret the data, say, 'This is what it means to us,'" said McShane.

The Indian community panels already have been set up. The research team will begin its work with the children in January, and McShane said it will probably be 1987 before the analysis is completed.

Cannons blast apart old ideas

From Wire Reports

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Five old iron cannons that appeared during a storm on a beach here have blasted apart comfortable assumptions about where Sir Francis Drake established the New World's first English-speaking settlement.

Those who believe that Queen Elizabeth I's spy, pirate and explorer stayed in Santa Barbara, instead of near San Francisco, hope X-rays scheduled for this winter will prove the cannons were brought ashore by Drake when he stopped for repairs in 1579.

The cannons are covered with tar, mud, rock and shell, but some think X-rays will reveal Drake's or Elizabeth I's coat of arms beneath the debris. Initial X-rays already have revealed an item resembling a flask inside one of the cannons, and experts hope tests will confirm the presence of something in writing stuffed inside. An expert metallurgist says tests indicate the cannons may have been forged around the time of Drake's voyage.

PROOF that Drake and his crew aboard the Golden Hind made a five-week stop in Santa Barbara 404 years ago would destroy long and fervently-held beliefs that they put ashore at or near San Francisco Bay.

The Santa Barbara theory has been heatedly criticized. Some say the guns could have rolled off an early-American vessel during a storm, or they could be Hollywood props lost during the filming of "Two Years Before the Mast."

Four of the cannons will be hauled to the Varian Corp. in Palo Alto in January, where, experts hope, a powerful X-ray machine will penetrate the uncleaned surfaces.

DRAKE had been rounding the world by sea for 18 months, his vessel loaded with perhaps 80 tons of gold, silver and Chinese porcelain pirated from the Spaniards off Latin America, when he came to the California coast. The Golden Hind was leaking badly, and Drake sailed north to Oregon — perhaps as far as Vancouver Island — before turning south again in search of a harbor where the crew could patch the vessel.

Drake's own logs, which he gave to Elizabeth, have disappeared. Other recorded accounts of those on board said Drake stopped off in a "faire and good baye" covered with fog after he rounded a point and spotted white cliffs that reminded him and his crew of those of Dover, England. Latitude readings and mentions of nearby islands also are used to support the theory that Drake landed in the San Francisco area.

SURVIVING journals say Drake carried three anchors and 18 cannons, five of them iron and the rest brass. Heavily laden with plunder after leaving the West Coast, Drake dumped eight of his brass cannons to lighten his load, according to the journals.

Those supporting Santa Barbara as a landing site say that if Drake were dumping brass cannons, worth three times as much as iron ones, in the South Pacific, he must have discarded the five iron ones earlier.

'Crank' phones yanked at last

BRYANT POND, Maine (AP) — Residents of this western Maine village said goodbye to their hand-cranked phones and started dialing and pushing buttons earlier this week as the nation's last hand-cranked telephone system rang for the last time.

"They've been playing with their new phone sets since they were put in this morning," said F. Robert Jamison, general manager of Oxford County Telephone & Telegraph Co.

The antiquated manual switchboard in Elden Hathaway's living room — which served 430 phones — was replaced with an automated unit in a separate building, enabling local callers to reach the outside world. Bryant Pond residents will no longer need an operator.

Jamison asked to make the last call on the old system, to Correy Snowden, a company employee who is in Maine Medical Center in Portland. Snowden played an important role in the company's modernization work.

When it bought the Bryant Pond Telephone Co. from Hathaway two years ago, Jamison's company said it would have to switch to a dial system in order to operate at a profit.

Group: End program-length ads on TV

WASHINGTON (AP) — A children's advocacy group earlier this week petitioned federal regulators to stop TV stations from airing cartoons featuring characters that are sold as toys.

"Someone has to let broadcasters know that they can't get away with turning children's television into 'The Big Sell,'" said Peggy Charren, the founder and chairman of Action for Children's Television. "Commercial broadcasters and advertisers are working together to deprive children of their rights to TV entertainment and education."

Mrs. Charren, in a 16-page complaint filed with the Federal Communications Commission, charged that broadcasters "are exploiting the child audience" by airing programs that can't be differentiated from commercials. She cited eight Saturday morning network programs, totaling 5½ hours of air time, ranging from "Pac-Man" and "Monchhichis" to the "Smurfs" and "Dungeons and Dragons."

Also cited were six children's specials, including "G.I. Joe" and "Strawberry Shortcake."

All of the dolls or toys represented in those shows were introduced before the programs, Mrs. Charren said.

"None of the products was a 'spin-off' of a successful television program...," the complaint adds. "The desire to promote the products such as toys and-or sets of toys precipitated the development of the program-length commercials."

In its petition, Action for Children's Television notes the FCC has already adopted a policy warning broadcasters against programs masquerading as commercials. The petition calls on the agency to enforce its policy by requiring TV stations to "log" such programs as commercials.

'Special delivery' unexpected

ELK, Wash. (AP) — Lillian Zella Vanderholm has given new meaning to the term "special delivery" — she was born on a post office floor.

Thelma Vanderholm gave birth to the 8-pound, 6½-ounce girl at the Post Office in Elk as her husband, Gary, assisted in the delivery — taking instructions by phone from a Spokane doctor.

Mrs. Vanderholm called the father-to-be Friday telling him the arrival of their fifth child was imminent. He rushed from his job to their couple's home in the Elk area, about 25 miles north of Spokane.

"I got home, got her into the car and headed for the hospital," he said, "but when Thelma screamed with pain in Elk, I stopped at the post office and carried her inside and put her down on a blanket."

Vanderholm, with the telephone instructions, helped deliver the baby. Also helping was the infant's grandmother, postmistress Carol Vanderholm.

The new mother said earlier this week it all "was easy, too easy," but admitted, "I was kind of scared." Vanderholm called it a "nerve-racking and exhausting experience."

Jet-setter pigeon flys home

JIDDA, Saudi Arabia (AP) — A Dutch carrier pigeon is winging back to Europe — aboard a jet — after finding the Saudi Arabian desert not much to its liking.

The English-language newspaper Arab News said that the thirsty pigeon, which sported a leg band bearing the Dutch registration "NL 75," was found by a Jidda resident who delivered it to Dr. Jan Breman, the Dutch ambassador to the kingdom.

Dutch embassy officials said it would have been impossible for the pigeon to fly all the way to Jidda. They speculated the feathered vagabond may have gotten lost in flight and made an unscheduled stop on an oil tanker bound for Saudi Arabia.

The bird was being sent back in style — aboard a Dutch DC-10 jet.

Witch curses complainer

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — A woman who claims to be a witch says prejudice has forced her to close a market stall where she sold love candles, ritual oils and crystal balls, and she's not going to take it lying down.

She says she's putting a curse on the person who got her evicted from Manchester's Butter Lane market.

"I was seeking a new image for witchcraft," said Barbara Brandolini, a member of a Manchester coven called the Hermetic Order of the Silver Blade.

Mrs. Brandolini, 35 — whose wares also included voodoo masks, daggers and witch gowns — said she was forced to put a curse on a nearby stallholder who demanded that she leave. "I haven't drawn up a full ritual but I will if I get any more hassle," she said Monday.

She appealed for a more understanding attitude toward her craft.

Breath of life

A month ago we accepted a fact we didn't like and conceded that the Human Relations Council's days of serving Midland had come to an end. In that editorial, we said, "As much as anything, the HRC simply did outlive its purpose. It outlived its time, too."

Well, now we know that the agency was saved from disbandment in its final days by the generous contributions of private donors. Those individuals have our gratitude for the breath of life they extended to the HRC. The donations, when coupled with $25,000 in funding from the City of Midland and $3,500 from Midland College, give the agency a total operating budget for an additional year of $43,000.

Chances are the agency's dark days haven't ended. An agency like the council lives year to year, drawing its existence primarily from governing bodies and generous donors. To continue to exist, it must justify its existence.

We have supported the Human Relations Council for years and will continue to do so. Its assistance for the elderly and handicapped, and in promoting racial harmony in Midland are needed, probably more today than during years past. But to remain a viable human relations organization AND continue to receive widespread public support, the agency should follow these few basic rules:

— Change, as necessary, with the times. Stay attuned to the pulse of the community being served and fill the need that exists.

— Move into new areas of financial assistance. Find funds to disburse for aid and establish the mechanism for disbursing them.

— First and foremost, stay visible within the community. That will serve two purposes: It will let those who need help know that help is available and it will let prospective donors know what they're getting for their money.

Midland City Councilman Steve Davidson remarked, "I'm pleased they've decided to stay in business. I think there's a role for them in this community."

We couldn't agree more.

Another View:

Labor's new chance

Ever since the humiliating defeat of Britain's Labor Party in the parliamentary elections last June, the question has been whether the party will move back toward the mainstream of public opinion or become a shriveling little collection of Marxists who are taken seriously by nobody.

Now that Labor has concluded its annual conference at Brighton, the question is still open.

Neil Kinnock, who was elected party leader, is a pragmatist who is willing to bend his own leftist convictions in order to reunify the party and reestablish its credibility as an alternative to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government. As the proceedings of the Brighton conference demonstrated, however, the doctrinaire leftists who have become increasingly influential in the party learned nothing from the electoral debacle last June.

With more than 3 million unemployed and the British economy in deep trouble, it is extraordinary that the Labor Party did not win a majority even among trade-union members, which are its natural constituency. More remarkable still, fewer than half the unemployed and a third of Britain's young people voted Labor.

The election results did not reflect support for the Conservatives as much as disgust with the Labor Party, which ran on a muddled platform pledging unilateral nuclear disarmament, withdrawal from the European Common Market and a radical domestic program plainly out of step with economic reality and present-day public attitudes.

The trade-union movement, fearful that it was suffering from overly close association with the Labor Party, has tentatively begun to put some distance between itself and the party.

There is real concern among party moderates that unless the leftward drift can be halted the party will experience still further defeats in special elections next spring, suffer more defections to the Social Democrats and pass the point of return as a viable opposition party.

The choice of Kinnock as party leader augurs well, despite the fact that the 41-year-old Welshman is a man of the left himself. He appears to be making genuine efforts to unify the fractured party, and has softened his stand on unilateral disarmament toward that end.

If his purpose is indeed to lead Labor away from its image as the party of muddle-headed pacifism, he will have his hands full.

The Brighton conference overwhelmingly passed resolutions confirming and strengthening its call for unilateral nuclear disarmament and rejection of membership in "Pentagon-dominated" military pacts — an obvious reference to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Speakers who disagreed were hooted down.

Britain, like any democracy, needs a healthy opposition party. For various reasons, the Liberal-Social Democratic alliance is not yet in a position to perform that role. Well-wishers can only hope that the voices of reason within the Labor Party eventually prevail over the crackpot left.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Senators' oil interests guiding

WASHINGTON — Out of the fathomless mix of trade-offs and pressures that move the Senate, a bill emerged last summer that would enrich the big oil companies.

Jack Anderson

A heroic attempt was made inside the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee to block the bill from reaching the Senate floor. The vote was close, but the oil lobby won a narrow 11 to 9 victory.

Four of the senators who voted to send the bill to the Senate floor have financial interests in oil companies that would benefit from its passage. The skids are now oiled for enacting legislation that would gradually lift price controls on "old" natural gas — discovered before 1977.

What would this cost the consumers? The oil companies have engaged in some purposeful obfuscations to keep this vague. But according to preliminary Energy Department figures, the deregulation would transfer billions from the pockets of the consumers to the coffers of the oil companies.

The nation's 16 largest oil companies would rake in $1 billion to $4 billion the first year. By 1990, the estimated cost to consumers would be $30 billion or more.

After months of testimony, in which consumer groups and oil interests traded blows, the energy committee approved the bill. A change of two votes would have deflated this multibillion-dollar balloon.

Oil tycoons habitually are quiet contributors and distant financiers of friendly politicians. So I assigned my reporters Jock Hatfield and Laurie Siegel to check into the finances of the committee members. At least four had financial reasons to vote the bill out of committee.

The existence of these financial ties doesn't necessarily mean the four senators have been bought by Big Oil. But it raises serious questions about possible conflicts of interest. Here are the financial connections of the gang of four:

— Chairman James McClure, R-Idaho, the principal architect and advocate of the deregulation bill, received $17,000 in speaking fees last year from oil-related organizations. These included Aminoil, Ashland Oil and the American Petroleum Institute, all staunch champions of deregulation.

Since the first of the year, McClure's campaign committee has also accepted more than $30,000 from oil and gas interests to help finance his re-election race next year. The senator denies that the speaking fees and campaign contributions have had any influence on his Senate actions.

— Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., owns $30,000 to $100,000 worth of stock in Mobil Oil, which should make anywhere from $259 million to $462 million during the first year of deregulation, according to the preliminary Energy Department figures. As trustee for his family, Weicker oversees an additional $540,000 to $1,320,000 in oil stocks. The senator sees no conflict.

— Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., owns $35,000 to $115,000 worth of stock in Exxon, Chevron and Amoco — three of the biggest potential beneficiaries from deregulation. He has also received almost $100,000 in royalties from Getty Oil since 1978. Getty stands to make $54 million to $170 million if deregulation is passed.

Wallop also was given more than $25,000 in contributions by independent oil producers last year for his successful re-election campaign. Coincidentally, he was the author of an amendment benefitting independent producers. Wallop declined comment.

— Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska., said his support for gas deregulation stems from a "deep-rooted free-market inclination." But it also coincides happily with the best interests of his stock portfolio, which includes $15,000 in Standard Oil and Gulf.

WATCH ON CUBA: Radio Havana is beaming its revolutionary propaganda at the South American boondocks — in language that only the natives can understand. According to U.S. intelligence monitors, Radio Havana has been sending subversive messages to Quechua-speaking Indians in the Peruvian and Bolivian Andes.

In Peru, the obvious aim is to stir up the Indians behind the Maoist "Shining Path" guerrillas, who have been operating in the highlands since 1980.

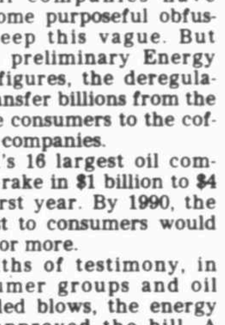

The other Indian-language radio campaign from Havana is to the Guarani minority in Paraguay, where Gen. Alfredo Stroessner has been in power for 29 years. This makes him the dean of Latin American dictators. (Maybe that's Castro's motive: He's No. 2 in tenure, with 24 years in power.)

GEORGE F. WILL

Baseball: An engaging opiate

BALTIMORE — Like the fellow in the Bible who tried to reason with the deaf adder and did not get to first base, Mrs. Will has been telling me that at 42 I should grow up. I see no merit in her suggestion, but have agreed to think about something other than baseball during the wasteland that stretches like the Sahara between the World Series and spring training.

George F. Will

Before that long night descends, let me note that the Baltimore Orioles, with the best record in baseball during nearly the last 27 years, are one of two American institutions of consistent excellence. The other is the telephone company. The government is fiddling with that, so the Orioles may soon have cornered the market on quality.

Considering the way some less-than-excellent players are paid today, Joe DiMaggio has a point when he says that if he were negotiating a contract with Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, he would be able to say, "George, you and I are about to become partners." Oh, for the days of innocence when the Pirates' Honus Wagner, the greatest shortstop ever, rejected a salary offer of $2,000 by declaring: "I won't play for a penny less than fifteen hundred dollars." (An NFL running back got those numbers confused this year when he said his goal was to gain 1,500 yards or 2,000 yards, "whichever comes first.")

Amazingly, the beauty of baseball is not apparent to everyone. When baseball gave lifetime passes to the 52 hostages released from Iran, a football fan asked, "Haven't they suffered enough?" Some critics say baseball is just another opiate of the masses, another of the distractions that American society produces so prolifically, diverting attention from the class struggle or the Iowa caucuses. But not all distractions are created equal. Some numb the mind (alcohol, the Iowa caucuses); others engage the mind (baseball).

Besides, reasonable people want to be distracted from the world's horrors, which sometimes include a baseball team. When Miro's avant-garde sculpture "Chicago" was unveiled in that city, a lady with a lived-in face was asked if she liked it. "Yeah," she said, "it keeps me from thinking about the Cubs."

It is said that baseball is "only a game." Yes, and the Grand Canyon is only a hole in Arizona.

Proof of the genius of ancient Greece is that it understood baseball's future importance. Greek philosophers considered sport a religious and civic--in a word, a moral–undertaking. Sport, they said, is morally serious because mankind's noblest aim is the loving contemplation of worthy things, such as beauty and courage. By witnessing physical grace, the soul comes to understand and love beauty. Seeing persons compete courageously and fairly helps emancipate the individual by educating his passions.

Professional sports can be a melancholy business because an athlete's career compresses so much of life's trajectory into a short span. But as the Pirates' Willie Stargell said, "The umpires always say 'Play Ball.' They don't say 'Work Ball'." That is why once when Stargell was boarding another 3 a.m. plane after a night game, he said: "I'm not crying; I asked to be a ball player."

Besides, baseball players are less subject than most athletes to the cruelty of the calendar. Look at the Phillies. They are balm to the spirits of middle-aged men. The leadoff batter is 40, the next batter is 42, the star pitcher is 38. They have between them 61 years in major league baseball. (I leave to philosphers to question of whether the pinball game the Phillies play on that plastic carpet is really baseball.)

My spiritual adviser (Tom Boswell, baseball writer, Washington Post) notes that such longevity, although not normal, is not unheard of. Henry Aaron and Warren Spahn got better after they turned 35. Aaron hit 245 home runs; Spahn won 20 or more games seven times, 180 in all. As Boswell says, no other team sport is so fascinated with the process of aging as baseball, perhaps because none of our other sports are based on skill and timing rather than brute force. No other sport has so many 10- and 15- and even 20-year careers.

Great sporting events are unifying events for the communities directly involved. For the nation they are exceptions to what sometimes seems to be a rule–that our shared experiences are either sad, such as the assassination of President Kennedy, or divisive, such as the firing of General MacArthur. The World Series occurs four times as frequently as the Iowa caucuses. What a wonderful country America is.

ART BUCHWALD

Competitive airlines for birds

I have this hot line to a "crisis center." Every Monday morning I call up a guy and ask him, "What's the crisis of the week?" and for $25 he tells me.

Art Buchwald

This week I called him and he said, "The 'big C' is the airline crisis. It could be a Mt. St. Helens."

"What happened?" I asked him.

"The thing that started it all was the big boys in aviation wanted the airlines deregulated because they claimed they weren't making enough money. So the administration deregulated the friendly skies of America and opened them to the marketplace."

"Free competition is what this country thrives on," I said.

"The only problem was that after they got deregulated, all the big boys wanted to fly the same routes. A company that used to fly to Charlotte, North Carolina, decided to fly to London, England, instead. Every major company put on flights to Hawaii and cancelled flights to middle America. Instead of going to Missoula, Montana, one airline started a daily service to Tokyo. Pretty soon you could fly to Maimi every 15 minutes, but you could only go to Buffalo once a week.

"With all the competition for the major cities, the airlines got into a price war. First they cut their fares — then they offered you a free seat for your wife. Then they advertised you could take all your children with you. And finally, during the recession, they let you take all the people that you had met in a bar. There wasn't an empty seat on the plane, but there was only one paying passenger.

"To make things worse, the little guys started taking on the big boys and price-cut the hell out of them. The little guys were nonunion, no-frill companies who offered you nothing but a seat. But for $39 you could fly from New York to Los Angeles with a layover in Newfoundland."

"I guess the free market was really working."

"It was for the little guys, but the big boys were going nuts. They came up with new sales gimmicks. If you flew a certain number of miles on their airline, they would upgrade you from tourist to first class. If you flew 15,000 miles they would let you sit in the co-pilot's seat. If you flew 100,000 miles they made you president of the company. Most of the people now running a losing airline came up through the ranks from the 'frequent flyer plan.'

"To make things worse, the big boys guessed wrong on what planes they would need for their companies. Some ordered planes that were too big — others ordered planes that were too small. When they had too many planes in mothballs, they had to sell a lot of them to the little guys who were putting them out of business. Of course it wasn't their fault. One of the major airline executives was walking through his terminal at Kennedy Airport and it was jammed with people. He immediately ordered six new 747s. What he didn't realize, until later, was that all the people there were from Central America, waiting for their grandmothers to get off the plane."

"That was an honest mistake," I said.

"To make things worse, the big boys, to protect themselves from their stockholders, invested their cash flow in other businesses, such as hotels, fast-food franchises and natural gas. Since they were making money in these businesses the stockholders started demanding they spin off the airline part of their business.

"Everyone made mistakes. Eastern Airlines thought it could get healthy by having Frank Borman do their TV commercials. He was very credible but he didn't sell any tickets."

"Why didn't they scrub the advertising campaign?"

"What advertising executive is going to tell the chairman of the board of Eastern Airlines he can no longer do the company's commercials?"

"What a mess," I said. "I guess the big boys are sorry they ever asked for deregulation for the airlines. Are they going to go back and lobby for airline regulation again?"

"That's their only chance. Most of them have decided free air competition is for the birds."

SCHLOTZSKY'S BRINGS VARIETY TO YOUR LUNCH

How many times have you gotten those "eating out blues"? Those are the times when you waste your whole lunch hour trying to decide where you want to eat. Or evenings when you don't want to cook, but you just can't decide where to go. Most places seem to get "old" after only a few times. But not Schlotzsky's. Next time you get those blues, come by Schlotzsky's in Midland or Odessa for a truly enjoyable meal.

Schlotzsky's offers menu variety with nine different sandwiches to satisfy even the hungriest appetite. If you have never tried Schlotzsky's before, you just don't know what you are missing. The original Schlotzsky's sandwich is a combination of three different meats, three cheeses, lettuce, onions, black olives, tomatoes, and mustard. Delicious! All sandwiches are available on either white or wheat bun, which are fresh baked daily right in the store. Sandwiches are also available in two different sizes.

Other sandwiches besides the original include roast beef, ham, ham & swiss, or smoked turkey. You may also order a cheese sandwich, as well as chicken salad or tuna salad. There is even a peanut butter and jam sandwich available for the children. Schlotzsky's will fix your sandwich just the way you like it with extra meat or cheese, adding guacamole or jalapenos, or deleting any item you prefer. All orders are fresh, with a fresh baked bun and fresh ingredients. They also offer a salad bar, soup of the day, and other extras. After your meal, be sure and try their home-made chocolate chip cookie. Schlozsky's believes in serving their customers only the best, with the highest quality ingredients available. Come in and give them a try; you'll be back. Schlotzsky's offers a sure cure for the "eating out blues". And when you go by any of the Schlotzsky's stores in Midland or Odessa, register for the second $1000 cash giveaway.

First prize is $1000 cash. with $250 given for second and $100 given away as third prize. Come by any Schlotzsky's to register. They are located at 1024 Andrews Hwy. the Blanks Bldg. in Midland, and at 1919 West County Road and 1351 E. 8th in Odessa. Call ahead and have your order ready when you arrive.

Watt living in seclusion

James Watt

SANTA YNEZ, Calif. (AP) — Even though the president has accepted his resignation, Interior Secretary James Watt rides tall in the saddle in "Reagan Country" while staying in carefully orchestrated seclusion.

The Santa Ynez Valley, touted as "California's Shangri-La," appears to be a friendly paradise for the controversial Watt, who has kept his distance from a small corps of reporters camped outside Barrack Ranch, where he is vacationing and where he announced his resignation Sunday.

"Jim Watt has a lot of friends here," ranch neighbor George Chamberlain said Wednesday. "I feel it is a crime that the man has been crucified over a few words."

Chamberlain shares Watt's disdain for Washington bureaucrats.

"Those guys back East think we are still fighting Indians out here," Chamberlain said. "But there's people out here still doing things, sweating for a living, not just riding elevators up and down."

This small valley east of Santa Barbara is known as "Reagan Country." It stretches from President Reagan's ranch, about seven miles away, to the windmills of Solvang, a tourist attraction done up like a Danish village, two miles down the road.

Nearby are the homes of movies stars Bo Derek and John Travolta, and pop music stars Paul McCartney and Michael Jackson drove past reporters after a session making a videotape.

Many of the valley's residents, like Watt's host Thomas Barrack, are gentlemen ranchers who made their fortunes elsewhere and moved here to live a life of simple elegance in the shadow of the rugged Santa Ynez Mountains.

Watt has refused to talk with reporters since he announced his resignation. But he has scheduled "photo opportunities" daily.

Celluloid won $10,000

The beginning of the plastics industry can be traced to Oct. 10, 1870, when John W. Hyatt won a $10,000 prize by producing the best substitute for an ivory billiard ball — Celluloid.

Border to get more aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush announced Wednesday that another $17 million in federal assistance has been awarded in the past week to Southwestern border communities whose economies are suffering due to last year's Mexican peso devaluations.

The awards are part of a program being coordinated by a special task force established by President Reagan to assist such communities.

No new money has been appropriated for the program but officials say they are trying to accelerate federal aid that would have been awarded later.

Awards announced for the past week are:

— $4.3 million in Small Business Administration loans and federal procurement contracts to small firms in Texas, Arizona and California. The names and locations of the firms were not specified.

— An $8,199,272 Department of Housing and Urban Development grant for improving about 2,000 housing units in Texas, Arizona, California and New Mexico. The names of the communities were not specified.

— $133,357 in Department of Interior contracts for firms in Cameron County, Texas, and Yuma County, Ariz. The names of the firms were not specified.

— A $4,132,711 Environmental Protection Agency grant to build a new waste water treatment plant in Las Cruces, N.M.

— A $288,940 Department of Agriculture grant to provide low-income housing in Somerton, Calif.

Pilots ordered down

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The ear-splitting roar of the Navy's Blue Angels precision flying team during a surprise downtown practice session — and the barrage of telephone calls it triggered — prompted Mayor Dianne Feinstein to "order" the planes down.

"I thought it was the Russians coming when I heard the jets," said Diane Comer, an employee of a computer leasing company.

After the complaints poured in, the mayor "got on the telephone to the Navy and ordered them to bring those planes down," said her spokesman, Tom Eastham. "The mayor was concerned that so many people were frightened."

Ms. Feinstein had no legal authority to order the six A-4 fighters out of the sky Wednesday, he conceded. A Navy spokesman said the practice session ended before officials received the mayor's request.

The fliers were to return today to stage an air show over San Francisco Bay marking the beginning of Fleet Week and the Navy's 208th birthday.

RUGBY A kick in the grass...

Above, the ball is put into play through a scrum, where both teams meet head-to-head for possession. At right, players battle for the ball being thrown in from out-of-bounds, known as a line-out. Defending state Champion Midland-Odessa is in the checkered jerseys.

Text by Bruce Castleberry

If the terms ruck, maul, and scrum down don't ring familiar, it may be due to a lack of knowledge about a sport that has developed a cult-like following world wide.

In America, rugby isn't widely followed as yet, but their are pockets of enthusiasts that hold manic fans and players.

And in the Permian Basin, there is a rugby team that has established a level of excellence unsurpassed in the state of Texas.

The Midland-Odessa rugby club, as it is officially called, has been in the area for several years and has had a hectic existence. Morris Lasater, the player/coach of the team, has been associated with the program since the mid-70's.

Unofficially, the team goes by more descriptive names. The first side is the 'varsity' level, known as the Mad Dogs. The second side, a sort of novice level, is known as the Dog Catchers.

Dogging opponents is the goal of the Midland-Odessa team, members of the ten-team Rio Grande Union. The Mad Dogs were great Danes last year, capturing the Texas state championship. All but one regular returns this year.

The actual playing of the game is simple enough, but to an inexperienced viewer the game seems a little wild. As one player puts it: "The first time I saw a game I thought it was total chaos. It's hard to understand initially because there is so much going on."

Indeed. The game has specific rules, but basically, according to another player, "you just grab the ball and get on with it."

Briefly, the game consists of two teams of 15 players each, all who have particular duties but who all can be involved in scoring points. Points are scored by four methods. A try is when a player carries the ball over the goal line and places the ball on the ground. This is the grandfather of football's touchdown, and in rugby a try is exactly that - a touching down of the ball. Tries are worth four points.

After a try, a team can get two points with a kick, again a football relative. Other ways of scoring are by a drop kick or a penalty kick. The drop kick occurs in live action, the penalty occurs after (obviously) an infraction. Both kicks are worth three points.

Other than that, rugby is pretty much a free-for-all. There are many ways to come about these points, but play usually follows no set pattern. This is one of the things that separates the game from football. Rugby players don't regard football with the typical reverence of the average West Texan, and Lasater states that a key problem among new converts to the game is "letting go of our football skills. There are some bad habits. Tucking the ball in and trying to get the extra yard doesn't cut it."

In fact, many players are glad the game is different from football. Unlike football, the live contact in rugby is unprotected. Players use very little padding or protection, even though tackling, hitting and general high-speed collisions are integral parts of rugby.

"In football," said a San Antonio player before their recent 37-5 loss to the Mad Dogs, "you have a set pattern of play, but in rugby there's a lot of room for extraneous action."

Rugby players experience many rigors over the course of a season. Teams rarely have any funding or financial support, thus almost every cost is incurred by the players. In the case of teams like the Mad Dogs, opponents are usually many miles away. Therefore, expenses over the course of a season can run quite high. "Our closest road game is 300 miles away," said Lasater. "Traveling is a problem."

The sport claims other casualties as well. One player said the biggest key to a good team is having "understanding wives or girlfriends. There are a lot of people who don't understand why a rugby player will spend all his spare time practicing during the week, be gone on the weekend for a tournament, and spend all that money just to play rugby."

The sport does have its rewards. Although pain is a constant companion of the rugby player, the fringe benefits and the sheer fun of playing more than compensate the effort expounded. Rugby players are legendary party people who enjoy the camaraderie of the sport. Consequently, players from both sides often meet after games to fraternize and consume spirits.

As for now, Lasater and the Dogs simply want to continue to have fun, and that means to keep winning. "These guys are fun," says the coach. "One thing is that we play together and have fun. It makes it real enjoyable.

"Rugby is my hobby. I don't do anything else."

Left, referee Dave Harris checks an injured player. The referee is the lord of the playing surface, known as a pitch. The rules of rugby allow only two substitutions per game, so injuries are checked very closely. Should three players become unable to play, the team suffering the losses must play shorthanded. In the right photo, all eyes are on the ball as players struggle for control. Inside this pile-up, the men are seperated from the boys.

New Leaf portends new era for Badgers

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

When McCamey coach Buster Leaf took over the Badger helm, it was the start of a new era.

The people of McCamey don't accept mediocrity from their Badgers. Leaf had been successful in his three years as head man at New Deal (25-6-1), leading them into the playoffs last year before losing to Reagan County.

Leaf had a measure of revenge last week with the Badgers rallying to edge Big Lake's Owls, 8-7. But the ebullient coach doesn't have much time to savor the district-opening victory. The Badgers face their sternest test of the season Friday night when they visit the 5-1 Wall Hawks.

"They are a very good football team," Leaf observed Monday. "It will be a real challenge for us. Both teams are undefeated (1-0) in district, and going to be a good football game."

The Hawks were supposed to be leading District 8-2A at this stage, but few people expected the Badgers to arrive so soon. Leaf instituted an entirely new offensive and defensive scheme, and even he did not expect the Badgers to develop this fast. But last year's All-District quarterback, senior Ray Zarate, has done a superb job of guiding the Badger option. Zarate has been helped by the line charges of massive fullback Robert Day (6-2, 200) and the addition of freshman tailback Rodney Terry.

Terry, at 5-6, 156, isn't the kind of back that runs over people. Day fills that role, a la John Riggins, and Terry is the burner. Size doesn't appear to have discouraged the little speedster, because Terry has been quite competent as the leading Badger ground gainer.

McCamey can rush the ball, but the Wall ground game has Leaf at the drawing board. Hawk carrier Lance Powell is the key figure, having gained over 1,000 yards last year and continuing on a similar pace in 1983. If leaf is looking for a weakness, he may try to rattle sophomore quarterback Randy Krupula.

"It's the biggest game we've played this year," Leaf said. "It's time for us to rise up and take the challenge." Leaf isn't wild about having the game this early in the district slate, but said "You've got to have it sometime."

McCamey starter Tim Welling, a defensive end/tight end, has missed practice this week due to some bumps and bruises, but should be on hand Friday.

Other area games for week seven:

Rankin (1-4) at Iraan (2-3): The Red Devils have improved dramatically the past two weeks, but don't have the manpower to beat Iraan. Iraan has been a disappointment thus far. After being picked in many preseason Top 10's, Iraan stumbled from the blocks with an 0-3 start. The real Iraan may have stood up, meaning the Devils should spend a lot of time not standing up Friday.

Crane (6-0) at Coahoma (3-3): The Cranes escaped their first district battle at Sonora by a 7-3 count, and coach Rickey White hopes the Cranes get back to their pre-district form. That means, he wants Crane to go back to blowing out opponents 38-6 and 27-0. Behind the power running of the Vasquez brothers, Junior Sena and Todd Rodgers, Crane is likely to make this hurdle easily and continue their collision course with district co-leader and fifth ranked Ballinger, Oct. 28.

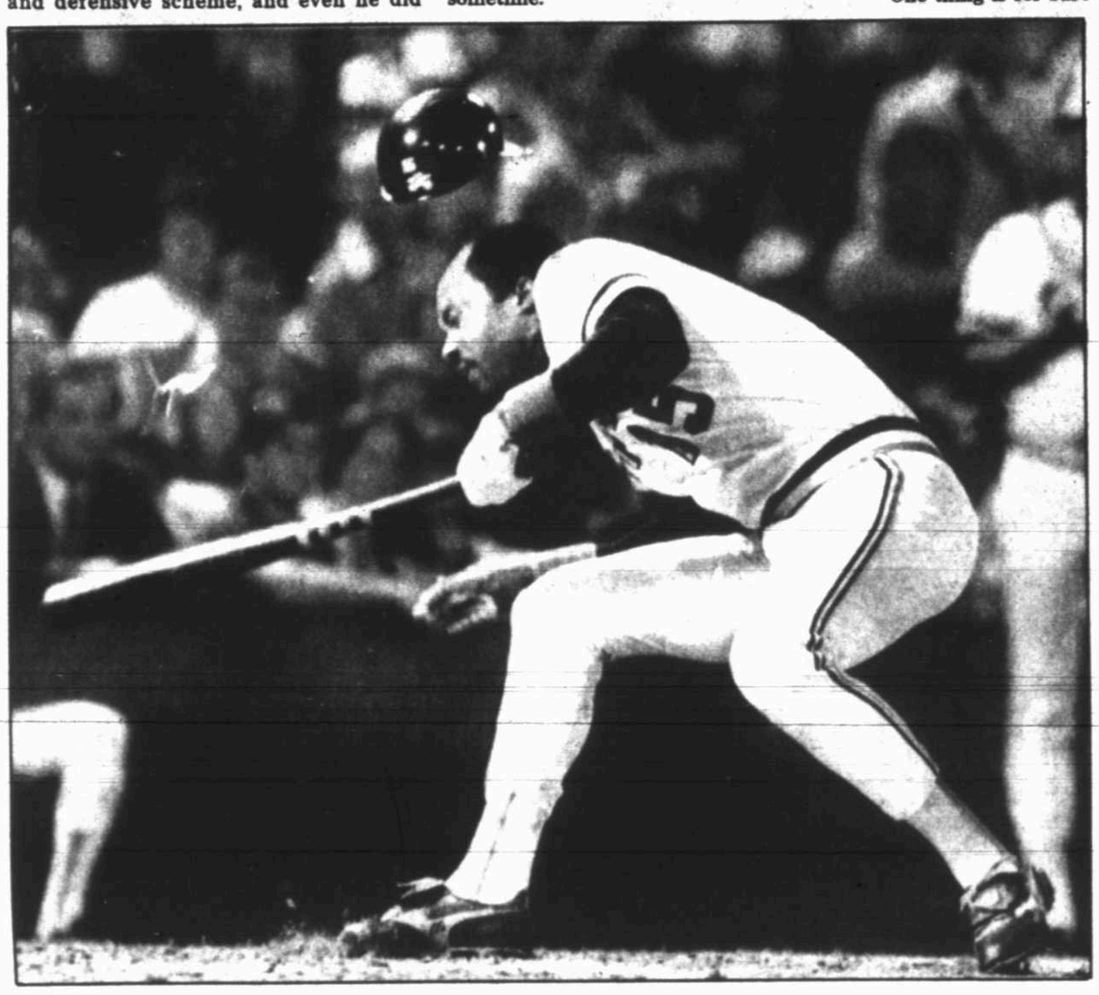

Eldorado (3-3) at Reagan County (1-5): One thing is for sure about the Owls: They never say die. After an 0-4-1 start last year, the Owls caught fire to grab a playoff spot. A dramatic last-second 8-7 loss to McCamey last week dimmed the Owl fortunes, but coach Richard Davis is certain to find a way to start posting victories. Eldorado has already surpassed their '82 win total, so this game marks a District 8-2A clash that is a pick 'em matchup.

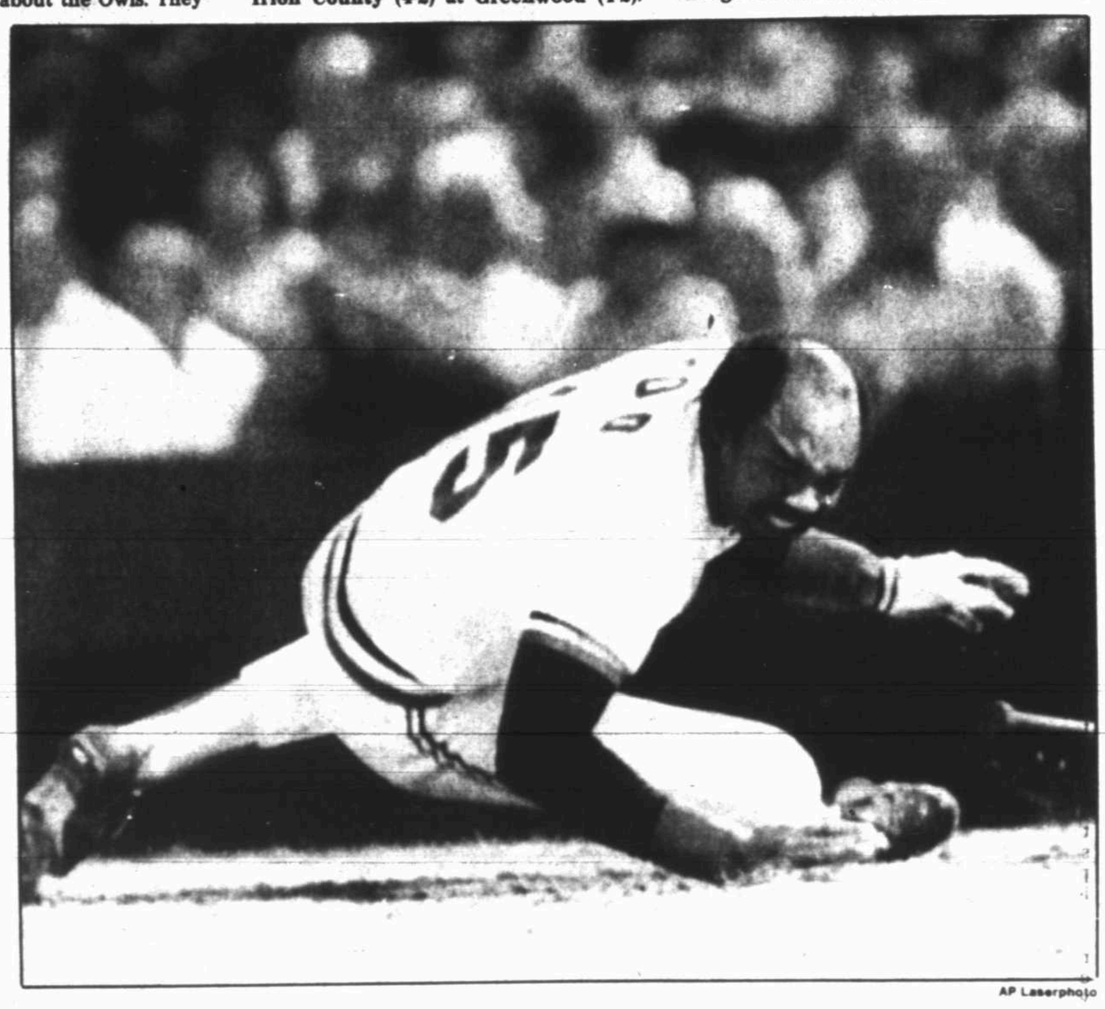

Fort Stockton (3-2) at Andrews (3-2): The Mustangs and Fort Stockton have fallen on hard times lately, dropping their first two district contests. Consequently, the two teams now face a must-win game. This situation is the proverbial caught between a rock and a hard place showdown, because the loser can kiss goodbye any hopes of post-season play.

Miles (1-5) at Stanton (2-4): The heat is off of the Buffs, because the offense finally awoke after four straight losses. Stanton could not have picked a better time to start winning, as its 21-7 win over Eldorado came in the district opener for both schools. The Buffs have a good chance of going 2-0 this week, but the meat of the district schedule is still upcoming. The jury is still out on the puzzling Buffs.

Irion County (4-2) at Greenwood (4-2): Both teams have taken different paths to get to 4-2. Irion County won three in a row by big scores before falling prey to upsets in two of their three district games. Greenwood began 0-2 before coming together and stringing four consecutive wins. The Rangers are now all alone in first place among district 7-A foes, and Irion County will be trying to right itself. Ranger coach Joe Longley isn't all that surprised the district has been so tough. "I knew all along it was a very balanced district. It just means we've got to be able to play every Friday night," said the coach. The Rangers just want to line up and play football, something they have done extremely well the last four weekends.

Lamesa (2-3) at Sweetwater (5-0): The Tors have exceeded their win total for all of 1982 only midway through the schedule, so coach Clyde Noonkester is obviously doing something right. Lamesa is a much improved football team, but Sweetwater is simply a very good football team. The only thing certain in district 2-4A is that nothing is certain. Sweetwater probably doesn't know that Lamesa is no longer a sorry team, but nevertheless the Tors don't have enough overall talent to win.

Boddicker enhances saga with Series win

By THOMAS BOSWELL
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

BALTIMORE — Just when it seems Mike Boddicker cannot surpass the previous installment of his one-season saga, the Baltimore Orioles rookie who has gone from bush-league nonentity to star finds a way to top himself.

Performing as though the World Series stage were merely some mown and tended Iowa cornfield turned into a baseball diamond, Boddicker beat the Philadelphia Phillies, 4-1, Wednesday night with dispatch, almost with disdain, on a three-hitter that evened this classic at one game apiece.

The only run off Boddicker, 26, was unearned. He walked no one, struck out six and, in the third professional time at bat of his life, drove in a run with a line-drive sacrifice fly.

Boddicker, who struck out an American League playoff record 14 in his last start against Chicago, finished the game with a flourish, striking out Mike Schmidt on three pitches — the last offering an in-your-wheelhouse fast ball at which Schmidt could only wave. And for the second straight night an Oriole pitcher did not walk a batter.

Boddicker thus equaled the best game ever pitched by a rookie in World Series history. Two three-hitters were thrown, in 1912 and 1919.

BODDICKER, who also won Game Two of the championship series to reverse the Orioles' momentum after a first-game 2-1 loss, had several helpmates.

John Lowenstein had a single, double and a 420-foot homer to start the three-run fifth inning that knocked out starter and loser Charles Hudson, also a rookie. In that inning, Rich Dauer singled, Todd Cruz beat out a bunt, Rick Dempsey doubled home a run and Boddicker had his sacrifice fly. In the seventh, John Shelby, Dan Ford and Cal Ripken singled with two outs for the final run.

Only an error by Eddie Murray, who dropped a routine throw to first in addition to going zero for four, prevented Boddicker from pitching his seventh shutout of his barely comprehensible season.

THIS SECOND game of the 80th World Series was supposed to be threatened by rain, but the game started on time and without a hint of moisture.

The Orioles brought an understandable sense of mission to this game. Common sense and statistics told them a victory Wednesday evening was almost essential to their hopes of a world title. In 79 previous World Series, the teams losing the first game came back to win 33 times — a fairly healthy 42 percent.

However, only eight teams had lost the first two games and come back to win. Curiously, of those eight comebacks, seven have occurred since 1955, including three in the last 12 Series — the latest in 1978.

The first three shutout innings of this game were played so quickly that one might have thought the two rookie starters were rushing to catch a postgame bus to Philly. The three innings took only 39 minutes.

On his first trip through the Phillies' lineup, Boddicker was almost as brilliant as in his shutout of the Chicago White Sox in the second game of the American League Championship Series. Boddicker struck out the first two he faced — Joe Morgan swinging at a "foshball" and Pete Rose on a called fast ball. Boddicker also struck out Joe Lefebvre to open the second and set down the first nine Phillies without a solidly struck ball.

Hudson, only in his second year of pro baseball, was also as sharp as he was in the third game of the National League Championship Series, a 7-2 victory over Los Angeles in which he allowed only four hits. Except for a first-pitch double driven off the fence in right center by Lowenstein with one out in the second inning, Hudson was perfect through four innings. A little more than a year ago, Hudson was losing to the Durham Bulls in a Class A championship game.

After Lowenstein's double, the weak-hitting bottom of the Orioles' batting order showed itself as Dauer and Cruz popped out on first pitches. With Dauer (.235) and Cruz (.199) followed by Dempsey (.231), the pitcher and below-average leadoff man, Al Bumbry, the Orioles present five consecutive hitters who could best be described as being the soft one would expect to see on a last-place team.

Kid from Iowa corn fields evens Series

By MARK HEISLER

BALTIMORE — From off the long Orange line hopped still another of those young masters with dry ice for a nervous system. This one's name is Mike Boddicker, he is a rookie and he kicked around the minors for six years before he even got to be that. Where do they get these guys from?

Norway, Iowa, population 600. He is going back this winter to work in a grain elevator for $4.50 an hour because the boss gave him a job when he was a hardcore unemployable back in '78. Besides he likes the work. This is a cross between a hallucination and the American Dream.

He was still fairly unknown, until last week when he brought the Orioles back from an 0-1 start in the playoffs. Wednesday night, he did it again, but this time in the World Series. He pitched a three-hitter, gave up an unearned run and beat the Phillies, 4-1. His days as an unknown died with the Phillies.

Boddicker's playoff victory was a 14-strikeout shutout of the White Sox. The man barely throws 85 mph and this time, he struck out six. Late in the evening, when he was up to his cerebellum in attention, he was asked if he was just hot or was he this good.

"I don't know," he said. "I just go out and do my best."

So it wasn't poetry, who cared? This was the equivalent of Fernando Valenzuela saying bueno in '81. A sensation can always get someone to talk for him.

"I remember my first World Series," Orioles pitching coach Ray Miller said. "It was December before I remembered what the hell happened.

Scott suggests drug test for record setters

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Steve Scott, America's premier miler, said Wednesday that he would like to someday see "mandatory drug testing for everybody who breaks a world record" in track and field.

"If it can be administered in a certain number of hours, that would solve a lot of problems," said Scott, noting the steroid scandal at the IX Pan American Games in Caracas this August. "Our federation doesn't want athletes to get caught and neither does some other countries. But the international federation wants to weed the drug-users out.

"I really think they should have testing three times during the year — once every three or four months. I would like nothing better than to see the drug-induced athlete to get weeded out. Athletes should be there (at international meets) on their own merit and not artificially."

Scott, 27, has been living in suburban Scottsdale for the past five years and training at Arizona State in nearby Tempe under head track Coach Len Miller.

He said his thoughts are on two things right now — the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles and a rematch with England's Steve Cram.

The 22-year-old Cram beat Scott by 28 seconds in the 1,500-meter finals at August's world championships in Helsinki, Finland.

Originally, Scott said he intended to take the lead with 300 meters to go, but Cram raced to the front with 200 meters remaining and forced his competitor outside on the final curve.

"If it had been a real fast race, he wouldn't have been much of a factor," Scott said. "In a slower race where it's a speed-type finish, he's young and he's got that speed. But he doesn't have the strength I have.

Los Angeles is ideal place for all World Series

By SCOTT OSTLER
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Imagine a World Series with no travel problems, no rainouts, no freezeouts, and ideal playing and spectating conditions for everyone.

Sound good? You bet. And all that will become reality next year when major league baseball adopts a proposal I'll be submitting soon.

I have every confidence the new commissioner will wholeheartedly embrace this plan. Or, should I say, I have every confidence he will give it serious consider ation.

OK, OK, I think he'll at least glance at the postmark before scooping up my letter with a pizza shovel and forwarding it to the dipsy dumpster.

The problem with the World Series now is the location. Baseball isn't selective. It puts the Series in any cow town or ice-locked seaport that happens to have a league championship team that season.

This year isn't bad. Philadelphia and Baltimore are nice enough cities, especially for connoisseurs of cheese steaks and crabcakes. But the World Series won't have the stature, status or showcase it deserves until it is permanently anchored in Los Angeles, at Dodger Stadium.

Tell me it doesn't make sense. But first consider these three factors — logistics, ballpark and ambiance.

Logistics. The fact that jet lag is called jet lag and not jet pep should tell you something. Travel saps strength and energy.

After barnstorming the country for six months like snake-oil salesmen, ballplayers are weary by October. They need rest. So what does baseball do? Shuttle them back and forth between two cities, like combat troops.

PHILADELPHIA and Baltimore are neighbors, but travel days during this Series will still be spent traveling. Usually the distance is greater, and by the time the players pack up, catch a bus to catch a plane to catch a bus to check in at the other hotel, they might as well be flying to Paris. With Lindy.

Off days should be for relaxing, recharging, thinking about the next game, not toting suitcases and eating in airport coffee shops.

The ballpark. Sure, there are other nice ballparks in the country, but the World Series location is a crapshoot.

You might roll tradition-steeped Fenway Park or quaint Wrigley Field, but the odds favor baseball crapping out by rolling Candlestick Park or the Kingdome or any of the other drafty and dreary furniture warehouses that pass for big league ballparks these days.

THE WORLD Series should never be played in a dome ("Take Me In to the Ballgame"?), or on a carpet, or anyplace where it might snow. It should be played in a ballpark, not a multipurpose facility.

The ballpark should have bleachers (OK, so the Dodgers got stuffy and called their bleachers "pavilions") and fences to hit homers over, not some home run line painted on a wall.

Dodger Stadium passes all the aesthetics tests.

In a New York Times poll of National Leaguers, 51 percent of the players voted Dodger Stadium their favorite. Veterans Stadium in Philadelphia was second with 13 percent.

Most other ballparks are rented out for soccer games, football wars, rodeos and tractor pulls. During the heat of the pennant race, San Diego's stadium was the site of a rock concert, and somebody forgot to remove the rocks.

THE DODGERS allow only baseball in their park. They trim their grass with surgical scissors and have armed border patrols to keep out gophers.

Ambiance. It's not just the stadium, it's the overall Southern California feel. Palm trees shade the bullpens, movie stars frolic in the aisles and even the pickpockets wish you a nice day.

The Series could serve as a tonic for the nation's TV viewers. This time of year they're busy stocking up on firewood and hot chocolate, and it would be a treat for them to turn on the Series and see how Los Angeles fans arm themselves for the winter — by stocking up on flowered shirts and pina coladas.

The main argument against my plan will be that it's unfair to hometown fans in the league championship cities. That's unfortunate, but the Super Bowl has done pretty well without hometown fans. And what about the millions of fans in the thousands of other cities who deserve to see first-class baseball?

Besides, Los Angeles is the baseball capital of the world. What other city drew 90,000 for a World Series game, and 3 1-2 million for a season?

I have other proposals for improving the World Series. Vin Scully should always do the TV play-by-play. The no-DH rule, white baseball shoes and closeup TV shots of managers spitting tobacco juice should be banned.

But those problems can be worked out in time. What's important right now is to put the World Series in Los Angeles, where it belongs.

Fountain floods for 311 yards

By Associated Press

Mount Vernon fullback Carl Fountain learned last week how to rush 311 yards on 33 carries and score three touchdowns in a 33-13 victory over North Lamar.

This week he must practice on running out the clock.

Leading comfortably in the closing minutes, Coach Ben Tyler said he was just trying get the game finished.

But Fountain spotted an opening and couldn't resist running through it for 40 yards and his final touchdown.

His other TD runs were for 97 and two yards and he also kicked two extra points to earn a spot in The Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll.

In addition to Carl Fountain's performance, another member of the Fountain family, cousin Craig, gained 157 yards on 18 carries and scored the team's other two touchdowns.

"We were just trying to run out the clock when he got that last run," Tyler said. "He (Carl) runs the ball real well outside and inside too."

Carl Fountain gained 269 yards on 28 carries in the season opener against Rains but he had been shut down the past couple of weeks. "When people tried to stop him, it turned our other backs loose," Tyler said.

Craig Fountain played his first game at running back and also continued to hold down his defensive safety position. Tyler moved him from wide receiver to fill an injury slot.

Bremond remained unbeaten and the No. 1 ranked Class A team in the state following William Edwards' offensive and defensive showing in a 45-8 victory over Crawford.

Edwards gained 289 yards on 13 carries and scored on runs of 80, 47 and 55 yards. He also played defense and returned an interception 55 yards for another score.

Defensive back Jon Corona led a stubborn Port Neches Groves defense that pulled out a 17-14 victory over West Orange Stark.

Corona made a touchdown saving tackle at his team's one yard setting up a goalline that resulted in a missed field goal try. Groves then drove 80 yards for the winning touchdown to remain unbeaten in district play with Beaumont West Brook, the defending state champs.

The two teams meet in a showdown this week.

In other outstanding performances:

— Brian McZeal of Port Arthur Austin ran 117 yards on 23 carries and scored one touchdown as the No. 7 ranked Class 3A team defeated Orangefield 29-6. McZeal now has 1,010 yards and 15 touchdowns for the season.

— Lufkin's Chris Cauley completed 19 of 34 passes for 311 yards despite a 26-14 loss to Tyler.

— Gerald Edwards of Franklin made the most of his five carries in a 46-0 victory over Centerville. He rushed for 180 yards and scored three touchdowns on runs of 76, 40 and 45 yards.

— Joe Rubio of Laredo Nixon caught five passes, two for touchdowns, for 180 yards in a 33-20 victory over San Antonio Harlendale.

— Bruni quarterback Bernardo Lopez completed only three of six passes but they all went for touchdowns of 17, 40 and 61 yards in a victory over D'Hanis.

— Pottsboro's Alfred Morrison went over 1,000 yards rushing for the season with 213 yards on 37 carries in a 21-0 victory over Whitewright. He now has 1,062 yards this season.

Orioles' Three Stooges produce

BALTIMORE (AP) — The bottom three in the Baltimore lineup may be known as the Three Stooges, but the Philadelphia Phillies aren't laughing.

After going 4-for-54 in postseason play, Rich Dauer, Todd Cruz and Rick Dempsey finally made significant contributions to a Baltimore rally.

After John Lowenstein homered to lead off the fifth inning of Wednesday night's second World Series game, each of the Stooges came through.

Dauer, 0-for-18 in postseason play, singled. Cruz beat out a bunt when the Phillies failed to cover first base in time, and Dempsey contributed an RBI double, what proved to be the game-winning hit.

The third run of the inning scored on a sacrifice fly by pitcher Mike Boddicker, in his third at-bat as a professional, second as a major leaguer.

Boddicker, a rookie who won 16 games after being recalled from the minor leagues on May 5, hurled a three-hitter to win a 4-1 decision.

"We definitely had to fight back," said shortstop Cal Ripken Jr. after the Orioles tied the best-of-seven series at 1-1. "We didn't want to go to Philly two games down. I can't say we will win three straight there, but hopefully we turned things around."

I'm just glad to see all of us come through," said Dempsey, "and maybe tonight will get us going. At first I didn't like it (the nickname), but now it's comical."

Ken Singleton, who drove in 85 runs during the season while batting in the No. 6 position, coined the nickname.

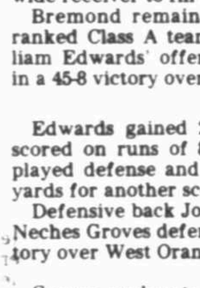

"It came in the later few weeks of the season," Singleton said, "probably after standing out at second base about 100 times and not scoring. It's just another way of having fun during a long season. Now all we've got to do is figure out who's who."

Dempsey contended, however, that Singleton already had identified the Stooges — Dauer is "Larry," Cruz is "Curly" and Dempsey is "Moe."

Baltimore Manager Joe Altobelli said he had considered changing his lineup in search of added punch, but decided to stick with the Stooges.

Lowenstein, who also contributed a single and a double to Baltimore's nine-hit attack, said of his homer: "Sometimes things snowball offensively. It worked out well for us."

"This was my most memorable Series game," Lowenstein said. "The grand slam home run I hit off Goose Gossage to beat the Yankees earlier this year was no doubt my most memorable moment of the season."

TED BATTLES

Simmons shows poise

When Edwin Simmons, the Texas freshman from Hawkins, was probed about the possibility of the Longhorns moving up to No. 1 after the emphatic 28-16 win over Oklahoma Saturday, he replied without hesitation. "We have Arkansas next and if we can win that, we'll move on from there."

This kid either has had good media technique coaching or is wise beyond his years.

When grilled over his game-breaking run against the Sooners, the 67-yard sprint up the middle in the third period, Simmons gave all the credit to his offensive line, "there wouldn't have been any run without 'em.".

Even though he had Marcus Dupree on his side, was that a touch of envy when OU Coach Barry Switzer observed, "He gives them an extra dimension in the running game that they haven't had in a few years."

As confirmation, Oklahoma tackle Rick Bryant said, "I thought I was going to catch him...for about two steps."...

TEXAS, AFTER it got warmed up, had a 7-for-7 stretch on third down conversions. As Simmons put it, "When we needed the yards we could get them."

Simmons wound up as one of the game's heros, but for a while it looked like he might wind up the goat. That early fumble led to an Oklahoma touchdown.

"I've got to learn to carry the ball in the outside arm. Coach, he just said to shake it off and play football."

A FEW hours later, across town from the Cotton Bowl in Texas Stadium, Southern Methodist and Baylor clashed and it was difficult to believe that either were playing the same game as Texas. Texas-OU, or Texas-ou, as one Dallas writer labeled it, was a brutal defensive struggle, despite the 28-16 score. SMU-Baylor was a free-wheeling offensive show, the kind one would expect in an NFL stadium.

This is the game that usually goes down to the wire before a decision is rendered, but the Mustangs raced away from the Bears in the second half for a 42-26 victory, the decisiveness of which is not adequately reflected in the score.

If you hadn't known about the tailback tandem of Eric Dickerson and Craig James, you might have come away raving about the Jeff Atkins-Reggie Dupard Pony Express.

The pair gained 258 yards between them, figures Dickerson-James could live with, and outgained the Baylor ground attack by 153 yards.

SMU COACH Bobby Collins called it, "another Lance McIlhenny masterpiece. Pass, option, whatever it takes, he does it. And having two backs over 100 yards gives us more options."

"I guess if we have an intangible strong point, it is our winning attitude."

While the Mustangs are unbeaten and finished No. 2 in the land, it will be two weeks before folks will be ready to accept them as a serious SWC contender, let alone a threat to Nebraska.

While Texas is concerned with Arkansas this week, the Mustangs have an off date in which to prepare.

Likewise, for Texas, the next two games will say something about the Horns' consistency. They've already beaten Auburn and Oklahoma, but now will be expected to perform against top-grade opposition for three weeks in a row.

Collins has no illusions about how the game will be rated. "We were underdogs last year in Austin and we will be again."

Arguello harbors no ring regrets

AP Laserphoto

Alexis Arguello slumps in corner that night in Las Vegas.

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The picture is still frozen in the mind of Alexis Arguello.

On the seat of his pants Sept. 9 in a makeshift boxing ring in the parking lot of Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas, Arguello raised his puffy, tear-stained eyes to look at Referee Richard Steele above him and then painfully looked away, slamming his left gloved fist onto the canvas.

After 17 years and 84 professional fights, boxing's noblest gentleman knew his time had come.

It took two artistic yet devastating losses to a 27-year-old junior welterweight named Aaron Pryor to convince Arguello, 31, that it was time to retreat to his wife and children and his adoring public. No one argued his decision, but many have regretted it.

"I never fought a man like that before," Pryor said after knocking Arguello out in the 14th round of their first title fight in November 1982.

INDEED, in the often sordid, dank world of boxing, Arguello has gleamed like a shaft of brilliant sunshine in his double-breasted blazers and kind words for his opponents. After his fights, win or lose, the Nicaraguan exile has always amazed fight-dulled inquisitors by dismissing the results of the happenings in the ring,. Boxing, Arguello shrugs, is his chosen love, but living, he stresses, is much more important.

Arguello, looking fit and happy here last week repeated that belief before more than 50 people who attended a press conference honoring his first public appearance since his second loss to Pryor. He also watched seven Corpus Christi area fighters box in Fort Worth's promoter Lester Bedford's latest boxing show in the Coastal Bend.

"To throw a punch through the air, to make it land where you want it to," Arguello once said. "That is an art, a beautiful art."

IN THAT sense, one of the world's most renowned artists took center stage.

"I'm proud that I performed the way I did for 17 years," he said. "I'm happy with it, and I hope to God I never change. From the day we're born, we are human beings, and we are until the day we die. We must be an example of the future world for our sons. Our kids need good examples. Most of us spend our lives without a good example."

That belief in his fellow man is Arguello's trademark, and it is a refreshing stance for a person who has been tormented by war in and out of the ring. He has had his chances to hate in the past, but has chosen instead to remain a friendly spirit in a violent environment.

When the Sandinistas overthrew Nicaraguan dictator Anastosia Somoza in 1979's civil war, they seized Arguello's car, home, his chicken-ranching business and the more than $500,000 he had in the bank.

To this day, Arguello is ignored and ostracized in his own country by the revolutionary government, but not by its people, which crowded around radios last month, straining to hear the results of their fallen hero's attempt to win his fourth world championship.

"THE PEOPLE still love me," said Arguello. "It's the first time they've ever had a champion. And in three weight classes! Jesus, what else can I do? When the government came in they took everything I had . . . that I had worked for with my blood. This is not an easy business. But everyone has their own mentality."

Arguello lives in Kings Bay, Fla., now, with his wife, Loretto, and young sons A.J. and Roberto, and says he has no plans to ever return to live in Nicaragua should the Sandinista regime be swept out.

"If they changed government, I would visit," he said. "I love it here. I have no reason to go back. Besides, my son is American and I want to make him president someday."

The audience erupted in cheers and laughter and Arguello responded with a flawless smile the same smile that greeted Pryor when the champion crossed the ring to hug his victim. There were tears in Pryor's eyes, too.

"The only thing that has changed is the years what I have learned though 17 years in the profession,"

Could 'Best Ever' team stumble?

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

After last Saturday's 14-10 scare against Oklahoma State, could this be the week someone actually upsets No. 1-ranked Nebraska?

This week's someone is Missouri, and Mizzou is a 20-point underdog. For your studied consideration, here are several opinions.

Nebraska linebacker Mark Daum: "I think people can forget all this hoopla they have been reading about Nebraska being the best team ever. People better start coming back down to earth and realize that it's true that any team can beat any team."

Colorado Coach Bill McCartney, a 59-20 loser to Missouri last week: "I don't mean to take anything away from Missouri, but I don't think Missouri can judge their football team on their performance against us. We had no chance to win the game because we didn't have any intensity at all. I think they're going to have to play far and away their greatest game to keep the Nebraska score close."

Missouri Coach Warren Powers: "They'll probably want to put on a pretty good show. We're going to have our hands full, anyway, but if those guys want to show off on (national) television (ABC, 2:30 p.m.), it will be double tough on us."

Regardless of whether Colorado played poorly, Missouri probably peaked a week too early . . . Nebraska 35-14.

Last week's score was 36 right and 15 wrong for a .706 percentage. For the season, it's 168-73-4—.697. Against the spread, last week produced a break-even 13-13; on the year, 51-54-0—.470.

No. 2 Texas (favored by 10) vs. Arkansas at Little Rock: All signs point to an upset. Texas is in a valley between arch-rival Oklahoma and SMU, probably its biggest obstacle in the Southwest Conference. Arkansas has had a week off to get ready. Sorry . . . Texas 28-14.

No. 3 North Carolina (16) at North Carolina State: One more warmup for the Tar Heels before their only two toughies, Maryland and Clemson . . . North Carolina 27-10.

Virginia Tech at No. 4 West Virginia (14): The unbeaten Mountaineers have just disposed of three tough foes (Maryland, Boston College, Pitt) and now come three more (VPI, Penn State, Miami). Coach Don Nehlen has had two weeks to convince his players not to look ahead to Penn State . . . West Virginia 24-13.

No. 5 Auburn (14) at Georgia Tech: Did you know Georgia Tech is the only school where three coaches have won at least 100 games? They were John "Trophy" Heisman, Bill Alexander and Bobby Dodd. Bill Curry is a long way from joining them . . . Auburn 31-10.

No. 6 Ohio State (3 1-2) at No. 19 Illinois: Iowa beat Ohio State and Illinois beat Iowa. It's too obvious . . . Ohio State 27-17.

No. 8 Georgia (12 1-2) at Vanderbilt: The Bulldogs don't seem to miss Herschel what's-his-name at all . . . Georgia 28-14.

Oregon at No. 9 Arizona (24): The Wildcats have surrendered 54 points the last two weeks, but they've scored 85 . . . Arizona 38-13.

No. 10 Miami, Fla. (12) at Mississippi State: What's wrong with the Bulldogs? Nothing, except a six-game stretch consisting of Florida, Georgia, Southern Mississippi, Miami, Auburn and Alabama. With a reminder that last week's three Upset Specials lost by a combined score of only 135-49, here's the Upset Special of the Week . . . Mississippi State 24-17.

Tennessee vs. No. 11 Alabama (13) at Birmingham: The Tide gets even for last year's loss in Knoxville, but there's nothing they can do about last week's trip to Penn State . . . Alabama 31-17.

Northwestern at No. 13 Michigan (no line): Wonder why there's no spread on this game? Here's why . . . Michigan 56-7.

Purdue at No. 14 Iowa (19): The Hawkeyes had better not be looking ahead to Michigan . . . Iowa 27-21.

No. 15 Oklahoma (8) at Oklahoma State: The Cowboys proved that Nebraska is human, but they couldn't budge the Cornhuskers' defense in the second half and Coach Jimmy Johnson says OU's is better. With or without Marcus Dupree, Second Upset Special . . . Oklahoma State 17-14.

No. 16 Maryland (16 1-2) at Wake Forest: Who says Terrapins move slowly? Not this corner . . . Maryland 34-14.

Stanford at No. 17 Washington (17): It looks like a couple more weeks before Stanford gets that first win . . . Washington 27-13.

No. 18 Arizona State (1 1-2) at Southern California: The Trojans underdogs at home? My, how the mighty have fallen . . . Southern Cal 28-21.

Orioles square World Series with 4-1 victory

THE PHILLIES scored first, in the fourth inning, with an unearned and somewhat shocking run. On an 0-2 pitch, Morgan hit a grounder to Ripken's backhand side, which the shortstop would turn into an out most of the time. This time, the ball bounced off his glove for a scratch hit.

After Morgan narrowly stole second on the first pitch (a slow curve), Rose laid down an awful sacrifice bunt that didn't force third baseman Cruz to make a play. Catcher Dempsey threw out Rose at first, Morgan holding.

With Morgan running, Schmidt grounded to Ripken, who made a hard, low throw to first that Murray, stretching, could have caught a foot and a half directly above the bag. But the ball popped out of his glove; Murray has not, nor probably ever will, make a more embarrassing or careless error.

On the next pitch, Joe Lefebvre, the Phillies' second-best slugger after Schmidt, hit a sacrifice fly to the warning track in center for a 1-0 lead.

Just when it seemed that Hudson had reached his smoking-throwing peak, his dream world suddenly fell apart. Before this game, Hudson was quoted in local papers as saying, "The only thing which tends to bother me is a home run."

The first batter of the Orioles' fifth, the cryptic, clutch Lowenstein, provided just that discombobulation. On a 2-0 fast ball, the king of Baltimore's fast ball hitters launched a 420-foot blast, high and far over the center field fence at the 405-foot sign, to tie the game.

That drive did seem to upset Hudson. With the crowd of 52,132 involved, Dauer had a gritty at bat, fouling off a pair of two-strike pitches before lining a single to left. That snapped a streak of zero for 16 by the bottom four spots in the Orioles' order.

Next, Cruz laid down a good bunt attempt toward third. Schmidt charged, scooped up the ball and had time to get Cruz, but had to double-pump because Morgan was slow covering first. Schmidt's throw was not in time.

DEMPSEY THEN upheld the honor of the denizens of the bottom of the Baltimore lineup. With the count 1-2, Dempsey hit a high and away fast ball into the right field corner for an RBI double and Baltimore's first lead of the World Series, 2-1.

That brought Boddicker to the plate. He gave the crowd chills as he continued an entire season of uninterrupted cornball heroics with a hard line drive to left that was deep enough to score the sliding Cruz ahead of Gary Matthews' poor throw. That sacrifice fly, for a 3-1 lead, knocked Hudson out of the game.

Reliever Willie Hernandez struck out John Shelby, but hit Ford in the head with a fast ball on a 1-0 pitch. Ford was unhurt and did not leave the game. Ripken worked a full-count walk, the first of the series, to load the bases.

Murray, however, continued his generally poor postseason play by swinging at a 1-0 pitch on his fists and popping up weakly to center.

The Orioles added an insurance run in the seventh for a 4-1 lead that exposed the age on the right side of the Phillies' infield, where Morgan (40) and Rose (42) have begun to resemble statues.

With two out and none on against right-hander Larry Andersen, Shelby chopped a grounder to Morgan's left that a younger Little Joe would have handled easily. This time, Shelby beat out a hit as Morgan's footwork was awkward and his throw weak.

Ford singled to right; men at the corners. Ripken then nudged a sickly grounder that a quick first baseman would have had a chance to grab. Rose, as was the case twice in the first game, was so immobile that it seemed possible he couldn't cover the ground he was standing on.

Schlitchter denies charge

From wire reports

FOOTBALL—One of Art Schlichter's attorneys said reports that the suspended Baltimore Colts quarterback was gambling again were incredible, but he also said he couldn't disprove the allegations. "I talked to him about it and he says it's ridiculous," said Charles Freiburger, who has represented Schlichter since his days at Ohio State. "The whole thing seems incredible to me. I can't say for certain it's not true, though."...

Several judges say they suspect that detailed letters they received from the San Antonio USFL franchise are an attempt to block local judges from deciding the Gunslingers' legal disputes. Most of the county's 19 district judges say they received a 22-page mailout from South Texas Sports Inc. this week.

The individual letters, addressed "Dear Sports Fan," detailed the advantages of welcoming pro football to Alamo Stadium. "Season tickets are now on sale," it said, and "good seats are still available if you act now." Reading the letter would "probably disqualify" any judge from impartially deciding issues involving the franchise, said State Distict Judge James Onion.

"I would think reading the thing may cause a person to pre-judge the issues," Onion said...

BASKETBALL—The University of Miami will bring back men's basketball in 1985, after dropping the sport for 15 years, for financial reasons. School President Edward T. And the rise in television income during recent years makes basketball a money-maker at universities like ours."...

Trevino turns to golf courses

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Lee Trevino, who built his "Super Mex" image by winning 26 tournaments and earning more than $2.6 million on the pro golf tour since 1966, says his playing days are numbered and he will concentrate instead on building championship golf courses.

"I'm not going to play much more," Trevino said here Wednesday after announcing plans to construct a course south of Tucson next month. "I don't play as well as I used to play. I don't get up like I used to. I've played competitively for 17 years and I'm talking about a long time and a lot of tournaments.

"I have to go along with what Jack Nicklaus said about me once. He said I was going to burn out early. I said I didn't care so long as I was rich. Well, I'm burned out and I'm not rich," added Trevino.

"I'M 44 on Dec. 1. I have to find something else to do. I'm the type of individual who has to stay busy. In the back of my mind, I always wanted to do this. But I've always been too busy."

While Trevino toils over the plans for the par-72, 6,900-yard Torres Blancas layout in Green Valley, David Graham is working on a course near Tucson, Arnold Palmer is rebuilding Scottsdale Country Club and Jack Nicklaus is designing courses in Tucson and near Scottsdale's Pinnacle Peak.

"I started building courses before Nicklaus even turned pro in the early 1960s," Trevino said. "Today, it's a lot easier. You got machines, you can tell people what to do and you can move them. You have more control over the finished product.

"IT'S SOMETHING you can create and something you can see from the ground floor. I plan to oversee everything. The thing has to be done the way you want it," Trevino added. "You know how you can tell you got a great golf course? When you can remember what No. 14 looks like. Or No. 7.

"When all the holes look the same and you can't remember one from the other after playing them 30 times, that's not right. And you got to build it so a high-handicapper will like it. You don't make any money off pros."

Trevino said he has already built "two courses I'm very proud of — one in New Mexico and one in Titusville, Fla."

The 18-hole Green Valley course will be built on 5,500 acres of a pecan orchard "and the place is just beautiful," Trevino said.

Marcus Dupree awaits verdict from teammates.

Dupree returns to OU

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Sophomore tailback Marcus Dupree, missing for three days, says he is returning to the University of Oklahoma, but his teammates will decide if he can rejoin the team.

Dupree, the highly-touted product of Philadelphia, Miss., was dropped from the squad Wednesday. He has not been with the team since Oklahoma's 28-16 loss to Texas last weekend in Dallas.

"As of now, he's off the team," said Sooner Coach Barry Switzer. "The only way he could come back is if they (teammates) want him, and I don't think they do."

Late Wednesday night, assistant coach Scott Hill said he talked with Dupree by telephone from Mississippi, and "he assured me he's coming back, but he didn't give any specific time."

"He said he couldn't talk long. He was concerned that he'd been kicked off the team, and I told him that Coach Switzer had said he'd leave it up to a vote of the team," Hill said.

Police removed Dupree from the missing persons list late Wednesday night, saying they had been in touch with him near Jackson, Miss., where he had gone Tuesday to catch a plane back to Norman.

Authorities would not disclose his exact whereabouts, saying his mother preferred the information remain confidential. Coaches at Mississippi College in Clinton, near Jackson, said they had heard Dupree planned to enter school there, but had not talked with him personally.

Alvin Kidd, a Mississippi College running back from Philadelphia, said Dupree told him he was returning to Oklahoma.

His mother, Cella Dupree Connors, said her son contacted her by phone Wednesday night.

"He just needs time to be alone, and then when he feels like it he'll be in touch with me again," said Connors. "He's got a God-given talent ... but you know there's just so much pressure from the media and so forth, and a 19-year-old can handle just so much."

His teammates on the 15-ranked Sooners were divided on whether they wanted him to return.

"We've got lots of good players, but we care about Marcus as a person," said Danny Bradley, the team's quarterback and Dupree's roommate. "We'd accept him back and I think he knows that."

Defensive tackle Bob Slater said, "We sure don't need anyone here who doesn't want to be here. I'd just have to weigh the evidence if we took a vote."

Switzer said it was no secret that Dupree was unhappy.

"He doesn't want to play football. He's told too many people that and there have been too many indications of that," the coach said. "This is really a tragic waste. He's obviously a superb talent ... but the kid's got some problems."

Dupree missed spring drills with a hamstring pull and suffered a bruised knee in the team's second game, a 24-14 loss to Ohio State. He missed a game, returned to gain 151 yards against Kansas State and was held to 50 on 14 carries against Texas.

Spencer Tillman, a fullback who might be switched to tailback to take Dupree's place, said it was obvious Dupree was unable to handle the sudden attention focused on him, and placed part of the blame on the Oklahoma coaching staff for not being responsive to his needs.

Sooner gridders divided over Dupree return

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — University of Oklahoma football players, stunned by the sudden disappearance of tailback Marcus Dupree, were divided Wednesday whether he would be welcome if he wanted to return.

Dupree, who gained 905 yards rushing last year as a freshman, was dropped from the team by Coach Barry Switzer after failing to return to campus following the team's loss to Texas in Dallas.

"We can't worry about Marcus Dupree," said Buster Rhymes, a wide receiver on the Sooners, who are 3-2 and ranked 15th. "We've got a game to play Saturday. But I sure want him back, and I think the team wants him back."

Switzer has said Dupree could not return to the team unless the players voted to accept him.

The 6-3, 235-pound tailback has been quoted in several interviews as saying he was unhappy at the school and has in the past considered leaving Oklahoma. But even his roommate, quarterback Danny Bradley, said he was shocked to learn Dupree was off the team.

"We've got lots of good players, but we care about Marcus as a person. We'd accept him back and I think he knows that. I can sympathize with what he's going through. He's had so much coming at him, and sometimes it's just hard to take," said Bradley.

Other players were not as sure they would want Dupree to rejoin them.

"I don't know, practice seemed to go pretty well yesterday (Tuesday, when Dupree was absent)," said defensive tackle Bob Slater. "And everyone's got a lot of faith in Earl Johnson (Dupree's backup)."

"We sure don't need anyone here who doesn't want to be here. I'd just have to weigh the evidence if we took a vote."

"We've got a game with Oklahoma State on Saturday," said linebacker Thomas Benson. "That's what I'm worried about. I'm sorry Marcus is missing, but we've got to think about playing ball."

The sudden exposure and subsequent media blitzes may have been too much for him, said teammate Spencer Tillman.

Unbeaten ENMU's Bill Kelly is a tough man to please

By The Associated Press

Eastern New Mexico University Coach Bill Kelly is a tough man to please.

The Greyhounds are unbeaten and nationally ranked among NAIA teams. They scored an impressive win over Southwestern Oklahoma last week and junior quarterback Kevin Kott threw a school record-tying five touchdown passes.

But Kelly said his team was still making too many mistakes.

"We're elated with the win of course, but we made a lot of mistakes," he said this week as the Greyhounds prepared to face Adams State Saturday afternoon in Portales.

"We dropped at least seven or eight passes that should have been caught and our backs are going to have to start running better routes," said Kelly.

Kelly's complaints aside, the Greyhounds are 4-0, averaging better than 350 yards in total offense per game and have a defensive unit that has yet to give up more than one touchdown per game.

Eastern's offense is averaging 30.5 points a game and ranks first in the NAIA in defense, giving up just 5.5 points a game.

Adams State, a member of the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference, will take a 2-3 record in Portales.

"They'll use a lot of blitzes against us them offensively because they run a lot of different stuff," said Kelly.

Kott's performance last week against Southwestern Oklahoma earned the talented junior the NAIA District VII Player of the Week honors. Kott completed 28 of 55 passes and now has thrown for 1,140 yards and 11 touchdowns in four games.

Boddicker too good to be true

"Probably he'll go back home to Iowa, shake hands with everybody, go home, look in the mirror and scream, 'Wow!' "

THE NIGHT CAME up muggy, with two rookie pitchers going and the Phillies in position to do some real early damage. An Orioles loss, going back to Philadelphia and the rest would have been mopping up. And Boddicker couldn't throw all that slow stuff over the plate again, could he?

Oh yes, he could. The first hitter was the famous Joe Morgan and he struck him out. The second was the famous Pete Rose and he struck him out, too, looking. The third was the famous Mike Schmidt, who managed a weak grounder to shortstop. It was going to be three more innings before Boddicker allowed a ball out of the infield.

From the start, it was obvious that the Phillies never had a clue. They took off-balance swings all night. All three of their hits were singles, one on the infield, two of the pokes into right field. When Boddicker was asked later if he'd been disappointed at losing his no-hitter (Morgan's infield hit in the fourth broke it up), he made a funny face and poohpoohed the question, but it wasn't so farfetched. The Phillies were lucky they weren't no-hit.

"He had them all set up in the first two batters," Miller said. "Three-and-two to Morgan, he threw him a changeup and struck him out. He was behind Morgan, 2-1, and threw him a changeup. Three-and-two to Rose, he threw him a fastball and struck him out."

Miller then rattled off Boddicker's entire sequence to Rose: "Changeup for a ball, fastball for a strike, changeup for a strike, curve he fouled off, fastball for a ball, changeup he fouled off, changeup for a ball. Then he really popped a fastball and struck him out."

Boddicker was asked everything later, whether he chewed tobacco on the mound, whether his mother had been here, whether he'd ever played catch with his father, about his job experience in grain elevators.

"Norway, Iowa," he said. "The place where I live. I've been there all my life.

"They've got two elevators, one on the east and west end of town. There's 600 people there. No streets signs. No stop lights. No sheriffs. No nothing. No crime rate."

GREAT, AN Iowa version of Etchohuaquila. Boddicker was still saying nice, low-key things late in the evening, when Miller was asked if this kid could be this good.

"The thing I marvel at," Miller said, "is his ability to adjust to whatever he has on a given day. He pitched one shutout (Boddicker led the American League with five of them) with a fastball and a slider. He couldn't find his curve ball, he couldn't find his changeup and he pitched a shutout.

"If the pattern of his games had been the same, then I'd be overwhelmed, but it hasn't been. Every game, he has a different repertoire, a different pattern."

In the other clubhouse, Morgan was grousing that next time would be different, but it wasn't all like that. The Phillies' pitching coach, Claude Osteen, was marveling at the kid's ability to change speeds.

"He has four pitches and he has four different varieties of those pitches," Osteen said. "So in effect, he has a choice of 12 pitches...."

Or something like that. That's how baffled Boddicker had the Phillies Wednesday night.

Del Rio player dies after 4 days in coma

SAN ANTONIO(AP) — A 15-year-old Del Rio football player who lapsed into a coma after he was tackled head-on during a high school football game died four days after the collision.

But a spokeswoman at Medical Center Hospital refused to disclose whether Ruben Chavira's life-support system was unhooked before or after his death, saying the family had asked for that information to remain private.

Chavira, a sophomore tailback at Del Rio High School, died early Wednesday in the hospital's surgical intensive care unit, according to spokeswoman Lynn Blanco.

The boy's father, Robert Chavira, had coached football for 18 years and was standing on the sidelines during Saturday night's game at Northside Stadium.

The hit, which occurred as Ruben was carrying the football, "seemed like a normal tackle," he said.

UNM eyes 3 teams

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — University of New Mexico basketball coaches say three schools have tentatively accepted bids to play in a season-opening basketball tournament next year in University Arena.

Northern Arizona, Jacskonville and Columbia, N.Y., have verbally agreed to compete with the Lobos in the tourney, which will be Nov. 30 and Dec. 1, 1984, the coaches said.

Although contracts have not been completed, Lobo Coach Gary Colson said the verbal agreements makes the new tournament "close enough for us to say that it looks real good."

The tourney would be in addition to the annual Lobo Invitational.

Whitewing season ran excellent to poor gamut

Hunting success during the white-winged dove season in the Lower Rio Grande Valley ran the gamut from excellent to poor, depending on location.

Texas Parks and Wildlife biologist Gary Waggerman said some hunters found concentrations lof whitewings, but many of the traditionally good hunting areas near the Rio Grande were short on birds during the early September season.

"We have seen some definite whitewing shifts during the past 10 years," said Waggerman, "and one of the main trends is a scatting of the birds across a larger area because of food availability."

Some of the better hunting occurred around the corn or sunflower fields, well away from the river.

"Many landowners have planted sunflowers and other dove food plants to attract the birds, and this has the effect of spreading the harvest over a broader area," said Waggerman...

THE TPWD's new John Wilson Hatchery at Flour Bluff has produced its second crop of red drum with 1.8 million fingerling-sized fish stocked recently in Nueces Bay.

Gene McCarty, biologist in charge, said the one to three inch fish were released at two locations in the bay in the northeast corner of Corpus Christi Bay.

The first group of red drum spawned at the saltwater hatchery during May produced 2.4 million fingerlings which were placed in Espiritu Santo Bay near Port O'Connor in June.

Hatchery personnel induce mature red drum to spawn in indoor tanks, manipulating light and water temperatures to simulate the fishes' spawning season.

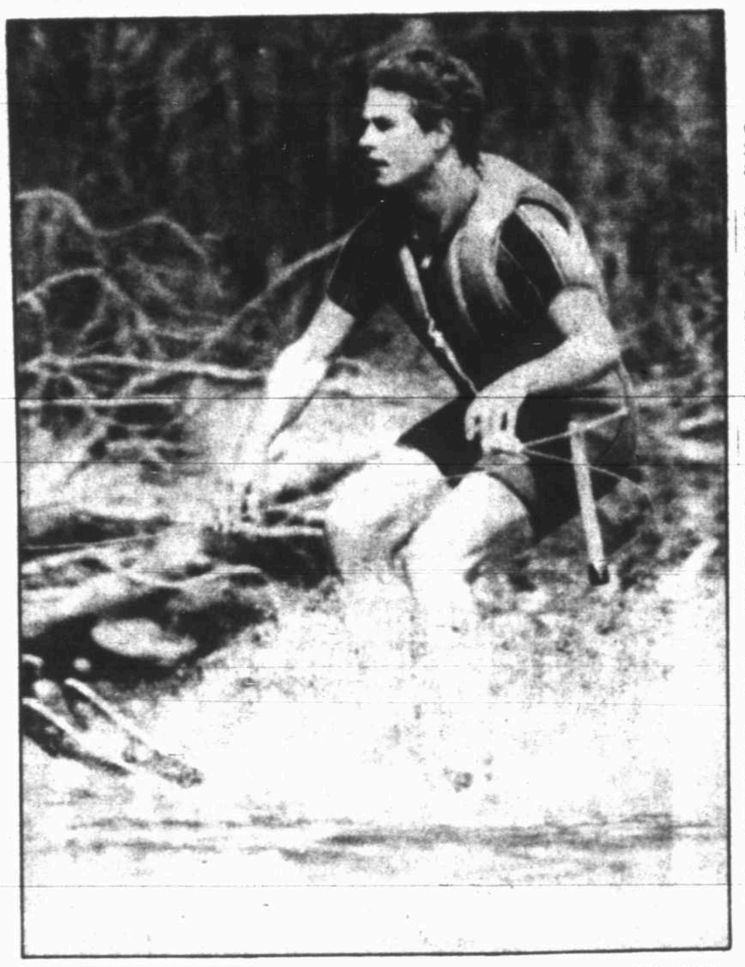

McCarty expressed optimism that the bay stockings will revive the fishery in Texas bays, since net surveys at Espiritu Santo bay indicate the stocked fish are enjoying good survival and growth rates...

FISHING EASED off at Lake E.V. Spence, but picked up at Lake J.B. Thomas last weekend.

Cecil Jordan of Snyder and Vince Schertz, Brownfield, set the trotline pace with 22 and 33 yellow cats, respectively. Crappie fishing was fair with a few string caught in 10 to 15 feet of water with minnows. A few blacks were taken in brushy areas. Catfish were biting live bait on trotlines best, but channel cat were hitting all kinds of bait in all depths.

At Spence, Midland's Steve Moreland landed a five-pound, four ounce black...

IN THE WILD

Antlers serve many purposes

ATLANTA (AP) — As millions of deer hunters invade the woods and fields this fall, a large set of deer antlers will be a trophy.

For the deer, however, antlers are an air conditioner in summer and weapons of combat in the fall. In winter, they become food for many other animals.

Antler growth begins in early spring, triggered by increasing sunlight. The new antlers are covered with soft skin called velvet. Under the velvet, blood vessels carry minerals to the growing antlers. When antlers in velvet are injured, it often results in "freak" antler growth.

Antlers grow to full size in about four months — whether they're tiny spike horns on a yearling white-tail deer or a massive seven-foot spread on a moose. In those four months, moose antlers grow to more than 45 pounds, making them the fastest known growing tissue.

THE BLOOD running under the velvet helps cool the deer in summer.

In late summer or fall, the blood circulation stops and the velvet falls off or is rubbed off by bucks thrashing their antlers on bushes or saplings — leaving "rubs" sought by hunters as signs that bucks are in the area.

Antler characteristics are hereditary. But in white-tail deer, the most often-sought deer in North America, most of these characteristics do not develop until the third or fourth set of antlers and more than three-quarters of all bucks do not grow old enough to develop them.

Antler growth depends not only on the buck's parentage, but his diet. Research has shown that almost all bucks who have a good diet, 12 percent to 18 percent protein and plenty of minerals, will grow forked antlers, not just spikes, by their second winter.

Overcrowding of deer range leads to poor diet and small racks. Areas with plenty of high-protein deer chow — soybeans are among the best — will traditionally produce bucks with trophy racks.

Body growth takes precedence over antler growth, so as body growth slows in a buck's third and fourth years, antlers grow larger. True trophy racks appear during the fifth and sixth years when the buck is in his prime.

BIG RACKS help bucks fight with rivals during the mating season, and the success of the mating season determines how long the bucks retain their antlers into the winter.

Shedding may take place any time from late November into March. The time probably depends on the level of the hormone testosterone in the animal's system and on the number of unbred does in the buck's territory.

The forest is not littered with deer antlers shed the previous winter. That's because antlers are made of salts, calcium, phosphorous and other minerals eaten by mice, chipmunks, porcupines, squirrels and other animals.

The rest simply decay into the forest floor, like any other mineral fertilizer.

NBC disappointed with job on playoffs

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

With its Hall of Fame-caliber team of Vin Scully, Joe Garagiola and producer-director Harry Coyle, NBC has been justifiably proud of its reputation as The Baseball Network. So if it disappointed a bit in the playoffs it was only because it has set such a high standard in the past.

The problems were subtle, not enough to destroy anyone's enjoyment of the games, but enough to raise a few questions: Did we need that extra angle on that replay? Did we need all that Scully-Garagiola banter? Did we need all those graphics like the one that said "Eddie Murray, on-deck," over a shot of ... Eddie Murray in the on-deck circle.

Take Scully and Garagiola, finishing their first year as a team.

Scully brings everything you could ask to the broadcast booth — a silken voice, an encyclopedic knowledge of baseball, an eye for the subtlety that explains the key play. Garagiola, one of the first ex-athletes to make the switch to broadcasting, has a similar eye for history to go with an ex-catcher's insight, and a sense of humor to match.

But although they meshed better after a "Can You Top This?" start, they never quite clicked as a team, perhaps because both are of the same generation, share the same anecdotes, know the same things — and are top bananas. In a sense, Scully doesn't need an analyst — he's been around baseball so long, he knows as much as most ex-jocks.

Which explains, in part, why Bob Costas and Tony Kubek seemed more at ease in the American League series.

Unlike Garagiola, Kubek doesn't need to dominate; and Costas is a perfect play-by-play man — well-schooled in fundamentals, knowledgeable, but also perfectly willing to defer to an expert. So they complement each other — Kubek can talk to Costas without Costas jumping back in to top him.

Technically, NBC is usually superb, thanks largely to Coyle's innovative team that often drops the viewer right on to the field. There was some of that during the playoffs, but there were also too many angles on fly balls to left field and ground balls to second.

NBC remains on top. But if its early World Series coverage is a measure, ABC is coming up fast. Producer Chuck Howard and director Chet Forte are among the best in television; Al Michaels is the equal of Scully and Earl Weaver has insight like nobody else.

If only ... someone could get the hook for Howard Cosell. Or keep him from stepping all over the best lines.

CBS radio did well in the playoffs with local talent — Ernie Harwell from Detroit, Duke Snider from Montreal, Jerry Coleman from San Diego. Only Curt Gowdy, who teamed with Harwell on the American League series, has broad national exposure.

The only problem was putting play-by-play men Gowdy and Harwell on one team; ex-players Snider and Coleman on the other. The result was particularly noticeable in the National League series, which sometimes sounded like running analysis.

The greatest pleasure was listening to Harwell, who doesn't need an analyst — like Scully, he knows more than enough to do it himself.

Continental Airlines strikes back at its striking pilots

HOUSTON (AP) — Continental Airlines struck back at its striking pilots union, charging in federal court that the labor group is attempting to fix prices by refusing to cooperate with airlines whose fares do not meet its approval.

The airline filed a $50 million lawsuit Wednesday against the Air Line Pilots Association, accusing the union of fixing prices, violating antitrust laws, refusing to bargain in good faith and interfering with non-striking pilots.

Union spokesman Esparison Martinez said he was not surprised by the action.

"Suits of one kind or another are almost routine in situations like this," he said. "They are used as a negotiation technique to apply pressure."

The company charged in the suit, filed in U.S. Bankruptcy Court, that ALPA president Henry Duffy has stated publicly that the union will cooperate only with airlines with pricing approved by the union and would deny cooperation to others.

This policy, said the airline, is designed to "restrain trade and fix prices for air transportation at artificially high levels ... dictated by ALPA rather than the marketplace."

Pilots and flight attendants struck Continental Oct. 1 after the company filed for bankruptcy on Sept. 24 under Chapter 11, a system that provides an ailing corporation protection from creditors while it reorganizes.

The airline stopped flying for two days and then resumed with a reduced schedule that serves only 25 of its 78 cities.

A new contract instituted after the airline resumed business cut salaries approximately in half and drastically changed work rules. Union and airline negotiators broke off three days of talks Friday, saying they had made no progress toward ending the strike.

The suit contends pilots delayed or postponed meetings and failed to offer a counterproposal to airline management.

"At every negotiating session we have told them that our proposal is in the form of the contract that was in effect to Sept. 24," Martinez said. He said the union told the company to extract from that document any benefit necessary for Continental to run a profitable operation, but that the offer was not accepted.

Continental also charged that the ALPA threatened to levy fines of $10,000 against non-striking Continental pilots and offered incentive payments of $2,800 to $3,800 per month to pilots who did strike. The suit called this "an illegal attempt to exert economic pressure upon ... Continental."

The airline contends that such tactics constitute "interference, influence and coercion" on the non-striking pilots that violates the Railway Labor Act.

Martinez said a group of pilots based in Denver had proposed the fines, but added they have not been approved by a union board or submitted to membership.

Continental claims that ALPA refused to meet with management officials prior to the strike, "despite the carrier's repeated request for emergency neogtiations."

The pilots finally agreed to a meeting, on the eve of the strike, the airline said, but ALPA leaders "failed and refused to make any proposals of their own, even when asked by Continental to do so."

Court proceedings before U.S. Bankruptcy Judge R. F. Wheless have been closed to the public and attorneys attending must sign a pledge not to use information gained in the hearings to aid competitors of Continental.

The hearings center on a motion to continue a temporary restraining order requiring 266 Continental Airline creditors to continue doing business with the Houston-based air carrier.

Another motion, filed Tuesday by the airline's major unions, asks the court to dismiss Continental's bankruptcy petition. Unions representing the pilots, flight attendants and mechanics allege in the petition that Continental's request for Chapter 11 bankruptcy was "not filed in good faith."

The unions claim in their motion that the bankruptcy petition was filed "not to improve the debtors' ability to pay existing debts, but rather, to improve their (the airline's) competitive posture in the airline industry."

"Continental Airlines filed the motion (for bankruptcy) in bad faith," said Gary Thomas, a spokesman for the pilots. "Chapter 11 was designed to help truly financially troubled companies to rehabilitate themselves. We believe that law has been abused by Continental."

Continental spokesman Bruce Hicks said the company was "confident of our legal position on this."

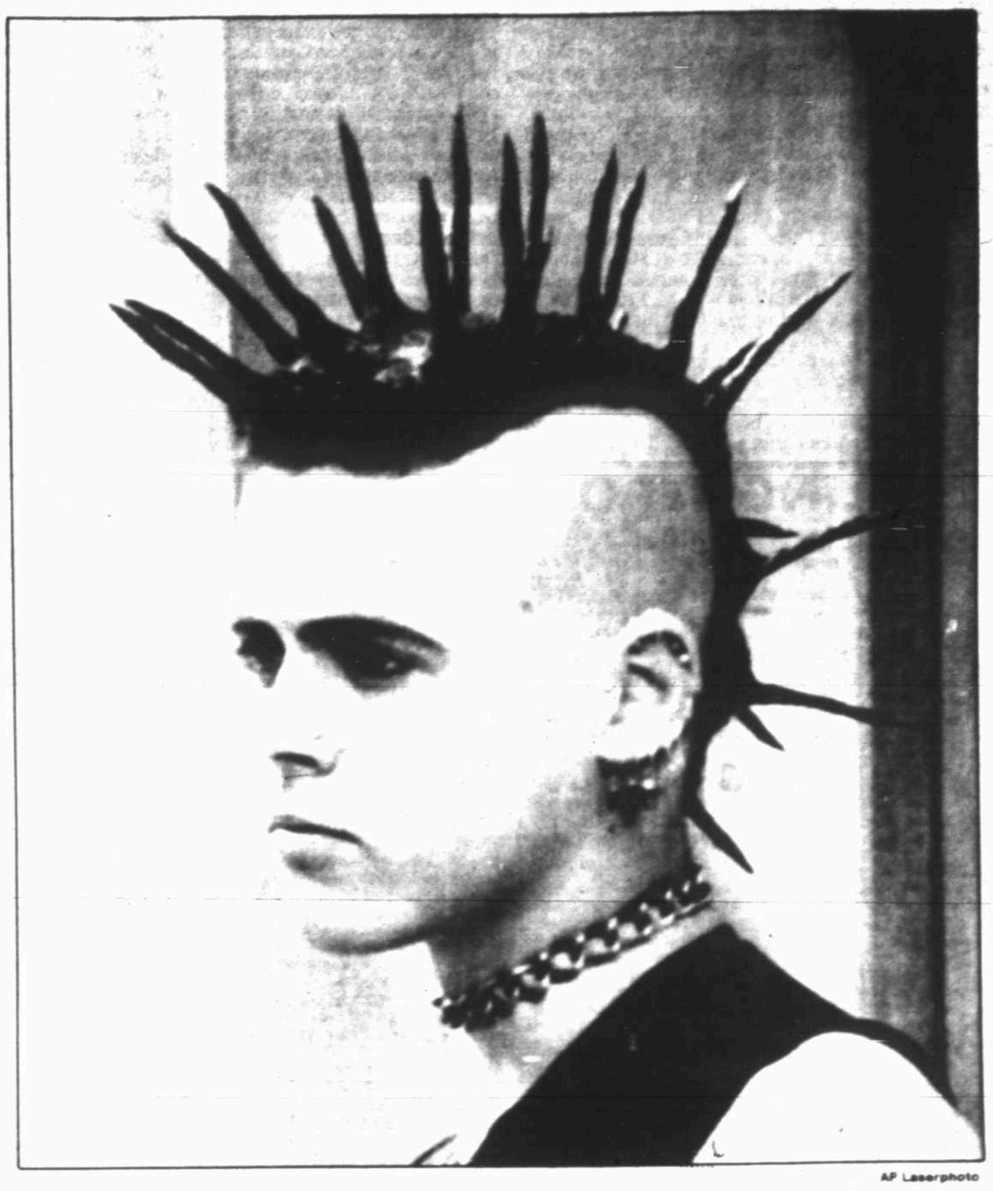

The airline has continued to fly, using pilots who cross the picket lines. More pilots are being recruited, the airlines says.

Cut-rate fares of $75 are being offered and Hicks said that Continental has been experiencing a domestic load factor of 82 percent.

Continental's labor problems have extended to the Australia, the turnaround point for Continental flights across the Pacific.

The Australian Congress of Trade Unions has called a 72-hour boycott of the airline, beginning Wednesday, and John Fordham, an airline spokesman in Australia, said Pacific flights will end in Fiji on Thursday and in New Zealand on Friday.

Unionists in Australia called the boycott to protest Continental's layoff of much of its work force.

Insurance women meet in Midland

Over 400 insurance women from across the state are meeting in Midland today for the start of the 39th annual convention of the Federation of Insurance Women of Texas (FIWT). The convention is being co-sponsored by the Insurance Women of Midland and of Odessa.

Mary Campanella of the Midland club is the convention chairman and Laila Grant of Midland and Joy Gregg of Odessa are the co-chairmen.

Business, insurance legislation and educational programs will be the focus of the four-day convention at the Midland Center. Carole Keeton McClellan, a member of the State Board of Insurance, Austin, will be the keynote speaker Friday. McClellan is the first woman to be appointed to the board.

Saturday, Peter R. Kensicki, director of producer education, American Institute for Property & Liability Underwriters, Insurance Institute of America will address the convention and Clay Tucker of CMT/Tucker Insurance Services, Dallas, will conduct the insurance seminar.

In addition, several women will be awarded the Professional Insurance Woman designation. This award, said Campanella, is similar to a college degree. It signifies the individual has taken the initiative to acquirer additional knowledge that will be beneficial in their daily jobs and their careers. To receive this award a person must pass one of four different courses offered across the state, or by correspondence.

A highlight of the convention will be the election and installation of new officers Saturday evening. These new officers will preside over Sunday morning's post-convention board meeting.

Campanella said she was excited the convention was finally here.

"We started two years ago when we bid for the convention in Dallas. We even had the Midland Chamber of Commerce and the Hilton Hotel go with us to help with our presentation. Since then, we have worked with the Odessa group to appoint committees and raise money for the convention. We've had fantastic cooperation from our bosses and from all of the insurance companies around the state," she said.

"I am very proud we've gotten to bring this convention to Midland. We're getting the opportunity to host women from all over the state; many of whom never have been here before. We're proud of this area and we want to show it off," said Campanella.

Accountants offer seminar

The Permian Basin Chapter of the National Association of Accountants will sponsor a seminar examining "Office Automation and the Office of the Future," at the Holidome Saturaday. The professional development seminar will run from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Local experts will discuss the use of new office equipment and software. The fee is $10 for association members and $25 for non-members. For more information phone 561-9022.

Tanaka supporters rally

TOKYO (AP) — Proceedings in Parliament halted today as the governing Liberal Democratic Party resisted opposition efforts to oust former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka from his seat after his bribery conviction.

Tanaka, 65, was convicted Wednesday of accepting 500 million yen, or $2.1 million, from Lockheed Aircraft Corp. to promote the sale of its planes in Japan while he was prime minister from 1972 to 1974. The Tokyo District Court gave him a four-year prison term and fined him the equivalent of the bribe, and Tanka immediately appealed the verdict.

A spokesman for the Japan Socialist Party, the largest opposition group, said all opposition parties agreed to boycott normal Parliament deliberations until the LDP brings to the floor an opposition-backed resolution calling for Tanaka's removal.

Bills to be debated during the current session concern administrative reform, a tax reduction and pay increases for government employees.

Tanaka, one of the most powerful politicians in Japan and the key factor in Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's rise to power last year, has rejected opposition demands he give up his Parliament seat.

At a meeting of House of Representatives steering committee directors today, opposition parties, headed by the Socialists, demanded the resolution be put to a vote, officials said.

'Safe' S&Ls go to head of line

(c) 1983, Los Angeles Times

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board has notified its 12 district banks that new savings and loan associations intending to take full advantage of liberalized investment powers under government deregulation will find themselves at the end of the line for federal deposit insurance coverage.

Citing concern over the safety of new areas in which some state-chartered S&Ls can invest, the bank board said in an internal memorandum that its staff "initially will process" applications of savings institutions that intend to invest no more than 10 percent of their assets in real estate operations or service corporations. To qualify for such processing, S&Ls must supply certification that their real estate operations will be limited to 10 percent of assets during the first three years of operation.

The bank board stopped short of saying it would delay applications that lack such certification, but said those applications would "be processed in context of the broader issues" of safety. The bank board has "not prejudged any application," the memo stated.

The memo is a direct hit on California, where S&Ls last year were granted broad new investment powers including the ability to invest all assets into service corporations, which are free to invest in just about anything. The new powers, combined with other rules that made it easier to start an S&L, caused a flood of more than 200 applications for California S&L charters.

"I don't think there's any question it's aimed at us," said Alec C. Stein, chief counsel for the California Department of Savings and Loan. "They're trying to supervise our associations by telling us what to do, and I don't thing that's good."

The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., the deposit insurance subsidiary of the FHLBB, has approved only 15 applications for deposit insurance submitted by California-chartered S&Ls since the beginning of the year, Stein said. Another 67 associations have received California state S&L charters but still have not gotten FSLIC insurance, he said.

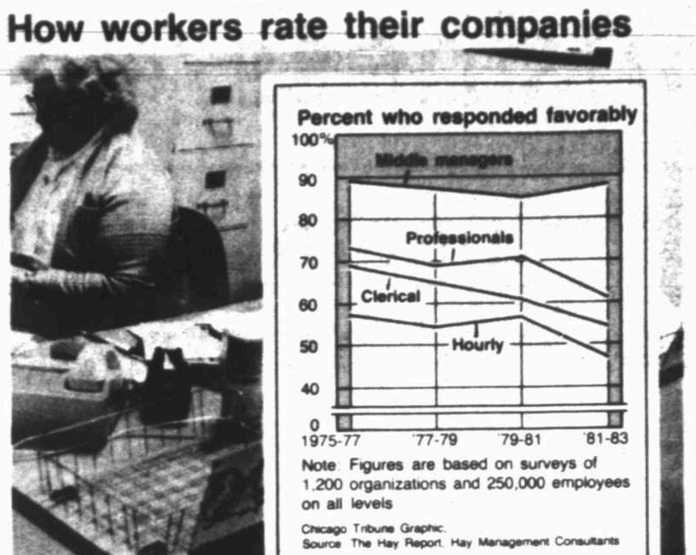

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the Federal Home Loan Bank of San Francisco both declined comment. "That was an internal memo," a bank board spokeswoman said, "and we're not commenting on it or releasing it."

State Savings and Loan Commissioner Lawrence W. Taggart has said he would take a liberal stand toward the new S&L investment powers as long as the thrift remains diversified and continues to make mortgage loans. Such unorthodox investments as windfarms and restaurants can provide the profits needed to make home loans, Taggart has said in the past. Taggart was not available for comment Wednesday.

To ensure the soundness of new S&Ls, the state department recently toughen some of the rules for starting a thrift, such as increasing capital and net worth ratio requirements and decreasing the amount of assets an S&L can place in a service corporation.

House Banking Committee Chairman Fernand St Germain, D-R.I., at a convention of California savings and loan executives last month said he is concerned about "quick-buck" artists — particularly in California — who are starting S&Ls for purposes other than to make mortgage loans. He suggested he may introduce legislation to curb the practice.

Lifetime jobs plan troubled

DETROIT (AP) — A pilot program guaranteeing thousands of autoworkers lifetime jobs might never get started because of lagging interest and problems with choosing participants, some United Auto Workers union officials say.

The first lifetime employment provisions in auto industry contracts were adopted by General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. early last year during the depths of the U.S. auto slump and were hailed by union leaders.

But today, with U.S. car sales surging, talks on establishing lifetime employment aren't even being held at most of the seven plants targeted for the plan, plant and union officials said in interviews over the past week.

They could not say when discussions might resume or be completed.

"It's not as dramatic an issue as it once was," said Al Curella, chairman of the UAW bargaining committee of Local 292 at GM's 7,500-worker Delco Electronics Division plant in Kokomo, Ind.

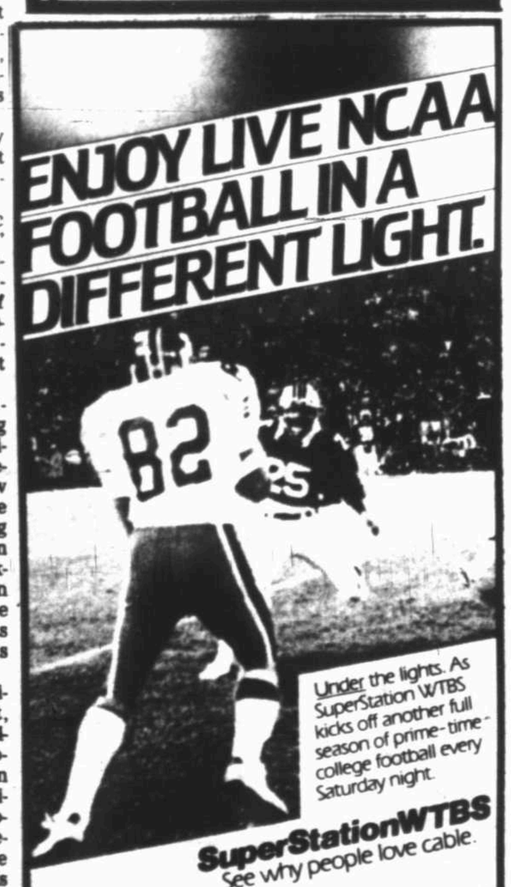

Lifetime employment, while suggesting permanence, is a provision that must be renegotiated with each new contract. Details of the program, committing an automaker to retain 80 percent of its workforce at a plant even in times of slow sales, are left to individual plants and their union locals to work out.

At Ford's south Chicago assembly plant, where workers voted 4-to-1 to reject the program early this year, an unidentified union official declared: "The program is gone, completely gone... The whole concept was backwards anyways."

A top GM official who asked to remain anonymous acknowledged some local plant managers do not want their hands tied with a program requiring they retain 80 percent of their workforce, even in downturns typical of the industry.

Ed Foy, UAW shop committeeman at GM's 14,000-worker Buick Motor Division complex in Flint — another target plant — said the timing is off since the industry is rebounding.

Interior suspends lottery sales

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — In a surprise announcement, the Department of the Interior suspended Wednesday its oil and gas lottery sales after an internal investigation showed the government may have been underrating the potential for oil and gas discoveries on some federal lands in the West.

Robert Burford, director of the Bureau of Land Management, announced that the temporary moratorium became necessary after an internal audit discovered "some weaknesses" in the system that may have turned some private leaseholders into instant millionaires at the expense of federal and state governments.

Department officials said the weaknesses were found when outgoing Secretary of the Interior James G. Watt merged two separate offices and "bureacrats began talking to each other for the first time." The suspension of lottery sales should last for about six weeks while officials correct the alleged abuses in the system.

The lottery system, which has been the subject of criticism for years because of past profiteering, allows the government to make money by selling off oil and gas leases in areas where there is believed to be almost no oil and gas and little speculation for these resources.

The BLM office in Cheyenne, Wyo., offers leases on hundreds of thousands of acres every other month, and about 2.5 million bidders a year put their names in the lottery for $75 a tract. Although only one bid is allowed for each tract, winners can lease the land annually for $1 an acre.

However, officials noticed at least 18 cases over the last two years in Wyoming when leaseholders resold their oil and gas rights for dramatic profits ranging from $2.5 million to $100 million. If the leases were considered potentially profitable, the BLM could sell them under a different system and the profits of several million dollars would be split evenly between the state and federal governments.

Department of Interior officials said that they discovered last August that a "producing area" or a "known geologic structure" where oil and gas might be available had been defined so narrowly that it did not take into account vast new areas of land that were being explored by the petroleum industry.

"We have determined that our procedure for delineating known geologic structures of proven reserves is not as efficient as it should be," Burford said. "Consequently ... the lottery program should be put on hold for at least six weeks or until we get a better handle on this rather crucial issue."

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., a longtime critic of the lottery program, said the moratorium is "a move in the right direction, but it is not enough. The lottery system lends itself to fraud."

Indeed, in 1980 former Secretary of the Interior Cecil Andrus halted the lottery system briefly after investigators found that the same person was filing several times for the same tract, using different names or names of different companies.

Two farmers, rancher do their bit for ailing FNB

Just as a one-horse buggy was about to grace Midland's main street with its dated form, Midland farmer Alvey Bryant by chance appeared at the bank's threshold.

"Midland has always taken care of me," said Bryant, as he was about to enter First National Bank. Traditionally, he has done business at the old Midland National Bank, now First City National Bank.

"I'm going to open a $10,000 checking account (at FNB), because they have helped make 85 percent of Midland, and I've been here since 1925," he said.

About the time Bryant walked into the bank, the stage was being set for an act to focus attention on the bank's 1893 founding and its contribution to agriculture.

A farmer and a rancher, Charlie Welch and Button Estes, drew up to the Wall Street entrance of the bank in a buggy pulled by Welch's bay horse, Comanche.

Both came by the beleaguered bank to make deposits to help, bit by bit, build up the bank's resources.

"All we want to do," said Estes, "is to let them know that this bank has helped a lot of people...They've been good to sharecroppers, farmers and ranchers during the droughts and other hard times. And it looks like they're going to do it again."

Out from the bank came Rosalind Grover, an FNB volunteer, who stuck "I Support The First National Bank" stickers on Estes and Welch and the horse.

"I'm doing this," she said, "because the bank has done me and Midland a lot of favors."

Meanwhile, the horse stood idle, as the farmer and the rancher waited for Jno. P. Butler, senior chairman of FNB's board of directors, to break loose from a meeting to take their cash deposits.

"The bank has been stout since buggy days," said Welch, "and it's been good to this community ever since."

About that time, longtime bank customer H.L. Huffman sauntered by and glanced at the horse and buggy and the white-hatted fellows waiting for the banker.

"You tell them," he said, "to put another horse on that buggy, because this is not a one-horse town."

By then, Butler had showed up.

"We think this bank has always supported agriculture, and we appreciate it," Welch said, as he handed the money over to Butler, who has been with FNB since 1927.

"Now, that's good," said the banker. "I just want to thank these gentlemen for coming down to make these nice deposits...Like the gentleman (Huffman) said, 'This is not a one-horse town.'"

Help for cancer patients 'snowballed'

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Several years ago in Midland, there were no cancer support groups. There wasn't even an Allison Permian Basin Cancer Center.

"Five years ago we didn't have some of these programs here to help us get over the hump — to help us through this time," said Pattie Hodges, chairman of Midland's I CAN COPE educational program. "Someone said something about Hospice and I thought it was a hotel."

Since then, Ms. Hodges, a cancer patient in remission, said a snowball effect rolled through Midland.

Today's organizations include I CAN COPE, which sponsors a series of educational programs for cancer patients, friends and family; Hospice, a volunteer group which helps dying cancer patients live with dignity in their homes; The Lost Chords, a support group for patients who have lost their vocal chords to cancer; CanSurmount, present and former cancer patients who talk, listen and share with new cancer patients; and the American Cancer Society, which sponsors many of these programs and provides funds for research, equipment, and educational services.

Support groups for mastectomy, ostomy and colostomy patients also are available.

"See how things get started," Ms. Hodges said. "Everybody is helping everybody."

Six hundred volunteers carried out American Cancer Society programs last year in Midland, Mike Sanford, district chairman of the American Cancer Society, Midland Unit, said this week during the sixth of the I CAN COPE seven-part series.

Governed by a board of directors and a 50-member board of volunteers, the Midland Unit provided cancer information that reached 17,000 youths and 11,000 aduits, Sanford said.

About 360 cancer patients and their families were helped through American Cancer Society services and referrals. Cancer education on the professional level was made available to physicians, nurses, dentists and other health care specialists.

Cancer information was given to schools and to the public through employee groups, clubs and organizatons, health agencies, pamphlets, I QUIT KIT (stop smoking kit) and Fresh Start (stop smoking classes).

According to Gail Wilson, Hospice patient care coordinator, 240 Midland families have received the support of Hospice workers since the program began.

"We have one of the largest Hospice programs in Texas and that's because of the community we live in. Because Midland is so generous, we can do all of these things without asking the patients to pay, which is very unusual."

The 80 volunteers each complete eight three-hour sessions of training and are available 24-hours, seven days a week, to help cancer patients and their families, said Carol Armstrong, volunteer coordinator.

The volunteers include attorneys, registered nurses, physical and occupational therapists, dietitians, lab technicians and hairdressers, Ms Armstrong said.

"But the bulk of our people are just good, good, good lay people," she said. "What they take when they go into a home is the attitude that we care."

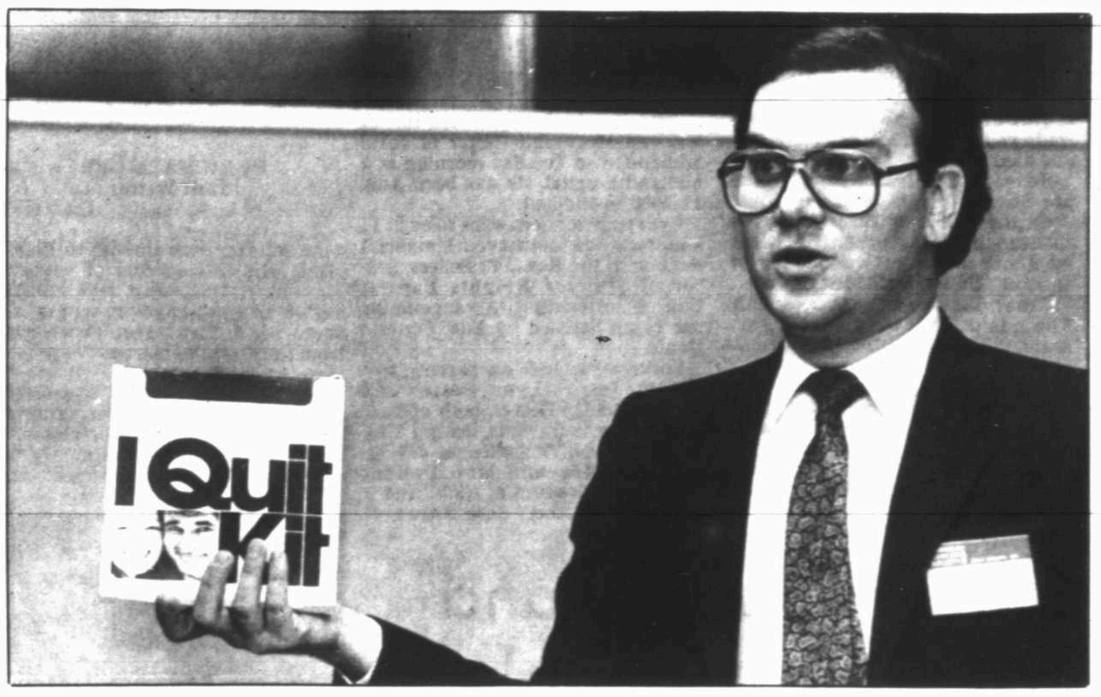

According to Liz Lipscomb, who assumed the new position of Hospice's medical social worker, "one of the things that we recognize is cancer is an illness that affects both the patient and the family."

"So when we go into a home, we don't look just at the patients, but also the family," she said.

A psycho-social assessment of each patient and his or her family includes their mental, physical, spiritual and financial needs. Support groups throughout the community are recommended as needed.

Because the cancer patient often withdraws from the family, much work is done on communicating, Ms Lipscomb said.

PBRPC approves grant request to renovate Big Spring pool

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Big Spring received a stamp of approval Wednesday for a grant request to be used to renovate the city's only public pool.

The Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission gave favorable comment to Big Spring's application to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

In other action the PBRPC gave favorable comment for Lamesa, McCamey and Stanton's Head Start program, two Midland subdivisions and gave approval to the PBRPC staff to apply for two state grants.

The Comanche Trail Park Municipal Swimming Pool is the major recreation facility in Big Spring, said Jerry Tschauner, PBRPC director of planning.

"It was built in 1935 and it needs to be renovated," he said. "They're losing 87,000 gallons a day."

"I wish we could find it (water)," said Big Spring's Director of Public Works Tom Decell. "We're losing it, but we don't have any green grass to show for it."

The board approved the $62,000 project, which includes $30,000 from the Parks and Wildlife Department to match with $32,500 in local funds.

Also the PBRPC approved unanimously the West Texas Opportunities Inc.'s application to the Department of Health and Human Services for the continuation funding of its full-year, part-day Head Start Program. The $214,168 requested, along with a local match of $53,472 will continue the Head Start programs in Lamesa, McCamey and Stanton. The goal of the program is to serve 120 4-year-old children in the coming year with 20 children in each of the Stanton and McCamey centers and 80 enrolled in Lamesa.

Two Midland subdivisions — Bel-Air Section 2 and Western Hills Section 4 — were also given favorable comment by the board. Home Savings Association of Midland submitted an application to the Department of Housing and Urban Development for an environmental review of both subdivisions.

"They (developers) are gearing up for the next boom," Tschauner said, explaining this preliminary approval for both subdivisions.

Bel-Air, located at the southeast corner of Edgewood and Bowie streets in West Midland, will provide 25 single family residences. The developer proposes to sell improved lots for about $13,000 each, including the cost of installing the utilities, streets and drainage.

Western Hills Section 4, located in southwest Midland adjacent to and north of the Western Hills Section 2 subdivision, will be subdivided into 63 single family lots. The developer plans to sell improved lots for about $13,000, also including the cost of installing the utilities, streets and drainage.

Ernie Crawford, PBRPC executive director, received approval to apply for two grants from the Governor's Division of Planning and Budget. The annual state planning grant of $80,581 will be increased to $92,413. This grant is available for the PBRPC to use to supplement other grants. Also the board approved a $30,678 Texas Community Development Program grant, which will be used with community block grants.

Shaw: Farmers should be open to change

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

STANTON — In a community of people whose lifeblood is agriculture, it was only natural that the soil and its fruit be honored Wednesday.

The occasion was Martin County Ag Appreciation Day, which brought together under one roof in Stanton Community Center farmers, agriculture economists, a state legislator, and the farm family of the year.

That latter honor went to Mr. and Mrs. Bill Stone and their sons Walton and Chris. The award was presented to them by Terry Blair, president of Martin County Chamber of Commerce.

State Representative Larry Don Shaw, meanwhile, called for farmers to be receptive to new ideas and be open for change.

"Any people, any business that tries to stay the same," he said, "will stagnate, just as any nation will...I think we must change in ways that will improve our position. We are an efficient industry, producing far more than any other farmers ever have, and yet we are not keeping up with our bills...We've got to get involved in the market place, in the business arena, and be smart business people, smarter than we have been."

Shaw said farmers must look toward new ways of marketing and new ways of using their political strength if they are to thrive.

"It's not very funny out on the farm right now," said the legislator and cotton farmer. "We're in severe conditions...economic policies aren't working."

Shaw suggested the formation of a coalition of producers and consumers to strengthen the agriculture industry.

Dr. Cari Anderson and Dr. Ron Knutson, both economists with Texas A&M Extension Service, conducted an economic workshop for farmers prior to Shaw's speech.

"I've been somewhat apprehensive about coming out here to talk about marketing, knowing the difficulties you've had," Anderson told the farmers, many of whom have been crippled by drought. "But I know most of you plan on being in business for several more years."

Anderson said farmers too long have been "price takers instead of price makers. We've got to learn ways of taking advantage of that price when it moves in our direction."

The economist noted that cotton demand is better today than it was a year ago. "The economic machine behind our economy is pretty strong right now," he said. "I think the next year ahead we'll be looking at good demand, both on a domestic level and on a foreign level."

He pointed out, however, that planted cotton acres in Texas has dropped from 7.85 million in 1980 to only 2 million this year. Furthermore, export demands are not great.

"We do not see a growing market for our exports," said Anderson. "The foreign countries consume about 5 million bales of cotton more than they produce. We had hoped that would be up to seven."

United Way has been pledged $1.26 million

United Way of Midland's fundraising campaign has reached 74 percent of its $1,712,000 goal.

The $1,267,956 pledged will be allocated to the 23 service agencies supported by the United Way during 1984.

Unit reports for the fourth report were:

— Industry/Commerce, $272,195, or 52.2 percent of its goal.

— Oil, $417,653, or 77.9 percent of its goal.

— Special Support, $398,985, or 87.7 percent.

— Public/Professional, $179,123, or 89.6 percent.

Division reports were: major firms, $223,095; pacesetters, $41,923; small business, $7,177; special gifts, $336,021; independent oil, $50,101; residential, $12,863; major oil, $281,853; intermediate oil, $97,245; service companies, $29,890; drilling companies, $8,665; education, $65,470; goverment/services, $41,847; and professional, $71,806.

Midlanders turn out in grand fashion to support FNB

If you know how to, you can do.

Well, Midlanders the other day demonstrated they knew how to pull off a town hall meeting in grand fashion. It was a bona fide gathering of folks with a common purpose: to keep Midland's independent bank afloat, to return it to its greatness and to show appreciation for the bank's vital role in the community.

The demonstration was heartening and was a tribute to leadership and motivation — prime ingredients of any movement. Forces behind the gathering were economics and community pride. That'll get most people off their duffs.

It would, indeed, be a salute to the human kind in Midland if town hall meetings were fairly common fare. The cynics, of course, always will have something caustic, borderline witty and teeth-rotting bad to say about any common-interest gathering. "It's all out of greed," they'll say, or "What's their angle?"

It's been awhile since people gathered en masse other than to be entertained in a concert, at an airshow, blessed in a church, or caught in a traffic jam.

Certainly few, if any, citizens show up to protest a slight increase in the tax rate. That affects their pocketbook. But do they protest? Rarely. Folks had rather gripe; that's a free bonus at tax-paying time.

Around here, no demonstrations have been set off by threats of a nuclear holocaust, by the facts of air and water pollution, by the urgent need for conservation of human and natural resources, by rumors of impending doom and the Coming Judgment. The motivation, often too late, will come when the crisis is at hand.

Issues of the day get scattered attention in those rare public forums in the political season. But unless there's an imminent crisis, such as in the case of First National Bank, few people bother to show up. They have to be motivated and be convinced that they are going to be directly affected before they'll show up and pay attention or cast a yawn. At least they showed an interest by showing up.

It's shocking what stirs people to gossip — spew out negative comments — and talk about toppling institutions and people. Unsavory comments stir people to yak more than any deed or misdeed. Earl Butz's off-color joke got more attention than his agricultural policies, and the remarks by U.S. Secretary of Interior James Watts got far more immediate attention from the press and the populous than his controversial slant on the nation's wilderness.

In 1970, Earth Day was a rallying event for those, such as the collegiate types, who thought it was an affront to take the fair earth for granted and to foul it up. Today, the earth is still being polluted at an alarming rate, but it has become so commonplace that nobody, it seems, except the naturalists and special-interests groups, such as the Sierra Club and National Aududon and wildlife groups, say much about it.

For awhile, naturalists carried the save-the-whale banner high. They exhorted their fellows to save the eagle, the falcon, the turtle and wildflowers but often overlooked themselves — their kind — and the cunning coyote. They're all intertwined. That includes the mite.

The death of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1945 brought Americans, already united in the war effort, together in mourning. The deaths of John F. Kennedy in 1963 and Martin Luther King Jr. five years later brought people together. There was no rally, but people demonstrated concern. They were indignant.

Maybe town hall meetings, except for singular occasions, are reserved for novelists and dreamers. Rarely do they crop up in real life. They seem about as rare as community barn-building, which, in essence, was the purpose of the bank rally the other night. The human spirit still can have compassion, even if it's for a bank, and can summon a rally even if it's just based on the economics of a community.

DEATHS

Louis Tighe

HOUSTON — Services for Louis Thomas Tighe, 85, of Houston, father of Charles L. Tighe of Midland, will be at 2 p.m. Friday in St. Paul's United Methodist Church in Houston with Dr. John Fellers officiating. Graveside services will be in Forest Park Lawndale Cemetery.

Tighe died Monday in Houston.

He was born Feb. 27, 1898, in Palestine, was reared in Sour Lake, and in 1918 was graduated from Texas A&M University with a degree in electrical engineering. Tighe was a member of the Texas A&M Ross Volunteers and the basketball team. He was U.S. Army pilot in World War I.

Tighe, a registered professional engineer, worked for The Texas Co. (Texaco) for 44 years. He retired in 1964 as assistant general manager.

Tighe and his wife, Rachel, whom he married in 1923, were founding members of the President's Endowed Scholars of Texas A&M. She died in 1976.

He was a member of Arabia Temple Shrine, The Southgate Civic Club, the T Club of Texas A&M, the Ex-Students Association of Texas A&M and was an active member of St. Paul's United Methodist Church.

Other survivors include a son, Thomas J. Tighe of Victor, six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

The family has requested that memorials be directed to the Men's Fellowship Class of St. Paul's United Methodist Church., 5501 S. Main St., Houston, Texas 77004, or to the Texas A&M University Development Foundation, Box J-7, Aggieland Station, College Station, Texas 77844.

Earl Hatfield

Graveside services for Earl G. Hatfield, 91, formerly of Midland, were Saturday in Woodland Cemetery in Cleveland, Okla., directed by Buchanan-Wise-McClendon Funeral Home.

He died Oct. 5 at an Okmulgee hospital after a lengthy illness.

Hatfield was born April 29, 1892, in West Virginia and spent his working career in the oilfields of West Virginia and Oklahoma, retiring from Kerr-McGee in 1957. He was a member of the Baptist church.

Survivors include his wife, Laura Hatfield; two daughters, Mrs. Robert (Gloria) Hollis of Okmulgee and Mrs. E.E. (Marilee) Runyan of Midland; a sister, Mrs. A.F. Neely of Cleveland, Okla.; and five grandchildren.

John T. Hester

John Travis Hester, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hester of rural Midland, died Tuesday morning at a Midland hospital. He was born Aug. 11, 1983, in Midland.

Graveside services were to be at 11 a.m. today in Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. Jim Sellers, pastor of Midessa Heights Baptist Church, officiating. Arrangements are being handled by Ellis Funeral Home.

Survivors include his parents; two sisters, Jessica Lynn Hester and Hannah Nichol Hester, both of Midland; his grandparents, Joseph Hester of Abilene, Velma Hester of Midland, and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Durham of Greenville, Mich.; and a great-grandmother, Rose Brown of Greenville.

New ZIP code can help cut mailing expenses

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Midland businesses can cut the costs of their mailing expenses if they use four additional numbers with the five-digit ZIP code, said a Midland Post Office spokesman.

The U.S. Postal Service Governors approved price incentives this week for the use of the "ZIP +4" code — an expanded Zip code — on qualified First Class mail.

"This is entirely on a volunteer basis for businesses only," said Stan Sartain, director of customer service at Midland's Post Office.

The incentives — a .5 cents per piece for presorted mail and .9 cents per piece for mail which is not presorted — is designed for business mail which makes up about 96 percent of the post office's workload, Sartain said.

He added the extra four digits will make it possible to sort mail automatically to individual letter carriers as opposed to the less efficient hand methods of distribution.

The ZIP +4 code is expected to be used primarily by business mailers and they can get conversion assistance directly form the post office. Individual householders, or residents, are not expected to notify business correspondents of the new four-digit add-on code.

"Business mailers will do all the work," Sartain said.

Large businesses, which already presort their mail according to the five-digit codes, receive a three-cent discount.

Now, by using the new four numbers, these businesses can have an additional half-cent discount. For mail not presorted, the small business mailer can add on the additional four numbers and receive a .9-cent discount.

"Most business mailers will find it cost effective to use the four additional numbers, others may not," Sartain said.

"It will not only speed up the mail service, but also will help contain postal operating costs and hold down the future rate increases," he added.

"Mail from large businesses is what the post office is looking for to help us process through mechanization," he said, explaining that "eventually a computerized reader will process the mail from New York to Midland without it touching human hands, except to put the mail on a machine.

"It will save the post office millions of dollars per year," he said. "This mail has been sorted by hand. Think of it as the telephone company. Think how it would be if we had to go through an operator everytime we wanted to make a call."

Many large businesses mail some 50,000 to 60,000 pieces of mail a day. Sartain said every Midlander would have to write a letter each day for 10 days to combat one business.

"The large business mailers have the equipment — computers, printing equipment and addressing machines — to help us with the cost of processing the mail," he said. "By using the code, they'll help us and themselves."

Autopsy doesn't reveal cause of pigeon's death

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

An autopsy was unable to determine what killed one of several pigeons found dead last month under the railroad overpass on South Big Spring Street, two blocks from the downtown area.

And although "traces of arsenic" were detected in corn samples tested for the presence of poison, it was "no more than what can be found in city water supplies," said Midland veterinarian Steve Betton.

The autopsy and poison testing were performed at Texas A&M University. Decomposition had set in on the bird "to a degree that may have masked signs of toxicity," added Dr. Betton. "They suspect poison, but can't support or disprove it."

The city had been putting whole kernal corn under the viaduct in an attempt to lure the birds away from the downtown area. But it was not poisoned, according to health department Chief Sanitarian Don Goodrum.

"Assuming the corn is poisoned, I don't know who put it out there," Goodrum said Sept. 26, the day the pigeon and corn were picked up and sent off to College Station for testing.

The corn had been placed on the median between the columns of the overpass, allowing passing children and other, non-nuisance birds easy access to it. Midland is a designated bird sanctuary.

The city has stopped putting corn under the viaduct, Goodrum said Tuesday, because the effort to get the birds to change roosts "wasn't working. It was just one of my ideas that didn't work."

Goodrum noted that an attempt would be made to reduce the pigeon problem by placing poisoned bait on the roofs of downtown buildings in the near future:

"There've been numerous complaints concerning the pigeon population downtown. We've even tried some trapping. But there are just too many birds down there.

"So several alternatives were evaluated and we finally came up with poison. It'll be put on the taller buildings to cut the population."

Leadership Midland has 43 new people

"We try to go in with our smiles and with our spirits and try to give encouragement to the families," she said, adding "our care does not stop at death with Hospice." A bereavement and grief program helps the family face the loss of the cancer victim.

"It's really being there when they need you," said Marguerite Ramones, staff nurse. "A lot of times it's listening. You get really close to your patients and even though you're a nurse, you're a friend, too."

During staff conferences, the nurses discuss care plans for new cancer patients and update their needs.

"What else do I do in a day?" Ms. Ramones asked, smiling. "It's endless."

Other tasks performed may range from giving manicures and hair cuts to moving furniture or giving birthday parties.

"Just being there is the most important — being there when they need you," she said.

Shaw: Farmers should be open to change

Anderson recommended that the Martin County cotton farmers keep in mind a balance between the market and production when they plant their fields next year.

"If we want to see market prices, we need to be shooting for 11 million acres" planted nationwide, he said. "So you need to idle 25-30 percent of your acres across the belt to keep the market from folding...I wish we could say plant fence row to fence row, but I don't see how we can do that."

Anderson added that "if I put my best guess, I think the price of cotton will be lower next year than it is now."

Knutson gave farmers similar advice regarding planting of acres next year.

"As I go around, I hear a lot of full production psychology," he said. "With these sized deficiency payments, that's not very good...You should plan on laying out 15-25 percent of your land next year."

World and domestic conditions, he said, have placed "some pretty serious restraints on 1984":

— "If you don't produce you have trouble exporting."

— "If you raise price supports, your price is out of the world market."

— "If you raise the target price, it adds to the national deficit."

Knutson said he expected the following conditions to exist next year, "based on the assumption Congress doesn't do anything to the wheat feed grain program":

— Target price will increase 76 cents to 86 cents.

— Loan rate will continue at 55 cents.

— There will be a cotton acreage reduction of 15-25 percent.

— Payment in Kind program will be discontinued, "or if we do have a PIK, it probably will not be attractive enough to participate in."

Knutson listed four economic signals for cotton farmers to look for in 1984: early pricing, weather trends, farm program developments, and economic recovery developments.

Knutson added that in lieu of major governmental policy changes occurring, fine tuning on existing programs may be effected.

Jurors acquit manager in motel blaze trial

FORT WORTH (AP) — Jurors who said they believed that a 23-year-old motel manager was just following his boss' orders acquitted him of a fire code violation in a June 14 blaze at the Ramada Inn Central that killed five people.

Fire investigators said the blaze started in a stack of rolled carpeting that was blocking an exit.

Eugene F. Slape, 23, general manager of the motel since September 1982, testified he was told by the motel owner, Ernest Barker of Mount Carmel, Ill., to put the six rolls of carpet and 17 rolls of padding in the hallway until the carpet could be installed in guest rooms.

MHS Homecoming parade tonight

The Midland High School Homecoming parade is scheduled for 6:30 tonight. It will start on C and Wall streets, travel east on Wall, north on Loraine, west on Illinois and end at MHS. A bonfire and pep rally will be in the west parking lot at 8 p.m.

The game will begin at 8 p.m. Friday. MHS will face Odessa High School at Memorial Stadium. The Homecoming Queen will be crowned at half-time and parade floats will circle the field.

The dance will begin at 9 p.m. Saturday at Midland Youth Center.

Olympic medalist to talk to students

Olympic gold medalist Doug Russell will meet with gifted and talented third-, fourth- and fifth-graders of the Midland Independent School District from 9:30 to 11 a.m. Monday and Tuesday in the auditorium of Carver Cultural Center, 1300 E. Wall. Russell will talk to the children about the importance of commitment in achieving success. His visit is part of a Junior League of Midland project, Exploratory Experiences.

The purpose of Exploratory Experiences is to expose students in MISD's gifted education program to people and areas of study to which they might not otherwise be exposed. It is designed to enable students to determine the common characteristics of successful people in various careers and professions. This is the first year of the project, and Russell's visit is the first of three scheduled project activities this year.

Russell, a graduate of Midland High School, is now a swimming coach in San Diego.

Midland College to offer five courses

Five classes will be offered by the Midland College Department of Community Services beginning the week of Oct. 17. Included will be House Plants, Defensive Driving, SAT Test Preparation, Quilting II and Christmas Decorating II.

A course on house plants will be four Mondays from 7-9 p.m. It includes information on how to select, feed, water and multiply plants as well as terrariums and hanging baskets. Fee is $12.

Defensive driving is Monday and Tuesday from 6:30-10:30 p.m. Fee is $18.

SAT Test Preparation will be Tuesday and Thursday from 7-9 p.m. for three weeks. Course is designed to improve performance on the SAT through the application of test taking skills and the reduction of test anxiety. Fee is $22.

Quilting II will be four Tuesdays from 7-9:30 p.m. Students must have completed Quilting I or have prior experience. Covers Grandmother's Flowergarden and Dreden Plate patterns. Scissors and thimble needed first night, other materials available in class for $10. Fee is $15.

Christmas Decorating II will be from 7-9 p.m. for five Thursdays. Students will construct table decorations, centerpieces, gift items, wall hangings and tree ornaments. Fee is $15.

MC to offer 'Color Analysis' course

"Color Analysis and Basic Wardrobe Planning" will be a two-hour course at Midland College at 7 p.m. Oct. 27. Ellen Christensen, a professional color consultant, is the instructor. Fee is $8 and persons should register in advance at the Department of Commmunity Services in the administration building.

The course will include a discussion of the history and theory of color analysis utilizing a seasonal concept of color harmony. Color coordination of each person's wardrobe with the fundamentals also will be included.

De Zavala PTA has open house

De Zavala Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association will have an open house at 7 p.m. today. Parents can visit classes and meet teachers. Guest speaker will be Sgt. Lalo Camarrillo on the "Helping Hand" program. An executive board meeting is scheduled for 6 p.m.

All De Zavala parents are invited to attend.

Meetings on four-year plan slated

Goddard Junior High School and Lee Freshman High School are planning parent orientations concerning implementation of a four-year graduation plan. Parents of Goddard eighth graders will meet in the cafeteria at 7:30 tonight. Parents of ninth graders at Lee Freshman will meet in the cafeteria at 7 p.m.

'Holistic Living' workshop planned

A one-day workshop on "Holistic Living" has been scheduled at Midland College Nov. 5. Fee is $25 and students should register by noon, Nov. 4. Those enrolled should bring a sack lunch.

Conducting the course will be Dr. Justin O'Brien, philosopher, theologian, university professor and international lecturer. Topics and practices during the workshop will include freedom from fear and stress, breathing exercises for increasing vitality, how diet influences the mind, aerobic exerise without fatigue, eliminating restless sleep, improving the memory, staying tranquil and alert under pressure, overcoming fatigue during the day, using silence for productivity and awakening the divine life within.

Trinity School hosts school representatives

During the month of October Trinity School is serving as host to representatives from preparatory boarding schools across the country. Those who have been or will be on the Trinity campus to meet with prospective students are: Peter Bartlett from South Kent, Conn.; Gay Lord from St. Timothy's and Nancy Beth Hay from Garrison Forest, both in Maryland; Tom Parker from Woodberry Forest, James Farrar from Episcopal High school, Ann Troutman from Darlington and Rebecca Hanson from Foxcroft, all in Virginia; James C. Duke from Baylor and Steve Harn from McCallie, both in Tennessee; and Bruce Watson from Cate, Calif.

In other school news, the Rt. Rev. Sam B. Hulsey, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Northwest Texas, officiated Oct. 4 at the service of dedication and thanksgiving for the refurbishing of the Trinity School Chapel. The chapel, built in 1962 and furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Joe Crump, was refurbished over the summer with a gift from the Crump family. Mrs. Crump and Fannie Bess Sivalls were honored guests.

Pathologist rules on cause of death

Leptospirosis has been ruled out in the death last month of 28-year-old Caroline Jackson.

Health authorities originally feared the east-side woman might have contracted the animal disease because of her feeding and cage-cleaning duties as an employee of Jerry's Pet Shop in Midland Park Mall.

Instead, according to pathologist Dr. Martha Madsen, death resulted from a generalized infection "with severe pneumonia — which destroyed lung tissue — and severe blood clotting. There was nothing at all suggesting leptospirosis."

Ms. Jackson worked at Jerry's Pets about three months and left work sick on Sept. 23, according to store manager Ron Coughlin.

She was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital with a fever of 105 degrees on Sept. 26. She died two days later.

Dr. Madsen performed an autopsy and sent tissue samples to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga.

"Leptospirosis is being considered because of her employment," health department Chief Sanitarian Don Goodrum said at the time.

The results of the CDC testing precluded the disease, however, and city Health Officer Dr. James M. Humphreys Jr. has given Jerry's Pets a clean bill of health.

College attendance increases

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — More Bexar County high school students are going on to college because of a national program to encourage juniors to take the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test, said the head of the New York-based association sponsoring the project.

George H. Hanford told a news conference here Wednesday that all 49 high schools in Bexar County are participating voluntarily in the national project, which targets high school juniors who might otherwise skip college.

He said the program also encouraging students who fare well on the PSAT to take advanced placement courses for early college credit.

Under the program, funded here by a $1 million private grant, juniors can take the PSAT free of charge. The program also funds materials and teacher training for advanced placement courses for high school seniors.

Hanford, president of the College Board, a non-profit association of school and colleges that helps students make the transition from secondary to post-secondary schooling, said the three-year program has been so successful in its second year that officials were "willing and eager to share the knowledge and experience it has gained."

Hanford said the results of the program so far include:

— A 300 percent increase in the number of students entering college from one Bexar County school district.

— A 100 percent increase in the number of juniors taking the PSAT in some districts, with an average increase of 75 percent throughout the county.

— An increase in the number of schools offering advanced placement courses during the senior year from one at the beginning of the program to 32 this fall, a 65 percent increase. Nationally, 23 percent of the schools offer the courses, Hanford said.

— A 39 percent increase in the number of local students taking those course examinations in the first year and a103 percent increase last year.

Vanishing children 'national emergency'

Copley News Service

SACRAMENTO — Conditions, in the mind of the youngster at least, have become intolerable at home. He — or she — takes the only avenue of escape, and runs away. ...

A parent, already emotionally torn by divorce and loneliness — and anger at the former mate over child custody restrictions — takes matters into his own hands and disappears with his own child.

Or, normally trusting children are abducted by strangers.

Each year, such tragedies — each fraught with heartbreak — occur more than 2 million times. They have, in the words of Sherrie Seliber of the Children's Home Society of California, "become a national emergency" and a crisis crying out for an answer.

"Of the more than 2 million reported missing each year in the nation," she told a recent hearing conducted in Rancho Mirage near Palm Springs of the Senate Select Committee on Children and Youth, "1,850,000 are runaways, 100,000 are kidnapped by one or the other of their own parents, and some 50,000 are abducted by strangers. Each day," she emphasized, "5,069 children run away, 273 are kidnapped by family members, and 131 are taken by strangers.

"And many of these children are victims of child abuse during their confinement, and return home with severe emotional scars. Some 5,000 of them, tragically, never make it home at all. They are found dead. ..."

And, added Sen. Robert Presley, chairman of the panel, "it is estimated that some 200,000 others will end up buried in unknown graves."

In California alone, Presley said, some 71,000 children are reported missing each year, and only about half of that number are returned home within a few days. As for the rest, he said, "no one is sure what happens to most runaways. We know, for example, that only 1,100 names of permanently missing children are filed with the state Department of Justice."

In all cases, however, Seliber pointed out to the committee, "once the child has run away, or the kidnapping has occurred, damage already has been done. The primary solution to the problem, then, revolves around prevention."

Tragic in its irony, she pointed out, is the finding that "half of the children who run away could be considered 'throwaway kids' — kids that parents have as much as told to "get lost."

"Some others, though," she added, "leave home because they think their families cannot support them."

In either case, she said, life on the road is difficult for runaways. They are easy victims of criminals."

Equally tragic, though, she told the panel, are the child victims of parental stealing; the aftermath of custody disputes. The most common age for such child-snatchings, Seliber said, is ages 4 through 7.

In both kinds of child tragedies — runaway or stolen — the answer, Seliber said, lies in prevention. "Public education is a beginning step." Judges, attorneys, law enforcement officers, physicians, teachers and parents must work together to become able to identify and offer assistance to children at risk."

Vision important

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — School-age children should learn good reading habits, and have an annual eye examination to diagnose vision problems early, suggests the American Optometric Association.

Parents should provide good lighting.

Sex suit: patient vs. doctor

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — An Ocean Beach housewife has filed a $30 million malpractice suit against her psychologist, alleging he seduced her into becoming his sex slave to engage in sadomasochistic and other sexual acts under the guise of therapy.

San Francisco attorney Marvin Lewis, who won a $4.6 million judgment in 1981 for a La Jolla, Calif., woman in a similar type suit, filed the action on behalf of Laura Sullivan-Bennett, 24.

Named defendants in the suit are Dr. William Latta, and International College and University Without Walls, both located in the Los Angeles area and identified as employers of Latta and other defendants not yet identified.

Latta could not be reached for comment, but a woman who said by telephone that she was Latta's wife responded: "There is absolutely no truth to that. It's a big surprise. We went to her wedding and everything."

The woman declined further comment until a lawyer is retained.

Sullivan-Bennett could not be reached for comment.

In the 1981 lawsuit, Lewis and his client, Evelyn Walker, eventually agreed to an out-of-court settlement for $2.5 million in a suit against Dr. Zane Parzen rather than go through an extended appeal process.

Lewis said he plans to prosecute the Sullivan-Bennett suit in the same manner he did the Walker suit in 1981. The latest suit alleges that Latta and five other unidentified individuals set out to take advantage of Sullivan-Bennett's emotional problems and make her their slave in a sadomasochistic relationship by means of the "transference phenomenon."

The transference phenomenon, Lewis explained, is a means that psychologists and psychiatrists use to have the patient transfer her love, affection and esteem to the doctor in order for the doctor to gain complete confidence so the patient will reveal and expose her innermost feelings, thoughts and desires.

The lawsuit said that when such transference is effected, it is possible for the psychologist or psychiatrist to abuse the relationship by directing the patient to act for his benefit and to take advantage of the patient's susceptibility and vulnerability.

"If the transference phenomenon is abused," the suit said, "it can likely worsen the patient's mental problems and prevent the patient from being treated successfully in the future."

AT WORK

Combine work and study

By DR. ADELE SCHEELE

Q. I always read your column and especially appreciate you advice to new job seekers and college students. I'm in both categories. I'm 21 and a junior majoring in English.I'm working my way through college in a pharmacy at night and on weekends.The job isn't great but it pays for tuition.

I want to get a paralegal certificateafter graduating and wonder if I shouldn't also be working for a law firm.I was a secretary for a gas companyand a bank-holding company, but I've never worked for a law firm. And, when I graduate, will anyone be impressed that I am a hard worker?

A. The more you combine work and study, the better. Try to find a part-time job doing research or secretarial work for law-related firms. You have ready-made contacts on campus — professors, staff, and the placement service that may just know a firm or an alumnus who needs help.

Also, your previous employers might both have legal departments in-house and may need you or know someone who does. Now to the final question about whether working your way through school counts. It does only if you make it count. And you do that by making every connection you can on campus (even working for the campus attorney's office) and off.

Then you tell about your experiences with pride so that future employers will, too.

Q — My husband was a chemist and pharmacologist in a large firm. One day he went to work and came home at lunch — fired along with 30 others. He had never been fired before and took it bad.

He began drinking and because I had raised eight children, I opened our house as a nursery to pay the bills. When we came close to losing our home, he straightened up and got a job in a building material department. But he drank so much I had to close the nursery.

I don't know how to live with this any more and am so lonely I don't know what to live for anyway.

A — You must immediately start to change. You now are both being victimized and must take charge of your lives.

Go immediately to Alcoholics Anonymous's ALANON — support for families of alcoholics. Your loneliness will disappear as you get involved and try to get your husband in AA himself. Then if he won't, try living separately. I know this sounds bold, and takes courage. But nothing will change on its own.

Hungry babies eat

Even the most finicky baby will try a new food if he's hungry.

A child-care tip in "Family Circle" magazine said to feed him new food first and hewill probably accept it without much fuss.

'Goof-off Goose' can be cured

NORFOLK, Conn. (AP) - If you wonder whether you'll ever get your child to help around the house without having a pitched battle; if your child is going to do everything "tomorrow" — only tomorrow never comes — "Don't despair," says author and mother Jackie Reinach.

"Are you the parent of a Goof-Off Goose?" asks Ms. Reinach, who is co-author of a popular book series, in which Goof-Off Goose is one of the 26 sassy animal characters who inhabit the storybook town of Sweet Pickles.

"I'm sure Goof-Off Goose was created in memory of the many wars I fought with my kids on the battlegrounds of their messy rooms," she says of the character that is lovable but, oh, so lazy.

Ms. Reinach, who has a background in developmental psychology and many years' experience working with and writing for children, offers these suggestions for dealing with a resident Goof-Off Goose:

— Invent an imaginary character to use as a reference. For example, if your child's room looks like World War III, you can say, "Oh, I see Goof-Off Goose, (or Messy Max or Dirty Dan) has been here." You are thus labelling the behavior as unacceptable, not the child.

— Make it easy for the children to be organized. Assign specific places where items are to be placed, such as a toy chest, box or closet.

— Be specific about what you want done, and demonstrate how it should be accomplished.

DEAR ABBY

Weekend warriors break hearts

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Very recently something happened to me that seems to be a very common occurrence.

Every summer, men leave their full-time occupations and regular lifestyles and go for two weeks of reserve training at military installations in various states.

Recently I dated an Army reserve officer during his stay here. He told me all about himself and said he was divorced. I introduced him to all my friends. He seemed to be a person with very good qualities, and I fell in love with him.

Two days before he was to return home, he disappeared, leaving no telephone number and no forwarding address. I tried to find him in the city where he said he lived, but couldn't.

Being a 38-year-old college graduate, a Linda Evans look-alike and a decent, trusting person didn't stop me from playing the fool. I should have known better, but I didn't. Abby, if men would level with girls at least before they leave, we wouldn't be left with our lives so torn apart and feeling like idiots. —BROKENHEARTED DOWN SOUTH

DEAR BROKENHEARTED: So what else is new? There will always be men (and women) who make a practice of doing romantic hit-and-run numbers whenever possible. Women should not rush into relationships that become so heavy that at the end of a two-week romance they are left "torn apart and feeling like idiots."

DEAR ABBY: When a couple is invited to dinner, as my husband and I were, and if the host is not well-off but insists on paying, what should one do when the menu features steak (which you detest) at $8.95 and seafood (which you love) at $10.95?

I want to do what is correct, but if I offer to pay the $2 difference, do you think it would offend the host?

He is a dear, sensitive fellow and I wouldn't hurt him for anything. — TRYING FOR GOOD MANNERS

DEAR TRYING: Don't offer to pay the $2 difference. If you "detest steak," order something else, but don't go beyond what you perceive to be your host's budget, no matter how much you "love" something.

Painting neater

To avoid messy paint cans try this easy but useful tip from "Family Circle" magazine.

Put a heavy rubber band lengthwise around the open paint can so the band goes over and across the top.

Use the band to wipe off excess paint from the brush.

The sides and top of the paint can will stay nice and clean.

YWCA teaches comedy

NEW YORK (AP) — A series of humor courses taught by members of the Association of Comedy Artists is being offered this fall by the YWCA of New York City.

Dr. Kathryn Hahner, a psychologist, will discuss the Psychology of Humor.

Other subjects include History and Appreciation of Women in Comedy from Tucker (Sophie) to Tomlin (Lily), Comedy Improvisation and the Art of Succeeding as a Stand-up Comic.

Simulated crises

WEST HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Just as astronauts can practice in simulators before going into space, doctors, medical students and nurses now can react to simulated medical crises and immediately see the effects of their decisions.

The Miles Learning Center, in 275 teaching hospitals across the country, is an interactive video disc system that permits viewers to respond to day-to-day hospital situations varying from the routine to the life-threatening as seen on a TV monitor.

The computer component points out the best diagnosis and treatment.

The programs permit hospitals to continually update physicians in specialized areas such as trauma and prevention of infectious diseases.

Public Notice
Southwestern Bell, in accordance with rules and orders of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, hereby gives notice of its intent to re-file evidence and appropriate tariff(s) in support of a request to establish rates for the use of certain complex inside telephone wiring in the amount of $54.5 million annually. This request was previously a part of the considerations in Docket 5141 and now has been re-docketed as Docket 5420.
Customers who do not own the Complex Inside Wire associated with their Customer Premises Systems (such as PBX and Key Systems), and who utilize Southwestern Bell's wiring after January 1, 1984, could be affected by this request. On January 1, 1984, all of the Customer Premises Systems presently provided by Southwestern Bell Telephone Company will be transferred to a subsidiary of AT&T and that subsidiary of AT&T will be almost exclusively responsible for the charges pursuant to the proposed tariff on January 1, 1984. After January 1, 1984, customers who purchase their Complex Customer Premises Equipment and do not purchase, but continue to use, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's inside wire will be subject to the charges proposed in the tariff.
The proposed effective date for these new rates is January 1, 1984.
Persons interested in intervening in this matter should file a written motion expeditiously with the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Austin, Texas 78757, as the Hearing on the Merits in Docket 5420 is set for November 21, 1983.

Freebies for home owner

Copley News Service

Everyone could use a little help in running a home these days. Take a few tips from this collection of freebies on hanging wallpaper and buying a condo.

PAPER PLANS

So you're finally tired of the Moulin Rouge wallpaper someone put up so many years ago in every room of your house. But what can you do? Hiring a professional paperhanger could put you out of house and home altogether.

What you need is The No-Nonsense Gude to Hanging Wallcoverings. A big 22-by-34-inch poster, this freebie is exactly what its title implies. The illustrated, step-by-step instructions are detailed enough to get you started, but not complicated enough to scare you off from doing the job yourself. The poster format is perfect for hanging somewhere in the room you are working on to remind you of what you are doing. (Leafing through an instruction booklet while holding a sheet of wet wallpaper isn't easy.)

The poster explains some wall covering terminology and lists the tools you will need to do the job right. It describes how to properly prepare the walls, correctly stressing that your prep time will be your most important time on the job. Getting started and papering corners, windows and doors are all described along with some tips the professionals use. Offer good through Nov. 31, 1983.

Directions: Send 50 cents postage and handling.

Ask For: "The No-Nonsense Guide to Hanging Wallcoverings."

Mail To: Style-Tex, Naitonal Gypsum Decorative Products Division, 10 New England Executive Park, Burlington, MA 01803.

CONDO QUESTIONS

Putting a roof over your family's head isn't the relatively simple matter it once was. Aside from financing and availability considerations, many families are giving closer scrutiny to alternatives to the traditional single family home. In fact, current trends indicate that "within 20 years, 50 percent of the U.S. population will live in some form of housing with shared families or open space, such as condominiums. ..."

So says Questions About Condominiums, a 53-page booklet from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. In keeping with the trend, the booklet acts as a guidebook to the growing number of potential condominium buyers as they make their way through the sometimes confusing task of closing the deal. The overall philosophy of the booklet encourages buyers to ask as many questions as they wish before signing on the dotted line. Offer good through Nov. 31, 1983.

Directions: Send a postcard.

Ask For: Questions about Condominiums (No. 567L)

Water: Hard, soft side of issue

Copley News Service

There isn't much individual consumers can do about the air they breathe, but water is another matter, says a former Miss America who now travels the country singing praises of softer water.

Judi Ford Johnson, who reigned in 1969, today is a pitchman for the Water Quality Association, a special-interest group whose members sell water-softening and water-purification systems.

Johnson, not surprisingly, believes soft water — "quality water," she calls it — is a necessity. Some water experts, however, do not agree. Let's look at the hard and soft side of the issue.

Hard water is caused when naturally soft rainwater comes in contact with the earth and piks up minerals — notably calcium and magnesium. (A water softener employs an ion-exchange material (sodium) that removes these mineras from the water.)

Water containing more than "3.5 grains of hardness" is generally considered hard water, experts say.

For of every five American households have hard tap water.

Johnson says the benefits of using soft water are many. For instance:

— Soft water requires 29 percent less energy to heat than hard water, according to a study done at New Mexico State University for the Water Quality Association.

— Since less laundry detergent, bath soap and shampoo are needed with soft water, cleaning budgets an be reduced as much as 60 percent. "Softer water is also easier on fabrics, improving the look and lifespan of clothing and linens," Johnson said.

— Soaps and cleaning agents work faster and rinse away quicker with soft water, saving more than 90 minutes of ceaning time per week, according to a study conducted at Ohio State University.

Kay Rosaire doesn't recommend that others be as friendly with this tiger as she is. A fourth generation circus performer from England, Ms. Rosaire and friends — lions, tigers, leopard and panthers — will be on stage Saturday during Midland's Shrine Circus being held at Chaparral Center. Performance times for the all new Shrine Circus are 2:30 and 7:30 p.m. Advance tickets, which may be purchased at Chaparral Center, are priced at $4 for general admission and $5 for reserved seating. Tickets the day of the show are $1 more. Proceeds from the circus go to the Shriners burns and crippled children's hospitals and is used locally to provide transportation for patients from this area.

Songstress recalls Gershwin as bursting with wit, humor

ENTERTAINMENT

By DON FREEMAN
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — When his friends, family and admirers assembled at New York's Gershwin Theater recently to pay homage to the late Ira Gershwin, the program opened with Margaret Whiting singing a Gershwin classic, "Someone to Watch Over Me."

And then she told the audience that it was her father who first played the song for her. "I was only 3 years old," Margaret said. "From that time on, it was my favorite. A few years ago, I told Ira it was my favorite lyric. Ira said, 'The music ain't bad, either.' "

Margaret was talking about the Gershwin tribute and I had asked her how it was being in a theater filled with so much affection for one man and his work.

"It was a wondrous mix of sentiment and humor," she said. "Ira himself had such a lively sense of laughter. Tony Bennett, for example, remembered the first time he met Ira Gershwin. He was about to record a Gershwin song called 'Hi-Ho.' The producer said, 'We'll do it in stereo.' And Ira said, 'I don't need stereo. I have two ears.'

"And Arthur Schwartz, who wrote 'Dancing in the Dark' among other standards, reminisced about the time that the 300th recording of the Gershwins' 'I Got Rhythm' was released. Arthur said to Ira, 'Think of it. Three hundred different artists have recorded your song.' Ira shrugged and said, 'Some people seem to like it.' "

This is the world in which Margaret Whiting flourishes, the exuberant world of composers and lyricists she has known since her childhood as the daughter of Richard Whiting. Her father wrote the melodies for such durable tunes as "Hooray for Hollywood" and "My Ideal" and "Beyond the Blue Horizon." Music was always the essence of her life.

She is in a show in New York now called "Taking My Turn" and, with disc jockey Jim Lowe, she is co-host of "Songwriters Salute."

Conductor's baton stilled

NEW YORK (AP) — Though conductor Carlo Maria Giulini's doctors gave him a clean bill of health following his bout with pneumonia last year, they won't allow him to accompany the Los Angeles Philharmonic's East Coast tour in November and December.

'Big Chill' has real feeling of reunion

A Review

"The Big Chill," like most reunions of old college chums, is warm, sentimental, funny — and uneventful. Seven onetime radicals at the University of Michigan meet for a doleful occasion: the funeral of their friend, Alex, who committed suicide. They are an attractive gallery: William Hurt, a jaded intellectual who turned to drugs; Kevin Kline, a successful manufacturer of running shoes; Glenn Close, his compassionate wife; Mary Kay Place, a disillusioned lawyer with an urge to procreate; Tom Berenger, star of an TV action series; JoBeth Williams, a poet turned housewife; Jeff Goldblum, a reporter for People magazine. Lawrence Kasdan, who wrote the script with Barbara Benedek, masterfully directs the ensemble cast, providing each with important moments. They are among the best of today's acting generation. If one stands out, it is Miss Close, her wise and knowing face speaking more eloquently than words. While "The Big Chill" — a misleading title — rings of truth, it lacks the single dramatic punch to make it memorable. Even the suicide of Alex remains unexplained. Rated R, brief nudity, language, drug use.

Hope amused at Forbes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bob Hope was amused when Forbes magazine said he had $200 million and was one of the country's wealthiest men.

"Last year they said I was worth $280 million," he said. "If I lost $80 million how come they know about it and I don't. I wish I had a nickel for every dollar they say I've got."

'Call of Wild' to air Oct. 22

The Museum of the Southwest's film festival for children, Adaptations from Literature, will present Jack London's "Call of the Wild" Oct. 22.

Charlton Heston stars in this exciting story of survival during the Alaskan Gold Rush days.

Admission is $2 for associate members and the general public. The showing is free to regular members.

For more information call 683-2882. Admission is on a first come, first serve basis.

'Thriller' best seller for CBS

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Jackson's LP, "Thriller," has sold more than 14 million copies, making it the largest selling record in the history of CBS Records.

It surpassed CBS' all-time worldwide best-selling LP, "Simon & Garfunkel's Greatest Hits," in 1972.

Jackson also is the first artist in the industry ever to have five top singles from the same album.

Producers relive death camp experiences

OSWIECIM, Poland (AP) — Millions died in the Nazi death camps of Auschwitz and Birkenau, but producers Jack Eisner and Harry Preisler lived through them and have returned to film the story.

The first Americans to shoot a feature film in Poland in a decade, Eisner and Preisler recently reconstructed the horror of the camps — where an estimated 4 million people were gassed and then cremated — to make the movie, "The Children's War."

Preisler was so overcome by emotion that he left the movie set early. Some of the 2,000 Polish extras, who lost relatives at Auschwitz, also found the re-eneactment too lifelike, and left in tears.

"It's painful to come back, but if you have a story to tell, you have to bear the pain," said Eisner, 56.

Nazi guards were filmed whipping and kicking men, women and children, sending some toward the crematoria and consigning others to hard labor with little to eat.

The guards and prisoners were extras from Polish television. Off the set, they snacked on pea soup and juicy sausages, delicacies unheard of for the inmates of the three Nazi death camps at Auschwitz, which is Oswiecim in Polish.

The real prisoners of Auschwitz had lived on a daily fare of one cup of ersatz coffee, a slice of stale bread and a thin gruel of potato peels, leaves and grass.

The film is based on Eisner's 1981 autobiography, "The Survivor." It tells the story of seven teen-agers seized by the Nazis in Warsaw's Jewish ghetto. Only two survive.

"When you see all the camps, and the box cars, it makes you wonder if you would have made it," said Sebastian Keaneas, 16, a New York actor who plays the young Jacek Eisner.

Warsaw was leveled during World War II. Most of the film was shot in the old section of Budapest, Hungary. The death camp scenes were shot on location at Birkenau, where 62 of 320 bleak brick prisoners' barracks remain standing.

The barracks resemble chicken coops, where prisoners slept six to a shelf.

During the Nazi occupation, Eisner had lived with his family at No. 40 Twarda St., which was later enclosed within the walled ghetto where the Nazis concentrated about 500,000 Jews from all over Poland.

"We knew that there were concentration camps, where people were forced to work, but we did not believe there were death camps," he said. "There were rumors about them starting in 1942, but no sane person could believe them."

By April 1943, a few thousand poorly armed Jews — Eisner among them — chose to resist the final liquidation of the ghetto. By the end of the three-week fight, 13,000 resistance fighters were slain and the remaining 56,000 were taken to death camps.

"We tried to escape through the sewers, but we were captured by storm troopers, loaded into cattle cars and taken to Birkenau," Eisner said.

Because he was 15 and in good health, Eisner was assigned to a detail which removed bodies from the gas chamber.

'Czechoslovakia... not cultural cemetery'

VIENNA (AP) — Exiled Czech writer Pavel Kohout says the Communist authorities in his homeland have failed to stamp out nonconformist literature and art despite what he calls a major campaign of arrests, coerced exile and other forms of harassment.

"Czechoslovakia is...not a cultural cemetery," he said in an interview. "The creative forces in that area are too great. It is my opinion that they (the regime) cannot dry up that immense cultural source, even if they try hard."

Kohout, whose book, "The Henchwoman," has been translated into 12 languages, lives here in a spacious downtown apartment and continues to write in Czech.

He and his wife, Jelena, were denied re-entry into Czechoslovakia in October 1979 after a one-year stay in the West.

Guards turned them back at the Austrian-Czechoslovak border and told them they had been stripped of their citizenship. Kohout, 55, now works for Vienna's state-supported Burgtheater as an author and lecturer.

Kohout said cultural officials of President Gustav Husak's government thought that "if they ban us, the next generation of writers will automatically belong to them. That, of course, was a crucial mistake.

"The moral power in that country continues to be those banned because they are the best," he asserted, referring to literary figures who are either in jail or whose works go unpublished in their homeland and are sometimes taken to the West at risk.

"This means," Kohout said, "that every young writer faces a dilemma to begin with. He must decide at once whether he takes the road of arrangement with the rotten regime in order to make money fast, or whether he chooses the only possible (nonconformist) way and is at once exposed to persecution."

Vlastimil Tresnak was among those intellectuals who decided to leave Czechoslovakia. Kohout described him as "a 32-year-old man who lacks little for a genius. He is a very good painter, writer, pop singer and guitarist."

Kohout, whose plays have been translated into many languages and are being performed throughout Europe and in Canada, appears to have come to peace with his fate and himself.

Fall festival to be Saturday

The 4th annual Asbury Fall Festival will be held at the Midland County Exhibit Building, East Highway 80, Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. A public preview of the arts and crafts show will be held Friday from 3 to 9 p.m.

This event is sponsored by Asbury United Methodist Church. Activities Saturday include games for children, a country store, a bakery and local talent performing in the Showmobile.

Barbecue lunch will be served from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Tickets for the barbecue, which includes pinto beans, potato salad, dessert, tea or coffee, are priced at $4 for adults and $2 for children under 2. Homemade ice cream will also be sold.

Artists and craftsmen from Midland and the surrounding area and parts of New Mexico will be displaying their talents and selling their wares Saturday. Included in the 100 booths will be needlework, metal sculptors, paintings and pottery.

In addition, there will be hand-carved furniture by Midlander Dan Gressett; ceramics by Martha Schwartz, Big Lake; china paints on stoneware by Pat Harris, Burleson; metal wind chimes by Del Gunn, San Antonio; belt buckles with turquoise and coral, Phil Hardin of Carlsbad, N.M.; kaleidoscopes by Delores Simmons, Las Cruces, N.M.; and soft-sculptured dolls with hand-painted faces by Midlander Clara Harkins.

Admission to the arts and crafts show is free for children and $1 for adults.

Producer hasn't given up on radio drama

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The actors gathered around three boom microphones, their scripts on music stands, ready to begin Father's homecoming scene.

Television? No. It's radio — a dramatization of "Little Women" for the public radio series, "The Spider's Web." The eight-part play will be broadcast on weekends from Thanksgiving to Christmas.

Most of the 60 half-hour shows are taped at WGBH in Boston, but "Little Women" was done here because Julie Harris, who plays Mother, is busy filming television's "Knots Landing."

"The argument is that there is no audience for radio drama," said series producer Everett Frost. "That's because it hasn't been nurtured.

"It's crazy. Radio is so cheap. I can make a 30 to 60-minute radio drama for $6,000-$8,000, and for $100 I can put it on the satellite that'll bring it down to 21 million people. It costs about $25,000, including marketing and promotion."

Thouvenel String Quartet to begin season concerts

The Thouvenel String Quartet will begin its 1983-84 Chamber Music Series Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium at Midland College.

Members of the Thouvenel are Eugene Purdue and Edmund Stein, violin; Sally Chisholm, viola; and Jeffrey Levenson, cello.

Season tickets are available by calling the Midland-Odessa Symphony, 563-0921, or they may be purchased at the door. Season ticket prices are $20 for adults and $10 for students and senior citizens. Single admission tickets are available at the door.

THE BETTER HALF

"If you wanted bright-eyed and bushy-tailed, you should have married a squirrel!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, Oct. 14, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: President Dwight D. Eisenhower, actress Lillian Gish and poet E.E. Cummings were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: actor Roger Moore, fashion designer Ralph Lauren and the Montreal Expos' premier hitter, Al Oliver. You make swift business and financial progress after the end of the year. Be prepared to make quick decisions. Favors will be granted. You are on the verge of a discovery that could turn your whole life around. A love relationship grows stronger. Mate gives you the strength you need to meet an enormous challenge. Romance is more exciting than ever. Do not let a child feel left out.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You realize how special mate is. Stop taking people for granted. Events at place of employment change the nature of your job, opening up new opportunities. Sharing brings domestic happiness.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Concentrate on your career goals and fulfilling a promise to loved one. Last-minute changes affect your ability to travel. Go along with a friend's leisure-time suggestions, but keep expenses down.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You miss a lot unless you open up in romance. Trust your intuition. A creative project can propel you up the career ladder if you play your cards right.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You become a stronger person as the result of something that happens today. Organize your time to get the best possible results when traveling. Get in touch with an old friend.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your social skills are excellent. Take a chance in business. An idea you have could be a gold mine if you gain the support of someone influential. Get to know romantic partner better.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A last-minute cancellation could be a lucky break. Loved one wants to be included in your evening plans. Listen to a child. Make allowances for a co-worker under intense pressure.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A wider range of interests will make your personal life happier. Consider doing some freelance work to supplement your income. Mate will understand and take on more domestic duties.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Excessive modesty is not in your best interest. You are good at what you do and should not be embarrassed to say so. Stop acting like a martyr at work or school.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Volunteering information sometimes works against you. Ask to be paid for your services and advice. It is not fair to your family to let business friends pick your brains for free.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Heed mate's advice. He/she has valuable insights into a business matter. Do not be taken in by aides who say whatever you want to hear. So-called friends are keeping secrets.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A newcomer could complicate your private life. Keep your guard up! Someone superficial is getting on your nerves. You meet real love while dating another. New pursuits enjoy favorable influences.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The work week ends on a happy note. Know exactly who you are dealing with in business. A child opens your eyes to what could have been a disastrous relationship.

Writer between two worlds

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — His name was Hoi. But everyone called him Pie-Biter because he loved pies and they gave him strength to work on the railroad.

Hoi is an unknown folk hero — a Chinese-American Paul Bunyan or John Henry. But writer Ruthanne Lum McCunn hopes he'll be more widely known through her latest book, "Pie-Biter."

"I think it's a very American story, a very Western story," says Ms. McCunn, who is Chinese-American. "At last, Chinese-American children will have someone they can identify with."

Still, she adds, "Pie-Biter," published by Design Enterprises, is really written for all children. "I hope that they get the idea that America is more than just one group of people, that it is many groups of people, and that they get some idea of American history too."

Hoi came to the United States in the 19th century to work on the railroads. His prodigious appetite and love for American pies earned him the nickname, Pie-Biter. The pies gave him strength to work so hard that he eventually owned his own supply train and accumulated enough money to return to China to raise a family.

Ms. McCunn, who was born in Hong Kong, prizes her dual heritage.

"People usually go through an identity crisis — if they go through one at all — in their late teens or early 20s," said Ms. McCunn, 37, during an interview in her sunny Victorian house filled with Chinese art.

"But really, I think I went through it as a child, because by the time I got out of high school and came to America, I knew exactly who I was and what I wanted to be."

A long-simmering writing talent has produced two other books besides "Pie-Biter." In 1979, she published "An Illustrated History of the Chinese in America." It stemmed from research she had done for her students at a San Francisco elementary school about Chinese-American history.

She followed that in 1981 with "Thousand Pieces of Gold," a biographical novel of Polly Bemis, a woman born in China who came to the United States as a slave and ended up a beloved, pioneer woman of the West.

Growing up in Hong Kong as a blond, freckle-faced youngster, Ms. McCunn was nicknamed "golden-haired kitten" by her Chinese playmates.

After her American merchant marine father sent her to a British school to learn English, she became a "foreign devil" to her friends. But her colonial-bred British schoolmates wouldn't accept her, either.

"There was no place where I felt that I really belonged," Ms. McCunn said.

2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♠.

In duplicate, your match-point reward is directly related to how many tricks you manage to take — over-tricks can be vital. At rubber bridge, your first consideration is the safety of your contract.

The auction was straightforward. South's bidding showed a balanced hand of 19-20 points, and North had 7 points with useful intermediates. Three no trump was a natural contract.

West's lead was less than inspired. South saw that he could pick up three additional spade tricks if West had the king and East the jack, so he called for the eight from dummy. East won the king and lost no time in shifting to a heart. When the defenders gained the lead with the ace of clubs, they cashed four heart tricks for a two-trick set.

Declarer blew the hand at trick one. Once the ace of clubs was knocked out, declarer had nine tricks — one spade, one heart, three diamonds and four clubs. Therefore, there was no point in risking defeat by playing for overtricks via the spade suit.

Correct technique at money bridge is to rise with the ace of spades at trick one and start on clubs immediately. The defenders can do no better than win and shift to hearts, but declarer grabs the ace and runs his nine tricks.

Winning rubber bridge players follow the advice offered by a tentmaker namesake of one of the authors — Omar Khayyam. "Take the cash, and let the credit go!"

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. South Korea buries bomb victims

AP Laserphoto

A Korean military honor guard carries one of the 16 caskets during mass funeral rites.

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — More than a million mourners packed a plaza today at a mass funeral for 17 South Koreans, including four Cabinet ministers, killed in a terrorist bombing in Burma.

Prime Minister Kim Sang-hyup eulogized the victims as "proud pillars of the country" and, laying the blame on North Korea, said the neighboring communist nation must not go unpunished.

"This cursed tragedy cannot be the real intention of heaven," the prime minister said. "Incredibly, this heinous atrocity...was perpetrated by the North Korea communists, who are of the same blood as we."

The vast crowd of mourners spilled into Yoido Plaza on an island in the Han River in southern Seoul for the services before 16 of the bodies were buried at the National Cemetery overlooking the capital.

Dignitaries from about 40 countries attended the funeral. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger led the U.S. delegation.

Grey skies opened occasionally with rain.

The toll from Sunday's bombing massacre in Rangoon rose by one with the death earlier today of Deputy Finance Minister Lee Ki-uk in a U.S. military hospital at Clark Air Base in the Philippines. His body, accompanied by his widow, was flown to Seoul today for a later burial beside his fallen colleagues.

Lee was one of two wounded South Koreans being treated Clark. Gen. Lee Ki-baik, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, was in stable condition today, a U.S. Embassy spokesman in Manila said.

Four of those killed in the explosion in the explosion were ministers in President Chun Doo-hwan's Cabinet. The other South Koreans included key advisers and aides. Four Burmese also were killed and more than 40 people were wounded.

The bombing occurred at a ceremonial site where Chun was to have placed a wreath on the first day of an 18-day Asian tour.

North Koreans implicated

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — A South Korean expert investigating the blast that killed 21 people, including senior South Korean officials, claimed today that materials seized from three suspects were "standard articles" used by North Koreans.

The investigator, who asked not to be identified, also said the bomb used in the explosion last Sunday was the same type as one which tore through the American Cultural Center in the South Korean city of Taegu last month. Police have been pursuing a possible North Korean link in that bombing.

Polish army still holds power

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Three months after Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski lifted martial law, his army remains the backbone of Communist Pary authority in Poland. The generals are not often seen, but they hold powerful posts.

"We get the impression that Jaruzelski has strengthened the weak links (in the Communist Party apparatus) with army men, and works through them to run the country," said one Western diplomat who requested anonymity.

Although some civilian officials have hinted they would prefer to see the army back in the barracks, generals have held critical posts in central and local government and party organizations since the martial law declaration of Dec. 13, 1981.

Thatcher fighting scandals

BLACKPOOL, England (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party, already troubled by a sex scandal and a disputed economic policy, faced further embarrassment today by right-wingers proposing to ban non-white immigration.

As party managers sought to defeat the anti-immigrant move at the annual party conference, Trade and Industry Secretary Cecil Parkinson was due to make his first speech since acknowledging his former secretary is expecting his child.

Mrs. Thatcher is determined to keep Parkinson in the Cabinet despite demands for his resignation by some outraged legislators, and has asked her followers to stick by him. He masterminded her re-election victory last June.

Authors say count inflated

LONDON (AP) — Thirty-two Argentine warplanes that British gunners and missile crews claimed to have shot down in last year's Falklands war were never destroyed, two authors claim in a new book published today.

Jeffrey Ethell and Alfred Price write in "Air War, South Atlantic" that naval and army fire only downed 20 Argentine planes, not the 52 the British government listed as "confirmed kills" after the war.

Altogether, the British said they destroyed 102 Argentine planes in the air and on the ground in the 74-day conflict.

Party strongholds burned

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Hooded Moslem militiamen stormed and burned Communist Party strongholds in Tripoli today on the third day of street battles that have killed 60 people in Lebanon's second largest city, police said.

The fighting raged as representatives of President Amin Gemayel and the nation's top Moslem and Christian leaders met behind closed doors in Beirut to draw up an agenda for a "national reconciliation conference" next Thursday.

Guitar maker

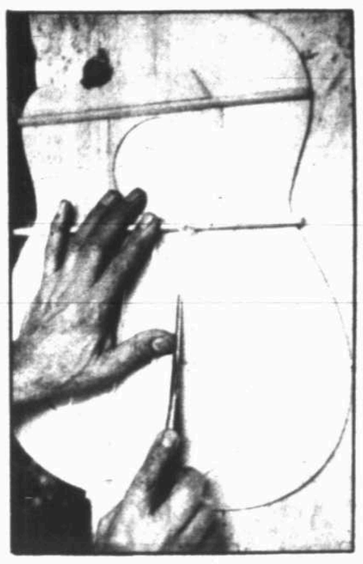

Porfirio Delgado could hardly refuse when a rowdy friend in trouble with the law in Durango, Mexico, offered to sell him his battered guitar to make bail back in the late 1920s.

"My friend, who liked to drink, got into a fight and landed in jail," said Delgado, 70. "He sold me his guitar for 35 pesos and taught me a few chords as part of the deal."

The same guitar was later broken in a fight between two men over a woman in his home town of Torreon, Coahuila, Mexico. Since there was no guitar repairman in town, Porfirio fixed it himself — and found his calling in life.

He went on to become one of the world's most respected makers of flamenco and classical guitars, with clients ranging from Andres Segovia and Jose Feliciano to Arlo Guthrie and Hoyt Axton.

Today, Porfirio spends most days working in the Candelas Guitar shop in East Los Angeles, a shop he founded with his brother, Candelario, in 1949.

Porfrio Delgado is one of the most respected makers of flamenco and classical guitars. The 70-year-old craftsman is trimming the braces on top of an intrument.

CANDELARIO Delgado, 72, is retired and lives in Juarez, Mexico. Porfirio, his 38-year-old son, also named Candelario, and a helper run the small company which spurns mass production and potentially higher profits to preserve quality. They make only about 12 guitars a year and sell them for between $1,000 and $2,500.

They have been tempted by visions of a larger market, said the younger Candelario, who now owns the store. For example, seven years ago, Candelario turned down an offer from exporters C.A. Gotz, of Germany, to distribute Candelas Guitars around the world, provided the family would expand to mass-produce the instruments.

"When you start mass producing you lose the personal touch," Candelario said. "You start worrying more about how a guitar looks than how it sounds...Instead of fine instruments, you wind up with furniture."

Besides, Candelario said, "When you're in this kind of work you stay with it because you love it, not because it will make you rich."

Those are the words of a man who says he was "baptized in a guitar shop in Juarez, Mexico, made my first guitar when I was 15 and have been making them for 23 years."

Most of Candelas Guitars' business comes from doing repairs.

"WHEN I have time I'll finish this one," Porfirio said, holding up one of his handcrafted flamenco guitars of cypress, spruce, mahogany and ebony that will sell for about $1,000.

Inside the instrument — which he said was about the "1,000th good guitar" he has built in the last 50 years — the craftsman had already placed his personal label which simply read: Porfirio Delgado, fabricante de guitarras (guitar maker).

"I always do my best," Porfirio said at the store where the walls are covered with old and new photographs of master guitar players as well as religious artifacts reflecting a strong Catholic background.

"But the people are the best judge," he said.

A framed letter of appreciation from Segovia, who has purchased several Candelas guitars over the years, is a cherished Delgado family possession.

"Several years ago I predicted that Delgado would make surprising strides forward in his work in view of his extreme care, good selection of materials and overall enthusiasm," wrote Segovia in 1960. "Today it gives me great pleasure to confirm the accuracy of my prediction."

PORFIRIO mastered his trade while working at a carpentery shop with his brother in Juarez in the late 1930s, where they were hounded by American tourists eager to buy quality stringed instruments.

"I used to tell them, 'I'll make you a guitar for 50 pesos,'" he recalled. "They'd say, 'OK, here's 60 pesos, make me a real good one.'"

Through word of mouth, the brothers' reputation as guitar makers grew along both sides of the El Paso-Juarez border and by 1945 they were producing "one fancy guitar a month," Porfirio said.

Four years later they settled in East Los Angeles and established Candelario's Guitars — a name which Anglo customers could not pronounce without difficulty.

"Everybody kept saying 'Candelas,'" Porfirio said, "so we changed the name."

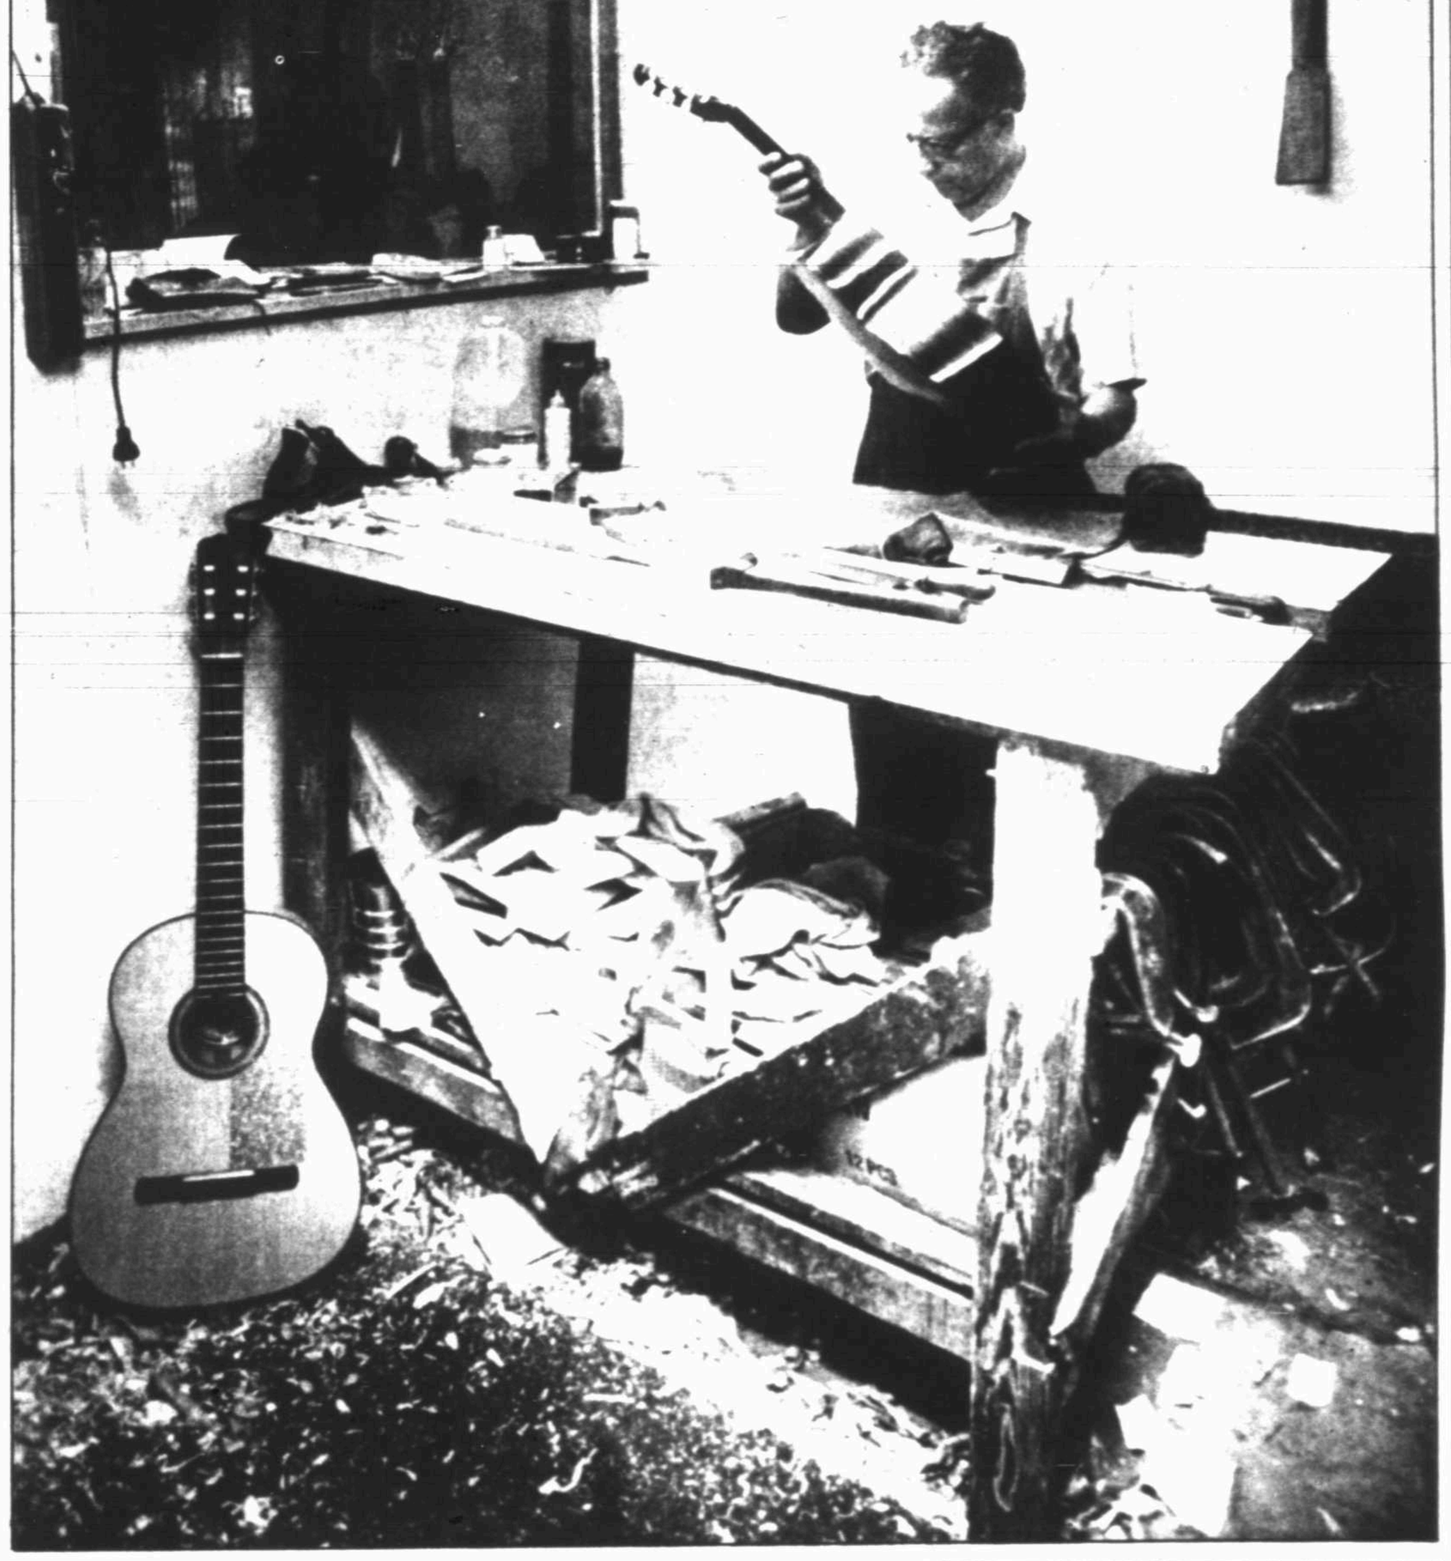

Among their first customers were Mexican entertainers Mario Moreno ("Cantinflas") and Miguel Aceves Megia.

IN 1966, Porfirio's brother's quest for better sound and increased durability led him to depart from traditional techniques to painstakingly carve a guitar out of a single block of Honduras mahogany.

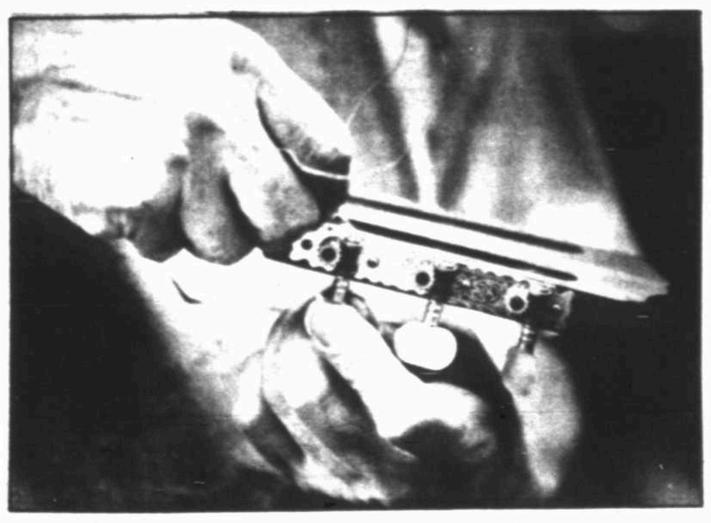

"We called it 'Numero Uno,'" Porfirio said, "because it was the first guitar we knew of that had been carved from one piece of wood."

Numero Uno is now a family heirloom and not for sale. But Porfirio and his son went on to build 28 one-piece guitars which sold for from $1,500 to $2,000 each.

With large blocks of good wood becoming increasingly expensive and difficult to find, Candelario said it is unlikely that many more of the one-piece guitars will be produced.

Delgado, top photo, works in his shop in the Boyle Heights area of Los Angeles where he has made guitars since 1949. He and his son only make 12 guitars a year, each which sells for between $1,000 and $2,500. Delgado guitars are owned by among others, Andres Segovia, Jose Feliciano, Arlo Gutherie and Hoyt Axton. Delgado squints, left, while checking the alignment of the neck of a new guitar. Above he is adjusting the tuning pegs on a new instrument.
