Council Thinks Water Problem Is Solved

Pipe For Line To New Wells Arrive Tuesday; Will Be Laid Immediately

If the new wells out on the City's property four miles north of town do not again prove to be a disappointment, it seems that Tahoka will have an abundant water supply from here on out, or at least until the town grows much larger than it is now.

Mayor Deen Nowlin says that three new wells out there will produce a million gallons a day. Four wells were drilled but one of them was a non-producer. Two of them will produce 300 gallons each per minute and the third one more than 100 gallons per minute. That would be more than a million gallons in 24 hours.

All of these wells were put on the pump steadily for several days and the flow never decreased an iota during the entire time. It will be remembered that the new wells brought in two or three years ago a mile north of the city limits also promised at first to be good producers, and it looked then as if the city's water problem had been solved. But it was not long until these wells began to fail, and the supply now is insufficient. Mr. Nowlin and other city officials feel very confident, however, that the new supply will not fail.

As stated last week, piping to connect up these wells with the City's water system has been ordered, and one car load of the pipe arrived Tuesday. Mr. Nowlin thinks that the pipe can be laid and the new water supply turned on by about the middle of the month.

Tom Garrard Is McCraw Manager

Several weeks ago Hon. Tom Garrard of Tahoka was asked to act as campaign manager for Bill McCraw, candidate for governor, in this section of the state. He accepted the task and has many counties under his supervision.

As a consequence Mr. Garrard can rarely be found in Tahoka these days. He is either away looking after the interests of his clients in the courts somewhere, attending a meeting of the State Board of Education in Austin, of which he is a member, or whooping 'em up for Bill McCraw in some portion of West Texas. Recently he made a speech for Bill in Sweetwater, and he has been organizing the McCraw forces in many places.

Maddox Announces For County Judge

Responding to the solicitations of friends, Judge B. P. Maddox authorized us Monday to state that he has decided to become a candidate for county judge. Some of his friends circulated a petition asking him to run and requesting the Democratic Executive Committee to have his name printed on the official ballot as a candidate for this office. The application has already been filed with the committee and Judge Maddox has filed his acceptance. His name will therefore appear on the official ballot in the July primary.

Judge Maddox has been a resident of Lynn county since 1916, or about 21 years, and he has held some position of honor or trust during most of the time.

Born and reared in Palo Pinto county, he served three terms in the legislature as a Representative from that district during his early manhood. This was during the administrations respectively of Tom Campbell, O. B. Colquitt, and James E. Ferguson as governor.

Answering the call of the West, he migrated to Lynn county and hung out his law shingle in Tahoka in 1916. He had been here only a short time when the commissioners court asked him to take the position of county attorney. He did so

Decoration Day Observed Here

Decoration Day was only slightly observed here Monday. The Bank and the post office closed, and the bankers and Uncle Sam's boys took a holiday. Everybody at our house worked but Father.

It may be that some graves were decorated also, in observance of the day, but on the whole little attention was paid to it.

Spectacular Dust Storm Sweeps Across The South Plains Monday Evening

The most spectacular dust storm that has swept across these south plains within the memory of the oldest inhabitants arose unheralded and unannounced above the northwestern horizon at about two o'clock Monday afternoon and came sweeping majestically across the heavens and the earth shortly thereafter, bringing an indescribable feeling of awe and wonderment to every soul.

It would be utterly impossible to describe this marvelous display of the forces of nature. It might be sufficient to say that "God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform; He plants his footsteps on the sea And rides upon the storm."

Surely there has seldom ever been a more striking physical manifestation of the stately treadings of the Almighty in the forces of nature than was displayed in this storm. Seldom if ever has there been a grander exhibition in the heavens of God's handiwork.

A number of pictures of the approaching storm were taken by some of our citizens, but no picture can portray the majesty and beauty and glory of the display. No painter's brush could put on canvas the marvelous blending of colors produced by the gleaming rays of sunlight penetrating the boiling clouds of dust and sand. Red and gray and purple and lavender and black and other colors that have no name, blending and ever changing in the working, moving advancing mass of waterless cloud, created a panorama in the heavens that only the matchless mind and hand of God can depict.

Not the most awe-inspiring but possibly the most beautiful and lovely part of the picture came in the mellow, subdued glow that was infused into the clouds and gently lighted up the heavens after the advance guard of the storm had passed. The dome of the heavens was like some great gigantic lamp shade that softens and subdues the bright electric light within it. The glory of a marvelous sunset permeated the whole firmament, which was indescribably restful in striking contrast with the turbulent winds that lashed and howled around every corner and swept on across the plains.

This wonderful moving picture staged and screened by the hand of the Almighty was not as "long" continued as most dust storms, however. In an hour it had spent its force and the heavens began to clear. High winds continued through the afternoon and night but they were just high winds. What damage, if any, was done to crops that had just come up had not been reported to us when the above was written.

Mrs. W. T. Jackson Died Suddenly

Mrs. Callie Jackson, wife of W. T. Jackson of Draw, died of heart trouble in the home of a son in Lubbock about 8 or 9 o'clock Sunday night.

Mrs. Jackson had recently had an operation in a hospital in Lubbock and was apparently recovering satisfactorily. She was therefore released from the hospital and taken to the home of her son, and while she was there heart trouble developed.

The remains were brought to the Harris Funeral Home here in a Harris ambulance and prepared for burial.

Funeral services were conducted in the Methodist Church at Draw Monday afternoon and burial in the Draw cemetery followed.

Mrs. Jackson was born in Itasca, Hill county, on August 29, 1891, and was therefore almost 47 years old. She left a husband and several children surviving.

Summer School Opens June 13

Summer school classes will begin at the High School Monday, June 13, at 8:30 a. m., according to Miss Jewell Simkins, who will offer courses in several high school and seventh grade subjects, especially for students who failed in work last year, or those who wish to make up other work.

Courses will be offered in English, Spanish, and any other subjects for which there is a demand. Tuition for the six weeks term will be $10.00 per high school subject, and $15.00 for the combination of seventh grade subjects. The work is open to anyone desiring this aid, Miss Simkins says.

W. T. Hines, son of Mr. and Mrs. Pat Hines, who has been sick the past two months, is now said to be showing decided improvement. It is hoped that he may be up again within a few days.

Bill McCraw Will Be In Lubbock

Bill McCraw, candidate for governor, is to speak in Lubbock on Saturday night, June 18, at 8 o'clock, according to his West Texas campaign manager, Tom Garrard. The place will be announced later.

Mr. McCraw is an excellent campaigner and an effective "stump" speaker, and he will doubtless have a great crowd out to hear him.

Rainfall Light During Month

Tahoka's rainfall thus far this year has been somewhat below the average, though the rainfall here is usually scant through the winter and spring. By far the larger part of it comes in the summer and fall.

The precipitation here since the first of January has been as follows, according to the government rain gauge kept by the News.

January, .83 of an inch; February, 1.91; March, .24; April, .7; May, 2.18; a total of 5.94 inches. Rainfall in December amounted to .47, making a total during the past six months of 6.41.

Rainfall in portions of the county east and southeast of Tahoka during the month of May was much heavier than it has been here. In the west portion of the county it has been much lighter. In most sections of the county there had been sufficient moisture to bring up crops and start them to growing nicely, but in the Lakeview, Petty, and West Point communities it has been very deficient.

Some crops were materially damaged by Monday's sandstorm, but serious damage does not appear to have been general.

Statement Issued By Fred Bucy

To the Voters of Lynn County, Texas: I sincerely regret not being able to complete my campaign for Tax Assessor and Collector but will be back in my territory within a few weeks and try to see everyone possible. Will appreciate the people giving me due consideration even though I failed to see them in person but I had about 60% of the county covered before my attack and would certainly have had time to have completed the rest of it in full and beg the voters of Lynn County not to hold it against me for not having completed a house to house campaign.

Very truly yours,
FRED BUCY.

ERROR CORRECTED

Two weeks ago we published the statement that the sum of $230 was raised for the benefit of L. F. Morton and family whose household effects were destroyed in the fire that consumed the little Caveness rent house in which they resided.

This was an error. The amount raised and paid to them was only $130. The Morton's are deeply appreciative of the assistance rendered them just the same.

A. R. McGonagill Dies Following Long Illness

Pioneer Citizen of Plains And Ex-Trail Driver Burial Saturday

Following a long period of ill health, A. R. McGonagill, pioneer citizen of Lynn county, died in a Lubbock hospital at 8:45 last Friday night, May 27, of uremic poisoning. For many months he had been suffering from high blood pressure and other ailments. It became apparent several days before he died that death some time soon was inevitable.

Funeral services were held in the Baptist Church here at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, conducted by the pastor, Rev. George A. Dale, amid a great profusion of flowers, attesting the esteem in which he was held, and the body was buried in the Tahoka Cemetery under the direction of the Harris Funeral Home. A great concourse of relatives and friends from Lynn and other counties attended the funeral services and followed the remains to the grave.

Mr. McGonagill was a native Texan and a pioneer citizen of Lynn county. Born in Lavaca county on November 11, 1864, he was 73 years of age. When a lad 14 or 15 years old he "went up the trail" with a herd of cattle from Lavaca county to Dodge City, Kansas. Enamored of cowboy life, he did not return to Lavaca county. The next several years of his life were spent as a cowboy in Kansas and in the Panhandle and Plains of Texas.

In the meantime, his father's family removed from Lavaca county to Santa Anna in Coleman county, and at the age of 22 or 23, Alfred for that was his first name, left the broad open spaces of Northwest Texas and Kansas and re-joined his father's family at Santa Anna.

There he met and wooed Miss Lenora C. Harrison and on June 9, 1889 they were married. For five years they resided at Santa Anna and then removed to Henrietta. For the next five or six years they made their residence there and then moved upon a small Knox county ranch north of Benjamin, which he had bought. After residence there for a similar period of

Jim Farley's Aide On Vacation

Happy Smith, the man who runs things over at the post office, and W. A. Reddell, one of the rural mail carriers, left here Saturday or Sunday on a week's vacation. Their first stop seems to have been at Chico, Reddell's former home, down in Wise county, where they said they were going to spend the week fishing.

They must have been well supplied with snake medicine, for something seems to have made Hap go plumb gang at the post office received the haywire. On Thursday morning the following telegram from him: "Chico, Texas, June 2—wife arrived (stop) hogs don't have fins under water. Happy."

Evidently it was a good thing his wife had arrived. She and Mrs. Reddell and their children went down Wednesday to see after their men folks, and just imagine what they fond!

Amarillo Firm Sends In Check

Having read of the devastation wrought a few weeks ago by the Tornado that swept through the southwestern portion of Lynn county, officials of the Amarillo Hardware Company voluntarily sent to the Gignat Hardware Company of this city a few days ago a check for $25.00 for the benefit of the storm sufferers.

Citizens of this and adjoining counties raised several thousand dollars for the same purpose, which sum was turned in to the National Red Cross, and that organization in turn amply cared for all the loss sustained in the storm.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK—President Getulio Vargas of Brazil was a far-western frontiersman in his youth, still wearing "bombachos," or gaucho trousers, for informal dress, and quite in character pumping a six-gun at the palace, and putting down a Graustarkian revolt.

A swarthy, stocky little man, quick on the draw, he has never been gun-shy, and impromptu shooting has been an occasional obligation in his rise to supreme power.

When he established his totalitarian state on November 10 of last year, there were those who said he was dealing in the dark of the moon with the green shirts—that here was where Germany and fascism got a toe-hold on this continent.

The green shirt revolt and its vigorous suppression by Sr. Vargas seems to be an answer to that, even if he had not previously made it clear that his authoritarian state was not of the European model.

Brazil has a complex racial makeup which provides no proscribed group or racial myth, the first requirement in fascist technique, and furthermore, when it comes to strong-arm government, all South American countries have plenty of home talent and indigenous skill.

Sr. Vargas recruited his political following as a liberal. He denounced monopoly and promised the overthrow of the "coffee plantation kings."

He seized power in 1930 by the overthrow of President Washington Luiz, with the aid of his lifetime friend, old General Aurelio Monteiro. Luiz had won the election against him, but Vargas raised a cry of fraud.

From the first he ruled partially by decree, now entirely, since the adoption of the constitution of November 10. His reorganization of the country followed established dictatorial practice in the formation of labor "syndicates," the fixing of maximum and minimum wages, and the denial of all rights of free press and free assembly.

He is a famous orator, speaking a fluent and flowery Portuguese, using the radio a great deal in national appeals. He is credited with just about the shrewdest political intelligence in South America. In his prairie town, he attended a private college, later enrolled in a military college, but was diverted to the law.

His rise through minor offices to the national congress parallels the standard career chart of our congressional record biographies—district attorney, state legislature and all the rest of it.

THE make-believe war in which the eastern seaboard was defended against "black" expeditionary forces from overseas was the first large-scale work-out of our "flying fortresses" under a unified command. Major General Frank M. Andrews, running the show, is one of the few flying generals.

He gathered up the strands of the unified service when the GHQ air force, which he commands, moved into the huge air base at Langley field, March 1, 1935.

Called the "handsomest man in the service," he is quietly effective and the last man in the world to be called a swivel-chair officer. He warns the country against a shortage of fliers and urges civilian training. He was not an A. E. F. flier.

In 1934 he made the unusual jump from lieutenant-colonel to brigadier-general and was made a major-general in 1935. He was graduated from West Point in 1906 and was with the cavalry on the Mexican border, before he found his wings.

The Mayflower Party

The Mayflower brought 41 men and their families—102 in all. The Speedwell, which set out with the Mayflower, proved unseaworthy and turned back. The Mayflower was followed the next year by the Fortune of 55 tons, which arrived at Plymouth in November, 1621, with some 30 additional emigrants. In 1623 the Ann and the James of 140 and 44 tons, respectively, arrived with 60 more members for the colony. The passengers in these vessels completed the list of those who are usually called first-comers.

WAGE BILL IS PASSED

Southern Democrats Lose Hot Fight in the House

Edward W. Pickard SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

House Passes Wage-Hour Bill

REPRESENTATIVE MARY NORTON'S wage-hour bill finally got through the house by a vote of 314 to 97, despite fierce opposition of the southern Democrats. It was sent on to the senate, which has passed a widely differing measure and where opposition blocs were reported forming to carry on a filibuster.

The Southerners fought for differentials favoring their industries, and were aided by a few "vote catcher" that would "throw millions out of work."

The measure establishes rigid wage-hour standards for certain classes of workers in all industries operating in interstate commerce, regardless of prevailing sectional scales. It fixes an initial wage of 25 cents an hour which steps up to 40 cents an hour in three years, and a 44-hour week graduating to 40 in two years.

A coalition of farm state representatives and the southern Democrats put over a drastic amendment offered by Mrs. Norton, exempting thousands of employees engaged in the processing of agricultural commodities from the provisions of the measure.

Other amendments exempt retail establishments in interstate commerce; the entire fishing industry; and employees of rural weekly and semi-weekly newspapers with less than 3,000 circulation.

The shipment in commerce of goods produced with the aid of child labor is prohibited, but child actors are exempt from this provision.

When the fight ended, Mrs. Norton, chairman of the labor committee, was cheered and hugged by the victorious administration Democrats.

Morgan Charges Deceit

DR. ARTHUR E. MORGAN, ousted chief of TVA, was the first witness heard by the congressional committee inquiring into the affairs of the authority. In straightforward fashion he told his side of the story, charging his fellow directors with dishonest management. He explained he did not mean David Lilienthal and Harcourt Morgan took bribes or stole money, but that they deceived the President, congress, and the public; that they covered up important facts tending to throw doubt on the advisability of the government's huge social experiment; reported a false electric power yardstick, and were subservient to political and other special interests.

He accused Lilienthal publicly of deceit in leading the public to believe that the financial accounts of the communities buying power from the TVA include all the costs of the service they render to the public.

Dr. Morgan discussed in great detail the celebrated "Berry marble case," involving Sen. George L. Berry, Tennessee Democrat.

Boss Hines Arrested

Lewis Backs Barkley

JOHN L. LEWIS, C. I. O. chieftain, has asked labor to support Sen. Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky in the primaries August 6. In his capacity as chairman of Labor's Non-partisan league, Lewis said of Barkley: "He is recognized as one of the

Ickes Weds in Dublin

HAROLD L. ICKES, secretary of the interior and PWA administrator, put one over on all but his closest friends. He sailed secretly from New York to Ireland and in Dublin was quietly married to Miss Jane Dahlman of Milwaukee, twenty-five years old and a clerk in his department. Mr. Ickes, who is sixty-four years old, lost his first wife nearly three years ago in an automobile accident in the Southwest.

The new Mrs. Ickes, red haired and pretty, is a niece of John Cudahy, American minister to Ireland, and sister of Mrs. Winnetka Ickes of Winnetka, Ill., widow of Mr. Ickes' step-son.

Minister Cudahy did not attend the wedding, but was represented by S. J. Shattuck, an attaché of the legation. The couple left Dublin by automobile for a brief honeymoon trip. Mr. Ickes cabled friends in Washington that he would return there in a week and would be at home on his estate near Olney, Md.

Plane Crash Kills Ten

TEN persons died when a twin-motored plane of the United Air Lines, bound from New York for Chicago, crashed and burned south of Cleveland, Ohio. The victims included seven passengers, two pilots and the stewardess.

Officials of the air line said their information indicated the pilot was forced to make a landing because of engine trouble and that the ship did not catch fire until it struck.

Japan Demands Apology

NOW it is the turn of Japan to demand an apology—from Great Britain. The Tokyo government felt it was gravely insulted by a statement, attributed to R. A. Butler, parliamentary secretary of the British foreign office, that Japanese marines had shot many Chinese war prisoners and civilians when they captured the port of Amoy. Tokyo demanded that the British government "speedily give satisfaction" for this slur on Japan's honor.

The Japanese announced in Shanghai that they had at last gained complete control of the 800-mile Tientsin-Pukow railway, and expected to resume operations linking Peking and Shanghai early in July.

Two Taxation Decisions

IN TWO far-reaching decisions the United States Supreme court further narrowed the field of reciprocal intergovernmental tax immunity. The rulings continued the trend in the direction of President Roosevelt's theory that the federal and state governments can tax the salaries of each other's employees and the income of each other's securities without a constitutional amendment.

In a decision delivered by Justice Stone, the court upheld levying of federal income taxes on employees of the Port of New York authority. In a decision delivered by Justice Roberts, the court upheld federal admission taxes on tickets to football games conducted by the university system of Georgia.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Describes the Place of Fats in the Diet

Nationally Known Food Authority Compares the Different Cooking Fats and Shortenings

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th St., New York City.

THERE are, perhaps, more false notions concerning fats than any other class of foods.

Some homemakers, considering them as "fattening" only, try to eliminate them entirely from the diet. Others have the impression that foods containing fat are difficult to digest, and for this reason deprive their families of many delicious and healthful foods. Both points of view arise from ignorance of dietary facts.

Fats Are Necessary to Health

Fats have a number of important functions to perform. They are a concentrated fuel food, having more than twice the energy value of an equal weight of protein or carbohydrate.

One-half ounce of fat, that is one tablespoon, yields 100 calories, and were he able to eat it, a man could obtain an entire day's fuel from three-fourths of a pound of fat. It is interesting to note that it would require nearly eight pounds of cooked rice to give the same number of calories.

In Oriental countries, where large populations live in great poverty, fat is usually scarce and it is necessary to consume huge quantities of food in order to meet the daily fuel requirements. As a result, most of the people develop distended abdomens.

Children Must Have Fat

Because fat is such a compact food, nutritionists agree that for growing boys and girls, and men engaged in strenuous physical exercise, fat is almost essential, if they are to get enough total calories.

There is also experimental evidence that at least a small amount of one or more of the unsaturated fatty acids must be supplied by the food if normal nutrition is to be maintained. And two competent investigators found, experimentally, that the presence of fat in the diet tends to conserve vitamin B in the body.

Some fats, especially those from animal sources, are rich in vitamins A and D, and fats made from vegetable oils may contain vitamin E.

Fat and Hunger

Perhaps the greatest service performed by fat is its ability to give "staying power" to the diet—to satisfy hunger. In this respect, it directly affects the disposition and may influence the ability to enjoy life.

The shortage of fats in European countries during the World war graphically demonstrated how a deficiency of this class of foods can destroy the morale of entire nations.

With supplies cut off or very greatly curtailed, the warring countries found it necessary to ration fats closely. As a result, their people were always hungry and dissatisfied, even when their actual needs were satisfied. In this connection, it is interesting to note that a slice of bread and butter or margarine will delay the onset of hunger longer than a slice of bread and jam, even though the number of calories may be the same.

Different Fats Compared

As sources of energy, the different food fats are very similar. Thus, the homemaker's choice may be determined by preference.

Do You Want to Learn How to Plan a Laxative Diet?

READERS of this newspaper are invited to write to C. Houston Goudiss, 6 East 39th Street, New York City, for a free copy of his bulletin, "Helpful Hints on Planning a Laxative Diet."

convenience, economy, and the use to which the product is to be put.

The various forms of edible fats and oils are derived from both animal and vegetable sources. They include butter, margarine, lard, compounds, which are a mixture of animal fats and vegetable oils, hydrogenated fats, and the liquid vegetable oils.

Butter and margarine are used chiefly as a spread, and it is interesting to note that the annual per capita consumption of margarine is steadily increasing, as homemakers have discovered that the use of this less expensive product releases more money for milk, fruits and vegetables. Margarine is interchangeable with butter for dressing vegetables and in doughs containing spices, fruits and chocolate. Its shortening power and keeping qualities are similar to those of butter.

Lards, compounds and other shortening fats are useful not only as a means of increasing palatability and food value, but to add flakiness to baked foods and to produce a crisp coating which seals in the minerals and vitamins of fried foods.

Lard is used chiefly as a shortening for pastry, and a good grade will be found to be white and free from objectionable odors. The highest grade, called leaf lard, is produced from the leaves of fat in the sides of the hog.

When made by a reputable manufacturer, the compounds prepared especially for cake making, for shortening pastry and for deep-frying, are wholesome, highly nutritious and give most satisfactory results. They are a most economical form of shortening.

Digestibility of Fats

Because of their ability to retard digestion somewhat and thus give satiety value to a meal, the impression has grown up that fats are "difficult" to digest. This results from confusing the length of time required for digestion and the completeness with which a food is digested.

When "digestibility" is regarded in the popular sense of the ease, comfort and speed with which the digestive organs carry on their work, it is conceded that fats in general retard the secretion of the gastric juice and thus cause food to remain longer in the stomach.

On the other hand, most fats have such a high coefficient of digestibility, that under normal conditions only about one-twentieth of the fat eaten escapes digestion. Experiments indicate, for example, that the coefficient of digestibility of oleomargarine is 97.55 per cent.

It is sometimes erroneously stated that pastry is indigestible. This statement is without foundation, provided the pastry is made from a high grade shortening and is properly baked. Similarly, fried foods come in for a great deal of criticism that should not be charged to the use of fat, but to incorrect methods of cooking. If food is properly cooked in fat that has a high smoking point, there will be no opportunity for decomposition products to develop.

How Much Fat?

Nutritionists have ample evidence that health is best served when 30 to 35 per cent of the total energy value foods is provided in the form of fat. This will include the fat of meat and the fat used in cooking the many delicious fried and baked foods which make eating a pleasure.

Questions Answered

Mrs. F. K. C.—Answering your query as to whether pineapple juice possesses special properties as a laxative—all fruit juices contain fruit acids, which tend to have a stimulating effect upon the entire digestive tract. However, the pulp of any fruit is far more effective than the juice in providing normal elimination.

Mrs. N. H. R.—As to whether a tendency to overweight is inherited, the body build is inherited. That is, some individuals tend to be short and stocky; others are tall and slender. However, there is no reason why the stocky individual should allow himself to become obese. Frequently, a condition that is blamed on inheritance can be traced to faulty habits of diet, exercise and sleep, passed from one generation to another.

"He can't be all bad," Ruth broke in, her eyes shining like stars. "I knew it all the time, only all the evidence was against him. I don't believe he is the man who shot at Father at Tail Holt. He may be bad. That is, he may have done bad things. But he isn't mean. He wouldn't lie about it. He'd come straight out, with that defiant, mocking smile of his."

"That's all very well, daughter," Lee assented. "I'll grant you he isn't a villain like that killer Morg Norris. Fact is, I never could quite get myself to think so, spite of all the proof. We sure owe him a lot on account of what he did for Frank. But very likely he's that train robber they want in Texas. That must be some reason he's hiding here. You don't want to get too sympathetic to him."

"No, if we get a chance we might arrest him and send him back to Texas," Ruth suggested scornfully. "There must be a reward for him."

"Now—now! No use getting high-tighty, Miss. He can come and stay at the L C long as he wants. We'll do all we can for him, since we don't know he is an outlaw," her father said.

"And if we find he is we can kick him out," the girl added. "All he has done is save most of our lives."

Her father grinned ruefully. "You're sure a gaddy, Missy. You talk like I was starting right out to hunt this fellow down. No sense in getting all steamed up about it. If we get a chance to help him we will. That's all I can promise."

Ruth nodded. She knew her father would pay the family debt if he were given a chance. For herself, she felt a great lift of relief at what her brother had told them.

She desperately wanted to believe in Jeff Gray, to get assurance at least that he was not mean and treacherous. A queer joy flooded her heart.

Jeff Gray fitted himself easily into the life of Tail Holt. Frequently he dropped into the blacksmith shop of Hank Ransom and listened to tall stories of the days when Hank had campaigned against the Apaches under Generals Crook and Miles. He struck up an acquaintance with the cobbler, little Ed Godfrey.

He showed no curiosity about those he met. When they came and went, where they lived, what their ostensible occupations were, held no visible interest for him. He accepted each man for what he gave himself out to be. The riders drifting in and out of Tail Holt no longer looked at him suspiciously. Curly Connor liked him, and Curly was a leader. The only man who seemed to resent his presence was Morg Norris, and this was discounted by the fact that the surly youth was friendly to few.

Sensitive to atmosphere, Gray deduced one day that something unusual was in the air. He saw Norris in momentary furtive talk with Sherman Howard. The big man was giving the other instructions. Norris picked up Kansas and took him out of the Golden Nugget with him. Mile High came in, sauntered over to Howard, held a low-voiced conversation with him, and departed.

Presently Gray announced, with a yawn, "Tired of poker," and cashed in his chips. He strolled down to the Alamo corral. Sid Hunt and Kansas were saddling their horses. One of them tied back of the saddle a gunnysack containing oats.

"What about that lame sorrel, Sid?" asked Reynolds. "You be back tonight?"

"You look after it, Jim," Hunt said. "Don't look for us till you see our dust coming up the road."

"We got a hen on down Live Oak canyon way," Kansas said with a grin.

Back of the horse Hunt kicked him on the ankle.

Kansas added a rider to his indiscreet remark: "Or somewhere else."

Each of the men had a rifle strapped beside his saddle.

Gray watched them ride out of town. They took the road to the west, the one Lee Chiswick and his daughter had followed the night of their adventure in front of Sanger's store. Half an hour later, Norris, Mile High, and young Howard left Tail Holt headed in the same direction.

Darkness was falling when Jeff Gray rode out of town. He had never been in Live Oak canyon, but he knew from Pat Sorley that it was on the L C range, not more than three or four miles southwest of the line-cabin.

Were the night riders out to make a raid on L C cattle? That was possible. But why cross 20 miles of Chiswick's range into hill country when plenty of stock could be picked up in the Sweet Spring valley with a much shorter drive to safety?

As he rode through the darkness, mind focused on the problem, another likelihood flashed upon Gray. Occasionally smugglers from Sonora brought silver to Tough Nut to buy goods for consumption in Mexico, thus escaping the Mexican export duty on silver and the import duty on merchandise. In such illicit trading there was a fat profit. Between El Paso and Nogales there was no port of entry. The only custom-house was a shack on the San Pedro river at the point where it runs into the United States. One of the routes followed by smugglers wound through Live Oak canyon. From it the descent to Tough Nut was by an easy grade.

The longer he thought of it the more convinced he was that the raid was against smugglers. A pack horse had accompanied the Norris party, probably to carry back the silver. Moreover, the personnel of the group pointed to something other than cattle-stealing. Neither young Howard nor Kansas were top hands with cows. Why bring them along and leave an expert like Curly at home?

From chance remarks Gray had gathered that Curly was the leader of the rustler group. But Curly was no wanton killer.

Gray did not ride straight for the canyon, but took the road that led to the L C ranch-house. The Chiswicks would know much better than he what to do, since they were familiar with the terrain. If he played a lone hand he might miss the smugglers and let them ride on to destruction.

It was in the small hours when he reached the ranch. At his approach to the house a dog barked furiously. Presently someone opened the front door and came out on the porch.

A voice demanded, "Who's there?"

"Tell Lee Chiswick that Jeff Gray wants to see him," the night visitor answered, at the same time swinging from the saddle on the far side of the horse.

There was a moment of silence. "What you want with him?" Bob Chiswick asked.

"I'll tell him that when I see him," Gray said dryly. "You run along in and tell him I'm here."

A head was thrust out of an upper window. "Who is it, Bob?"

"Says he is Jeff Gray, Father," Bob called up.

"Wait a minute." The head was withdrawn.

Five minutes later Lee Chiswick stepped out on the porch.

Gray told him why he was there. To his son Lee said, "Light a lamp in my office, Bob." To Gray, "Tie your horse and come in."

Gray followed the cattleman into his office and took the chair to which his host waved him. Lee sat across the table from him. Young Chiswick remained standing.

"First off, Mr. Jeff Gray, if that's your name, let's get it clear where you stand. I'll ask you to come clean, sir. Are you one of Sern Howard's scoundrels?"

"Would I be here if I were?" Gray asked.

Ruth stood in the doorway, her dark eyes dilated with surprise. She had hung a wrap over her nightgown and she held it caught close to her slender, gracious body. Above the slippers into which her feet had been thrust there was a glimpse of white ankle.

"I'm not asking for a Yankee answer, sir," Lee said impatiently.

"I'm not giving you one," Gray told him curtly. "I've been in the saddle all night to bring you the tip-off. Take it or leave it."

"There's a story in Tail Holt that you are Clint Duke, the fellow who robbed the Texas and Southern," persisted Lee.

"Not much time for gossip right now if we aim to head off those scoundrels," Gray said.

Ruth broke into the talk. "I don't believe it. I don't think Mr. Gray is a train robber or a rustler, Father. And I know he isn't one of Sherman Howard's men. Look what he did for Frank."

Her father turned in his chair. "Might have known you'd be butting in," he scolded, "seeing it's none of your business."

"I heard voices," she explained, "and I came down to see who it was."

"Now you know, you can go back to bed," Lee told her curtly.

"Not just yet, please," Gray smiled blandly. "I'm gaunt as a pined steer after a long drive. Since you're so sure I'm innocent, Miss Chiswick, how about a cup of coffee and some ham and eggs? I'll have just time for them before we start if you move lively."

"Start where?" she asked.

The red-headed man waved a hand debarbarically at his host. "Ask Mr. Chiswick. I wouldn't know where."

Lee said: "Go ahead, girl. Fix him up some food." He added to his son: "Rout Frank and Dan Brand and Buck Conrad out of their beds. See they get horses saddled."

"You are innocent, aren't you?"

"I never blocked a brand or ran one over. I never bought or sold a wet horse."

"Did you hear me tell you to rustle some grub, Ruth?" her father asked harshly. "Better fix breakfast for all of us. No telling when we'll eat again."

Ruth vanished. Presently they could hear the rattling of stove-lids and the crackling of wood.

"I don't know how to take you," Lee complained. "You certainly came through for Frank when he needed a friend. You claim you're not one of Howard's thieves, but you were with them when they ran that bunch of L C stuff up Box canyon. Pat Sorley checked up on your horse's hoofs."

"He didn't check up well enough. I went up the gulch after the thieves, not with them. They passed close to the line-camp in the night. I heard them and went out to see who they were. Pat hadn't been feeling well the night before, so I didn't wake him, but followed the rustlers alone."

"You're a detective for the Cattlemen's association. That what you mean?"

"You can do your own guessing. Right now I'm giving no information."

Chiswick threw out a hand in a gesture of defeat. "All right. Have it your own way. I'll take a chance on you. If you're right about it this bunch you followed are headed for Live Oak canyon, it is a cinch they are not figuring on running off any of my stock. My guess is the same as yours. They have heard word of some silver smugglers on their way to Tough Nut. At least, that would look reasonable to me. Probably they will lie in wait for them at the rock slide. A thousand big boulders crashed down a million years ago, and filled up the trail so a traveler has to wind around among them. It's a fine spot for an ambush. Question is, can we get to the smugglers before they reach the canyon?"

"If not, they will probably be wiped out. You know that killer Morg Norris. He'll figure dead men tell no tales."

"Yes. Three smugglers were dry-gulched and killed last year. In Skeleton canyon, not in Live Oak. Norris was in that, they say."

"Unless the Mexicans fool them and come up some other way," Gray said, thinking aloud.

"Through Live Oak would be the nearest for them."

"Howard made a spy in Mexico who is in with the smugglers."

"Looks like," Chiswick agreed.

Presently Frank Chiswick came into the room. He told his father that the horses were being caught and saddled. "Tony Flores stayed at the bunk-house last night. Do you want him to go?" the young man asked.

"I reckon so. How many rifles all told?"

"Four, counting the buffalo gun."

"The other men trooped into the house for breakfast. They ate by the light of lamps. Ruth and Nelly waiting on them. Plate after plate of biscuits vanished before them. Platters of fried eggs appeared and disappeared. Nelly poured great quantities of coffee. The men ate with the lusty, hearty appetites of hard riders who did not know when they would see food again. During the meal there was little conversation."

After breakfast Gray drew Lee Chiswick aside.

"Maybe we're figuring this thing out wrong," he said. "Maybe when Kansas let slip Live Oak canyon, that was just bait for me. Don't you reckon you had better leave a guard at the ranch to look after the women?"

Lee considered this. "No. Men in this country don't make war on women, not even a fox like Sherman Howard."

Gray rode with Lee Chiswick at the head of the little cavalcade.

They came into rough country, a wild jumble of hills and draws which made for slow and hard going. In the darkness the horses felt their own way. From the summit of one of the hills Chiswick pointed down to a gash in the rock wall facing them.

"Canyon Diablo," he said. "That was the Spanish name. We call it Live Oak now."

Chiswick left the rest of his party in a mesquite draw while he and Gray rode forward to reconnoiter. The younger man carried Dan Brand's rifle, since he had not one of his own. They rode cautiously, searching the darkness in front of them with their eyes as they moved forward. Of the two Chiswick was the more uneasy. He could not be sure that his companion was not leading him into a trap from which he would never come out alive.

Neither of them saw any sign of another party. Finally they drew rein and dismounted. Back of a small elevation 50 yards from the mouth of Live Oak canyon they tied their mounts. Very carefully they covered the remaining distance. Within rifle range were a hundred boulders behind which enemies could find cover.

They reached the trail.

"They're ahead of us," Gray pointed to fresh tracks.

They examined the footprints, striking matches as they stooped to make out the impressions. One horse had a broken front hoof. Another wore very large shoes and stepped a long way.

"I've seen both of those tracks before," Chiswick said.

"The horses that made them belong to Morg Norris and Mile High," Gray replied. "Where do we go from here? My idea is to follow them into the canyon or along the rim."

Chiswick called to the rest of his posse and the others joined them. Brand recovered his rifle from the red-headed man.

"Norris and his crowd are in the canyon, boys," Lee said. "We are going in after them. But get this right. We have no evidence as to why they are here. So we can't cut loose at them promiscuously. Maybe they'll show their hand before we reach them. Anyhow, till I give the word there isn't to be any gunplay. We're law-abiding citizens."

"How many of them are there?" asked Buck Conrad, chewing tobacco stolidly. He was a short, thick, bowlegged man with an imperturbable face.

Post Office Department Aids Bureau

of Identification in Finding People

Consciously and unconsciously, post office departments the world over perform odd non-postal services.

The United States post office gets into banking with its postal savings work. In rare emergencies, it aids the federal bureau of investigation in identification by turning over to G-men fingerprints taken of each person who opens a postal savings account.

Occasionally, says a writer in the Washington Post, our post office delves into the business of locating missing people. Here's how its fanciest bit of service works. You pay 3 cents postage; plus 15 cents minimum registration fee; plus 10 cents restricted delivery charge (the letter is then delivered to the addressee only); plus 23 cents for a return receipt showing the address where the letter was delivered and the signature of the addressee. That's 51 cents on one letter!

Thus the post office turns detective, finds your friend even if he has moved, tells you where he's living. The idea came from outside the department and was made law by congress.

As for postal savings, Canada, Germany and other countries run banking branches. German post offices, in addition, arrange excursion trips, collect license fees from every radio owner in Germany, maintain buses which serve as traveling post offices. Likewise, traveling post offices are used in Switzerland, Russia and elsewhere.

Back in 1900 Belgium offered an odd service. It was a 10-centime stamp. The detachable tag on the bottom reads in French and Flemish: "Do not deliver on Sunday." If the tag was left on the stamp, the letter wasn't delivered on Sunday. But if you didn't care and tore the tag off, the letter was delivered any day of the week.

Treatment for Acne

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
© Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.

ALTHOUGH a definite organism has been found in smears taken from the pus in pimples (acne), this ailment is not usually transferred from one patient to another.

As acne comes on at puberty, thirteen to sixteen years of age, most physicians now agree that the symptoms are due to some gland change which affects the oil in the little oil glands of the skin; it becomes thick and hard and so cannot escape readily to the surface of the skin through the little hole. As the oil gradually accumulates in the gland and cannot escape, the gland enlarges, the oil, now a hard mass, becomes infected. Some pimples contain just the hard oil while others contain pus.

Pimples disfigure the skin and cause so much embarrassment that the individual is apt to develop an inferiority complex which interferes with business and social progress.

The Modern Treatment.

Formerly treatment was by salves and lotions, cutting down on certain foods, and keeping the intestines active. Today the internal treatment is by some gland extract—usually pituitary extract—and the external treatment is by X-ray. In fact, X-ray treatment is considered the best single treatment.

What is known as the viosterol treatment discovered by two members of the staff of the University of Chicago—as used on themselves and later on a number of students—has given excellent results in many cases. Ten drops of viosterol were taken daily in a half glassful of water, gradually increasing the dose until at the end of two weeks 20 drops were being taken daily. Twenty drops were taken daily for two more weeks. The treatment was repeated after an interval of 10 days.

Then followed the gland treatment—pituitary—administered twice weekly for two months.

As to Left-Handedness.

I can remember sitting in class in my early school days and seeing a teacher come unexpectedly upon a youngster writing with his left hand. The youngster received a sharp blow with a ruler, pointer, or other object. In addition the teacher took pains to tell the youngster and the class in general that left-handedness was a physical defect just as was spinal curvature, round shoulders, knock knees and flat feet. In fact there might be something wrong with the brain itself.

From time to time during the past 15 or 20 years, research workers have shown that left-handed youngsters are at least as bright as other children, and have no more defects—epilepsy, bed-wetting—than normal children.

Some months ago Dr. Joseph J. Michaels (Boston Psychopathic hospital) and Dr. Sylvia E. Goodman (State Psychopathic hospital, Ann Arbor, Mich.) in the Archives of Neurology and Psychiatry, recorded a study of 468 children of whom about 11 per cent were left handed.

Their figures show that among these left-handed children there were no more cases of bed-wetting, temper tantrums, sleep disturbances, dreaming and failures in school than among those who were right handed. There was, however, a slight association of stammering, thumb-sucking and nail biting with the ones who were left handed.

The results of these investigations would show that while left-handed children are as bright as those who write with the right hand, they are, to a slight degree, more nervous because stammering, thumb-sucking and nail biting are definitely "nervous" symptoms.

Largest City in Area

Zamboanga, a small town at the southern extremity of the Philippines archipelago, is now the largest city in the world in area. It achieved the distinction as the result of a charter giving it a total area of 1,050 square miles. Tokyo previously held the world record with an area of 833 square miles, followed by London (699 square miles, Los Angeles (442.5), Berlin (348), and New York (310). In point of population, however, Zamboanga is not near the largest city in the Philippines. It boasts only 101,048 inhabitants.

Scallop in Coat-of-Arms

Scallop shells are usually radially ribbed, and the edges are, therefore, often undulating. The scallop appears in the coat-of-arms of many old families whose men went on the Crusades to the Holy Land. The Crusaders used the shells of the Mediterranean scallop for drinking cups, plates, etc., often tying them on their coats. The scallop became the emblem of these going on the crusades.

RAIDING THE TREASURY

Karl Crowley, the Washington candidate for governor of Texas, has been given the indorsement of the leaders of the six pension organizations of this state, according to political propaganda sent to the News from his Dallas headquarters. As we stated last week, there are some excellent planks in Karl's platform but he seems now to be heading a treasury-raiding scheme that would be a disgrace to this state.

From the start, we have favored pensions for the aged in needy circumstances and we voted for the amendment authorizing pensions for the aged. We feel, too, that many if not most of those who receive pensions should be paid larger sums. But we do not believe that pensions should be paid to all persons who are over 65 years of age, nor do we believe that all are entitled to identical amounts.

"The old people of Texas who are entitled to benefits have been cruelly treated," says these indorsers of Crowley's candidacy.

In what way have they been cruelly treated? Suppose that many of them are not receiving as much as we would like to pay them, whatever they are getting is just that much more than Texas or any other government ever paid them before. We truly hope that the next legislature may find the means by which needy old people may be paid more liberally than they are being paid, but why should those who are not needy be allowed to become taxpayers at the expense of the public?

"No payments are adequate, and such payments as are made do not relieve the sons, daughters and grandchildren of old people of the burden of caring for their aged because of such rank discrimination and under-payment," say these Crowley backers. Why should the wealthy or well-to-do sons and daughters or even grandchildren of old people wish to be relieved of the "burden" of taking care of them? If they are financially able to do it and have a spark of gratitude or filial affection in their souls, it will be a pleasure to them to provide the necessary financial assistance which their parents or grandparents may need. The wealthy or well-to-do son or daughter whose soul is so shriveled up that he or she wants the State or somebody else to take care of their own aged parents, is too little and too measly to be given any special consideration by anybody's government.

"We are going to advise every citizen of Texas to read your constructive platform and your (Crowley's) proposal to pay pensions by taking the system out of politics, to provide a total of $30.00 per month without favoritism and to each alike." If that means anything, it means that Crowley favors paying a pension to every person in Texas over 65 years of age.

Why should you, Mr. Farmer, Mr. Laborer, Mr. Merchant, struggling along to make a living and to lay up a little something for a rainy day, be compelled to pay taxes to provide for officials of a railroad or a great insurance company or a chain of stores, to the owner of oil wells or of a big ranch and thousands of whiteface cows, to the President of a prosperous bank, on the sole grounds that such person is more than 65 years old? That is what Mr. Crowley's proposal means that you shall do.

How would you like to be made to dig deep into your pockets for taxes to pay a pension of $30.00 per month to old Uncle Ephraim and another $30.00 to his wife, Aunt Dinah, living in the Brazos River bottoms or some other section of Texas? There are many, many thousands of negroes in Texas over 65 years of age. They live the simple life and their wants are few. It would probably take a million dollars a month to pay thirty-dollars to these negroes alone, to say nothing of thousands of Mexicans who would likewise go on the pension rolls at thirty per cent. Yet, this is what Mr. Crowley's proposal means.

You may be for it, dear reader, but we are not. We are against any such raid on the state treasury and upon your pocket book and ours.

Well, we keep learning things as we go along through life. Sometimes it takes a new idea a long time to soak in, though. For instance, we used to think that a baccalaureate sermon or address was one delivered to a college graduating class, and that only colleges and universities which confer the bachelor's degree could have a baccalaureate service or program. But we have learned better. Every high school now has its "baccalaureate" sermon, and even the elementary schools out at Podunk and Bugtussle have their "baccalaureate" occasions. It all seems so strange. Guess the editor must be a back number—as well as Webster's Unabridged.

COURTS AND LAWYERS AGAIN.

A large majority of the lawyers of the nation threw a wild-eyed fit last year when President Roosevelt sought to modernize the courts of the land. Yet a former district judge speaking in Canyon last week was much more critical of the rules of the courts than the President ever uttered. Lawyers generally admit that the courts are sewed up with nonsense rules, imposed by the lawyers themselves, but they sure get hot when it is proposed to reform these rules.—Canyon News.

In what way, pray, did President Roosevelt seek to "modernize" the courts? When did he ever propose to reform the rules of procedure? The gist of the Roosevelt proposal was that the membership of the supreme court be increased for the ostensible purpose of disposing of the cases more rapidly. The admitted purpose was to give him power to supplant some of the old judges with new ones with the hope of thereby affecting the decisions of the court. In other words, he sought for power to "create a court that he was sure would uphold New Deal legislation. He made no proposal whatever to reform court procedure.

Most of this hue and cry against the tardiness and inefficiency of the courts is aimed at the state courts. President Roosevelt has nothing to do with state courts and has had nothing to say to Congress about them. But the Canyon News does not differentiate between state courts and federal courts. Yet the rules of procedure in the one are far different from the rules of procedure in the other.

If Mr. Warwick will visit a federal court in action in Amarillo at some time, we believe that he will find that they act promptly and efficiently and turn out business rapidly.

In two or three more years the trees planted out along the highways a year or two ago by the state highway department will be large enough to add much charm to our principal thoroughfares and great attractiveness to the country generally. It was a happy idea that impelled the Commission to thus beautify our country. Now it would be a fine thing if it would sponsor a program for the growing of flowers adapted to this region in great profusion along our highways. We have noticed that most of our West Texas flowers are of the bright yellow variety. Some of these are beautiful, but we need a greater variety in color and larger masses of flowers. Among the flowers well adapted to this region are the wild verbenas, the gaillardias, and the Tahoka daisies, though we do not see many of the latter except in Tahoka and a few other localities. There are doubtless many other varieties of wild flowers that would thrive along our highways and that would add much to their charm. Something should be done about it.

Borden C. Davis, W. M.
Wynne Collier, Sec'y.

Just the other day we read some propaganda put out by some professional bull-throating hireling of some government bureau setting forth the progress that had been made in the matter of soil conservation and boasting that dust storms like those of a few years ago were to be seen no more forever. Of course he was an "educated" soil expert from the swamps and quagmires of some of the Atlantic coast states and knows about as much about the habits and peculiarities of the weather on these western prairies as a prairie dog knows about the tidal waves. But we are paying these "experts" fat salaries to expert for us, and the weather just goes on as usual doing business in the same old way at the same old stand. Monday, for instance, we had the most spectacular and one of the densest dust storms here that Nature ever staged on the south plains. We have had nothing in recent years that surpassed it. It seemed as if the earth had risen up into the air. But there has been little or no reduction in the amount of fertile soil here, and we may make a bumper crop or a crop failure this year. It all depends on what the weather does about it hereafter, and we don't know much more about it than the "experts".

There are some learned and experienced men in the soil conservation service who are helping much in the conservation of the soil—but they are not making any boasts to the effect that they have abolished sandstorms or that they have been able to quiet the wild winds that sometimes blow across these level plains. The farmer who terraces his land and contours his rows, who diversifies as far as practicable and rotates his crops, who plants soil-building crops on part of his land each year, and who cultivates his crops well, is doing about the most that can be done in this country in the matter of soil conservation. If he will do this, and will build dams on his pasture land where needed to conserve the excessive rainfall that sometimes visits even the dust bowl, he will be doing as much as any expert between the two oceans can do. So that's that.

"A good man, out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth good things." Dave Davis believes in passing out flowers to his fellow men now and then while they are living. A many a time, in all good conscience, he has said a good word to the editor in commendation of the paper or of some editorial he has read in its columns. He called again last Friday or Saturday just to tell us how much he appreciates the paper. Well, we appreciate Mr. Davis too. It is such men as he that make this country really great.

ENGINES WILL BE WORN LESS THIS SUMMER

But you want to know exactly why. You're leery of general statements that won't save you one piston ring or one quart of oil. So you want what the doctors call a specific. And that's what you get from your change to OIL-PLATING. Only patented Conoco Germ Processed oil from Your Mileage Merchant's station can give your engine OIL-PLATING. Other oils can't. No matter how they're refined they cannot surpass the correct refining of Germ Processed oil. But refining only takes things out, while Germ Processing adds in the patented man-made substance that forces oil to "join up" with the working parts, keeping them OIL-PLATED. All the while Germ Processed oil is used, you have permanent OIL-PLATING. Like all plating, OIL-PLATING keeps wear away and it never drains down nor waits for the oil pump! Before other oils could even begin to circulate, OIL-PLATING will lubricate! Hence no "dry starts" with your engine OIL-PLATED. And platings don't fly off at Summer speeds, or frizzle away in the heat. So the heat indicator stays on the safe side, and the gauge-stick says "Still full of Conoco Germ Processed oil!" WEST-HUNT

On Thursday Mrs. W. J. West announced the marriage of her daughter, Miss Veda, to Mr. Herbert Hunt of Claude, the event taking place on January 22 in Tucumcari, New Mexico.

Mrs. Hunt has been a member of the faculty of the Lakeview school the past year. In fact she has been teaching a number of years in this county. She received her B. A. degree from the Texas Tech in 1929 and her M. A. degree in 1937.

Mr. Hunt is a stock farmer. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Hunt, long-time residents of Claude. He is also an ex-student of the Texas Tech.

The young couple will make their home at Claude.

LOIS WILLIAMS HOSTESS TO DRAW 4-H CLUB

"Proper bleeding in killing poultry improves the quality," Miss Lillith Boyd, C. H. D. A., told the members of the Draw 4-H Club which met June 1 at 9:00 o'clock in the home of Lois Williams.

"Cutting the throat with a sharp knife instead of chopping the head off gets a better bleed. If the bird is hung with a blood cup fastened in its mouth the blood flows freely," she stated.

Members present were: Helen Marie Lelew, Mary Gene Luttrell, Juanita Williams, Lois Williams, Veneta Garnett, LaVerne Garnett, Jo Williams, Alline Garnett, and visitors: Joyce Williams, Mrs. W. H. Williams.

CHURCH AIR COOLED

An air-conditioning machine has been installed at the Baptist Church and the pastor promises that everybody will be given a cool reception, though a warm welcome, next Sunday.

Midway

Lloyd Grider, who has been attending school at Brownfield, came home Monday, where he will remain until school begins again at Kansas City, when he will enter school there.

As Miss Henderson will not be a teacher in the Midway school next year, she was given a farewell party by the student body Friday night. Games were played until about ten o'clock, then refreshments were served to many of Miss Henderson's friends and pupils.

Oliver Johnson, who has been working in Mexico, came home Saturday for a short visit.

Roy Stephens, who has been attending school at Howard Payne, returned home Saturday afternoon.

School closed last Friday, May 27, bringing many sorrows and pains.

Our play entitled "Fingerprints," which was given Wednesday night, went over with a bang. The characters were: Burt Stephens, Opal Johnson, Mary Louise Rainey, Olan Johnson, Icarphene Stephens, Rayford Smith, Clara Lee Rainey, Jim and Evelyn McDonald.

The intermediate grades' play entitled "Sally Ann Finds Herself," was given Thursday night. The characters were very well suited for their parts, and the play seemed to be enjoyed by all who saw it.

Other parts on their program were monologues given by each of these students: Verda Belle and Fern Williamson and Clovis Stephens.—Reporter.

LITTLE GIRL HURT IN UNUSUAL MANNER

Little Miss Ruth Roddy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Roddy, is suffering from wire cuts on both legs sustained Monday while riding on a tractor at Fluvanna, where she was visiting relatives. Her legs were caught by the wires of a fence while the tractor was moving.

Eight stitches were required to close the deeper cuts.

Little Caroline Collier spent two or three days this week with her grand-parents in Post.

Higway Topping Work Is Started

The work of placing a seal top on highway No. 84 west of Tahoka was begun early this week. Seventeen car loads of gravel arrived Monday and are now being unloaded and distributed along the highway. Quite a crew of hands are at work on the job. It is contemplated that this work will be done rapidly and that only a few weeks will be required to complete the job.

County Judge P. W. Goad also received information from Assistant District Engineer of Lubbock early this week that he had assurance from Washington that a work order for construction work on highway 84 east of Tahoka would be issued within the next ten days provided the right-of-way had been procured and the state highway commission was ready to proceed.

Judge Goad says that deeds have been procured to nearly all of the right-of-way and that condemnation proceedings have been begun to procure the remainder of it. Work should begin on this portion of the road at an early date, therefore.

A. L. Dunagan of near Dixie was in Wednesday proudly displaying a certificate his daughter, who attends high school at Wilson, won in a recent state contest in school girl costume-making held at the Future Homemakers of Texas Rally in San Antonio on May 7. The girl won second place in a field of 450. She is sixteen years old and in the ninth grade.

County Markets Much Produce

Henry Maasen was the chief speaker at the Rotary Luncheon Thursday. He had been asked to talk about the production of farm produce in Linn county, and he gave some interesting statistics.

It is conservatively estimated that during the month of May 1938 ten-gallon cans of cream, were produced in Linn county, or 15,000 gallons, valued at $9,000.

The produce dealers bought 30,000 pounds of poultry, valued at $4,000.

Egg purchases amounted to 4,000 cases, worth $20,000.

This makes a total of approximately $33,000 paid to farmers and housewives in the county during the month of May for these three items of farm produce. Of course May is about the peak month of the year in the production of produce, but Mr. Maasen estimates that considerably more than a quarter million dollars are paid for produce in this county in a year's time—and that is no small item.

Mr. Maasen also stressed the importance to the farmers, to the produce dealers, and incidentally to the merchants, of producing only first class poultry and of bringing to the market only fresh eggs, fertile or infertile.

Bill Sewell of Lubbock was present and rendered a couple of fine solos, the audience joining in on the chorus, with Mrs. R. L. Richardson as piano accompanist.

Deen Nowlin announced that Tahoka Rotarians and their wives were invited to meet with the Brownfield Rotarians Friday night, that being their "ladies night." A number of the local Rotarians indicated their intention of going.

Raymond Weathers reported progress on the program to be given at the Merchants and Politicians Review to be staged here next Thursday night. This show promises to be a scream. More about it elsewhere.

Myrna Dean Gagnat is spending this week in Lubbock as the guest of her friend, Wilella Nelson.

ELDER DRENNON'S NOTES.

Back home! And however humble, there is no place like home.

We had a very pleasant meeting at Monument, with ten precious souls being saved. The oil field is different from many places, but I was agreeably surprised to find such a fine class of people to work with.

In the Monument field there are 566 wells and almost all of them flow. What wonderful preparation God has made for us in depositing in the earth oil, gas, diamonds, coal, salt, and many other things for our use. I wonder how many realize that every good and perfect gift comes from God. Yes, the sandstorms, cyclones, hail, and such like come from God too, but they are just as necessary as the other things he gives.

We are glad to read in last week's issue of the News about highway 84 being improved east and west of Tahoka. One sure does miss the good roads when they drive over such roads as I did in New Mexico. Lynn county will be sitting pretty when 84 is paved across east and west as No. 9 is north and south. West Texas is coming into her own in good roads of late.

I want to endorse what the editor said last week about the poll tax. I attended an election in New Mexico last week where no poll tax is necessary and they do as the editor said; they bring them in and they vote as the boss says. I did not realize what the poll tax was worth until I saw where they vote without one. The Terrell election law is a great law. The value can not be seen until we go where it is not used. Editor Hill is pretty sound every time, except on religion, but all in all a pretty good scout.

I will be at home and preach here until the last of July, when I will go to Grayson county for two meetings. Yours for men who will keep their lives cleaner than their cars.—R. P. Drennon.

Ed. Note: As to our religious views, Brother Drennon, there are men who insist that we should compromise our differences and all get together in the same church organization. Do you think it could be done? Would you be willing to surrender any of your views for the sake of unity?

Miss Evelyn Richter of Lubbock, district supervisor of women's and professional projects of the WPA, was a visitor to the Housekeeping Aide and the Renovation projects here Tuesday.

Miss Catherine Sanders is visiting friends in Anton this week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Robertson and their daughter, Miss Edith, returned Tuesday from a pleasure trip down on the Concho near San Angelo as the guest of their long-time friends, Joe Hill and family of that city. Mr. Robertson says he never had a better time in his life. Fishing was good and squirrel hunting better. They caught about a hundred pounds of fish and killed a large number of squirrels, and the stream and the scenery were very fine at that point. Instead of a sand storm they had a half inch rain Monday night.

Jeff, James, and Keith Connolly returned Tuesday from a several days visit with relatives at their old home town, Whitney, Hill county. Jeff says that while there he attended a service commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the Baptist Church at that place.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Greenwood now of Big Spring were here last week visiting their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Eudaly and their son, Tom Greenwood, and family out on route 4. They returned to Big Spring the first of this week.

Lynn County

As Revealed by the Files of the Lynn County News of June 6, 1913.

History

Tuesday night Rev. C. W. Young, a noted evangelist and great spiritual worker commenced a revival at the Methodist Church. Bro. Callaway was pastor.

According to the census Lynn County had 332 families averaging 5.1 persons per family.

One of the Trades Day bargains advertised by H. M. Larkin was "Extra High Patent Flour at $2.70 per sack."

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Stokes accompanied by their son, Judge J. L. Stokes and wife, and R. E. Doak, went up to Slaton on the Wednesday train to meet Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Connell, of Brenham. The whole party returned on the afternoon train. Mrs. Connell is Mr. Stokes' sister and will visit at the Tahoka Hotel.

Williams was offering 1/2 gallon of ice cream to the "best looking old maid".

Strength During MIDDLE LIFE

Strength is extra-important for women going through the change of life. Then the body needs the very best nourishment to fortify it against the changes that are taking place.

In such cases, Cardul has proved helpful to many women. It increases the appetite and aids digestion, favoring more complete transformation of food into living tissue, resulting in improved nutrition and building up and strengthening of the whole system.

Seek Endowment For McMurry

ABILENE, MAY 31.—Endowment campaign for McMurry College, Methodist School in Abilene, is already getting under way several weeks before the date set for the formal launching of the drive. On Sunday, June 12, the movement will really begin in every Methodist church in the Northwest Texas Conference.

The Abilene district, which assumed half the amount, has approximately $113,000 accounted for. $100,000 of this was the gift of five Abilene men.

The other eight districts of the conference have been organized by committees of twenty-five laymen and preachers for each district. Several of them have reported enthusiastic adoption, and pledges already assumed.

Chairman outside Abilene are Dr. George W. Grout, Amarillo; Rev. W. M. Pearce, Clarendon; A. W. Evans, Lubbock; H. H. Hamilton, Plainview; Rev. J. B. McReynolds, Perryton; R. B. Bryant, Stamford; Rev. W. C. House, Sweetwater; E. H. Pigg, Vernon. C. C. Hightower is chairman for the New Mexico conference.

Pension Leaders Endorse Crowley

Dallas, May 31.—Karl A. Crowley, candidate for governor, this week became the choice of the old age pension people, receiving the endorsement of the heads of all six state-wide pension groups.

Leaders of organizations endorsing the Crowley platform are: Wallace Jenkins of Dallas, President State-wide Advisory Committee of One hundred; W. H. Granger of Waco, State Chairman of Social Security Association of Texas and Editor of "Social Justice"; X Carson of Dallas, State Chairman of Social Security League and Editor of "Human Security"; W. B. Price of Texarkana, Chairman East Texas Old Age Reliance Association; James O. Rail of San Antonio, of Old Age Compensation Association of Texas.

Those named above, it was said, would enter the field in Crowley's behalf and help organize an intensive program of public addresses throughout the State.

"I treasure and appreciate the confidence and faith shown in me by the representatives of the various old age pension associations," said Crowley.

"Their confidence will not be misplaced, payment of the $30.00 monthly pensions, by taking the system out of politics and giving equal and just treatment to all people, will be my first undertaking as the Governor of Texas."

The groups in a jointly-signed letter to Crowley said:

"The hope of the old people, the needy, blind, dependent children, and school teachers of Texas to receive just and fair treatment, which has been withheld from them, depends upon the election of a Governor who is wholeheartedly in sympathy with the social security program of the State as adopted by the people in constitutional amendment."

"We have considered statements made by all candidates for governor and have come to the conclusion that you are the only candidate for that office. We are, therefore, writing this as an unqualified endorsement of your candidacy, and are going to advise every citizen of Texas to read your constructive platform."

"We wholeheartedly approve your plan of raising such revenues as being simple, stable, and calculated to put the pension system on a sound permanent basis and take it forever out of politics."

Nelson Challenges Coke Stevenson

Dallas, Tex., June 2.—Challenging his opponent, Rep. Coke Stevenson of Junction, to reveal his stand on the return of racetrack gambling, Senator G. H. Nelson of Lubbock, today declared that "the gambling crowd is organizing to bring racetrack gambling back to Texas."

"If you believe that the issue of racing is dead, then drive by one of the racetracks where the stables are freshly painted, the grass is mown, and everything is in readiness for the ponies to run again," Senator Nelson said.

"The return of racetrack gambling will be a paramount issue before the Legislature in 1939. I am opposed to its return. Where does my opponent, Coke Stevenson, stand," he asked.

"While Stevenson was Speaker of the House in 1933, racetrack gambling came back to Texas after an exile of twenty-five years. His rulings as Speaker aided materially in bringing back this costly and unwholesome racket, and the people want to know how he stands on this issue now. Will he again help the friends of gambling, as he did in 1937?" Nelson demanded.

"Will he again help to bring back a racket that resulted in bankruptcies, broken businesses, and suicides? Will he again help to foster a vice that took $61,000,000 out of the state in the middle of our worst depression when that money should have gone to pay rents and grocery bills and tuition fees," Nelson said.

"The campaign for Lieutenant-Governor has been in progress for many months, but Coke Stevenson has not uttered a single word about his stand on the return of racetrack gambling," Nelson pointed out.

Mrs. Clyde Hartman returned Sunday from Andrews, where she had been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Brasfield, for several weeks. She was accompanied home by her sister, Miss Mavis Brasfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Donaldson and children left a few days ago to visit relatives at Hollis, Oklahoma, after which they will take a vacation trip to Denver, Colorado, and other northwestern points.

Local Dentist Gets Praise

The News has received a communication from Dr. Roy F. McCasland of Tulsa, president of the Panhandle Dental Society, calling attention to the superior talents of our own Dr. K. R. Durham and asking that we give front page space for a write-up of him.

A prophet may be without honor, as a rule, in his own country, but many people here have found out that Dr. Durham is a talented and skillful dentist and are delighted to recognize him as such. He was recently called to Alexandria, Louisiana, to fill a place on the program of the Louisiana State Dental Society, and on Saturday he appeared on the program of the Panhandle Dental Society meeting in Dalhart. It was his appearance there that impelled Dr. McCasland to write this tribute to Dr. Durham for the News. The letter follows.

Tulsa, Texas, May 9, 1938.
The Lynn County News, Tahoka, Texas. Dear Sirs: I, as Pres. of the Panhandle Dental Society, want to call your attention to something that you or the people who read your paper do not know.

"You have in your city one of the best informed and possibly the most talented dentist when it comes to the filling of teeth than any in the state of Texas."

"He appeared before the Society yesterday in Dalhart and read a paper followed by a clinic that would be a credit to any man in any locality. I am predicting that in the years to come this man will be nationally known for his work, and you people of Lynn county will be glad to share with him the rewards that he will receive. I do not mean that he or you will receive cash rewards but that he will have the satisfaction of knowing that he has done something for the profession that will live after he has had his stay here among us, and that the people will be rewarded by having had the services of such an outstanding man."

"It has in all ages, I suppose, been a fact, that a prophet is least known in his own land, but that does not make it right that it should be that way."

"I wish you would be kind enough to allow front page space for a write-up for your local man, of whom I am writing, who is none other than Dr. K. R. Durham. I am, Very truly yours,

"R. F. McCasland, D. D. S., Pres. Panhandle Dental Society"

We want it to be strictly understood that the above is not a paid advertisement. We are delighted to give this much free publicity to one of our finest citizens who is becoming eminent in his profession. But if his talents are to become nationally known and his practice is to grow commensurate with his skill, it will have to be made known by word of mouth or by free publicity, such as this, for under the dental anti-advertising law recently enacted at the behest of Dr. McCasland, and many of the other dentists of the state. Dr. Durham is prevented by law from advertising his superior skill. We are sorry indeed that this is so, for this is probably more free publicity for him than all the other newspapers in the state combined will be willing to give him in the next twenty-five years.

Peggy Woosley of Brady is here to spend the summer with Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Calvery. Mrs. Calvery is her aunt.

Miss Eloise Roberts is visiting the Swaffords at Lawton, Oklahoma, this week.

THEY PROPOSE, BUT WHAT?

Nothing has been done to defeat fraud completely in the nomination of candidates for public office. When the poll tax requirement to vote was made a law it was almost impossible to have candidates nominated in some portions of the state that the people wanted. Loads of foreign men were hauled from polling place to polling place and voted regardless of the time of residence, citizenship or the times they had voted that day.

Or course some of these boys who are now posing as potential law makers knew nothing of this and are clamoring for the repeal of the poll tax requirement. They would have the voter register. The Review favors such a change, but these candidates have not yet said what kind of a registration law they would submit to the legislature. If they should have enacted such a law as is in effect in another state, it were better to leave the situation as it is.

We know the poll tax requirement does not prevent fraud, but it does prevent dead people being voted as is frequently done under certain registration laws. The primary convention plan was a failure because some smooth politician would get hold of the meeting and run off with it. To remedy the bad condition the primary election by secret ballot was put in operation. If the poll tax is to be discontinued, we favor a non-registration, free for all plan for all parties on the same date and supported by the state. This free-for-all may result in members of one party helping to nominate a weak candidate in another party with the hope of defeating him in the fall election.

If these candidates are intending to change the plan let them make it known what they want to substitute for that which we now have.—Yokum County Review.

Mrs. Olive Rackley, who has been teaching at Grassland, has resigned and will teach at Meadow next year.

Little Miss La Voyle Richardson is visiting in Littlefield this week.

ALL MEMBERS OF DURHAM FAMILY RECOVERING

Dr. Durham reports that most of the sick folks at his house are doing nicely. At first they were a little anxious about the eyes of little Kenneth Jr., but he has been snapping right out of it and now promises to be O. K. in every way.

Margaret is convalescing slowly but steadily from the results of her mastoid operations.

His aunt, Mrs. Bettie Gilbert, has been pretty sick the past few days, however, apparently suffering from an attack of influenza. Many friends hope that the entire family may soon be thoroughly well.

Candidates Have Their Fling Advancing Their Cause

The big game is already going on, are a fine bunch of folks, too, people. There may be a black sheep now and then but most of our candidates for office are good citizens. All of them are hail fellows well met. Beg your pardon, some of them are ladies.

Judge H. W. Calaway presided at the meeting and introduced the speakers at Draw, and he was in his glory. He made two or three short speeches himself; all of them were interesting, and some of them were humorous. We have always thought that Callaway missed his calling in early life by not studying law and going into politics in dead earnest. He could make a better campaign for governor today than some of the candidates are making.

Realizing that he could not appropriately berate any of the candidates whom he was about to introduce, Calaway felt that he just had to unload on somebody, so he opened up on Adam for the way he treated Eve, and Boy! he skinned Adam to a fare-you-well. We have an idea the old gentlemen had a good many friends there, however, among the men folks, who would have come to his rescue if he had been present and were running for office.

there. Garland G. McWhorter, teacher at Petty, Daniel C. Davis of Tahoka, and Walter M. Mathis of Grassland each presented his claim to the people.

They were followed by Jim Izard and B. L. Parker, candidates for sheriff, both of whom made it brief and snappy. Parker asking for re-election.

A. M. Cade very briefly presented his candidacy for re-election as county tax assessor and collector. Fred Busy could not be there on account of serious illness in a hospital.

Judge P. W. Goad, candidate for a second term as county judge and Judge G. C. Grider, who served a couple of terms, a few years back and who is now a candidate for the office again, each spoke at greater length.

Miss Hattie Server is a candidate for re-election as district clerk without an opponent, and she merely thanked the voters for their support two years ago and promised to do her best in the future.

Judge Louis B. Reed was another absentee, being engaged in holding court at Seminole, but his opponent, Judge W. W. Price of Brownfield, was present and presented his cause. He spoke very quietly and deliberately, relating his training and experience, which should enable him to serve efficiently as district judge, and he thanked the people for the fine vote they gave him four years ago.

Truett Smith, serving as district attorney and running for re-election without an opponent, had another appointment and could not be present.

Three of the candidates for Representative in the legislature from the 119th district vigorously presented their views.

Alvin R. Allison, county judge of Hockley county, after reciting his training and experience, gave his views on some of the matters that will be considered by the next legislature. He stressed the point that the mandate of the people with respect to assistance for the aged should be carried out. He thought all of the eligible persons over 65 years of age should be paid the full amount authorized by the recently adopted constitutional amendment, and he made no distinction between the rich and the poor, the black and the white, the deserving and the undeserving. He would get the money by levying a heavier tax on the state's natural resources, such as sulphur, gas and oil. He also favored remitting to the farmer the rebate he gets on gasoline used in his farming operations at the time he buys it. He opposed a general sales tax.

Less Monthly Discomfort

Many women, who formerly suffered from a weak, run-down condition as a result of poor assimilation of food, say they benefited by taking CARDUI, a special medicine for women. They found it helped to increase the appetite and improve digestion, thereby bringing them more strength from their food.

Naturally there is less discomfort at monthly periods when the system has been strengthened and the various functions restored and regulated.

Cardul, praised by thousands of women, is well worth trying. Of course, if not benefited, consult a physician.

At Your Best!

Free From Constipation
Nothing beats a clean system for health!

At the first sign of constipation, take Black-Draught for prompt relief.

Many men and women have said Black-Draught brings such refreshing relief. By its cleansing action, poisonous effects of constipation are driven out; you soon feel better, more efficient.

Black-Draught costs less than most other laxatives.

BLACK-DRAUGHT
A GOOD LAXATIVE

John Vickers, young attorney of Dubbock, called attention to the fact that every tax levied on natural resources is passed on to the consumer by the corporations which mine and market these products. The farmer, he claimed, is a heavier user of these products than any other class of people, and they can not pass the tax on to somebody else but must pay it themselves. He opposed the levy of any additional taxes of any kind and favored the adoption of a constitutional amendment that would limit appropriations by the legislature. He also favored the abolishment of needless bureaus and the creation of a budgeting system for the state.

T. W. Montgomery, teacher in the Wilson public schools, stated that he had made a special study of government and economics in college and had taught these subjects in the public schools, having been teaching the past ten years in this Representative district. He favored economy in government and opposed the sales tax. He favors liberal support of the public schools and old age pensions and will help to work out a plan whereby these may be adequately financed. He stressed the fact that he will favor the repeal of the law which requires the payment of a poll tax as a prerequisite to vote, substituting therefor the registration system.

Judge Callaway asked if any other candidate for any office were present but none responded, and he thereupon declared the meeting at an end.

LUMSDENS ENJOYED TRIP TO EAST

Mr. and Mrs. L. Lumsden of Wilson were in Tahoka last Saturday and the former showed us some very interesting pictures which Mrs. Lumsden and their son had taken on their recent trip to Richmond and to Washington. One of the interesting places visited was his old home town, Monticello, Arkansas, which he had not visited since leaving there about forty-five years ago. He went back to the old home, or to the place where the old home stood, and to the old school, which has been replaced by a more modern building, and there surveyed again the scenes of his childhood and youth. There he stood, a man now past the prime of life, living again in memory and imagination the days that are no more. Several pictures of this scene were taken. Among a score of other pictures were several scenes at Mount Vernon, the home of George Washington. Mr. Lumsden says that the scenery between here and Washington is marvelous, and he enjoyed every inch of it.

The prospective customer approached the art shop. "I want to see some of those pictures that are done by scratching," he advised an attendant. The clerk thought a moment, and then his face lighted up. "O, yes," he said, "you mean itchings."

Aerial Scenery
"I've been cheated!" stormed the irate guest at a resort hotel. "You said there was a beautiful view for miles and miles from my room." "So there is, mister, so there is," soothed the hotel owner. "Just stick your head out the window and look up!"

Lesson for June 5

SERVING BY PERSONAL
DEVOTION TO CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—Mark 14:3-11, 27-31.
GOLDEN TEXT—She hath done what she could. Mark 14:9.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Mary's Present to Jesus.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Mary's Love Gift.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—
Showing Our Love to Christ.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—
The Heart of Christian Service.

"The love of Christ constraineth us" (II Cor. 5:14) was the all-sufficient moving force back of the greatest life of service rendered by any man. It is this personal devotion to the One whom we love "because he first loved us" (I John 4:19), which makes Christianity "different from all other religions. Christianity alone acts through this natural and deep hunger of mankind with a personalized religion which can be a satisfying joy and pleasure. Yet at this point Christians fall the most and make difficult the work of serving Jesus. They see religion as a job to be done, a form to be observed, a duty to be fulfilled" (W. R. King).

We need to renew that devotion to Christ which expresses itself in true worship. Prayer is too often asking for things; praise, thanking for things (unless we become so engrossed with them that we forget to return thanks); and worship, which is a coming to God in adoration and thanksgiving for what He is rather than what He can give, is forgotten. Our Heavenly Father wants us to show love toward Him. The act of Mary was pure personal devotion and worship, and its fragrance lives to this day.

I. Wasted—But Eternally Saved (vv. 3-9).

The dark hours of betrayal and death were before our Lord. All around Him was hostility. Even in the inner circle of the disciples there was misunderstanding and bickering. Mary (to be distinguished from the sinful woman of Luke 7) with the quick intuition of an understanding woman's heart knew what He was passing through, and with a magnificent act of love stood by Him in the fellowship of His sufferings. Dr. Morgan points out that it was "an impulsive act . . . born of the prodigality of love daring not to calculate." In the words of verse 9, Jesus declared that the gospel and that which this woman had done were to "stand side by side with each other forever. That keen intuition of love, that uncalculating outpouring of love, was Godlike, and an act in fellowship with the act of God by which a world is redeemed."

Judas, who was a thief, said she had wasted money that should be used for the poor (John 12:6). The other disciples thought well of his argument and murmured against her. But Jesus commended her. To be thrifty and frugal is commendable, but there are times when the heart should speak without being silenced by the drawing of purse strings.

II. Saved—But Eternally Lost (vv. 10, 11).

Judas betrayed Jesus for thirty pieces of silver. He "made" some money. The fact that he did it by betraying the Son of God may be worse in degree but is not worse in kind than the betrayal of the youth of our land by those who make merchandise of their eternal souls. A recent news item from England declared that church organizations were making money out of properties publicly known as centers of prostitution. The leaders deplored the situation, but said they could not prevent it without losing the income of the property. Why not lose every cent rather than be party to the betrayal of any man or woman?

III. Bold Words—But Weak Actions (vv. 27-31).

Verses 12-26 tell of the gathering of the Lord and His disciples for their last passover and for the establishment of the Lord's supper. As they left the sacred meeting and went out into the Mount of Olives Jesus foretold His betrayal and His coming denial by the disciples.

Peter, quick with his tongue, and bold in spirit, spake swelling words of devotion and assurance. Sadly the Lord foretold his threefold denial of that very night. Again Peter and all the disciples declared their willingness to die with Him. They undoubtedly meant what they said, but reckoning without the weakness of the flesh they failed Him. The lesson that is written large in this story for you and for me is, "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall" (I Cor. 10:12).

Complaining

We have no more right to put our discordant states of mind into the lives of those around us and rob them of their sunshine and brightness than we have to enter their houses and steal their silverware.—Julia Seton.

Fortitude and Duty

True fortitude I take to be the quiet possession of a man's self, and an undisturbed doing his duty, whatever evil besets or danger lies in his way.—Locke.

"Death by Proxy"

By FLOYD GIBBONS

Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO EVERYBODY:

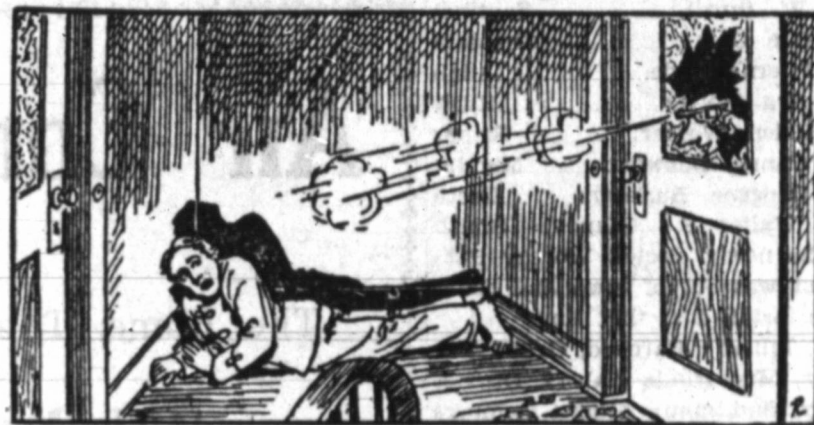

There's only one thing I know that's less profitable than being a burglar, and that's just posing as one. And Distinguished Adventurer Willard G. Stanton of Bloomfield, N. J., ought to agree with me there. Once upon a time, when Bill was a youngster of sixteen, he tried that little stunt. Not purposely, of course. Bill's intentions were perfectly O. K. But it doesn't make any difference what your intentions are. If you look like a burglar, or if you act like a burglar, first thing you know somebody is going to think you ARE a burglar and treat you accordingly.

Back in 1907, when this adventure happened to Bill, he lived in an old-fashioned apartment house in Brooklyn. At least it would look old-fashioned today. At that time it was probably the last word in apartment houses. It had a stairway running up the center of the building, and there were two apartments to the floor. The doors of the living rooms opened on the stair landing, and the outer doors were fitted with ground glass panels. The glass was opaque. You couldn't exactly see through it. But when you were on the inside looking out you could tell when someone was at the door, because you could see a shadow of a human figure against the glass.

Remember those panels. They've got a lot to do with the story.

Burglars Alarmed the Old Ladies.

Bill's family had an apartment on the fourth and top floor of that building. Across the hall lived two old ladies—retired school teachers—one of whom was slightly deaf. Remember that deaf old lady, too.

Bullets Whizzed Over Bill's Head.

Between her and the glass panels, Old Lady Adventure managed to cook up quite a thrill for Bill Stanton.

About three o'clock one November morning, Bill was awakened out of a sound sleep by a loud, insistent pounding. As he came out of a half-dozzle, he realized that the pounding came from the wall, on the other side of which the two old ladies slept. Something was wrong in their apartment! Bill jumped out of bed and went into his own living room. Then he saw what the trouble was.

On the ground glass panels of the door leading to the hall he could see two shadowy figures. They were over by the door of the old ladies' apartment and they seemed to be trying to jimmy the lock. So that was it! Burglars, trying to get in next door! The old ladies had heard them and pounded on the wall to attract Bill's attention.

Bill called out, "Who's there?" and began rattling the door knob. The two figures moved noiselessly to the stairs and began to descend. Bill was sixteen, and impetuous. He ran out of his apartment and started to follow the two men down the stairs. "Right there," he says, "is where my adventuring career started."

Bill Was in a Tight Place.

Bill followed the crooks down two flights of stairs, but they were too fast for him. He was in pajamas, and he couldn't very well dash out into the street after them anyway. Not on a cold night in November. He turned around and went slowly back up the stairs.

Bill got to the top and put his hand on the doorknob. The door was locked. In his haste to follow the two men he had slammed it behind him. In his pajamas and without a key in his pocket, it looked as if he was going to have some trouble getting back in. He stood for a moment considering his plight, and then, suddenly he heard a voice coming from the next apartment.

It was one of the old ladies—the deaf one—and her tone was ominous. "If you don't go away," she yelled, "I'll shoot."

All at once Bill realized what a tight situation he was in. The old lady could see his shadow through the glass door and thought he was one of the departed burglars. He knew she kept a gun in her apartment and didn't have any doubt that she would do just what she threatened to do.

Shot At by a Deaf Woman.

"I thought I had a good pair of lungs," says Bill, "and I screamed back: 'Don't shoot. It's me.' But I didn't count on that old lady being deaf. Before I had a chance to get in another word I heard a loud report and a bullet came crashing through the door. It was followed by two more. Then I dropped flat on the floor, and while I lay there, three more shots imbedded themselves in the wall over my head."

The shots stopped then, but Bill lay right where he was, afraid to stir lest the slightest motion bring more of that hot lead his way. Then, inside his own apartment, he heard his mother open a window and start screaming for the police. Still Bill stayed where he was. Courage is one thing, but when a panic-stricken old lady starts blazing away right and left with a revolver, there isn't any sense in giving her a mark to shoot at.

Bill lay right where he was until the police came. Then he got up again. He looked himself over and was relieved to find that he hadn't been hit by any of those wild bullets, but he found an ominous little hole in the sleeve of his pajamas that showed just how close he had come to having a funeral instead of just an adventure. "And now—adventure," says Bill, "when there is any burglar hunting to be done, I do it by telephone."

Use of the Oregon Boot

Once Oregon was famous for a contrivance that was held in pardonable distaste by prisoners who happened to find themselves confined within the cold gray walls of the state penitentiary. The Oregon boot, they called it, and it was used as an efficient but not altogether humane method of keeping prisoners from dashing off on their own.

Home of Copernicus

Torun in Poland is the birthplace of Copernicus, the great astronomer. The charming old city has a statue to his memory and visitors may enter the home he had 400 years ago.

Our Faith in Human Nature

"Our faith in human nature grows so scant," said Hi Ho, the sage of Chinatown, "that we soon arrive at the belief that everybody who is ordinarily polite is trying to deceive us."

Compelled to Kill Squirrels

The large number of squirrels were such a menace in the early days that the Ohio legislature passed a law compelling each person to kill a certain number of them each year. The number was to be determined by each township board of trustees, and those who failed to fill their quota were subject to a fine.

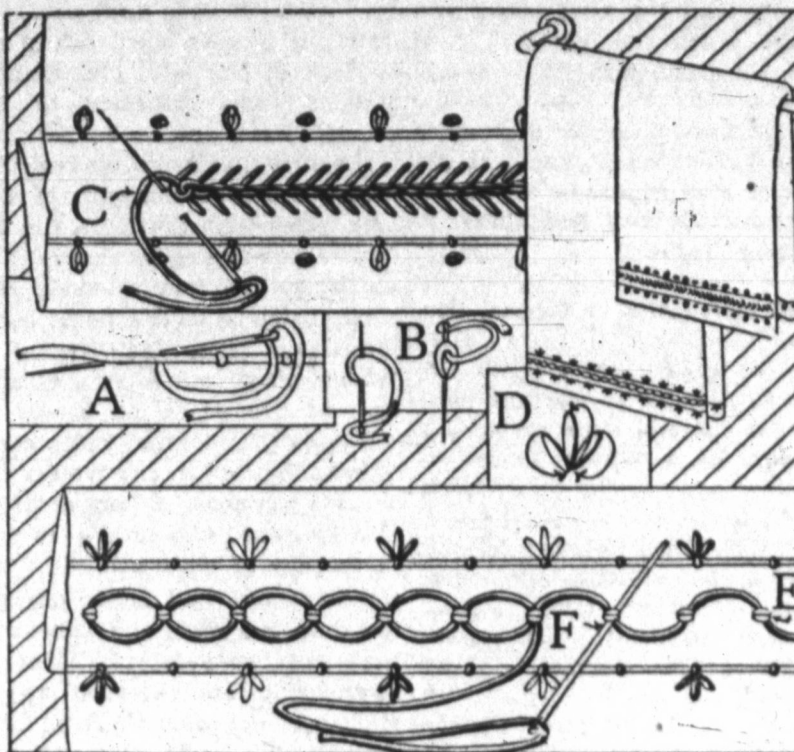

Sausage Tree Native of Africa

The sausage tree (Kigelia pinnata) is a native of Africa. It has rough pinnate leaves and peculiar flowers which hang suspended by long peduncles. From each flower a large fruit develops which resembles a sausage.

Reference to Shaving in Bible

There are many references to shaving in the Bible. In Genesis, 41:14, we find that Joseph shaved himself before going into the presence of Pharaoh.

Strange Facts

Night Worker
Wilts at 90°

WHY do expensive gardenias wilt and drop their blossoms when grown in greenhouses? The common garden varieties, grown out of doors in warm climates, keep their blossoms fresh until picked. In mid-winter when they bring the highest prices the sweet scented white blossoms often fall from their stems before they can be shipped from the greenhouses. Cornell university's department of horticulture has just solved the mystery for the florists. Most plants do not grow during the night. Gardenias are night workers.

Curtis Keyes discovered gardenias work in two shifts. Like other workers they gather food in daylight hours, but when night falls the glamorous gardenia begins to grow. Daylight is the signal for the shift back to the food-making process, when the plant gathers sunshine, moisture and carbon dioxide to make starch. Night temperatures in greenhouses must be reduced to 58 or 60 degrees for the hard-working gardenia. The usual high temperatures of 80 and 90 degrees cause the blossoms to wilt and drop from the stem.

In America and Europe the plant is grown only for its beautiful white flowers and for perfume. In China and Japan one species of gardenia is raised for its large orange fruit. This fruit is used for a yellow dye to color silk. In the East Indies another variety produces a valuable gum.

A. R. McGONAGILL DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

time, his pioneer spirit heard again the call of the level plains and he and his family migrated to Lynn county. That was in January 1905.
His first investment in real estate here was the purchase of the Shattuck place just north of the Dyer farm about five miles east of Taho-ka, where the family made their home. Later he built a house here in town, now known as the J. B.
Walker place, and after a residence here of two years, he bought two sections of land seven miles east of Tahoka, putting in the Walker place as part payment. A portion of this land he owned and resided upon until the day of his death.

The county had been organized less than two years and Tahoka was less than two years old when the McGonagill family settled in this county. It was then the land of big ranches, the home of the cowman and the longhorn. The Whiteface had already made their appearance, however, and a few settlers had begun farming on a small scale. The transformation of this country from a cattle empire to the richest agriculture section of Texas had already begun, and Mr. McGonagill had an active and important part in the transformation.

Having spent most of his life on the frontier, Mr. McGonagill had seen the rough side of life and sometimes he presented to the world a gruff exterior, but at heart he was as kind and tender as a woman. He had those sterling qualities of mind and character which made him a good citizen. That he was a wonderful husband and father has been attested not only by members of his family but also by others who have been intimately acquainted with his family life. His deep devotion to his wife and children was well known throughout the community. Four years ago he suffered an irreparable loss in the death of his life companion, and he never quite recovered from the blow.

While attending a Methodist meeting at Henrietta during the time that he lived there he made a profession of faith in Christ, and when the shadows of death began to gather about him, he was not afraid to go.

He leaves surviving him five children, four daughters and one son, as follows: Mrs. G. R. Milliken, Mrs. Gladys M. Stokes, Miss Attie
Belle McGonagill, Arthur H. Mc-
Gonagill, and Mrs. Ward M. Eakin, all of Tahoka. He leaves also nine grandchildren and two great grandchildren. A little strange it is that among his sixteen descendants there is only one son, one grandson, and one great-grandson.

Surviving also are one sister and three brothers, as follows: Mrs. J.
R. Miles of O'Donnell, F. E. Mc-
Gonagill of Fort Worth, and B. O.
McGonagill and L. H. McGonagill of Odessa.

PLEASE CONSERVE OUR WATER

This is to request the people of Tahoka to use just as little water as possible for irrigation purposes until we can get our new wells connected up, which will probably be about the middle of June.

If people do not decrease the amount they are using, it will become necessary about the end of this week to begin cutting the water off entirely for several hours each day.—Deen Nowlin, Mayor.

Miss Frances Scott of Dallas is here visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Scott, and her aunt,
Miss Ethel Calahan. She recently graduated at the Parkland High School in Dallas, and she will return to that city in a few days.
She has a position there.

B. P. MADDOX ANNOUNCES FOR COUNTY JUDGE

and served for four successive terms, being elected to the position three times. During his service as county attorney not a single criminal case tried in the county court was appealed.

Judge Maddox is the man who organized the Red Cross in this county back in War times, and he served as chairman of the county chapter for many years.

Then came on the New Deal, and he became county relief administrator. He served in this responsible and trying position for several years, and when it was finally decided to discontinue all county administrators, Judge Maddox was highly complimented by his superiors upon the manner in which he had performed his duties and upon the fact that he had created no deficit in this county.

Judge Maddox is recognized by both the laity and the bar as a good lawyer and as an able advocate. He is also recognized as a man of strict integrity, and he is thoroughly capable of making an excellent county judge.

James Minor, who has been attending Howard Payne College at Brownwood, spent the week end here with his parents, but has returned to that city to accept a job in a filling station.
