Candlelight vigil held for slain women

Johnie Lee Qualls, a volunteer with the county's Crisis Intervention Unit, blows out a candle at the end of the vigil for the three women who were killed Wednesday in Richardson.

When tragedy strikes in Midland, the community unites for those in need.

As the sun sailed behind the county courthouse Friday, about 45 Midlanders grieved in a candlelight glow for three women killed in a shooting this week.

Tall City residents Margaret Compton, 67 and Mary Rowland, 63, were shot Wednesday while visiting Mrs. Compton's daughter, Janette Jeffers, 43, in the Dallas suburb of Richardson.

"It was somber, but hopeful," Midlander Mary Collier said. "There was a comforting spirit from everyone who came together."

Not only were the victims remembered in the hearts and souls of those at the meeting, but so were the Midland families pained by the slayings.

"We want their families to know that we're thinking of them and we're here to help them when they're ready," said Sue Slaton, executive director of the Crisis Intervention Unit.

After a moment of silence, members of local agencies offered mourners a shoulder to lean on when they feel lonely or need to discuss their feelings with someone.

"We want to help friends, co-workers and anyone who knew these women," Ms. Slaton said. "They don't have to be alone."

Impeachment trial

WASHINGTON — House prosecutors prodded senators at President Clinton's impeachment trial on Friday to summon Monica Lewinsky, Vernon Jordan and others for testimony and "invite the president" to appear as well. Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist presided over the extraordinary proceedings, his judicial robe symbolizing the gravity of the moment. As on the trial's opening day on Thursday, all 100 senators sat attentively at their desks as they listened to the recitation of evidence.

Fugitives caught

LAREDO — Two young men accused of a murderous crime spree across several states were apprehended Friday at the Texas-Mexico border. Timothy Taylor and Michael Taylor, each 20 years old and unrelated, were detained by U.S. Customs officers as they tried to return from Mexico, FBI special agent Greg Meizer said Friday night in Laredo.

Praise from the president...

Airline founder on hand for air terminal gala

Southwest Airlines President Herbert Kelleher chats with Jamy Kazanoff Friday night at the preview of Midland International Airport's new terminal. Ms. Kazanoff is public information and marketing administrator with Austin-Bergstrom International Airport.

Midland International Airport's $35 million spacious, hangar-like domed terminal got the blessing and praise of Southwest Airlines President Herbert D. Kelleher in its grand-opening preview Friday night.

"It is magnificent," Kelleher, 67, said in a gala, country-club atmosphere. "I think it is one of the best I have ever seen."

Cost of the new terminal is less than the $36 million to $40 million price of a Boeing 737 airliner flown by Southwest.

"That's astounding, that one airplane costs more than the terminal," he said. "That makes me feel a little bilious. Airplanes are too expensive."

"In design and craftsmanship, it's just superb," Kelleher said. "I've seen a lot of them. I sure have."

The Texas-based air carrier, now early into its second quarter century, "has the best safety record in world," said Kelleher, who in part attributed that safety record to standardization in pilot training.

"As far as pilot-training is concerned, Southwest Airlines has the best standardization in the airlines industry. "You know it when you fly in our cockpits. All our pilots do everything exactly the same way under the same circumstances. And we are very proud of that fact. That has made an enormous contribution to us having the best safety record in the world."

In its fleet, Southwest Airlines has more than 300 Boeing 737 twin-jet-engine airliners, including the 737-700 series, which "in its class is the world's quietest, most fuel-efficient, cleanest, swiftest airplane."

Violent collision kills six Odessa family members

By Rick López
Staff Writer

MARFA — A two-vehicle accident just outside Marfa city limits killed six members of an Odessa family Friday afternoon.

It's one of the worst accidents reported to the Department of Public Safety since 1996, officials said.

The accident occurred 16 miles south of Marfa on U.S. Highway 67, DPS spokesman Mike Cox said. An older-model sedan with six Odessa passengers was driving over a bridge above a ravine when a left, rear tire blew out.

The driver, Rita Martinez Vasquez, 33, lost control of the vehicle, weaved along the highway and crossed into the opposite lane. She drove head-on into a Department of Transportation dump truck pulling a trailer loaded with liquid tar, Cox said.

The force of the impact was so severe

Sunset woman killed in rollover near Big Spring

By Richard Acosta

BIG SPRING — Traveling at an excessive speed and failure to wear seat belts may have contributed to the death of a Sunset woman in a one-vehicle rollover near Big Spring Thursday afternoon, Department of Public Safety officials said.

Willie Bradford Loper, 55, and her husband, Horace Loper, 68 were on the way to Odessa to visit his daughter when the accident occurred about five miles outside of Big Spring on Interstate 20, troopers said.

Troopers said Mrs. Loper was driving at an excessive rate of speed when she overtook a truck and tried to move back in her lane. The vehicle went broadside

Restaurants face challenge to cater to young, restless crowd

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The changing family unit is forcing the restaurant industry to focus on convenience.

"The family unit has changed," said Tom Perini, owner of Perini Ranch Steakhouse near Abilene and president of the Texas Restaurant Association. "Mom and dad are working, they don't have time to cook. It's even showing up in grocery stores — grocery stores are becoming like restaurants. People want something easy — get off work, pick something up and still have a family meal."

He recently visited with the Permian Basin Restaurant Association in Odessa.

Not only are Permian Basin restaurants facing the challenge of offering more convenience to their customers, but an influx of national restaurant chains is offering an additional challenge to the small, independent "Mom and Pop" restaurants.

"I understand the independents are still there," Perini said. "Our suppliers say their list of independents is growing. The chains do well, but the mom and pops are more creative. They have a lot of name recognition and ambiance, there's more freedom with their menus, where the chains are more regimented."

He cited his own experience operating his small steakhouse. "I've built it up where I know customers by their first name, what they like to eat. With independents, there's that personal contact, and there are customers like that. And there are those who like consistency."

Jose Cuevas, owner of the Jumburrito restaurants in Midland, Odessa and Big Spring, said, "I think basically locals have to carve out a niche by offering local flair."

Rodney Pete, a manager with Bennigan's, said that he believes chains and the independent restaurateurs serve the same market.

But, he said, "the company-based name has more of an impact. It says each store has to be high quality, or if it's not, the guest can not only talk to the management there but also to corporate officials."

Reyes-Garcia Funeral Home
Announces Open House And Ribbon Cutting

Bobby Garcia a native Midlander, attended schools in Midland. Bobby graduated from Midland High School in 1985. He later attended Dallas Institute of Funeral Service, graduating in 1988. Mr. Garcia is licensed to practice as a Funeral Director and Embalmer in Texas. Bobby decided at an early age to enter a career in the Funeral Profession. He worked afternoons at local funeral homes while in high school. Bobby is married to Midland native Sandra Garibay. Sandra is employed with Midland Independent School District at Carver Center as a clerk.

Bobby and Sandra are the parents of three children: Christine age 13, Daniel age 12, and Joseph age 6.

The Garcia Family are active members of our Lady of the Guadalupe Church, where they serve on various organizations. They are members of Parent Support Group and are Youth Group leaders. Mr. Garcia is also a member of the parish council (board of directors), Knights of Columbus, Family Fair '99 Committee, Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and other community service projects.

Mr. Garcia worked for Midland Independent School District this past year as a Substitute Teacher. He had previously been employed with Ellis Funeral Home, a Subsidiary of Service Corporation International for 12 years as a Funeral Director, Embalmer and Supervisor.

"Since I was raised in the Funeral profession I was influenced from other Funeral Directors as well as other people. I was mostly inspired by people like Newnie Ellis (former owner of Ellis Funeral Home), Jackie Warren (owner of Warren Funeral Home), and Clarence D. Johnson (former Midland High School Teacher)."

Bobby and Sandra Garcia along with Sandra's Grandparents Clyde and Matilde Reyes have formed the Reyes-Garcia, Inc. and have established the family-owned and operated, Reyes-Garcia Funeral Home.

Clyde Reyes married Matilde Martinez, both native Midlanders. Clyde and Matilde are the parents of one daughter, Evangelina Garibay and five sons; Ross, David, Ruben, Roy and Jerry Reyes all of Midland.

Mr. Reyes retired after 41 years of service with the Midland Parks Department as Parks Superintendent.

In 1993, Mr. Reyes was recognized by the City of Midland after a local park was named Reyes-Mashburn-Nelms Community Park. Mr. Reyes has invented, patented and is producing the Ultimate and Revolutionary 7-in-1 Cooker called the Texas Pit Boss. In 1998 Mr. Reyes was interviewed by the Midland Genealogical Society for their new Historical edition The Thorney Trail.

The Reyes Family are members of Our Lady of the Guadalupe Church. Mr. Reyes is also a member of the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

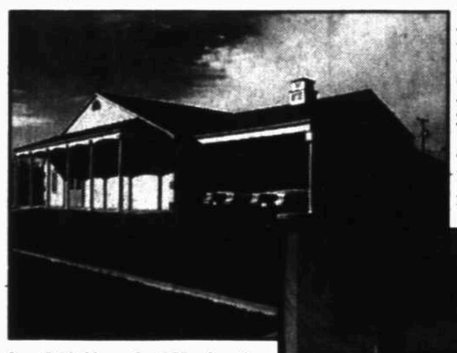

Reyes-Garcia Funeral Home is the newest and most modern facility in Midland. This Funeral home is equipped with two chapels, kitchenette, viewing rooms, offices, selection room, and a state of the art preparation room. The Building exterior is finished in an aesthetically pleasing modern stucco. One chapel has four beautiful hand painted murals of Jesus Christ, Our Lady of Guadalupe, an Angel and a Dove. These murals were specially designed and painted by Ross and Roy Reyes, sons of Clyde Reyes. We will allow our families to select the painting of their choice, if they desire to use one. Reyes-Garcia Funeral Home will offer complete funeral services, cremations, out-of-town services, monuments and pre-arrangement funeral insurance.

The Reyes-Garcia Funeral Home and it's caring staff are here to serve you as we would be served during a time of need.

Our staff is devoted to best serve the needs of our friends and neighbors in the community. Our commitment is serving you with personalized service.

We are sensitive to your financial needs and we will make every effort to work with you. Our funeral home will provide a quality and professional funeral service at the most affordable prices in Midland. We invite your comparison. We will offer different service options including financing. We will give you honest answers to your questions about any of our services.

Most funeral homes offer funeral insurance that includes services, casket, vaults, cemetery property and monuments. A family ultimately has a choice of use, or transfer these pre-arrangements to any other funeral home even if that policy has the name of a particular funeral home.

Mr. Garcia advises his families to make one of the most important decisions in life and that is to pre-plan. This process allows us to stop the price of a funeral service at today's prices versus paying increasing prices years from now. This arrangement also lets you pay ahead of time by making payments until the contract is paid. This will also give you a sense of security without facing a financial burden at the time of need. We will be glad to review your current pre-plans or any other insurance policies that you may have questions about at no charge or obligations.

In most instances a family does not know what to do or who to call when a death occurs, the only decision a family should make is what funeral home they desire to use, at that point, a Funeral Director will assist and advise the family.

Mr. Garcia is experienced in handling all your needs, we will make all the necessary arrangements such as scheduling services, preparing documents, filing insurance, contacting cemeteries, transportation overland or airlines, out of town arrangements, etc. We are here to serve you from the time you call to the day of service.

Open House will be Sunday, January 17 from 1-5pm and the Ribbon Cutting will take place at 2pm.

15 rebels reported killed in Kosovo clashes

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia (AP) — Serb forces unleashed a new assault on Kosovo's Albanian rebels Friday, reportedly killing at least 15 separatists in a crackdown on three villages. Elsewhere, a cease-fire monitor and his translator were shot in the first attack to wound an international observer.

The violence in southern and western Kosovo dashed hopes that tensions in the troubled province would ease following the release of eight captive Yugoslav soldiers by the rebel Kosovo Liberation Army.

The attack on unarmed monitors is sure to raise new questions about their role in Kosovo, where up to 2,000 people have been killed since Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic launched an offensive against separatists last February.

Kosovo is a province in Serbia, the main republic in Yugoslavia. At least 90 percent of Kosovo's people are ethnic Albanian, and most favor independence.

International officials could not confirm the Serb report that 15 guerrillas had been killed. But they protested the crackdown by Yugoslav forces, who used tanks and heavy weapons in a display of military might that sent villagers fleeing into the nearby hills.

Britain, France and the United States all voiced concern and anger that a Briton and a Serb translator for the Kosovo Verification Mission had been shot — with U.S. State Department spokesman James P. Rubin calling the situation "unacceptable."

"Both parties, the Kosovo Albanian side and the Serbian government, are responsible for the security of these monitors," Rubin said in Washington.

The Serbs' fierce assault around Stimlje, 15 miles south of Kosovo's capital of Pristina, began Friday morning. International monitors said government forces shelled and fired automatic weapons on three villages, and reporters who reached the area saw three tanks perched on hills overlooking the villages, with at least one firing down.

The Serb Media Center, whose reports of casualties have proven reliable, said at least 15 KLA fighters were killed in the village of Racak and nearby Petrovo. Citing police sources, it said police confiscated large quantities of arms and drove off the rebels.

Serb forces claimed to be seeking out rebels who killed a policeman and attacked a patrol in the area last weekend, according to the Serb center. Authorities said the same group was responsible for killing seven pro-government ethnic Albanians in southwestern Kosovo.

If confirmed, the death toll would be the second-highest in a single clash since a U.S-brokered Kosovo cease-fire in October. Thirty-six rebels were reported killed last month by Yugoslav army border guards who intercepted them as they were trying to smuggle in arms from neighboring Albania.

The ethnic Albanians' Kosovo Information Center reported an initial death toll of seven from the clashes. International monitors said Serb police blocked them as they tried to reach the area.

The Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, which runs the monitoring mission, said their employees were in a convoy of three OSCE vehicles near Decani in western Kosovo when unidentified gunmen "deliberately targeted" them.

The two victims were taken to a Pristina hospital, and the Serb translator was later released. The Briton was taken to Skopje in neighboring Macedonia for further treatment after being shot in the shoulder. OSCE spokesman Mons Nyberg declined to release further details.

British Foreign Secretary Robin Cook said he was "shocked and concerned" to hear of the shootings. "The work of the KVM benefits both sides in Kosovo, and I absolutely condemn any violence directed towards them," he said.

In Sarajevo, Bosnia, the supreme NATO military commander, Gen. Wesley Clark, expressed concern that the violence in Kosovo was affecting chances for peace.

"The longer the use of force goes on inside Kosovo, the more intractable the problem is likely to become," Clark said.

EAT: Oil industry woes a common topic among diners

(From 1A)

Robert Johnson, general manager of Ruby Tuesday, doesn't see a chain vs. mom-and-pop competition.

"We're here in this together," he said. "We're not out to beat anybody up."

Cuevas said that "local operators are doing well in this economy" and predicted that "if the economy continues a downward trend, they can outperform the chains because they're well-connected in the community. They work with non-profits and do charity work and this community supports those who do charity work. They also have an edge over chains whose offices are in Minnesota, Florida or even Dallas, because they have the flexibility to react to the needs of the community, its economy and their customers."

At the same time, Cuevas said, "chains have their place. They have national recognition and systems in place to make their business a success and to do well. I think they are leaders in their own right. They play a major role in a community's economy, bringing a quality- of-life issue and making us all better. They didn't get national name recognition without offering superior food and service. It's a bar the mom and pops have to reach. There's plenty of pie for everyone."

He went on to observe that "right now I think they're learning that they need to be more connected to each community."

Pete said Bennigan's has been offering more local control to its individual restaurants.

Steve Kempton, general manager of Luigi's, said that "What I have noticed is that we still do a real gangbuster lunch business. But the night business has changed. People eat out a certain number of nights each week, and as restaurants open up north, the pie gets cut into smaller slices. We may lose five to 15 diners a night, so I'm seeing a shift there, but all the restaurants are seeing that same shift. Every time there's a new kid on the block, everyone takes a hit."

As the number of restaurants grows, "I don't see a shake-up," Pete said. "The companies that have been here the longest will stand tall. People are used to these places and they like consistency. They'll check out the new places, but then go back to their regular places."

Luigi's, coming up on its 40th anniversary, works to provide fast, friendly and efficient service, Kempton said.

"We know customers by name, what they like to drink. It's part of the personal service we try to give. Our staff is a little older and diners appreciate that experience. We have people who have been with us 30 to 40 years. Our head line cook has been here almost since Luigi's opened."

The woes being suffered by the oil industry is a constant topic of conversation among diners nowadays, Kempton said, "but people still have to eat, they still need lunch and dinner."

Cuevas predicted that if the economy continues to soften, there will be a regrouping among the city's restaurants because operators have to cut costs.

"The love affair between cheap prices and high-quality food is getting harder to maintain," he said. And the No. 1 issue facing the industry is labor, he said.

As a result of the national labor shortage, "I think we'll see more prepare-and-assemble foods. We'll take the knives away from the chefs and cooks by using pre-cut and cooked foods and assembling them in the unit, reducing the need for labor."

Joe Harper, owner of Jib's, said that he works hard to keep his restaurant sparkling clean and to maintain a stable workforce.

"I've found that the longer your help stays, the more they'll do things the way you want and the more efficient they become. We haven't had any turnover in six to eight months."

The local economy, he said, "is not the greatest, with oil prices down, people aren't changing jobs as often. When business was going strong, they would leave for another job paying a quarter an hour more. Now they're staying put."

He thinks that not only service but the quality of the food is directly related to the quality of the employees.

A goal of the association's education program is to show these young people that the industry can be a worthy career, Perini said..

"It's a diverse industry, so much more than being a dishwasher," he said. "You can work your way up. If you're someone who wants to learn and advance, you can, I promise you."

As the industry nationwide suffers a labor shortage, Perini said the state association is doing a lot with welfare-to-work programs.

"It's an industry you can grow into very easily and requires few skills going in. The restaurant can teach you the skills you need. You can learn different areas and work your way up to manager or owning your own place. We have a number of success stories of people who have started in the back of the house and now own their own restaurant or chain or are in top management."

Johnson of Ruby Tuesday has found that "folks want more flavor. They're also looking for service — people who will take care of them. So we offer a sparkling clean restaurant, make sure our food tastes good and we offer service that takes care of them."

Cuevas said he sees the public's tastes constantly changing and customers want different menus and restaurants must challenge themselves to provide different tastes in different forms.

"We have to challenge ourselves in service and in evolving our menus to meet customers changes. Restauranteurs tend to want to stay with the basics that make them successful, but it's imp tant to experiment with more spices and flavors. This is a great opportunity to experiment with new spices, chilies and flavorings. Americans are eating more spicy foods. I mean salsa has surpassed ketchup and Tabasco sauce has become a standard fare. Younger diners are growing up eating spicy foods and will want spicier dishes as they get older."

Food safety has to be the industry's mandate, Perini said. He said the association is working with the Texas Department of Health on new food handling codes and, once those are established, will train not only restaurant managers but employees on proper handling of food and proper sanitation. That education will extend to customers, he said, a complement to the Texas Beef Council's efforts to teach consumers how to properly store and handle beef.

Said Cuevas, "for the industry, the food illness outbreak has been bad. Education is vital in preparing and storing food and that will become more critical as we feed more and more masses of people. People don't have the time to cook and they don't want to cook, so more and more will eat out."

VIGIL: Several programs offered to teach alternatives to violence

(From 1A)

Rowland worked and were retired from — also attended the ceremony, Ms. Slaton said. So did members of other groups that reach out and lend a hand to families and friends of those who have died.

Mrs. Collier, a volunteer with Hospice of Midland, announced at the vigil that a network of local agencies offers several programs that can teach people alternatives to violence and grief recovery.

The Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children has a program called Project A.D.A.M. (Alternatives to Domestic Abuse for Men), which teaches them how to control their anger and establish effective communication with their spouses.

Hospice of Midland hosts free bereavement group meetings several times a year. Their next one in scheduled for 7 p.m. Feb. 2 and their Spanish meeting — which draws a crowd of 20 — is set for 7 p.m. Feb. 3, Mrs. Collier said.

Hospice also has a Rainbow Group, which meets twice a year and helps children 3- to 18-years-old cope with death, divorce and other losses, Mrs. Collier said.

CIU volunteer Johnie Lee Qualls found the memorial to be a true representation of how spiritual and inspiring Midland residents can be after a tragedy.

"When there's a crisis in our city, we jump in and help," said Qualls, who is also a member of the Independent Order of Foresters, which sponsors events like the Special Olympics and Children's Miracle Network.

While some people might be frightened by terrors like Wednesday's shootings, the volume of kind and supportive souls in the basin outnumbers the wrongdoers.

"Maybe after the vigil, we can offer the community peace of mind that we have such good people," Qualls said.

Mrs. Jeffers, her husband Doug Jeffers, and their 12-year-old son, Nealon, moved from Midland a year ago. She also has a 19-year-old daughter, Jennifer Price, a 1997 graduate of Lee High School.

The Midland women's husbands are Donnie W. Rowland and Troy V. Compton.

Funeral services are to be 10 a.m. Monday, Jan. 18, at Golf Course Road Church of Christ with Ronnie White, Tom Vermillion and Charley Taylor officiating. Burial is to follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home. Visitation is to be 7-8:30 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 17, at the funeral home.

COLLISION: No required child safety seats found in wreckage that it cut the sedan into two parts — one went under the front of the truck and the other part remained the roadway, Cox said.

Cox identified the victims as Ms. Vasquez; Benedicto Lujan Vasquez, 81; Maria Beatriz Hernandez, 19; Francisco Vasquez, 10; Jesus Alvarado, 3; and Jessica Alvarado, 2.

At least two of the victims were ejected from the vehicle, he said.

Troopers found that the victims all lived at the same Odessa address, 1009 Wilson St., but didn't know how they were related, Cox said. They were driving back home after visiting relatives in Presidio, he said.

The truck driver, Juan Vasquez, 46, of Marfa, was released after treatment at Big Bend Regional Medical Center in Alpine. He's not related to the victims, Cox said.

A bread truck driver came upon the accident site and drove four miles to the Marfa Border Patrol office to alert authorities.

Troopers originally thought that five people were killed, but as they separated the vehicles four hours after the accident, they found Jessica's body pinned in between, Cox said.

Cox said there weren't any child safety seats found in the wreckage — even though state law requires that children 2 and under be belted in safety seats and recommends that children under 4 be belted in the vehicle's back seat.

With the exception of the driver and the 81-year-old, none of the other occupants wore seat belts, Cox said.

He quoted Robert Lujan, a nine-year veteran of the Highway Patrol, as saying it was the worst fatality accident he had seen. According to DPS records, the last six-person fatality reported to DPS occurred near Rio Grande City in May 1996.

into the center median and rolled over twice. Mrs. Loper was ejected from the vehicle, they said.

The couple was transported to Scenic Mountain Medical Center Hospital in Big Spring, where Mrs. Loper was declared dead at 4:30 p.m.

Loper was later transported to a Lubbock hospital, where he is listed in stable condition with a dislocated shoulder, cuts and bruises, according to Scenic Mountain officials.

Neither of the Lopers were wearing seat belts, troopers said.

GALA: Other airline officials to attend today's dedication

(From 1A)

Kelleher will be among officials of other airlines, including American Eagle and Continental, Federal Aviation Administration officials, architects, builders, and city, county, and other officials in attendance at the terminal's dedication set for 10 a.m. today.

Ed Magruder, who was Midland's mayor in the late 1960s and early 1970s, recalled the "50 years and three nights ago" when he first set sight on Midland's "little old, leftover air terminal" from the U.S. Army Air Corps days in the World War II era.

During the war, what is now Midland International Airport was Midland Army Air Field, home of the world's largest bombardier school.

"It was a green, asbestos shingle, wood-floor building," Magruder recalled. "I remember my footsteps clunking on the floor. It was in the middle of a Friday night. It was sleeting and snowing and carrying on. And I've been here ever since. Wonderful experience."

Of the spacious new terminal, Magruder said that "You could put that whole (old) terminal in just one section between these two columns right here" on the building's ground floor.

"This (terminal) looks like a blimp hangar ... like the Navy had for their blimps," said Magruder, who was a PBY Catalina seaplane pilot during the war. "It's wonderful."

Texas legislator, Tom Craddick of Midland, said that the building is "fantastic. I think it's best thing that has happened to Midland in years, and I'm glad we did it. It's first-class."

"It looks better than L.A. (Los Angeles International Airport)," said Bill Gates, a Confederate Air Force colonel, retired aeronautical engineer, and World War II veteran.

Midland County Commissioner Mike Bradford said that in the day's "news we've seen all over the country (lately)," it is refreshing "to walk in this door" into the terminal. "It says 'pride and a job well done.'"

Pat Schneider, former Midland City Councilwoman, was "part of the early campaign, the early planning," of the terminal in the 1980s when she served on the airport board. "We didn't have the money then, we put it on the shelf, and then revived it" and guided the terminal project to fruition.

"Oh," she lamented, "we miss Ed Vogler," the late community leader and councilman who "was a driving force" behind the project.

Thomas Schneider, 40, said that his mother and Vogler were "the relentlessly driving forces behind it."

Danny Fryar, Stanton city manager, farmer, and former mayor, said that the terminal is "real nice. I'm real proud of it. It's Midland's, Odessa's, Stanton's. Our community is very proud of it. It will become an asset to the whole Permian Basin."

"It is just wonderful," said Midland geologist David Grimes, who serves on the Midland Central Appraisal District's board of directors.

Midland City Councilman Berry Simpson said that he is "very excited about" the new terminal,. "It's beautiful. It's huge. It's spacious. It's open. It's blends in well with West Texas. It's not extravagant at all. We were careful with the money we spent."

To Midland Mayor Bobby Burns, 47, the city "built a terminal that the people of Midland and the entire region will be proud of. It's going to serve us way into the future. Quite simply, this building is our future."

From Staff Reports

A Christian-unity ecumenical prayer service, freedom march and other tributes are planned for Sunday to honor the memory of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Bishop Michael Pfeifer, Catholic bishop of the Diocese of San Angelo — which includes Midland and Odessa — will lead the prayer service at 3 p.m. Sunday at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church in the 1400 block of Garden Lane.

The public is invited to attend.

"The Millennium, Martin, and Me" is theme of the annual Freedom Celebration and Memorial, also set for 3 p.m. Sunday at Mount Carmel Baptist Church, 1308 E. Pecan Ave.

The celebration will be preceded by a 2:45 p.m. freedom march from the Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Park at East Scharbauer Drive west of the Northeast YMCA. Marchers are to assemble there by 2:30 p.m.

Monday is the national holiday commemorating the slain civil rights leader.

'Remembrance of War' series to begin today

From Staff Reports

The American Airpower Heritage Museum's "Remembrance of War" 1999 seminar series will be launched at 2:30 p.m. today when Dr. Henry Page will recall his World War II medical experience.

The Midlander was a U.S. Navy doctor at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941, when Japanese air forces attacked.

The seminar, "Take Two Aspirin," is to be at the Confederate Air Force's hangar at Midland International Airport. The highlighted backdrop in the program will be the World War II-vintage twin-engine C-46 Commando "Tinker Belle," which is one of the types of aircraft that provided medical transport during the war.

The "Remembrance of War" seminar will match aircraft and equipment of the era with the aging people who were there in the war effort at home and abroad.

"We are finally waking up to the fact that this generation, to whom we owe so much, is dying at a rapid rate, sadly," said CAF Col. Bill Coombes, a World War II historian who is organizing the series. "And after they are gone, you will only get to read about them in textbooks. And believe me, the textbooks do not do justice to the richness of these characters."

Russia indicates no need for UNSCOM, suggests replacement

Nicole Winfield
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — Russia suggested Friday that the U.N. weapons inspection program for Iraq was of no use and proposed an alternative system made up of outside experts.

The United States and Britain immediately rejected the proposal, saying the U.N. Special Commission and International Atomic Energy Agency should return to work, not be replaced.

The debate capped a week in the U.N. Security Council in which Russia, France, the United States, and Canada submitted proposals on the future of the oil embargo and arms inspections in Iraq in the wake of the U.S. and British airstrikes last month.

The U.N. weapons teams were withdrawn before the airstrikes, and Iraqi President Saddam Hussein has said they may not return.

In an indication that long and acrimonious negotiations may be ahead, the council appeared no closer to any decision than a month ago. Talks may not resume before the end of the week, diplomats said.

The Russian proposal calls for a fresh assessment team to go to Iraq and report back to the council. The team would be made up of current inspectors but would include experts from the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons, based in The Hague, Netherlands.

The Russian proposal says the council should agree to a long-term arms monitoring program and lift the oil embargo imposed after Iraq invaded Kuwait in 1990. A new council committee would oversee the monitoring, and would ensure that Iraq wasn't importing supplies to rebuild its weapons programs.

The proposal also says the International Atomic Energy Agency would continue monitoring Iraq's nuclear weapons, but suggests that the Hague group monitor suspected chemical and biological sites.

That task has to date been carried out by the Special Commission, also known as UNSCOM, which was formed after the Gulf War in 1991 to search out and destroy Iraq's weapons of mass destruction. According to U.N. resolutions, the embargo cannot be lifted before the inspectors determine Iraq is free of the arms.

Russia has repeatedly criticized the work of UNSCOM and its executive chairman, Richard Butler. Moscow has said Butler's report charging that Iraq wasn't cooperating with inspectors was dishonest and intentionally negative in order to provoke the December airstrikes.

"UNSCOM in its present format obviously cannot any longer work in Iraq," the proposal says.

In Washington, State Department spokesman James P. Rubin criticized the Russian proposal Friday, insisting that "we must have a disarmament and inspection system."

Defending his proposal in closed council sessions, Russian Ambassador Sergey Lavrov said UNSCOM couldn't be preserved, diplomats said.

"Revitalizing UNSCOM would be like revitalizing the Soviet Union," two council diplomats quoted Lavrov as saying — comments that drew laughs throughout the council.

But outside the council, Deputy U.S. Ambassador Peter Burleigh said Washington rejected the idea outright, a position echoed inside the chamber by Britain and other nonpermanent members, council diplomats said.

"The question is how to get them back into Iraq so that they can help the council implement the resolutions in play," Burleigh said.

By next week, UNSCOM is expected to deliver an assessment of its nearly eight years of work in Iraq for the council to consider. U.N. officials said UNSCOM would also evaluate the prospects for a long-term monitoring program.

France's proposal suggests that a new monitoring program be designed to prevent Iraq from acquiring new weapons. It calls for the lifting of the embargo.

The U.S. proposal suggests Iraq be allowed to sell all the oil it can — as long as the proceeds go to buy food and medicine. Washington said Friday it would allow more contracts to be approved to improve Iraq's oil infrastructure.

Canada has suggested that the United Nations do an overall assessment of the humanitarian and disarmament elements before proceeding.

The Special Commission, also known as UNSCOM was formed after the Gulf War in 1991 to search out and destroy Iraq's weapons of mass destruction.

Rigging scandal sullies what's dear to Italians: Their lottery

ROME (AP) —Two things dear to the Italian heart have been sullied by scandal: The lottery. And kids.

Italy is in an uproar over charges that the Milan lottery was fixed — with the help of children who drew the numbers. The outrage is understandable in a country where billions of dollars are wagered on Lotto every year.

"If even Lotto is a lie, then we can't imagine what pure and innocent things might be left in this country," lamented an editorial Friday in the Milan daily, Corriere della Sera. "We don't have anything to believe in anymore."

Authorities tried to reassure the public Friday, promising to add safeguards to the lottery and to press ahead with "Blind Fortune," as the lottery probe has been dubbed.

"The good faith of Italian people has been betrayed," Finance Minister Vincenzo Visco, who oversees the lotteries, was quoted as saying by Italian papers.

The scandal broke Thursday when police announced the arrest of nine people — including tax officials — who allegedly rigged the Milan lottery. It still isn't clear whether Milan is an isolated case.

The trick was simple: The balls containing the winning numbers were slightly smoother and bigger so that the blindfolded children who drew out of a rotating drum could tell the difference by touch.

Many of the children, most in their early teens, were relatives of the tax officials who were supposed to ensure the lottery's honesty. Reports said the children were given toys and, in some cases, money, for their services, which were carried out before an audience largely limited to local officials.

Until now, every major city in Italy had its own Lotto drawing.

Authorities said Friday that local drawings will be ended and that all lottery drawings in the future will be done at a central location in Rome under the scrutiny of live TV cameras.

Lotto is Italy's most popular gambling game and Italians wagered a record $7.4 billion on it last year, the daily La Stampa said. The revenues are used to finance projects ranging from art restoration to reopening museums.

At a shop in central Rome that usually sells 1,500 lottery tickets a day, sales were down to just 300 on Friday.

"We've had considerably fewer people gambling so far," said Giovanni Leva, the shop's owner.

One of his customers, Stefania Boria, said she was sure the scandal would eventually touch the Rome lottery. "I'm sure it's the same everywhere," she said.

Others didn't lose their faith.

"It's so sad, I'm shocked," said Carla Milani. "But in spite of what happened, I still bet, even on the Milan drum. We bet so much money every time, we can't stop now."

Italy has a history of lottery lapses, but none so serious.

Reports said the wife of one of the tax inspectors involved in the Milan rigging blew the whistle on the scam because his partners began making threats.

16 million Americans have diabetes. Over 2 million will develop a wound that won't heal.

Of the sixteen million Americans who have diabetes, nearly half will develop diabetic neuropathy, a loss of feeling caused by nerve damage that often occurs in the feet. This can lead to the development of a nonhealing wound. If you suffer from a non-healing wound, the Wound Care Center® can help.

At the Wound Care Center treating wounds is our specialty. Our interdisciplinary team of doctors and nurses is specially trained to develop a treatment program that is individualized to your specific needs. And we've successfully treated thousands of people, just like you, in centers across the country.

But the statistics aren't what's most important, you are. So if you have a wound that won't heal, call the Wound Care Center today.

Currency down, markets up as Brazil ends dollar-trading limits

Peter Muello
Associated Press

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — The Brazilian currency tumbled and stock markets soared Friday as the government temporarily floated its currency, the real, in a new strategy to diffuse the global crisis hanging over Latin America.

As euphoria raced through the markets, with investors seeing new bargains in Brazil, President Fernando Henrique Cardoso said the surprise action was necessary to save Brazil's foreign currency reserves and rebuild faith in plans to stabilize its shaken economy.

"The devaluation will reduce the doubt in relation to our economy and create the conditions to lower interest rates," Cardoso said in a televised speech.

The turmoil in South America's largest economy had raised fears that it would spread across the continent and even to the United States.

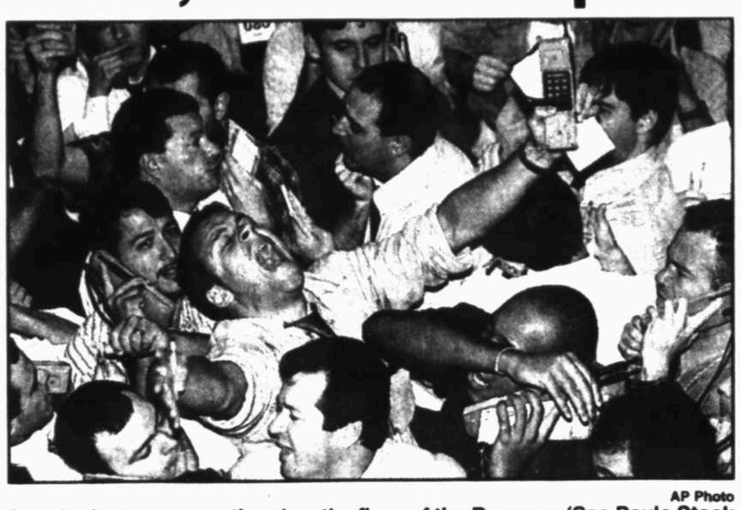

After Brazil's Central Bank announced Friday that it would not prop up the currency's value by spending its reserves to buy reals, the currency plunged as low as 1.60 to the U.S. dollar before strengthening to 1.43 at the close of trading. That figure was nearly 8 percent below Thursday's close of 1.32 to the dollar.

In all, the currency has fallen more than 15 percent since Tuesday.

But the Sao Paulo Stock Exchange — Latin America's largest — skyrocketed as Brazilian shares suddenly became cheaper for foreign investors. After dropping 5 percent at the beginning of the session, the market closed up 33.3 percent Friday — the second highest rise in the exchange's history.

Share prices at the smaller Rio de Janeiro exchange closed up 30 percent.

In New York, the Dow Jones industrial average turned around after four straight days of losses to close up 219 points at 9,340.55. The technology-heavy Nasdaq composite index closed 71.38 points higher at 2,348.20.

A trader becomes emotional on the floor of the Bovespa (Sao Paulo Stock Exchange) in Sao Paulo, Brazil, Friday.

Many analysts are looking now for the Central Bank to reduce high interest rates of around 29 percent that have worsened the recession and the government deficit, as the next stage in efforts to repair the battering Brazil's economy has taken since August.

But Cardoso warned that interest rates could only be lowered if his austerity package is quickly approved and called on Congress to put aside "personal and even party differences."

Finance Minister Pedro Malan and new Central Bank chief Francisco Lopes were to fly to Washington on Friday night to discuss the new policy. They were expected to meet with officials from the Clinton administration and the International Monetary Fund, which in November put together a $41.5 billion aid package for Brazil.

The Central Bank statement was brief Friday, saying it would "not intervene in foreign exchange markets today" and it would announced a new stance on Monday.

"After the exchange rate shot through the ceiling, we thought it better to let the market act freely to find its own balance," Malan told reporters in Brasilia.

The move effectively floated the real — if only for one day — a more dramatic step after the Central Bank tried a smaller devaluation of 8 percent on Wednesday. The bank made that devaluation by extending the band in which the currency can trade to between 1.20 reals and 1.32 reals to the dollar.

The Central Bank usually enforces the bands by intervening in the foreign exchange markets to sell its reserves of dollars to bolster the currency's value.

In another move to calm the waters, Claudio Mauch, the Central Bank's director for financial system supervision, said Friday he would stay on in his post. His abrupt resignation a day earlier had caused further market turmoil.

The global financial crisis hit Brazil full force in August, when investors pulled money out in fear that the government couldn't cover a $65 billion budget deficit and might default on loans. Since then, more than $40 billion has left the country, dropping reserves to around $35 billion.

Analysts cheered the Central Bank's move Friday, saying its earlier, more controlled devaluation had been smaller than what many economists thought necessary.

"Controlled devaluations never work when expectations are negative," said Carlos Langoni, a former Central Bank president. With Friday's step, "the government is taking a more realistic attitude toward foreign exchange."

The cheaper real will make Brazilian goods cheaper for foreign buyers, while other countries will have more trouble placing their products on the market here.

"I'm extremely happy," said Synesio da Costa Batista, president of the Toy Manufacturers Association. "We will be able to raise production by 10 percent this year, produce 220 million toys and create 2,000 new jobs."

Long-neglected Indian Health Service in for $2.2 billion budget boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — The basic health care provided to millions of Americans is routinely denied to Indians as chronic financial troubles force their federal health system to deny services when money runs out part-way through the year.

Now, after years of neglect and stepped-up lobbying from outside, the Clinton administration is set to ask Congress for major new spending.

Sometimes, the lack of money means postponed gallbladder or cataract surgery. Other times, it means a doctor worried about a patient's weak heart can't send him or her to a specialist.

"They do know how to ration care," said Yvette Joseph-Fox of the Indian Health Board, a private group that represents the nation's tribes.

American Indians and Alaskan native people are entitled to free health care under treaties signed with the federal government in exchange for land. But that care is far below what's provided to poor people in the federal Medicaid program — not to mention what private insurance offers.

The administration's plan comes after criticism from the Republican-controlled Congress and Indian groups — and after increased lobbying from Indian groups who have become more savvy at working the system.

President Clinton plans to ask Congress for an increase of about $175 million — an 8 percent jump over this year's $2.2 billion budget, according to administration officials who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The president also wants to increase the rates paid by Medicare and Medicaid to reimburse Indian hospitals — spending that falls outside the regular budget.

The White House had even considered a much-bigger $500 million increase pushed by Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala.

It's a striking request for an administration that asked for a meager 0.9 percent increase for 1999.

"They should have been embarrassed by what they did last year," said Rep. Ralph Regula, R-Ohio, who chairs the House subcommittee that appropriates the money. His committee upped the administration's request for a $19 million increase to $141 million.

The Indian system saw healthy budget increases in the early 1990s, but its budget for the last several years has been stagnant. That amounts to cuts, given the growing Indian population and inflation, officials said.

The ramifications are plain:

—In 1997, the health service spent an average of $1,382 a person — less than half the $3,261 spent per person nationally.

—In 1982, there were nearly 100 doctors for every 100,000 Indian people; by 1994, fewer than 90. That compares with 229 doctors for every 100,000 people nationally.

It's a group with many needs: One in three Indians lives below the poverty line.

While tuberculosis has been treatable for decades, Indians are five times as likely to die from it than are Americans as a whole. They're more than four times as likely to die of liver disease and three times as likely to die of diabetes — deaths preventable with proper care.

"People are suffering and dying premature deaths, due in large part to reductions in Indian Health Service spending," Buford L. Rolin, chairman of the National Indian Health Board, told a Senate committee last year.

Even the most sophisticated Indian hospitals must refer patients with anything but routine troubles to outside hospitals and specialists — an expensive proposition.

Ten years ago, clinics would run out of money for referrals in the last quarter of the fiscal year, implementing something called "Priority One." That means people needing nonemergency tests or operations had to wait until the next year.

Ice and rain glaze the East, rain turns snow to slush

Associated Press

Snow and freezing rain put a hard-shell finish on the East on Friday, causing deadly highway accidents, backing up airline flights and knocking out power to thousands of people. By afternoon, rain and melting snow caused a slushy mess for many.

"Snow, sleet, hail, ice, rain, floods," James Ellis of New Rochelle, N.Y., said, trying to remember all the weather he had seen in 48 hours. "Slush, frozen slush, snowmelt. Lots of branches down. Ice, did I say ice?"

The snow that blanketed the Northeast on Thursday was topped by freezing rain early Friday, creating a slick coating over much of the region during the morning rush hour. As the day wore on and temperatures climbed out of the teens, people found themselves slogging through slush and high water.

"Aggghhhh," screeched Lori Gulliver, 39, as her stepped into a puddle of frigid slop while crossing a Boston street on her way to work. "It's a mess!"

At least eight people died Thursday and Friday in traffic accidents in West Virginia, Maryland and Massachusetts that were blamed on snow and ice. Earlier this month, at least 89 deaths were blamed on a major storm that hammered the Midwest.

Ice forced the closing of a 20-mile stretch of Interstate 87 north of Albany, N.Y. Slick roads also caused two pileups on interstate ramps near Parsippany, N.J. Numerous fender-benders were also reported.

In New York, commuter trains were delayed and traffic slowed to a crawl. Subway travel was hampered in New York, Boston and Washington.

"This weather is for the birds — ducks," said Efrain Burgos, a doorman in New York City. "But if it wouldn't have rained, we'd have 2 feet of snow by now."

The three major airports serving the city canceled many early flights and worked to resume normal operation as the temperature rose. Boston's airport had to close temporarily to de-ice runways after snow changed to freezing rain.

"The airlines all woke up with lot of ice on their airplanes," New York Port Authority spokesman Bill Cahill said. "They spent the morning deicing."

The storm glazed trees with ice, breaking off limbs and knocking out power from New York to Virginia. About 319,000 customers lost power in Maryland and the nation's capital.

More than 100,000 customers lost service in Virginia, and there were smaller outages in New Jersey, New York and around Philadelphia.

A tough year to predict deals or gridlock between White House, Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The prospects for the White House and Congress to strike deals this year revamping Social Security, cutting taxes and on other major issues are extraordinarily unpredictable, participants and analysts say.

The biggest wild card is the impeachment trial of President Clinton. Even assuming the Senate leaves him in office, the two sides could be left hostile and eager to vilify each other in the run-up to the 2000 elections, or yearning to cooperate and produce results to prove they can still govern.

"I could just as much write a script for a bust Congress or for a boom Congress," said Ellen Nissenbaum, who monitors Congress for the liberal-leaning Center on Budget and Policy Priorities.

"We don't know," said Sen. Chuck Hagel, R-Neb., who has pressured GOP Senate leaders to push for more legislative accomplishments. He said that although lawmakers might "dig deep" and work together after the trial, its aftermath will be "a dark cloud that will hang over this country for a long time."

Front and center is how to bolster Social Security for the retirement of the giant baby boom generation, which begins in a decade, and whether they will do it at all.

In coming days, new official projections are expected to show federal surpluses totaling about $2 trillion over the next decade. Politicians are eyeing that pot — $500 billion more than was estimated last summer — to pay for Social Security, tax cuts and more spending.

But there remains no consensus over how to fix the huge, politically sensitive Social Security, with Republicans generally more willing than Democrats to invest funds in the stock market. Both parties are reluctant to offer the first detailed plan for fear of withering attacks.

Underlining the political positioning under way, new House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., plans to make H.R.1 — House Republicans' first bill of the 106th Congress — a blank, to prod Clinton to offer his own Social Security proposal first. Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., is considering the same for S.1, the first Senate GOP bill.

In addition, Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., is crafting a budget for 2000 setting aside $1.5 trillion — the portion of the surplus generated by Social Security revenues — to strengthen the program. He said he was working toward using the rest, plus extra money generated by closing tax loopholes, for across-the-board tax cuts starting at 4 percent and rising gradually to 14 percent, and wants increased spending for education and defense.

Clearly, Clinton and the same Republicans trying to oust him from office will have incentives to cooperate if he survives the impeachment trial, which seems likely. That could yield a landmark pact revamping Social Security, cutting taxes and boosting spending for domestic and defense programs.

Saddled forever as only the second president impeached by the House, Clinton probably would welcome proving his relevance with solid achievements like reinforcing Social Security and beefing up federal support for schools.

Republicans, meanwhile, would be eager to avoid the label of a Congress obsessed with impeachment but achieving nothing else. If they strike a deal overhauling Social Security and removing it from the Democrats' arsenal of political weapons, while also achieving the longtime GOP goal of big tax cuts, so much the better.

Congressional Democrats would gain by winning extra spending for favorite social programs. But many believe that with a real chance of capturing congressional control in the 2000 elections, they have the least incentive for a deal that deprives them of the Social Security issue while handing Republicans a record of achievement.

"The question is whether congressional Democrats want it to happen, and whether the White House can strike a deal with Republicans if Democrats don't want it to happen," said Marshall Wittman, congressional affairs director for the conservative Heritage Foundation.

Another political break-in: Not guilty, says Liddy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The crooks broke in during the middle of the night and political espionage appears to have been the motive. This time, nobody's dismissing the case as a "third-rate burglary."

"An Israeli Watergate?" a front-page headline asked in the Israeli newspaper Yediot Ahronot following the break-in at a Washington consulting firm handling Ehud Barak's campaign for prime minister of Israel.

That's the buzz in Washington and Jerusalem since records about Barak's strategy appear to have been targeted. In Israel, burglars have broken into the homes of five aides to Barak in recent weeks, as well, his campaign reported on Friday.

Barak spokeswoman Aliza Goren would not link the break-ins in the two countries. "Am I an investigator?" she asked. "I can tell you that this whole business is very strange, weird."

G. Gordon Liddy, who arranged the burglary of Democratic Party headquarters at the Watergate office building that led to President Nixon's 1974 resignation, joked that he's not guilty this time.

"It wasn't me. I've got an alibi," Liddy said on his radio talk show at WJFK, in suburban Arlington, Va.

So far, Washington police and the FBI haven't named any suspects in the break-in at Greenberg Quinland Research Inc. It happened between 7 p.m. Monday and 7 a.m. Tuesday in a townhouse building near the Capitol. Window bars were no hindrance; the crooks cut through the roof.

"It's still an open case. I can't tell you what the motive of the burglary was," said police officer Quintin Peterson.

If the break-in was carried out by enemies of Barak's campaign, there are plenty of potential political suspects with more than 10 candidates running against Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu. Polls show Barak as Netanyahu's strongest rival.

"Could any one of them or their supporters feel so strongly they would direct their campaigns to do something like this?" asked Lewis Roth, a spokesman for Americans for Peace Now, a Jewish group in Washington. "Perhaps. But there certainly would be a huge police lineup."

Barak, the Labor Party candidate, and his campaign officials have been careful not to point a finger at anybody.

The only Labor Party figure who accused Netanyahu's camp was Ori Orr, a former general under fire for saying unkind things about Israel's large Moroccan Jewish community. "Though I have no proof," Orr said.

The marketing of Martin Luther King wounds legacy

ATLANTA (AP) — As thousands trek south to recall a civil rights martyr, a new cartoon video and a controversial book on Martin Luther King's life have rekindled worries that King's rich legacy of selflessness is on the auction block.

King's youngest son, Dexter, 37, hasn't been subtle in changing the direction of the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change here. Originally it was intended as a training ground for future civil rights crusaders; critics say it has become an enterprise that puts profit ahead of principle.

But now, as devotees journey to the King center on what would have been MLK's 70th birthday, the criticism is growing since the family has helped produce an "autobiography" that King didn't write and an animated video about the civil rights legend, who ranks among the most admired Americans of all time.

"People don't feel the impact of the center, programs to improve the quality of people lives. Since Dexter has been running it, you get the feeling it's nothing more than a moneymaking machine," said Rev. Joseph Lowery, a former King associate and past president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference that King founded.

Of the cartoon, titled "My Friend, Martin," Lowery said he wouldn't pass judgment until he sees it for himself. But the image of his former colleague as an animated figure leaves him a bit queasy.

The cartoon features a multiracial group of children who get transported back in time and meet Martin Luther King as a teen-ager. It features the voices of LeVar Burton and James Earl Jones.

"I stand in fear and am trembling that Martin is going to be Mickey Moused and Fat Albertized. What I've heard about so far has been negative," Lowery said.

Neither Dexter King nor Coretta Scott King would agree to be interviewed for this article.

Dexter King, however, has said in the past that he seeks to bring fiscal order to what has been a cash-strapped program at the center. He also said he has little interest in succeeding his father as a civil rights figure.

"I'm not trying to be preachy or be on a pedestal," Dexter King said in a 1997 interview. "I'm not trying to effect change on that level."

Critics say a change for the worse is the best way to describe the moves Dexter King has made since succeeding his mother, Coretta Scott King, as chief steward of the King center in 1994.

Dexter King trimmed the center's staff, closed a child-care center and bickered with the National Park Service over a site he wanted for an interactive museum. No museum has been built.

He also began to enforce aggressively the family's control over words and images of the slain civil rights advocate to the point where the estate sued news organizations for excerpting King's famed "I Have a Dream" speech.

And his absolution of James Earl Ray, the man convicted of the 1968 murder of his father, left civil rights stalwarts who worked with MLK including Lowery, Julian Bond and the Rev. Samuel Billy Kyles shaking their heads.

MLK's view on money during his life isn't easy to ascertain, Bond said. While King donated the $54,000 he received with his 1964 Nobel Peace Prize to civil rights groups, he also copyrighted his speeches and books.

"I know money wasn't the driving force of his life," Bond said. "He might have looked askance at some of the fund-raising activities of his progeny, but these are different times."

From omnipresent banners on street signs to statues and carvings on street corners, the visage of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King can be found everywhere in Atlanta.

Medical journal editor fired over article defining sex

CHICAGO (AP) — The editor of The Journal of the American Medical Association was fired Friday for publishing a what-is-sex survey of college students to coincide with President Clinton's impeachment trial.

Dr. George D. Lundberg was dismissed for "inappropriately and inexcusably interjecting JAMA into the middle of a debate that has nothing to do with science or medicine," said AMA Executive Vice President E. Ratcliffe Anderson Jr.

The article — "Would You Say You 'Had Sex' If ...?" — found that 59 percent of college students surveyed in 1991 did not consider having oral sex as having "had sex." The question of what constitutes sex is at the center of the impeachment case.

On the advice of his attorney, Lundberg, 65, would not comment.

Lundberg had been editor of JAMA for 17 years. The distinguished journal, circulation 700,000, is considered one of the "twin peaks" of American medical literature, along with the New England Journal of Medicine.

Anderson said the firing had nothing to do with the scientific merits of the article and instead involved the rush to get it into print. Anderson said Lundberg "was focused on sensationalism, not journalism," and he apologized for the article's timing.

Light plane veers into White House airspace

WASHINGTON (AP) — Security agents fired a red warning flare from the White House roof Friday at a twin-engine propeller plane that strayed too close as President Clinton headed home in a helicopter. The plane turned and flew away.

The Secret Service said the light plane, a Piper Navajo, had been force by high winds and weather conditions into the restricted airspace around the White House and was not considered a security threat.

The pilot was in touch with the tower at Reagan National Airport, where the plane had taken off, and the flare was fired to help him get a sense of direction and the boundaries of the restricted air space, said Secret Service spokesman John Tomlinson.

The incident occurred about 10 minutes before Clinton's helicopter landed on the White House lawn, returning him from Andrews Air Force Base after a brief trip to New York.

"Preliminary indications are that it was benign. However a full review of the incident is under way," said Tomlinson. He said the firing of a flare is "certainly not routine," adding that the review would determine whether any action is taken against the pilot.

"It's not unusual for planes to be directed to skirt restricted airspace. The winds in this case played havoc with the pilot's ability to stay outside of restricted airspace," Tomlinson said.

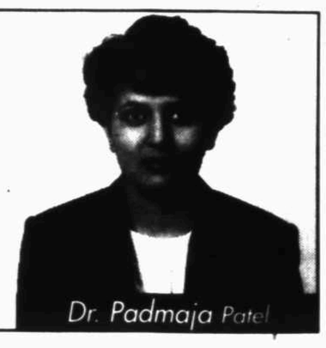

Once the flare was fired, the pilot was able to get back into the proper flight pattern and flew away. The plane came from the east after departing from Reagan National and was on a westward course over the National Mall.

There was a flurry of activity on the ground as the small plane neared the White House. Secret Service agents stepped from watch booths to keep an eye on what was happening.

Prosecutors prod senators to call Lewinsky, other witnesses

WASHINGTON (AP) — House prosecutors prodded senators at President Clinton's impeachment trial on Friday to summon Monica Lewinsky, Vernon Jordan and others for testimony and "invite the president" to appear as well.

"Time and again the president says one thing and they say something entirely different," Rep. Bill McCollum argued as Clinton's trial convened for a second day of arguments. Common sense says "it's the president who is not telling the truth," he added, and if senators have doubts they should bring the witnesses in to testify.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist presided over the extraordinary proceedings, his judicial robe symbolizing the gravity of the moment. As on the trial's opening day on Thursday, all 100 senators sat attentively at their desks as they listened to the recitation of evidence in the second presidential impeachment trial in the nation's history.

The first unscripted moment of the trial occurred near the end of the day when Democratic Sen. Tom Harkin of Iowa rose to object to the prosecutors' "continued use of the word 'jurors'" to describe senators. The Constitution scrupulously avoids using that word, he said, and senators are "triers" of impeachment.

Some senators, who had been sitting silently for hours, seemed startled by the objection, and a few reached for their legal pads to make notes. Rehnquist, called on to make his first ruling of the trial, decided instantly. "The objection is well taken. The Senate is not simply a jury but a court," he said.

"I thank the court for its ruling," said Rep. Bob Barr, R-Ga., who had been speaking when Harkin objected. He quickly concluded his remarks.

For the second straight day, lines of spectators spilled out of the Capitol into the plaza outside as hundreds of citizens waited for their 15-minute turn in the spectator gallery that rings the chamber.

"No matter how you think about the issue, you are watching a piece of history," said Kurt Gahnberg of Seattle, Wash., who sat with his wife and 12-year-old twin girls. "It's easy, I think, to get overly callous on the whole deal ... if you just follow it at home."

Clinton is accused of perjury and obstruction of justice for attempting to conceal his sexual relationship with Ms. Lewinsky, a former White House intern. If convicted, he would be removed from office, but even some of the Republicans prosecuting the case concede it would take a fundamental shift in the political environment for a two-thirds majority of the Senate to vote against him.

For his part, the president was in New York to promote more investments by Wall Street in rural and minority areas. Lavished with praise at one event, Clinton quipped it was "the sort of thing people say for your funeral."

"I don't think we're there yet," he added with a laugh.

Clinton's attorneys will argue his defense beginning Tuesday, but in the meantime White House spokesman Joe Lockhart dismissed the allegations brought by the House. "There's no testimony that proves the president committed perjury. There's no testimony that proves the president obstructed justice In fact there is direct testimony to the contrary," he said.

He added that if any witnesses are called, "this will take an extended time — discovery, motions — and I think everyone in this country believes the time to bring this effort to a close is soon."

Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D. dismissed the suggestion that Clinton would testify even before McCollum made it. He told reporters the administration has already said Clinton won't come. "I think it's a non-issue," he said.

Truth and consequences a matter of partisan prism

WASHINGTON (AP) — So, who is telling the truth?

Republican prosecutors pose that question about the testimony of President Clinton and Monica Lewinsky, and then make it perfectly clear they believe her account, not his. They offer the bleakest possible interpretation of Clinton's explanations, concluding that he is guilty of lying and obstructing justice and should be thrown out of office.

There is another side of the story, a different slant to be heard. Clinton's defenders will present their case to the Senate next week and it is sure to conflict with the Republican account on virtually every point.

Where Republicans say Clinton perjured himself, the White House offers the rosy explanation that he simply misled or dodged the truth. On the obstruction of justice charge, Clinton's attorneys say the accusation "fails as a matter of law and as a matter of common sense."

But no matter how you read it, according to the White House and its Democratic allies, Clinton's misconduct does not measure up to high crimes and misdemeanors.

It comes down to Republicans and Democrats looking at the same facts through partisan prisms and reaching opposite conclusions.

Partisan passions run deep in this case. Look at the prosecution team in the Senate: 13 Republicans, no Democrats. The vote to impeach Clinton split on party lines in the House Judiciary Committee and then in the full House.

Republicans recognize they need to convince Americans there is good cause for pursuing a case that most people believe should have been put to rest long ago.

The GOP's confrontational politics and zeal for pursuing Clinton cost them dearly in the November elections and afterward with the resignations of House Speaker Newt Gingrich and speaker-to-be Robert Livingston. Some Republicans fear their campaign against the president could cost them control of the House in 2000, and possibly the Senate as well.

The American people already have rendered their verdict about Clinton. They believe he had a sexual relationship with Ms. Lewinsky and lied about it. But they give the president a strong job approval rating, and a majority want him to remain in office.

It will be up to 100 senators — 55 Republicans and 45 Democrats sitting as jurors — to decide whether Clinton will serve out the final two years of his term or be disgraced as the first president in history to be removed from office. It takes 67 senators to throw him out.

The story told by the House prosecutors is the same saga that has been told and retold for months.

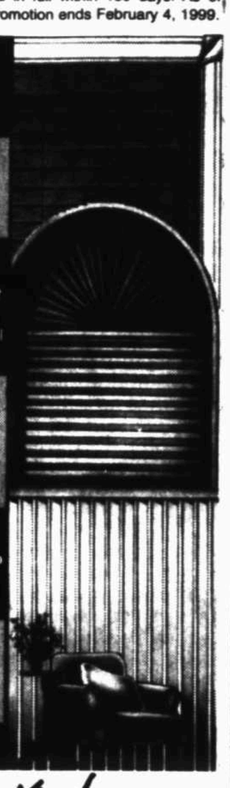

"I'm here today to summarize for you what you heard yesterday," Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., told the Senate Friday. "I don't want to bore you. I don't intend to do that." He said they would go over the evidence "one more time."

"The House case ... is almost entirely based on circumstantial evidence and interpretation," said Norm Ornstein, a political analyst at the American Enterprise Institute. "And every place where you take a turn in the road, they took the worst possible, most negative interpretation of what witnesses said or Bill Clinton's motives or actions.

Hendrick's back

HARRISBURG, N.C. — Already the most successful team in Winston Cup racing, Hendrick Motorsports got its leader back Friday.

Rick Hendrick, banished from the sport for a year as part of his sentence on a mail-fraud conviction, made a tearful return Friday to the team that has won the last four championships on NASCAR's premier circuit.

"This is the best medicine in the world for me," Hendrick, who is fighting leukemia, said during a visit to his team's sprawling complex in the north Charlotte suburbs.

It was Hendrick's first public appearance since he was sentenced Dec. 31, 1997, for his role in the American Honda Motor Co. bribery and kickback scandal. Hendrick was fined $250,000 and was ordered to stay in his Charlotte home and avoid the car business and his race team for a year.

Hendrick, who continues to get chemotherapy treatments, looked tired and moved slowly during a news conference held as part of the Charlotte Motor Speedway Media Tour. He refused to discuss his guilty plea or anything else about the Honda case.

"That's history. Let's talk about racing," said Hendrick, who has acknowledged giving hundreds of thousands of dollars in cash, BMWs and houses to Honda executives, but claims he received nothing in return.

Most of the questions during the news conference prompted emotional responses from Hendrick, who couldn't contain himself during one answer about his medical outlook. His voice began breaking and he lowered the microphone he was holding, turned away from the several hundred reporters in the room and wiped his eyes.

Jeff Gordon patted Hendrick on the shoulder and tried to put his boss at ease.

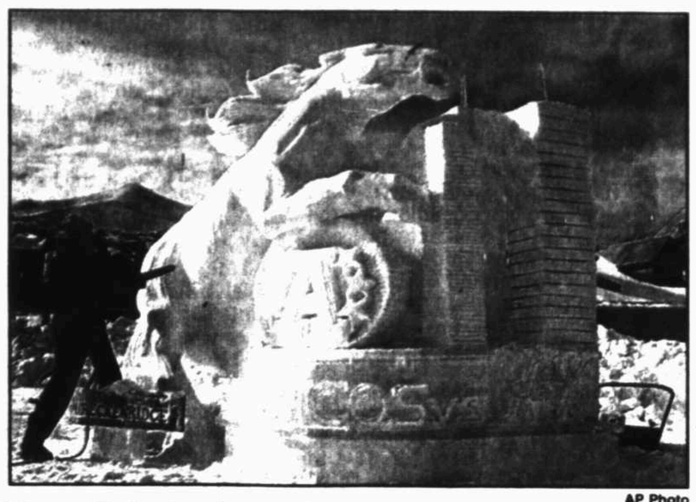

"That helped me in New York," Gordon said, referring to his tearful acceptance speeches in the 1995 and 1997 Winston Cup awards banquets.

Hendrick spent much of his time trying to explain how much he missed racing, and his employees made it clear that the feeling was mutual.

"It's just awesome having him back," said Gordon, who won his third Winston Cup title in 1998. "Our first priority is to go to Daytona and get Rick to Victory Lane."

"There's been kind of an empty feeling around here the past year," 1996 series champion Terry Labonte said, "and we just want to do whatever we can to make him feel at home again."

Hendrick's younger brother, John, had no prior racing experience but took over the day-to-day oversight of Hendrick Motorsports during his brother's absence. Now that Rick is back, he will hold the title of chief executive office and John will be the president.

Parcells, Shanahan utilize different styles of coaching

By Barry Wilner
AP Football Writer

■ AFC Championship Game

DENVER — The disparities come straight at you like Terrell Davis carrying the ball: East vs. West; offense vs. defense; loud and intimidating vs. cerebral and relatively unmenacing.

Bill Parcells vs. Mike Shanahan.

OK, so they'll be on the sidelines, not on the field, when the New York Jets play the Denver Broncos in Sunday's AFC Championship game. But they'll get as much camera time as league MVP Davis and the rest of the players at Mile High Stadium.

"Well, Bill and I can't play," said Shanahan, who guided Denver to its first Super Bowl triumph (after four losses under previous regimes) last January. "Our players play. It's one of those games where you are playing for a championship and both teams are excited to get out there and show each other what they can do."

Both teams can do plenty. They appear to be at their peaks. The Jets, for example, have not been nearly this good since midway through the 1986 season, and they haven't been a true title contender since 1982. These Broncos probably are better than any of their previous Super Bowl visitors, even last season's champs.

And the coaching has so much to do with it.

Big Three score Big 73

■ Bulldogs blitz Abilene High with decidedly unbalanced scoring from Tatum, Christian and Johnston.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Just to let you know, it's still the Big Three at Midland High.

Charles Tatum, Jay Christian and Blake Johnston combined for 73 points at Chaparral Center Friday night to produce a 90-79 win over Abilene High in a key District 4-5A basketball match.

Boys
Midland High	90
Abilene High	79

Forget coming up with a new nickname. The Big Three lives on.

"I hate to take exception with any nickname change that the paper might have, but I think tonight proved it's still the Big Three," said Johnston, who had 20 points.

Tatum dumped in 31 points, hitting his average of 21 in the first half and Christian had 22 points, hitting his season average.

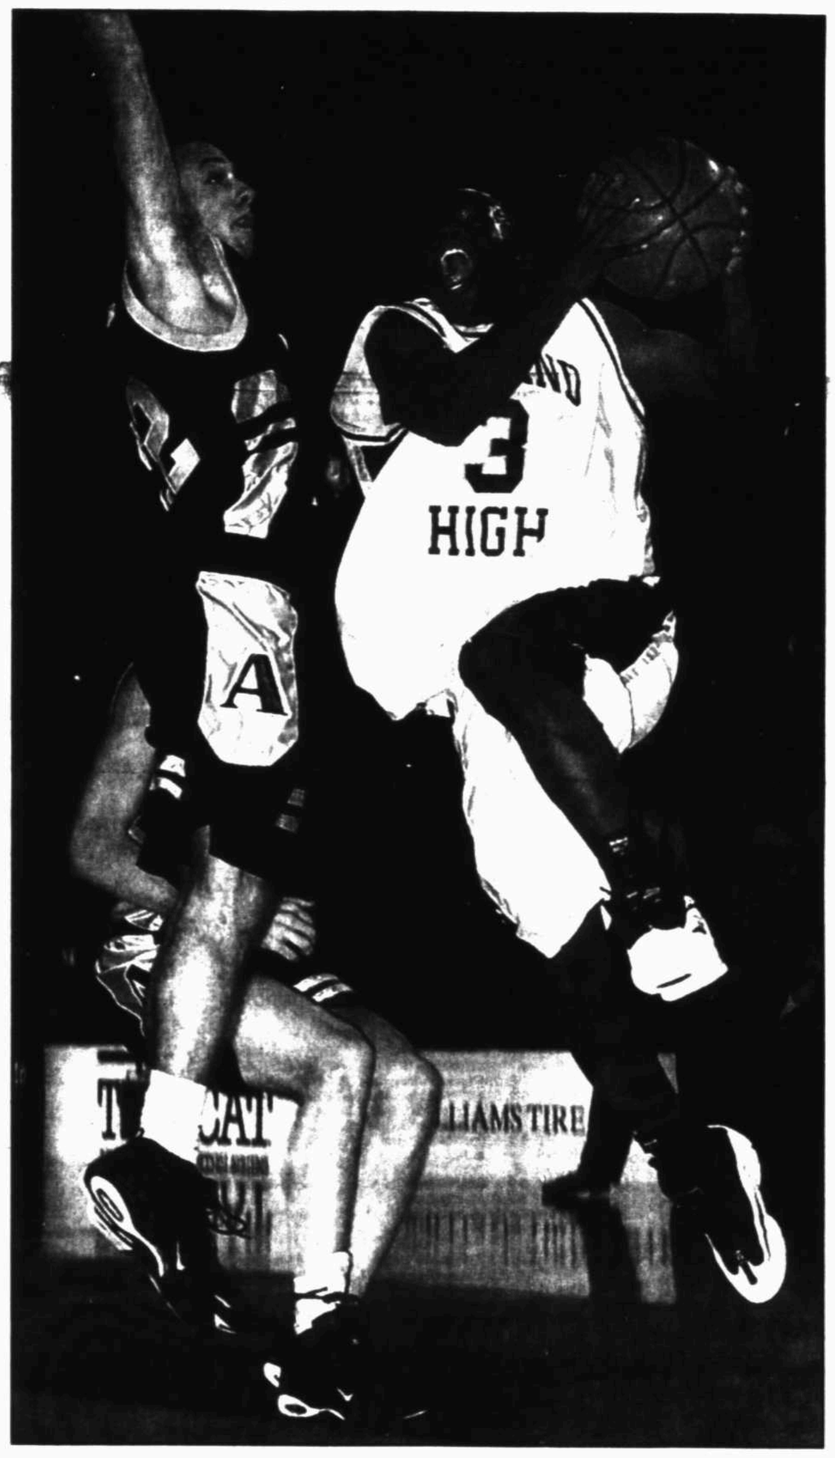

But again, it wasn't as easy a win as the score might indicate. The Bulldogs battled the Eagles in a dead heat for the most of three quarters before going on a 10-0 spurt from the 3:36 mark of the third period to the 2:08 clock reading.

The Eagles took a 58-56 lead at 3:36 of the third on a Terrence Crisp bucket, but Johnston and Tatum keyed the 10-point spurt and a 66-58 lead, one they never surrendered. Until that point, AHS led six different times and MHS led five times and the score was knotted nine other times.

The Bulldogs, now 5-0 in the 4-5A race, seem to own a clock in the head that tells them when to turn on the gas. Lately, it's been toward the end of the third period of play. They did the same thing against the San Angelo Bobcats on Tuesday.

"We went through this same thing last year," Tatum said. "We're just not going to blow everyone out every game. But when you bet, you better

Lady Dawgs hold off challenge

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

All that counted for the Midland High girls basketball team Friday night at Chaparral Center was the bottom line, and in the end the Lady Dawgs had the numbers.

The numbers said that Midland High defeated Abilene High 46-44 to finish the first half of District 4-5A play with a perfect record (6-0) and that MHS' highest profile player, senior Heidi Lange, was accountable for half of her team's points (23).

Never mind that the Lady Dawgs (19-3 overall) didn't hold the lead until midway through the third quarter and only had the lead on four different occasions. The final margin of victory was the biggest lead in the game for Midland High, and the Lady Dawgs had to survive a last second miss by Abilene High's Sara Laster to maintain their perfect district mark.

That didn't matter when the totals were tallied at the end of the night, where the Lady Dawgs stayed alone atop 4-5A and made themselves the team to catch in the second half. Midland High has shown in the first half of district that winning is more important than gaining artistic kudos.

"I don't care what anybody says," Midland High coach Jim Raughton said. "One guy asked me to describe these kids in one word and I said 'winners.' They just won't quit.

"We had the lead when the buzzer sounded and that's

First day of Classic features no shocks

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

Going into today's bracket play of the inaugural Lady Rebel Classic, there have been no surprises.

Region power El Paso Franklin rolled into today's championship bracket semifinals with no real problems — three games, three wins. Tournament host Midland Lee scored 15 goals in three pool play games — again three games, three wins.

Then there was the Midland High, playing in the toughest of the three pools. The Lady Bulldogs had to win their last game of the day to advance to the semifinals. They did and recorded a 2-0-1 record in three games. The team MHS tied, Amarillo High, is the last of the four which make up today's championship bracket.

Midland Lee takes on Amarillo High in one semifinal while Midland High plays El Paso Franklin in the other. Both games take place at 10 a.m. at Hogan Park. The final is set for 2:30 p.m.

It should make for an interesting second day, with — who knows? — maybe a few surprises.

"Our goal was to play well enough today to play Franklin tomorrow," MHS coach Scott Hodkinson said. "That is what we were shooting for and we will get that. To play Franklin is a chance to see how we stack up against one of the best teams in our region."

Franklin coach Rennie Rebe-Jones also looks at today's games as measuring stick games. The Lady Cougars, who have qualified for three straight region-

It's official: Bulls make Floyd coach

By Nancy Armour

DEERFIELD, Ill. — Tim Floyd can finally ditch those business cards with "director of basketball operations" on them and break out the real ones.

Six months after he arrived in Chicago, the Bulls dropped the "in-waiting" tag Friday and officially made Floyd their coach.

"It's going to be a daunting task," he admitted. "I'm standing here in front of six trophies, you've got a hall of fame coach that you're replacing and the best basketball player in the world left your team two days ago.

"So if anybody wants to trade positions, come on," he added, drawing laughter.

It'd be hard to find a job tougher than

Former heavyweight champion Mike Tyson, right, leaves a training session at the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas followed by security guard Cornelius Hopes. Tyson will fight Francois Botha tonight in Las Vegas.

Tyson knows all he needs to

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
AP Boxing Writer

LAS VEGAS — Mike Tyson knows only two things about Francois Botha.

"He's white, and he can't beat me," Tyson said of the opponent he will face Saturday night in a 10-round fight in the MGM Grand Garden.

It will be Tyson's first fight since the suspension for biting Evander Holyfield's ears on June 28, 1997.

Tyson was a 6-1 favorite to beat Botha, who won the IBF heavyweight title in 1995. But championship recognition was withdrawn after he tested positive for a steroid.

"I'm going to come right after him," the 32-year-old Tyson said. "I expect him to go down, be out cold."

Tyson weighed in Thursday at 223 pounds, the heaviest of his career by one pound, but he appeared to be in top physical condition. What kind of fighting shape he's in after a layoff of about 19 months remains to be seen.

"You never know until a guy is actually fighting," said Tommy Brooks, Tyson's new trainer. "From what I've seen in the sparring sessions, there is no ring rust."

Brooks also thinks Tyson has been able to put the Bite Fight behind him and focus on his boxing future. He also said the subject of Holyfield has not come up since Brooks began working with Tyson two months ago.

"I don't think he's lost confidence in himself," Brooks said. "He lost confidence in his corner.

"His trainers weren't telling him anything in the Holyfield fights. When you come back to the corner and they're not telling you anything, that could put a damper on the program."

Jay Bright was Tyson's trainer when he lost the WBA heavyweight to Holyfield in 11 rounds on Nov. 9, 1996. Richie Giachetti trained Tyson for the Holyfield rematch. Tyson weighed 222 pounds for the first fight and 218 for the second.

Greenwood beats Monahans in OT

GREENWOOD — The Greenwood Rangers won their district home opener and went to overtime to do it, beating Monahans 52-46 Friday night in District 4-3A basketball action.

Greenwood (11-13 overall and 2-1 in district) won this back-and-forth game as Derek Gasch scored 20, including a basket with 19 seconds in regulation which sent the game into overtime. It was Gasch's second straight game with 20 points or more.

Gasch then converted a 3-point play and Gabriel Pallanez hit key free throws in the overtime period. Josh Gilliam also scored 11 for Greenwood, which travels to Presidio next Friday.

In JV action, Greenwood beat Monahans, 77-65. Chris Smith scored 15, Kevin Thornton 12, Ronnie Cole 11, Casey Pyle 11. The Greenwood freshmen also won 53-46. Ben Catalano scored 14.

Cooper downs Lady Rebels

Staff Report

ABILENE — The Midland Lee girls basketball team had a chance to break away from the pack Friday night, but are now instead only part of a logjam.

The Lady Rebels got off to a slow start, had a big third quarter, then couldn't get the shot they needed in the final minute to fall to Abilene Cooper 54-50 in a District 4-5A game. With a win Lee (11-9 overall, 3-3 in district) would have been alone in third place heading into the second half of district, but the Lady Rebels now find themselves tied with Cooper and Abilene High at 3-3 in third place in the district.

Lee couldn't find the range from the floor early, falling behind by as many as 15 points and trailed 30-20 at halftime. However, the Lady Rebels turned it up defensively in the third quarter, outscoring the Lady Cougars (11-10, 3-3) 15-4 to take a 35-34 lead into the third quarter.

"Our shots weren't falling," said Lee coach Elise Kail of her team's first half struggles. "We probably shot about 20 percent. The defense picked it up a little bit and we had smarter shot selection as the game went along."

However, the Lady Rebels got careless with the ball in the fourth quarter, committing several turnovers. It was a turnaround from recent wins over Odessa Permian and Abilene High in which Lee played poised in the fourth quarter to pull out victories.

■ 4-5A Roundup/5B

"We didn't do the things in the stretch we'd done in the past," said Kail. "We shot ourselves in the foot."

Trailing by two, the Lady Rebels had a chance to tie the game, but were whistled for a charging foul with 16 seconds left. Cooper then iced the game at the free-throw line.

KeKe Strambler led Lee with 12 points.

Lee won the junior varsity game 51-50 to improve to 9-6 overall and 3-2 in district. Michelle Byrd led Lee with 12 points.

Cougars rip Rebels

ABILENE — The road stayed rough for the Midland Lee boys basketball team Friday night.

The Rebels suffered their second District 4-5A thumping at the hands of an Abilene school within a week, falling to Abilene Cooper 88-60 in a game which they never led. With the loss, Lee fell into a tie for fifth at 8-14 overall and 1-3 in district.

Cooper (15-5, 4-1) used a double barrel punch to flatten the Rebels, as Felton Freeman led the way with 23 points and Percy Gammage added 20. The Cougars outscored the Rebels 20-9 in the second quarter to take control of the game and never let up.

Jeramy Conaway scored 12 points to lead four Rebels in double figures. Orlando Castillo and Chris Packer had 11 points apiece while Blake Hinsley added 10.

Cooper won the junior varsity game 66-47. Cory Simmons had 13 points for Lee, which is now 13-4 overall 3-1 in district.

GIRLS: AHS misses last-second shot

what's important."

The Lady Dawgs survived Abilene High's pressing defense, which gave them little room to breathe. The Lady Eagles (14-7, 3-3) never led by more than six points, but Midland High rarely established any offensive flow — that is until Lange consistently got her hands on the ball.

After making only a pair of free throws in the first quarter, Lange kept the Lady Dawgs afloat in the second quarter, scoring eight points as Abilene High held a 27-24 lead. Lange's short jumper midway through the third quarter gave the Lady Dawgs their first lead at 32-31. Abilene High quickly reclaimed the lead before Nina McAlister got the lead back briefly for MHS with a layup, then a 3-pointer by Dee Harris, who led AHS with 10 points, and a layup by Misty Mays gave the Lady Eagles a 38-34 lead at the end of the third quarter.

A four-point deficit may have seemed even larger in a tight defensive battle, so the offensive strategy for the Lady Dawgs was to revert to the tried and true: Let Lange shoot the ball.

"She was the workhorse tonight," said Raughton of Lange, who also had a game high 10 rebounds. "She ought to sleep well tonight. The shots she missed were because she had two girls hanging all over her."

Lange admitted to some fatigue, but it didn't bother her.

"I'm pretty tired," Lange said shortly after the game. "I'm glad I am, though. (Abilene High's) defense is up in your face. If you're not tired, you're not working hard enough against their defense."

In the fourth quarter, Abilene High hit an offensive rut, not hitting a shot from the field in the first four minutes of the period. With Midland High trailing 42-40, Lange made a free throw and later hit a jumper to give the Lady Dawgs a 43-42 lead.

Tara Hood scored on an offensive rebound to give AHS a 44-43 lead, but that would be the last time the Lady Eagles would score. With 1:27 left, Midland High's Clarissa Leonard hit two free throws to give the Lady Dawgs the lead for good, then Edrea Rogers made a free throw 26 seconds later to give MHS a 46-44 lead.

After Lange rebounded a missed shot on Abilene High's next possession, the Lady Dawgs worked the clock down to 15 seconds before turning it over. The Lady Eagles called timeout with 5.29 seconds left to set up a last shot, a six-foot baseline jumper by Laster which glanced off the far side of the rim and was rebounded by Rogers as time expired.

"We're still on top," said Raughton, reflecting on his team's frontrunner status. "I know we talked about being 6-0 at the turn. We're halfway home but there's a lot of hurdles still on the course."

BOYS: Winter contributes 10 points

(From 1B)

have your money on the Bulldogs."

AHS coach Jeff Evans, who saw his team fall to 2-2 in the district race, thought the 10-point run by MHS was huge in the game.

"Midland High is an excellent team and they exploit your faults," Evans said. "We hung with them for a stretch, but we missed a couple of easy shots and broke down a couple of times on defense when they made that run in the third quarter.

"I'm very proud of the way our kids played. We're 2-2 now (in district) but we're playing really well. We just have to realize that there aren't any easy games in this district. At least, we don't have to come back here (Chap Center) until the playoffs."

Brent Winter came up strong in the fourth period for MHS, hitting eight of his 10 points to become the fourth Bulldog in double figures.

"When the game got close, I guess they decided to go to this team's real Superstar," Winter deadpanned. "They passed me the ball and I guess I'm the secret weapon in this group."

Well, maybe it's the Big Three and a Prankster. Still, MHS got 83 of its 90 points from four starters. Only seven points (five by Randy Gardner and two by Chris Oldham) came off the bench.

Brad Massey and Jeff Johnson each pumped in 19 points for the Eagles while Crisp added 16 and Marcus Eckert 13. AHS and San Angelo have proved this week that 4-5A is loaded with teams that can hang tough. Still, MHS seems to end up on the winning end of the scoreboard.

"I think we are in better shape than other teams and it tells after a couple of quarters," Winter said.

Johnston added, "Abilene High played really well and I don't want to take anything away from that, but teams that go against us are going on adrenalin and that runs out at some point in time."

MHS coach Jack Stephenson was pleased with the effort he saw.

"These guys are thoroughbreds," Stephenson said. "It's not something that comes from me. They just know how to reach down and respond when they need to. The kids are stepping up against some teams that are really playing us hard. Abilene High played very, very well.

"It was a great game and we have the best fans in Texas. I don't think there's any team in the state that consistently out draws us. I don't know what we had here tonight, but it was a great crowd."

The Bulldogs now leave the friendly confines of Chap Center for Odessa Permian Tuesday. A win there will give MHS a perfect first half district record at 6-0. In other words, the defending state champions are right where they want to be — despite some tough efforts they face from opponents with each passing game.

In junior varsity action, MHS took a 69-58 win over AHS as Jimmy Smith had 24, Ryan Hightower 15, Ray Johnson 10, and Scott Winter 10. AHS had Blair Martinez with 12, Jim Salas 12 and Mark Salas 20.

Falcons' cornerback Buchanan looks forward to taking on Moss

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

MINNEAPOLIS — Brian Billick, the Minnesota Vikings' offensive coordinator, was asked this week what he would do if his best cornerback was 5-foot-9 Ray Buchanan and he had to cover 6-5 Randy Moss.

"I don't know," Billick replied. "And if I did, I wouldn't tell you."

Buchanan has no such qualms. He's not only happy to be covering the offensive rookie of the year, he's looking forward to it when his Atlanta Falcons (15-2) face Moss and the Vikings (15-1) Sunday with for a trip to the Super Bowl at stake.

This is how good Moss can be.

Last week, the Arizona Cardinals covered him with Aeneas Williams, one of the best cornerbacks this decade in the NFL. Williams gave Moss trouble, and had a touchdown-saving interception.

Still, Moss finished with four catches for 73 yards and a touchdown.

Buchanan, a Pro Bowler himself, doesn't feel overmatched.

"The Lord has blessed Randy Moss," he said. "The Lord has blessed me, too. He gave me great hands, quick feet, great maneuverability, great awareness."

True enough.

And maybe if Moss were the only challenge for the Atlanta secondary, it would be fine.

But there's also Cris Carter, tight end Andrew Glover and maybe Jake Reed, although his hamstring problems might not allow him to play. If he can't, it'll be second-year man Matthew Hatchette, who has played well himself.

There also are running backs Robert Smith and Leroy Hoard — Smith a quick slasher and Hoard a power back.

That will keep Buchanan from covering Moss full time. In fact, the Vikings would like to get Moss against Michael Booker, who is 6-2 but doesn't have the speed of Buchanan or Moss, who has been timed in less than 4.3 seconds for the 40-yard dash.

But the Vikings say they're wary of whomever Atlanta plays.

"They're good enough so they don't have to try to fool you," coach Dennis Green said. "They play things pretty straight. They feel they can match their man and your man and try to beat you."

That might make the matchups up front most important for the Atlanta defense.

Minnesota has three Pro Bowlers on its offensive line — left tackle Todd Steussie, left guard Randall McDaniel and center Jeff Christy. On the right side, the Vikings have two linemen — David Dixon and Korey Stringer — whose combined weight is nearly 700 pounds.

Against them, the Falcons present a relatively small but very quick front. Tackle Travis Hall, at 300 pounds is the heaviest. Chuck Smith, the best pass rusher, doesn't weigh more than 260.

But he's the key, because putting pressure on Randall Cunningham is the best way to stop an offense that set an NFL record with 560 points during the regular season.

Atlanta's other defensive weapon is simple — offense, led by Jamal Anderson. He carried the ball an NFL record 410 times this season.

"One of the real keys to our success is our ability to control the ball, whether it be running the football or making some conversions on third down, just constantly moving the football," coach Dan Reeves said. "We can't be conservative. We've got to go after them because it's going to be that type of game."

And when the Falcons do give up the ball?

Just leave it to Ray Buchanan.

Vikings' Reed will not play

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — Minnesota receiver Jake Reed won't play in Sunday's NFC championship game because of a hamstring injury.

Reed hurt the hamstring in last weekend's win over Arizona, his first game back after missing five weeks with a back injury.

Second-year receiver Matthew Hatchette, who filled in capably while Reed was out during the regular season, will move into the third receiver role behind Cris Carter and Randy Moss.

Two other Minnesota starters, defensive lineman John Randle and free safety Orlando Thomas, have been limited in practice this week because of injuries. But both are expected to play Sunday against the Atlanta Falcons.

Atlanta's Bomb Squad line desires a little recognition

By Paul Newberry
AP Sports Writer

SUWANEE, Ga. — A few years ago, hardly anyone could recite their names. The Atlanta Falcons' defensive linemen thought a catchy nickname might help.

The Fearsome Foursome already had been taken. Ditto for the Steel Curtain. They settled on the Bomb Squad.

"We had been dropping bombs on people for a long time, so we thought that would be a fitting name," said defensive end Chuck Smith, senior member of the group. "There wasn't much identity here, so we decided to create our own identity."

Still, the nickname hasn't done much to improve their recognition factor. Smith, Lester Archambeau, Shane Dronett and Travis Hall may be regarded collectively as one of the best units in the NFL, but any of them would be a candidate for an American Express commercial.

It could go something like this: "You may not know our names, but we're a major reason our team is playing Sunday for the NFC championship."

Not one of them has ever played in the Pro Bowl. Smith and Hall were overlooked last year, even though they combined for 22 1/2 sacks. Archambeau had a career-high 10 sacks this season and wasn't even mentioned as an alternate.

Even their own coach seems to be in the dark about these guys. Dan Reeves insists on pronouncing Dronett's name "Droe-nay," even though it's actually "Droe-net."

"When the head coach calls your name, you let him call you whatever you want," Archambeau said with a grin.

Hey, why doesn't anyone notice these guys?

"I don't know and I don't care," Archambeau said. "It's all about winning games. It's all about being 15-2. It's not about personal recognition."

The linemen have thoroughly embraced the philosophy of defensive coordinator Rich Brooks, who preaches a "gap control" scheme that requires players to remain in their assigned lanes.

While sacks dropped from 55 last season to 38 this season, the Falcons ranked second in the league in rushing defense, allowing only 75.2 yards per game and 3.3 yards per carry. The most impressive stat: Atlanta has allowed only three runs longer than 20 yards all season.

"Everyone is coming together and maturing as players at the same time," Archambeau said. "We feed off each other real well."

Dronett is the biggest surprise of all. He was released by Atlanta after four games in 1996, then cut by Detroit the following year at the end of preseason.

His career teetering on the brink, Dronett returned to Atlanta only because the team was desperate for depth at the tackle position. This season, he was forced into a starting role when Dan Owens signed with the Lions and the Falcons failed to sign another big-name defensive lineman.

"I'm just lucky to finally get a chance to prove myself," Dronett said. "If I wasn't going to be out there this year, I was pretty much going to be a backup forever."

At times, he has been a dominating presence on the interior of the line, particularly when Hall was plagued by injuries earlier in the season. Dronett had 81 tackles and 6 1/2 sacks and caused four fumbles.

Smith, a first alternate to the Pro Bowl, had another solid season with 8 1/2 sacks, a team-high 36 quarterback pressures and four fumble recoveries. He has put the rest the stereotype that he was too small (6-feet-2, 262 pounds) to play defensive end in the NFL.

"It has to do with heart, leverage and want to do it," Smith said. "Size has nothing to do with anything. We've shown that."

The defensive line was one of Reeves' biggest concerns prior to the season. He felt confident about his starters, but saw no hope of having quality depth.

But John Burrough, a seventh-round pick in 1995, has played well at end, allowing the versatile Archambeau to work some at tackle. Free agents Esera Tuaolo and Antonio Edwards have been surprisingly effective in reserve roles.

"All of those guys are very smart in what they do. They anticipate and know formations. They don't just worry about their job, they worry about the overall picture," Reeves said. "What we thought was a major concern has probably been one of the strengths of our defense."

Now, if they can just get some recognition for it.

"There's not been a better defensive line in the last three years," Smith said, "than us."

Browns get look at expansion list

By Tom Withers
AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND — The list of potential Browns includes eight Pro Bowlers, nine former first-round draft picks and at least one future Hall of Famer.

Cleveland received a list of 130 players Friday from the NFL that the Browns can select from for next month's expansion draft. So Carmen Policy, after reviewing the names, who do you like?

"There appeared to be some players on that list that could come in and start for the Cleveland Browns," the Browns president said.

Could you be more specific?

"I promised on the life of my firstborn that I wouldn't say a word about anybody on the list," Policy said of the pledge he made to Dwight Clark, Cleveland's director of football operations.

Earlier this week the 26 teams not currently playing football were required to submit their lists of the five players they would make available to the Browns for the Feb. 9 expansion draft in Canton. The four teams involved in this weekend's conference championship games will file their lists once their seasons are completed.

Some of the names began trickling out before Friday, when the league released its official list. Among the notable names:

Chicago linebacker Andre Collins; Cincinnati linebacker James Francis; Dallas fullback Daryl Johnston; Green Bay wide receiver Robert Brooks, kick returner Roell Preston, and defensive tackle Reggie White, who is planning to retire; Kansas City offensive tackle Jeff Criswell; New England running back Sedrick Shaw; New Orleans QB Heath Shuler and wideout Qadry Ismail; Oakland wide receiver Desmond Howard; Philadelphia wide receiver Jeff Graham; St. Louis center John Flannery; Seattle center Kevin Glover; Tampa Bay defensive tackle Marcus Jones; and Washington running back Terry Allen, quarterback Gus Frerotte and defensive back Cris Dishman, all former Pro Bowlers.

The list also includes several former Browns, including Baltimore wide receiver Michael Jackson and defensive back Stevon Moore, San Francisco defensive back Antonio Langham and center Randy Kirk, and San Diego tight end Frank Hartley.

AFC: Coaches seem very different

(From 1B)

"I think you always get a little juiced up when you're going against a coach who has had a lot of success, and obviously a coach who has a couple of Super Bowl rings," Shanahan said.

Parcells, who says he barely knows Shanahan, but admires his work, sees that work in how the Broncos conduct themselves.

"The Broncos have won so many games in the last few years, I don't think anything that happens on the field is going to damage their mentality," said Parcells, who with a fourth straight victory in a conference championship game — two came with the Giants and one with the Patriots — would be the first man to coach three franchises to the Super Bowl. "They get behind, they think they are going to come back ... I don't think we're speaking about fragile mentalities at this time of the season."

Both Shanahan and Parcells are known for their leadership. Their backgrounds, however, are quite dissimilar.

Shanahan was a quarterback, Parcells a linebacker. Shanahan grew up in the Midwest and learned the pro game in Denver and San Francisco. Parcells was born and raised in New Jersey and did his apprenticeships on the Atlantic coast.

While Parcells led the Giants to two Super Bowl crowns in his first NFL head coaching stint, Shanahan was 8-12 for the Oakland Raiders and was fired four games into 1989.

Shanahan is well-versed in all kinds of offensive schemes and was the coordinator for the 1994 champion San Francisco 49ers, who had one of the most dynamic attacks the league has seen. He has mixed elements of the West Coast offense with his own tenets and, thanks greatly to such talent as Davis, John Elway, Shannon Sharpe, Ed McCaffrey, Rod Smith and a superb offensive line, put together a nearly unstoppable offense in Denver.

Parcells is a defensive guru, but one who is willing to open things up and gamble on offense. Parcells and longtime defensive coordinator Bill Belichick probably are the most innovative defensive coaches around, and they deploy personnel as well as anyone.

As for the images, well, Parcells knows how to turn on the charm, but you never want to cross him.

"This is a coach who wants to make you a better player, and wants you to do your best," said Pro Bowl receiver Keyshawn Johnson. "He'll keep coming at you to make sure you understand him and make sure you're working hard. But that's one of the things that makes him a great coach to play for. You know he'll give you the best chance to win."

Shanahan doesn't appear so gruff, but don't be misled. Nobody is testing him, either.

"He's tough on you," Broncos veteran safety Tyrone Braxton said of the man some players call "Little General."

"You think of a general who's going to be tough on you, but then he loves you as a person and as a player. He loves his soldiers, and he's going to nurture them, make sure they're ready."

Sounds like a successful approach.

Glenn may be out

DENVER — The New York Jets likely will be without Pro Bowl cornerback Aaron Glenn for Sunday's AFC Championship game.

Coach Bill Parcells said Friday upon his team's arrival in Denver that Glenn, while listed as questionable with an ankle injury, "doesn't look like he will play." Glenn aggravated the ankle during practice this week.

While Glenn's absence could be a significant problem for New York's secondary, replacement Ray Mickens has played very well since Glenn was hurt on Dec. 6 against Seattle. Mickens, who usually plays as the nickel back and guards the slot receiver, was solid as a starter on the corner against Miami, Buffalo, New England and in last Sunday's playoff victory over Jacksonville.

Chamblee leads with Huston close behind

Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

HONOLULU — Even with a one-stroke lead, Brandel Chamblee is likely looking over his shoulder and not at the leaderboard midway through the Sony Open.

That's because among those chasing him is John Huston, the guy who set a course record in winning here last year and who is jokingly accused by other players of being the reason officials decided to toughen the oceanside layout.

In the final Hawaiian Open last year, Huston set a tour record for a 72-hole event with a 28-under-par performance.

At the 36-hole mark of the inaugural Sony, Chamblee was at 6-under-par 134 after shooting a 66 on Friday.

Chamblee took advantage of an early start.

"My short game was really sharp today. It needs to be when it's windy," he said.

"These fairways are the hardest to hit on the tour. They are firm and narrow and with the wind and doglegs, it's hard to keep it in the fairway."

Huston's been kidded about the redesigned par-70, 7,060-yard course, but his focus has been on this week, not what he accomplished a year ago.

"I came in with a goal, and that's to be in contention and try to win it on the last day," he said.

"If I try to match up to last year, it would be too much. My goal this week was to have a chance to win on Sunday. I don't think they made it (course) tougher because of last year's score, but I understand they had that planned."

Of his second straight 68, he said, "It was pretty difficult today. I didn't play that great, but I hung in there."

First-round leader Tommy Tolles recovered from a slow second round start and finished with a 3-over 73, enough for a share of second place with Mike Hurlbert at 135.

Then came Huston, Len Mattiace and Craig Stadler.

Double-majors winner Mark O'Meara and Esteban Toledo, who started the day in second place, were grouped at 3-under 137.

John Daly and Cameron Beckman could have been right up with the leaders, but problems befell them at the par-4, 396-yard 15th.

Daly flew the green and finished with a 7 en route to a 69 for 138, while Beckman hit a tree, landed in a bunker and then four-putted for a 9 and a 72 for 139.

Lopez tied for lead after first round of HealtSouth Inaugural

ORLANDO, Fla. — Nancy Lopez was in tears when she left home for the start of her 22nd season on the LPGA Tour, asking herself why she continues to play with 48 victories, a spot in the Hall of Fame and four kids at home in Georgia.

She got a reminder on Friday with the kind of golf people would expect more from Annika Sorenstam or Se Ri Pak than a 42-year-old mother.

Finally confident with her putter, Lopez made five birdies in a six-hole stretch and tied the course record with a 6-under 66 on Friday to share the first-round lead with Catriona Matthew in the HealthSouth Inaugural.

"I still want to beat the young girls," Lopez said. "It's fun to play with the best players because you realize how well you have to play to win. That's more satisfying to me to do that."

Matthew, a 29-year-old from Scotland who has never won in four years on the LPGA, played without a bogey in her round of 66. Colleen Walker and Japanese rookie Akiko Fukushima were among those at 67, while Karrie Webb shot a 68.

Sorenstam, coming off another great season in which she was player of the year and became the first woman to break 70 for a season scoring average, birdied the last two holes for a 69. Defending champion Kelly Robbins was at 70, while Pak struggled off the tee and had a 74.

The 66 by Lopez and Matthew tied the course record last equaled by Robbins in the final round last year. For Lopez, it was her best round since a 66 in the first round of the Sara Lee Classic last May. She tied for second that week, and is trying to win for the first time since 1997.

"I don't want to be out here just to finish. I want to feel like I can still win," said Lopez, just as competitive as she was 21 years ago when she won five straight tournaments and nine times overall in her rookie year.

With her new Nancy Lopez Golf clubs in the bag and a putting tip earlier this week, Lopez made all seven of her birdies from inside 12 feet, and she saved par with a 5-footer on No. 7. Her only bogey came on the par-3 eighth, her 17th hole of the day, when she blew a chip about 15 feet by the hole and lipped out the par-saving putt.

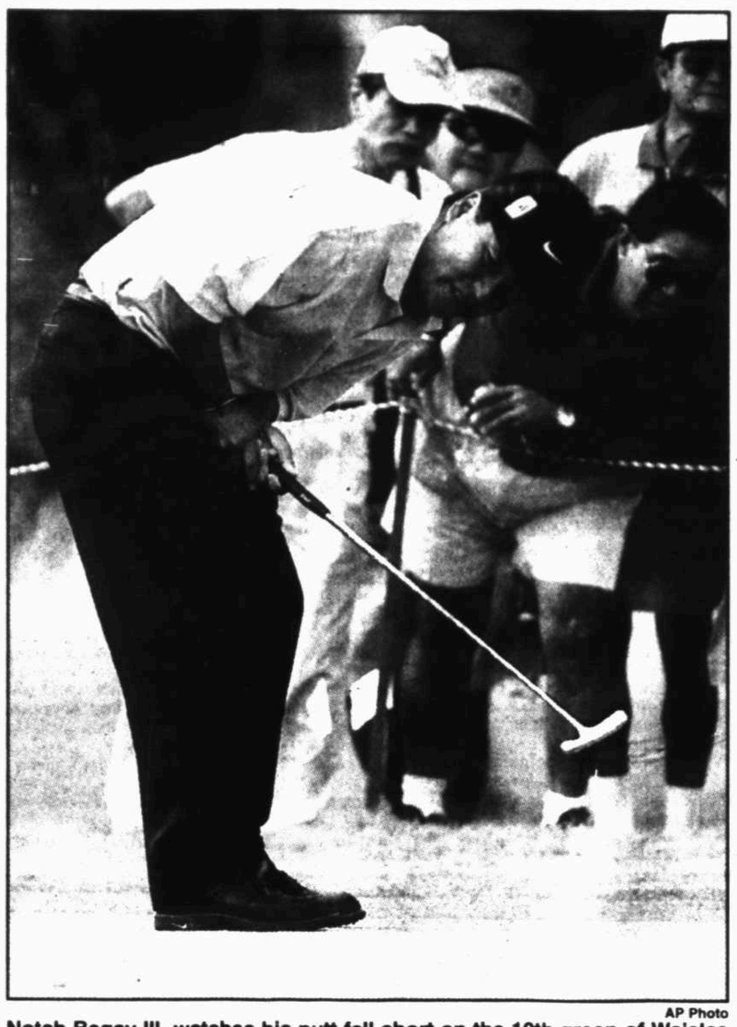

Lopez says she should have won at least once last year, except for her putting. She thought about calling sports psychologist Bob Rotella, if nothing else to hear him say that everything would be fine and that "I should believe I could still putt."

On Monday, she got together with Jane Frost, a teaching pro from Boston. They looked at videotape of Lopez in the late 1970s — nearly every tournament was a Lopez highlight film — and noticed that her routine was not the same.

What she saw was a young Lopez giving her putting line a long, hard look before stroking the ball. She restored that Friday, and says it made a world of difference.

"There was something to that," she said. "I have it written down so I can go to it if I get away from the routine again."

DIVOTS: SnackWells has signed on as a national marketing partner of the LPGA Tour and is now the "official snack of the LPGA." As part of the deal, the company will sample products at tournaments throughout the year. ... Fukushima, one of the most popular female players in Japan, said she got her mental strength from her father. Hi Saaki Fukushima was a catcher for the Tayo Whales and works with the Texas Rangers as a coach during spring training.

Graf wants to capture her 22nd Grand Slam

Associated Press

■ Tennis Roundup

SYDNEY, Australia — Three tough matches and a stomach illness have left Steffi Graf looking weary and hardly a picture of health ahead of the Australian Open title in Melbourne next week.

But the 29-year-old Graf, a winner of 21 Grand Slam titles, believes she has the game to worry the top seeds and the legs to carry her through seven rounds in a fortnight.

"I couldn't ask for any more than where I am right now," Graf said Friday, after losing 6-2, 7-5 to world No. 1 Lindsay Davenport at the Adidas International.

Graf scored tough three-set wins against Serena and Venus Williams on consecutive days before falling to Davenport in thesemis.

Davenport had too much class and accuracy but the loss was probably better for Graf than another three-setter and a final Saturday.

"It's good that I'm not going to do anything tomorrow, I'll relax and regain some energy, and I should be fine for the tournament," said Graf.

While Graf rests, Davenport and No. 2 Martina Hingis will beat each other up for the Sydney title.

"It's gone exceptionally well this week. Looking back a week ago I didn't plan on playing and I've been in hard situations which have turned out well," Graf said.

A week earlier she was forced out of the final of a Hong Kong exhibition tournament because of a stomach illness. She would not elaborate on the exact problem but it clearly affected her more than she acknowledged in Sydney.

"I've felt good about the way I was playing and the way I was getting through them," Graf said. "And it's a lot easier in Melbourne, rather than playing day after day here."

Graf's victories over the Williams sisters took all her fight as they tried to hammer her out of the tournament.

She is coming back after major knee and wrist surgery in the past two years and if she enjoys success in Melbourne, it would stem from her efforts late last year.

Central defeats Permian

Staff Report

SAN ANGELO — A District 4-5A trend continued for the Odessa Permian boys basketball team Friday night, and for the most part it hasn't been a good one.

The Panthers, who defeated crosstown rival Odessa High by two points in overtime to win their 4-5A opener, then lost their next two games to Midland Lee and Abilene Cooper by two points. That two-point trend continued against San Angelo Central, as Permian fell to the Bobcats 64-62.

Central improved to 18-5 overall and 2-2 in district and has thrown its hat into the ring as a contender in 4-5A. Brian Young led the Bobcats with 21 points while Bryan Ward added 15. Ryan Fortenberry led Permian (9-15, 1-3) with 22 points while Roy Williams added 14.

In the Permian-Central girls game, Permian won 63-57 in a battle of winless district teams. Trineka Freeman led Permian (11-11, 1-5) with 18 points while Jennifer Brewer added 17 and Laci Patterson had 10. Lisa Rytter had 17 for Central and Lacey Hohmann added 13.

Both Permian teams will host Midland High Tuesday night in a doubleheader starting at 6 p.m.

TYSON: Ex-champ fights

(From 1B)

pounds, expects Tyson to attack from the opening bell.

"He always comes out fast and tries to make it a short night," said Botha, who has fought less than two full rounds in 19 months. "I'm making myself ready for an early attack.

"My strategy is the way Holyfield fought him. You can't run away from the guy. (Bruce) Seldon, (Frank) Bruno and others closed up, put themselves on the ropes, and Tyson could take his shots. I will tie him up when I have to and not stand still in front of him."

While Botha is a much more credible opponent than Peter McNeeley who didn't last one round in Tyson's first fight after his release from prison in 1995, he has not shown himself to be on the level of a Holyfield despite his 39-1 record.

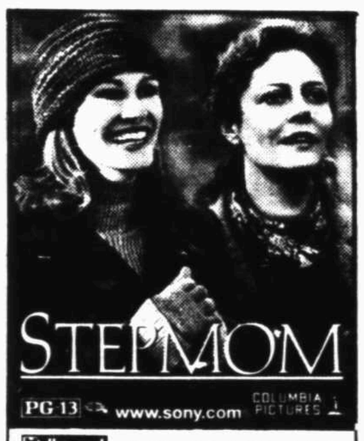

Botha, who lives in Newport Beach, Calif., won the vacant IBF title by outpointing Axel Schulz on Dec. 9, 1995, in Germany, then was stripped because of the positive drug test. His loss came when he was stopped in the 12th round by Michael Moorer in a bid for the IBF title in Las Vegas on Nov. 9, 1996.

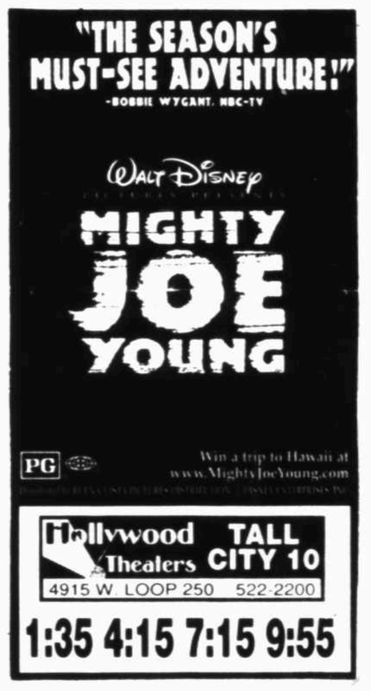

Tyson is not as quick as he was when he was the most feared fighter in the world from 1986 to 1990, but he is quicker than Botha. The 6-foot-2 Botha has scored 24 knockouts, but he doesn't match the punching power of Tyson, who is listed at 5-11 1/2, but appears shorter.

Tyson (45-3, with 39 knockouts) is getting $10 million for the pay-per-view match. Botha's purse is $1.85 million.

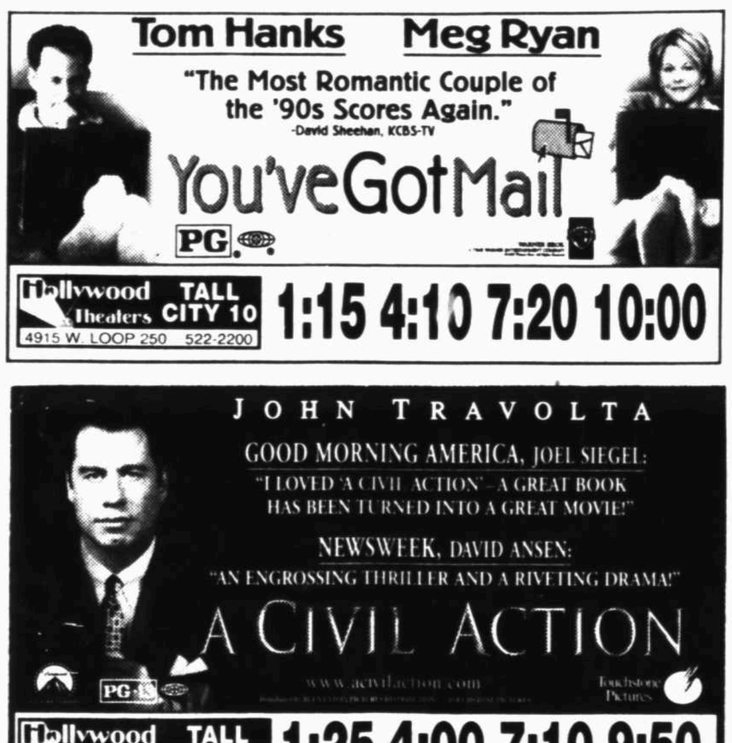

The telecast will begin at 9 p.m. EST, with the Tyson-Botha match to start no later than 11:30 p.m. It will be preceded by a 12-round lightweight bout between Goyo Vargas of Mexico and Ben Tackie of Ghana and an IBF junior lightweight title defense by Roberto Garcia of Oxnard, Calif., against John John Molina of Puerto Rico.

Kids eat up 'Veggie Tales,' videos that are teaching Bible lessons

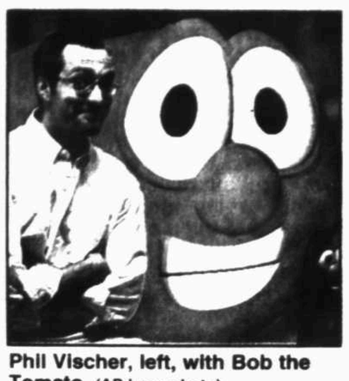

By Debra Hale Shelton
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO — When was the last time you saw a cucumber with bulging cheeks puffing on a tuba? How about a singing tomato? An airborne carrot with yellow pigtails and freckles?

Introducing the main ingredients, er, characters, of "VeggieTales," a series of popular videos that teach children biblical stories and values.

These animated Bible-thumpers are not "The Prince of Egypt," but they are hot — not just with young kids, but among college students who love their flashes of quirky humor.

Midland deacon Jesse Guajardo visits devastated nation, commits to help

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

No amount of personal poverty, anguish or pain could properly prepare Jesse Guajardo for what he witnessed in December while on a humanitarian relief mission to Honduras.

Deacon Jesse Guajardo

Hurricane Mitch might have left the Central American country almost three months ago, but his presence is still felt. An estimated 11,000 were killed. Tens of thousands more were left homeless, and the country's primary industries — bananas and coffee — were devastated to the point that the two products will not be welcomed into the world market for at least another two years.

And there is mud everywhere.

When Guajardo, a permanent deacon at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church, in Midland, visited the country as part of the Dallas-based St. David's Humanitarian Aid Foundation trip, it was the mud that, at least visually, left a lasting impression.

While the physical devastation will remain with Guajardo for many years, it is not the greatest nor longest-lasting memory he will carry with him after his visit.

"The people of Honduras say, 'So we had a hurricane, it was just a little test God gave us. We're going to survive, we're going to be all right.' They lost everything but this is their faith. They are a very devout, and a very faithful people, with a great hope."

The faith of the Hondurans, combined with their obvious suffering and the recollection of his own personal poverty combined together to prompt Guajardo to commit 1999 to helping

The face of a small child in a Honduran nursery, above, conveys the sadness felt by many of the 5 million who were affected by the country's devastation after November's Hurricane Mitch.

A sign in a Honduras "colonia," or neighborhood, indicates the people's faith remains alive. The sign reads, "Christ is Life."

'SWAT Team For Christ' founder relies on ancient form of preaching

By Daniel Arp
Staff Writer

Gerald Sutek, founder of the "SWAT Team for Christ," rolled into town Thursday in a graffiti-covered motor home, carrying a Bible and an accordion.

Sutek is a street preacher — originally from Ohio — who has traveled across continents, published three books and built a Web site to preach his firebrand message of repentance to as many people as he can.

He even has a scrolling electronic billboard on the back of his van, so that people driving behind him at night can read his message.

"You can get saved by approaching my motor home from the north, south, east or west," he said, laughing.

Sutek preaches in the streets, he said, because God commands it.

"Every single preacher in the Bible was a street preacher. It was only in modern times that the street preacher became unpopular. People have adopted this kind of politically correct view."

He realizes his SWAT Team may sound a little militant.

"The Christian is supposed to be militant," he said.

But SWAT? Special Weapons and Tactics?

VINCENT MULI WA KITUKU

On leaving the past behind

Another year is going to oblivion. Perhaps you are reflecting on what the past year brought you. You had dreams that didn't materialize. You stumbled in your spiritual walk. Your health might have been a bother. A loved one passed on suddenly. You were downsized by the company you had been loyal to. Your career was made obsolete by technology. Your soul mate left you. Your child started associating with the wrong crowd. Your business didn't bring the fruits you anticipated.

Kituku

Then you wonder, what does the new year hold? How will you do things differently in order to grow spiritually, professionally and socially? How will you ease the emotional pain suffered from a broken relationship or the loss of a loved one?

Maanzoni, in literal translation, is a "place of the past." Kamba people of Kenya are not traditional nomads. However, after using an area for a period of time, a family moved to another area with unused resources for their livestock and family needs. The move might have been initiated by misfortunes like disease, hunger or war with a neighboring tribe. They took some material from Maanzoni with them to construct new huts and structures to protect their cattle at night. They also used the experience acquired while in Maanzaoni to survive and thrive in the new place.

The past is our social "Maanzoni." All our experiences, knowledge and abilities are valuable tools for the future. But, in order to survive and thrive spiritually, professionally and socially in the coming year, one must consciously leave the downfalls of the past

The Good Book: Isaiah (Part 22 of 52)

Overview:

The prophet Isaiah, proclaimed his message to Judah and Jerusalem from 742 B.C. until 701 B.C. During this period, the northern kingdom of Israel was annexed to the Assyrian empire while the southern kingdom, Judah, lived uneasily in its shadow as a tributary. Chapters 1-39 contain the material attributed to Isaiah. Chapters 40-66 were written some 150 years later during the time of Judah's exile in Babylon. Isaiah attacks the social injustice that is practiced in Judah at his time. If they continue in their practices, they will face the severe consequences of God's wrath. He exhorts the Judeans to place their confidence in God and promises a king who will rule with justice and righteousness.

Theme passage:

Isaiah 9:6-7: "For a child has been born for us, a son given to us; authority rests upon his shoulders; and he is named Wonderful Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. His authority shall grow continually, and there shall be endless peace for the throne of David and his kingdom. He will establish and uphold it with justice and with righteousness from this time onward and forevermore."

HONDURAS: Faith in God undying despite total devastation

(From 1C)

the country in whatever way he can. With the blessings of Rev. Michael Pfeifer, Bishop of the Diocese of San Angelo, Guajardo will spend the year visiting every parish in the diocese appealing for monetary contributions that will go toward providing some relief for the beleaguered nation.

"When we went into the neighborhoods, or colonias, the people were still ankle deep in mud. (Almost two months after the hurricane) people were still shoveling mud out of the streets, out of their homes. The sewage lines were still broken and the water was still contaminated."

Despite the widespread devastation, a crudely-painted sign, little more than a piece of plywood nailed to a tree, remained standing in a Tegucigalpa neighborhood. The sign proclaims, "Cristo es Vida," or "Christ is Life."

"I believe when you are a people of faith and hope, God is merciful," Guajardo said. "In Scripture, you always find that it's the poor that God really takes care of. He takes care of everyone, but in a special way, He takes care of the poor. The Bible says, 'I was hungry, you have me to eat; I was thirsty, you gave me to drink.' It's pointed out really clear that God's main priority, as far as us, is for helping one another."

In his efforts to appeal — or "beg for," as Guajardo calls it — the native Midlander said he will especially call upon the poor. It is the poor who best understand the plight of the Honduran people because while Midland's poor might not have experienced the effects of a hurricane, they at least understand their poverty-stricken situation.

'There are thousands of children everywhere with nothing.'

— Jesse Guajardo, after seeing the devastation in Honduras caused by Hurricane Mitch

And he has evidence to prove that his poor helping the poor theory will work. Last weekend Guajardo spoke to parishioners at Our Lady of San Juan, a parish with many members who live below the mean income line, or are, in fact, at or near poverty level. The result of his appeal? "One hundred percent of the people gave," he said.

The people of the mountain city capital of Tegucigalpa were particularly unprepared for Mitch. Living in the mountains the city rarely, if ever, experiences hurricanes, much less ones that pack 250 mph winds and set up camp over an entire country for many hours. Before Mitch, the capital city had 10 bridges. After the river that runs through the town swelled and deposited water as high as the third floors in many downtown buildings, the raging waters took down seven of those bridges.

The average Honduran wage earner who works on a banana or coffee plantation makes $3 a day. Not quite $100 a month. It is a wage he can no longer count on while the banana and coffee bean crop replenish themselves after Mitch took them down.

"That's their money maker," Guajardo said. "It will be two years before the world market will accept the banana and coffee crops from Honduras again. So you're looking at two years that the campasino cannot make a living for his family."

Over 5 million people live in Honduras. Of those, 90 percent are Catholic and parishes can be as big as 150,000 people — all relying on just one priest. There is no program in Honduras like the one that allows for deacons such as Guajardo at Our Lady of Guadalupe.

"In the refugee camps, we saw children sleeping on the floor," Guajardo said. "You can see the devastation on their faces. The devastation of losing a loved one, of losing their home, of living in a gym, cooking your meals in the street and washing your clothes on a rock."

Priority one for the people of Honduras is seeing that the children are fed everyday.

"The husbands are out trying to find work," Guajardo said. "There are thousands of children everywhere with nothing. I went there with a bag of candy and before I knew it, I had to stop giving it away because there were too many children lined up and I wanted to make sure it was distributed equally. And not only the children lined up for candy, but mothers and other grown ups as well."

Guajardo also met a woman in the streets who was several months pregnant. The woman asked him for money so that she could have her baby in an adequate medical facility. Guajardo gave her $40. In Honduras, a hospital stay for delivery of a newborn costs between $10-12.

Guajardo grew up on a farm on the Rankin Hwy., several miles south of Midland. His father died when he was 6 and, though in his 50s now, he distinctly remembers struggling emotionally and financially after his father's death. He would go to school without the new boots or hair cuts common with other kids. Some days, he would share a tortilla, cut three ways, with his brother and sister while their mother went without. Growing up in these condition has given him a compassion for others.

"A lot of people had told me about Hurricane Mitch and I vaguely remembered seeing it on television, but it didn't affect me at all. When I went down there and traveled through the country, it was devastating."

What he saw, in fact, changed his life. Seeing such physical devastation, and malnourished children running naked through crowded gymnasiums will do that to a person.

"I've never made a commitment to become someone who would actually go out and appeal, or beg for, people. I see it as God calling me to commit myself as a Christian and as a Catholic to help people."

Guajardo plans to return to Honduras for a month this summer. He will take with him money, his family, and hands ready to work on a banana field, on a rooftop or in a ditch installing a water line. Whatever it takes.

"It's going to take awhile, like they said themselves," Guajardo said. "Even doing the best they can, and with a lot of people helping them, it will take awhile."

VEGGIES: Videos teach kids values through animated stories

(From 1C)

Chicago-based Big Idea Productions Inc., has produced 11 videos since 1993 and has sold about 7 million copies — 4 million last year. It also has released three veggie music albums and six books.

These brightly colored vegetables, who blend rhyming rap with silly tunes and a bit of blues, star in the top 10 selections among the Christian Booksellers Association's video best sellers. Among all children's videos, not just religious ones, four "VeggieTales" videos recently ranked in the top 30 sellers, according to market researcher VideoScan Inc.

The tales' hosts are the goodhearted but gullible Larry the Cucumber and his wiser sidekick, big-eyed Bob the Tomato.

Larry and Bob — described by the company's founder, Phil Vischer, as the "Abbott and Costello of the vegetable kingdom" — appear in all of the series videos. Guest stars include the likes of 5-year-old Junior Asparagus; his best friend, Laura the Carrot; Madame Blueberry; and a zucchini portraying Moses.

They retell stories of the Old and New Testaments — from David and Goliath to the Good Samaritan — as a way of teaching basic values such as loving your neighbor and telling the truth.

For example, "Rack, Shack & Benny" retells the story of Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego and the fiery furnace. The story shows everyone else eating as many chocolate bunnies as they want and some getting sick, but Junior Asparagus remembers what his mother taught him and he resists peer pressure.

"We made a rule very early on that we would not portray Jesus as a vegetable," said Vischer, 32, co-creator of "VeggieTales."

He provides the calming voice of Bob the Tomato, while Mike Nawrocki, writer and director at Big Idea, provides Larry the Cucumber's voice.

The videos are aimed at children ages 3 to 9. But with spoofs of Monty Python, Dr. Seuss, "Gilligan's Island" and even "Madame Bovary," the tales also appeal to college students, who have begun holding "VeggieTales" parties.

"It almost has like a cult following among college students," said Tim Burton, manager of Baptist Bookstore in Chattanooga, Tenn., where 1,200 people turned out to watch the "Madame Blueberry" video when it was released last summer. That day, Burton sold about 500 copies of "VeggieTales" videos.

The videos, which run about 30 minutes each, sell for $13 to $15 each.

Like other retailers, the store also offers veggie paraphernalia — toys, stationery, ties, postcards, diaries and more.

Christian Taylor of the Chicago suburb of Wheaton said her 2-year-old son is "addicted" to "VeggieTales."

"He asks me to watch 'VeggieTales' all the time" and dances to the music, she said. Her 8-year-old son understands the videos' value discussions and watches "them over and over again."

The videos' popularity is reflected in the company's growth from a staff of six or so in 1994 to 70 now. Big Idea also has expanded its sales, offering some of the videos in mass-market stores in addition to Christian bookstores.

As for Bob the Tomato, he lets the audience know he's clearly sold on the series when he recites the opening lyrics to the show's theme song.

"If you like to talk to tomatoes, if a squash can make you smile, if you like to waltz with potatoes up and down the produce aisle, have we got a show for you," he sings as Larry the Cucumber makes not-so-lyrical music on his tuba.

KITUKU: Time spent reminiscing is time stolen from the present and from the future behind.

Walking into the future with the downfalls of the past as guides is detrimental. It is like rising from your chair with the intention of going outside, but after standing up, pick up your chair and putting it in front on your path to the door. The chair becomes your obstacle and affects how and when you will reach your destination.

Time spent reminiscing on the past is time stolen from the present and the future. Time spent looking back at a closed window is time not spent looking for the gates of opportunity that might be open. Time spent observing the clouds of life is time not spent enjoying the rainbow behind the clouds and smelling the flowers that are a byproduct of the clouds. Residing in the past, instead of using it as a reference source, curtails our efforts at enriching our lives and those of our loved ones.

The Apostle Paul says, "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus" Philippians (3: 13-14). Paul emphasizes the importance of leaving our "spiritual Maanzoni" behind and "pressing on" toward the purpose God created us for.

The battles of the ending year might have been tough. Isaiah teaches us to re-group as we face the future. "But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint" (Isaiah 40: 31).

Former ministers to help celebrate 45th anniversary at Memorial Christian Church

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

When Clyde Lindsley stood before his First Christian Church congregation one Sunday morning in 1953 and asked for a few volunteers to step forward and help form a second Disciples of Christ church in Midland, 29 people willingly came forwarded and answered the minister's call.

Most of those members were in their 20s, with a scattering of couples in their 30s, remembers Jerry Sides, who still attends Memorial Christian. Sides, along with six other original members and five of the church's six ministers, will gather next weekend to celebrate the church's 45th anniversary.

And with what is now 45 years of history, Memorial Christian has established itself as one of the longest-standing congregations in Midland.

The growth Midland experienced in the mid-1950s necessitated a second Disciples of Christ congregation, but Sides freely admits that while he willingly volunteered, he was somewhat relieved when some of the thirtysomething members at First Christian also volunteered to help form the new church. The older members, Sides said, lent an air of realness to the new church.

And with what is now 45 years of history, Memorial Christian has established itself as one of the longest-standing congregations in Midland. Memorial has come quite a ways since the days in early 1954 when 54 persons met for the church's first service in the Girl Scout Little House, on Wall St. The congregation would later meet at West Elementary before moving into a facility at the corner of Andrews and Cuthbert, site of the church's present grounds. During the church's first year, 135 persons joined Memorial. Of those, 20 Midlanders remain members.

The weekend schedule commemorating the church's anniversary includes a catered dinner Saturday, Jan. 23, at 6 p.m. The dinner will be held at the Family Life Center at First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana, the sponsoring church of Memorial when it was first formed.

Former ministers who have committed to attending the weekend festivities, include Harold Glen Brown (who pastored from 1954-1957), and his wife, Alberta, who now live in Fort Worth; Bob Gartman (1962-73), and his wife, Patty, now of Dallas; John Long (1973-81), and his wife, Donna, now of Horseshoe Bay; Clark Ford (1981-93) and his wife, Mattie Belle, who still reside in Midland, and current minister Jim Rudd (1993-present), and his wife, Janet. Poor health will keep the church's other minister, Clyde Foltz (1957-62), and his wife, Mary Jean, from making a trip from Fort Worth. Dr. Foltz was Memorial's second pastor.

All of the pastors who do attend will speak at the dinner on Saturday night. Reservations for the Saturday dinner can be made by calling 694-5321 by Tuesday.

On Sunday, Jan. 24, there will be a fellowship and refreshment time at 9:30 a.m., in the Fellowship Hall of Memorial Christian. The celebration concludes with a worship service at 10:50 a.m., in the Memorial sanctuary.

All current and former members are invited to attend and bring friends.

Former rockin' drug addict finds God, styles hair

By Becky Bell
Associated Press

LONGVIEW — Appearances are rarely what they seem.

Just ask Butch Pelaia, local hair stylist.

At a towering height of 6 feet 2 inches, and naturally spiral shaped blond hair falling over his shoulders, Pelaia leaves quite a first impression.

The first surprise is that although he goes by Butch, his real name is Ralph Francis Pelaia III. The second is that at his salon, Divine Appointment, he not only styles hair, but also hopes to help shape souls and lift spirits.

A former rock musician, Pelaia said his former lifestyle included sex, drugs and rock and roll, in that order. One day he caught a glimpse of something on television that helped alter his life.

"I remember watching the preacher and as he was talking about Revelations, I was thinking 'this is heavy stuff'" Pelaia said. "I started praying with him, but by the next day I woke up and forgot."

Despite being a musician, Pelaia said music wasn't his focus as he toured through Austin, San Antonio and Los Angeles. He said he eventually called out to God to help him work through his addiction to drugs and the lifestyle associated with it.

"One day I couldn't take the pain, and I couldn't get high enough, or drunk enough. Nothing worked," Pelaia said. "I fell on the ground and asked God to take away the desire to do drugs."

After this prayer, and meeting a special someone in Longview, Pelaia, a former drug addict and dealer, said he felt different.

"I felt the peace of God and I knew he was real," Pelaia said. "I was on the other side for a long time and I did a lot of bad stuff. I was living out of a van when I met a girl here. Today, she's my wife."

If God could give him that kind of peace and release, Pelaia said he thinks God can work wonders in anyone's life.

Deciding to go to beauty school at Kilgore College is something Pelaia said shocked him as much as it did his rock 'n' roll friends. Pelaia said he just felt led to it after he finally graduated from Gilmer High School on the night of his 20th birthday.

Although he debated over whether to call his salon using his last name as a catchy title, Pelaia said he decided to call it Divine Appointment, because it describes what God has done for him. His salon is one of several located inside Salon Network.

While he claims to be no miracle worker, Pelaia said he does try to work with people who come into the salon, not with an "in your face," approach to witnessing, but by listening, and if asked, giving advice.

"People have heard about Jesus. They want to see the difference he has made in my life," Pelaia said. "I try to show them that God is relevant and is real in life today."

Pelaia said psychology courses should be included in beautician training because people tend to unload their troubles on their stylist. Pelaia said he loves his line of work because it puts him in a position to really get to know people and their troubles.

"When I'm working on someone, I can sometimes sense the heaviness," Pelaia said. "In this small little room, in the one to three hours they are here, I try to wash their cares away and make them feel unique and special."

When he is not at work, Pelaia said he enjoys attending Church on the Rock and spending time with his family, his wife Laura, and daughters, Danielle, Brittany and Bethany.

'Today Show' anchor Ann Curry brings world of books to humble mission school

By Thomas Ropp
N.Y. Times News Service

PHOENIX - Sister Martha's miracle arrived in boxes just before Christmas.

The boxes contained thousands of new books. There were so many boxes and so many books that Sister Martha gave up counting.

"The number of books was massive," said Sister Martha. "We could have piled them to the ceiling and back over and over."

Sister Martha is principal of St. Peter's Mission Indian School, near Sacaton in the Gila River Indian Community about 25 miles south of Phoenix.

The books were a gift from Ann Curry and NBC's "Today" show.

Curry, a news anchor for "Today," has never been to Sacaton or St. Peter's Mission School, which includes kindergarten through Grade 8. But she's heard plenty about the school's troubles.

She knew about the bathrooms that didn't work and the broken-down school bus that wouldn't go into reverse and the constant battle the Pimas fight with diabetes. But when she heard the school had no books or, at best, discarded books, that broke her heart.

"It really touched me and several people on the show," Curry said in a phone interview from New York after a recent "Today" show airing. "I'm a working mother with two children, and I know children should have books. Children need books to grow and learn and rise up into their dreams."

Curry obtained the books for St. Peter's Mission through a deal with Scholastic Inc., a Manhattan book manufacturer. Curry read to New York City children in a charity program sponsored by Scholastic. In return, Scholastic donated $15,000 in books to the charity of her choice.

"They are wonderful books that we never could have afforded to purchase," Sister Martha said. "There are step-up books for children first learning to read to books for our eighth-grade levels."

But an unexpected problem accompanied the substantial windfall of new books. The school's library wasn't nearly large enough for them.

"That's when the next miracle happened," Sister Martha said.

The day after the enormous cache of books arrived, the school received a call from a volunteer group in the retirement community of Sun Lakes, 12 miles from the mission.

"They wanted to know if we had any special needs," Sister Martha said. "I told them we could use some bookshelves."

Venelda Neary coordinates volunteer efforts through St. Steven's Church of Sun Lakes. Over the past few years, Neary and other St. Steven's volunteers have primarily helped out teachers at St. Peter's Mission with its large number of students. With two grades in each classroom, the school's teachers find it difficult to give students individual attention.

"They have tremendous needs there," Neary said. "You see those little children, and you fall in love with them. All of us look forward to helping out as often as we possibly can."

Sun Lakes volunteers didn't see the bookshelf request coming. But a group of retired men who golf together jumped at the opportunity to help.

"They donated the money for the materials and built the shelves in just a couple weekends," Sister Martha said.

Another link between the "Today" show and St. Peter's Mission is Joe Garagiola Sr. The former major league catcher and former "Today" show host, who still contributes to the TV show, liv es in Scottsdale. He, like Arizona Cardinals owner Bill Bidwill, has been a major benefactor to the mission. In fact, Sister Martha knows Garagiola's home phone number by heart.

"Sister Martha gave me a call after the books arrived, and she was simply ecstatic," Garagiola said. "It gives you such a terrific feeling to help others."

Sister Martha said the school's librarian is processing the books before they are placed on the shelves.

"Everybody I talk to about Sister Martha's school ends up with tears in their eyes," Curry said.

"Giving is infectious," Garagiola said. "Especially at the mission. I've been calling it Our Lady of Quicksand for years now. Once you go down there, you're in it good."

SAG members agree to act like Mormons

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Screen Actors Guild has agreed to allow the audiovisual arm of the Mormon church to give hiring priority to Mormon actors and those outside the church who pledge to behave like Mormons.

The two-year deal with Deseret Media Productions is awaiting signatures of SAG and officials of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, church spokesman Dale Bills said.

Under the agreement, non-Mormons must be willing "to commit in writing to live their lives in accordance with church standards during the production."

Those standards are not spelled out, but Bills said they would be similar to the honor code signed by all students at church-owned Brigham Young University. Students promise to abstain from coffee, tea, alcohol, tobacco, illicit drugs, sex outside marriage, profanity, shorts above the knee, beards and earrings on men.

"The emphasis is on-set behavior — that's what's going to be visible, therefore that's what's going to be monitored," Bills said. "We're not going to challenge people's privacy."

■ Religion in Brief

Sisters seek quieter grounds

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (AP) — The 15 nuns and four novices at the Monastery of the Poor Clares will soon leave Newport News because it is too noisy.

They are negotiating for 42 acres in New Kent County, according to Rev. James Arsenault, pastor of Our Lady of the Blessed Sacrament in West Point, who has helped them with their search.

The nuns lead contemplative lives, spending most of their day in prayer. Like all nuns, the Poor Clares — whose order was founded by a follower of St. Francis of Assisi in 1212 — take vows of obedience, chastity and poverty. But unlike most others, they also take a vow of enclosure.

They rarely leave the monastery or speak to outsiders, even their families. Typically, one sister relays messages between the public and the rest of the order. But the cloister increasingly has had to fend off the roar of jets from Langley Air Force Base, the blare of radios from a nearby apartment complex and the rumble of trucks in an area that has grown considerably since the monastery opened more than 40 years ago.

Mother Mary Colette Rist, abbess of the five-acre monastery, said in an article that the disturbances make it hard to concentrate.

"It is not a contemplative atmosphere for a monastery," she wrote. "We need a fair amount of property for seclusion to have the monastic environment."

Church laments theft of sacred bones

CHANDLER, Ariz. (AP) — Centuries-old sacred bone fragments and the reliquary box in which they were displayed have disappeared from a Greek Orthodox Church. The pebble-sized fragments date from the third and fourth centuries.

"These are very highly venerated," said the Rev. Philip Armstrong, priest of St. Katherine Greek Orthodox Church. "The relics of saints are considered to be sources for healings, for answered prayers and for the blessing of premises. "It is really a grave loss spiritually to us."

The fragments were gifts from monasteries and other Orthodox Church sources. The oldest is from St. Gerasimos of the third century. Others were from fourth century saints, including St. Demetrios, St. Paraskezi, St. Rafael and St. Haralambos.

SWAT: Sutek to make three more local appearances on swing through Midland word of God and prayer," he said. "Our special tactics are street preaching and public evangelism."

Sutek's beliefs have taken him around the world three times. His pastorship at a church in Northern Ireland years ago served as a stepping-stone to the rest of Europe and beyond: England, Scotland, the Red Square in Moscow, Canada, Mexico, the Philippines. Sutek has preached in 15 different countries.

"We're trying to put the rest of the world on the defensive rather than them putting us on the defensive," Sutek said. "We're very much offensive in our approach."

So far, Sutek has preached at Centennial Plaza and the corner of Illinois and Carrizo.

Sutek isn't spending his whole visit on the streets, though. He also preached at a few area churches and appeared on the Prime Time Christian Network Friday evening.

Ron Creed, a local carpenter, was responsible for bringing Sutek to the Tall City.

Creed ordered Sutek's book, "I Am Not Ashamed," after seeing an ad in a religious tract. While trying to locate Sutek's other books, Creed ended up talking to Sutek himself on the phone one day and inviting him to Midland.

"All of the people in church on Sunday have heard the Gospel, but it's the people who are not in church who need to hear it," Creed said. "He reaches the people who aren't in the churches."

Sutek will be preaching at the Lumberyard Church, 7 p.m. today; at the Westside Baptist Church, 11 a.m. Sunday, and at the Victory Family Christian Center at 6 p.m., Sunday. For more information, call 520-8414.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll have: 5-Dymanic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Jan. 16, 1999:
You are unusually clear and direct this year. Others find it easy to understand what you want. Your personality becomes stronger. In many ways you are unusually innovative and independent. Avoid becoming self-centered; be sensitive to others' needs. You could be so charismatic that others go along with you. If you are single, a very special relationship is possible in late spring and summer. This could be it, but you will need more time to check it out. If attached, your relationship will go through changes and become a lot clearer. Another CAPRICORN enjoys brainstorming with you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Maintain a high level of consciousness when dealing with others. You might be more aware of your influence than they are. Light up another's life; make that extra effort. Take time to deal with a work/image-related matter. Bring family and friends together. Tonight: All eyes turn to you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Reach out for others at a distance. Make that additional effort to visit a friend who might not be right around the corner. They'll appreciate your caring. Invite a loved one or a special friend to come along and join you. Try something totally new. Tonight: Time for some entertainment and escape.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Much is going on between you and another. Discussions involve the near future and what you expect emotionally. Listen to the drumbeats, consider options. Caring abounds once you move past a somewhat negative feeling. Dissolve boundaries. Tonight: A candlelit night.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ You're much sought-after as popularity peaks. Listen to what others think. Invitations arrive in stunning magnitude. Recognize your limits, though you might want to do it all. A younger friend makes a point of letting you know how important you are. Tonight: Throw a last-minute party!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ You get caught up in a project, hobby or favorite pastime. As you juggle activities, remember that it is the weekend. Make time for fun and an easy chat while you do something totally different. Including a friend helps you bond on another level. Tonight: Soak in a hot tub.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ A child or loved one needs your attention. You could be pleasantly surprised by the possibilities available to you. Together, you enjoy great conversation. Talk up a storm. Be more childlike. Open up to a special relationship. Tonight: Don't hold yourself back.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Take time with family. It might be time for a mid-winter project or perhaps just lolling around. Even if you opt for a lazy day, communications flow. Return calls, catch up on news. Don't be surprised if someone drops in on you out of the blue. Tonight: Don't stray far from the nest!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Make time to clear out errands, visit with friends over a good meal and do some shopping. You are invigorated by another's news. Connect with a brother, sister or neighbor who wants to chat. You could feel like a communications satellite right now! Tonight: Out and about.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Financial brainstorming draws superb results. Even if you think you have come up with an excellent price, you might be surprised by doing some comparison shopping. Don't forget to look on the Internet. Take time with a friend; you might want to treat them. Tonight: Enjoy yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Today your word counts. You might think it's about time! Express opinions, feelings and desires. Expect to be heard; you will notice you get that result. Take time to organize your day. Clear out errands; you'll want plenty of time to enjoy yourself. Tonight: Your call!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Take a deep breath and slow down. Your inner voice comes through, especially about money and a key partnership. Evaluate a change in heart and be willing to take action. Think before you take another into your confidence. Perhaps the less said, the better! Tonight: Add some additional allure.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Celebration seems right on. Enjoy yourself and make the most of the moment. Accept an invitation; you need to be with others. Examine long-term goals before spontaneously committing to a plan that could take you in another direction. Tonight: The center of fun!

Oh, shock — Jerry files for divorce

LONDON — Mick Jagger once lamented that he "can't get no satisfaction" but Jerry Hall's decision Friday to file divorce papers against him apparently centered on the fact that the Rolling Stones star has been getting way too much.

In what could be the most expensive divorce in British history, Ms. Hall's lawyers announced Friday that she has initiated proceedings to end their tumultuous eight-year marriage.

The Texas-born model has put up with years of Jagger's well-publicized infidelities but apparently considered the latest reports that he had impregnated a Brazilian model too much to bear.

Nobody really knows: She wasn't talking.

The law firm Mishcon de Reya said it had filed divorce papers on her behalf.

NEW YORK — Lincoln Center has scheduled 400 events to honor Duke Ellington this year, the 100th anniversary of his birth, and you don't have to take the A train to get to all of them.

Lincoln Center has 400 events scheduled to honor Duke Ellington.

Among the events honoring Ellington this year include a PBS program, a book, a live CD and performances in Central Park and on subway platforms.

The Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra also plans to celebrate with a five-month tour of Europe, Australia and Asia.

The first event, "Happy Reunion — Memories of Duke," reminiscences by 17 musicians who were in Ellington's band before his death in 1974, followed a news conference Thursday.

Trumpeter Wynton Marsalis, artistic director of the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra, played Ellington's "Portrait of Louis Armstrong" with the Hall High School Concert Jazz Band of West Hartford, Conn.

"There's nothing more to say about Duke," Marsalis said. "Just play his music and it's going to be all apparent."

HYDERABAD, India — A chorus of Hindu chants echoed as Italian filmmaker Bernardo Bertolucci was honored Friday with the first lifetime achievement award at India's annual film festival.

Bertolucci, 58, whose work includes "The Last Emperor" and "Last Tango in Paris," received a gold medal and certificate from India's information minister. A screening of Bertolucci's new film, "Besieged," followed.

Bertolucci was honored for "enriching world cinema as a master craftsman, an incisive social analyst and chronicler of our times."

"While making films, I was exposed to different cultures which always fascinate me," Bertolucci said. "This endeavor is a search of pleasure for me."

LOS ANGELES — Steven Spielberg will join the ranks of Cecil B. DeMille, Walt Disney and Alfred Hitchcock when he receives the Producers Guild of America's Milestone Award on March 3.

Steven Spielberg will receive Producers Guild of America's Milestone Award.

The award goes to major contributors to film and television.

"Steven has produced some of the most critically acclaimed and top-grossing films in the history of cinema," PGA president Thom Mount said.

Spielberg's movies include "Saving Private Ryan," "E.T.," "Jurassic Park" and "Schindler's List."

LOS ANGELES — Like "The Rugrats," another popular kids cartoon is coming to the big screen.

In March, Disney plans to release "Doug's 1st Movie," a low-budget feature based on the "Doug" series seen on Nickelodeon and ABC.

"Doug's 1st Movie" marks a rare departure for Disney from its higher-quality animated features that cost more than $100 million to produce.

"Doug's 1st Movie" was made by the Disney subsidiary that creates the "Doug" show.

In the movie, 12 1/2-year-old Doug Funnie and his best friend discover that the mythical monster of Lucky Duck Lake is real. Doug is torn between saving the monster and his desire to take his secret crush, Patti Mayonnaise, to the school dance.

LONDON — Playwright Alan Bennett says he turned down an honorary degree from Oxford to protest the university's acceptance of money from that "bully" Rupert Murdoch.

In his diary of 1998, published in the London Review of Books, Bennett said he was offered the honor in November. He said he refused it because he believed Oxford was wrong in 1992 to accept about $5 million from Murdoch to endow a chair in language and communication.

Murdoch is probably best known in Britain as the owner of The Sun, the biggest-selling tabloid newspaper. Like Bennett, the media mogul is an Oxford graduate.

"I'm aware of the arguments about bad money being put to good uses, but I still think that Murdoch's is not a name with which Oxford should have associated itself," wrote Bennett, the author of "Habeas Corpus" and "The Madness of George III." "Murdoch is a bully and should be stood up to publicly."

Texas man convicted in death of mother of quadruplets

Pat Leisner
Associated Press

SARASOTA, Fla. — A Texas man was convicted Friday of his role in the brutal murder of a 35-year-old woman, whose quadruplets were found unharmed near her body on her kitchen floor.

Daniel Rocha hung his shoulders, tilted his head and sighed when the jury returned a verdict of guilty to first-degree murder and a lesser charge of conspiracy to commit murder in the third degree.

Defense attorney Jack McGill asked for a delay in sentencing, saying the verdicts were inconsistent.

Sentencing was scheduled for late February, but no date was set.

Sheila Bellush was shot in the face and stabbed twice in the neck on Nov. 7, 1997, two months after she moved to Sarasota from Texas with her six children.

Widower Jamie Bellush hugged Assistant State Attorney Charlie Roberts and cried aloud after jurors left the courtroom. They deliberated six hours following the weeklong trial.

Roberts had argued earlier in the day that Rocha is just as responsible as the hit man who left Mrs. Bellush bleeding to death.

"Sheila Bellush thought she was safe moving away from Texas to Florida. That didn't save her," he said in closing arguments.

Prosecutors said Rocha was the middle man in the plot hatched in San Antonio to kill Mrs. Bellush, who was trying to start over in Florida with the then 2-year-old quadruplets and two older daughters from a previous marriage.

"Wouldn't Frankie, Courtney, Timmy, Joey, Stevie and Darryl's mother still be alive today if it weren't for that man over there," Roberts asked, pointing to the defense table where Rocha sat without any visible expression.

Rocha "was the driving force. This was his idea ... he pulled others into it," he said.

Rocha's friend, Samuel Gonzales, recruited his cousin Jose Luis Del Toro, who borrowed a .45-caliber handgun and drove from Texas to Sarasota. He then contacted Gonzales, saying he broke into Mrs. Bellush's home and killed her, Gonzales testified.

Prosecutors contend the plot was hatched after Mrs. Bellush's wealthy ex-husband, Allen Blackthorne, told Rocha that she was abusing their two girls. Mrs. Bellush was granted custody of the girls after a bitter divorce and they were adopted by her second husband, Jamie Bellush.

Assistant District Attorney Charlie Roberts, center, speaks with members of the media following the guilty of first degree murder verdict of Daniel Rocha in the Sheila Bellush murder case Friday in Sarasota, Fla. Jamie Bellush, husband of Sheila, bows his head at left. At left are Don and Gene Smith, parents of Sheila Bellush.

Blackthorne has not been charged with a crime and has denied any involvement in any plot.

Just before the jury went into deliberations, the judge responded to a note sent by a juror during the trial about why Blackthorne had not been arrested.

"It is not the responsibility of anybody involved in this trial to make the decision of whether or not Allen Blackthorne should be arrested," she said, and admonished jurors not to consider it.

McGill, who rested his case Friday without calling any witnesses, argued that the most Rocha was involved in was conspiracy to commit aggravated battery.

"This is about how someone gets pulled along and dragged into something when they don't know all the facts," McGill said in his closing arguments.

While defense attorneys argued that Rocha intended only for Mrs. Bellush to be beaten up, not killed, Roberts said Del Toro was offered $14,000 to kill her. Included in the offer was an incentive of $10,000 if Blackthorne regained custody of his two daughters.

"For $14,000, scare? It doesn't make sense. This was a conspiracy to commit murder. No question, this was murder in the first degree," Roberts said.

"Going to the residence with a gun, covering it with a towel, shooting a defenseless woman in the face, taking a knife and butchering her — that is premeditation," he said.

Del Toro "knew he was given the green light to kill Sheila Bellush and ... he made it happen," Roberts said. "(Rocha) all but gave him the key to the house by giving him the address 1,200 miles away."

Rocha was motivated by greed, envy and the lure of a part ownership in a golf resort Blackthorne promised to build when Rocha made arrangements to hire someone to harm Mrs. Bellush as a favor to his golfing pal, Roberts has said.

But McGill countered Friday that "no knife, no gun was ever discussed in the presence of Daniel Rocha."

Gonzales, who was arrested in San Antonio 10 days after the killing, pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit murder and struck a deal for his testimony in return for a 19-year prison term.

Del Toro is jailed in Mexico and is fighting extradition.

After the slaying, Bellush moved to Sussex County, N.J., with the quadruplets, now 3, and his 14-year-old adopted daughter, Stevie. His other adopted daughter, Darryl, 13, lives with a maternal aunt in Oregon.

For those who can't make it to the Capitol, Bush inaugural available on Internet

AUSTIN (AP) — Next week's inauguration of Gov. George W. Bush is going high tech. Organizers said Friday the ceremonies would be available on the Internet for Texans who can't make it to the Capitol.

The web site will offer a live broadcast of the swearing-in ceremony, along with other inaugural information — everything from colorful stories about past governors to such trivia as which was the smallest parade.

"In keeping with the dramatic growth of technology in our state, we have made it possible for Texans everywhere to have access to this historic event," said Allan Shivers Jr., chairman of the Texas Inaugural Committee.

Bush and his fellow Republican, Lt. Gov.-elect Rick Perry, will take their oaths of office at noon Tuesday, the peak of two days of activities beginning Monday at a Martin Luther King Jr. tribute in Houston and ending with four inaugural balls Tuesday night.

About 20,000 people are expected in person, but many more could witnesses it via the Internet, said Mindy Tucker, spokeswoman for the inaugural committee.

She said the inaugural committee has sent letters to school districts across the state telling teachers of the availability of the web site and Tuesday's broadcast.

"It is our hope that this site can be a learning tool for anyone wanting to know more about the inauguration of these two important officers of our state," Shivers said.

The inaugural website is www.govenor.state.tx.us/inauguration.html.

The site offers a history lesson, lists of former governors and lieutenant governors, an audio version of several governors and lieutenant governors taking their oaths of office, even information about the dresses worn by Texas first ladies.

Some of the unusual bits of inaugural trivia from the web site:

■ The shortest parade had seven participants: Gov. S.W.T. Langham, his wife and their five children. In 1903, they departed their downtown hotel and strolled to the Governor's Mansion.

■ In 1939, W. Lee "Pappy" O'Daniel, a showman who'd campaigned with a band called the Hillbilly Boys, had at least 100 marching bands in his parade. He invited all Texans to join him in taking the oath at the University of Texas' Memorial Stadium, and between 50,000 and 75,000 folks did.

■ In 1975, the inaugural parade celebrating the first four-year term for the governor and lieutenant governor was canceled. With the nation in the throes of an oil crisis, Gov. Dolph Briscoe decided it wouldn't be economical.

Two fugitives caught at Texas-Mexico border

LAREDO (AP) — Two young men accused of a murderous crime spree across several states were apprehended Friday at the Texas-Mexico border.

Timothy Taylor and Michael Taylor, each 20 years old and unrelated, were detained by U.S. Customs officers as they tried to return from Mexico, FBI special agent Greg Melzer said Friday night in Laredo.

"They had gone into Mexico and were deported back out because they didn't have proper ID," Melzer said. "When they were on their way back in, Customs on this side got them."

He said they were being held on bank robbery charges from Iowa.

Police had been hunting for the Taylors since Jan. 7, when they allegedly shot a Shreveport, La., car salesman who had taken them on a test drive and left him to die in rural DeSoto Parish.

The next day, they held up a bank in tiny Lamoni, Iowa, and shot Police Chief Dale Killpack as he chased them into Missouri. Killpack was injured but is expected to recover, the FBI said.

The last confirmed sighting of the fugitives was about noon Monday in Oklahoma City.

A friend has told police that the Taylors had watched and discussed the movie "Natural Born Killers."

"They said something like, 'We ought to do that.' I think their words to this person were, 'We ought to go out in a blaze of glory,'" Capt. Judson Rives of the DeSoto Parish Sheriff's Office said Friday.

Rives said he doesn't know how much they got in the bank robbery. "I've heard everything from $100,000 to a million dollars. That's too wide a range to quote to anybody," he said.

Car salesman Chester Howell, 56, was to be buried Saturday after a funeral at St. John Berchmans Cathedral in Shreveport.

The Taylors' case is the second in Louisiana in which Oliver Stone's violent "Natural Born Killers" has come up.

In 1995, a young couple from Oklahoma, Benjamin Darras and Sarah Edmondson, went on a two-state crime spree. A Mississippi man was killed and a Ponchatoula woman was paralyzed by gunfire. Darras was eventually sentenced to life in prison for the Mississippi killing. Edmondson is serving a 35-year sentence in Louisiana for shooting Patsy Byers, the paralyzed store clerk who later died of cancer.

Edmondson and Darras said they went on their criminal rampage after watching "Natural Born Killers" — which also involves a young man and woman on a killing spree — several times. Their claim resulted in a pending lawsuit being filed by Byers' family against director Oliver Stone and others involved in the movie. The movie makers have denied the lawsuit was intended to incite violence and are pushing for dismissal of the lawsuit.

McTeer: Computers helping U.S. economy

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — It is too soon to measure the full magnitude of Brazil's financial crisis and its impact on the rest of Latin America, Dallas Federal Reserve Bank president Robert McTeer Jr. said Friday.

"I think it is too early to know whether it is going to be as bad as people thought," said McTeer, adding that it appears the market's reaction to Brazil's problem has been "a little bit milder" than anticipated.

McTeer, speaking at a San Antonio Chamber of Commerce conference, said he does not envision any direct U.S. aid for Brazil.

"We want to be as helpful as we can be," he said, but McTeer said he believes any financial aid would come through international organizations such as the International Monetary Fund.

The Brazilian currency tumbled Thursday after that country's Central Bank refused to prop up the faltering real in world financial markets. The move was taken to try to stop Brazil's financial turmoil.

Concerns have been raised about whether the Brazilian crisis could hurt the strong U.S. economy.

As the new year begins, the U.S. economy is off to a strong start and the positive impact of new computer technology is a key reason, McTeer said.

"Computers and computer chips and doing much more for us than declining in price," McTeer said. "Our economy is being driven forward by a big technological revolution."

Changes brought on by innovations in computers and biotechnology have improved the U.S. standard of living in ways that cannot totally be measured by gauges such as the gross national product, McTeer said.

For example, it is difficult to quantify productivity growth brought on by electronic mail replacing traditional mail or by new medical procedures that shorten hospital stays.

"This dynamic economy of ours is making us better off in ways that are being missed by the numbers," McTeer said, adding, "But the numbers are doing very well."

Another factor in the strong U.S. economy, McTeer said, is a global economy that is helping to hold down prices.

"The economy has been doing better than just about anybody thinks is possible," McTeer said.

In Texas, though the economy has slowed in the past year primarily because of sagging oil prices and a slump in computer chip prices, the state is still about equal to the nation as a whole, he said.

Job growth in Texas was 4.6 percent in 1997. Then it was only 2.5 percent in 1998, but that is closer to the national job growth figure, McTeer said.

"Texas has really been growing since 1987 and has been doing very well," he told the Chamber of Commerce.

Court rules "God Pod" issue must go to trial

FORT WORTH, (AP) — Whether Sheriff David Williams can set aside a section of the Tarrant County Jail for Christian education must be decided at a trial, an appeals court has ruled.

The 2nd Court of Criminal Appeals' justices voted 3-0 Thursday that the program, nicknamed the "God Pod," does not violate the religious freedom of two inmates who challenged it.

But the justices also said there is so much conflicting evidence about the program's role that a trial is necessary to determine whether the unit is a form of government favoritism for a certain religion.

The program, which began in 1992, provides daily instruction in "orthodox" Christian principals for certain groups of inmates, the appeals court stated.

Former inmates Michael Lee Huff, a Jehovah's Witness, and Ruth Maree Lara, who is Jewish, sued the sheriff in 1993, saying the "God Pod" violated their civil rights and the religious freedom provisions of the U.S. and Texas constitutions.

In January 1997, a state district judge ruled that Tarrant County jail inmates should be allowed to live in the "God Pod."

People on both sides of the issue said the appeals court ruling pleased them.

"It should not have taken a trip to the Court of Appeals to alert Tarrant County Sheriff David Williams to this fundamental principle of constitutional law," said Richard Rohan, a member of the Board of Directors of the American Jewish Congress Southwest Region and a lawyer for the plaintiff.

Assistant District attorney Marvin Collins said, "We haven't lost anything."

Collins did not rule out a settlement but said, "I'm not sure what the incentive would be for the Sheriff's Department to change their position."

❷ Sell It In 10 - Advertise anything on wheels for 10 days. In the unlikely event that it doesn't sell, we'll run it for 10 more days FREE! If it still doesn't sell, we'll run it 10 more days FREE if you drop the price 10%. 4 LINES 10 DAYS FREE $20.50

You'll get 4 lines to describe your vehicle (that's about 18 words, including the price). If you would like more information in your ad, each additional line is only $5.

All of our specials are for private, non-commercial individuals only and some specials require pre-payment, some do not. One item per ad please. Call 682-6222 for complete details.

PLACING AN AD:

Call 682-6222, Monday through Friday, from 8a.m. – 6p.m.

A friendly Advertising Consultant will help you word and schedule your ad for best results.

HOW TO WRITE A CLASSIFIED AD THAT WORKS!

❶ A Benefit Headline - Answer the buyer's question, "What's in it for me?" Select the main benefit of the item you are selling and write a compelling headline.

❷ The Body Copy - Make sure your information is clear, concise and complete. Stress benefits. Avoid abbreviations whenever possible.

❸ The Price - Don't be afraid to quote your price. 52% of readers won't respond to an ad that does not include a price.

❹ Call to Action - Urge readers to buy now.
