THE SDN COLUMN

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "A happy persons not only learns and earns – he yearns."

Parents who experience the empty nest syndrome – especially when the kids go off to college – used to get proficient at letter writing.

Now, to stay in touch, parents often have to get a computer and learn how to communicate by e-mail.

Cogdell Hospital's Wilma Dillard, who requires at least one belly laugh a day, brought in a letter sent to a son from a red-neck mother.

"Dear Son,

"I am writing this letter slow because I know you can't read fast. We don't live where we did when you left home.

"Your dad read in the newspaper that most accidents happen within 20 miles from your home, so we moved. I won't be able to send you our address because the last family that lived here took the house numbers when they moved so that they wouldn't have to change their address.

"This place is really nice. It even has a washing machine. I'm not sure it works so well though, because last week I put a load in and pulled the chain and haven't seen them since.

"The weather isn't bad here. It only rained twice last week; the first time for three days and the second time for four days.

"About the coat you wanted me to send you, your Uncle Stanley said it would be too heavy to send in the mail with the buttons on, so we cut them off and put them in the pockets.

"John locked his keys in the car yesterday. We were really worried because it took him two hours to get me and your father out.

"Your sister had a baby this morning but I haven't found out what it is yet so I don't know if you're an aunt or an uncle. The baby looks just like your cousin, though.

"Uncle Ted fell in a whiskey vat last week. Some men tried to pull him out, but he fought them off playfully and drowned. We had him cremated and he burned for three days.

"Three of your friends went off a bridge in a pickup truck. Ralph was driving. He rolled down the window and swam to safety. Your other two friends were in back. They drowned because they couldn't get the tailgate down.

"There isn't much more news at this time. Nothing much has happened.'

"Love, Mom."

FESTIVAL ENTERTAINER – Kazzi Shae, 1999 Miss Teen West Texas, will be among the entertainers at the White Buffalo Festival on Oct. 2. She was nominated for the 1998 Top Female Vocalist and won the Top Teen Artist in Grapevine. She won the 1999 national yodeling championship silver medal in Missouri, and has been invited to sing at the Olympics in 2000 in Sidney, Australia. (Contributed Photo)

Vote set on royalties

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans and a handful of Democrats broke a logjam today on a proposal that would block the Interior Department from revamping the way it collects royalties on oil and gas taken from federal land.

The Senate voted 60-39 to limit debate, clearing the way for a vote on an amendment by Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, that would prevent the rule change for another year.

With debate concluded, Mrs. Hutchison said she was certain of the majority needed to put the provision into a $14 billion Interior spending bill.

Oil-state senators argued that Interior's proposal would force the oil companies to pay millions of dollars more in royalty fees for oil pumped from federal land or offshore at a time when the industry already is facing economic problems.

But Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., had blocked consideration of the Hutchison proposal for more than a week, threatening to filibuster the bill unless the amendment was withdrawn. Under Senate rules it takes 60 votes to limit debate.

Boxer had argued that oil companies have for years engaged "in a scheme to essentially rob the treasury of millions upon millions of dollars" by undervaluing the federal oil.

"This allows the oil companies to continue this cozy arrangement where they decide what they're going to pay the federal government," said Boxer.

The government collects about $1.2 billion a year from the 12.5 percent royalty fee. The Interior Department has estimated that oil companies are underpaying by as much as $68 million a year.

Hermleigh set for celebration

Hermleigh High School will celebrate its 1999 homecoming this weekend. The Cardinals will take on the Trent Gorillas at 7:30 p.m. Friday to highlight activities.

The homecoming queen and football hero will be announced during halftime. Queen candidates are Brandy Wood, Kendra Dacus, Randi K. Herrington and Tracey Luna.

Homecoming registration begins at 6 p.m. Friday. Saturday's registration begins at 9 a.m. and the noon meal will be served in the cafeteria.

The business meeting will begin at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Deliberation slows in dragging death

BRYAN (AP) — Jurors deliberating punishment for a white supremacist in the dragging death of a black East Texas man said today they couldn't reach a conclusion on the last of three questions that could result in a death sentence.

State District Judge Monte Lawlis told the jury, in its second day of deliberations over the fate of Lawrence Russell Brewer, to keep talking.

"Please continue your deliberations unless you tell me unequivocally you are unable to answer Issue Three according to the instructions," Lawlis told them in a note.

The 32-year-old Brewer could be sentenced either to a life term or death by lethal injection.

The jurors were considering three questions: whether Brewer is a future danger to society, whether he intended to kill Byrd and whether any mitigating circumstances about him should be considered.

In order to get to the third question, they would have to answer "yes" to the first two. A "no" response to the third would sentence Brewer to lethal injection.

Any other answers and Brewer would go to prison for life. Jurors were not told a life term would mean at least 40 years in prison without chance of parole.

Lawlis suspended discussions Wednesday night after 11 hours. The panel resumed this morning.

About an hour into their talks today, jurors asked to see photos of Brewer's tattoos, which include a burning cross, SS lightning bolts and Ku Klux Klan symbols. They also wanted a photo of Brewer with his family.

Brewer, one of three white supremacists accused in the June 7, 1998, killing of James Byrd Jr., was convicted by the same jury Monday. Byrd, 49, was secured to the bumper of a pickup truck by a 24-foot logging chain and dragged over three miles to his death along a bumpy country road northeast of Jasper.

If sentenced to death, Brewer would join prison pal John William King, 24, on death row. King was convicted and condemned in February, and a third man, Shawn Allen Berry, also 24, is awaiting a trial in late October.

Rescuers battle clock

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — As cries for help increasingly turned to ominous silence, rescue teams battled the clock today to save nearly 2,000 trapped and missing victims of Taiwan's devastating earthquake.

More than 60 hours after the earthquake struck, at least 2,103 people were known dead, 7,800 injured and 1,844 still unaccounted for — the vast majority of whom were believed buried under rubble and landslides, the Disaster Management Center said.

The center said 2,268 people had been rescued, many of them extracted from some 6,000 completely destroyed housing units across the island.

Local newspapers said several hundred thousand people were homeless but this could not be officially confirmed.

The Tuesday temblor had a preliminary magnitude of 7.6 — about the same strength as the devastating tremor that killed more than 15,000 people in Turkey last month.

Although many people were still trapped in buildings, Wednesday's rescue efforts yielded only nine who were safely brought out, officials said.

And in some isolated, mountain villages of central Taiwan, the worst-hit region of the island, rescue efforts have just begun.

Rescuers had to walk for hours through rugged terrain Wednesday to reach the village of Kuoshin, where a massive flow of mud and rock off three hillsides killed 60 villagers and buried 40 others, the China Times reported.

Only 50 people, a third of the population, are known to have survived as the hills virtually collapsed and filled up a valley, the newspaper said.

One mother, identified as Mrs. Chang, said she and her two daughters were carried along on the slide for a half-mile "as if sitting on a magic carpet."

The village is located in Nantou County, where 830 people were killed, while more than 970 died in neighboring Taichung County.

BCD agrees to sponsorship

The Board of County Development on Wednesday approved a request to sponsor the Big Country Resource Conservation & Development Area, Inc.

The sponsorship includes a $25 contribution to the organization that funds various projects within the area through grant searches.

Through those funds, $1,915,800 in actual private, state and federal grant funds and products were brought into the Area.

Forty-five area projects were completed last year including securing equipment for emergency services and education; healthcare products for the economically disadvantaged; leadership training and water quality improvement.

The BCD has supported the Big Country RC&D Area for several years.

In other action, board members also voted unanimously to pay a $76.22 reimbursement to the Development Corporation of Snyder for BCD's pro rata share of a membership fee to the Texas Midwest Community Network.

The TMCN is a regional organization made up of several counties in this area with the purpose of promoting tourism and industrial development within the region.

The DCOS pays half of the membership fee and the remaining amount is pro rated among the county, Cogdell Memorial Hospital, Western Texas College and Snyder Chamber of Commerce.

The board also approved the minutes from its last meeting as well as the financial statements and one bill for payment.

ASK US

Q — Will a bonfire be part of today's homecoming events?

Judge has dismissed charges against relatives of L. Jones

LUBBOCK (AP) — All charges have been dismissed against a Lubbock couple prosecuted by the independent counsel investigating charges against ex-Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros.

U.S. District Judge Sam Cummings dismissed the charges Wednesday against Patsy and Allen Wooten, who were accused of falsely obtaining a bank mortgage for Patsy's sister, Linda Jones of Lubbock.

Ms. Jones was Cisneros' former mistress and was at the center of the charges against the former San Antonio mayor and former Clinton Cabinet member.

Cisneros was charged with lying to the FBI about payments he made to Ms. Jones following their highly publicized affair. The FBI was investigating Cisneros following his appo' ıtment as HUD Secretary.

Cisneros avoided 18 felony charges by accepting a plea agreement the day his trial was to begin. He admitted lying to the FBI and received a misdemeanor conviction. He must pay a $10,000 fine but faces no jail time or probation.

Patsy Wooten said in a statement released by her attorneys that Barrett was "finally doing the right thing" when he asked Cummings to dismiss the charges.

"I was pleasantly surprised when all the parties agreed to a dismissal," she told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal in a telephone interview Wednesday night.

Mrs. Wooten said the turmoil didn't overshadow her family in Lubbock.

"It's been a long road," she said. "It's cost us some money, but it hasn't cost us any friends.

"We just hope it's all behind us now. My husband and I run around and pinch each other just to ask, 'Is it really over?'"

Ms. Jones served prison time for her part in the case, but was released last week.

Mrs. Wooten said her sister has grown disheartened and is struggling to rebuild her life.

"She's glad to be home, but she really feels like the scapegoat in this whole deal," Mrs. Wooten said. In January 1998, the Wootens pleaded guilty to one count each of conspiracy to commit bank fraud and making false statements to a bank. They had never been sentenced.

The independent counsel stated in the motion to dismiss the charges that the action was being taken because of the Wootens' cooperation and good conduct since their guilty pleas.

Ms. Jones pleaded guilty in 1998 to 28 charges of bank fraud, money laundering and lying to federal investigators and received a 31/2-year prison sentence.

Counts urges vote on 17 amendments

AUSTIN — Voters will have the opportunity to change the Texas Constitution this November on issues like money for student loans, reverse mortgages and vacancies in the governor's office.

Seventeen amendments to the state constitution have been proposed by the Texas Legislature for the general election on Tuesday, Nov. 2.

The proposed amendments will appear on ballots across the state using specific language already approved by legislators.

"Since the adoption of our state's constitution in the late 1800s, almost 400 of the amendments we proposed for November help clean-up or clarify old language."

One amendment, Proposition 1, clarifies old language by expressly stating that once there is a permanent vacancy in the governor's office, the lieutenant governor becomes the governor of the state for the remainder of the governor's term and must vacate the office of lieutenant governor.

Counts said some of the proposed amendments have more substance and should be reviewed carefully by voters before the election.

Proposition 2 would make changes in reverse mortgages, which were allowed in Texas when voters approved them in 1997. This proposition raises the eligibility for reverse mortgages to age 62 and allows more flexibility in the timing and amount of money advanced to the lender.

Another amendment, Proposition 13, allows the legislature to authorize up to $400 million in general obligation bonds with the proceeds used to provide education loans to students.

"The November election allows voters to have a say in changes to their constitution," Counts said. "I hope lots of voters come out and let us know what they think."

For more information on proposed amendments, contact Rep. Counts at 1-800-308-2769.

Hensley attends summer classes

IRVING — While you may think reading, writing and arithmetic are the farthest thing from students' minds during the summer break, 17 area high school students spent their vacation attending college courses at DeVry Institute of Technology.

Jon Hensley, a senior at Snyder High School, was recognized by DeVry last week for completing the institution's Summer Scholars program. Hensley also earned college credit through the program.

The free eight-week Summer Scholars program was established by DeVry to give juniors the opportunity to get a taste of college life while earning credit in one of two classes — digital circuits or business organization. Tuition and lab fees are waived leaving only the cost of books and supplies for the students.

Participants who earn an A or B in their summer class are eligible to obtain more college credits by taking another tuition-free class at DeVry during their senior year of high school.

Singer upset over her arrest

NEW YORK (AP) — A weary-looking Diana Ross said she was "treated like a criminal" by airport officials in London after they detained her for more than four hours following an altercation with a security guard.

The entertainer arrived at Kennedy International Airport on Wednesday night, hours after leaving Heathrow Airport. She will not face charges for the incident, which happened after she was frisked by a female security guard.

"I travel a lot. The security checks usually use metal detectors," said Ms. Ross, 55. "This woman went all around my body and up and down my legs. I felt very uncomfortable. I wanted to complain, but no one listened to me."

The problems started shortly before Ms. Ross was to board the morning flight to New York. She passed through the metal detector and something she was wearing apparently activated it. She was then given a body search by the guard.

Ms. Ross tried to protest to security staff at Heathrow Airport immediately after the search, but was given a leaflet about complaints procedures, said Phil Symes, her publicist.

Outraged, "she then went back and approached the girl again and said, 'How would you feel in this situation?' and actually touched the girl," Symes said.

The guard complained to police, accusing Ms. Ross of assault.

"I reacted because I was upset," Ms. Ross said.

She boarded the Concorde, but was led off in tears. She was detained for hours, then released after being cautioned by police. She was escorted through waiting reporters and photographers into a limousine, flanked by five London police officers.

She told reporters she felt like a prisoner. "I sat in the police station like a criminal for five hours. I was frightened. I was scared."

She returned to Heathrow in time for a 7 p.m. flight to New York — eight hours after she was scheduled to leave.

"I have been through all the airports of the world and never been subjected to such an intrusive search," Ross said earlier in the day. "I am a huggy person, I don't mind being touched, but not in this way — it was far too personal."

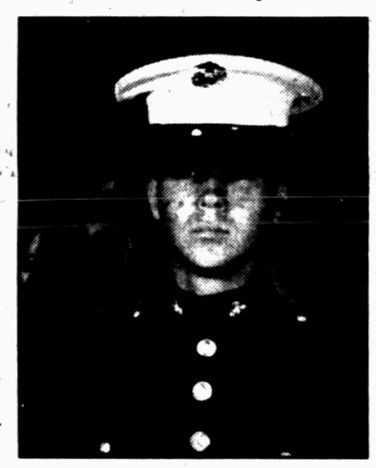

Banned book returned to school library

BOERNE (AP) — Central Texas educators have reversed their district's ban of an award-winning book from a school library for its accounts of sex and violence.

Members of the Boerne school board voted to return "Snow Falling on Cedars" to Boerne High School library shelves by a 5-2 margin on Monday. But the book remains off limits to senior English classes.

"It was the feeling of the majority of the board that the book belonged in the library, but not in the classroom," DeeAnn Wilson, school board President, said Wednesday. "The difference being mandatory reading, as curriculum, vs. the choice to check the book out of the library."

Named book of the year by the American Booksellers Association in 1995 and winner of the PEN/Faulkner Award, the work was banned last month after teacher Frances Riley assigned 80 12th graders in her English class to read it.

Shell must pay cost of replacing water

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Federal and local agencies ordered Shell Oil Company on Wednesday to pay the City of Santa Monica the costs of replacing water contaminated by a gasoline additive through leaking underground tanks.

The Environmental Protection Agency and the Los Angeles Regional Water Quality Control Board issued the order after Shell's recent decision to stop paying the costs when the present agreement expires on Jan. 7, 2000.

"We need to protect the people of the city and are requiring Shell to continue to contribute to the water replacement," said Jim Kuykendall, an executive officer with the regional water board.

Messages left after business hours at Shell offices in Houston were not immediately returned. The order affected Shell Oil Co., Shell Oil Products Co. and Equilon Enterprises LLC, which is a joint venture of Shell and Texaco.

The agencies ordered Shell to pay replacement water costs, which total about $3 million annually, until Jan. 6, 2005, according to city officials.

"Neither Shell nor anyone else should be mistaken," said Mayor Pam O'Connor, "companies that destroy public resources, especially precious drinking water supplies, will be held strictly accountable."

Underground storage tanks at 24 locations began leaking in the early 1990s, according to EPA studies. The leaking gasoline, containing MTBE, reached Santa Monica's drinking water wells, about one-half mile away.

MTBE is a gas additive that makes fuel burn cleaner, but can easily seep into groundwater because it is very soluble. The gasoline additive causes a foul smell and taste, but has not yet posed a health risk.

Santa Monica and the Southern California Water Co. have purchased replacement water from the Metropolitan Water district since 1996. A small group of the companies responsible for potential source-sites, including Shell and Chevron, joined in 1998 by Exxon, have reimbursed the city and the water company for these costs.

City officials expects cleanup of the Charnock wells could take 10 years and cost about $150 million.

Sex abuse charges have been dismissed

EDENTON, N.C. (AP) — Sex abuse charges have been dropped against the former operator of a day-care center who was once sentenced to 12 consecutive life terms, his attorney said today.

The remaining charges against Robert F. Kelly Jr., who owned the Little Rascals day-care center, involved a woman who accused him of sexually abusing her when she was 9 years old.

Prosecutors dismissed those charges Wednesday, said Gerald Beaver, Kelly's attorney. The move ends one of the most notorious cases in North Carolina history.

Kelly, 51, said he and his new wife will celebrate with a trip. He has been out of jail on bond for the past four years.

"We are going out of state, and I'm not sure where we are going yet," Kelly said in today's Fayetteville Observer-Times. "I just want to go because I can go."

Prosecutors did not return telephone messages left by The Associated Press on Wednesday.

Kelly was charged along with six others in 1989 with molesting 29 children attending the center. He was convicted in 1992 and sentenced to 12 life terms.

Kathryn Dawn Wilson, the center's cook, was found guilty the next year, but both convictions were overturned on appeal. The charges eventually were dismissed.

Prosecutors in 1996 dropped charges against three women who never were tried, while two other defendants pleaded no contest to sexual abuse charges.

Children testified at Kelly's trial that they were forced to have sex with adults and each other at the day-care center and other places. The children also told tales of spaceships and trained sharks.

The defense argued that the children were coached into telling stories that fit their parents' fears.

Prayer meeting resumes one week after bloody massacre

FORT WORTH (AP) — Members of Wedgwood Baptist Church returned to complete a worship service interrupted a week earlier by a gunman's deadly fusillade.

Wednesday night's gathering followed Sunday's service in the bullet-scarred sanctuary. Larry Gene Ashbrook killed seven people and wounded seven others before fatally shooting himself in the head, police said.

Church member Chip Gillette, a Fort Worth policeman who lives across the street and was the first officer on the scene of the carnage, displayed a hymnbook that stopped a bullet.

He took its resting place as a sign.

Gillette said the slug stopped at the words: "'He shall reign forever and ever, that he is Lord of Lords and King of Kings' and chills went up my spine 'cause I said, 'Lord, show me something out of that,' and he said, 'I am Lord of Lords and King of Kings and I will reign forever; I will have this victory out of that, Chip.'"

U.S. needs Ryder Cup victory

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — One by one, they avoided the issue like a 3-foot downhill putt on a slippery green. Finally, Tom Lehman finally stepped up to say what his U.S. Ryder Cup teammates wouldn't.

"We need to win," Lehman said. "That's all there is to it."

With just two wins in the last 14 years, there is more than just the sense of urgency talked about by captain Ben Crenshaw for the U.S. team that begins play Friday in the 33rd Ryder Cup.

Loaded with talent and facing a European team full of Ryder Cup rookies, this might be the best chance the Americans ever get to break the recent European domination of the series.

And no one knows it better than Lehman, a member of the last two losing teams.

"I fully expect us to play our best golf, and I expect us to win," Lehman said. "I have full and complete confidence in the other 11 guys on this team and myself. And I think it's a must-win for us."

To get that win, the American team must avoid on the small greens of The Country Club what it did two years ago at Valderrama — self-destructing in the alternate shot and best-ball matches that precede Sunday's singles.

And that has put the pressure on Crenshaw to come up with pairings from his star-studded team that take advantage of what to most professional golfers are unfamiliar formats.

"It's a terribly hard and complex thing to do," Crenshaw said. "I certainly have some things in mind. My problem now is leaving four guys out the first day because I feel a lot of guys are playing well. I feel all 12 of our guys are playing well."

Tiger Woods against teen sensation Sergio Garcia, of course, is the match most golf fans want to see on Sunday with the Ryder Cup on the line.

That may not happen, but it's entirely possible that Woods and David Duval might be paired on Friday or Saturday against the likes of Garcia and countryman Jose Maria Olazabal.

"It's certainly a possibility," Crenshaw said. "I'd say it's very safe that both are going to play a lot. I don't know if you'll see that pairing on the first day, though."

Woods and Duval practiced together in the rain Wednesday, as Crenshaw followed members of the American team around the course to try and get an idea which players he'll pair together on Friday — and which will sit out play.

Woods, who did not join the eight U.S. players who played practice rounds last month at the course, saw it for the first time this week. But he rejected any criticism of himself or other Americans for not being passionate about defending the cup.

"I don't go to a tournament to lose," Woods said. "I don't think any of these guys do either. It just so happens that they've beaten us and we've beaten them."

Woods, who was 1-3-1 in 1997 when the United States fell behind 101/2-51/2 after the first two days and failed to regain the cup at Valderrama, has played spectacularly this year and is coming off a win at the PGA Championship last month.

Duval was just as hot early in the year, and was the No. 1 golfer in the world before Woods overtook him.

"I haven't seen anybody play better in the game of golf in the last two or three years than Tiger Woods," Mark O'Meara said. "I know David has played extremely well, too. But Tiger Woods has got something very, very special."

If Woods is the on course leader of the U.S. team, the Europeans may look to an unlikely source for their leadership.

On a team with seven rookies, Garcia is the youngest at the age of 19. But he's also the most watched, and probably the one most likely to rally his teammates with his play.

"I just want to get a lot of points so we can keep the cup," Garcia said.

European captain Mark James doesn't figure to hesitate putting Garcia in the early matches, although he has been tightlipped about which players will be paired together in the alternate shot.

Wolverines, Badgers set for battle

By The Associated Press

What's a Badger to do?

Barry Alvarez can't coach from the sideline because he needs knee replacement surgery. Heisman Trophy hopeful Ron Dayne is nursing a sprained ankle. Now the big question is whether Wisconsin can stay with No. 4 Michigan after losing to lowly Cincinnati.

Don't worry, wide receiver Nick Davis says, No. 20 Wisconsin will be ready to open Big Ten play against the Wolverines at Camp Randall Stadium.

Alvarez is to have surgery Oct. 5 and probably will coach from the press box Saturday.

"We're just going to support him and get through it," Davis said.

And Dayne, who had 231 yards in last week's 17-12 loss to the Bearcats, says his ankle is fine.

"It's feeling good," Dayne said. "I'm able to run."

But how is Wisconsin (2-1) to support Dayne's bruising runs? Against the Bearcats, Scott Kavanagh threw for 85 yards. That won't do against the Wolverines (3-0).

Last year, Wisconsin traveled to Ann Arbor with a 9-0 record and No. 8 ranking. The 15th-ranked Wolverines won 27-10 and ran for 257 yards against the nation's best rushing defense. Dayne was held to 58 yards.

Michigan coach Lloyd Carr doesn't see much change in the Badgers, but he certainly expects a closer game.

"Essentially, Wisconsin has the same team it had a year ago, with the exception of the quarterback," Carr said, referring to Kavanagh replacing Mike Samuel. "They have a strong, powerful offensive team. They have a strong defense. They have a great punter. They want to play ball control, field-position football. They have the kind of people that allow them to do that."

Michigan needs to get its offense untracked, too. Jeff Del Verne kicked three field goals in an 18-13 win over Syracuse.

Carr says he'll continue alternating quarterbacks, with Tom Brady starting and Drew Henson playing the second quarter. He also wants more touchdowns.

"We missed out on some opportunities," Carr said. "Our first drive, we have the ball for 10 plays, then we drop a pass. Then we get a field goal blocked."

Ripken out for season; Rangers fall, 7-4

ARLINGTON (AP) — On the day Cal Ripken was lost for the season, leaving him nine hits short of 3,000, the Baltimore Orioles beat the Texas Rangers 7-4 Wednesday night for their 13th straight victory.

The Orioles announced during the game that Ripken would be sidelined by back problems. He will have surgery Thursday morning in Cleveland to relieve pressure on a nerve that has been causing him discomfort.

Ripken traveled to Cleveland on Wednesday to visit specialist Dr. Henry Bohlman after experiencing back spasms overnight. The All-Star third baseman made his first two trips to the disabled list this season.

Baltimore's winning streak matches the second-longest in team history, trailing only a 14-game string from Aug. 12-27, 1973. The Orioles also won 13 in a row from May 31-June 14, 1978.

Texas lost its third in a row. The Rangers' magic number for clinching the AL West is at six after the second-place Oakland lost 5-4 to Minnesota.

Charles Johnson and Brady Anderson hit consecutive homers in the fifth inning for the Orioles. Albert Belle hit his 35th homer and Jesus Garcia hit his first in the majors.

Scott Erickson (15-11) gave up four runs in the first inning but recovered to win his fifth straight start. He allowed four runs and 10 hits in eight-plus innings.

The Orioles rallied from a 4-1 deficit against Rick Helling (13-10), taking a 6-4 lead in the fifth on Johnson's two-run homer and Anderson's shot.

Garcia homered in the second inning and Belle added a solo homer in the seventh.

Rafael Palmeiro's 45th homer, a two-run shot, highlighted Texas' burst in the first. Todd Zeile and Roberto Kelly had RBI singles.

Astros' lead shrinks with 3-2 setback

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Todd Ritchie outpitched 20-game winner Jose Lima and the Pittsburgh Pirates turned two unusual double plays in as many innings to slow Houston's run at a third straight division title, beating the Astros 3-2 Wednesday night.

The Pirates, playing without 39-homer hitter Brian Giles, who will miss the rest of the season with a broken finger, took two of three from the NL Central-leading Astros. They began their final homestand of the season by winning two of three from second-place Cincinnati.

The Astros, still not able to pull away from the Reds in the division race, lost their fifth in seven games. They began the night with a 31/2-game lead over Cincinnati, which played later at San Diego.

Lima (20-9) lost his second start in a row since becoming the fifth 20-game winner in Astros' history despite holding the Pirates to three runs and five hits and striking out 10 in eight innings. He was coming off his worst start of the season, an 11-8 loss to St. Louis in which he lasted 3 2-3 innings.

Ritchie (14-9), in the minors when the season began and never a starter before this year, won his team-high 14th decision by limiting the Astros to two runs and six hits and striking out 10 in his second complete game.

Last-but-not-least winners like overtricks

By Phillip Alder

For our final look at the Millennium Games, we reach the East-West winners for Saturday, June 5. They were Tom Mori, from Lee's Summit, Mo., and Jim Wattenbarger, from Kansas City, Mo. They scored 1741 instant matchpoints: 72.5 percent.

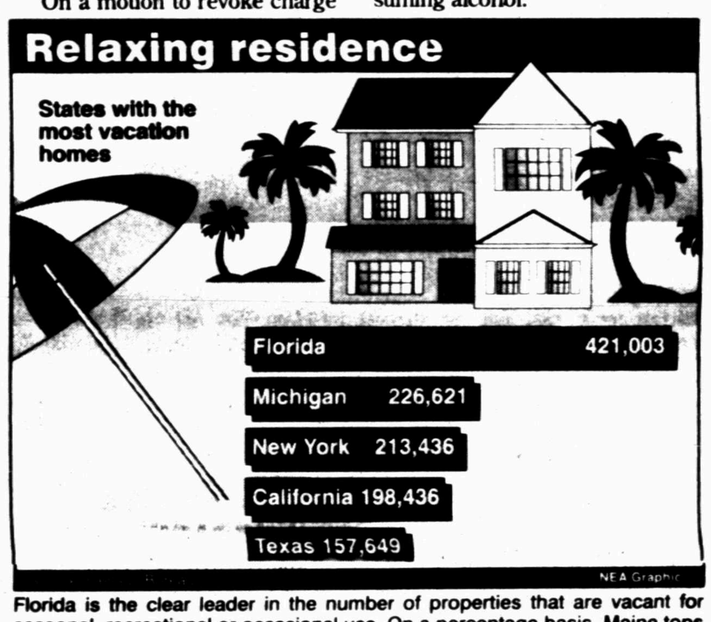

The secret of success in pairs events is twofold: going plus, and raking in overtricks. After a session, if you check your matchpoint scores on all deals, you will find that on most boards in which you went plus, you scored over average. In this deal, though, Mori and Wattenbarger did well because they collected an overtrick.

If an opponent opens with one strong no-trump, it pays to compete. Try to find a safe spot; normally don't think about getting to game. After West's overcall, North employed the Lebensohl convention. His two-no-trump response forced partner to rebid three clubs. Then the three-heart cue-bid showed exactly four spades and a heart stopper. (An immediate cue-bid denies a heart stopper.)

West led the heart 10, which promised either zero or two higher honors. Wattenbarger saw eight top tricks: one spade, one heart, five diamonds and one club. At trick two, declarer did very well, calling for the spade 10: jack, ace, nine. As that beautiful nine had appeared, Wattenbarger returned the spade seven, setting up three spade tricks.

East led his second heart, but after West took two tricks in the suit, Wattenbarger claimed an overtrick for 88 instant matchpoints out of 100. However, if declarer had won only nine tricks, he would have received 60 matchpoints.

Relaxing residence

Florida is the clear leader in the number of properties that are vacant for seasonal, recreational or occasional use. On a percentage basis, Maine tops the list, with 15 percent of all homes within that state classified as vacation units.

Twain finally receives recognition from peers

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — She's been honored at the Grammys and she's been on MTV. Yet for years, Shania Twain's sexy brand of country music didn't get much recognition from her peers,

Until now.

On Wednesday, Twain received long-overdue recognition as the Country Music Association honored her as its Entertainer of the Year. It was the first time the top-selling Twain had ever been honored by the 6,000 industry leaders who cast ballots for the winners.

Twain, who won two Grammys earlier this year, was in tears after receiving the CMA honor. Backstage, the Canadian singer acknowledged the controversy her midriff-baring image and pop-leaning music has caused in Nashville.

"Well, I'm not just a lap dancer after all," she said, referring to one of the more unkind jabs.

The award for Twain, whose crossover appeal has landed her on and the cover of magazines like Rolling Stone and People, comes at a time when country music's popularity has dipped.

Sales have flattened since peaking in 1995 at about $2 billion. After an uptick of 2.7 percent last year, sales were down about 3 percent for the first half of 1999.

Country music's market share of sales has declined to 14.1 percent, according to the Recording Industry Association of America's 1998 Consumer Profile. That's still second — rock is first at 25.7 percent — but country's share has declined each year since peaking at 18.7 percent in 1993.

One country music veteran noticeably absent from the awards show was George Jones. He was angry that he was asked, along with other nominees, to perform a shortened version of "Choices," which was up for best single. The CMA routinely makes such requests due to time constraints.

Jones was watching the show from home when Alan Jackson brought the audience at the Grand Ole Opry to its feet when he sang a few lines from "Choices" at the end of his own performance.

"He cried," said Evelyn Shriver, president of Asylum Records, Jones' record company. "He said it was the greatest honor ever bestowed on him."

A Jackson spokeswoman, Kay West, said the singer was inspired by a visit to Jones earlier this year in the hospital. Jones nearly died because of a car wreck.

"Alan said that had George Jones died there, there would have been a 10 minute tribute to him on the show," West said. "But he lived, and they wouldn't give him three minutes."

Ed Benson, head of the CMA, said he took no offense at Jackson's actions.

"Alan is a great traditional country artist, and he paid tribute to another great traditional country artist," Benson said. "That's fine."

In other awards, the Dixie Chicks won their second straight award for best vocal group and their "Wide Open Spaces" was named best single and video. Tim McGraw won best male vocalist and best album for "A Place in the Sun." He picked up a second award for producing the album.

Martina McBride was named best female vocalist, and Brooks & Dunn won their eighth straight trophy for best vocal duo.

"Thanks, we know you're getting tired of seeing us up here, but we really appreciate you giving it to us again," Ronnie Dunn said.

Jo Dee Messina won the Horizon Award for career progress.

The Dixie Chicks opened the show with a dynamic "Ready to Run," making their entrance from under the grass skirts of three backup dancers on stilts.

Twain sported a hot pink ensemble to sing "Come On Over," and was presented with an unannounced award for promoting country music overseas.

Two pop acts performed duets with country singers: Merle Haggard was joined by Jewel on "That's the Way Love Goes" and 'N Sync and Alabama performed "God Must Have Spent a Little More Time on You."

In the audience were pop singer Britney Spears and actors Billy Bob Thornton and Laura Dern. Thornton presented the vocal event award to Gill, who won for "My Kind of Woman/My Kind of Man," a duet with Patty Loveless. Loveless, who is taking a year off, did not attend.

Dolly Parton, Conway Twitty and Johnny Bond were inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame along with Parton.

"I feel like I died and went to hillbilly heaven," Parton said.

Bush asks $20 billion in R&D

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican presidential candidate George W. Bush is promising to "redefine war on our terms" with a defense policy that pumps billions of dollars into the search for new weapons he said would help America keep the peace.

Unveiling his plans for the U.S. military in a speech today, the GOP front-runner said he would increase spending on research and development of weapons, raise soldiers' salaries, develop an anti-ballistic missile system and avoid "vague, aimless and endless" troop deployments throughout the world.

"If elected, I will set three goals: I will renew the bond of trust between the American president and the American military; I will defend the American people against missiles and terror; and I will begin creating the military of the next century," he said in an early draft of his speech to the Citadel military academy in Charleston, S.C.

"The best way to keep the peace is to redefine war on our terms," he said.

The two-term Texas governor holds a hefty lead in polls over all Democratic and Republican presidential contenders. The address — part of a series of speeches designed to spell out his presidential agenda — is an answer to critics who say Bush is not ready to be president and that his views on public policy are undeveloped.

In advance of his remarks, Democrats warned that Bush wanted to return to the policies of Republican Presidents Reagan and Bush, his father. "He already wants a tax cut that would destabilize Social Security and Medicare. Now he wants huge defense increases that would threaten education and health care," said Democratic National Committee spokeswoman Patricia Ewing. "We've already lived through huge tax cuts and defense increases that ruined our economic prosperity. We don't want to go back to that."

The biggest price tag in Bush's package is for research and development, where Bush would increase spending by $20 billion over five years. The annual Pentagon budget is about $270 billion.

In addition, 20 percent of the current budget for weapons and information systems should be earmarked for the purchase of weapons that take advantage of new technologies, Bush said.

With the end of the Cold War — what he called "the hard but clear struggle against an evil empire" — Bush said America must take advantage of "a revolution in the technology of war" to remain strong enough to maintain peace throughout the world.

Reagan called Russia an "evil empire" when Bush's father was vice president.

"Our challenge is not as obvious, but just as noble: To turn these years of influence into decades of peace," the governor said.

"Power is increasingly defined, not by mass or size, but by mobility and swiftness," Bush said. "Influence is measured in information, safety is gained in stealth, and force is projected on the long arc of precision-guided weapons," he said. "This revolution perfectly matches the strengths of our country — and the skill of our people and the superiority of our technology."

He vowed to challenge each branch of the armed services to move beyond marginal improvements in existing weapons systems to "skip a generation of technology."

"This involves spending more and spending more wisely," he said.

Bush implied that the Clinton administration has broken faith with U.S. troops by paying them too little and putting them in harms' way too often.

Taking Deceased's Property Is Burglary Plain and Simple

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1999 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: The letter about the ex-wife who removed property from the home of her former mother-in-law on the day of the woman's funeral prompts this letter. You were right when you advised that what the woman did qualifies as criminal activity. Entering a dwelling in order to remove property not your own is a felony called burglary.

I would not merely call my lawyer; I would immediately notify the police before the ex-wife disposes of the property.

Having knowledge of a crime and failing to report that crime is also a violation in some jurisdictions. The irony here is that the son of the deceased may be adding to the offense by failing to notify the police.

Also, the executor of the estate has an additional duty, enforced by the probate court, to secure and properly dispose of the deceased's assets. Failing to do so is also an offense.

You knew all of this, I'm sure. I am a retired law enforcement officer, but please just sign me ...

NOT A LAWYER
IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

DEAR NOT: I was not aware of much of the information in your letter, and I'm sure it will be of interest to many people.

I received another comment about that letter from an attorney in Louisiana, who informed me that asking one's lawyer to write a letter demanding the property be returned, and threatening to call the law if it's not, could be construed as extortion or coercion. So I'm revising my answer: Waste no time in informing the police about the theft.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have a dilemma over something that occurred at our wedding. We invited my mother's first cousin (whom I've only met twice) and his wife out of courtesy to my grandmother. (My mother is deceased.) The cousin called our home five days before the wedding and informed us that he would be picking up his son from college and bringing him to the wedding, too, "since he's family and all." He said he'd be doing this because it would give the three of them time to spend together.

Given the late notice with which he called, we decided that it was simply too late to add another guest. I spoke with him the following day, and he agreed with us and said it was "no problem" to come without his son.

To our surprise, however, while dancing at our reception, my new bride and I noticed the cousin's wife and son dancing! We don't know when he arrived or if he was there for the ceremony, cocktail party and/or dinner (however, no dinner was ordered for him and no place seating reserved). They never came over to speak to us during the evening, and we decided not to address the issue on our wedding day.

Abby, we spent a year carefully planning our wedding, and as hosts, we felt it was presumptuous of them to make a decision about our guest list against our explicit request. Under the circumstances, we do not feel comfortable accepting their wedding gift. We appreciate the gift, but are too hurt by the disrespect and disregard we feel we were shown to accept it. Should we send a letter explaining our feelings and return the gift, or is there a more appropriate course of action?

IGNORED
IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

DEAR IGNORED: Although I don't blame you for being furious, to return their gift would mean the end of the relationship. Unless you're prepared for that, I wouldn't recommend it. Remember instead the happiness of the occasion, and don't dwell on the faults of these distant relatives.

NASA, orbiter lose contact

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — NASA's first interplanetary weather satellite failed to re-establish contact with Earth early today after an engine maneuver that should have placed it in orbit around Mars.

Several hours later, it was not clear whether the satellite had completed its task, and mission organizers were trying to locate it on different frequencies.

The Mars Climate Orbiter, one of two probes scheduled to arrive at the red planet this year to study the weather and search for evidence of water, should have regained contact with Earth at 2:26 a.m.

"We're ... not quite sure what's happening," said project manager Richard Cook of NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, a half-hour after the signal was to be received on Earth.

The probe was behind the planet and out of radio contact during most of the 17-minute engine firing that should have placed it in orbit. Contact should have been established by 2:30 a.m. at the latest.

Mission organizers said several features aboard the probe were designed to reconnect it with Earth in case of a computer shutdown or other common spacecraft problems.

"At this point, we're still confident we're going to see the spacecraft signal in the next few hours," Cook said.

However, the orbiter's project scientist, Richard Zurek, was less optimistic. "The longer we don't hear from it, the worse off we are," he said, more than three hours after the satellite failed to establish contact.

The orbiter and its companion, the Mars Polar Lander, carry instruments designed to discover the fate of water believed to have once formed rivers or lakes on the planet. Mission scientists say water is the key to determining whether life ever existed on Mars.

The separately launched lander, due to arrive Dec. 3, is supposed to use the orbiter as a communications relay. But loss of the orbiter wouldn't be fatal to the project as the lander can communicate directly with Earth, and the already orbiting Mars Global Surveyor can act as a limited relay as well.

The disappearance of the Climate Orbiter comes six years after NASA lost a billion-dollar spacecraft just as it was reaching Mars.

The 1,387-pound orbiter was to have fired its main engine early today, slowing the spacecraft to 9,840 mph from its interplanetary cruising speed of 12,300 mph. Within about a half-hour, the craft was to signal that it was not zooming past Mars or plunging to the surface.

Local law enforcement officers investigate three theft reports

Local law enforcement officers investigated three reports of theft Wednesday.

Anesto Olivarez notified officers at 11:13 a.m. that someone had stolen his flatbed trailer from the 1600 block of 24th Street. An offense report was submitted for Class A theft.

At 5:09 p.m., Willie Brewer requested to speak to a deputy in reference to the theft of jewelry from 1624 North College Avenue. An offense report for Class B theft was filed.

Officers filed an offense report for Class B theft at 6:21 p.m. at Snyder High School in reference to the theft of a bag containing athletic wear and other items. Annie Perales reported the incident.

At 8:58 a.m., H.H. Buchanan reported broken windows at a vacant house at 212 26th Street. An offense report for Class A criminal mischief was filed.

Three subjects were taken into custody Wednesday.

Officers arrested a 36-year-old male at 11:10 a.m. at the Adult Probation Office on outstanding warrants. The warrants were for Class A assault/family violence, Class C assault/family violence, failure to appear, expired driver's license and no liability insurance.

A 20-year-old male was taken into custody at 8:38 p.m. in the 200 block of Ash on city warrants.

Outstanding warrants for criminal mischief and Class A assault sent a 33-year-old man to jail at 9:20 p.m. Officers arrested him in the 1000 block of 28th Street.

At 4:51 p.m., deputies responded to a report of gunshots being fired in the area of Smith Avenue and North Avenue Q. Two subjects were contacted who were shooting a pistol at cans in the backyard. They were advised of the complaint.

Officers worked two private property accidents Wednesday, one that was a hit and run.

An accident occurred at 7:16 p.m. in the 1200 block of 13th Street involving a 1991 Ford Taurus driven by Linda Lee Carrisalez, 34, of 1906 Scott Street and a parked, unoccupied 1996 Pontiac Sunfire owned by Saturino Martinez of 2200 Avenue I.

At 8:22 p.m., a hit and run was reported at the Western Texas College dorm parking lot. Involved were a 1998 Dodge Avenger owned by David and Patricia Hail of Coleman and an unknown vehicle that left the scene.

'Gen. Patton' dead at age 71

LOS ANGELES (AP) — George C. Scott, whose eagle profile and gravel-voiced, commanding air brought new life to Gen. George S. Patton and earned him an Oscar he refused to accept, has died. He was 71.

Friends and staff found Scott dead Wednesday afternoon at his home in Westlake Village, 40 miles northwest of Los Angeles, said Mitch Breese, chief deputy coroner's investigator for Ventura County. An autopsy was scheduled today to determine the cause of death.

"It was unexpected," said Jim Mahoney, the actor's publicist, who noted that Scott had suffered an aneurism several years ago.

"He worked so hard at his trade but it came so easy to him," Mahoney said. "When he did a role he not only knew his role, he knew every role word for word. He took great pride in his work and he was good, real good."

Scott captivated audiences in roles ranging from the dangerously explosive, yet sympathetic Patton in 1970 to the fatuous blowhard Gen. Buck Turgidson in Stanley Kubrick's 1964 classic "Dr. Strangelove."

The two were opposite ends of a spectrum of memorable film characters: the shark on the sidelines who tries to devour Paul Newman in "The Hustler"; the high-powered ringer brought in to steamroll small-town lawyer James Stewart in "Anatomy of a Murder"; the dedicated doctor ground down by red tape and institutional incompetence in "The Hospital."

For all his success in motion pictures, Scott disdained moviemaking, saying it was tedious and he did it only for the money.

"I have to work in the theater to stay sane," he said. "You can attack the stage fresh every night."

When Scott rose from a sickbed at age 68 to star in the 1996 Broadway revival of "Inherit the Wind," one critic said it was like watching a horse buggy powered by a Ferrari engine.

In private life, Scott was for years a bellicose drinker whose profile was marked by a nose broken five times, in four barroom brawls and one mugging. He was married five times — twice to the same woman, actress Colleen Dewhurst.

When Scott played in "Plaza Suite" in 1968, co-star Maureen Stapleton reportedly told director Mike Nichols at rehearsal, "I'm so frightened of George, I don't know what to do."

"My dear," Nichols replied, "the whole world is frightened of George."

Scott was born in Wise, Va., on Oct. 18, 1927, but grew up in Detroit. He joined the Marines in 1945, too late for action in World War II, and spent his four years in service burying the dead at Arlington by day and boozing at night.

"You can't look at that many widows in veils and hear that many 'Taps' without taking to drink," he said.

He left journalism school in 1950 without a degree and threw himself into acting, spending seven years performing more than 100 roles with stock companies in Toledo, Ohio; Washington and Ontario, Canada.

His breakthrough came when he was 30 years old and caught the eye of Joseph Papp, impresario of the New York Shakespeare Festival.

In rapid succession, the unknown Scott played the title role in "Richard III" in November 1957, Jacques in "As You Like It" in January 1958 and a poisoning peer in the off-Broadway "Children of Darkness" n March.
