Gen. Twining Comes Home

WASHINGTON (UP)— Gen. Nathan F. Twining, Air Force chief of staff, flew home from Russia today and was expected to give President Eisenhower a report on Soviet air power Thursday or Friday.

A four-engined transport carried Twining and his staff of six general officers back to Washington.

Twining flew home amid a storm of controversy over the adequacy of U.S. air power expansion in light of Russia's admittedly rapid progress. Both Democratic critics and the administration have cited the air general's views to support their arguments for and against greater long-range bomber production.

What Twining reports as a result of his week in Russia may have major influence on what Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson decided to do with the $900 million in extra Air Force funds voted by Congress last week.

Maximum Police Strength Mustered

By UNITED PRESS

The inevitable holiday traffic death toll began climbing early today.

City and state authorities mustered maximum police strength in an attempt to curb the expected slaughter.

The National Safety Council forecast 130 people would be killed on the roads between 6 p. m. Tuesday and midnight tonight. The prediction was 37 more than the 93 persons killed on the last one-day Fourth of July in 1951.

The expected toll also was 50 more than on a normal Wednesday in July.

Guardsmen Work

'Happy' To Run As Favorite Son

By RAYMOND LAHR
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP) — Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler of Kentucky joined the ranks today of the favorite son candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination.

He would like to become a serious contender if the leading candidates should falter, but as of now he can rate only as a long shot among the dark horses.

The Kentucky state Democratic convention picked Chandler for the favorite son role Tuesday and gave him a dominant voice in deciding how 32 national convention votes will be cast. The rival party faction, led by Sen. Earle C. Clements, had no chance of stopping Chandler.

No Illusions

Chandler told the convention that he had no illusions about his status as a presidential candidate but said, "If a deadlock occurs at the national convention, this may be our time."

A few anti-Chandler people were placed on the convention delegation, including Clements and former Gov. Lawrence Wetherby, but the delegation is bound by the unit vote.

Chandler has made it clear that he opposes Adlai E. Stevenson, now the leading candidate for the presidential nomination. He has also indicated that he is interested in talking business with Gov. Averell Harriman of New York, who has become Stevenson's principal challenger.

Fires, Accidents Precede July 4th Celebration Here

Fourth of July violence struck Pampa early this year as numerous accidents and three fires yesterday caused an undetermined amount of damage and kept firemen, police and sheriff's department officers busy.

Many Pampans, however, were taking advantage of the holiday today to relax, go fishing, watch fireworks displays, swim and in general enjoy themselves.

Rain contributed heavily to yesterdays mishaps as the water-splashed roads and highways caused the going pretty slippery. One fire truck got bogged down in mire as it went to the oil tank fire.

The collision causing the largest amount of estimated property damage occurred at 5:50 p.m. Tuesday when a '51 Oldsmobile driven by Woodrow Don Tucker of Paducah backed from Ed's Gulf Service Station at 210 E. Brown and struck a '53 Ford driven by Mrs. Betty Woods Hooten, Star Trailer Courts, who was going east on Brown.

The impact spun the Ford around and across the street and headed it in a westerly direction. The Oldsmobile continued across the street in reverse and went throught the drive of the Quality Service Station before striking cabin one of the Sunset Courts.

Damage to the cabin of the Sunset Courts was estimated at approximately $2,500 with the Oldsmobile and Ford encountering damages estimated at $350 each.

The first of the two collisions occurred at 5:04 p.m. at the intersection of Russell and 17th. Amos F. Adams, 313 N. Faulkner, driving a '51 Ford, was in collision with Lindon E. Correll, Austin, driving a '54 Pontiac.

After colliding with the Pontiac the Ford continued moving and stopped in the yard of Fred S. Vanderburg at 1615 Russell and caused damage to the lawn and trees estimated at $15, according to the police report.

Damage to the Ford was estimated at $25 and the Pontiac encountered damages estimated at $175.

The report of the investigating officer indicated that no injuries were received by the occupants of the automobiles involved in either accident.

Lightning struck a Cities Service Oil Co. tank battery at 4:40 p.m. west of Pampa on the Borger Highway on the Castleberry lease.

The two 500-barrel tanks which yesterday causing two tanks to explode and another to ignite. The battery was located five miles blew up were blown 25 or 30 feet from their cement foundation, according to Fire Chief Ernest Winborne. The top was blown out of one and the other was split wide open. The catwalk was blown away from its foundation by the force also, Winborne stated.

Firemen were unable to extinguish the burning tank.

"There was nine feet of oil in the tank,' Winborne said, "and because of oil leakage into it as soon as we put out the blaze, it would catch fire again. It was impossible to put it out."

City firemen were delayed from reaching the scene approximately 45 minutes when they bogged down in mud caused by the heavy rain about a hundred feet off the Borger Highway. Pampa received about .86 inch of rain yesterday afternoon according to The Pampa News rain gauge.

Fire Chief Ernest Winborne said that the Pampa Fire Department gave special thanks to the National Tank Co. which worked to pull the truck out of the mud.

Lightning also struck a television aerial yesterday at 3:10 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Nash, 721 N. West, extending down the lead wire and setting the television set on fire. Firemen answered the call, disconnected the set, and put out the fire. Damage was only done to the TV set.

A 1941 Ford coupe caught fire a mile south on the Clarendon Highway at 9:15 p.m. yesterday. Damage was limited to the seat and interior of the car, according to Fire Chief Winborne. Owner of the car was Charley Galenster.

Chief of Police Jim Conner and Fire Chief Ernest Winborne today urged all residents of Pampa and the area to use special caution against fire and injury over the holiday. Shooting fire crackers within the city limits is against a city ordinance. The city will be patroled as usual Chief Conner stated.

The Heritage Of July 4, 1776

Each July Fourth, the American people celebrate, not only their country's birthday but a vital day in the history of man. On this day, in 1776, a great document of freedom was officially born, the Declaration of Independence. Drawings and paintings from earlier times here illustrate just what happened.

The travelers, who arrived in West Germany by rail today from Poland, said troops armed with machine guns patrolled the 275-mile stretch of track from the Polish capital to the Soviet zone border city of Frankfurt-on-Oder.

They said resistance groups were reported active in the areas around Cracow, Bialystok, Lublin, and north of riot-torn Poznan.

In the thick forests 50 miles north of Poznan, Polish troops were believed pursuing survivors ed to have met in battle early Tuesday.

Rescue Crews Searching For Crash Clues

By PAUL CORCORAN
United Press Staff Correspondent

GRAND CANYON VILLAGE, Ariz. (UP) — Rescue crews, which have "positive evidence" of collision between a UAL DC-7 and TWA Super-Constellation, searched today for more clues in the wreckage strewn in the Grand Canyon.

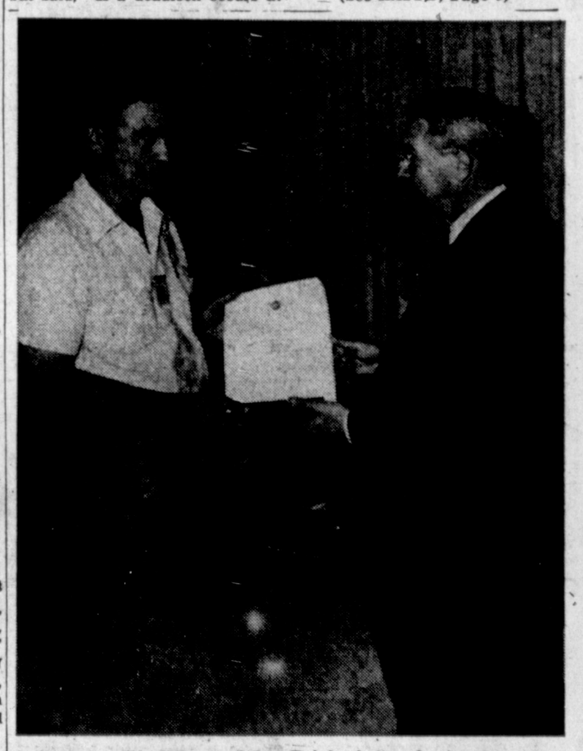

Stifling desert heat and dangerously tricky winds hampered helicopters and ground teams on the fourth day of operations to remove the remnants of 128 bodies from the scenic but rugged canyon.

Helicopters flew out Tuesday some of the charred remnants of the bodies of 70 persons who died aboard the TWA plane last Saturday.

An advance party of para-medics found parts of four or five bodies in a piece of the UAL plane at the foot of Temple Butte. But ground teams believed it would be impossible to reach the larger sections of plane which carried 58 persons and crashed at the top of the butte, some 5,000 feet up a sheer mountain face.

Eight members of Switzerland's crack air-rescue squad left Zurich by plane today for the Grand Canyon to make the dangerous attempt to reach the wreckage.

Seven of the Swiss are expert Alpinists trained to parachute onto snow and ice covered slopes to rescue mountaineers in distress. The eighth is one of Switzerland's "glacier pilots" who land their small aircraft on remote glaciers.

Celanese Gets Award For Re-Orientation Program

The Research Institute of America, Inc., yesterday presented John Frick, plant manager at Celanese, with a certificate and medallion after the plant's re-orientation program was selected as one of the most outstanding among 30,000 management service program firms serviced by R. I. A.

R. I. A. is a business advisory group which advises on business economics, management, sales and taxes.

Each year, the firm gives awards to those companies which come up with outstanding ideas and report them to the Institute for exchange with other firms enrolled in the program. This year, only 200 were given awards for their individual projects from among the approximately 30,000 enrolled in the Institute's program. Celanese was one of them.

Incidentally, this is the second consecutive year Celanese has received an award for such a project.

Celanese's project which won them an award this year was their re-orientation plan.

When an employee starts to work with Celanese, he is given an orientation course. After he has worked for the firm about six months, he goes through a two-day re-orientation which includes re-learning company policies on personnel, safety, benefits, etc.

The program has been reported as highly successful and highly appreciated by the firm's employees.

Jane Talk

JANE TALKS FOR WEDNESDAY . . . . . .

WITH SCHOOL OUT parents often find it hard to answer their youngsters cry, "What shall I do this summer?" In order to aid the many parents who will be confronted with this question, PAGEANT in its June issue presented an article which offers numerous solutions to the teen-age problem of summer inactivity and boredom.

"HOW TO GET them out of the house this summer," surveys all the activities throughout the country that teen-agers can latch onto, to make their vacation pleasant and worthwhile, plus a discussion on the importance summer jobs and activities have in helping the child to mature.

The feature is divided into headings along varied interest lines such as, community projects, special camps and trips, work-and-play camps, summer jobs, all giving complete information as to what's available, what has been done in the past by children, plans for this summer, comments from experts, counselors, and from teen-ers on how they feel bout participating in various programs, and also a special list of whom and where to contact.

Following this comprehensive report which includes facts about every field of interest a teen-ager might have and which will spark the imagination of those who have not given the summer a thought, the article continues with topics, "Why Work?," "How To Find A Job." Among the helpful aids to parents given under the sub-title, "Make The Right Choice," Jerome Count of Shaker Village near Pittsfield, Mass., says: "Usually, young people have no idea what they want. Parents must explore possibilities and do some judicious promoting for activities in keeping with their offspring's interest, experience and degree of maturity."

And one of the four considerations parents should weigh as suggested by Dr. G. R. Kaback, a clinical psychologist is: "A summer is most likely to be a success if the teen-ager leaves with the feeling that, after all the alternatives have been appraised, he has been treated as an adult in making his own decision. That's a sign of good family relationship."

DO YOU THINK it wonderful to be free? To come home when you like; to eat when you please; to be free from nagging to indulge yourself generally?

Well-known writer Paul Gallico, divorced three years ago, reports in the Reader's Digest that this freedom "is the bunk. . .You don't know how lucky you are to be married."

The disadvantages of the unmarried, particularly in middle life, far outweigh the delights, Gallico states. "You learn for the first time how loud silence can be in an empty home. The loneliness and silences close in when the rattle of one's key in the door initiates no answering sound."

In this freedom no one really cares what happens to you — whether you are sick or well, happy or miserable, alive or dead. Friends do not close the gap once filled by wife or husband. For women, such freedom can be particularly harrowing. The divorcee who longed for release will find that the places she can enter alone are limited, and that she has become that drug on the social market, the extra woman, free not to be invited where once she was welcome.

Freely organizing his own life, with never a voice raised in protest, approval, warning or advice, Gallico has found such non - interference and non-sharing unbearable. "One of the great and little-recognized joys of marriage," he notes, "is to have someone with whom to plan and anticipate."

Success can be empty when not applauded by the mate whose joy is equal to yours; in failure or tragedy you need, above all, the comfort and sympathy of the only one who can truly share your loss.

Forfeiting this joy of sharing, the "free" forfeit the joy of living the author concludes. "For how alive is anyone who exists without bestowing or receiving human love at some portion of each 24 hours?"

Women are reportedly engaged in every one of the 446 occupations listed by the Labor Department as overall employment picture for women tops all previous records.

Statistics On Working Women Reveal Farm Wives Bring Home The Bacon

By ALICIA HART
NEA Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON — (NEA) —This may come as a shock to income-conscious bachelors, but America's unmarried girls have slacked off their pace as wage earners.

At the same time, farm wives have been grabbing jobs at a faster rate than city wives.

These are some of the most revealing statistics about today's working woman to come out of a recent review of 1955 census data.

A significant drop from 51 per cent in 1948 to 46 per cent in 1955 has taken place in the proportion of single girls in the labor force.

"The decline was greatest among young women 18 to 24 years old, a fact that may tie in with the increased school enrollments for this age group" says one analyst.

As relatively fewer single women head ofr work each morning, more and more wives are helping to bring home the bacon. The census shows that over 10 million of them are now employed. They represent a fourth of the nation's housewives.

Most interesting to experts, however, is the fact that farm wives are becoming wage earners more rapidly than town or city wives.

Back in 1950 only 17 per ceht of the country's farm wives had jobs. Now the percentage is upped to 26, according to the census.

"Some of these farm wives are employed in farm work," says an Agriculture Department spokesman, "but opportunities for outside earnings have increased in recent years as work of various kids became available to them and as transportation from the farm became easier."

A contributing reason, it seems, for the upswing of working farm wives is the decline in farm prices. This economic squeeze has made it necessary for a number of women to supplement the family budget.

These outside jobs have given farm families' incomes a big financial bost. The median income of farm families was $3,125 in 1954, as compared to $1,955 prior to the time that the farm wife was employed.

This means, according to Uncle Sam's percentage wizards, that the farm family with a working wife had a median income 60 per cent larger than the family in which the wife did not pick up a pay check.

The overall employment picture for women, married and single, is breaking all records. Mrs. Alice K. Leopold, assistant to the secretary of labor for women's affairs, reports that the employment of women averaged 20 million during 1955.

That's a million above the peak years of 1943-45 during World War II. Now there are women reported to be in every one of the 446 occupations listed by the Labor Department.

A growing number of girls are making strides in such professions as medicine, chemistry, theology, law, accounting and engineering. Studies do indicate, however, that single women, particularly those over 35 years of age, are more likely to be working in the professions.

Of the employed single gals over 35, professional jobs were held by 24 per cent as against 10 per cent of married working women in this age group.

GRACE FRIEND

Dear Grace.

All my life which is 37 years, I have been very sensitive. It really is a curse. I have spent many agonizing hours trying to figure out if what people meant was to hurt me and should I let them get away with it or was it just said in fun and no wrong intent meant.

It's so hard for me to figure out which is insult and which is kidding. I come from a very serious family and we are all alike in that. I've seen my brothers get into some terrible fights over things that were said.

SHRUG IT OFF

And yet should we shrug off everything that is said to us making a whipping post of ourselves for some one else. I'm tired of people telling me I'm sensitive and yet I think those same people are blunt to my way of thinking. For example, I'm with a friend and I have lots of fun then I get home and brood about the things that were said and I'm mad I didn't have a come back at the time. Are there any certain rules for us sensitive people.

Thanks so much for your help.
Unhappy

Dear Unhappy

A person who can't forget it when her feelings are hurt is a problem to everyone who knows her as well as to herself.

DON'T SULK

Do not allow yourself to sulk or feel sorry for yourself. Don't mope around harboring resentment against your friends. Because the longer you think about it the more distorted the situation becomes and after a while you have some casual remark made into a thing of great importance.

I believe that it was Lincoln who suggested that a person whose feelings are hurt sit down at his desk, write a letter to the person who hurt him, telling the whole story, telling him what you think of him, stating all of the facts. And then, Lincoln said, tear the letter up and throw it away and with it will go your hurt feelings.

ANALYZE FEELINGS

Analyze your feelings carefully next time you are hurt and try to discover to what extent you yourself are responsible for the situation. Make up your mind that you will not think about being hurt and work at forgetting the incident. Remember always that people are too much interested in their own affairs to make a project of hurting others. You aren't important enough to them for them to waste time trying to see how they can hurt you. If you think you are then you are overestimating your own importance, spending too much time thinking about yourself.

From now on think about other people — not yourself and you will find that you haven't time to be sensitive.

MATURE PARENT

By MRS MURIEL LAWRENCE

Mrs. R.'s father headed the high school's science department in the town where she grew up. Whenever as a child she experienced any hurt or discouragement at school, she'd think comfortingly, "(Anyway, no kid dares ever be mean to Daddy. Not even teachers dare to be mean to Daddy."

Last Saturday was her eight-year-old son's birthday. Among other gifts, Will received a microscope from his parents and a baseball mitt from an uncle.

His mother, who had bought the finest equipment available to go with the microscope, eagerly opened his box of glass specimen slides. "This feather specimen will look just like a fern," she was saying when looking up, she saw that Will had left her.

Out in the hall he was standing before the mirror, making a catcher's reaching motions. Rhythmically with little grunts of pleasure he was smacking the fist of one hand into the mitted palm of the other.

Watching him, Mrs. R. rejected her child, just as you and I have when our youngsters have demonstrated in some way that they're not going to give us some personality feature we want.

At these moments, we like to imagine that we are merely "disappointed" in the child who gives us an interest in baseball instead of biology; a snub nose instead of an aquiline one; shyness instead of self-confidence.

The fact is, we're dishonest. Our attitude represents rejection just as dropping a glove that doesn't fit us back on the counter is rejection. If we're not brave enough to realize that we have dropped the child because he doesn't fit our prejudiced demand, we may never discover what our prejudice is, let alone how strongly it governs us.

For example, the prejudice in Mrs. R. that wants to make Will into a duplicate of her father affects her marriage as well as her motherhood, Becauase her father's academic achievement meant comforting prestige to her as a little girl, she respects no other kind.

This has been hard on her husband, a capable business executive. Due to the contempt she feels for his achievements, he has long since stopped asking her for understanding of his problems.

To know what an enemy this childish prejudice has been to her is pretty important to Mrs. R.

It's always sensible to look squarely at any rejecting feeling we have toward a child. Always, its kernel is prejudice — some rigid and unreasonable value we have acquired as a child.

Until we can locate it and destroy it, it can continue to make us and our families miserable because they do not give us what prejudice says they should.

Honey is a true sweet with simple sugars you can easily digest. That is why you get quick energy when you eat honey.

Honey is a safe food to feed to infants because its high sugar content discourages the growth of disease bacteria. Many doctors tell mothers to sweeten baby's milk with honey.

Honey does have small quantities of those minerals needed for the growth and health of the body. Particularly, it helps keep calcium in the bodies of young infants.

The '90's were gay, indeed, for wire manufacturers, who hustled to keep up with the bustle demand. Lace-covered braided wire bustle, above, was advertised as "very light, beautiful in shape and durable." Price—75 cents, complete with "extra fine trimmings."

Steel Wire Plays Important Part Today Behind Frills And Flounce Of Fashion

CLEVELAND, O. —(NEA) —All dressed up, ready to step out on a date, the modern miss is literally wired together. She is as dependent on wire to hold her clothing together as she was in crib days when everything depended on the safety pin, also fashioned from wire.

America's steel wire industry is pausing this year to memorialize its 125th anniversary. And it wants the ladies, as they breeze about in their airy habiliments, to realize how much they depend on their product even though their costumes weigh so little.

It would be a mistake to consider the day of the hoop skirt and the bustle as the golden era of wire. Lillian Russell was a great benefactor of the industry in the 1880's and 1890's. She popularized many styles including the sweeping skirt, the huge, wire - skeletoned hat, the hat pin and the parasol.

But today, even though the wire is not so apparent, it plays an even more important prt in women's clothing than it did then.

To some extent, the same old wired hoop skirts are still in existence, hidden under bouffant evening gowns. Formally dressed brides wear them also.

But that's only the beginning. Wire is far more important in the strapless brassiere. It is still used in girdles, modern counterpart of the armor-plated bullet-proof-corset of old.

At the top of the list is the slide-fastener. It is manufactured from a flat wire. It qualifies since wire is defined as "thin steel of ductile metal." Ductile means "capable of being drawn out" and that's the way wire is made, with the strands pulled through dies to give it size and shape.

Bobby pins, hair pins, safety pins and straight pins all are wire. Great amounts of it are found in jewelry and ornaments. Many hats still get their shapes from it. Hooks and eyes and snaps have it.

Its use is sometimes subtle. Purses are constructed with basket-handle wire. The hook in a belt buckle is wire. Eye-glasses, plastic or not, have it as their skeletons.

There's more of it in an umbrella. Florists' wire is the framework for a corsage. Your wrist watch couldn't run without wire. The contents of a purse, considering spring hinges on cosmetic cases and the wire in pencils and pens, would yield many examples.

It's in shoes, for the tiny nails in the heels, at least, were originally great rolls of fine metal strands.

Ichabod Washburn, in 1830, tinkered with a method for drawing iron rods into finer strands in order to make screws. When he was successful and began operation in a plant in Northville, Miss., the following year he made history. The American Steel & Wire Co. traces its birth to this event.

From it came an industry which counts 160,000 uses for its product today. There are 3,000 different kinds of nails alone.

And to keep the chicks chic is a vital duty. And this includes production o fthe omnipresent safety pin which can be called in at the last moment to just generally hold things together in time of need.

Wired for glamor of the era, actress Lillian Russell helped set the stage for wire-worked wonders in women's apparel.

Equal parts of honey and lemon juice blended well make a delicious dressing for fruits in salad. Garnish with berries in season.

For a rich and tasty ice cream sundae, use honey. Sprinkle finely chopped nuts over top if desired.

Girl Pinned Under Auto For 9 Days

By MICHAEL O'CONNOR
United Press Staff Correspondent

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (UP)—Plucky Jean Margetts, looking 80 instead of 18, was found "just barely alive" Tuesday night beneath a wrecked automobile where she had lain nine days without food and water.

Rescuers found the emaciated young woman only 15 feet away from the body of her sweetheart, James B. Hixon Jr., 22. He apparently died the night of June 24 shortly after their car went over a Wasatch Mountain highway while they were returning to Salt Lake City from a fishing trip.

Hixon was on his hands and knees as though he was crawling for help. He was to have married in September in the Mormon Temple at Salt Lake City.

Expected To Recover

Physicians said Miss Margetts would recover. She suffered severely from shock and exposure and her legs were bruised by being pinned beneath the overturned auto.

Highway patrolmen who rescued the Sunnyvale, Calif., girl after a search plane spotted the missing Hixon auto in a clump of trees below U.S. Highway 40 east of Salt Lake City, said she began weeping when they rolled the car off her.

"My leg hurts. . I'm cold," she murmured. Only semi-conscious, she was not questioned extensively by authorities.

The questions on how she managed to survive — or if she knew Hixon was dead — remained to be answered when she recovered from the shock.

Had Lots Of Stamina

Her mother, Mrs. Larence R. Margetts, said her five-foot four brunette daughter had always been athletically inclined and "the stamina built this way must have saved her."

Mrs. Margetts, waiting in the hospital emergency room early today, broke down herself when a state trooper suggested "if you ever doubt that the Lord's watching over us, think of this."

Hospital attendants said the girl probably had been unconscious much of the time, otherwise "she would have used all her energy."

The couple was reported missing when Miss Margetts and Hixon failed to return June 24 from their trip to Strawberry Reservoir in central Utah.

Planned For Wedding

They had gone together while the Margetts family lived here, until moving to Sunnyvale two years ago. She had returned to Utah three weeks ago for a church dance festival and remained to visit a sister and prepare for her September wedding.

The route from Salt Lake City to the reservoir had been traced many times by ground and aerial searching parties but the wrecked car remained hidden until last evening.

The auto had gone off a new, wide highway, over a vertical 50 foot bank to an old road, over a ledge and into the trees at the bottom of a steep gully where it was invisible from the heavily travelled U.S. 40.

The machine was spotted by Don Demming of Salt Lake City, flying a Fish and Game Commission light plane. He radioed the highway patrol and guided troopers to the scene.

POLISH

feelings in Poland are growing by leaps and bounds," one traveler reported. "The Poznan uprising appears to have ignited the long-smoldering hatred Poles had for years against their Communist government."

Other travelers said they heard reports in Warsaw and Poznan that "several organized armed resistance bands had engaged in hit-and-run raids" against isolated Polish army posts. They added that the reports could not be confirmed "but there is no doubt that such underground units exist and have become active since the Poznan riots."

A West German intelligence organization, which claims good underground sources in Poland, said Polish troops and tanks inflicted heavy casualties on the partisan band they flushed in the forest between the Netze and Warthe rivers, in the neighborhood of Schneidemuehl.

It was the first report of fighting in Poland since Red troops and tanks crushed the "food and freedom" workers revolt in Poznan last week.

NOTHING TO PLAY WITH—Resembling a giant-size version of a roll of caps for a toy gun, strip and roll held by masked researcher gives off a potentially much more explosive report. Strip is produced by the robot chemical analyzer, right, at Hanford plutonium plant, Richland, Wash. It automatically fills "dimples" with samples of waste from refining process. Strip passes under a radiation counter, which signals engineers when precious plutonium fuel appears in flow. Device reduces hazard incident to manual testing and may save $250,000 per year, according to General Electric engineers who operate the plant for the AEC.

Private Vs. Public Power Battle Looms

By VINCENT J. BURKE
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP)—Congress is heading into stormy battles over private vs. public power. Final outcome is in doubt.

The power issue has been posted — directly or indirectly — by three separate bills which await final congressiinal action.

They are:

A bill to authorize federal construction of a $350 million dam in Hells Canyon on the Snake River on the Idaho-Oregon border. The Democratic - sponsored legislation squeaked through the Senate and House interior committees last week by close votes over strong federal license already granted to the Idaho Power Co. to develop the power.

A bill to allow the power at Niagara Falls to be developed by New York State instead of private electric companies. The bill has passed the Senate. It cleared the House Public Works committee Friday by a vote of 18 to 16. Most Republicans voted against it. The Democratic - controlled committee refused to accept a compromise plan proposed by the private firms.

A bill calling for government construction of large-scale atomic power plants. It cleared the Joint Congressional Atomic committee 14 to 0 on Friday. It would authorize federal outlays of up to $400 million.

The atomic construction bill was a modified version of an earlier bill which the Atomic Energy Commission and the administration had opposed. Seeking to avoid the private vs. public power issue, the committee directed that new plants be built only to supply power for AEC installations.

Republicans were divided over the modified version. Rep. W. Sterling Cole (N.Y.), senior Republican spokesman in the House on atomic matters, supported it.

Harriett Cook Rites Set

Miss Harriett Cook, 5, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cook, 1326 E. Kingsmill, died in an Oklahoma City hospital yesterday at 3:15 p.m. She had been ill for several months.

Funeral services wil be held at 3 p.m. Thursday in the First Baptist Church with Rev. E. Douglas Carver, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery.

Miss Cook was born Dec. 12, 1950 in Pampa. Her survivors are her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cook; one sister, Jan Cook; and grandparents, Mrs. Ella Brake and Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer Cook, all of Pampa.

TWINNING

burg, Pa., farm to report his detailed observations to the President. He will be one of the first official visitors since Mr. Eisenhower went to the farm to recuperate from his June 9 operation.

Twining also was expected to be called for testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee, whose air power subcommittee is making an exhaustive investigation of American air power in relation to Russia's.

While Twining has gone along with administration budget proposals and bomber production rates for the fiscal year just started, he has been emphatic that more money will have to be spent next year than this. He has proposed that the Strategic Air Command be equipped with 17 wings of B52 heavy bombers instead of the presently planned 11 which would mean buying approximately 300 more B52's than now planned.

Democrats After Views

Democrats will press for his views on the need for more bombers now that he has had the benefit of the Russian tour. Wilson says that enough are planned now but that he will carefully consider any proposals resulting from Twining's visit.

Press accounts of the Twining expedition indicated that the Russians displayed no startlingly new aircraft as some had forecast they might. There were some improved fighters and a twin-engine light bomber alleged to be supersonic. The planes showed "normal evolution" rather than anything radical, according to Pentagon officials.

No moves to invite Russian air chiefs here have yet been made, authorities said. They regarded the Twining mission as an "opening of the door" but said further moves are in abeyance pending his report to the President, Wilson and the other chiefs of staff.

HOLIDAY

illac complete with chauffeur over to the state police for the day. Elsewhere, law officials took off in airplanes to search for traffic violators and set up portable drunk-o-meters to get intoxicated drivers off the roads immediately.

Planes cruised over Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri, Minnesota, Indiana, Florida, and Illinois roads, relaying reports of erratic drivers to prowl cars on the ground.

Illinois maintained a 30-hour "traffic death watch" to keep an up-to-the-minute count of deaths. Illinois led the nation in traffic deaths in the Memorial Day holiday.

Rain Is Widespread

Widespread showers over much of the nation east of the Rockies were greeted with mixed emotions by safety experts. Some expected the rain to encourage greater caution namong drivers.

Other observers predicted the showers would boost the toll because of slippery roads and diminished visibility.

Police shifts in some states lasted as long as 19 hours. California, frequent leader in highway deaths used special squads to find drunken drivers and the taverns where they drank.

Sheriff's deputies in Clarion, Iowa, manned a roadside table where motorists were offered free coffee and doughnuts. The plan was to induce drivers to stop, rest, and resume their trips feeling more alert and relaxed.

Learning Reteats

"This last is important, for a teacher teaches himself before he teaches his subject. Students learn to appraise your character before they settle down to chemistry. They absorb your ethics before your English.

"The teacher is, more than most others, the visible influential total of his ideals. It is impossible that he stands at the front of a room filled with impressionable adolescents and not be considered primarily as a teacher.

"There are very few young teachers who are not wholly devoted to the progressive system; to be young and in opposition to current educational theory is an an anomaly. If you do oppose it, say so, your younger colleagues are eager to predict your ultimate failure."

These are not the words of an editor attempting to show the end results of a government monopoly in the field of ideas, as promoted by our government schools, but a public school teacher who says:

"I quit teaching because I felt that the system under which I was teaching was false — materialist in premise and pragmatic in application."

Joan Dunn is the writer who makes the above observations in her new book "Retreat from Learning," ($3.00 David McKay Company, Inc., New York).

The author then points out that any newcomer to the field of teaching "is overwhelmed at first and foremost by the theory of progressive education, the classroom application of the philosophy of John Dewey."

"His theories, practices, and reforms must be accepted or rejected by every teacher who comes in contact with them. The teacher encounters progressive education and soon hails or denounces it, for it is too important to be merely tolerated. One must take a stand for or against.

"Dewey introduced the idea that unless the working of everyday world was made the major part of a child's study, his education would be inadequate — downright harmful.

"Dewey taught that children must feel the need to know. Learning should never be forced on them. Lastly, he taught that morality, in the sense of a rule to guide men in judging their actions, should never be regarded as dogmatic. This doctrine can be applied today in the following manner: A child is not censured for cheating on an exam because if he did not cheat he would surely fail; the failure would part him from his companions, and it is more important that he remain with his age group than master his studies — or be honest."

As we pointed out earlier, these are the words of a public school teacher who finds no objection to the public school system, itself, other than the manner in which the public schools are operating. It is little wonder that our government schools are progressively becoming less and less satisfactory, even to their supporters, as we continue to reap the whirlwind of statism and sloughing of responsibility that is part and parcel of the public school system.

We only hope that as more and more people see the "mess the public schools are in," that they will inquire further into the question of "why" and come to realize that not only are the public schools doing a miserable job for the students of today but also that the system is based on immorality.

The Doctor Says

By EDGAR P. JORDAN, M. D

I suspect that the first question arises because it is easier to take a pill than to exert will power over one's appetite.

Q — Would a small minus degree on the basal melabolism make one gain weight? — Mrs. S.

A small minus reading (and even a large one) on the basal metabolic test is not likely to be responsible for a gain in weight. Too many calories is the probable explanation.

Q — Is polio contagious through kissing when the individual has had it years ago? A friend had it when a little boy. He is now in his late 20's and I wonder if it would affect his children if he marries.—Mrs. B.

A — There would be no danger of contracting polio from someone who had the disease years ago. The virus which causes polio apparently remains with a stricken individual for only a short time so that contagion would be out of the question. Polio is not an hereditary disease and therefore, if the man referred to marries and has children there is no reason why they should not be entirely healthy.

Q — If a person eats garlic every day, at every meal, would high blood pressure be reduced—Mrs. R. S.

A — The breath would get "high" but the blood pressure would remain the same.

Q — In a case of arrested tuberculosis could chemical gases and smoke contribute to a new outbreak of the disease?—A. H.

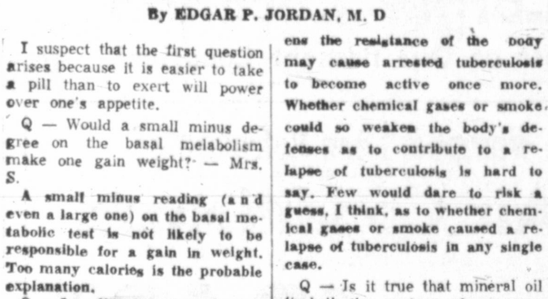

A — Any influence which weakens the resistance of the body may cause arrested tuberculosis to become active once more. Whether chemical gases or smoke could so weaken the body's defenses as to contribute to a relapse of tuberculosis is hard to say. Few would dare to risk a guess, I think, as to whether chemical gases or smoke caused a relapse of tuberculosis in any single case.

Q — Is it true that mineral oil "robs" the system of necesary vitamins?—Mrs. N. A.

A — Mineral oil taken by mouth in any quantity prevents, at least to some degree, the absorption of vitamins through the intestinal tract. In this way, therefore, a person who was receiving enough vitamins might not get the benefit from them if he or she were taking mineral oil.

Q — I am 22 years old and after giving birth to a child my hair began to fall out. I was assured this was normal and that it would stop, but after 14 months my hair is still falling out. What should I do?—Mrs. K. E.

A — It is not excessively unusual for the hair to fall out partially, or even completely, following childbirth. Why this occurs, however, is something of a mystery. It is my understanding that the hair usually grows back eventually. Where it does not, as in this case, every effort should be made to find some general or local condition which could be remedied. A situation of this sort can be puzzling indeed.

BETTER JOBS

By R. C. HOILES

Steel Collective Bargaining Vs. Free Enterprise

When one reads the news columns and the advertising placed by the steel companies in regard to the proposed five - year labor contract, one is more convinced than ever of the truth of Isabel Patterson's statement that "most of our trouble comes from good people."

The steel companies are demanding a five-year no - strike agreement in steel. They contend that everyone would benefit by such an agreement. That might be true if only five years were considered and moral principles and justice are disregarded but it is indeed very, very doubtful whether anyone would even materially benefit, let alone spiritually, by such a five-year contract by the thirteen leading steel companies entering into a collective bargaining agreement such as the steel companies have proposed.

As I read their presentation, it calls for an average increase in costs of 13 cents an hour for five years, plus any increase that might result from an increased cost in living resulting from inflation. No decrease in costs, however, if the cost of living goes down.

Purely from an economic standpoint, no one is smart enough or wise enough to know what wages should be from year to year, let alone a five-year period. Wages always ought to be just as high as possible so everybody that wants to work can have jobs other than seasonable unemployment.

Nor do the heads of the steel companies know whether or not the present wages of steel workers are fair and just to other workers and to the stockholders. No one knows because under a collective bargaining contract made under the threats of strikes, we have no free market value. Collective bargaining contracts prevent individual contracts and thus prevent free and individual competition, which is the only possible way of determining true values.

Any value that is attempted to be established where some individuals are deprived of the right to help establish values, are a farce and a form of plunder. They are the very opposite from the American way of life where all men — not just some men— have equal rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

The whole purpose of collective bargaining is to take away from individuals their God - given right to use their mental faculties. It is about the worst form of collectivism. it is the antithesis of the principles of the Christian and Jewish religions and the American way of life as set forth in the Declaration of Independence.

A five-year frozen contract that can go up but cannot go down, as the steel magnets propose in the very thing that causes long periods of unemployment and bigger and bigger government that interferes with freedom in their attempt to reduce the injustice occurring from just such contracts as the steelmagnets propose in order to ward off a real settlement of the true value of labor producing steel and the true value of steel.

The whole scheme seems to be determining values by might and the threats of chaos rather than by having jobs interchangeable where all men can help establish values. And, as stated above, there is no true value when any man is deprived of his right to help establish values.

Emotion The Trouble

The general belief in the United States in collective bargaining is the result of emotion rather than reason. Way back in 1907 or 1908, if I remember correctly, the Methodists, in their social creed, endorsed collective bargaining. The year later, the National Council of Churches endorsed collective bargaining. Little did they realize what collective bargaining meant.

"Collective" means "collective." It means there are no individual rights.

Undoubtedly these church leaders, governed by emotion rather than reason or foresight, did not see how collective bargaining would enslave mankind, as such contracts as the steel companies propose, where men have to join a union in order to get a job, are doing.

These church leaders evidently have had an influence on the officers of the steel companies. There is nothing in the proposals of the steel companies that goes to the root of the trouble. Of course we should have no strikes, but year by year, due to men of influence not taking a stand for the rights of the individual, the individual has been losing his God - given rights.

And these men who pose as leaders of religion and industry and education have so bewildered the general public that laws have been made that give men who belong to a labor union and their bosses great advantage over men who believe in the American free enterprise system.

Under the present laws, employers are not committing a crime if they refuse to employ a real Christian or real Jew who refuses to join a union. They are, however, committing a crime if they refuse to employ men who have discarded the ideologies of the American way of life and the Jewish and Christian ethics and are members of a collectivist group that denies an individual his right to use his conscience.

All our progress comes from individual competition on a voluntary basis, and the collective bargaining contracts proposed by the leading steel companies only make it harder and tougher in the long run to return to the American way of life. So instead of the five-year contract benefiting everyone, as the thirteen leading steel companies contend, it would, in the long run, benefit no one.

F.D.R.'s Methods Are Not Used In 1956

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — The year of 1956 may go down — or up — in economic history as a period when the Federal Government first tried to manage and stabilize the economy at a high level without resort to the emergency methods adopted by F.D.R. in 1933. Success or failure will be one of the most important stories in America's peacetime annals.

President Roosevelt responded to the 1929-1933 crash with the WPA-PWA spending, altering the monetary value of gold and silver, and with NRA-AAA controls. But confidence and business activity were really restored, slowly and painfully, by bolstering the banks, industries, railroads, agriculture and small enterprises through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Although created by Herbert Hoover, the R.F.C. did not become an economic life-saver until the late Jesse H. Jones of Houston became chairman. Together with the Vandenberg program of insuring bank deposits, the R.F.C. halted the threatened tide of disaster.

History will probably proclaim the Texas banker as one of the ablest economic statesmen of our day, if not of the 20th century. The other would be the late Lord Keynes of England.

In sharp contrast, President Eisenhower and Treasury Secretary Humphrey shun all unorthodox practices. They have opposed Democratic planners' demands for blueprinting a grandiose public works program (another Ickesian PWA), to be started when and if the economy sags.

Even the R.F.C, despite the fact that the Truman Administration transformed it into a "political pawnshop," as Mr. Jones used to say, has been liquidated at a profit.

In rare unity, the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board have co-ordinated for regulating the supply of cash and credit in accord with the needs of all sectors of the national economy. It is a simple system to describe, but it is a complex mechanism to operate, to wit:

When people become too optimistic, with businessmen and manufacturers expanding and producing too abundantly, and with buyers incurring too heavy a debt on a dollar-down and a-dollar-a-week, the Federal Reserve Board cuts the flow of money by raising interest rates, or the cost of borrowed money and credit.

When these brakes have the intended effect, slowing down production and purchasing, thus causing unemployment and business losses, they are released by lowering interest rates and other conventional means. But the process of sluicing money into the national stream of business and industry, or of damming the flow, is a managerial, not a crisis, operation.

The danger, of course, lies in the fact that the Treasury and Federal Reserve money managers may read the signs of inflation or deflation incorrectly, and call the wrong play at the wrong time. Both Secretary Humphrey and Federal Reserve Chairman William McChesney Martin, Jr., admit that such a misreading is always a possibility.

However, they seek and obtain expert advice from the leaders of American industry, bannking, commerce and agriculture. It is a valuable contact which neither the Roosevelt nor Truman Administration wanted or enjoyed, despite criticism by Democratic investigators on Capitol Hill.

Should these conventional methods fail to prevent inflation or deflation, more extreme methods may be adopted, for Ike promised in 1952 that he would not permit a depression on his time. He remembers the GOP's 20-year exile from 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue because of 1929-1933.

Severe restrictions on installment buying can be applied, if the economy runs amuck, and banks' lending rates can be raised. But if there is a decline, politics being what it is, a tax cut that will boost spending power and a Rooseveltian program of public works can be adopted.

In fact, defense spending, the highway building and school expension, if adopted over the blockade of anti-segregationists, insure prosperity of a sort for the next few years.

FOR REFLECTION

...with JAMES C. INGEBRETSEN President, Spiritual Mobilization

From Eniwetok, Los Angeles Times Reporter Marvin Miles recently sent a news story that, in telling how one war was averted, gave a good clue as to how all wars can be avoided.

It seems that last September the U. S. decided to build a weather station on Fumatahachi, an uninhabited island 900 miles from Eniwetok. Holmes & Narver of Los Angeles was given the job of building it and the comapny's 35 Eniwetok - stationed employees sailed over and started clearing away several score palm trees on the island.

A native scout saw the strange happenings and reported to the tribe's chief on a nearby island. The chief declared war on the U. S. and, said Reporter Miles, the odds were with him, for he had some 100 warriors to pit against the 34 construction men.

However, the company men invited the chief, before he started his war, to see a movie — a typical Western. Never having seen a movie before, the chief and the people he brought with him "were entranced by the amazing things they saw on a sheet stretched between two palm trees." And the war was called off.

Well, you see what happened: the tribe's emotions were changed—from enragement to enchantment. And they no longer wanted to fight.

We can have disarmament conferences and open - sky inspections and NATO's ad infinitum — and continue to be faced with war. Only when the emotions of potential enemies are changed will the threat of war cease.

A week later he ran another ad—"I asked God-loving people to help clean up and fix the church. No one responded. I am now asking the sinners to come and help."

German's Adventures Are Jungle Of Intrigue

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

The adventures of Adam Von Trott, a young German aristocrat who died before a Nazi firing squad, are beginning to shape up as the story of a daring spy within the vast jungle of intrigue in the interests of Soviet Russia during the Roosevelt reign.

As I have hitherto reported, Von Trott came here in the summer of 1940 and visited William Jay Schieffelin, a rich New York importer of liquor and drugs who had amassed an impressive and impudent record of association with Communist fronts. Later, Schieffelin threw in with Isadore Lipschutz and Louis M. Nizer, a New York-Hollywood lawyer, in the society for the prevention of World War III. The Society's program was a variation of Henry Morgenthau's plan to junk all German industry and withdraw the troops of the western allies beyond the English Channel and the Pyrenees, thus ceding the territorial conquest of Europe to the atheistic Soviet Empire. Lipschutz is a tireless plotter who had a hard time getting American citizenship.

The Society for the Prevention of World War III is a letter-head layout, one of whose directors, an admiral, was surprised to learn that he was listed as such and explained that he had just agreed to become a member when Lipschutz, a stranger, buttonholed him at a banquet. It is not a Communist front or apparatus, but its program would not have offended the Kremlin at that time. Lipschutz also operates a gumshoe force who have brazenly boasted, in books, of treachery to loyal Americans who employed them in good faith. This is known as the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League. Lipschutz is the boss of both. They hold no membership meetings and one president of the Anti-Nazi league did not know where he could lay hands on a roster.

The present William Jay Schieffelin, known as Junior, is head of the firm and he explained recently that his father suffered from arterial trouble which impaired his judgment in some matters in his last years. Be that as it may, William Jay Schieffelin, Sr., gave hospitality to Adam Von Trott, who was a relative through the German line of the family and a Communist agent bent on Communist business on his visit here. During that visit he dropped down to Washington and spent two hours with a Justice of the Supreme Court who had planted a veritable apparatus of proteges in the Federal bureaucracy many of whom turned out to be Comunists, some of them actual Soviet spies. The FBI was all over Von Trott from the time the British Intelligence let him slip through onto a ship bound for New York and kept him under its eye while he attended a meeting of the Institute of Pacific Relations. Correspondence seized for the McCarran committee of the Senate in a barn in New Hampshire in 1950 indicated that officers of the Institute had arranged Von Trott's visit here.

Von Trott returned to Germany by way of the Orient and Russia. He had served in the Nazi Foreign Office under Hitler and in 1939 had gone to Cliveden, Lady Astor's estate on the Thames, where he decided that Churchill and Anthony Eden lacked political power to throw the nation into war if he should invade Poland. He so reported to Potsdam. Three months later, Hitler struck and the war was on. This information was revealed by the British Foreign Office last month.

William Jay Schieffelin, Jr., insists that Von Trott was not a Communist but a true German who hated Hitler's tyranny. Like his father, Junior takes full advantage of his rights to his opinions. He fought for the United States in World War I, but he thinks Alger Hiss was guilty of nothing worse than perjury and has made full atonement. He holds no harsh opinion of the conduct of J. Robert Oppenheimer and on inquiry it comes out that Lloyd K. Garrison, a New York lawyer representing Oppenheimer, is related to Schieffelin by marriage. The skein is tangled, but the threads show that Garrison is a member of the law firm whose senior member, the late Randolph Paul, was chief counsel of the Treasury under Morgenthau through most of the treacherous career of the master spy, Harry Dexter White. Felix Frankfurter, who got Hiss his first job in Washington and testified for him, recommended Garrison for General Counsel of the Treasury, but Garrison had made a remark that the Hitler-Stalin pact was not altogether bad and this heresy excluded him from that job at that time.

Try For Visa Upsets Mac's Good Nature

By HENRY McLEMORE

MADRID — If you are bored with your youthful appearance, the buoyancy of your step, and your eternal good nature, let me suggest that you visit the French Consulate here and try for a special visa for Algiers.

After the tenth visit — and that's par for the course — you won't recognize yourself. Your face will have furrows like a plowed field, your feet will drag, and you'll be able to hold your own with champion snappers and snarlers.

I will admit that my inability to speak either French or Spanish, and the lack of English on the part of the consulate official I delt with complicated matters.

I had made three trips before my Frenchman knew where I wanted to go and what I was after. Instead of helping things, that made things worse. He finally got it across to me - - as if I didn't already know - - that there was a pretty good war going on in Algeria, and Algiers was not spot for a tourist. I had better add that my Frenchman explained this to me in a language that two of us had invented after many days. It was a mongrel language, a desperation Esperanto worked out by two harried souls.

Permission for entry into Algiers must come from the Prefect of Police there. I paid for a cable to the Prefect, but my consulate friend told me (a day later) I needn't expect to get an answer. It seems one has to pay for a round-trip cable. France is not spending any francs on American tourists.

So I laid out enough pesetas for an answer. It has never come, and that was days ago. To find out that there has been no action, I have to make a long taxi trip to the Consulate. I tried the telephone, but to get a Spanish operator to get the number, and then to get a mess of parlez-vous about half an hour later, had me scraping the bottom of my barrel of Milltowns.

Meanwhile, I worked two other sources, the American Embassy and TWA. The Embassy referred me to the Algiers Prefect of Police, my same old cable friend of no reply. But through TWA, with the charming Senorita Carmen Galan working from this end, and one Bob Berle in operation in Algiers, things began to shape up.

This morning Senorita Galan called me to say my TWA flight to Algiers was confirmed, and that she had a message authorizing Mary and me to get off there. I went over to take a look at it and it wasn't very impressive. Just a teletype note that said: "Okay Mr. Lemores debark Algiers. Berle."

"That all we need?" I asked.

"It'll work?

"Positive," the senorita said.

"Who is this Berle, the Prefect of Police's frist cousion?" I asked.

"No, just a nice American fellow who runs TWA there. But he probably knows the Prefect."

So we're hopping off tomorrow. Even if we don't manage to get off in Algiers, it won't be too bad, because this TWA flight touches Tunis, Rome, Athens and Cairo before calling it a day. All good cities. Besides, they sell American cigarettes aboard, and these Spanish ones have my tongue curled up like an exhausted anchovy.

Braves Back On Top; Blank Redlegs; Cubs Nudge Cards

By MILTON RICHMAN
United Press Sports Writer

Any team with pennant designs must have a "stopper," and the Milwaukee Braves, back in first place again today, believe they have come up with one in Lew Burdette.

Burdette pitched the Braves back on top when he beat the hard-hitting Cincinnati Redlegs, 7-0, Tuesday. It marked the second time the Redlegs were shut out this season and both were at the hands of the Braves.

Burdette, who has been taking up much of the slack brought on by Gene Conley's early-season arm trouble, coasted to his eighth victory behind a 14-hit attack that included a homer, double and single by Johnny Logan.

In knocking the Redlegs out of the lead, the Braves kayoed Joe Nuxhall with a three-run burst in the fifth and went on to win handily as Burdette walked only one man and never was in a serious jam.

Cubs Beat Cards

The Cubs took advantage of five Cardinal errors to score a 7-4 victory and move into sixth place. Two of the St. Louis errors came in the second inning when Chicago scored four runs. First, second baseman Don Blasingame dropped a double play ball and then losing pitcher Vinegar Bend Mizell threw wildly into right field attempting to throw out a runner at first base. Don Hoak's two-run triple was the big blow of the frame. Jim Davis notched the victory although requiring relief from Turk Lown in the eighth. It was the Cards' fourth straight setback.

A two-run homer by pinch hitter Bob Skinner in the ninth inning gave Pittsburgh a 6-5 decision over Philadelphia after Robin Roberts pitched two shutout innings to preserve a 7-2 victory for the Phils in a contest that was suspended last May 13.

Skinner's homer came off Jack Meyer and earned second baseman Johnny O'Brien his first pitching victory in the majors. O'Brien entered the game in the seventh inning and held the Phillies hitless over the final 2 1-3 innings.

The Dodgers and Giants were idle.

In the American League the Yankees retained their 3½ game lead with a 12 inning 4-3 triumph over the Orioles. Mickey McDermott's pinch single with the bases loaded in the 12th helped reliever Tom Sturdivant to his seventh victory and saved Mickey Mantle from being the "goat." Mantle misjudged a ninth-inning fly by Willie Miranda, the ball falling for a triple and paving the way for two runs that tied the score at 3-all.

Jim Wilson pitched a six-hit 6-0 victory for the White Sox in handing the Tigers their 12th straight defeat at home. Wilson posted his 11th victory of the season, outpitching southpaw Billy Hoeft, who gave up all of Chicago's runs. Walt Dropo homered for the White Sox.

Jim Lemon's 11th inning triple scored Roy Sievers with the run that gave Washington a 6-5 victory over Boston. The Senators scored five runs in the first inning off Dave Sisler and led until the ninth when the Red Sox tied the score with three runs off starter Dean Stone. Lemon collected four hits in packing Washington's 12-hit attack. Camilio Pascual was the winner.

Home runs by Vic Wertz, Jim Busby and Al Rosen led the Indians to a 9-3 triumph over last-place Kansas City. Mike Garcia started for the Tribe but gave way to Ray Narleski in the fifth. Narleski was credited with the victory, his third, although he injured his elbow in the seventh and was replaced by Don Mossi. Art Ditmar was the loser. Hector Lopez homered for the Athletics.

Walter Reed Team Favored To Take Title

TYLER, Tex. (UP) — Walter Reed Army hospital of Washington was favored today to repeat as team champions in the 1956 women's senior national AAU outdoor swimming and diving championships. Some 150 entrants will compete.

The meet gets under way tonight with the 1,500-meter freestyle, the only event on the opening day's program, and runs through Saturday.

Walter Reed Army hospital will be defending five individual titles and two relay championships.

Thursday's schedule includes the one-meter diving and finals in the 100-meter freestyle, 200 meter and the 400-meter individual medley.

In addition to both relay titles, Walter Reed swimmers are defending champions in five events. Betty Mullen Brey will defend her 100-meter butterfly title and is a strong favorite to become the first champion in the new 20-meter butterfly.

Wanda Werner is defending champion in the 100 freestyle, an event which every member of the Washington club has entered.

Dougie Gray holds the 400-meter freestyle title; Mary Jane Sears is defending 200 breaststroke champion, and Marie Gillett owns the 40 individual title.

Carolyn Green of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., will be defending both the 1,500 and 80-meter freestyle championships, while 16-year-old Carin Cone of Ridgewood, N.J., is defending both backstroke titles.

Pat McCormick is defending champion in both diving events. Teammate Paula Jean Myers is expected to be her toughest competition this year as she seeks to defend her Olympic title again.

New Terms Signed To Benefit Players

NEW YORK (UP)— It will take 325-million razor blades at a nickel apiece to pay for the gigantic new five-year world series and All-Star game television and radio contract being set up today by the commissioner of baseball at an overall price of $16,250,000.

Major league baseball players will receive retirement payments of up to $200 a month and gain numerous other benefits from the new contract.

Commissioner Ford Frick announced signing of the new contract at $3,250,000 a year Monday and it will go into effect next summer with the 1957 All-Star game. Although there was active bidding by several would-be sponsors including one which agreed to match the safety razor offer at the last minute, Frick said that the present sponsor would have been chosen in any duplicate bid situation because of the "cordial relationship" that has existed with them in the past.

Actually, the broadcasting rights were sold to the National Broadcasting Co., acting on behalf of the sponsor and NBC, of course, receives exclusive rights to the big baseball extravaganza.

Locals Pickup Sixth Straight Win, 7-6

CARLSBAD — The Pampa Oilers continued their winning ways Tuesday night with assists in the form of three Carlsbad errors, to whip the home standing Potashers 7-6 in the first of a three game series.

A seventh inning error by right fielder Eddie Reed allowed Frank Kempa to take three bases and score on an infield out.

In the same inning Carlsbad catcher I. B. Palmer threw the ball into center field attempting to catcher Felix Guzman at second, and Guzman scored the second unearned run of the game, which was enough for the win.

Catcher Jim Martin poled a homer over the left field wall with John Bruzga on in the eighth to add insult to injury.

Eddie Reed, Potasher right fielder blasted one over the center field barrier with Howard Harkins aboard in the sixth.

The Potashers held a 6-3 edge at the end of six frames and were ahead 6-4 going into the eighth when the roof caved in.

Art Perina picked up the win in 3 and 1-3 inning relief stint and the loss was tagged on Dave Exter, Carlsbad starter who left in favor of Martin Perez in the eighth.

The same two clubs meet Wednesday in a traditional July fourth double header.

Miceli, Harper Meet Tonight

OAKLAND, Calif. (UP) — Joe Miceli, who explodes like a firecracker or whistles out like a dud once he is in the ring, will try to knock Maurice Harper back into oblivion tonight when the pair meet in a 10-round welterweight bout at the Oakland Auditorium.

Harper goes into the nationally televised contest (10 p.m. EDT) with only one fight under his belt since last August but has been made an 8-5 favorite to beat the erratic New Yorker who has lost two out of three bouts this year.

The fight is a crucial one for Harper and Manager Sid Flaherty, now casting about for a new "name" in his stable to take over for the fading Carl (Bobo) Olson, the dethroned middleweight king.

And Flaherty already is making title talk for Harper, a counter-punching boxer, from Oakland, Calif.

"I wish we could have had a warm-up bout before Miceli but there is no doubt in my mind that Harper is the best 147-pounder going today," Flaherty said. "If he beats Miceli he is supposed to be in line for an overweight bout with Johnny Saxton. Then they might meet again for the title if Harper does as well as I know he can."

Miceli, a converted southpaw from New York's East Side whose left hook is his best shot, wouldn't mind getting a crack at the world crown himself. His plan now is to win three fights in a row, something he hasn't done since the winter of 1954.

Miceli has looked alternately great in the ring and poor as he faces opponents with his upright stance and wearing extra high shoes that are reminiscent of a style, plus the devastating left hook, endear him to television fans and he figures he has had more than 40 video bouts.

Harper, a National AAU champion in 1949, only has had 29 professional bouts since that year. He was rated among the contenders for a while but personal difficulties have kept him out of the ring and he is back among the unranked. In his last appearance 10 months ago he flattened Al Villafarra of New Orleans in the seventh round. He has lost three times.

There are no games to be played in the Eastern and Western Little Leagues today. The regular schedule will resume action Thursday.

Tommy Ryan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Al Ryan, Shamrock, recently competed in Quanah golf tournament and advanced to the quarter-finals before being eliminated. He was accompanied by Garvin McCaskill, pro of the Shamrock Country Club golf course.

Sandlot and semipro baseball teams desiring to enter the Texas state tournament program should contact either the National Baseball Congress, Wichita, Kan., or G. H. "Jerry" Feille, 1911 Berkley Ave., Dallas, Texas. Two state divisional tournaments will be staged at Dallas, starting July 16 and Sinton, starting July 31. The two winners will then compete in a post-series to determine the Texas title. The Texas winner will then have a chance to compete in the second annual global world series in Milwaukee's spacious County Stadium, Sept. 7-12. This will be an all-expense trip to Milwaukee in a series which brings together champions from Asia, Europe, South and North America.

El Paso Takes Second Spot; Whips Ponies; Roswell Wins

By UNITED PRESS

The El Paso Texans moved into second place in the Southwestern League Tuesday night with its first victory of the season over Plainview.

The Texans got 18 hits off three hurlers to beat Plainview 10 to 5.

Hobbs sent 14 men to the plate in the eighth inning as the Sports blanked Clovis 14 to 0 to keep a six-game hold on first place.

Three Carlsbad errors in the seventh inning gave Pampa a 7 to 6 edging of the Potashers. Rightfielder Eddie Reed allowed Frankie Campa to take three bases and score on an infield out. Jim Martin homered for Pampa.

A ninth inning rally by the Colts fell short and Roswell trimmed San Angelo 5 to 4. Hal Simpson had a two-run homer for the Rockets.

Ballinger scored three times in the sixth inning to come from behind and defeat the Midland Indians 8 to 7. The big blows were Dale Scales' single and Vince Magi's two-run homer.

In Fourth of July doubleheaders tonight Clovis is at Hobbs, Roswell at San Angelo, Midland at Ballinger, Pampa at Carlsbad and Plainview at El Paso.

IT'S ROBBERY — Patty Berg stamped her foot and bellowed displeasure when she missed a putt during the Ladies' PGA tourney. It isn't all birdies and paychecks for the top distaff money winner.

LITTLE LEAGUE BASEBALL GAMES

There will be no action in either the Eastern or Western Little Leagues today. Kist will oppose First National Bank this afternoon in a Pony League tilt.

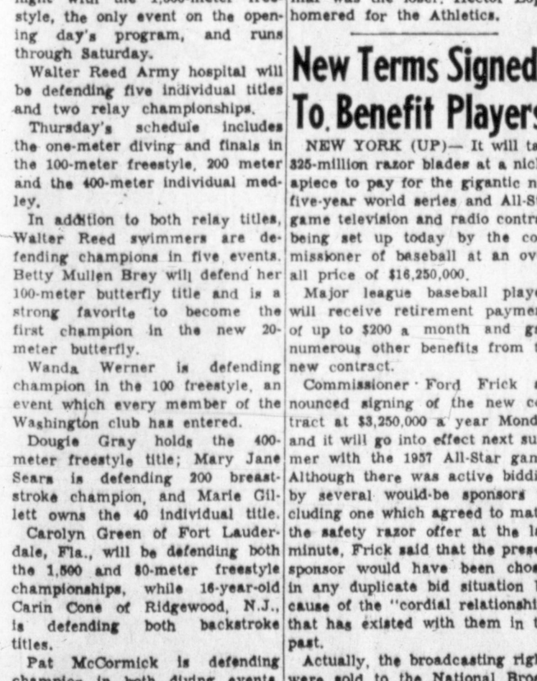

EASTERN LITTLE LEAGUE
Wednesday: No games on top.
WESTERN LITTLE LEAGUE
Wednesday: No games scheduled.

PONY LEAGUE
Wednesday: Kist vs First National Bank.

Deferred Action

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has deferred action on a resolution calling for a $5,000,000 U. S. payment to help finance the 1959 Pan-American Games in Cleveland, Ohio. The resolution was submitted by Sen. George H. Bender (R-Ohio).

HEART DISORDERS

Dr. G. E. Hall of the University of Toronto admits, after long research, that sudden death from heart disease is probably caused by reflex nerve action of certain sets of nerves.

The blood supply to the heart muscles, the heart rate, and the co-ordination of the heart with the rest of the body is regulated through the central nervous system. It is for this reason that interference with the transmission of nervous energy to the heart results in heart trouble. Unless an extensive portion of the heart is diseased, it will respond when interference is removed.

Dr. Gordon Miller D.C.

The great retarder is fear. Just plain old fear. People fear heart trouble like the ancients used to fear Black Plauge.

When fear causes you to turn your back on any treatment that has clinically proven merit, then fear is something that must go.

To conquer fear we must look it in the face and recognize it and do something. Action meets fear; Action can guide your footsteps along the same path followed by the following gentleman.

The Pampa business man in this case was just as frightened and fearful as you.

Heart trouble causing shortness of breath from just walking on the street, and the heavy pressure in his chest, fatigue, indigestion, sleeplessness, pain under ribs and in back and neck and tight feeling in his head brought this thoroughly frightened middle-aged father to the Miller Chiropractic Clinic not daring to hope that something might be done but still hoping.

Our spinal analysis and spinal X-rays located nerve interference that could have caused similar trouble so we began corrective adjustments. Before long this man could walk up hill and climb steps with no trouble at all and he began to eat without discomfort. His pains got easy and when last seen he was happy and doing fine. His load of fear was gone. His heart was functioning normally. No. 937.

For your own health's sake, investigate now. You have nothing to lose except your bad health.

1 Card of Thanks 1

Let not your heart be troubled, ye believe in God. Believe also in me.
In my Father's house are many mansions: If it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto Myself; that where I am, there ye may be also.
—John 14:2-3.

THE OTHER ROOM

No, not cold beneath the grasses,
Not close-walled within the tomb;
Rather, in my Father's mansion,
LIVING in another room.

Living, like the one who loves me,
Like yon child with cheeks abloom,
Out of sight, at desk or school book,
BUSY in another room.

Nearer than the youth whom fortune
Beckons where the strange lands loom;
Just behind the hanging curtain,
SERVING in another room.

Shall I doubt my Father's mercy?
Shall I think of death as doom,
Or the stepping o'er the threshold
To a bigger, brighter room?

Shall I blame my Father's wisdom?
Shall I sit enswathed in gloom,
When I know our loved one is happy,
WAITING in the other room?

W. A. Hughes

We take this means to express our sincere appreciation to our friends and neighbors whose many kindnesses to our family at the death of our beloved father and grandfather, W. A. Hughes, who passed away on June 25. To the Rev. Jon Jones of Church of Christ for his comforting message and to Duenkel-Carmichael Funeral Home for the impressive last rites.

Psychiatric Association Hits Drug Use

By DELOS SMITH

NEW YORK (UP)— The ever-increasing "tranquilizing" of Americans with drugs, which has been causing consternation and alarm among medical scientists, has, at last, drawn an official condemnation from the American Psychiatric Association.

It took notice of "the apparently widespread use of the "(tranquilizing) drugs by the public for the relief of common anxiety, emotional upsets, nervousness, and the routine tensions of everyday living."

This, it said, "is medically unsound and constitutes a public danger." It then took cognizance of the fact that physicians have been used to promote the drugs to other physicians. Physicians, it said, should not allow themselves to become involved "in public relations enterprises directed toward the premature announcement of of 'successful use' of particular products."

"Subite pressure" are operating "to foster public misunderstanding and misuse of the drugs," it said. There is "the normal competition among pharmaceutical houses to refine, promote and sell their own products." This has combined with "the eagerness of the public, and of physicians themselves, for 'good news' " about a new treatment for psychiatric disorders."

Dr. Franklin G. Ebaugh, professor of clinical psychiatry of the University of Colorado, tells in a nutshell in the current issue of the technical journal, "Postgraduate Medicine," why psychiatrists object to the use of drugs for the relief of ordinary anxieties and tensions. Drugs provide a "crutch" without getting to the crippling disorder which makes the use of a crutch necessary.
