To be able to live to be 100 years old is one thing; to be hale and hearty and able to enjoy the birthday is another. Mrs. Lurilla Miller, of Millerville, near Hico, Texas, celebrated her 100th birthday anniversary recently with a real birthday party. At the bottom we show her cake, from which her helping was a hefty slice. (Texas News Photos.)

Mr. and Mrs. G. V. Manning and Mr. Otis Blackwelder all of O'Donnell suffered painful injuries when the 1929 Chevrolet sedan in which they were riding was struck by a Santa Fe special train about noon Monday.

The ten-car special was on the way here to take the football team and fans to Slaton for the Armistice Day game. The Manning car, driven by Mr. Manning had started across the track when the driver saw and heard the train, which struck the car before it got across. The accident happened about two miles from town. Mrs. Manning received the most serious injury. A deep gash on the back of her head and bruises about the body.

The car was completely wrecked.

Golden Tornadoes Victorious In Annual Battle With Slaton

2,500 PEOPLE WITNESS GAME

The annual football game between the Slaton Tigers and the Lamesa Golden Tornadoes was won by the Lamesa representatives Monday afternoon, November 12, by a score of 37 to 0.

The Tornadoes scored in every quarter except the third when they faced the wind and when Slaton made their only bid for a score.

The locals took charge of the contest and scored early after a series of running plays had advanced the ball to the Slaton 40-yard line. A pass from Boswell to McKinnon, who received the ball on the run to cross the goal line standing up. The try for extra point was blocked.

A blocked Slaton punt, recovered by a Lamesa player after it had crossed the end line resulted in two more points for the Tornadoes.

At the beginning of the second quarter after Lamesa had made a sustained drive down the field to the Slaton 15-yard line only to be penalized for 15 yards, Boswell made one of the rarest plays now seen in football. Dropping back as though to pass he drop-kicked the ball squarely between the uprights for three more points. This play is so seldom seen in this part of the football world that it was probably the first time many of the fans had seen it happen.

After the kick off following the field goal, Slaton completed a long pass to bring the ball into Lamesa territory for the first time. After another incomplete pass, Boswell intercepted a Slaton pass standing on his own 20-yard line, and ran the remaining 80 yards for the second Lamesa touchdown. Perfect interference and blocking on the part of his team mates allowed Boswell to get through the Slaton team.

The kick for extra point was wide and the score at the half was Lamesa 17, Slaton 0.

The third quarter found the Slaton boys making their most determined bid for a score, keeping the ball in Lamesa territory for most of the period. In fact they advanced the ball to the Lamesa 5 yard line only to be held for downs. After Lamesa had kicked out they brought the ball back again and carried the ball over the goal line only to see the play brought back and Slaton penalized for being offside. Lamesa then took the ball on downs.

The fourth quarter saw the final and complete rout of the Tigers. A beautiful 70 yard punt by Boswell which Addison killed on the Slaton 3 yard line took the Tornadoes down in Slaton territory again, and after a poor kick by Slaton, Jordan carried the ball across. Berry scored again after another poor Slaton punt had left the Tornadoes in scoring position.

The last Lamesa touchdown was on a fluke play on the following kickoff. The Slaton players evidently forgot that the kick-off was a free ball, letting it roll across into the end zone, where a fan picked it up with the intention of throwing it to a Slaton player. However a Lamesa player caught the ball and grounded it for the score.

To name any outstanding player on either team would be a difficult job. For Lamesa the entire team played brilliant ball. Spectacular plays brought a few of the Lamesa players to the front, but the team as a whole played with such co-ordination and such team work that to name one player as the star would necessitate the naming of them all.

The total score was the highest ever made against the Tigers by the Tornadoes. The tradition of the Tornadoes of not having been defeated on the present Tiger field still holds. The pleasures of the game were marred by misconduct on the part of several individuals who engaged in disputes, argument and in a few instances blows were exchanged.

An estimated crowd of 2500 fans were present for the game, approximately 1,000 of them being from Lamesa and territory, with O'Donnell, Tahoka and Post being well represented.

Mrs. J. A. Taylor Passes Away Sunday

Mrs. J. A. Taylor, aged 53 years, passed away at her home in the west part of town on last Sunday evening November 11th.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at the Missionary Baptist church at Fairview, with Rev. Aslin conducting the services. Burial was made in the Fairview cemetery. Survivors are her husband, three daughters and three sons, four sisters and four brothers.

The Courier joins with the many friends of the family in extending sympathy to the bereaved ones.

Rev. and Mrs. John Eldridge left Tuesday for Abilene where they will attend the Annual Methodist conference.

461 Fans Ride Special Train to Slaton Game

Four hundred and sixty-one individual train tickets were sold for the special train which ran from Lamesa to Slaton for the annual Tornado-Tiger football game. The crowd was about equally divided between adults and children. A ten car train was run for the occasion and plenty of room was available for all to have ridden in a seat without crowding.

A large number of O'Donnell and Tahoka fans also made the trip on the train.

The holiday spirit prevailed on the train which had a regular "news butch" with his candies, chewing gum, magazines and etc. The novelty of a train ride was a unique experience to some of the children and might have attracted some adults.

The conduct on the train was reported to be better than usual on such special trains. Sheriff Tom Abel of Lubbock county was on the train as special officer for the occasion but had no exciting times except when the train started its return trip to Lamesa.

As the train left the Slaton station the front coach was picked out by a group of persons from Slaton as a target for missiles such as pocket knives, rocks, soda water bottles etc. but fortunately no one was injured and Mr. Abel could make no investigation until his return to Slaton after delivering the Lamesa citizens back home.

Lamesa authorities are baffled at understanding the beligerent attitude of certain Slaton followers when nothing of the sort of conduct toward Slaton citizens has ever happened at or after the games at Lamesa. Slaton citizens and officials as a whole were very courteous and nice toward the Lamesans, the most of them expressing their regrets and apologies to Lamesa for such un-sportsman like conduct on the part of a few.

Key Dramatic Club To Present Play

The Key Dramatic Club is putting on a play at Klondike, Wednesday night, November 21 and again at Hancock, Friday night, November 23. The name of the play to be presented is "Aunt Samantha Rules the Roost."

Admission will be 5 and 10 cents. Everyone is invited to attend.

GAME TO BE PLAYED HERE NOVEMBER 23

The Brownfield Cubs are coming to Lamesa to play their game with the Golden Tornadoes on November 23. The Cubs are without bleachers on their home field and their following has been so small to date that the financial outlay occasioned by playing Lamesa at Brownfield caused their authorities to negotiate with Mr. McCollum for the game on the Tornado field. Brownfield also wishes to experiment with night football.

The game with Brownfield will settle the championship question in the Southern half of this district and the winner will stand by to play the winner of the North half on Thanksgiving day. Brownfield has lost only one conference game and that was with Slaton. A win over Lamesa would leave Lamesa, Slaton and Brownfield tied for honors in this half of the district. The locals will seek a victory in this contest to prevent title complications.

Ralls seems to have been victorious in the North end and will be interested in the Brownfield game with Lamesa for their opposition on Turkey day.

The time of this last night game has been moved up fifteen minutes to 7:30. Reserved seat tickets will be placed on sale through Thursday, November 22nd, and at a saving of ten cents to fans who secure such tickets in advance.

Those who have followed the fortunes of the two teams are aware that Lamesa has never found Brownfield an easy team. Though defeating other teams with apparent ease, the Golden Tornadoes have lost to the Cubs in former years.

The Tornadoes suffered injuries in the Slaton game which will have to heal if their hopes against the Cubs become bright. McKinnon, Berry, Morgan, Boswell and Burdine though not seriously hurt, have need for recuperation before getting into another hard game. The locals have no game this week end which gives them additional time for getting over their hard playing at Slaton.

Rev. Dennis To Deliver Final Sermon

Rev. Dennis has served his church well here and he and Mrs. Dennis have made many friends who regret to see them leave, but wish for them much success in their new location.

FARM NOTES

By Joe C. Williams, County Agent

Cattle Buying
Dawson county is given an allotment of 500 head to be bought when the appraiser and inspector arrive in the county for work. According to a letter from Mr. Barnes, who is in charge of the cattle program in Texas, the bulk or large percentage of all cattle bought should be cows two years of age or over, only a small percentage of calves and steers as less feed is required for that class left on the farms in the county.

Apparently this will be the final allotment of cattle to be bought by the government in this county. According to Mr. Barnes only those who are out of feed and in most distressed conditions should be allowed to sell the cattle. We are asking that all who sign contracts to sell cattle also sign a statement that they do not have feed or the funds with which to buy feed. It would seem that all who are now getting loans from the emergency feed and seed loan office should be entitled to sell the cows in this final drive. As to when buying will begin we have no idea, so each party who has signed contracts listing cattle for sale is asked to keep in touch with the county agent's office as buying is liable to begin at any date.

Bale Tags, or, Cotton Tax Exemption Certificates
The final date for pooling surplus bale tags has been moved up to Nov. 24th and a letter from the Washington office states that in order to pool the tags or certificates farmers should have them in Mr. Hackney's office not later than November 23, which will give him time to make his report and get it in the mail on the afternoon of the 24th.

Land owners and tenants who have not pooled their certificates are being mailed notices to get the certificates to Mr. Hackney as per the above dates in case they want to pool the certificates. Producers and other interested parties can expect about nineteen dollars per bale for all that are used by the National Pool. Those that are not used will be resold to next year in case the Bankhead Act is in operation.

make amends," he rejoined hoarsely, and stalked away in the darkness.

Jim lay back on his blankets with a weight of oppression removed. He had waded himself for the hour, but what would the outcome be?

He had breakfast before the other men were up. With rifle in hand he headed toward the western exit.

The sun was still beneath the rim of the escarpments, in the east, but its golden approach was heralded by a magnificent glory of red and gold.

Loneliness was paramount. There was no sound—only an immense silence. No life at all! Not a winged creature hovering over that ghastly region! But over this scene of desolation slowly spread the solemn blight of heating, blazing sun, soon to mantle all in illusive copper haze.

Before that hour arrived, Jim Wall took up the field glass. Below in the camp the men were lazily stirring to a late breakfast. The door of the cabin was open. A glint of gold crossed the dark aperture. Then the tall form of Hays stalked out. He yawned. He stretched wide his long arms. His ruddy face gleamed in the glass to that sight. Hays' whole being leaped.

"By heaven!" his voice rang out.

"Hays, that's your last morning's stretch. . . . Before this day's done you'll stretch forever!"

Let his men have their hour, thought Jim darkly, but if they did not mete out justice to their chief the end was nevertheless fixed and unalterable.

Jim settled back and raised his fieldglass more from habit than any semblance of the old watchfulness. There was nothing to see but the stark denudation of the brakes.

Suddenly into Jim's magnified circle of vision crept dark objects—a long line of them. . . .

He was so startled that the glass wavered out of line. He moved it to and fro, searching. What could that have been? An error of sight, a line of cedars, a conception of idle mind!

"There!" he breathed. He had caught it again, not cedars—not brush, but moving objects! . . . "By heaven!" he muttered. "Am I dotty?"

Horses! A line of dark horses! His straining eyes blurred. He lowered the glass with shaking hands. "So help me—it looks like riders!"

A third time Jim caught the objects. He froze the glass on them. Horses and riders—horses with packs! A bursting gush of hot blood ran all through him. It looked like Heese-man's outfit, at least three miles away, approaching slowly by a route far to the south of that over which Hays had come.

"About three miles," muttered Jim. "Coming slow. They're lost. . . . But that wash they're in heads into the Hays trail. . . . If they strike that they'll come fast. Not enough rain yet to wash out our tracks. We've got time to pack and ride out. . . . By thunder, they've cornered us! Now, Hank Hays—"

Jim took one more straining look. No hope! It was a big outfit and not traveling so slowly, either. The leader rode a black horse. Jim remembered Snatching up his field-glass over his head he scanned the bluff to the west.

As he espied a foot, with a through his eye an uncommonly the woodpile. Hays had was so con- pared scarce-not to release him or allow any of these other men to do so—or will you have me shoot you?"

"How'd she get that gun?"

"Wal, she snatched it quicker'n lightning, that's how. An' when she cocked it with both hands it went off bang! The bullet went between Hank's legs. Ticked him. You can see the hole in his pants. Scared? My Gawd, you never see a man so scared. Thet gurl, cool as a cucumber, cocked the gun again, an' held Hays up—then all of us.

"We was sittin' at the table. She made us all stand, hands high, an' then she performed that little trick with Hank's gun agin my gizzard. Jim, I hope to die if I didn't go cold an' stiff. But I promised on my word of honor—as a robber—that I'd tie Hank up, an' make the other fellers play square. It was so funny, too, thet I near bust. Hays, soon as he was helpless, got over his scare, an' then was he mad! I reckon no one on this earth saw a madder man. He cursed so terrible thet she made me gag Jim."

"Well, I'll be—blowed!" gasped Jim.

"No wonder. We was wuss. We'd had breakfast, an' Hank was tryin' to face us fellers. I'll say he came clean, Jim. He divided all the money he got from Herrick an' his sister, an' the gold things an' diamonds. 'Fellers,' he said, 'I could lie an' say I meant to give this to you later. But I'm not built that way. I double-crossed you all—first time in my life. I meant to keep it all, an' the ransom, fer the girl. But now there won't be no ransom, for I'm not goin' to give her up. She's mine, an' I can do as I want, an' if any of you don't like it you can make your kick now.' . . . Wal, I was so plumb flabbergasted thet we didn't see the gurl, who came close on the sun side of Happy's shelter. She heard the whole d—n show. . . . Jim, I wish you could have seen her when she stepped up to Hank. I don't know what did it—mebbe her eyes—but he shore wilted. It was then she snatched his gun."

"So that's the deal!" ejaculated Jim.

"What are you going to do?"

"Don't ask me. I gave my word an' I'll keep it. For thet matter the rest of our outfit air fer the gurl, ransom or no ransom."

Suddenly Jim awoke out of his stupefaction to remember the approach of Heese-man.

"Smoky, I know what you're all going to do, and that's fight," he flashed, curtly. "Heese-man's outfit is coming. I sighted them perhaps three miles. Traveling slow, but sure. We've no time to pack an' get away. We've got to find the best place to stand an' fight, an' pack our stuff into it pronto."

"Heese-man!" cried Smoky, coolly. "So it's come. I reckoned on thet. Git, lousy, men."

Jim strode under the shelter to face Miss Herrick. She had heard, for she was white.

"We're all but surprised by Heese-man's outfit," he said, abruptly. "We must fight. You will be worse off if you fall into their hands. I'm sorry I must release Hays. We need him."

"Too late!" she exclaimed.

"Pack your things quickly and hurry over to the cave on this side." Then Jim picked up Hays' gun from the table and ran out. First he removed the gag, then in terse terms he stated the situation. Next he released the robber from his painful fix and handed him the gun.

"Heese-man, huh! Wal, so be it!" Hays said, facing Jim with an air of finality that intimidated relief.

"How far are they away?" he asked.

"Two miles."

"We've got half an hour—mebbe. Did you think to look for the hosses?"

"Eight horses in the valley. Others not in sight."

"Fine scout you air. How come you didn't spy them soon enough fer us to rustle out of hyar?"

"I couldn't have seen them half a mile sooner," snapped Jim. "They came out from behind a bank."

"Hell's fire! Tell thet to me? You was sleepin'."

"You're a liar," flashed Jim, leaping clear of the others. "Open your trap to me agin like that!"

"Say, it's you who'll shot his trap," replied Hays, stridently. "Or you'll git a dose of the medicine I gave Brad Lincoln."

"Not from you—you yellow dog of a woman thief!"

Smoky Slocum ran out in time to get in front of Jim.

"Hyar! Hyar!" he called, piercingly. "Is this a time fer us to fight each other? Cool down, Jim. Make allowances fer Hays. He's wuss'n drunk."

"I don't care a d—n if there's ten outfits on our trail. He can't talk to me that way. . . . And, Smoky, I reckon you're presuntin' on friendship."

"Shore I am," returned Slocum, hurriedly. "I'll not do it agin, Jim. Hays is what you called him. But leave your dispute till we settle with Heese-man."

"All right. You're talking sense," replied Jim. He had been quick to grasp the opening made by Hays. "There must be ten riders in Heese-man's outfit."

"Wal, thet suits me," rejoined the robber, harshly.

"Now think fast," snapped Smoky. Hays pulled himself together. "Mac, you an' Jeff run to fetch what hosses you can find quick. . . . Jack, you an' Smoky an' Wall hustle the grub, cook kit, packs an' beds into thet cave across the wash. I'll git up high an' watch. When I yell, dig fer cover."

"You ain't to fight or run?" queried Smoky.

"We might git packed tight, if somethin' holds them up. But we can't leave the way we come in. Dirty Devil too high. Heese-man has stumbled on the next best way. If we had plenty of time. . . . But rustle, everybody."

Mac and Jeff were already in lumbering flight up the oval. And Happy Jack, not concerned enough to stop his whistling, was sacking his utensils. Hays made for the notch in the bluff west of the cabin. Jim sprang into action, while Smoky dashed off toward the cottonwood grove.

Upon Jim's first return trip from the cave he encountered the girl burdened with her effects.

"Helen, I'll carry that. Hurry. We've no time to lose."

At the back of the cave there was a crack deep enough to protect Helen. He directed her to hide inside and await developments.

Jim ran on toward the camp, resolving to withhold a shell in his rifle and to keep a sharp watch on Hays.

The next quarter of an hour was filled with strenuous and unceasing action. Their united efforts collected all the supplies, utensils, saddles and packs, and several of the beds in the three-cornered cave back and to one side of the shack. A huge slab of stone lay across the top of this triangular notch in the cliff. The wall had been hollowed by the action of water. A small stream flowed out from the base of the wall.

It was the best place for defense in the oval, and Jim believed Hays' outfit could hold it indefinitely, though they couldn't save the horses. If it came to a siege they could be released.

CHAPTER X

Smoky came panting in with Hays' pack, and started off again.

"That's enough, Smoky," called Jim. Slocum returned. "Nothin', left—'cept Hank's bed," he panted. "I couldn't locate thet."

"Listen!"

"What do you hear?"

"Hosses."

"Jim, keep your eye peeled on the cliff," said Smoky, and stole forward under cover of the brush.

Presently a white puff of smoke showed above the ragged rim. Spang! The fight was on. One of Hays' men—Bridges—let out a hoarse bawl and swayed over, almost losing his balance. Jim looked no more at him, but concentrated his gaze on the rim. Another puff of white! Something dark—a man's slouch hat—bobbed up. Jim's rifle, already raised, swerved a trifle—cracked. The hat went flying.

Jim's Rifle, Already Raised, Swerved a Trifle—Cracked. The Hat Went Flying.

The horses came over the bench, frightened, but not stampeding, and Mac drove them into the corral. This was around the corner from the range of the sharpshooter of the rim. Bridges, reeling on the horse, followed Mac, who ran out of the corral to catch him as he fell. Then, as they came along close to the wall, Hays arrived from the other direction.

"Heese-man—with his outfit—nine in all," he heaved. "They're scatterin' to surround the roost. . . . But they can't cross—below us—an' across there it's—out of range. . . . We're all right."

A bullet thudded into the wall, followed by the report of a rifle.

"Duck back! That was from somewhere else," shouted Hays.

They dove twenty feet farther back. Here they were apparently safe, except from the grassy ridge of the oval in front, which it was unlikely any sharpshooters could reach in daylight.

ring from the west rim. Wisps of white cloud, thinning on the light wind, located the positions of the shooters. First Jim peered through the growth of brush directly in front.

Almost at once he caught a movement of a dark object through a crevice in the rim. The distance was great for accurate shooting at so small a target. But with a rest he drew a coarse, steady aim and fired once.

The object stopped over. A shrill cry, unmistakable to any man used to gunplay, rent the air. Jim knew he had reached one of the Heese-man gang, to disable him, if no more. Next instant a raking fire swept the brush on both sides of Jim. He dropped down into the cave.

Smoky stood there, in the act of climbing.

"They near got me," rang out Jim. "I hit one of them way over where they shot at Bridges. There's a bunch of them hid on that cliff to the right of the outlet, you know, where Jeff went up to scout."

"Jim, they got us located," replied Slocum, gravely.

"Sure. But so long as they can't line on us in here—"

"They can move all around. An' pretty soon Heese-man will finger them men behind the high center in front an' shoot straight in hyar."

"They're below the ridge now. Look sharp, Smoky, or they might get a couple of shots in first."

"Wal, if they do I hope both bullets lodge in Hank's gizzard."

"My sentiments exactly. . . . Smoky, I saw something shine. Tip of a rifle. Right—to the right. . . . Ah!"

"Take the first feller, Jim. . . . One—two—three."

The rifles cracked in unison. Jim's mark sprang convulsively up, and plunged down to roll and weave out of sight. The man Smoky had shot at sank flat and lay still. Next moment a volley banged from the cliff and a storm of bullets swept hissing and

MARKS THE LIGHT THAT LETS EYES RELAX

You enjoy reading on a porch, or in the shade of a tree, for the light is pleasant and free from glare. Your eyes relax because the light is well diffused. There is no eye-strain, because you are reading under natural light.

This outdoor light is often hundreds of times brighter than the light by which you read indoors at night, which proves that you can not have too much light. It is inadequate lighting and the glare from poorly-arranged lights that tire your eyes. We have a free booklet at our store, "How to Light Your Home," which will be helpful in arranging your lighting.

The new Reading and Study Lamp is the answer to the long-felt need for a scientifically designed lamp for reading and study. This lamp is designed by the Illuminating Engineering Society for just one purpose—to give the proper amount of light for the protection of eyesight. These lamps are on display in our store, and at other electric stores. Price $3.95.

TOO BAD IT HAPPENED

Too bad, that people who call themselves civilized have to engage in fist fights—all over a football game. It does not seem to be much of an example to youngsters of good sportsmanship. We are sorry it happened. We feel such does not in anyway display the feelings and attitudes of Slaton and Lamesa citizens. The leaders of these towns have always been friendly and are now. So are the officials of the two schools. The next time these schools engage in contest, let these leaders see to it that the rif-raf that causes such disturbances get walking papers before hand and at hand.

Mike Barrett is visiting friends in Dallas this week.

Lamesa Hi-Life

Hilburn Gilliam, '36, Reporter

Last Tuesday evening, Mr. Julian Paul Blitz, professor of music at Texas Technological College in Lubbock was presented to the people of Lamesa and Dawson county, with his wife, in a violin-cello concert, by the members of the Junior class of Lamesa High School. Mr. Blitz is quite an accomplished musician, having received the highest honors conferred at the Belgian Conservatory of music. Mrs. Blitz is an expert pianist. Mr. Blitz is one of the few musicians in all Western and Panhandle Texas who can play the cello. Ten years ago, Mr. Rogers carried on a lengthy correspondence with Mr. Blitz when he was in South Texas in an effort to get a concert here but the patronage was not large enough to sufficiently remunerate Mr. Blitz for the long trip here and back. Mr. Blitz played several pieces, one written by his father, also a cellist, and others by the greatest of cellists.

Hazel Green and Evelyn Archer from Ackerly have recently enrolled in the part time commercial classes. Irene Kidd of Grandview and J. D. Hudson from Happy, Texas, enrolled in the high school.

The High School has recently received two beautiful trophy markers. These markers are made of bronze with raised letters to indicate the donors of the two trophy cases now in the auditorium. The first case was presented by the class of '29. The second, much larger to accommodate the increasing amount of trophies, was presented by the class of '34. The acquisition of these two excellent markers adds much to the appearance of the cases.

The football with which the Golden Tornadoes defeated the Slaton Tigers by a score of 37-0 was placed in the trophy case Tuesday. On it in large letters is printed "Lamesa 37 Slaton 0." This football was hard fought for and the Tornadoes thought they deserved it. The coaches of the Lamesa athletic teams have tried as often as possible, after Lamesa's having won an important game, to acquire possession of the ball used in the game. The trophy cases now hold footballs with which the Tornadoes have won District, Bi-district and Regional contests. The balls with which the Tornadoes won the third and second places in the State Basketball tournaments in 1933 and 1934 respectively are also there.

SAN ANGELO WANTS WEST TEXAS CENTENNIAL SITE

San Angelo, Nov. 8.—San Angelo is anxious to be designated as the site of central or main West Texas feature of the Centennial commemoration in Texas in 1936. Plans have been outlined for a six months real life action, dramatically depicting the Western frontier and its progress as San Angelo still is the typification of the frontier. Cowboys in boots are not unusual on its streets today and here visitors can obtain a realistic picture of the ranch life of the West.

Historic significance of San Angelo also is stressed, it having been the center of the development of the great plains country with Tom Green County, in 1875, comprising what is today sixty-seven counties.

Fort Concho, located principally in the city's limits, was the largest frontier Indian post established after the Civil War. It was born as Camp Hatch in 1867, named for Col. Edward Hatch, Ninth U. S. Cavalry. Its name was changed to Camp Kelly and later to Fort Concho.

Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer, has invited Wm. A. Wilson, manager of the Lamesa Chamber of Commerce to appear and discuss a paper on the subject of Mottled Enamel Teeth, before the Texas Water Works School of January 4th in Austin. The invitation comes as a result of Mr. Wilson's activity and study, locally, on this subject.

Mr. and Mrs. Zealey Edwards and Mrs. and Mrs. J. S. Lister all of Livingston, N. M., spent Sunday here visiting Mr. and Mrs. Howard Lee.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Miller and son Harrell and daughter Laverne of Hamlin spent Sunday and Monday the week end here visiting relatives and daughters.

Contentment!

There IS something about a friendly open fire that seems to radiate a spirit of peace and contentment—something that warms the heart as well as the hands. Perhaps that accounts for the amazing popularity of the Gas Radiant Heater, which not only adds to the charm of any fireplace or mantel, but affords a practical, efficient source of instant heat.

If you'd like to re-discover the joy and comfort of an open fire. Go in and let your Gas Appliance Dealer demonstrate the Gas Radiant Heater—and tell you how easily you can own one.

HISTORY IN THE MAKING

Old Mission San Jose de Aguayo

Mission San Jose de San Miguel Aguayo was founded in 1720 and is conceded by authorities to be the most pretentious and beautiful of all the old Spanish Missions in America. It was one of five charming missions erected along the banks of the San Antonio river from 1718 to 1791, and its ruins are still to be seen near San Antonio. It was named in honor of St. Joseph and the Spanish Governor, Aguayo. Its pre-eminence among the missions is due to the beauty of its decorations executed by the celebrated sculptor, Jaun Hucia. A window on its south side is preserved as one of the art treasures of the world. The sacristy of the old mission has been restored and this spot is again the home of the Order of Franciscans, who founded it more than two centuries ago. (Texas News Photos.)

New Code Emblems At C. of C. Office

The time has come when each individual, who is in sympathy with or who has benefited by the President's National Recovery program, must renew faith and stimulate interest in NRA. It is not enough to sit by complacently and lend merely passive support.

Places of business should not become lax in displaying the Blue Eagle of their code. Perhaps some employers who are entitled to the Blue Eagle have not secured it. The citizens of all communities who are interested in NRA can check this up by an aggressive campaign of buying from merchants who make prominent display of the Blue Eagle, for it is the symbol of a great cooperative effort to bring back and sustain recovery.

The public should make it a point to look for the Code Eagles in store windows and elsewhere and to do business with firms displaying it. Merchants and others who do not display this symbol of recovery, should be urged to join the army of NRA supporters.

Business firms who are working under the codes will find it to their advantage to use the symbol of the Blue Eagle on their delivery trucks, on the wrappers for packages, in their advertising and even on tags and labels attached to the merchandise itself.

Let the public know that you are cooperating with NRA. A display of the Blue Eagle is the proper medium for this. The vast majority of our people who are wholeheartedly in accord with the aims of the President's National Recovery Program, will react favorably to such display.

Merchants and business men in cooperating with the National Recovery Administration will call at the Lamesa operating under CODE and chamber of commerce and get their new NRA Code Emblems for display. These emblems have just been received and the local chamber of commerce has been requested by the administration to give these emblems to merchants and business men here. Call at the office if you want an emblem.

Drive in

The eyes of the road beneath your car are blind to trick phrases, pretty colors and exaggerated claims—only facts count in the constant struggle between speeding rubber and grinding concrete. Saying that a tire will not blow out—that it is three or four times safer—that it is "the marvel of the tire world" may tickle the vanity of the ballyhoo artist, but unfortunately you cannot ride with safety, economy or satisfaction on ballyhoo.

When a tire blows out or fails long before it should, it is poor consolation to remember that it was supposed to be burst-proof and three or four times safer.

Seiberling tires are built to wear well—not read well. They reflect in mileage, safety and economy the fact that F. A. Seiberling has been building good tires since 1896. GIB phrases make good reading but as F. A. Seiberling says—"You'll go further on facts."

Come in and let us show you visible proof of the superiority of Seiberling Air Cooled tires—the only tires with two anti-skid treads that grip and protect to the final mile.
