House Votes Land Resolution After Long Floor Battle

Final Action Taken After Efforts To Amend Bill Are Downed; Purl Leads Opposition

Patents Validated

Bill Now Only Requires Governor's Signature To Become Law; Action Is Considered Important

(By Associated Press)
AUSTIN, Feb. 7.—Burying every attempt to amend the measure, the house late today passed the Small bill, validating patents on property lying across river beds, by a 103-24 vote.

Final action was taken after a three-hour floor battle during which Chastain of Eastland charged the attorney general with assisting "land buzzards in attempting to defraud pioneer West Texans of their land" while Woodall of Marshall, staunch opponent, asserted that "there is some one back of the curtain attempting to place private gain above the rights of the state."

Having been passed by the senate last week, the bill now requires only the governor's signature before insuring property owners who have claimed title to their land for 10 years protection from suit by the state on the grounds that vacancies exist.

Initial efforts to halt progress of the measure were made by Purl of Dallas after Storey of Vernon had fired the first gun of the battle. Purl maintained the measure was the most important on which the house had been called for action for eight years and asked that the speaker be instructed to present it to the attorney general's department for an opinion as to its effect.

Temperature Tumbles As Cold Wave Strikes Texas

Mercury Drops To 11 Degrees Here; Snow In North

Lubbock and the South Plains were in the grip of another cold wave last night as snow flurries from the north sent the mercury tumbling nearer the zero mark than it has been this winter. It stood at 11 degrees at midnight.

Dropping from above 50 degrees Tuesday, the thermometer went down to 18 Wednesday night and to 16 at an early hour Thursday morning. Sleet and snow fell intermittently all day, automobile windshields being covered with clinging coats of sleety ice and endangering vision of drivers.

The normal temperature for February 1 to 15, in this city, is between 18 and 22 degrees. During the past 15 years the record of temperature on February 7 has never been as high as that recorded in 1920, when it was 26 degrees.

Northwestern Portion Of State Coated With Snow

(By Associated Press)
Near-zero temperatures hit the Panhandle Thursday night as a made-in-Montana cold wave swept on south and east, coating the northwestern part of the state with snow and ice and promising another cold gloomy day for the greater part of the state Friday.

A temperature of six degrees was reported from Texline, eight at Amarillo and five at Miami, and all reports said the mercury still was falling.

Miami Has 3 Inches.
Hartley five, and Lubbock and the South Plains reported that a blanket of snow and ice had covered that section. Rainfall at Abilene, where the temperature dropped as low as 21, was freezing. The cold wave is not expected to injure grain, however, as Miami reported the snow just the thing needed at this season and farmers in the vicinity of Abilene felt no fear for their small grains.

At Wichita Falls the thermometer dropped to 18 at 7 p. m. Thursday, and continued to fall. At Childress the temperature was 17 degrees. Reports said that there was little snow south of Decatur, Thursday.

Annual Meeting Of American Institute Of New York Is Featured By Amazing Demonstrations; Westinghouse Man Presents Eyes Which Do Work Of Human Organs

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Photo-electric eyes watched the guests at a scientific dinner here tonight, counted them, guarded them from a fire, and substituted almost human stunts in place of speech.

The dinner was the annual meeting of the American Institute of New York. On a platform for the "speakers," John V. Breisky of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company placed a pair of mixed gasoline and kerosene.

Faster Than Human
Beside it he set a photo-electric eye, a vacuum tube resembling an electric light globe, so sensitive to light that it registers minute changes faster than the human eye can perceive them. Attached electrically to the photo-eye was a carbon dioxide fire extinguishing apparatus, set to guard the pair of explosive liquids.

Mr. Breisky lit a match, and when it was flaming strong said: "Now watch."

He thrust it into the pair, which flared with fire, but almost as quick as the flame was the photo-electric eyes, which translated the light from the fire into an electric impulse that shot the fire extinguisher over the surface.

In a split second the demonstration was over, light smoke over the

Religious Riots Horrify Bombay

BOMBAY, India, Feb. 7. (P)—Bombay today had its fifth day of riots between Hindus and Moslem Pathans. Tonight military reinforcements had arrived and a meeting of citizens was assembled to support authorities efforts at restoring order.

Casualties today exceeded eighty. Most of them were Hindus, seven of whom were wounded when troops fired on a mob.

The Pathans, warlike Afghan race, threw away their clubs today and used knives and daggers. One Pathan, attacked in a bazaar, killed four Hindus and wounded several others.

Late today a band of Pathans returning from the docks attacked a Hindu merchant seated in front of his shop. As they stabbed him to death the owner of the next shop closed his shutters but the Pathans forced an entry and killed the second merchant and the latter's son.

They looted the shops and ran down the street spreading terror among other Hindus. A crowd of the latter joined police and soldiers in pursuit of the Pathans but the murderers escaped.

Voice Is Unquivering
Judge George R. Freeman asked Northcott if he wished to poll the jury. "A poll is entirely unnecessary, your honor," Northcott said, rising calmly to his feet and speaking in an unquivering voice.

"I wish to thank the jury," he said a moment later, "for the attention it has given me."

The young Canadian's iron control amazed deputy sheriffs who had massed around him. Northcott only smiled at their apparent concern. He called McKinley Cameron, Canadian barrister to him and asked: "How did I conduct myself," he asked.

The first official ballot was to decide the guilt and the second to decide the penalty.

Judge Freeman set Monday at 10 a. m. for sentence. It is understood Northcott will file an appeal, but he gave no oral notice of his intention before he left the courtroom.

Two Billion Wiped Out In Losses In New York Market

Federal Board's Action Is Kick-Back at Speculation; Large Blocks of Shares Dumped On Exchange

By STANLEY W. PRENSOIL
Associated Press Financial Editor
NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—(P)—Two billion dollars, or more, in quoted values were wiped out today in a sweeping reaction on the New York stock exchange caused by the Federal Reserve Board's ultimatum that speculative credit must be restrained and by the increase from 4 1-2 to 5 1-2 per cent in the Bank of England's discount rate, checking the flow of gold from London to New York.

Blocks of 5,000 to 20,000 shares were dumped into the market at the opening, with the result that declines in the active issues ranged from $3 to $17 a share. A recovery failed to hold and the market turned weak again in the last hour, with at least fifty issues closing at net declines of $5 to $35 a share.

Trading started off at a brisk pace, sales in the first two hours running above 2,500,000 shares, but it slowed down later.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MADAME RUBINSTEIN

Fashion has never been so generous in allowing a woman to suit her dress to her personality, and so in necklines that thing which is becoming is the thing which is fashionable.

MME. RUBINSTEIN

Study the shape of your face and neck before you decide on your neckline. If your face is round, the square or pointed type of neck will be becoming; if your face is long, a round or oval shape will be found more becoming; if your face is square and heavy the neckline should be broader than the facial width.

The little woman should try to keep her neck and neck adornments to scale. Peter Pan collars will be youthful and good. Short V necks will be becoming, as will also plain round necks; and the typical manish shirt collar opening, with a four-in-hand or narrow "string" tie, will be extremely smart and suitable for certain occasions. Full length narrow panel vest effects of contrasting colors will be splendid, but as far as beads and necklaces are concerned, these should be of the choker or comparatively short variety.

The neckline should complement the shape of the face, and so the tall, thin woman will choose a

The Woman's Day

By Allene Sumner

Must we infer that when a woman secretary shakes her fist under her boss's nose and thunders at him to "be quiet" she has quite the upper hand of the boss and his job? That's the inference read into testimony given at the impeachment of Governor Henry S. Johnson of Oklahoma to the effect that his private secretary, Mrs. O. O. Hammonds, was really the power behind the throne, and that the fair state of Oklahoma had a governor in petticoats (or whatever the modern equivalent is).

WHAT OF IT?
To which the answer is that the state's only concern is in the fruits of the job. If the state has been quite efficiently run, it's as much of a tribute to the governor to have an efficient secretary capable of doing it as to do it himself. No business man would be condemned for hiring so efficient a secretary that his office ran like clock work; either would he be criticized for any assumption of power the secretary took. That would be adjudged a very personal matter.

To be sure, you might argue that being a governor is a matter of public concern, quite unlike that of a private office. But, still, the whole to-do seems out of proportion.

SHE WON
Chicago police were called to a certain address, a private dwelling, where, it was reported, a man was beating his wife to death. They found the man cowering under the table which was liberally strewn with broken crockery, frying pans, and other trophies of the chase. Woman triumphant was standing over him, a hot poker in her hand. She was taken to police court; her mate, to the hospital.

WHOLE SEX QUESTION
The story may sound foolishly insane, but one wonders if it doesn't embody much of this "woman question" agitation. We still prattle about "equality of the sexes," implying, of course, that the inequality is all on the woman's side. But when she is the one who is "stronger" than the man, it is not so surprising to note how many men are under the economic and social table with woman, triumphant, on top, brandishing the poker.

HIS HOME
It may be that just because the spirit of home possession is a bit strong in women, somehow I can't find Senator Thomas Walsh of Montana at all unreasonable in fighting against a condemnation and appropriation of his summer home in Glacier Park. He picked his spot, the trees, the best view on the lake, years ago before a national park was ever dreamed of for the region. He and his wife and children and grandchildren loved that home; it became an integral part of their lives.

HOPE HE FIGHTS
Now comes the government "IT'S CERTAINLY BEEN A BLESSING"

"Orgatone Has Relieved Me Of Nervousness And Has Made A New Woman Of Me," Says Amarillo House Wife

"Since Orgatone relieved me of my nervousness I just can't help praising it to everybody," said Mrs. A. W. Amick, of 1018 Buchanan St., Amarillo, Tex., a few days ago. "For over six months," she continued, "I suffered from extreme nervousness and loss of appetite. At nights I was unable to get any sound sleep or rest on account of off until I finally got so I hardly off until I finally got so I hardly eat anything at all."

seeking to condemn all private homes in the park region so that the trees may be saved. I hope the senator keeps fighting. Even public men have a right to such human emotions as love of home, and a home is something that can not be replaced by money.

After all, people who care enough for the outdoors to want to make it a part of their lives, are apt to be as careful about saving trees as an impersonal government.

HARD ON BABIES
It's a hard age in which to be a baby, according to the California State Department of Health which, after much research, has discovered that radio, jazz, church services, bright lights, dance halls and all the modern trappings are very bad for babies. Let's see, our mothers and grandmothers told their kids to church and box socials and granges and quilting bees, because it was the only way to get there themselves, and nothing so terrible seemed to happen to the offspring. To be sure, social diversions weren't as frequent then as now and neither was the loud speaker on in the home all the time. Still, I'll take a chance on today's babies weathering the gale, what with all the counter-acting protections of science offered them.

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton
Copyright by NEA Service, Inc.

In order to develop normally, physically, mentally and morally, children must live in a home atmosphere of happiness. Not the happiness of sporadic stimulation that comes from movies, candy, and the excitement of frequent new toys, but the happiness of contentment and peace.

Just as peace is necessary to the well being and good health of grown-ups, so is it doubly essential to the welfare of children.

It is a fallacy to think that because children are children they are aware of disturbances in the home. They may not understand accurately what the trouble is about, but they are quick to sense unhappiness in their parents. Children have almost an uncanny intuition. They sense disturbance as surely as a seismograph spots an earthquake in China.

"What is it, Mother?" "Are you cross, Daddy?" "Oh, run off and play and don't ask so many questions!"

Impression Lingers On
That dismisses it for the parents but not for the child. Plastic creatures that they are, one more impression of trouble has been made and it will stay.

Children have vivid imaginations; they also have a tendency to exaggerate. What may be only a storm in a teapot to their parents may be a veritable cyclone to them.

And don't think that they will forget about it! A child's memory is tenacious. If there is any forgetting to be done, there are long chances that it will be the parents who do it. Even if details pass out of their consciousness, the uneasy impression of trouble remains to do its damage to nerves and health.

Once may not be serious—or twice or even a dozen occurrences of the kind. But habitual wrangling will eventually tell its story.

We have all seen the pale, neurotic, listless child who reflects the chaotic atmosphere of his home life. Indeed such children are too common.

Telling Children Troubles
Unfortunately there are even unwise mothers who seek relief from their troubles by deliberately burdening themselves to their children, who discuss miscellaneous worries, their marital unhappiness, or even a father's misconduct with them.

It is a great mistake. Of course there are times when it is necessary to have the cooperation in children in matters of domestic economy. There are things about almost every home that children must learn to understand, and to help with. That is a different matter.

But even so, unless it is something that is absolutely essential for a child to know, I should keep him away from Old Man Worry as long as possible.

(Special To The Avalanche)
TAHOKA, Feb. 7.—Arrangements have been completed for the holding of a Farmers' and Housewives' Short Course in Tahoka on Thursday and Friday, March 7-8, at which three nationally known farm workers have been engaged to lecture. The course is being offered free to all, and local business men, who are sponsoring the affair, will not only invite all farmers from this county but also delegations from all surrounding counties to attend.

They will be assisted by Prof. Taylor White, teacher of vocational agriculture in the local schools, who was instrumental in arranging the short course.

Mr. Mobley will lecture on diversified farming, crop rotation, dairying, and community agricultural problems; Mr. Smith will speak on topic of interest to the gardener, fruit and truck growers; and, Miss Smith will deal directly with problems of interest to farm women in making farming profitable and in better farm home comforts. Other entertainment will be furnished in the form of educational moving picture shows and readings and music by local talent. The meetings will be held in the Tahoka high school building.

Details Of Land Leasing Squabble Are Told In Probe

Governor Moody, Claude Pollard, Truett, Page And Others Appear Before Committee Thursday

(By Associated Press)
AUSTIN, Feb. 7.—Details of the conference between the land commissioner, governor, attorney general's office, and Texas University board of regents concerning an effort to get the commissioner, J. T. Robinson, to postpone sale of oil and gas leases in 193,000 acres of university land advertised for January 2, were given today to the committee investigating these agencies connection with the matter.

Inadequacy of state land laws governing sale of public domain is costing the state millions, Governor Moody and R. L. Batts, chairman of the board of regents, told the committee.

Pointed to School Land Batts pointed to the sale of 234 acres of school lands for $3 an acre, subsequently sold for $10,000 an acre by the lessee and now producing from $7,000,000 to $10,000,000 worth of oil, as an example of "state property being dissipated by what seems a foolish policy."

The land in question was in either Upton or Crane county, he could not remember which, and added or was a part of the university lands, he said.

"This land was established as vacant at a suit of which the university did not have notice," Batts said.

Testimony Completed In addition to Governor Moody and Batts, Attorney General Claude Pollard, and Assistant Attorney General C. W. Truett and Paul Page Jr., were heard. At conclusion of their testimony, Representative Petch, conducting interrogations for the committee, announced testimony on the university mineral leasing phase of the investigation had been completed. He said that beginning tomorrow witnesses would be offered on other subjects.

The Governor said: "A big stack" of patents issued by the land commissioner had not been signed by him, and that many were being held up because he wanted to investigate them.

He said that while he realized a patent carried no title, the award fixes vested right, and that in some cases he did not want to sign until making some sort of investigation.

"I don't want my name signed to a patent involving an oil field sold by the state at $3 an acre, plus one-sixteenth royalty, without first taking such property from the market and pass laws under which it can bring what it is worth," he said.

Suffered For 15 Years; Then Took Sargon, He Says

"For fifteen years I suffered from a complication of troubles. I was weak, nervous and generally rundown. I frequently had sharp, shooting pains in my side. My

A. J. MASON sleep was poor and I lost weight, strength and energy. Nearly everything I ate caused indigestion. I took a trip to Hot Springs, but got no relief there, and then I visited several health resorts in the North seemingly without benefit.

Right after I started taking the Sargon treatment I began to sleep better and to eat anything I wanted and now I feel like a new man. My appetite is fine. The pains in my side have disappeared. I am not the least bit nervous, and am full of new energy. I have gained in weight and my friends are all commenting upon my wonderful improvement.

"Sargon Soft Mass Pills are wonderful. They ended my constipation and biliousness without griping in the least. I wouldn't be without Sargon if it cost twenty dollars a bottle."

The above remarkable statement was made by A. J. Mason, residing at the Colonial Hotel, Ft. Worth, and owner of considerable property, in that city.

Sargon may be obtained in Lubbock at the City Drug Stores and in Slaton at the City Drug Store.

SENIORS CHOOSE INVITATIONS The contract for the invitations for this year's commencement has already been awarded but Seniors in their meeting last night were to discuss style, dates, etc. The invitations for this year are to be simple and dignified and it is thought that they will meet with the approval of the entire class. Students who never attend meetings will have to abide by the decisions made by those who do, the officials of the class declare. Two styles are to be available, one with the emossed leather covers and the other with the white cardboard cover.

Dummies of the proposed invitations should be in the hands of the committee within the next few weeks and orders will probably be taken from members of the class sometime next month. The company wants the information necessary by the first of March.

The class is planning to leave a gift to the college and contrary to other classes who have gone from Tech's doors to dedicate the gift to its Alma Mater and leave a remembrance from the first. This class also means to plant a tree and hopes to establish a tradition in so doing.

FACULTY MEMBER IS ADDED Mrs. George N. Atkinson, who was the first woman instructor to teach manual training in high school a few years and is a graduate of the College of Industrial Arts, has been added to the Tech faculty. Mrs. Atkinson will be part time instructor in engineering drawing, and has the distinction of being the only woman in the faculty of the school of engineering.

KOENIGER TO LECTURE TONIGHT

"Racial Understanding" is to be the subject for discussion at Pi Gamma Mu meeting tonight at 8 o'clock. The session is open to all Tech students and town people who are interested in the question of the racial conflicts and misunderstandings which are having to be met in almost every part of the country.

Rupert Koeniger, senior, who is to be the speaker has spent much time in preparation for the lecture. A thinker, as well as a college student, he has read widely, had conferences with authorities on the question of the American negro and Indian, and in addition has compiled and circulated some 800 questionnaires in Tech and Wayland colleges in Plainview. These queries were statements concerning race relations and were to be marked as to the degree of truthfulness or error according to the individual's views.

Koeniger has stated that he will deal primarily with the situation in the United States and particularly in the South.

CONCERNING THE "Y" FINANCE A recent issue of the "Intercollegian," student publication of national scope, publishes a letter from a Tech senior. Claiming to be almost bowled over by the things which the "Y" has done, the magazine compliments the writer. The student mentions Roy McCullough, student Y. M. C. A. secretary whom he says is "a force for good on the campus."

Although the "Y" campaign is still gathering momentum before the actual soliciting among the student body begins, donations have been coming in for the past several weeks. Over $132 has been realized from six pledges.

Don Boggs is chairman of the publicity committee to which falls a great responsibility in putting over the drive. $1,500 is the goal set for the students to raise.

STUDENT DANCE SATURDAY NIGHT The dance of the week to be approved by Tech's social committee has been announced to be given at the gymnasium Saturday night. The final game of the McMurry series will be played there prior to the dance.

Horned Toads To Meet Baylor Five

(Special To The Avalanche)

FORT WORTH, Feb. 7.—Holding undisputed position of the conference cellar, the Texas Christian Horned Frogs will invade the south for the second time Saturday when they journey to Baylor to engage the Baylor Bears, in the first game of the season between the two teams. The Frogs, having won but one of their seven starts, will be out to hand the Bears enough field goals to pull them out of the cellar.

The new combination employed by Coach Matty Bell against the Longhorns in last week's tussle worked well but but for a spurt on the part of the Orange team in the last half, would have copped the tilt from the yet undefeated Steers. The Frog team showed a world of improvement and Frog fans who will journey to Baylor with the team anticipate a victory over the Bruins.

Reinstatement Of Tilden Is Rumored

BOSTON, Feb. 7. (AP)—The prediction that William "Big Bill" Tilden would be reinstated as an amateur in good standing was heard on all sides here today as delegates assembled for tomorrow's meeting of the United States Lawn Tennis association.

The general feeling was that Tilden had been punished sufficiently for his infraction of the Association's player-writer rule at Wimbledon last summer.

It was predicted that Tilden would be ranked No. 1, Francis T. Hunter, No. 2, George M. Lot, No. 3, and John F. Henningsen, No. 4, and that Helen N. Wills would again head the ranking of the women tennis players.

New Law Passed On Depositories

County Judge Robert H. Bean, was advised, in a communication received from State Senator Pink L. Parrish, Friday, that the state legislature has just passed a bill which changes the past regulations pertaining to the making of bonds by banks selected as county depositories' court, meeting here next Monday to choose a county depository for the ensuing two years.

The new bill changes the old rule that the bond had to be for $361,000, and when filed becoming a lien on all real estate of the surety to making the bond for the amount of the county's revenues for the year next preceding that for which the bond is made, and eliminates the lien on real estate.

Why suffer with Rheumatism?

You know it cannot be rubbed away

ARE you one of those unfortunate who suffer with pains in your muscles and joints, commonly called rheumatism, making you miserable, less efficient, interfering with your working hours, ruining your sleep?

You may have tried many things without relief. Why not try S.S.S.?

For more than 100 years S.S.S. has been giving relief in thousands of cases, as testified to in unsolicited letters of gratitude.

"I suffered with rheumatism for a good many years. At times my joints would swell so, I couldn't walk. I tried almost everything. Went to Hot Springs, then finally decided to try S.S.S. I took a course. In a short time the rheumatic pains entirely left me. I am now in perfect health, and want to add that I have tried all kinds of medicines but I think S.S.S. is the best."

A convenient modern package—for a convenient modern shortening

NEW

It seems only right that a creamy easy-to-use shortening like Snowdrift should be packed in these new convenient cans.

You'll agree that they are quite an improvement after you've tried one of the new three or six pound cans. Conveniently proportioned—almost as wide as they are tall and as easy to spoon from as an old-fashioned earthenware crock.

And the design of the can is new too—interesting and modern in blue and white—almost as appealing as Snowdrift itself. A convenient modern package for a convenient modern shortening.

The creamy consistency of Snowdrift makes it very, very easy to work with—it mixes in a jiffy with just a few stirs of the spoon and is always ready to use—never too hard when it comes from the refrigerator, never too soft when it has been standing in the kitchen.

Snowdrift makes so many good things to eat—cakes, biscuits, muffins, pie crust. And for delicate fried food there simply isn't any better frying fat than Snowdrift.

BOVINE TUBERCULOSIS

Bovine tuberculosis is one of the very serious things that we have to confront in the rearing of the children of our country. The Chaser, which is a monthly publication published from the Tuberculosis Sanitarium at Carlsbad, Texas, contains a mighty good article on this subject last month, which might be read with much interest. We are of the opinion that the dairies of Lubbock, are kept as near free from this as dairies anywhere else, and no charge is brought against them in this way, but the magazine article contains some information that is probably somewhat startling in regard to the death rate of the babies.

"Bovine tuberculosis is most dangerous to children. It affects the child in the form of bone and spinal and digestive tract disturbance. As much as thirty per cent of the infant mortality is traced to bovine tuberculosis. Thirty per cent of the infant mortality is traced to bovine tuberculosis." The statement is repeated because it is so startling. Thirty of every one hundred babies that die are victims of a disease that is easily preventable at its source. Should we give undue consideration to the cost of prevention of such a disease? Bovine tuberculosis has its origin, as its name indicates, in the dairy cow. It is transmitted to babies and others in the milk from tuberculous cows. It can be prevented by regular and scientific inspection of dairy cows, but not by unskilled examination of the animals. The tuberculous cow is the fattest and sleekest in the herd, and may escape detection except by the inoculation test which causes a reaction that may be observed easily. There are two ways to dispose of the tuberculous dairy cow. One is to take her out of the herd and kill her. The other is to isolate the animal and give her a system of treatment that has been successful in extended experiments conducted in the northwest. But for the safety of milk consumers it is imperative that the tuberculous cow be taken immediately out of the herd so that none of her milk can get to consumers and transmit bovine tuberculosis.

It is for these reasons that the physicians of Lubbock urge the strict enforcement of this city's dairy and milk ordinances. These ordinances not only seek to establish standards for milk, as to grade and butter fat content, but they require regular and scientific inspection and tests of dairy cows to show whether they are infected with bovine tuberculosis. And as one thinks of the deaths of innocent children as a result of bovine tuberculosis transmitted to them in the milk they drink, there can be no justification of the lack of enforcement of proper regulations because of the cost of such activity. The lives of the babies can not be valued in dollars and cents.

COMPLIMENT WITH A STING

The compliment paid the Senate of Texas the other day by one of its former members, John H. Bailey of Cuero, properly should have a back-handed classification applied to it. The former senator, who for many years held the distinction of being recognized as dean of the body, visited the capital and, as is the custom, was invited to address the Senate. He did, and while he said many things that caused ripples of laughter to float over the chamber, at the same time we suspect some members could easily detect a hidden meaning in the gentleman's address.

Giving unqualified indorsement to the many investigations set on foot at this session of the Legislature, Mr. Bailey expressed the conviction that the people would also approve because they knew that when the Legislature's time was taken up with investigations it would pass few bills; and that is what the people want—"fewer laws and better laws." Therefore, so far as was concerned he would raise no objection if the members would start a few more investigations and keep at it until they were weary of work and adjourn.

Those who know the gentleman real well are appraised of the fact that he is given to speaking facetiously at times, but even when he does he never fails to score a point. That is why he stood so well with his fellow-members when he was in the Senate. And, it can be said of him further, that while a member of the Senate and the House before that, he opposed more proposed laws than he favored, for the reason he considers the people too extremely governed now. And his talk to the Senate last week was his way of reminding the body that his views with respect to overloading the statutes with new laws have undergone no change.

Pursuing the investigation thought further, it is beginning to look as if the prison system is due for another probe. We hardly thought it would escape, since it has gotten to be a regular procedure whenever the Legislature assembles. With the board pleading for money to cover deficiencies in operation as well as authority to concentrate the system in some Central Texas section and the Legislature inclined to oppose both requests, we don't see how another investigation can be avoided.

And the ex-senator might have suggested this thought while visiting at the capitol last week. Perhaps he did.

The Prince of Wales found the mining population in the North of England to be a "ghastly mess" and he was amazed how any of them managed to live. But the question is, what can the prince do about it? The government appears to have gone just about as far toward relieving the situation as it can and is now toward re-establishment of its coal trade will bring relief. American labor has much to be thankful for.

"BLUEPRINT FLEET" MAY SERVE PURPOSE
By CHARLES P. STEWART
Washington Correspondent for Central Press and The Avalanche

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—When our big navy folk speak of a "blueprint fleet" it sounds contemptuous, which is exactly the way the big navy-ites intend it to sound. However, the fact is that the members of the blueprint faction have a really sensible idea in the back of their heads.

It may not work out well in practice, but the idea is all right, provided it can be made to accomplish what the blueprint-ers think maybe it will accomplish, and simply making fun of them is no answer to their argument.

Even militarists admit that fighting ships are wasted money, except in the sense that insurance premiums are not wasted.

The policy holder gets protection for his premiums, but he certainly would not go on paying them if he had nothing to be afraid of.

But unluckily Uncle Sam had to consider that the ideal situation for him to be in—if it were possible.

Just so with a war fleet. We have to have it, for protection; but it would be much nicer if we required no protection.

That was the object Secretary of State Hughes had in mind when the Washington conference was held in 1921-22, to limit the size of navies.

At that time America had, build or building, the world's strongest fleet of battleships. England, previously the seas' mistress, was greatly upset about it, for she did not like being outbuilt and knew she was powerless to help it, having nothing like as much money as America.

Secretary Hughes proposed a limit on these big men-o-war which would bring America down to England's level.

Naturally England accepted, with hosannas of praise.

Uncle Sam promptly scuttled several hundred million dollars worth of nearly-completed vessels, thus putting the two countries practically on an equality in the matter of battleships.

But unluckily Uncle Sam had neglected to set a limit on cruisers.

John Bull began building cruisers almost as fast as Uncle Sam was sinking battleships. Cruisers are a lot cheaper than battleships and just as good—after the other fellow has sunk his battleships.

Accordingly, it was not long before Uncle Sam saw himself hopelessly outclassed by John Bull, as a cruiser-owner.

"Let's limit cruisers, too," urged Sam. This time John couldn't see it.

Judging from the lesson of 1921-22 there is only one way of persuading John Bull to agree to all-round naval limitation—and that is to hit him so hot a pace that his pocketbook can't stand it.

Hence the 15-cruiser bill—to raise John Bull out of the jacket.

The blueprint-ers indorse this program in principle, but they make the point that it is rather expensive to build fifteen 10,000-ton cruisers, to be scrapped later, in order to compel John Bull to see reason.

They propose to "authorize" the cruisers, in the hope that that will scare John sufficiently.

As soon as a cruiser is authorized, her plans are drawn—her blueprints—but actual work on her cannot start until cash is appropriated to pay for it. A great many projects are authorized which never get any farther.

The big navy-ites contend that John Bull will not scare as easily as the blueprint-ers think he will. "You never can tell," rejoins the blueprint-ers, "without trying."

ADOPTING CHILD IS NO HIT-OR-MISS MATTER
By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

In the current issue of Hygiene, Dr. A. Levinson has pointed out some of the important factors to be considered by people who wish to adopt a child.

In most instances people pick out a child because it is dark or fair, fat or lean, because its hair is curly or straight, blond or brunet. However, the wise couple will realize from the first that the health of the child is much more important than the tilt or turn-up of its nose.

Experienced parents realize that an extremely cute baby may be just the opposite when it reaches eight years of age. The fat babies get thin and the thin ones get fat; the curly-haired blond six months of age may be a straight-haired raven at the age of 15.

The child with a positive Wasserman test has a condition which demands a great deal of attention before it is suitable for adoption.

The child who has come from a family with tuberculosis may pass through a long period of invalidism before it is healthful.

Mental deficiency can be recognized after three or four months of age, but some mental defects do not appear until later in life. For this reason it is highly important to have some conception of the amount of mental defect in the ancestry of the child that is being considered for adoption.

Some hereditary defects can be controlled to a certain extent through environment, but it is far safer to be sure of the heredity of the child and not to take chances.

Most people who want to adopt a baby want an extremely young one so that it will not know that the parents are not its own. It is undesirable, however, to adopt a baby during the first few days of its life. At least several months should be given to observation of its physical and mental state before it is taken by the family for rearing.

SO THINK WE

We think many of the people who do well to include in their next planting list of trees several pecans. There is a movement on foot in Texas to get as many pecan trees planted as possible and it seems a mighty good thing, since it has been found that the varieties now offered for sale are well adapted to this part of the country, and grow off, and make large trees in a very few years. They make excellent shade trees as well as bearing fruit.

We think that President von Hindenburg is certainly a long way behind the times, since it has been announced that he had never seen a motion picture till just a few days ago. The president may not have seen movies but he has been in them plenty of times.

We think that there is quite a bit of doubt as to who will be included in the president's cabinet. The President-elect possibly does not know yet, who they will be.

We think it is rather a difficult job for an ex-president to get a job big enough for him after he has been the chief executive of the nation. If he is a democrat or a republican he must watch his political step, and mind his political association, and if he takes up with a big corporation, chances are he will be accused of having been bossed by this class of people while in office. So there are just a few of the things that they have to contend with.

Usually a fellow never gets so tough that some one will not be a little tougher than he. Men who have their pet handles all notched up, as evidence of their killing ability, usually find one that will puncture them, and if not that they will finally get tired of such a life and be so tough, for you will after awhile kill yourself if someone else doesn't kill you.

We think there is one thing that the automobile owners have not been able to do yet and that is to change tires on a moving automobile. But this may be possible some time in the near future.

Your Income Tax

A taxpayer, though unmarried, who supports in his home one or more relatives over whom he exercises family control, is the head of a family and is entitled to the same exemptions allowed a married person, $3,500. Also, he may claim $400 for each person dependent upon him for chief support if such person is under 18 years of age or incapable of self-support because mentally or physically defective. Such dependent need not be a relative of the taxpayer nor a member of his household. The term "mentally or physically defective" includes not only cripples and those mentally defective, but persons in ill health and the aged. For example, if an unmarried son supports in his home an aged mother, he is entitled to an exemption of $3,500, plus the $400 credit for a dependent, a total of $3,900. If, from choice, the mother lives in another city, the son, although her chief support, would be entitled only to the $1,500 exemption, plus the $400 credit. The mother is not living with him, he is not considered the head of a family. The $400 credit does not apply to the wife or husband of a taxpayer, although one may be totally dependent upon the other.

An exemption as the head of the family can be claimed by only one member of a household.

The Way Of The World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

Balzac, Frenchman, and keen student of life, said: "Civilization is the story of mankind climbing up stairs in wooden shoes and coming down in golden slippers."

The problem of modern men and women who want to maintain and improve civilization is how to change from wooden shoes to golden slippers and keep on climbing.

Reduction of the public debt has been in accord with the program accepted by congress and the treasury department in 1920, and any credit which may attach thereto goes to the president's predecessors.

Like the old New England farmer who just before his demise informed his wife that "the old stocking is full of banknotes," it is apparently the ambition of the president to retire from office with the treasury showing a very favorable balance. This was exemplified in his message to congress in which he stated without equivocation that he would oppose improvement programs requiring federal appropriations, his attitude toward proposed federal and harbor programs being typical of his idea of public economy.

It is true that the federal treasury report will show some $3,000,000 as a result of the president's attitude toward river and harbor appropriations, by the direct loss to agriculture; and the industrial interests of the United States will be many times that amount. In other words, to make a better showing in the treasury report upon his retirement the president has delayed improvement program of utmost importance to the economic welfare of the American people.

It is in accord with the New England theory that every penny should be saved, but does not coincide with the generally accepted American idea that progress and prosperity depend upon investment of capital upon housing it.

Fortunately, the successor of President Coolidge has different views. The president-elect is familiar with the vast resources of the country; his every utterance during his campaign as well as during the years he served as secretary of commerce, would indicate he believes in development of these resources as the one means of establishing and maintaining a nation's prosperity. If his administration of his new duties is in accord with his record as secretary of commerce, there will be none of the false economy which has marked national affairs the past six years.

Expansion of American industry in recent years has not been due to aid from the Coolidge administration. It has been due to the vision of American leaders who have met little encouragement from the Coolidge administration. They have been handicapped by the "penny-pinching" policies advocated by President Coolidge, and their success may be attributed to the efficiency of American executives.

The retirement of President Coolidge doubtless will be followed by closer co-operation between the government and all branches of industry. If Mr. Hoover follows the practice of his predecessor, his cooperation with the department of commerce there will be a complete realignment of national policies with respect to the economy program.

The launching of federal improvement programs which will prove an important factor in the development of the nation's great resources.—Brownsville Herald.

THIS HAS HAPPENED
All sorts of things are happening to ASHTORETH ASHE, First Lady of the Republic, the famous multi-millionaire—the famous HOLLIS HART. Then an ex-sweetheart, MONTY ENGLISH, appears upon the scene.

Ashtoreth leaves Hollis in New York, and returns to Boston, following their arrival in America from a cruise to the West Indies. Hollis means to fly to Boston.

When Ashtoreth reaches home, she learns that Monty is also flying that night to Boston, determined, he wires, to see her on an important matter.

Ashtoreth and her mother, with SADDIE MORTON, are listening to the radio when the broadcaster of the BOSTON NEWS announces that a plane, thought from New York to Boston, has been lost.

Hollis telephones her from Connecticut, where the plane crashed that he is on his way to Boston. And he tells her that he can have the five-day marriage Hollis Hart heard of, and marry her in the morning.

She is excited and happy, but a bit dismayed because of the disconcerting news of Monty English. Monty was flying to Ashtoreth. When Hollis telephoned, Monty was with him. He asked to speak to Mrs. Ashe, but the connection was abruptly severed.

Now, Ashtoreth, with her head in a muddle, is planning for her marriage.

Hollis motors from Connecticut, where the accident took place, to the Ashe flat in Boston. Meantime, the Boston papers have heard not only of the airplane smash, but the story that was printed in New York. They besiege the house like an army.

Ashtoreth Ashtoreth-Hollis-Hart were married in a quiet little wedding in the office of Mr. Harvey Higginbottom, an attorney who is also a justice of peace.

They are sailing for Paris on the Isle de France, having made in the flat in Boston, with Saddle Morton to keep her company.

Now GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLII

"Star bright, star light—first star I see tonight!"

"I wish I may, I wish I might—have the wish that I wish tonight."

Ashtoreth had thrown about her last a chiffon scarf spangled with silver stars. And over her velvet dinner gown (slashed to the waist in back) a wrap that was studied with semi-precious stones, like the best brocade gown of an aristocrat.

She felt like a princess in a fairy tale, who had been rather dazed once upon a time. But, by virtue of being beautiful, had come at last into her own.

She considered the firmament touched the silver star on her low, white forehead. A trifle bizarre. But none could deny that it suited her unusual beauty.

Hollis had accounts in New York at all the smartest shops. That struck Ashtoreth as a bit strange but then it was very convenient—and, after all, she wasn't marrying the man's past.

She bought French lingerie, and a squirrel coat. Ten pairs of shoes, and five of colored pumps, with rhinestone heels and buckles. Six hats. Seven dinner gowns (one for every night of the voyage). Two evening wraps (the other was of feathers, too fragile to wear on deck), five dozen pairs of chiffon hose. And a few sport things.

"Not too much," cautioned Hollis "because we don't want to travel with a lot of trunks. You can do your serious shopping in Paris."

So Ashtoreth had chosen her beautiful clothes with a little new air. "A dozen nightgowns will be enough, I think. And only two negligees—the scarlet one, and the one with velvet trim. I'm going to Paris, you see, and I don't want to be burdened with luggage. It's so silly, don't you think—when one can pick up such exquisite lingerie over there?"

It had been hot and close in the ballroom tonight. Too much smoke, and too much champagne. Besides, Lady Mary Somebody-or-other, returning from London, via Paris, had appeared. Hollis and Ashtoreth were old friends, it seemed.

Ashtoreth wasn't exactly piqued. Still, it did seem that Lady Mary might have been a little more considerate. The way she was always talking of that "old friend" of hers, Ashtoreth knew nothing.

And there was another dreadful woman. Mrs. Humbert Worthingford, who lived in one of those places you read about in the Glibb's novels, and wanted them to go shooting.

Hollis had lots of friends aboard. They drank innumerable aperitifs, and played incessant bridge. And chatted of books and travel, and the stock market. So that Ashtoreth had, sometimes, a suffocating feeling of being completely swamped. Cocktails made her ill, because the passage was a little rough. She couldn't play bridge, nor deck games. And she had so little time to read. As for stocks, and bulls and bears, and buying on margin, and selling short—well, a girl can't know everything.

Ashtoreth was glad that Lady Mary had buck teeth. She knew if the truth were told, Lady Mary would have been glad to exchange all her erudition, and her high-toned ways, for a good set of even, white teeth, to sparkle every time she opened her mouth. . . . And Mrs. Humbert Worthingford had the biggest feet. Ashtoreth found them absurdly reassuring.

After all, society women usually are plain. Or they don't know how to dress. Or they're awfully fat, or terribly scrawny. Against the solidarity of their manes and their titles, and their good old families, of their assured ways and their certain knowledge. Ashtoreth considered the buck teeth of Lady Mary, the flat feet of Mrs. Humbert Worthingford, and the triple chin of Miss Amy Morrill, the society poetess. They comforted her immeasurably.

She would be glad when they reached Paris, and the passenger-gone and they varied company. Still, even that would have its drawbacks. Hollis was a darling, and she certainly loved him. But it was so silly, the way he idolized her.

When he called her "Orchid," he kind of whispered it. Not really, he whispered, but he said it so sort of thrillingly. Quietly, with a little quiver in his voice. Almost as if he were calling on a saint, or the Mother of God, or something. And he was talking about her "darling," untouched, and telling her how cool she was, and chaste, and lovely, like an orchid.

Sometimes, in the pressing darkness of her cabin, she thought of Monty. And all his rough, young ways, and his merry stare, and the way he used to tell her truths about herself. And she wondered if Monty would laugh, if he could hear Hollis saying such beautiful things.

Monty had told her something once, about getting married. "You'll get married for one of two things," he said. "Love—or money. You won't be like all the rest of the girls."

"I know you got a bug on getting married. Not because they love a man. But because they'd like a little place of their own. Or they're fed up on working. Or they're lonesome. And they want company. Maybe it's just a little ticket they're grabbing. Or they don't want to be old maids. Some of them do it so's they can have kids. There's reasons enough, decent and respectable, and all that. But it's not love—and it's not just money."

"Now, you're different, Ash. It'll be love, or money with you. And nothing else but."

"But money doesn't make a happy marriage, Monty," she had protested.

"No, but it makes up for an unhappy one," he told her wisely. "If you don't love a man more than God himself, be sure he's got money. Ash. If you love him enough, it doesn't count. I got a feeling in my bones."

"What sort of a feeling?" she had demanded, when he hesitated.

But Monty shrugged his shoulders then, and whistled. That was all, he declared, that he had to say.

Love or Money? . . . Well, I did, didn't I? thought Ashtoreth to herself. . . . Marry for love, I mean she added chasidly.

She had left Hollis in the ballroom, and slipped out during a brief moment when nobody was paying any particular attention to her. Now she leaned over the rail, and drew her chiffon cloak close about her. There was somebody standing in a little corner that was full of shadows. Ashtoreth had not seen him, but she felt him, standing there. He had seen her, of course, in the light of the open door, clothed in black and silver, with a star on her forehead, and a gleaming wrap to warm her. Probably he was lonely, and would like to talk to somebody. . . . Why not? Hollis was dancing with Lady Mary, wasn't he? And not caring a bit what became of her.

She leaned over the railing and addressed herself to the heavens "Star bright, star light—first star I see tonight. I wish I may, I wish I might—have the wish that I wish tonight."

She turned her profile toward the dark corner, and clasped her hands against her throat, shivering slightly, and drawing her cloak closer about her. Hollis said that her hands made him think of calla lilies. As for her profile—she knew that was perfect. . . . She sighed softly.

Then out of the shadows stepped a familiar figure. . . . And that moment the door opened, framing Hollis, his hands thrust in the pockets of his dinner coat.

Ashtoreth knew he was looking for her, but she pretended, for a moment, to be lost in contemplation of the wintry sea. The stranger stepped back, filling the corner filled already with darkness.

"Orchid," cried Hollis, and joined her at the rail. "My dear, you'll catch cold."

He covered her hands with his, chafing them warmly. . . . "Silly little girl—it's frigid as Greenland's icy mountains out here."

"I didn't know you'd come," she pouted at him. "You were so interested in Lady Mary."

"Darling," he cried and put his arms about her. "You know better than that, don't you Sweetheart?"

She let him hold her for a moment, looking into the shadows. That man had given her a dreadful start. He looked so exactly like Monty. It couldn't be, of course. But what if it was? . . . She drew a little away from her husband.

little baby," and forgot that there had been several first stars, rising over the Caribbean, that his bride had quite overlooked.

They arrived in Paris on a Monday, and went directly to the Ritz. Because it was Monday, the shops were closed, and the museums and galleries, and even a number of the smaller restaurants. Hollis was quite content to stay in their suite.

Ashtoreth was annoyed when he seemed to think there was nothing more exciting to do than just hold hands, and kiss, and things like that. He was still talking about how exquisite she was, and consummate, and she had begun to find it slightly nerve-racking. Finally, they went to the Cafe de la Paix, and on the way Ashtoreth noticed that on the Avenue of the Opera, there were many unromantic American things for sale—sewing machines, and shoes and dress patterns. It was disconcerting, somehow. But the Cafe was very exciting. They sat out doors, on the sidewalk, in the middle of winter. And everybody drank cocktail, or cafe au lait, or chocolate, or keep warm. And there were flower vendors, selling violets and daffodils.

Hollis talked to one of the waiters, and presently the man who owned the place for maybe he only managed it was there, bowing and shaking hands, and calling her Madame. Hollis knew everybody and everything.

They went from there to Place Vendome, to see the crystals at Fremet's. And, as they strolled along the boulevard, Hollis spoke to a number of people. Several of them stopped, and exchanged lengthy greetings. They made Ashtoreth feel ignorant and gauche, even when they spoke English. Because she could think of nothing to say, except, "It's my first trip." They went to Frunier's for dinner, because Hollis said it was the most famous place in the world. But Ashtoreth did not want lobster. She wanted some of Maizle's sausage cakes, with tomato sauce. They had 28 hors d'oeuvres. And a bottle of Pae Roget, because it was their first dinner in Paris, and Hollis said they really should celebrate. Then lobster thermidor.

But Ashtoreth had eaten too many hors d'oeuvres by the time it arrived. And the wine had gone straight to her head. It wasn't a very successful dinner. Probably it was the wine that made her homesick and the pastries that made her ill. She cried herself to sleep, between linen sheets, and shivered all night, because no French puff can cover anyone's feet and shoulders at the same time, and Ashtoreth liked to keep them both warm.

To make things worse, she dreamed about Monty, and woke up shrieking, because he was standing in a dark corner, and someone was dropping anchors on him.

Hollis was very sweet, and dried her eyes, and kissed her gently. But Ashtoreth had discovered that his two front teeth (the upper ones) were on little swivels, and he removed them at night, after the lights were out.

In the morning she woke believing that Monty was in Paris. Hollis had gone out so quietly that she did not hear him. There was a note from him on the pillow, telling her to ring for petit dejeuner, and that he would have a little surprise when he returned.

(To Be Continued.)

The honeymoon begins to wane. But Ashtoreth, just as she is getting a little fed up on her husband's love-making and bored with his compliments, encounters—read the next chapter, and find out.

A SNORE DUET

Market Undergoes Upsets Thursday On Credit Status

Extreme Losses In Many Of Active Issues Registered; Sales Run Above Five Million Total

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER
Associated Press Financial Writer
NEW YORK, Feb. 7. (AP)—The stock market underwent a thorough shakeout today on the wave of selling which followed the federal reserve warning against the excessive use of the speculative credit and the rise from 4 1/2 to 5 1/2 percent in the bank of England discount rate. Extreme losses in many of the active issues ranged from 5 to 33 points, with final quotations generally around the lowest of the day.

Trading started off at a terrific pace but slowed down in the afternoon. The day's sales running above 5,000,000 shares but falling far short of the record-breaking session of 6,942,500 shares November 23, last.

Call Rate Lowered
Opening declines ranged from 2 to 17 points, but a partial recovery set in when the call money was lowered to 6 percent. The rally failed to hold, however, and prices weakened again in the afternoon when U. S. steel common, Union Pacific, Johns Manville and several of the other recent leaders touched their low prices of the day.

While the Federal Reserve warning was generally expected, it was much stronger in tone than Wall Street had anticipated. The rise of a full point in the Bank of England rate was a complete surprise, as it brought the British rate to 1-2 of 1 percent above the prevailing rate among federal reserve banks in this country.

It was followed by a brisk rise of about 3-4 of a cent in sterling exchange, bringing it well above the "gold import" point and undoubtedly precluding the possibility of any further shipments of gold from London to New York.

Brokers' Loans Increase
After the close of the market, the New York Federal Reserve bank announced that brokers' loans had increased $110,000,000 in the week ended February 6, bringing the total to a new high record at $5,669,000,000. This compares with $3,835,000,000 a year ago.

No change was announced today in the 6 percent rediscount rate of the New York Federal Reserve bank, confirming the belief in banking circles that local authorities would await the market's response to the federal reserve board's warning before taking any further action.

HOBBS, N. M., Feb. 7.—Drillers at the Midwest No. 1 well are still fishing for tools lost one week ago. The job of recovering them is proving very difficult, and it may be several days before the work is completed.

Well No. 2 will be spudded in as soon as the fishing job is completed.

Ducks and geese on the lakes of Byrd park at Richmond, Va., are to be removed. The mayor agreed with residents of the park that the beauty of the birds was offset by their habit of quacking incessantly at daybreak.

sold as high as 18 cents a pound, directors of the Goldman Sachs Trading corporation declared a 100 percent stock dividend, the new stock of the General Motors was placed on a $3 annual basis and the New York stock exchange approved an increase of 25 percent in the membership of the organization. Radio corporation common, which sold as high as 404 on Monday, broke 35 points to 354 and closed at the bottom. Johns Manville fell 23 points to 208 and rebounded to 211 1/2. At least fifty other issues, including American and foreign power, Case Threshing, Columbia, Graphophone, Curtis Wright, General Electric, Kennecott, Greene Cananes, Montgomery-Ward, Packard Motors, Union Carbide, Victor Talking Machine and Westinghouse Electric closed at net declines of 5 to 15 points.

U. S. Steel common opened with a block of 20,000 shares at 175 1/2, rallied to 178 1/2, dropped to 174 3/8 and then crossed 175 again for a net loss of 6 1/4 points.

Call money held steady at 6 percent all day.

Foreign exchanges displayed a firm undertone, with sterling cables ruling around $4.85 5/8 as against a ruling rate of $4.84 15/16 earlier in the week.

Credit Shut-Down Is Aid To Cotton On Orleans Market

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 7. (AP)—After declining 15 to 14 points in early trading the cotton market strengthened later today under a demand stimulated by the theory that commodities would be aided by the federal reserve board's statement against stock speculation and expectations of large January consumption figures. May advanced from 19.04 to 19.27 and closed at 19.26, compared with 19.19, yesterday's closing figure. The general market closed very steady at net advances of 5 to 7 points.

The market opened easy in sympathy with a decline in Liverpool, private cables explaining the weakness as there as due to the increase in the bank of England's discount rate. First-trades showed losses of 8 to 10 points and the market continued to sag in early trading due to the slump in stocks. March traded off from 18.99, May 19.05 and July 19.07 or 13 to 14 points net down.

At the decline good trade buying and covering developed and by noon all the loss was recovered. In early afternoon prices continued to advance under continued covering, light offerings and good January consumption prospects. Active positions traded to new highs for the day with March at 19.20, May 19.27 and July 19.29, or 21 to 22 points up from the lows. The close was near the top with March at 19.18 and July 19.27.

The prospects for unsettled weather in the belt which would further retard crop preparations added to the late firmness as did liberal buying in New York.

Receipts 21,986; for week 104,619; for year 8,055,995; last year 6,901,372. Exports 33,597; for week 10,034; for year 5,671,095; last year 4,695,633. Stock 2,213,289; last year 2,290,379. Stock on shipboard 118,910; last year 102,150. Spot sales 13,730 last year 13,104.

Stock Market Has Influence On New York Cotton Price

NEW YORK, Feb. 7. (AP)—An early decline under liquidation promoted by relatively weak cables and nervous overaction of the stock market was followed by rallies in the cotton market today on covering and trade buying. May deliveries sold up from 19.65@19.88 and closed at 19.97, compared with 19.79 yesterday's close. The general market closed firm at net advances of 5 to 14 points.

The market was unsettled in early trading. First prices were 3 to 8 points net lower. The active positions soon showed net losses of 12 to 17 points under liquidation and some local, western and Wall street selling. Uncertainty as to the effect of the Federal Reserve statement on speculative credits and its possible reactions on cotton, was said to be one of the factors on the decline. There also was selling on the relatively easy showing of Liverpool and the advance in the Bank of England rate.

Early offerings were readily absorbed by trade buying and coverings, however. After selling off to 19.55 for March and 19.08 for the new October contracts, prices turned again. Failure of unsettling features in the early news to stimulate more general aggressive selling, apparently made a favorable impression on sentiment as the technical position of the market improved. Private cables reported London and Manchester, liquidation influenced by the higher Bank of England rate in Liverpool. Manchester advices reported an improved home demand for cotton cloths but said yarns were pressing for sale. Exports today 33,597 making 5,839,165 this season. Port receipts 35,189. U. S. port stocks 2,169,933.

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., Feb. 6.—Mrs. George Weegar, 68, recently accomplished a feat which would tax the strength of many persons 30 years younger. She fell into a deep well. After repeatedly crying for help and receiving no assistance, and realizing that the icy water would soon overcome her, she seized the bucket rope, braced her feet against the sides of the well and climbed to the top. She suffered no ill effects.

FT. WORTH GRAIN

FORT WORTH, Feb. 7. (AP)—Exports on the Fort Worth cash grain market Thursday were taking corn and kaffir actively while other grains, dull with no wheat going that route. Snow over the Panhandle-Plains section had a tendency to restrict receipts.

MIDWESTERN LIVESTOCK

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 7. (AP)—(U. S. D. A.)—Hog trade around the 11-market circuit was featured by a broad shipping demand with values unevenly 10 to 45 cents higher. Receipts estimated at 119,500 were 19,000 short of a week ago and 5,000 less than the same day last year. The day's extreme top of 10.25 was paid on closing rounds at St. Louis. A reduction in the sheep supply resulted in a fairly active fat lamb trade at steady to 25c higher prices. Closely sorted fat lambs in Chicago realized 17.00 to 17.35. No material change was registered on aged stock. Total offerings approximated 29,500 as compared with 24,598 last Thursday and 46,754 a year ago.

The narrow outlet for dressed beefs at eastern markets had a depressing influence on the live trading. Packers having an especially bearish attitude toward majority of fed steers. Light yearlings ruled firm to slightly higher. This condition a rising from the fact that supplies of this class the past few days had been comparatively light and trade requirements having more of a local aspect. Country demand for stockers and feeders continued narrow and no improvement is expected until more stability is obtained on slaughter cows, and the weather condition becomes more satisfactory. The supply totalled around 20,000, a slight decrease from a week ago and 11,000 short a year ago.

Fair Offerings Made at Ft. Worth

FORT WORTH, Feb. 7. (AP)—Except for bulls and calves that sold about steady on the Fort Worth livestock market today, other classes of cattle received lower bids during the early part of the session. Very few sales on these classes. Steers made up a good portion of the cattle supply. More cattle on hand than here on Thursday of last week, but hardly so many as a year ago.

In the slaughter division one load of plain light weight steers sold at 9.25 and a load of steers fed by a nearby feed lot sold at 10.25, or steady to 15c lower. The other steers had trouble getting tickets with buyers bidding around a quarter lower.

One load of bulls in the southern division sold at 8.25, or about steady. The common light bulls in packages sold around 6.50. Practically no early sales of cows with buyers bids around a quarter lower. The supply light, particularly canners and cutters. A fair offering of slaughter yearlings and heifers on hand with lower bids placed during the morning. A few cars sold at 9.25@11.35, or 15c to a quarter lower. Some of the best ones unsold at noon. Light weight yearlings had preference. The calf supply was very light. One load of good fed calves, around 450 pounds, sold at 11.85, or about steady, quality considered. A five car lot of Brahama calves that arrived late sold at 10.50. Cull calves around 6.50.

A four-car lot of steers sold to a feeder buyer at 10.25, or about steady. Woolled fat lambs sold at 16.00 and fresh shorn fat lambs at 14.50. While these prices appeared about a quarter higher, quality considered, there is very little quotable increase over prevailing prices. Hogs 150 to a quarter higher with quality lacking in the rail section. Rail top $6.00 and the best truck butchers up to 9.15. Packing sows sold at 7.50@8.00.

Oklahoma Sheriff Asks For Return Of Wink Druggist

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 7. (P)—Stanley Rogers, Oklahoma county sheriff, today asked W. J. Holloway, acting governor, to request Governor Moody of Texas to have rangers arrest Wilbur Garton, alias Wilbert Gardner, said to be at Wink, Texas, wanted here in a murder charge in the slaying of Peter Amos and George Lampos, Greeks, in October, 1926.

That Garton was the third man wanted was revealed by Sheriff Rogers after the arrest of Roy Womble, 31, in Los Angeles and Don McBee, 31, near here.

Sheriff Rogers said he had located Garton under the name of Gardner at Wink, but that the sheriff there had refused to arrest the man, saying Gardner was a "respectable drug store proprietor."

Weather

temperature of 40 with rain and San Antonio 42 with clouds but no precipitation.

High temperatures prevailed on the Gulf and in the lower Rio Grande valley, but a falling barometer promised rain there. At Corpus Christi the skies were cloudy and the thermometer at 60, but Brownsville had clear skies with a temperature of 70.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 7. (P)—Oklahoma tonight was in the grip of one of the worst snow storms in the past four years, as many roads were blocked and destitute persons in some cities appealed for aid.

Reports from all parts of the state told of from three to five inches of snow, with Idabel and Broken Bow, in the extreme southeastern corner of the state, the only points at which no snow was reported.

Operations in the oil fields were cut to a minimum.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified croceote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs croceote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to croceote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the croceote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Dams Are Planned For Devils' River

Series of Seven Power Dams To Be Constructed Along Famed Texas Stream; Fish Abound In River

(By Associated Press)

DEL RIO, Feb. 7. —Devil's river, Texas' rock-bottomed 75-mile, self-sufficient stream is to be harnessed. Unlike most Southwestern water courses, it is not a parasite depending upon watershed or rainfall, but is fed from within by hundreds of springs dealing out pure mountain water.

A series of seven dams to be built at regular intervals are planned for the river to create electric power. One dam already is in operation, eight miles from the mouth of the stream. Another is under construction and locations have been selected for the others.

The river first was "dammed" by early travelers and settlers, but by explosives only. These folk conferred the name of this picturesque gash in the earth's surface. Devil's river just happens, say old timers. It is reached abruptly in the mountains at a place where a stream is not expected. It has a gradient of seven feet to the mile, a flow of 372 cubic feet of water per second at a gauged point, and is lined with beautiful groves of pecan trees. It abounds in game fish of all sorts.

likely will be associated with him. Highway Commissioner Cone Johnson asked that the inquiry not be resumed before Tuesday to permit attendance of R. S. Sterling of Houston, chairman of the commission.

In the meantime, the committee inquiring into the land office recent controversy over postponement of the sale of mineral leases in University lands, put in a full day's work and announced it would resume its inquiry tomorrow morning. Direct testimony bearing on the sale of mineral leases was completed today.

Land Bill

on pending litigation. Defeated by a parliamentary ruling, Furl then asked that consideration be deferred until Wednesday.

At this juncture Storey and Stevenson of Junction, house authors of the Small bill, accepted an amendment to allow the state to obtain land and gravel from all river beds, but the bill's backers defeated attempts to provide that the state's rights in obtaining royalty from beds or bays should not be affected by its passage, or that persons should be denied the right to hunt or fish in streams now defined as navigable.

Chastain declared that for 100 years descendants of Comanche Indian fighters in West Texas counties had never been disturbed by "land grabbers," but that oil had sent property values skyward and unscrupulous persons waited daily around the state capitol, eager for opportunity to question the title of pioneer residents.

pail the only reminder of the thrill. Another photo-electric eye counted the guests, catching them as they passed through a slender beam of light. Similar "eyes" sorted packages operating an automatic device, whenever any package lacking a label passed before the "eye," it was yanked out of the moving procession. Color sorting was demonstrated, including that domestic problem known as matching colors.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7. (P)—The New York Times said today that Alfred E. Smith would not be a candidate for mayor next fall as has been advocated in various quarters. The paper said it had learned that Mr. Smith informed Mayor Walker of his position shortly before he departed for Florida. Mayor Walker has not indicated his position. Former Mayor John Hylan is again a candidate.

CHICAGO, Feb. 7. (P)—Two windows were shattered today by a small bomb which exploded in the doorway of a West Side cigar store owned by Joseph Palumbo, a chipper who has lost both legs. It was the tenth bomb explosion reported to police this year. Damage was slight and no one was injured.
