Congress increases debt limit

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Social Security checks threatened and lawmakers headed for a month-long vacation, Congress voted Friday to increase the government's borrowing authority by another $53 billion.

The House voted 208-202 to boost the limit on federal debt to $1.57 trillion. With no debate, the Senate quickly concurred by voice vote, sending the legislation to President Reagan. That assures the Treasury Department authority to borrow enough money to keep the government operating through August.

A coalition of conservative House Republicans and liberal Democrats had killed two attempts to raise the debt ceiling Thursday. They tried again Friday but were outvoted by colleagues eager to leave town for a month without worrying about whether Social Security and other checks could be sent out on schedule.

"We all had a chance to prove what heroes we were yesterday," said Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn. "Now it is time to shake ourselves back into reality," he added, urging members not to cast "symbolic votes that have no meaning to anyone anywhere except ourselves."

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., sponsor of the bill, quoted the Treasury Department as saying Social Security checks would be in jeopardy if Congress adjourned without passing the legislation. "That's what can happen," he said.

Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., chairman of the House Budget Committee, pleaded with the House to oppose the higher debt ceiling as a way of pressuring the Republican-controlled Senate into negotiating a smaller increase in defense spending than Reagan wants.

Congress promised the people earlier this year that it would approve a three-part program to reduce the mounting federal deficit, Jones noted. A tax increase and cuts in Medicare health aid for the elderly and disabled have been passed, and other non-defense spending reductions are making their way through Congress, but Republicans are still insisting on a $300 billion military budget for 1985, he said.

"We have asked the old, the poor, students, children, farmers to sacrifice to make a down payment on the deficit," added Rep. George Miller, D-Calif. But unless Republicans are forced into serious negotiations, Congress will "have set in motion uncontrollable defense spending," he said.

Guy McCrary, president of the Centennial Plaza project, talks with Walter Frnka, district production manager of Getty Oil Co., which contributed $25,000 to the park project. The Midland Jaycees originally took on the undeveloped park as a special project and have come up with a $1 million plan for developing it. The plaza is scheduled to be completed next summer.

Economic growth slowing down, government says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's forecasting gauge for national economic health edged down in May for the first time since 1982, and sales of new homes also declined for the fourth month in five, in another sign of a general slackening in the once-robust expansion.

However, government officials and private analysts showed only mild concern Friday, saying the economy was merely slowing, not falling. And there was no talk of a new recession anytime soon.

In the two reports:

—The Commerce Department said its Index of Leading Indicators slipped 0.1 percent from the April level. That was the first decline since August 1982, although increases in recent months have been modest.

—Commerce and the Department of Housing and Urban Development said May sales of new single-family houses were down 44 percent from April, a decline that industry spokesmen blamed on rising home loan rates. The 612,000 annual sales rate was the slowest since last September.

The decline in the leading indicators was so small that it could well disappear when revisions are released next month. But if it stood, it would end the longest string of monthly increases since World War II.

That would not be seen as bad news by many government and private economists, who have said a gentle slowing in overall economic expansion might well be desirable, easing pressures on inflation and interest rates and thereby lessening chances the recovery will be cut short.

Other reports have shown such major parts of the economy as industrial production and retail sales already slowing this year.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige noted that the leading indicators had averaged increases of 0.5 percent during the past six months after rising 0.9 percent per month during the previous half-year.

"Past experience indicates that this slowdown is signaling less vigorous economic growth during the second half of this year," he said in a statement.

But a single slight index decline hardly seemed to indicate anything worse than a slowing. In contrast, the indicators dropped five times in seven months preceding the beginning of the 1981-82 recession.

Baldrige and Robert Wescott, a senior economist with Wharton Econometrics in Philadelphia, also pointed to specific encouraging points in the index, which pulls together wide-ranging, forward-pointing statistics compiled by the government.

Baldrige noted that one component considered vital to further economic growth, contracts and orders for new plants and equipment, "rose by an impressive 14.9 percent to the highest level in five years" during May.

And Wescott said one reason the average manufacturing employee's work week declined in May, the biggest factor pulling the index down, was the hiring of many new workers during the month. "We really traded workers for hours, and it's not clear that's really a big negative for the economy," he said.

Besides the decline in average work week — to 40.7 hours from 41.2 hours in April — the index was lowered by declines in net business formation, building permits for future construction, prices of sensitive raw materials, stock prices and the number of companies reporting slower business deliveries.

NOW president: Women may nominate vice president

The Associated Press

The president of the National Organization for Women said Friday there is the "very strong possibility" women delegates will offer their own vice presidential choice at the Democratic National Convention next month if Walter F. Mondale selects a man as his running mate.

"This is not in the nature of a threat," Judy Goldsmith declared as NOW opened its annual meeting in Miami Beach. "It's in the nature of a prediction."

And she said NOW members will support Mondale in the general election against Ronald Reagan — even if the Democrat does not take a woman running mate — because Reagan has been the worst president in history for women.

Mondale, on a fund-raising trip through the South two weeks before he is officially nominated for president, announced plans to interview Kentucky Gov. Martha Layne Collins next week as he continues his search for a running mate.

Mondale found himself under renewed pressure on the vice presidential issue as the Rev. Jesse Jackson sought to keep attention on the 49

American and Cuban prisoners he brought back from Havana late Thursday night and away from controversy surrounding supporter Louis Farrakhan.

Despite being pressed to do so by reporters, Jackson did not repeat in front of television cameras the written denunciation of Farrakhan that his campaign issued on Thursday.

The statement said Farrakhan's recent statements highly critical of Judaism and Israel were "reprehensible and morally indefensible" — and that Farrakhan has no further role in the Jackson campaign.

President Reagan broke his silence on Farrakhan on Friday and — though he did not mention the Black Muslim leader by name — obviously was referring to the flap over his remarks when he said: "Let me say there's no place in the Republican Party for those who would exhibit prejudice against anyone. There's no place in our party for the kind of bigotry and ugly rhetoric that we've been hearing outside of our party recently. We have no room for hate and we have no place for haters."

Wealthy Englishman given life sentence in murder of his American wife

EXETER, England (AP) — A jury convicted wealthy Englishman Michael Telling of manslaughter Friday in the killing and beheading of his American socialite wife. He was sentenced to life in prison.

Telling, 34, second cousin of multimillionaire meat tycoon Lord Vestey, had pleaded guilty to manslaughter but innocent to a murder charge. He had argued he was not fully responsible for his actions when he shot his wife, Monika, 27, March 29, 1983, after a stormy 16-month marriage.

The prosecution rejected his guilty plea on the manslaughter charge and sought a murder conviction.

During the eight-day trial, Telling's friends and neighbors testified that his wife, daughter of Louis Zumsteg, a business consultant from Santa Rosa, Calif., had affairs with both men and women and taunted Telling about what she said was his lack of sexual prowess.

"He is very pleased that his story has vindicated him and he is not branded as a murderer," Telling's attorney, Paul Maxlow-Tomlinson, said outside the court in Exeter, in southwestern England.

Telling, dressed in a gray pin-striped suit, showed no emotion as the seven-man, five-woman jury delivered the verdict after deliberating for 24 hours.

The jury rejected evidence from a state psychiatrist that Telling knew what he was doing and went to great lengths to conceal his crime.

Police testified that Telling shot his wife at their country home near High Wycombe, 35 miles northwest of London. He kept her body there in a sauna for five months, then drove it to western England, chopped off her head, dumped her body in a field in Devon and returned home with the head, police said.

Clark says ban on offshore exploration 'unacceptable'

William P. Clark

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress will reject a House committee's call for a continued partial ban on offshore oil exploration because most lawmakers are aware of the nation's vulnerability to import disruptions and the low environmental risks, Interior Secretary William P. Clark said Friday.

U.S. oil production and government tax revenues from it are falling and imports are back up to 5 million barrels a day — more than 30 percent of supplies — and "I believe this is unacceptable to the American people," Clark said in an interview with news agency reporters.

"The risk has become more apparent in this 3 1/2-year war between Iran and Iraq, and while we have reduced our own dependence on Persian Gulf imports, I think this is a significant factor in the minds of Congress and the American people," he said. "I think there's a realization that we have met the environmental challenges," Clark added. "...There's a lot more (oil) spilled now from incoming tankers delivering the imported oil than there is from any offshore activity."

"I think that the realization of one, the necessity, and secondly, our new process of dealing with state and local governments, will lead to the lifting of the emergency moratoria of 1982, 1983 and 1984 and we will be able to consider these on a case-by-case basis and we'll see no more moratoria as we move into the new (fiscal) year," Clark said.

By a one-vote margin, the House Appropriations Committee on Thursday approved renewed drilling on Georges Bank off Massachusetts and waters off central and northern California, both areas of high interest to the industry, for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

The committee let a similar ban for the Gulf coast of Florida lapse, and the Interior appropriations subcommittee, where these measures originated, decided not to go through with one for Alaska's Bristol Bay.

Clark repeated his belief that imposing such restrictions in spending bills while a 1978 law requires the secretary to increase offshore production is "simply an unreasonable way of doing business."

On another topic, Clark said he believes the public wants better maintained national parks, not necessarily more of them, and would not mind paying more for them.

After two years of no land purchases for parks, the Interior Department is getting $100 million to round out existing parks, plus $57 million for similar purchases for wildlife refuges.

Clark said he has begun drawing up a budget proposal for fiscal 1986 and could not say how much he will seek for new parks. But, he said "reading constituent and user mail, we feel the American people are satisfied with the number, 344 units now, and they're more concerned about the facility when they get there."

He said he would examine this fall whether the Park Service should impose fees on activities that are now free and increase existing fees.

"The National Park Service has found that users do expect to make some token payment in the hope that that fee will be utilized in the services received," Clark said.

Ex-prosecutor glad to have freedom back

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — James W. Kerr, a former federal prosecutor who narrowly escaped an assassination attempt 5½ years ago, says a guilty plea by his assailant has given him back his freedom.

Kerr, now an administrative law judge at an undisclosed location, said he will celebrate June 27 as his "freedom" day. That was the day James R. Kearns, who was standing trial in federal court, pleaded guilty to charges that he was hired to attack Kerr.

Kearns fired a volley of .30-caliber bullets at Kerr as the assistant U.S. attorney drove to work in San Antonio on Nov. 21, 1978. Kerr dived to the floorboard.

Kerr, interviewed by the San Antonio Light in a cocktail lounge after the plea Wednesday, hoisted a glass of wine to toast the end of the case against Kearns and Jamel "Jimmy" Chagra, the convicted drug trafficker who admitted hiring Kerr.

STATE

"Do I look like someone has been convicted and I have been set free?" Kerr asked.

Kerr said he still hasn't fully realized that the case is over.

"I have my freedom. But I expect more of it later," he said. "Right now, I feel we're still in trial."

His constant companion is a deputy U.S. marshal; Kerr lost his privacy as a result of his drug cases against the Chagra clan.

He leases out his suburban San Antonio home. Asked how long his whereabouts will be kept secret, he said, "The marshal's office wants to allow the dust to settle before we just start publishing my address."

Kerr said he believed that the investigation and any further prosecution in the case of assassinated U.S. District Judge John H. Wood also are at an end.

Wood was killed six months after the attack on Kerr, who prosecuted drug cases in Wood's court.

"I don't see anything else coming on down the line," he said. "I don't have any reason to think so in the judge's case, either. They've all been taken care of."

Chagra was to have gone before Wood on a drug case investigated by Kerr about the time Wood was killed.

Charles Harrelson was convicted of the Wood murder and is serving two life sentences for the killing.

His wife, Jo Ann, is in federal prison after being convicted of buying the murder rifle under an assumed name and later lying to a grand jury about it.

Chagra's wife, Elizabeth, is in prison after being convicted of plotting the killing, while her husband was cleared of charges of hiring Harrelson but was convicted of obstruction of justice.

Chagra pleaded guilty June 16 to conspiracy to murder Kerr.

In exchange for Kerr's plea, the government promised not to prosecute his wife, Catherine, on charges of obstruction of justice or subornation of perjury.

Mattox predicts his office will have budget surplus

Mattox

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox, saying his office management has been sound, predicted Friday that he would end the year with a budget surplus.

"On Sept. 1, we'll turn a surplus back to the treasury. In every way, the budget's going to balance," Mattox said.

Although he predicted he would end the year with a surplus, he said he did not know yet how much that would total.

Earlier this week, the state comptroller's office released figures indicating Mattox was near the limit on some portions of his administrative budget, although the office had spent only about 78 percent of its total budget so far this fiscal year, which ends Aug. 31.

Mattox said the comptroller's figures failed to show money still coming into the office, including federal funds and other agencies' payments to the attorney general for legal work done.

"They will more than balance the budget and not have any problems with it," he said.

Mattox has been criticized by some lawmakers and the comptroller about aspects of his fiscal policy, but the attorney general defended his record and criticized news reports about the office and its financial situation.

"We've made extremely significant reductions in the use of private aircraft and also in the area of outside counsel (hired by the office)."

"When we end this fiscal year, we will end up having recovered far more money in fines, penalties and restitutions. Other offices will never have come close to this particular agency," Mattox said.

Crewmen die in tanker explosion

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — An explosion and dockside fire destroyed the 20,000-ton oil tanker, killing at least two crewmen and forcing temporary evacuation of hundreds of residents of a nearby slum. Six people were reported missing.

Hector Fiorioli, president of State Petroleum Deposits, the national oil company that owned the tanker Perito Moreno, said the bodies of two crewmen had been found and that a child, believed to be the son of a crewman, was among six people missing.

Undersecretary of Maritime Transport Pedro Casado Bianco, summoned by President Raul Alfonsin to explain the origin of the huge blaze Thursday night, told reporters the fire was started by "a workman lighting a blowtorch."

"I really don't know how such carelessness can be explained," said Casado Bianco following his interview with the president.

Witnesses said the blaze began with a large explosion aboard the 17-year-old Spanish-built tanker, which was unloading a cargo of crude oil at a petroleum storage area, about three miles from downtown Buenos Aires. The first explosion was followed by several smaller blasts.

"It was a series of explosions," said Rodolfo Dagnino, 38, one of three crewmen who said they survived by leaping into the water. "The biggest was right in the middle of the ship. I was on deck and the whole area became an inferno. I jumped into the water and swam to shore."

Flames up to 90 feet high destroyed the vessel within 90 minutes despite the efforts of an estimated 500 firefighters.

The firefighters temporarily evacuated several hundred residents from a nearby shantytown, witnesses said.

Several nearby ships and a tugboat were struck by debris from the tanker, but were moved away from the blaze, firefighters said.

Judge awards rapist damages

LONDON (AP) — A 31-year-old man who is serving a life sentence for rape was awarded some $80,000 in damages Friday because of a car crash the judge said had turned him into a rapist.

Christopher Meah became the first person under English law to be compensated for injuries that led to his imprisonment.

Judge Sir Harry Woolf ruled in the High Court of Justice that, but for a 1978 car crash that damaged the frontal lobes of Meah's brain, he probably would not have raped, stabbed and indecently assaulted women.

The judge said Meah, a man from an underprivileged background with promiscuous sexual tendencies and a history of violence, was "the worst possible person to sustain injuries of this kind."

Medical evidence presented at the civil trial showed that frontal lobe damage to the brain blunted emotion and reduced inhibitions. Meah suffered such injuries when he was a passenger in a car that hit a tree in 1978.

"But for the accident he would have probably resisted his inclinations to embark upon sexual attacks," said the judge.

Meah's former wife, Gloria Meah, and his former mistress, Josephine Lukeman, told the court he was gentle and caring in sex before the car crash. Other women submitted sworn statements about Meah's considerate sexual behavior prior to the accident.

In 1982 Meah sexually assaulted and stabbed the wife of a friend and, the same evening, he sexually assaulted another woman. While on bail for those offenses he raped, bound and stabbed a third woman.

Bomb kills woman opposed to apartheid

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A white South African woman who opposed her country's policy of racial segregation was killed along with her 6-year-old daughter by a parcel bomb mailed to their home in Angola, the woman's father said Friday.

Jack Curtis said his 35-year-old daughter, Janette Schoon, and granddaughter, Katryn, died in the blast Thursday morning.

"It was a powerful bomb. They were both killed instantly," said Janette Schoon, Curtis, who was told of the deaths Friday morning by another daughter who called him.

Seven years ago, the victim and her husband, Marius, were banned under South Africa's security laws, meaning they were confined to Johannesburg and the government determined with whom they could speak.

He said Marius was away from the couple's home when the package arrived.

The Schoons' 2-year-old son, Fritz, was at nursery school when the bomb went off, Curtis said by telephone from his home outside Johannesburg.

No one claimed responsibility for the killings, and Curtis did not accuse anyone.

"You don't need two guesses," he said.

He said the parcel was delivered to the family's home in Lubango, in southeastern Angola.

Mrs. Schoon and her husband, Marius, fled to Botswana, then to Zambia and last year to Angola, after being banned in their homeland.

The couple settled in Angola after the British High Commission (Embassy) in Botswana warned them last August they would be likely targets of South African commandos, the Schoons and British diplomatic sources said at the time.

Curtis said the Schoons were teaching university-level English in Lubango.

South Africa has acknowledged sending hit-and-run forces against anti-apartheid exiles in Mozambique and Lesotho.

There was no official comment Friday from South Africa. The South African government has said the Schoons were agents of the African National Congress, the main guerrilla organization sworn to overthrow the South African government.

"She was aware this sort of thing could happen to her," Curtis said.

"I am still a bit puzzled why Janette didn't take precautions when she received the parcel," he said.

"Your friends don't send you bombs. It's your enemies," said Curtis, who said that two years ago a parcel bomb was sent to his address, but it was defused.

He also said for years he has received threatening telephone calls and his home has been shot at, presumably because of his daughter's politics.

WEATHER SUMMARY

National Weather Service NOAA U.S. Dept. of Commerce

The National Weather Service forecasts showers for today from Montana and the Dakotas to New Mexico and Arizona and from the Gulf states through the East Coast.

Chance of showers forecast for weekend for Midland

A chance for isolated afternoon and evening thundershowers today through Sunday could raise the rainfall for the month above the recorded 2.15 inches, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Under partly cloudy skies, temperatures will climb into the upper 90s today and the middle 90s Sunday. The low tonight is expected to be in the upper 60s.

Winds will be from the southeast at 5-15 mph today. Friday's high of 98 was 11 degrees cooler than the blistering record high of 109, set in 1946. The overnight low of 62 was six degrees off of 1982's record low of 56.

STATE

Heavy rains pounded northern and southern sections of Texas Friday as temperatures dropped by 10 to 15 degrees in many areas of the state.

The mercury in Tyler dipped to 76 degrees Friday afternoon when a rain shower passed over, the National Weather Service said. Highs reached the upper 90s in some southern sections of the state.

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms covered Northeast Texas during most of the day. Heavy thunderstorms were reported over the Gulf coast.

Winds were variable around the state at 5 to 10 mph. In the lower coast, southerly winds were at 10 to 15 mph.

Mostly cloudy conditions prevailed across the southern half of the state while partly cloudy skies covered the northern half.

For the weekend, the weather service called for partly cloudy skies over most of the state through Sunday with widely scattered afternoon thundershowers. Lows are expected to be in the 70s, with highs in the 90s in the north and some 100-degree readings in the Rio Grande Valley and along the coast.

NATION

The Northwest shivered in unseasonably cool temperatures Friday, while thundershowers stretched from the Gulf of Mexico to the northern Appalachians, dumping about three-quarters of an inch of hail in Ohio.

Cool, rainy weather moved across the Northwest, and overnight frost warnings were posted for the Yakima Valley in south-central Washington.

Some street flooding was reported in Newcomerstown, Ohio, where the National Weather Service said hail from an afternoon severe thunderstorm amounted to three-quarters of an inch.

The thundershowers moved through parts of South Carolina, bringing locally heavy rain. Thunderstorms also were scattered from the Gulf coast to the Carolinas, while showers and thunderstorms were widely scattered through the northern and central Appalachians, and from southwest Arizona to southeast California.

Skies were generally sunny across the mid and upper Mississippi Valley, the Plains, the Rockies, much of the Great Basin and California. The East had partly to mostly cloudy skies.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 52 degrees at Mullan, Idaho, and Fort Lewis, Wash., to 103 degrees at Las Vegas, Nev.

The forecast for today called for showers and thunderstorms from the central Gulf Coast to New England, including the Atlantic seaboard, and scattered thundershowers across eastern Texas, the northern Plains and the northwestern High Plains. Sunny from the Great Lakes, mid and upper Mississippi Valley to New Mexico and western Texas.

Highs were expected to be in the 70s from New England, across the upper Ohio Valley to the Great Lakes region, across much of the Pacific Northwest and along the California coast.

Rockets, artillery shells smash into houses on Beirut's Green Line

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rockets and artillery shells smashed into residential areas of divided Beirut on Friday in the worst fighting since the national coalition Cabinet agreed to a security plan for Beirut a week ago.

Earlier in the day, two Israeli gunboats stopped the Lebanese passenger ferry Alsur Blanco in the Mediterranean and forced it to sail to Haifa, Israel. A spokesman for the vessel's agents in Cyprus said 63 passengers were on board, including three Americans, two Australians and an Egyptian. The rest of the passengers were Lebanese.

There was no immediate explanation for the Israeli action and the military spokesman's office in Tel Aviv issued a statement saying it "refused to discuss the matter."

In Beirut, the shelling was mainly along the "Green Line," which divides the capital into the Christian east and mainly Moslem west.

The fighting began shortly after noon and continued through the afternoon.

The shelling followed bursts of gunfire in west Beirut as Moslem residents shot their weapons into the air to celebrate the first day of the Fitr feast, ending the fasting month of Ramadan.

Ten people suffered shrapnel wounds when shells crashed in the Christian east Beirut neighborhoods of Ashrafieh, Ein Rummaneh and nearby areas.

The Christian Voice of Lebanon radio said at least seven east Beirut neighborhoods came under rocket and artillery fire.

Christian and Moslem members of the national coalition government agreed last Saturday to send three army brigades into Beirut to end the reign of militiamen and restore law and order to the capital.

The Alsur Blanco, a two-deck ferry boat that once plied between Italy and Sicily, was on a regular eight-hour run between the Cypriot port of Larnaca and west Beirut when it was intercepted by the Israeli gunboats at 4 a.m. and forced to change course, its owners said.

Ghazi Baroudi, spokesman for the owners, the Nouredine Rifal Co., said in Beirut that the International Red Cross was among those trying to get the craft released.

Iran threatens countries which support Iraq

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iran threatened on Friday to punish the United States, France and Arab Persian Gulf countries for what it said was their support of Iran's war foe, Iraq, and their encouragement of anti-Iranian "terrorism."

The threat came in a speech in Tehran, capital of Iran, by Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani.

In another speech, President Ali Khamenei of Iran said Iraq had resumed attacks on Iranian civilian targets in violation of a limited cease-fire agreement. He said Iran "might reciprocate" by attacking Iraqi civilian areas.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said Khamenei spoke in Isfahan, Iran, after watching military maneuvers. He cited recent Iraqi shelling of the border town of Sardasht in Iranian Kurdistan, where both Iran and Iraq have reported heavy artillery exchanges recently.

The threats came as salvage crews struggled to save the Swiss-owned supertanker Tiburon, still ablaze from a hit by an Iraqi missile Wednesday southeast of Kharg Island, Iran's big oil shipping terminal.

Iraq has been raiding tankers at and near Kharg. Iran has retaliated by attacking Arab and other vessels in waters away from the war zone.

Rafsanjani said Friday, "The Islamic Republic (Iran) will exact punishment on those countries that encourage terrorism against us and condone (Iraqi) attacks on shipping lanes in the Persian Gulf."

He said the United States, France and Arab countries of the Gulf region "officially support terrorism," alluding to Iraqi air strikes against tankers near Kharg and the recent hijack of an Iran Air Boeing 727 to Qatar and Egypt.

The hijacked plane was returned to Tehran from Egypt and the hijackers went to Iraq, where they were granted asylum.

"The Islamic Republic will accord those countries that instigate terrorism their due," Rafsanjani said at a rally observing the third anniversary of the June 28 bombing of Islamic Party headquarters in Tehran. His speech was partially broadcast by the Iranian state radio, monitored in Manama, Bahrain.

Iran has complained that the Gulf Arab powers — mainly Saudi Arabia and Kuwait — support Iraq and has assailed France for selling arms to Iraq. Iran's religious leaders have taken an anti-American line since the Islamic revolution began in 1979, often referring to the United States as the "great devil."

Iraq clamped a sea and air blockade on Kharg in February. The Tiburon was the most recent victim of its attacks.

Bahrain-based marine shipping sources said salvage tug boats towed the Tiburon southward, while battling the fire.

In Zurich, a spokesman for the Swiss operators, Suisse-Outermer A.G., said Friday that the Tiburon was not likely to explode or sink. Spokesman Joerg Johannsen said the tanker's 250,000 tons of oil were "intact." He said the rear part of the vessel had been burned out and whether the tanker could be made seaworthy again was not yet known.

The spokesman said that of the eight crew missing and believed killed — seven Spaniards and one German — only one body had been recovered.

The toll made it the worst tanker tragedy in the Gulf since the outbreak of the Iraq-Iran war in September 1980. Three other crewmen were reported injured.

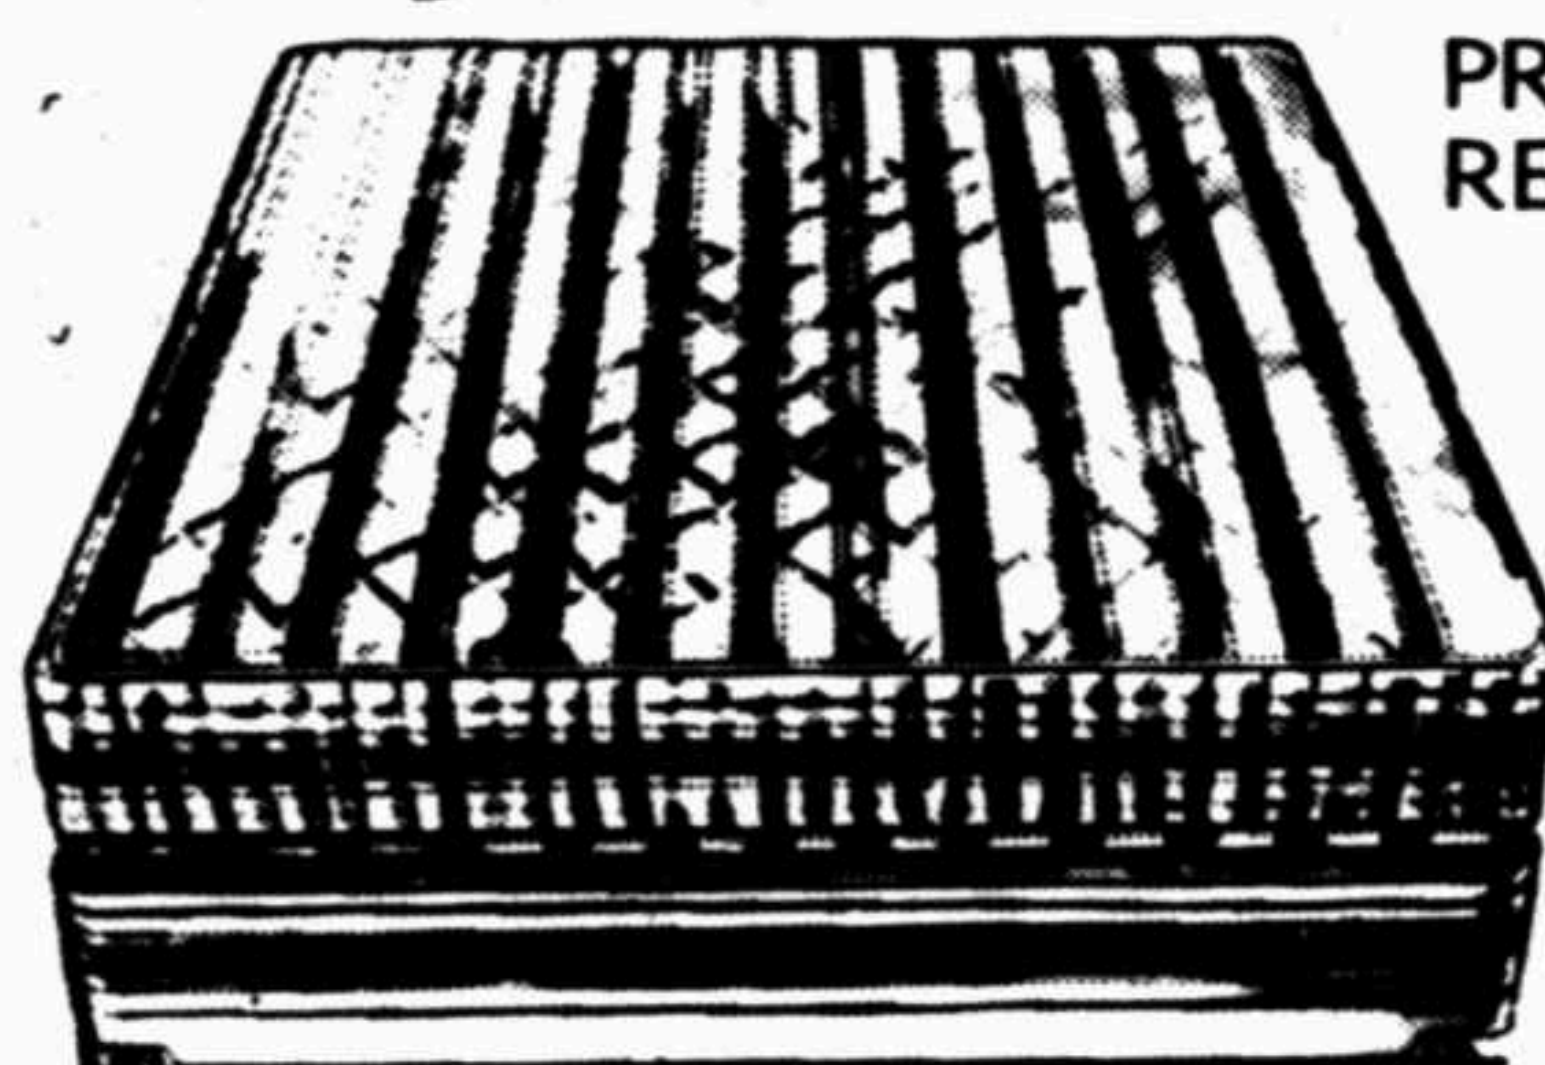

One British seaman monitoring the stricken vessel by radio, who asked not to be identified, said, "I hope the salvage people will make it because, if they fail to arrest the flames, the Tiburon might explode and its load come out. If the oil comes out and the flames are not extinguished, the Tiburon and the water around it would turn into a glowing ball of fire for many days."

The war hazards prompted the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council — Saudi Arabia, Oman, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain and Qatar — to seek combined defense arrangements against further Iranian attacks.

Saudi Arabia's leaders called on Iraq and Iran to submit to arbitration and bring their border conflict to an end.

But Khamenei was quoted as saying Friday that the situation along the 730-mile battlefield with Iraq "is very good."

Cameroon struggles to cope with uprising

YAOUNDE, Cameroon (AP) — This West African nation, one of the region's most stable throughout its 24 years of independence, is struggling to come to terms with what people here frequently describe as a devastating episode.

They mean the attempt April 6 by elite palace guards to overthrow the civilian government of President Paul Biya in an uprising that collapsed after two days of fighting.

Although Biya has since urged his countrymen "to turn resolutely towards the future," an uncommon sense of unease prevails in this former French colony of 8.9 million people.

A state of emergency remains in effect. Police roadblocks have become a nightly fixture throughout this capital. Hotel rooms are periodically searched, typically before dawn by soldiers. Soldiers with automatic weapons have been assigned to all domestic airline flights to Yaounde.

"People are so scared and so unaccustomed to this situation, with the searches and the identity checks, that many of them just stay at home," said a veteran Cameroonian journalist specializing in political affairs.

"Cameroonians have lived through a shocking experience," a government minister said, "and it will take us time to recover."

TENSIONS ARE such that government officials and other knowledgeable sources request anonymity when speaking about the aftermath of the attempted coup.

Until it happened, Cameroon had been the exception in this chronically troubled and impoverished region of Africa. It is self-sufficient in food production and, economists say, has judiciously managed its modest oil wealth. Its numerous ethnic, religious and linguistic communities have been inclined to co-existence.

But the stability was shattered before dawn April 6. Disgruntled elements of the elite presidential palace guards took up arms in a bid to overthrow the government. President Biya was besieged at his palace as fighting raged for two days in this rambling, verdant capital. Loyal army units were summoned from across the country to crush the rebellion which the government said took 70 lives. Independent sources place the casualty toll at about 500.

In subsequent secret trials, death sentences were passed against 46 suspected rebels and 185 others were sentenced from two years to life imprisonment.

Just how enduring the blow will be to Cameroon's reputation remains uncertain. Much depends, say Western and Cameroonian experts, on the resolve and strength of Biya, the low-key, 51-year-old president.

BIYA IS OFTEN faulted for failing to assert vigorous leadership in a complex and diverse country of more than 200 tribes, as many languages and a delicate mix of Moslems, Christians and animists.

Critics charge that Biya has been hesitant in following up on policy pronouncements and has given the impression of uncertain leadership with seven Cabinet shuffles since assuming power in November 1982.

He was absent from public view for five weeks after the April uprising, fostering what one Western diplomat called "a perplexing and alarming sense of drift."

However, some government officials and other Western diplomats said Biya has been preoccupied with what has amounted to fighting a rear-guard action ever since becoming president.

His predecessor, Ahmadou Ahidjo, a northern Moslem, resigned suddenly in November 1982, after leading Cameroon since independence. Power was promptly and smoothly transferred to Biya, a southern Christian and prime minister at the time, but relations between the two men quickly eroded.

IN A DOCUMENT recently prepared by the Information Ministry, Biya's government charged that "Ahidjo's exit from the political scene was actually a fake departure...He wanted to remain the master of political affairs."

Ahidjo, who cited unspecified health reasons for his resignation, nonetheless continued to exert considerable influence in domestic affairs, notably as president of Cameroon's sole political party, the Cameroon National Union. He was quoted as saying in an interview with the Cameroon Tribune in January 1983 that the party "defines the political guidelines of the state, and the government implements them."

The conflict came to a head last August, after Ahidjo had left Cameroon for southern France. He was accused of plotting to assassinate Biya, tried in absentia in February and sentenced to death. Biya later commuted the verdict to a prison term.

Ahidjo, who had accused his successor of installing "a police state" in Cameroon, denounced the trial as a "judicial masquerade unworthy of the Cameroonian people."

Government officials said they believe Ahidjo then began to orchestrate the uprising that occurred in April.

West German found guilty of espionage

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A federal jury on Friday found West German auto mechanic Ernst Ludwig Forbrich guilty of trying to buy U.S. military secrets from an undercover agent to deliver to East Germany.

The seven-man, five-woman jury deliberated 2½ hours before convicting Forbrich on two counts of espionage.

Forbrich, 44, sat at the defense table, his hands in his lap, and showed no emotion as U.S. District Judge Ben Krentzman polled the panel.

The more serious espionage charge, trying to deliver secret documents to foreign countries, carries a maximum sentence of life in prison. The lesser charge of buying the documents is punishable by up to 10 years in prison.

Prosecutors claimed Forbrich tried to buy U.S. defense secrets to pass to East German intelligence, and made a $550 downpayment March 19 to an undercover agent posing as a U.S. Army officer.

After a half hour of jury instruction in the week-long trial, Krentzman gave the panel the case at 2:25 p.m. CDT.

The jury deliberated for about an hour before sending notes to the judge, asking to review the transcripts and tapes introduced during the trial. The judge agreed to make the audiotapes available, but said he couldn't provide transcripts because they only served as written guides to the tapes, not evidence.

In closing arguments, the defense claimed Forbrich, of Goepingen, West Germany, was "primed, worked and stroked" in an FBI setup hinged on a woman's revenge.

But Assistant U.S. Attorney George Tragos insisted that "being set up" is not a defense to a crime. "Criminals are set up every day. They have to be set up. They're not going to walk into the office and confess," he said.

Ron Cacciatore, Forbrich's court-appointed attorney, maintained that the government had failed to prove its case.

Shultz: Election shouldn't bar way to summit

George Shultz

Anatoly Dobrynin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz said Friday this fall's presidential election should not stand in the way of a well-prepared U.S.-Soviet summit meeting despite his own previous concern that pre-election talks would be widely regarded as "an election ploy."

In an apparent shift of position, Shultz said preparation and the likelihood of serving a constructive purpose should be the only prior conditions for a meeting between President Reagan and Soviet President Konstantin Chernenko.

He gave no indication, however, that the Soviets are ready for such talks any time soon, saying it's a case of "an ice jam on their side coming up against a body of warm water."

So far, Shultz said, "there's something in that ice that won't thaw."

On June 12, Shultz, meeting over lunch with reporters, appeared to argue against a pre-election summit, saying it would be regarded by the news media, the American people and the Soviet Union as "an election ploy" which might make matters worse by raising undue expectations.

On Friday, he said that the United States should look at a summit "in its own terms and try to move it along if we can."

He said that a decision on whether to convene a summit should not be made "on whether or not there's an election behind us, or in front of us, or wherever because you're talking about...the U.S.-Soviet relationship which is a very important one to us and the world."

Shultz, commenting in an interview with Cable News Network appeared to line up himself closer to the position of Reagan who said shortly after Shultz's original comments that he was "ready, willing and able" to go to a summit without stringent pre-conditions.

Also in the CNN interview, Shultz said the Soviets have indicated initial interest in U.S. proposals for joint action to forestall "a potential problem of nuclear terrorism."

"This isn't a present danger, but it's prospective," Shultz said.

Earlier Friday, Shultz met for 45 minutes with Soviet Ambassador

Anatoly Dobrynin.

The meeting, arranged at Dobrynin's request, was the second between the two officials in the last 10 days.

American officials declined to say what was talked about but Dobrynin may have presented Shultz with a new Soviet proposal to convene talks in Vienna in September on banning anti-satellite weapons in space.

In Moscow, the Soviet news agency Tass printed an official statement containing the proposal and said it had been handed to the American government.

But it did not say when, where or how, or give any details of the U.S. response.

Why is mistletoe small?

According to early Christian legends, mistletoe, once a tree itself, shrank in shame after Christ's cross was hewn from its wood.

Alligators becoming nuisance along gulf

HOUSTON (AP) — Alligators, listed as an endangered species 1969, have become so common along the Texas Gulf coast that they are considered a nuisance and a traffic hazard in some areas, according to wildlife officials.

The toothy, long-tailed reptile has become a common sight in ditches, bayous, lakes and even swimming pools. As neighborhoods have been built in swamp areas, more and more home owners are reporting finding alligators in yards and streets. Traffic has been stopped on a freeway and some major roads as large alligators cross from one side to the other. A number of alligators have been run over.

"We move about 100 alligators a year that have become nuisances," said Floyd Potter, a wildlife biologist at the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. "There are now a significant number in the state."

Potter said precise figures are not now available but it is generally believed there are about 100,000 gators along the coast and another 100,000 inland in Texas. A survey giving more precise figures is now underway.

Wildlife officials said the gator has become so common that a hunting season is expected to be opened in the Lone Star State this fall.

Potter said if hunting is permitted, there will be tags issued to allow the harvest of about 2.6 percent of the population.

Wildlife authorities said there have been reports of alligators grabbing hunting dogs and other small pets, but in Texas there have been "no reports of unprovoked attacks," said Potter. He said this is in contrast to Florida where there have been about two dozen deaths.

The American alligator can grow to a size of 19 feet. It is the fourth largest of the crocodile-alligator family. But Potter said the reptile is very reclusive and shy and will not attack animals as large as human beings except when cornered or provoked.

People and alligators are coming together more often in Texas now, said Potter, because of the rapid explosion of population of both species.

With the increase in people, marsh areas have been drained and housing divisions built. This has forced alligators to move to new areas or learn to live with a human next door, said Potter.

At the same time, the alligator has been protected since 1969 and the reptile's population has grown rapidly.

"They can reproduce very well if they are left alone," said Potter.

The biologist said although alligators are not aggressive, he said "they must be respected."

Wayne Harrington, a Parks and Wildlife supervisor, agreed.

Zenith Corp. pays damages in Capitol fire

AUSTIN (AP) — The Zenith Radio Corp. paid $1.3 million to the state and more to individuals Friday in connection with the 1983 fire that officials say started in a television set, damaged part of the Texas Capitol and killed one man.

Attorney General Jim Mattox, in announcing the out-of-court settlement, said $600,000 also was paid to the family of Matthew Hansen, who died in the blaze.

Money also was recovered to pay a $77,000 workers' compensation claim for injuries suffered by Capitol guard Joel Quintanilla, who tried to rescue Hansen, Mattox said.

"We had a television set that caused the fire. It's just that simple,"

Mattox said. "I think the Zenith Corp. has decided it is in its best interests to settle the matter rather than try it in litigation."

He said architects' estimates indicate that repair work on the Capitol, scheduled for Sept. 1 completion, will cost $1.02 million.

The settlement ended 15 months of investigation, which included help from NASA engineers, Mattox said.

The Feb. 6, 1983 fire started in the Capitol apartment of Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby. It gutted the apartment and spread to other parts of the building's Senate wing.

Hansen, a 23-year-old horse trainer, was a guest in the Hobby apartment. Three others, including Hobby's daughter, Kate, 18, escaped unhurt.

As to the cause of the blaze, Mattox said terms of the settlement won't allow officials to divulge trade secrets but that "basically the set shorted out" and caught fire.

Bill Whitehurst, a lawyer representing Hansen's family, said the settlement also puts to rest speculation about what happened the night of the fire.

"We know the truth in this case now. One of the things that can be settled and laid to rest is all the speculation that occurred originally. There were no wild parties. There were no drugs. There was simply a Zenith TV that caught fire," Whitehurst said.

Quintanilla, who later died in an auto accident, posthumously received a Carnegie Medal for heroism connected with his rescue attempt.

Hobby, in a statement released after the settlement, said he was pleased that the state and the victims' families would receive compensation.

"Of course there can be no equity to the families of Matthew Hansen and Joel Quintanilla. But I hope this settlement in at least small measure compensates them for their losses," Hobby said.

Lawmakers propose cutting state employees

AUSTIN (AP) — Two legislators said Friday they are sponsoring a proposal to reduce the "bureaucratic overburden" by requiring state government to achieve a ratio of 100 full-time employees per 10,000 population.

The bill would allow for certain exemptions if it was determined that a state agency needed additional employees to do its job.

Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, and Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belton, said "Within four years, Texas could easily realize a ratio of 100 employees per 10,000 population...by adjusting the total number of workers and by replacing only a portion of the employee turnover..."

AFL-CIO wants to organize controllers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly three years after President Reagan dissolved the striking air traffic controllers union and fired most of its members, the AFL-CIO launched a formal drive Friday to organize their replacements.

The American Air Traffic Controllers Council will be established to replace the now-defunct Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, labor leaders told reporters at the federation's headquarters here.

Kenneth T. Blaylock, president of the American Federation of Government Employees, said his union will spearhead the organizational efforts, which he said has sparked interest nationwide.

Supervisors, non-strikers and newly trained controllers have worked long hours over the last three years to keep the air traffic system operating, Blaylock said, and have begun to feel they need a united voice in dealing with their employer, the Federal Aviation Administration.

"People don't mind putting out for awhile, but when it begins to look like the norm, then the stress begins to show," he said.

Jeffrey MacDonald, a controller from Bradley International Airport, which serves the Hartford, Conn.-Springfield, Mass., area, said controllers are spending too much time actually monitoring radar screens and training new employees without a break.

"Working conditions are good, but they could be much better. They are stretching people," MacDonald said. But, he added, "safety has never been jeopardized, and never will be."

"We all feel the system is safe... but people are being pushed to their limits," added Joe O'Brien, a controller from New York.

Henry A. Duffy, president of the Air Line Pilots Association, threw his support behind the organizing effort.

Controllers have made a herculean effort to keep the air traffic system safe during the last 34 months, Duffy said, and he congratulated them on their work.

But, he said, the controllers "must be recognized by their employers as the professional group that they are... free of fatigue and overburdened working conditions."

Union officials complained that FAA management has tended to be "heavy-handed" and said they hope to avoid a return to the adversarial relationship that existed between the government and PATCO.

FAA Administrator Donald D. Engen noted this controller dissatisfaction in a speech before the National Aviation Club last week, acknowledging that his agency may not have done a good job of communicating with its employees.

"Like any organization, FAA has made its share of management mistakes," Engen said. But he added that "management of our human resources has been a top agency priority since the strike and I am personally committed to finding new ways to improve our overall effectiveness in that area."

Engen announced that a scheduling system known as structured staffing, which has irked controllers, was being dropped, and said he is launching a study of the agency's employee-management relations.

Blaylock said he has no firm figures on how many controllers will participate in the new union but petition drives are under way across the nation. He said interest has ranged from 70 percent to 85 percent of controllers in some areas.

The air traffic control system has been gradually rebuilt from the strike and firings three years ago, and currently the FAA has 11,974 full controllers working, and 1,365 assistants, out of an authorized strength of 14,300. Training of new controllers takes two to three years.

Hospital official quits over dirty conditions

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — An official who resigned to protest unsanitary conditions at the Naval Hospital here says bags of dirty needles lay untended for weeks, and a mother complained that she had to clean blood from her son's room with cold water.

"We routinely go into a dirty bathroom... the floor is filthy, and the toilets haven't been cleaned for days," said Kenneth Pennington, who cited what he called an inadequate custodial contract.

The contract with Environmental Aseptic Services Administration, of Solvang, Calif., fails to provide for such basic duties as cleaning hospital sinks, ashtrays, and toilet fixtures, The Florida Times-Union reported today.

Pennington, hospital executive housekeeper and project manager for the contract, submitted his resignation to Environmental Aseptic effective today in protest of unsanitary conditions at the 282-bed Naval facility.

The $612,000 three-year contract with the privately owned company replaced the civil service, which had been cleaning the 200,000-square-foot hospital at a cost of $1.5 million.

The contract prohibits the hospital from providing the missing services, and does not allow it to use $75,000 worth of cleaning equipment now in storage, the newspaper said.

The contract with Environmental Aseptic was the first to be let out by the Navy for custodial services at a hospital, Pennington said, "so it appears to me they made some mistakes."

Navy spokesman Nick Young said the Navy's position is that the contract itself is adequate, but "the terms of the contract are not being met."

Pennington said dirty hypodermic needles are thrown whole into plastic trash bags, instead of being broken first, a standard practice at most hospitals.

"These trash cans full of needles are left filled for weeks at a time, contaminated with blood and other materials," he said. Two Environmental Aseptic employees were cut with needles while loading the bags, and had to be given tetanus shots, he said.

Officials discuss law enforcement along border

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — Officials from local, state and federal agencies on both sides of the U.S.-Mexican border met Friday to share strategies on criminal cases and look for ways to expedite law enforcement along the border.

"It is important that we unite our efforts," said Chief Agent Dale Cozart of the U.S. Border Patrol. "Even if there isn't a real solution arrived at today, I think this dialogue will contribute possibly to a solution further down the road."

The Border Crime Convention is "a mature method of working things out between two nations," agreed Mexican Vice Consul Carlos Torres of Calexico, Calif.

Agenda items ranged from auto thefts and hot pursuit of criminals who cross borders to detention of U.S. soldiers accused of crimes in Mexico.

The agenda for Friday's meeting was set by U.S. authorities. Mexicans had set the agenda for Thursday's session, in San Luis Colorado.

The Mexican concerns were similar to U.S. topics. They asked for help in chasing U.S. drivers who flee accidents in Mexico, cooperation in tracking illegal imports of luxury items from the U.S. to Mexico, and coordination when U.S. officials send undocumented aliens back to Mexico.

Currently, U.S. officials turn deportees loose at the border, and some flee before Mexican immigration can hold entry examinations of its own, said Benjamin Escondon-Castro, Mexico's chief of immigration at San Luis Colorado.

U.S. authorities "already have all the names," when they bring batches of aliens to the border, Escondon-Castro said, speaking through an interpreter.

"Their investigations are already made," he said. "We asked if it is possible that they give us the information, because it is possible that people can be criminals."

Escondon-Castro said U.S. officials seemed receptive to his problem and already were working on a solution. Cozart said passage of an immigration reform bill in Congress might slow the flow of illegal aliens across the border, but that the Simpson-Mazzoli Act won't have much effect on crimes such as drug smuggling.

"People that are actively involved in narcotics... are not going to be deterred by violating immigration laws," said Cozart, of the Border Patrol's Yuma Sector.

The convention for agencies along the California and southwestern Arizona borders with Mexico was sponsored by the Select Council on Progressive Enforcement, or SCOPE, an association of area law enforcement agencies that has been in existence here since 1980.

It was the first meeting of its kind since 1981.

Man held without bond on capital murder charge

NORWICH, Conn. (AP) — A young insurance agent was ordered held without bond on a murder charge Friday, just hours after authorities found the body of another young woman in eastern Connecticut.

Michael B. Ross, 24, of Griswold, did not enter a plea and was returned to the Montville state jail. He is charged with capital felony in the slaying of Wendy Baribeault, 17, of Lisbon, whose partly clad body was found under a pile of rocks June 15.

Capital felony carries a possible death penalty under Connecticut law.

Two hours before Ross appeared in court, state police discovered the partially decomposed body of another young woman in the town of Brooklyn.

The body was the third uncovered by authorities since Ross was taken into custody. Sgt. Edward Dailey, a state police spokesman, said Ross had not confessed to any of the slayings, but said he expected him to be charged in at least two other homicides.

The bodies of two young women found Thursday in Preston underwent autopsies Friday. Police described the bodies as partially clothed and partially decomposed.

They appeared to be covered with brush, sticks and rocks, police said.

In addition, police have developed leads in the slayings of two other Connecticut women — Robin Stavinsky, 19, of Columbia and Debra Smith Taylor, 24, of Danielson, Dailey said. Ms. Stavinsky's body was found in Norwich on Nov. 23, 1983, and Ms. Taylor's body was found in Canterbury on Oct. 30, 1982.

Resolution OK'd to find out about Sakharov, wife

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress approved a resolution Friday asking the Soviet Union to provide specific information about the health and legal status of dissident scientist Andrei Sakharov and his wife, Yelena Bonner.

The non-binding resolution was put on a fast track after it was introduced in the House on Thursday by Rep. Timothy E. Wirth, D-Colo., who pressed for passage before both chambers quit for a three-week recess.

The resolution won House approval by a 399-0 vote before it was approved by a voice vote in the Senate.

Soviet government officials recently reported that Sakharov and his wife are in good health. But advocates of the resolution said there is no confirmation directly from the couple.

Sakharov had been attempting to get his wife out of the Soviet Union for medical treatment.

The resolution urges the Soviets to provide the signatories of the Helsinki Final Act on human rights with specific information as to the whereabouts, health and legal status of the couple.

It also urges the Soviets to drop charges of anti-Soviet agitation against Mrs. Bonner and says the couple should be allowed to live in the country of their choice.

Principal has collection of 12 Studebakers

BRYAN, Texas (AP) — B.B. Holland leads a double life: by day he's the mild-mannered principal of South Knoll Elementary; by night he's the sultan of Studebakers in the Brazos Valley.

More than a mere classic car collector, the Holland homestead is nine acres devoted to a Studebaker shrine.

Twelve cars, all in good running condition, line the carport. But this is only the beginning. Off to the right, sits a solid looking '50 pickup under repair, Studebaker, of course. The shop houses a Studebaker under renovation from the frame up. Another storage shed holds sorted parts. To the rear of the property sit numerous Studebakers, collected for their parts.

Holland credits his love of Studebakers to his grandfather, the late E.L. Dillon.

"I was real close to my grandparents and my grandfather always had Studebakers," Holland said.

In 1967 when his grandfather got too old to drive he bought his car. The green '50, four-door sedan was nicknamed "Sherm" by one of his daughters for its resemblance to the tank.

"It was in excellent condition when we got it," he said. "It only had 57,000 miles on it."

The cornerstone of his collection and a sentimental favorite, Holland says he would never sell it.

"It's a solid little car with 73,000 miles now," he said adding, "It's going to get thoroughly restored shortly."

In 1976, 10 years after Studebakers went out of production, Holland began to add to his collection.

"I joined the Studebaker Drivers Club in Houston and heard about a '57 Silver Hawk for sale. I bought it for two hundred dollars and towed it home," he said.

"All it needed was some transmission fluid added and it's been running fine ever since," he added.

The collection grew with the addition of a '63 Avanti sport coupe added in '77. He spent the next five years restoring it.

But the car he really longed for was a '50 bullet-nosed convertible.

"I had been wanting a '50 convertible for the last five years," he said.

"I like the '50's. I was in high school when it came out. A lot of people identify Studebaker with the bullet-nose," Holland said.

When Holland's dream convertible showed up for sale in Navasota, he got his car with one catch.

"My wife, Hazel, has been pretty good about the cars. We had been married for 23 years and she really likes to dance but I didn't know how. She said I could buy the car if I took dancing lessons, took her dancing, and bought no more cars."

"I bought the car and started dancing lessons the next week," he said. "We go dancing all the time, mostly polkas and waltzes."

It helps to know someone on city council

LEWISTOWN, Mont. (AP) — If you can't beat them, join them, especially when it comes to fighting City Hall.

Dave Sather Jr. wrote to the Lewistown News-Argus this week to report that he lodged a complaint with a city councilwoman after dogs knocked down his garbage can twice in one week.

The results were immediate, and astounding.

"Now she personally picks up the garbage when this happens. Isn't representative government wonderful!" Sather wrote.

The responsive councilwoman was Barbara Sather, Sather's wife.

DEAR ABBY

Man worried about 'boyfriends' calling fiancée

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to a lovely woman, but we may have a problem.

When her phone rings and I am present, she says, "I can't talk to you now, I have company" — never my fiancée is here."

She says the callers are old boyfriends who just call to talk to her. Someone who has known her longer than I have told me that she used to be a call girl, so I asked her if it was true. She didn't give me a straight answer, she just smiled.

Now I'm beginning to wonder. Abby, do call girls ever marry? — PERPLEXED IN MUKWONAGO, WIS.

DEAR PERPLEXED: Yes. Many do, just as do many of the men who have called them. If you suspect that your fiancée is still in business, ask her again, and don't take a smile for an answer.

DEAR ABBY: Before our wedding, my future mother-in-law asked me to call her Mom. I told her I wouldn't feel comfortable calling her Mom because I am very close to my own mother and that's what I call her. I asked her if it would be OK if I called her Agnes, and she said, "No, if you can't call me Mom, then call me Mrs. Jones." (All these names are made up.)

It's been two years now, and I still feel a very definite coldness between us because I never call her anything. I would like a better relationship with her, but how?

My husband says just let it blow over. What do you say? — DEJECTED DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

DEAR DEJECTED: Don't wait for it to "blow over" — it might blow up first. Have a heart-to-heart talk with your mother-in-law and come up with some name that's agreeable to both of you. "Mother Agnes"? "Mother Jones"?

POSITIVE THINKING
Big dreams generate big faith

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Some people look down on dreamers as impractical and fuzzy minded. But I have never met a truly successful person who wasn't a dreamer. A successful person is one who learned the technique of making dreams come true.

Peale

The great United Nations building on New York's East River is the outstanding feature of an area which was redeveloped from a slum and low grade business district. It was originally a real estate man's audacious dream. Laboriously, he assembled options on all the properties in a run-down neighborhood. In his dreams, he imagined the U.N. building there. Then, he proceeded to sell his great idea to the late John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who bought the land and offered it to the U.N.

This was just one of the many creative dreams of a man named William Zeckendorf. All of his projects were immense ones. He said, "The biggest plans are the easiest plans to bring to pass."

That is sound philosophy, for when you plan something big, you are actually thinking big, and upper levels of power are always in back of big concepts. When you project a big idea, of necessity you must put big faith into it, and big faith generates a dynamic all its own. Moreover, to support a big idea, you give it all you've got, and that itself exerts extraordinary force.

Big dreams, plus big faith, plus hard work, added to positive thinking — this is the formula by which big things are done.

Years ago I often stayed in a hotel run by an immigrant. "I used to sell papers on the street corner in front of the hotel," he told me. "I was poor; I could hardly speak English; I had nothing. But I would stand on the corner in the cold and watch the people, nicely-dressed and well-fed, going in and out. The hotel was named after its owner and his name was in lights on top of it.

"I used to think and dream how wonderful it would be if I owned that hotel and could make all those people happy by giving them the best rooms and the finest food in all the country. I got into the habit of seeing the best hotel in the land with my name on top of it in lights. It seemed preposterous to have such an idea, but I could and did dream that this great hotel was mine until finally I just accepted the fact that it really was going to be mine, and even then I began to plan all I would do for my guests."

Well it wasn't many years before that immigrant boy's name did show in letters of lights above the hotel. Big dreams plus big faith, plus positive thinking plus big work did it.

How can you make your dreams come true? Get rid of all your little ideas. Make your dreams and ideas big enough so that they become exciting. Make them big enough so that they capture the whole of your motivated activity. Thank big, pray big, believe big, act big — and your big dreams will come true.

Norman Vincent Peale is a columnist for Features Syndication.

New York honors
prehistoric crab

NEW YORK (AP) — The state finally got around to honoring the eurypterid remipes, 400 million years after it disappeared from the face of the earth, but then, better late than never.

Gov. Mario Cuomo put pen to paper earlier this week and signed a bill passed by the Legislature making the prehistoric crab that resembled today's king crab the official state fossil.

Eurypterid remipes, sometimes called a "sea scorpion," inhabited upstate waters 400 million years ago.

The Legislature passed a bill, which they sent me, making this giant crab from upstate the official state fossil," Cuomo said.

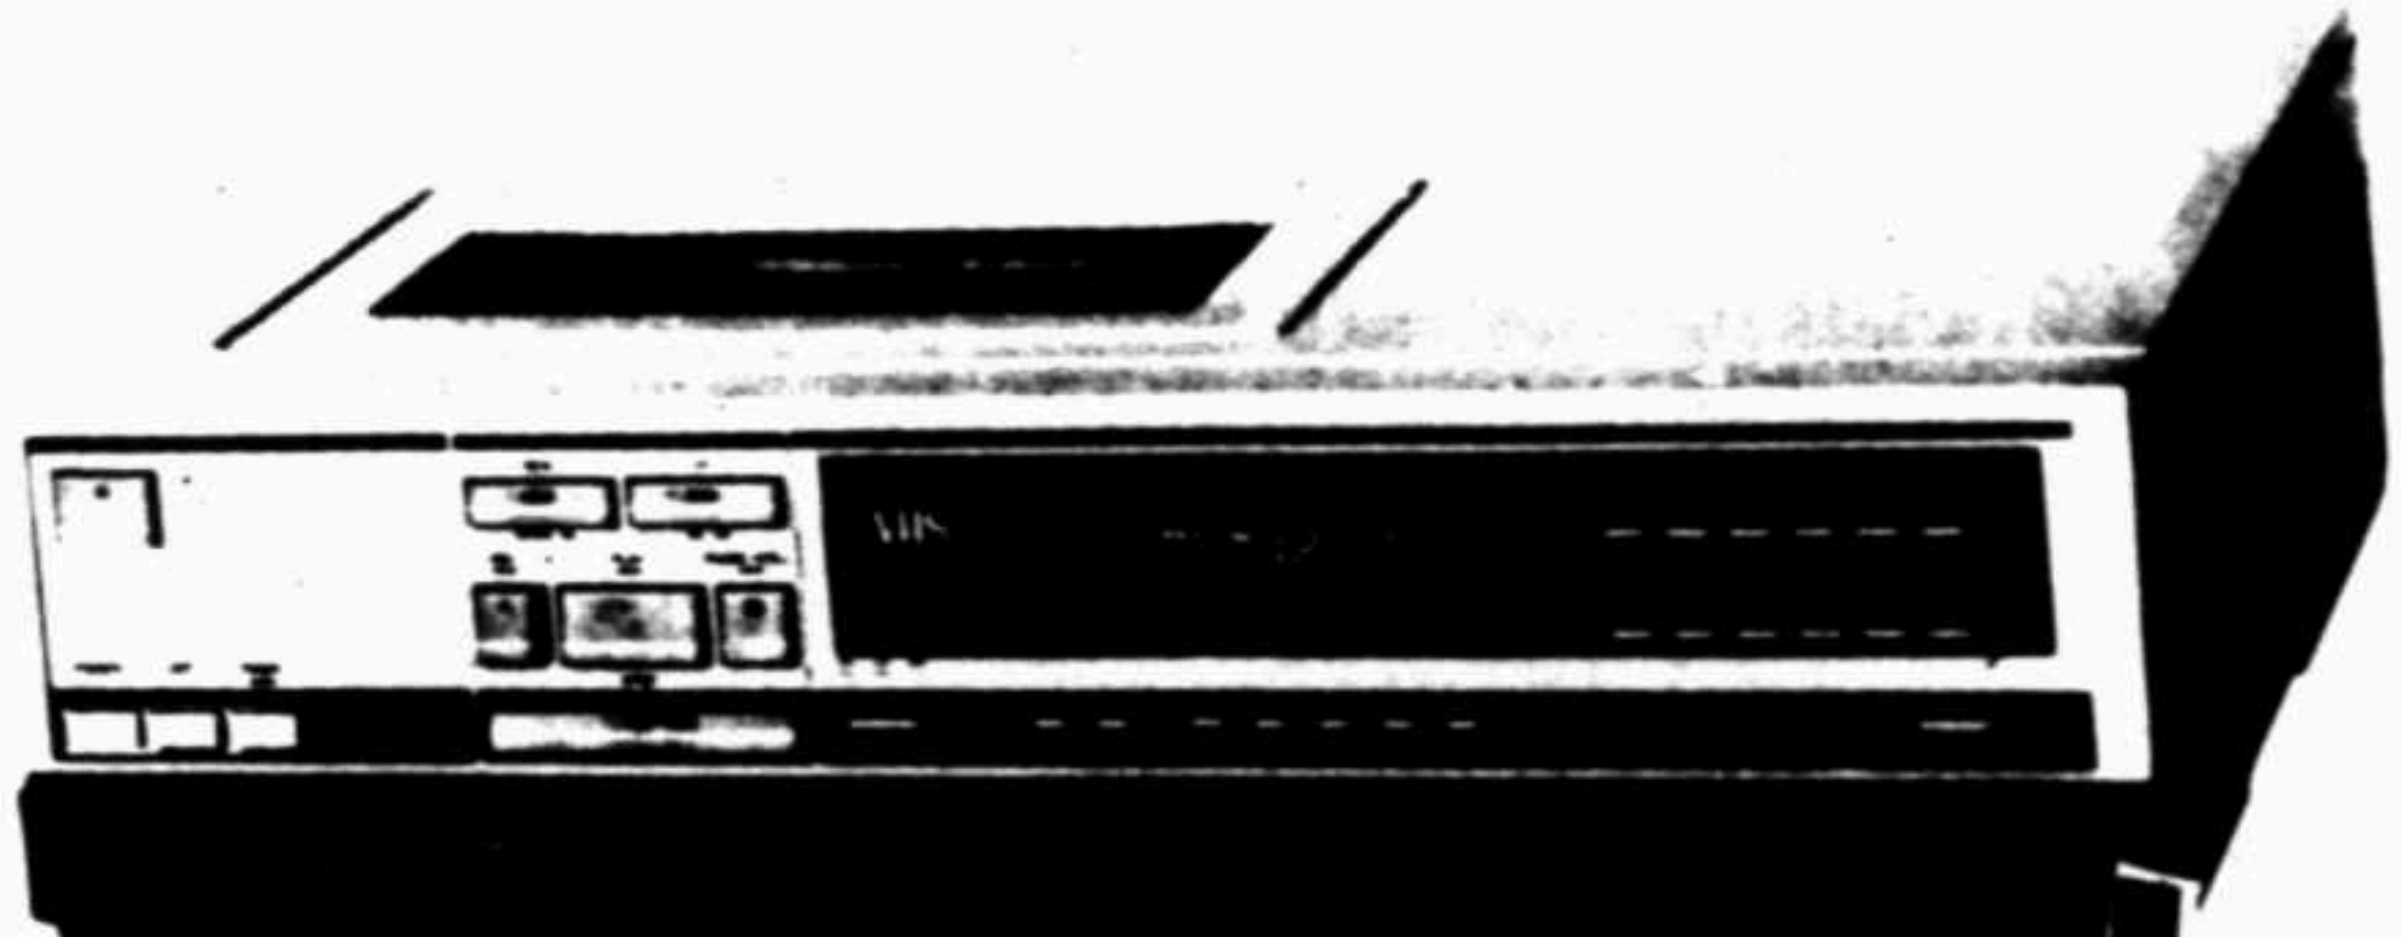

"And I said, if they're serious enough to pass this bill, I'm serious enough to write an approval message."

North Central wraps it up

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

There weren't many hits in the Joe Mowles Memorial Little League championship game Friday night, but, as things turned out, it only took one as the North Central Braves posted a 1-0 victory over Eastern Optimists to claim the city crown.

With Ty Chambers on second, after walking and advancing when Jason Stone reached on an error by Eastern left fielder Chris Villafra, Will Sowders came to the plate and stroked a two-out, two-strike pitch up the middle to score Chambers in the bottom of the third inning.

After Sowders collected his RBI single, he tried to go to second on the throw to the plate. Eastern catcher Joe Herrera made a perfect throw to the base to get Sowders to end the inning. Chambers came home on the play but the run was negated by the out.

"We had to do whatever we could to score," said North Central Coach Terry Stone. "We had a few breaks go our way on a few plays. This is just a great bunch of boys and they take advantage of every situation."

"He was one of the kids we picked up (from another North Central team for the playoffs) and I guess he thought he was in there at second," said Stone. "But, the ball beat him there. I guess I forgot to teach him to slide."

The Braves' victory not only won the city title, but capped a perfect 21-0 season.

Jason Stone, who allowed six hits while walking three and striking out five, took the victory while J.J. Johnson gave up only four hits, two walks and four strikeouts in suffering the loss. Both pitchers went the distance.

EASTERN HAD its opportunities but, mostly, timing proved to be the critical factor. Johnson, who led both teams at the plate with a 3-for-3 performance, stroked his double and two singles in two-out situations. In the first inning, his double moved Oscar Molinar to third where he was stranded. Johnson was left at first in the third and fifth. Nobody was on base in his final two at bats.

"I think Jason just liked him," said Coach Stone about his son giving up half the hits he allowed to Johnson. "We knew we had to pitch Johnson low and outside and the first time that's where we pitched him and he got it (for the double). We tried to jam him inside after that and he reached out and grabbed the pitches."

Eastern not only had its chances to score but also took possible runs away from the Braves.

In the first inning, North Central loaded the bases with nobody out only to watch Optimist third baseman Joe Dominguez start a double play. Sowders grounded down the third base line and Dominguez fielded the ball, stepped on third and threw to Herrera who made the tag on Chambers at the plate to save a run. Scott Melzer then grounded Johnson who threw to Randy Martinez at first to end the inning.

Eastern's James Madrid was the only other player in the game with more than one hit, collecting a pair of singles in three attempts.

Elated with the victory, Coach Stone credited his kids with team play all season, saying, "This is the finest bunch of kids I've had since I've been in coaching. If the top of the order broke down, then the middle was there to pick it up. If the middle let down, then the bottom picked up the slack. This wasn't just one group of kids carrying the load."

Now, Stone has one coaching job left for the year as he guides the North Central All-Stars in the All-Star tournament in Big Spring, starting July 9. Each of the five little leagues in Midland will be sending a representative to the tournament.

NCAA votes down championship game

CHICAGO (AP) — The concept of a national championship game in major college football was dealt a setback Friday by representatives of top football-playing schools, while a showdown over control of television rights loomed closer.

Delegates to a meeting of NCAA Division I-A schools heard a report on playoff possibilities then, by a show of hands, clearly opposed the idea of a national championship game.

If the idea had been approved, the NCAA Council would have put the proposal on the ballot at next January's NCAA convention and a national championship game could have been played as early as January 1986.

"Based on this, I would presume that the council will no longer pursue the matter at this time," William Baughn of Colorado, chairman of the meeting, said after the vote.

Division I-A football is the only upper-division sport in the NCAA which does not sponsor a national championship game.

Georgia Coach Vince Dooley, who helped prepare the report on the national playoff concept, lamented the negative vote. Dooley had endorsed a one-game playoff, to be held one week before the National Football League's championship game, as a potential boon to other school sports.

"At least we wouldn't have to spend two weeks reading Super Bowl buildup," he said, adding that a playoff would have provided millions of dollars to support activities in other sports.

"I think we'll eventually see one," Dooley said. "I think college football needs it."

Opponents of the concept feared it would create an even greater rift between the big and little schools.

"Over the years, we've seen a small group of schools dominate the polls, bowls and television," Big Ten Conference Commissioner Wayne Duke said. "It is the belief of the Big Ten that a football championship playoff would widen the gulf between the haves and the have-nots."

Stephen Horne, president of Long Beach State, said he feared, however, that without a championship game, many schools could lose millions in revenue because of this week's Supreme Court decision striking down NCAA control of football telecast rights.

The NCAA, meanwhile, said it would try to put forth a 1984 national television rights plan even as the College Football Association voted to mail out commitment forms to its plan by July 12. This would put the two camps in direct competition for the support of the majority of schools.

"Nobody knows what is going to happen now," said Otis Singletary, president of the CFA and the University of Kentucky. "But the time has come to make a decision. We're just two months away from the start of the season and nobody believes we can go any later than July 12 without having something to take to the networks."

The CFA is actually hoping to win approval of a "coalition" plan which would bring the Pac-10 and Big Ten under its television banner. Those conferences are not CFA members and have supported the NCAA in the protracted battle over TV rights. However, the widespread belief is that everyone would be better under the same plan and representatives of the CFA and Big Ten-Pac-10 worked out a coalition package last month.

The NCAA first must get approval from U.S. District Judge Juan Burciaga in Albuquerque, N.M. It was Burciaga who ruled against the NCAA in an antitrust case brought by Oklahoma and Georgia which was upheld on Wednesday by the Supreme Court. His original order included an injunction prohibiting the NCAA from ever entering into another television agreement and that order must be lifted before the NCAA can proceed.

Jimmy Connors sets Wimbledon singles record.

Jimmy holds off Davis for most singles victories

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Third-seeded Jimmy Connors, twice a Wimbledon champion, broke the all-time record of singles victories at the famed grass-courts tournament Friday to advance to the fourth round.

Connors, who captured the men's singles title in 1974 and 1982, fought off a determined bid by Marty Davis 6-4, 6-7, 6-3, 6-4 for his 65th Wimbledon singles victory in 14 years. The triumph broke the old mark of 64 set by Britain's Arthur W. Gore between 1888 and 1927.

"It is an honor to have won the most matches at Wimbledon than any other male player, but I play to win tournaments, not matches," Connors said. "Maybe if I had won three or four more matches, I would have won this tournament a lot more. Hopefully, I am not finished yet."

Connors led a parade of seeded players into the fourth round, including No. 2 Ivan Lendl and No. 13 Tomas Smid, both of Czechoslovakia, and Americans Jimmy Arias, No. 5, Johan Kriek, No. 12, and Tim Mayotte, No. 16.

IN WOMEN'S singles, top-seeded Martina Navratilova moved into the fourth round, as did fellow Americans No. 5 Pam Shriver, No. 6 Kathy Jordan and No. 13 Barbara Potter; No. 7 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria and No. 9 Wendy Turnbull of Australia.

In a second-round match that was pushed back one day because of Thursday's rain delays, second-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd struggled in the second set before downing fellow American Betsy Nagelsen 6-2, 4-6, 6-2.

Three seeds were upset in this fifth day of play, including No. 9 Henrik Sundstrom of Sweden, who was ousted by Australian Mark Edmondson 6-7, 7-6, 6-4, 6-7, 8-6 in a second-round match that began on Thursday but was halted by darkness after four sets.

Women's seeds ousted in third-round play were No. 11 Lisa Bonder of Saline, Mich., who fell to Australia's Elizabeth Sayers 6-4, 6-2, and No. 16 Carling Bassett of Canada, who tumbled to Britain's Anne Hobbs 7-6, 3-6, 6-4.

Navratilova took just 46 minutes to crush Czechoslovakia's Iva Budarova 6-2, 6-2; Shriver demolished Camille Benjamin 6-0, 6-2; Jordan defeated Britain's Julie Salmon 6-4, 6-3; Maleeva downed Yvonne Vermaak of South Africa 6-4, 6-4; Turnbull stopped Svetlana Cherveneva of the Soviet Union 6-4, 4-6, 6-4; and Potter stopped Czechoslovakia's Marcela Skuherska 6-1, 6-3.

Lendl, the consummate clay-court baseliner who won the French Open earlier this month, played an attacking serve-and-volley game to down West Germany's Rolf Gehring 6-4, 6-2, 7-6; Arias defeated South Africa's Danie Visser 5-7, 6-3, 7-6, 6-1; Kriek downed fellow American Steve Meister 6-2, 5-7, 6-4, 6-1; Smid eliminated Tom Gullikson 7-5, 7-6, 6-2; and Mayotte upended Tim Gullikson 6-4, 6-3, 6-4.

SCOTT DAVIS of Santa Monica, Calif., stopped Lloyd's estranged husband John Lloyd 6-4, 6-4, 7-6 and qualifier Paul Annacone of East Hampton, N.Y., ousted Christo Van Rensburg of South Africa 6-3, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2.

That set up the fourth-round battles of Annacone against Kriek, Mayotte against Connors, Arias against Smid and Scott Davis against Lendl.

In women's singles, Navratilova next will take on Sayers, Hobbs will play Maleeva, Shriver will face Potter and Turnbull will meet Jordan.

Davis, of San Jose, Calif., gave Connors all the 31-year-old left-hander could want in their third-round battle.

"We played some good tennis out there," Connors said. "Marty is a good player, especially on grass, and he was booming his serve."

"Anything can happen on grass, which is why you must always be alert. Nothing is easy," he said.

Winning certainly wasn't easy for Connors in the fading daylight on Court No. 1.

USC to ignore NCAA ban

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The University of Southern California says NCAA sanctions banning USC football telecasts are no longer valid in light of a U.S. Supreme Court ruling, and the university is negotiating TV rights for 1984.

USC President James Zumbege said the university has notified the NCAA of its decision not to abide by the sanctions, which eliminated USC from postseason bowl football for the past two years and from TV coverage last year and this year.

Wimbledon...

Staid old tourney playground for tabloids

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

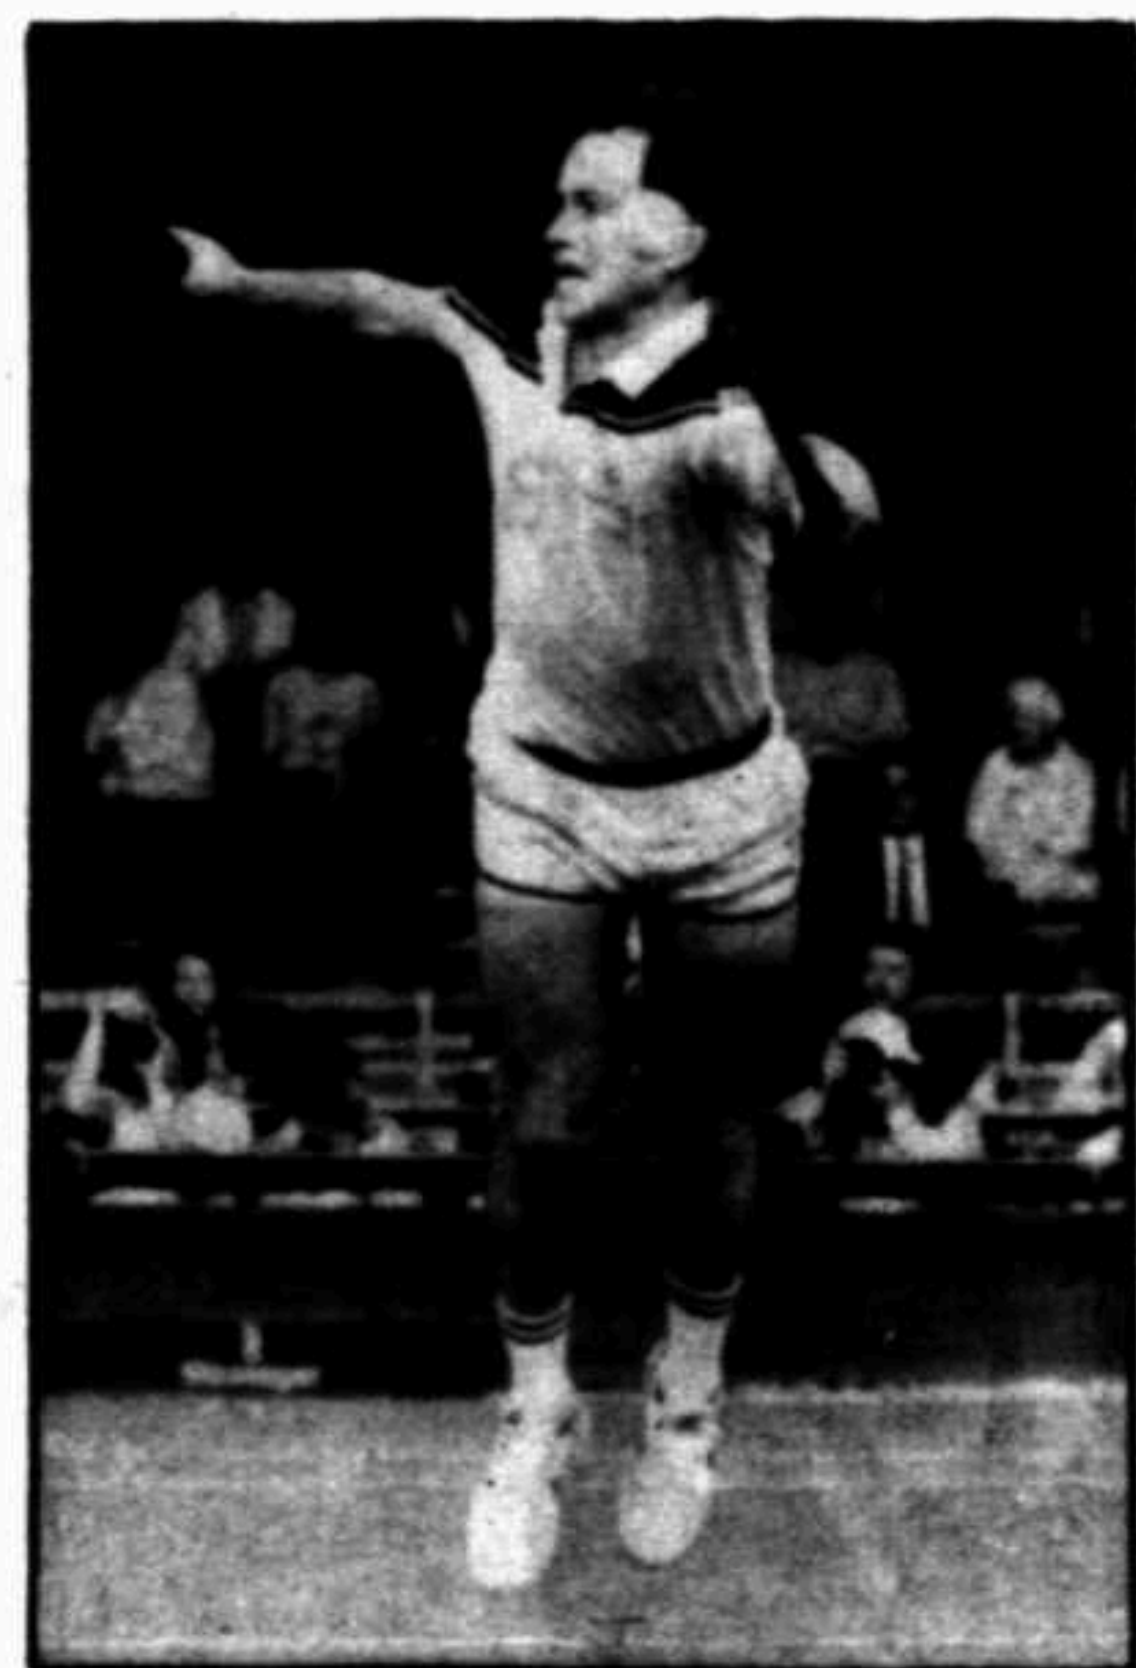

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — With the play providing few surprises at this year's tennis championships, the Wimbledon tournament is finding more play on the news pages of London's tabloids than on the sports pages.

So much, in fact, that John McEnroe temporarily banned television cameras from his post-match interviews, Martina Navratilova threatened not to play in England again except for Wimbledon and Ivan Lendl asked reporters to "talk about a serious newspaper."

McEnroe's on-court outbursts here at the All-England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club have become legendary, if not completely even-handed. He was tabbed "Super Brat" and "Mac the Mouth" by the tabloids for his temper tantrums and arguments with photographers, linespeople and umpires.

THIS YEAR, Navratilova has had her pictures on most of the newspapers' front pages alongside Judy Nelson, a mother of two and wife of a Fort Worth, Texas, veterinary surgeon.

Bettina Bunge of West Germany has been asked about her relationship with McEnroe, and Jimmy

John McEnroe

Arias has been questioned about whether he is dating another tennis star, Canada's Carling Bassett.

One London newspaper reported in "an exclusive" interview that Lendl would not be asked to play for Czechoslovakia in its Davis Cup match against France next month. The article was printed the same day Czechoslovakian officials announced Lendl was on the team. Asked about the article following Friday's victory, Lendl snapped:

"Can you talk about a serious newspaper?"

Earlier in the week, Lendl said a London tabloid wrote an "exclusive interview" story about him that was untrue.

"There are some quotes which are made up and some which are taken from a year or so ago and used now," the Czech said. "I think it is unfortunate that some of the papers do this and that these people should have access to the press interview room."

WIMBLEDON officials have clamped down on non-tennis questions in the post-match interviews, but some reporters still ask them of the players.

On Friday, Navratilova was livid after newspapers, which reported that Mrs. Nelson had returned home, called her for comment.

"I love the people here, the places, and I love playing here," she said after her third-round victory, "but I have decided that the harassment I have been getting here is not worth it and I should not subject myself to it."

"I do not see how Chris (Evert

Lloyd) and Sue (Barker of Britain) can live here," Navratilova said. "You guys have done it by knocking on my door at 11:30 at night and 9:30 in the morning when my alarm is set for 10:30."

"I do not get this kind of harassment in the States because over there they respect one's privacy a little better and no one knocks on my door at 11:30 at night. Unfortunately I am staying in a private house that does not have the security that a hotel gives."

"So, in looking over my schedule for the fall at Wightman Cup and others (tournaments) here, I shall not be coming as much. No one can keep me from Wimbledon, though."

Bunge, when asked about a possible romance between her and McEnroe, told reporters, "I answered that question a few weeks ago."

When asked to repeat her answer, she said: "Look it up."

Jimmy Connors, the men's No. 3 seed, refused to become involved in any controversy.

"I don't read the papers over here," he said.

And McEnroe told reporters: "I've decided to let my racket do my talking."

Vancouver eyes major leagues

From wire reports

BASEBALL—Greg "Boomer" Wells doubled in a run in the first to propel the Hanky Braves to a 2-1 Japanese League victory over the Lotte Orions Friday. The Yomiuri Giants won over the Hanshin Tigers, 8-4, as Randy Bass hit his 17th homer for Hanshin.

A formal application for a major league expansion franchise for Vancouver will be made within the next six to eight months, Norman Seagram, the president of the Vancouver Canadians says. Seagram, who also is president of Molson Western Breweries, said he knows that interests in Denver have already made an application to major league owners and that as many as 10 other cities are putting together presentations.

BASKETBALL—Karl Malone scored 24 points to lead the U.S. to a 107-80 win over Italy in a final-round match of the William Jones Cup Men's Championships. The U.S. leads the tournament with a 5-0 record, followed by Canada, 4-1, Spain, 4-1, Taiwan, 2-1, Japan, 2-1.

FOOTBALL—Ladd Herzog, the Houston Oilers' GM since 1980, has been given a lengthy contract extension. Herzog, 38, joined the Oilers in 1976 and served as executive vice president until he was given the added title of GM in 1980.

The ACC rejected Clemson University's request to allow conference sanctions leveled against the Tiger football program for recruiting violations to end this year. Clemson President Bill Atchley announced.

HOCKEY—Wayne Gretzky, Edmonton Oilers, is the youngest person ever selected to the Hall of Fame—the Newspaper Carriers Hall of Fame. At 23, the hockey star joins former prime ministers John Diefenbaker and Lester Pearson as the only Canadians admitted to the Hall, located in Reston, Va. He joins members such as former U.S. President Dwight Eisenhower, Sen. John Glenn, the former astronaut, late actor John Wayne and singer Bing Crosby; cartoon creator Walt Disney, and entertainer Bob Hope. Athletes selected include basketball's Julius Erving and baseball's Willie Mays and Jackie Robinson.

HARNESS RACING—With attendance sagging at New York tracks, proponents of a legislative agreement are hoping to renew enthusiasm with new super-exotic wagering. Under the terms of a bill being considered, a bettor could theoretically wager $2 on seven or more harness races and leave the track a millionaire. There would be a 36 percent takeout on each super-exotic bet placed. Horsemen would get 12 percent, a horse breeder's fund would get 3 percent, the tracks would get 12 percent and the state would get 7 percent.

An additional 2 percent would be used to ensure a guaranteed payoff through purchases of insurance policies. Money wagered in the special bets that isn't taken out goes into a pool. If no one picked all the winners of a day's wagering, the cash would go into a pool for the next day of racing. The growth of such a pool could make a millionaire out of a $2 bettor.

OLYMPICS—President Reagan wants to give a longer speech at the opening ceremony for the LA Olympics than the 16 words allowed by Olympic rules, the Los Angeles Times said. The paper quoted a White House official as saying Reagan is anxious "to use the opportunity to welcome people there," but that his speech would not be political.

Olympian stable after game fall

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Wennington, St. John's University center and a member of the Canadian Olympic basketball team, remained in stable condition Friday at St. Vincent's Hospital after a fall in an exhibition game.

Wennington was admitted "because he lost consciousness," said Laurie Mahler, a spokeswoman at St. Vincent's. She also said an EEG test was administered and still was being evaluated.

The 7-foot Wennington was injured Thursday night while playing for the Canadian Olympic team in the Michael Pro Summer League. He had gone up for a slam-dunk and lost his balance. When he fell, he lost consciousness briefly and went into convulsions.

From Wire Reports

NEW YORK — Steve Bedrosian, making his first start of the season after 27 relief appearances, allowed four hits in seven innings as Atlanta beat New York, 5-3.

Bedrosian, 5-5, struck out eight and walked four before being relieved by former Midland Cub Donnie Moore, who got his seventh save. Bedrosian has made just six starts in 177 pitching appearances during his four-year career.

Ed Lynch, 7-4, took the loss as the Mets dropped their fourth straight game. Rafael Ramirez had four hits for Atlanta.

The Braves scored three runs in the second inning. Chris Chambliss led off with a walk and scored on Glenn Hubbard's one-out double to right field. Alex Trevino followed with an RBI single to center and scored on a single by Ramirez.

Keith Hernandez hit his sixth homer of the season in the third.

Atlanta increased its lead to 5-2 in the fourth on RBI singles by Gerald Perry and Dale Murphy.

Phillies 7, Astros 2

PHILADELPHIA — Glenn Wilson cracked a three-run homer and Ozzie Virgil belted a two-run shot to highlight a six-run fourth inning that carried the Philadelphia Phillies past the Houston Astros 7-2 Friday night.

After Houston took a 1-0 lead in the third against Steve Carlton, 6-4, on an RBI grounder by Enos Cabell, the Phillies exploded in the fourth.

John Wockenfuss opened the inning with a single off Bob Knepper, 7-8, and scored on Virgil's 11th homer of the season. Luis Aguayo and Kiko Garcia singled, and two outs later, Garry Maddox singled home Aguayo. Wilson then followed with a long drive to left-center for his fifth home run.

Carlton left the game after Kevin Bass led off the ninth inning with a line-drive single off the pitcher's right shin. It was the eighth hit off Carlton, who struck out 10 to increase his all-time major league-leading knockout total to 3,798.

Larry Andersen got the final three outs.

The victory was the 305th of Carlton's career, moving him past Eddie Plank into second place on the all-time list of left-handers. Warren Spahn is the leader with 363. It was the 81st time he has struck out 10 or more batters in a game.

Houston made it 6-2 in the fifth on Jose Cruz's RBI single and the Phillies scored in the sixth on a single by Samuel, who stole his league-leading 38th base, and a double by Maddox.

Expos 7, Reds 3

CINCINNATI — Tim Wallach homered and drove in three runs and Charlie Lea pitched a five-hitter and retired the last 19 Cincinnati batters Friday night as the Montreal Expos beat the Reds 7-3.

Wallach drew a bases-loaded walk in the third inning and slammed a two-run homer in the seventh, his 12th of the season. Former Houston outfielder Tony Scott, signed Friday by Montreal, put the Expos ahead to stay 4-3 with his second double of the game in the sixth inning off Bill Scherrer, 1-1.

Lea, 12-4, joins the St. Louis' Joaquin Andujar, who is 12-6, for the National League lead in wins. Lea struck out six and walked none.

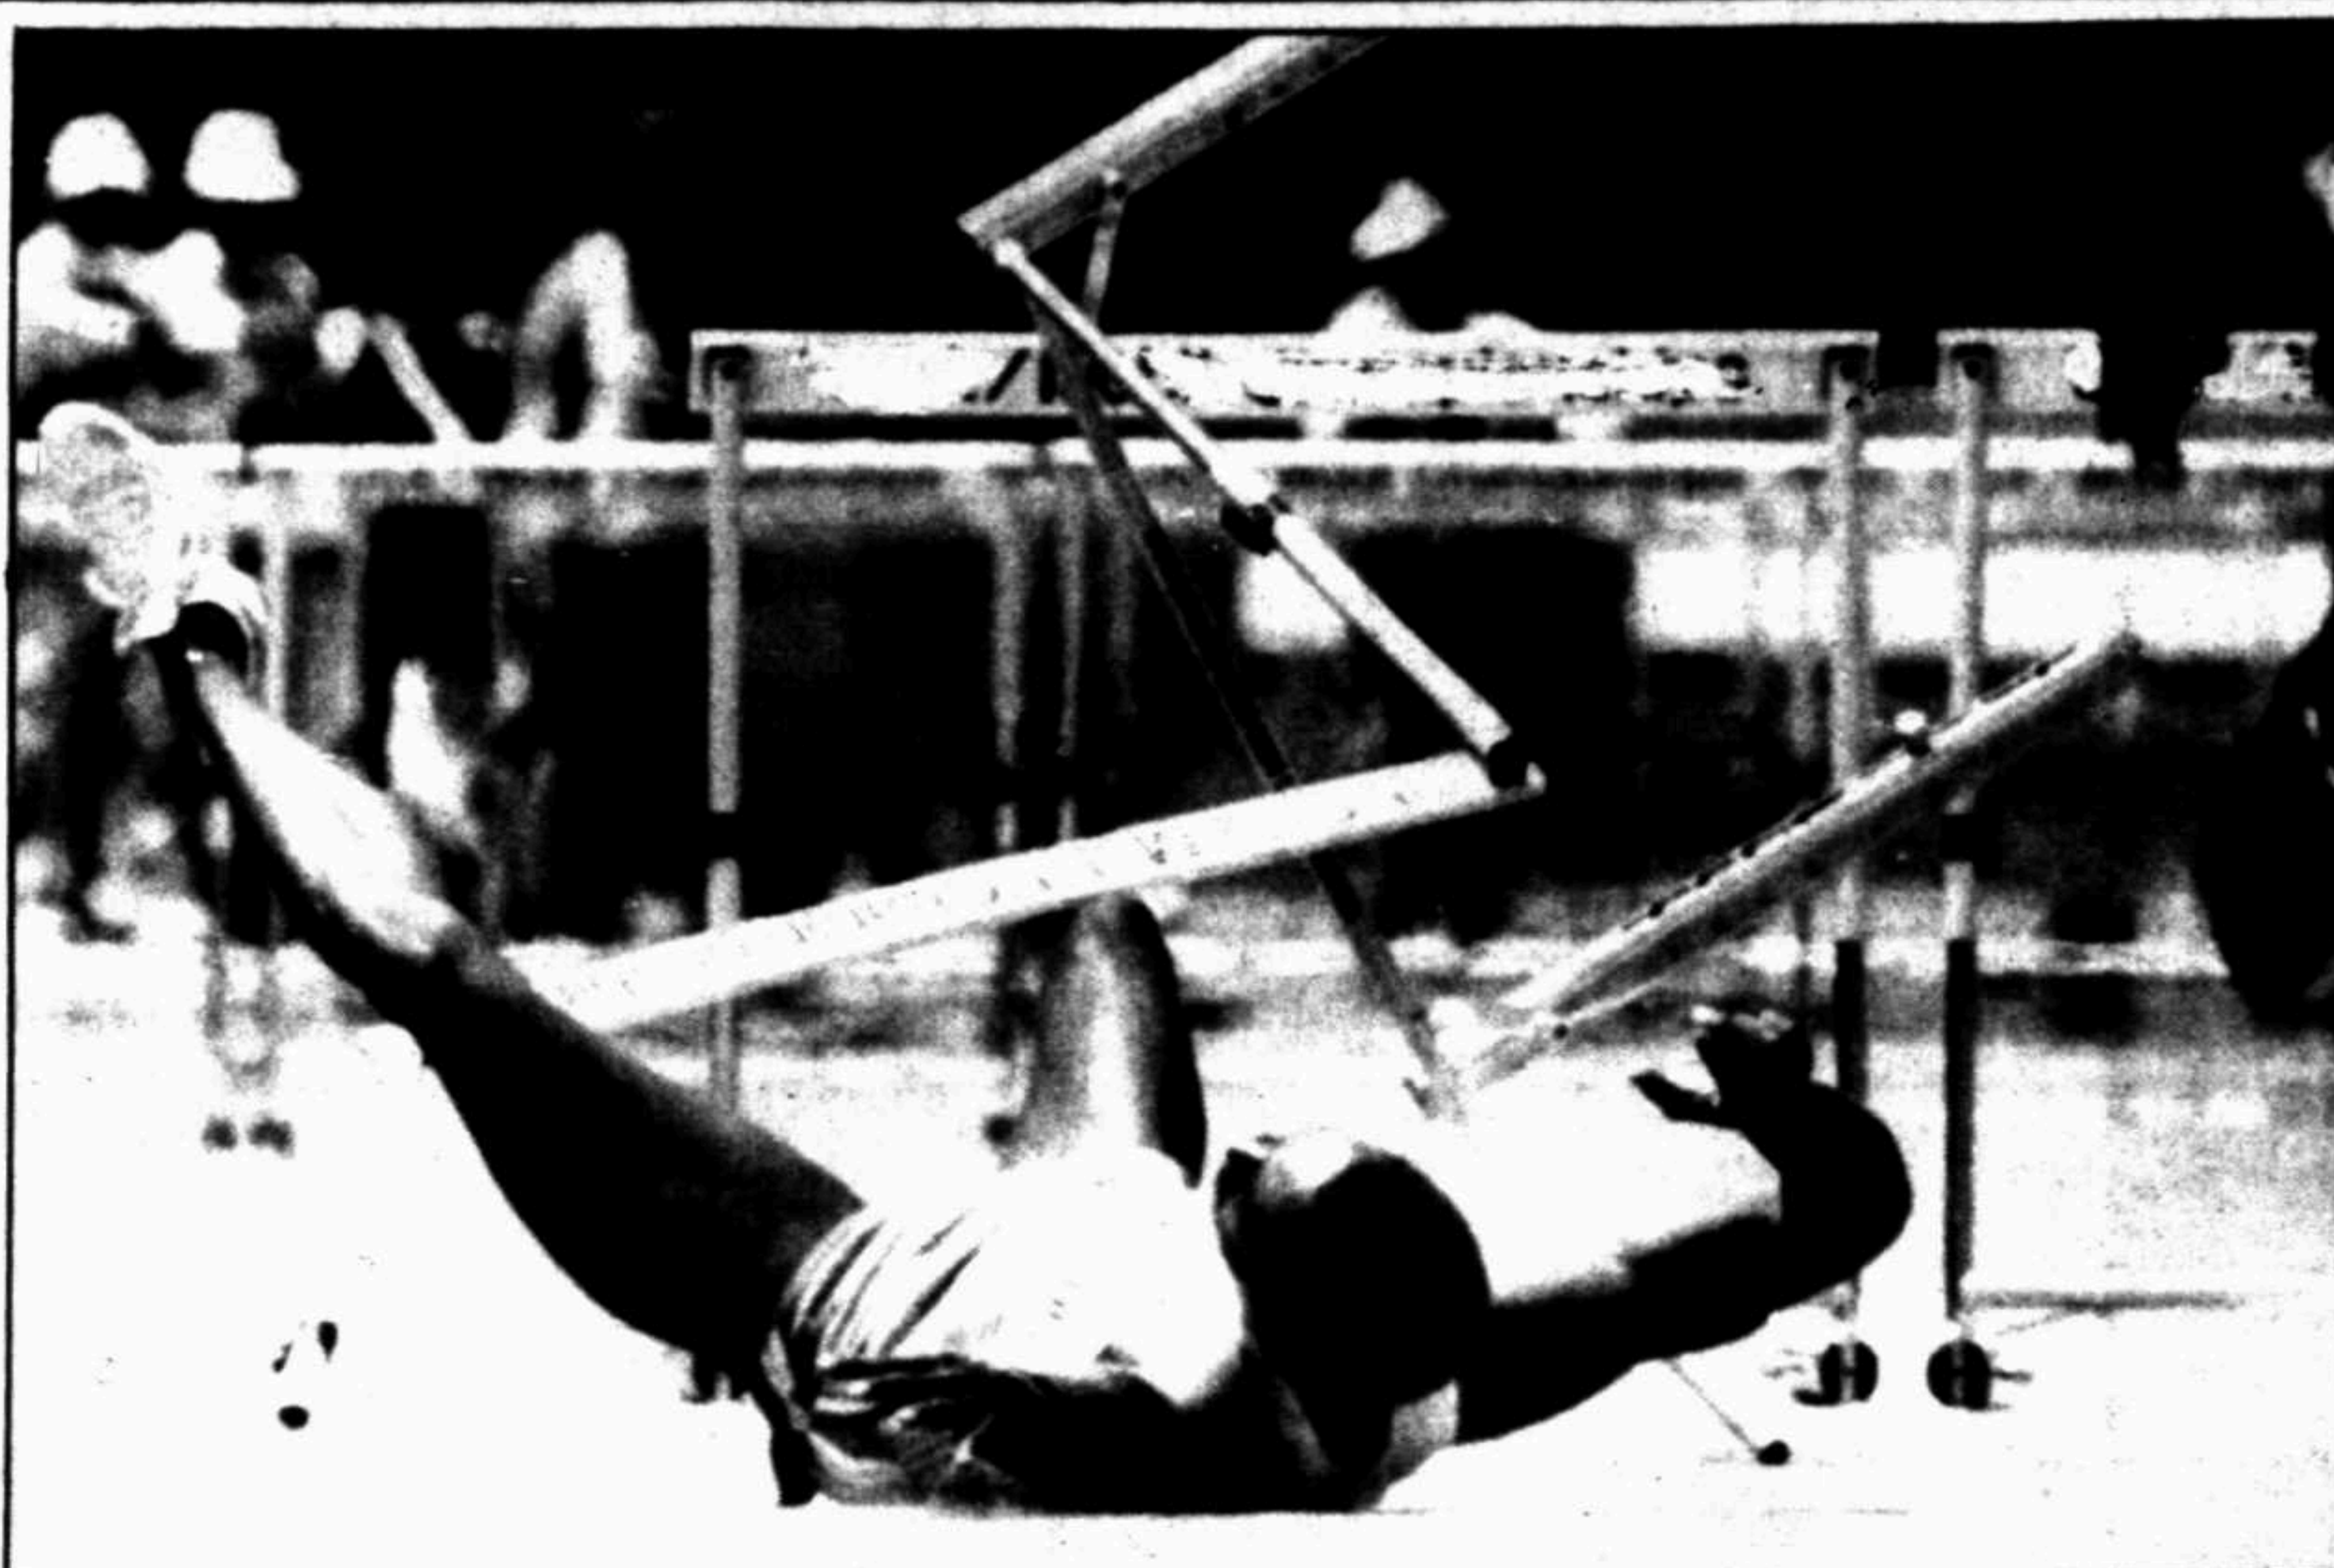

It's the earliest that an Expos pitcher has posted his 12th victory. Steve Rogers held the previous mark, winning his 12th game on July 4 last season.

Lea gave up a solo homer to Dave Parker in the second, his sixth, but the Expos batted around in the third for three runs.

Reds starter Joe Price left the game after two innings with a stiff left shoulder and Scott greeted reliever Bob Owichinko with a double. Tim Raines' walk and Gary Carter's soft single loaded the bases and Owichinko walked Wallach on four pitches to force in a run. Argenis Salazar's two-out single drove in two runs.

Dave Concepcion's sacrifice fly and Parker's RBI single tied the game in the third. Parker, with his single, was the last batter to reach base for the Reds.

Montreal went ahead in the sixth as Doug Flynn singled, took second on Lea's sacrifice and scored on Scott's double. Raines doubled and scored on a single by Derrel Thomas for another run in the ninth.

Panthers to face Express

By Associated Press

The Michigan Panthers, looking like anything but a defending champion over the last 12 games of the regular season, open the playoffs today against the Express at Los Angeles.

"We have the utmost respect for Michigan," said John Hadi, coach of Los Angeles, which won five of its last six games in winning the Pacific Division with a 10-8 record. "They're the defending league champions and a very physical football team."

The Panthers also are a struggling football team.

"We're going to have to play better than we've played all year, but I definitely think we have a bonafide chance," said Michigan Coach Jim Stanley, whose club won its first six games, then lost eight of its last 12 to finish second in the Central Division at 10-8 and earn a wild-card playoff berth.

The Panthers need a good effort by quarterback Bobby Hebert, the Most Valuable Player in Michigan's 24-22 victory over the Philadelphia Stars in last year's championship game. Hebert passed for a club record 3,758 yards this year, but on his return from a knee injury last week, he completed only seven of 15 passes for 55 yards in a 20-17 win over Chicago.

Los Angeles and Michigan met once during the regular season, with Express quarterback Steve Young passing for two touchdowns in a 24-16 victory.

In today's other game, Philadelphia, 16-2, the winner of the Atlantic Division, will host New Jersey, 14-4, the Atlantic runner-up.

Sunday, Tampa Bay and Birmingham, each 14-4 and 1-2, respectively, in the Southern Division, play at Birmingham, while Arizona, 10-8, second in the Pacific Division, plays at Houston, 13-5, the Central Division winner.

In New Jersey, the Stars will be facing the only team to beat them this year, including a 16-10 loss in a season finale last Sunday.

USFL Playoffs

But Herschel Walker, who rushed for 1,339 yards for the Generals this year, doesn't "think there's a psychological advantage for either team because these are the playoffs."

Walker and quarterback Brian Sipe will be operating against the league's second-best overall defense in Philadelphia. While the Stars' Chuck Fusina, the USFL's top-rated quarterback, and Kelvin Bryant, the No. 2 rusher with 1,406 yards, will be going up against the fourth-best defense.

Birmingham lost 17-16 to Tampa Bay last Sunday, but got the Southern Division title and the home-field advantage over the Bandits because it had a better record in conference play. However, the home field might be a disadvantage for the Stallions.

who were 9-0 on the road during the regular season and 5-4 at home.

"Whether we won or lost last week, we were going to turn the crank this week," said Rolie Dotsch, the Birmingham coach.

Houston sailed into the playoffs on a seven-game winning streak, while Arizona gained a wild-card berth by winning its last four behind quarterback Greg Landry and runners Tim Spender and Kevin Long, who each had a 1,000-yard season.</

Price registers second eagle

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — For the second day in a row, Nick Price holed a fairway shot for eagle-2 and the South African went on to a 5-under-par 67 that expanded his lead to six strokes Friday in the second round of the 75th Canadian Open Golf Tournament.

Price, a wire-to-wire winner in the prestigious World Series of Golf last fall, reached the halfway point of this national championship with a 134 total, 10 strokes under par on the Glen Abbey Golf Club course.

That's a new, 36-hole record for the course Jack Nicklaus designed as a permanent site for the Canadian Open. The leading margin is, by two strokes, the largest on the PGA Tour this season.

Price, who holed a wedge shot for eagle-2 in Thursday's play, duplicated the feat Friday when a downwind, 151-yard 9-iron shot on the eighth hole took one bounce from the front apron and "suddenly it disappeared," Price said.

"It's incredible," he said. "It's like someone is looking down on me and saying, 'It's your day.'"

"Things just snowballed. I got some confidence and things just kept getting better and better."

The trio in a distant tie for second at 140 included defending champion John Cook, the man he beat in a playoff for this title a year ago, Johnny Miller, and rookie Corey

Canadian Open

Pavin, a winner in Houston earlier this season.

Pavin closed up with a 67 in the mild, sunny weather. Cook had a 69, Miller 68.

The group at 141 included 2-time Canadian Open winner Bruce Lietzke, Clarence Rose, Gary Hallberg and Australian Greg Norman, a playoff loser in the U.S. Open two weeks ago.

Nicklaus, who has not yet won this title, had a no-bogey 69 that lifted him to 142, eight strokes back. Lee Trevino, a 3-time winner of this event, was two shots higher at 144 after a 74.

Masters champion Ben Crenshaw struggled to a 77 and failed to qualify for the final two rounds at 151.

Mike McCullough, who started from the 10th tee, played that side in a fat 42 then matched a course record on the next nine holes. He played that side in 29, which included birdies on the last seven holes he played.

That birdie streak is one short of the all-time Tour record set in 1961 by Bob Goalby.

"What a great feeling," McCullough said. "I wish everyone could experience that feeling just once."

Despite shower of sand, defending Canadian Open champion John Cook needed another shot to get out of the trap at 16.

Stephenson birdies 18 to share first place

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Defending champion Jan Stephenson sank a 20-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole to move into a six-way tie for the lead Friday in the opening round of the $200,000 LPGA Lady Keystone Open.

Stephenson finished with a 4-under-par 68, joining Stephanie Farwig, Myra Van Hoose, Rosey Jones, Julie Inkster and Jo Ann Washam atop the leader board in the 54-hole tournament.

Patty Sheehan, the leading money winner on the Ladies Professional Golf Association Tour, and Denise Streibig, were tied for second, one stroke behind the leaders.

Stephenson, bidding for an unprecedented third-straight Lady Keystone title, birdied the first three holes of the 6,388-yard West Course of the Hershey Country Club and finished with five birdies overall.

"That's the best I've putted in eight months," Stephenson said. "I felt like I shot a 64. I birdied the three toughest holes on this course — one, 13 and 18."

Washam also birdied the first three holes and had six birdies for the day, the most of any leader.

Farwig, Inkster and Sheehan all

LPGA Keystone

had eagle 3s on the 474-yard, par-5 18th hole.

"This is my lowest score of the year," said Farwig, who has had a rough time in 1984 after being the LPGA's Rookie of the Year in 1983. "I needed something like this to restore my confidence."

Farwig used a four-wood on her second shot to the 18th green and made a 10-foot uphill putt for the eagle.

"I didn't have a three-putt green and that was the difference today," Jones said. "The fifth hole, where I sank a 30-footer to save par, was the turning point in my round."

Van Hoose, who is expecting her first child in January, recovered from morning sickness to play her first round without a bogey in two years.

"I didn't feel well before I got here," Van Hoose said. "I hit 14 greens in regulation and had 28 putts. It's the best I've played in quite a while."

Inkster, who is closing in on the rookie earning record of Nancy Lopez, had only 26 putts.

Bulldogs' Johnson with TSTI in Waco

From Staff Reports

Midland High basketball player Kenneth Johnson has signed a letter of intent to play with the Texas State Technical Institute Tornado in Waco this fall, according to TSTI coach Carl Love.

Johnson, a 6-foot-5 All-District 4-5A forward, averaged 11.5 points, 8.3 rebounds and 3.1 steals per game for coach Jack Stephenson's Bulldogs during the 1983-84 basketball season. He was All-Tournament in the Tall City and Canyon Reef tournaments at Midland and Snyder. Johnson scored 402 points for the Bulldogs.

Johnson helped lead Midland High to a 27-8 record this past season. The Bulldogs also earned a Class 5A playoff berth by finishing second in the league. They lost to Amarillo High in overtime in the bi-district round of the playoffs in Levelland.

"I've worked on this kid (Johnson) for almost three months, and needless to say, I'm pleased to have been able to pry him away from those West Texas schools," Love said. "He's got the tools to be a real fine swing man before he leaves TSTI."

Each team is required to supply its own softball, Blue Dot only.

NYSE Report

Average home price more than $100,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — Home sales declined 4.4 percent in May, fading to the slowest pace since last fall as home loan rates rose to the highest level this year and average house prices passed the $100,000 mark for the first time ever, the government reported Friday.

With interest rates still rising, housing industry spokesmen said the situation was getting worse rather than better.

A report issued by the Commerce and Housing and Urban Development departments said new single-family houses were sold in May at an annual rate of 612,000.

The 4.4 percent decline from April, the fourth decrease in five months, put the rate at the lowest level since the 597,000 of last September.

The drop was not surprising in light of rising home loan rates, which have made it harder for prospective buyers to qualify for mortgages. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board said the average interest for fixed-rate home loans reached 14.34 percent in early May, and builders and lenders say rates have climbed higher since then.

Meanwhile, the report said, the average price of new homes sold in May rose to $101,000 from April's $95,900, passing the $100,000 mark for the first time.

That was at least partly due to the fact that rising loan rates have tended to squeeze moderate-income people out of the market for medium-priced houses. Wealthy people have still been able to buy higher priced homes and have gained more weight in the average.

The median price rose from $79,400 to $80,900, meaning as many houses sold for more than that figure as for less.

The National Association of Realtors reported earlier this week that resales of previously owned single-family houses also declined in May.

Jack Carlson, executive officer and chief economist for the Realtors, said Friday, "Potential home buyers and home sellers and the entire real estate industry are clearly feeling the pinch of high interest rates...and both builders and real estate sales groups expect further declines the rest of this year."

Kent Colton, executive vice president of the National Association of Home Builders, said, "High mortgage rates are bumping buyers out of the market—and thus the inventory of unsold units is building up"—a formula for cutbacks in new construction.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Home sales declined 4.4 percent in May, fading to the slowest pace since last fall as home loan rates rose to the highest level this year and average house prices passed the $100,000 mark for the first time ever, the government reported Fri-

That was at least partly due to the fact that rising loan rates have tended to squeeze moderate-income people out of the market for medium-priced houses.

The median price rose from $79,400 to $80,900, meaning as many houses sold for more than that figure.

Kent Colton, executive vice president of the National Association of Home Builders, said, "High mortgage rates are bumping buyers out of the market and thus the inventory of unsold units is building up" — a formula for cutbacks in new construction.

We have found by sharing our experience, strength and hope and by following the 12 suggested steps of AA we can live our lives in a more meaningful manner and can change our attitudes, old patterns and habits to find serenity, even happiness. HAPPY BIRTHDAY, MY COUNTRY!

The cynics can make a strong case against our time. Soon they'll try to prove we'd be better off living in another century.

But kids still celebrate their birthdays. So does the nation!

Because, along with life and liberty, the pursuit of happiness is one of our inalienable rights.

Happiness isn't a birthday party, nor a Fourth of July parade. It is really a spiritual quest—born in brotherhood, nurtured in self-control, and ultimately realized in respect for one another and for God. Because we were willing to settle for less, less we've been getting!

The Church is not immune to controversy as it tries to wrestle with the frustrations of our time. Wrestling means conflict. Not every hold deserves the applause or contributes to victory.

But the Church inspires those millions of Americans whose pursuit of happiness turns humbly and confidently to that very Creator who endowed men with certain inalienable rights. He brings us together!

Minister gets kick from clowning around religion in brief

The pastor of Philadelphia's Old Pine Street Church, William Pindar, brings a smile and a bag of tricks to the 196th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) held in Phoenix May 29 - June 6.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Rev. William H. Pindar has spent 19 years of his life in the Presbyterian ministry. For 13 of them, he's been clowning around.

While many religious men and women put on dark robes and solemn faces to meet their congregations, Pindar puts on the face of a clown.

At the altar of the Old Pine Street Church in Philadelphia, he often wears a frayed top hat sprouting an oversized flower and rainbow suspenders supporting baggy pants and covering an outrageously bright shirt.

Pindar will not speak a single word. Instead, he prances around the altar miming the dramatics of the sermon.

"Clowns in religion can be very powerful. The power of humor has the ability to free up and affirm a person's latent creativity and to communicate love," Pindar said.

Pindar recalled how a church member had once told him the most powerful service he had attended was not one in which the sermon was eloquently spoken, but one in which Pindar, in mime costume, silently raised the communion bread, broke it and offered it to the crowd.

"A clown can pull out these feelings. People have an opportunity to write their own script. I didn't have to tell them what this meant," Pindar said.

His most recent performance was at Phoenix's Civic Plaza at the recent 196th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), for which he is a commissioner.

In addition to street and church appearances, Pindar gives performances for prison inmates and patients in hospices and mental institutions.

Pindar has studied clowning and performed as a clown for 13 years. For eight years, he has taught clowning. He said he hoped one day to complete a doctorate on clowning. And it all started on a busy Philadelphia street corner, he said.

After spending the day in a hospital delivery room with his wife and doctors, the joy he felt over his daughter's birth launched him onto the street. At a busy intersection, Pindar found himself handing passers-by flowers while still dressed in the hospital's green scrub suit.

"My personality isn't the shy type, but to be on the corner of Philadelphia is really something," Pindar said.

The incident brought flea market performances and more street corner debuts. In one of his spontaneous clowning sprees, he stopped a police car, then forced the officer to step out of his car and display his badge while onlookers laughed, he said.

"Even the toughest individual can be hooked by a clown. We have so many gifts inside that a clown can pull out of us," Pindar said.

Additionally, performing as a clown provides a person an outlet to release feelings, and therefore be renewed, he said.

"For me, this is sanctuary. It is an oasis where it's safe to take new refreshment," he said.

One year, on a Palm Sunday that was also April Fool's Day, Pindar decided to use his clown performance in a sermon setting.

As he walked down the aisle, a robe concealed his costume. Once at the altar, Pindar said, he began to speak of how Jesus Christ shattered the perception people had of the coming Messiah.

He said he then dropped the robe, revealed his costume and began to apply his mime face while explaining to the congregation that people expected Jesus to be a king but that Jesus, by the way he dressed, basically resembled a clown.

"So I took on Jesus's role. They had to see a different possibility. The clown helped them to see it," he said.

But that day was full of apprehensions, said Pindar, who was uncertain whether the clown performance would be appreciated or misunderstood.

"I still have that nudge of risk everytime I perform," Pindar said.

Kelview Heights plans

special program Sunday

To mark the upcoming Independence Day observance, Kelview Heights Baptist Church is planning a special program Sunday.

The 100-voice choir will be featured singing the patriotic musical "I Love America" by John W. Peterson. The musical includes two sections — "Praise for America" and "Prayer for America." The choir will be accompanied by an orchestrated soundtrack.

The sermon "Musts for America's Survival" will be delivered by the Rev. Frank Johnson, pastor of the church for 23 years.

The public is invited to attend this service, which will be presented at 9 and 10:30 a.m. The church is located on Scharbauer Drive west of Big Spring Street.

Church sets special service

Patriotic services will be held at Alamo Heights Baptist Church Sunday.

Members are urged to wear the colors red, white and blue. The pastor, the Rev. J.E. Meeks, will bring the message "Let Freedom Ring" from John 8:31-36 during the 11 a.m. worship service. There will be pledges of allegiance to the American and Christian flags, responsive readings concerning freedom and the Sanctuary Choir will present "Statue of Liberty."

During the evening worship service, the Sanctuary Choir, directed by Vaughn Taylor, interim minister of music, will present a patriotic cantata, "One Nation Under God."

The public is invited to attend.

Mozart mass to be sung

The Cantata Domino Chorale from St. Ann's Catholic Church will be singing mass by Mozart during the church's 9 a.m. mass Sunday.

Women to go to Jerusalem

NEW YORK (AP) — Betty Friedman, authors Cynthia Ozick and Ann Ruppel, and Brooklyn District Attorney Elizabeth Holtzman will be among U.S. participants at the 20th annual American Jewish Congress American-Israel dialogue scheduled for July 20 through Aug. 2 in Jerusalem.

The theme is "Woman as Jew, Jew as Woman: An Urgent Inquiry."

Other American participants include Jacqueline Levine, president of the National Jewish Community Relations Advisory Council; Susan Weidman Schneider, editor of Lilith magazine; sociologist Cynthia Fuchs Epstein; and Blu Greenberg, a leading feminist activist in the Orthodox Jewish community.

The American women will be joined for discussions by their Israeli counterparts, including author Yael Dayan Sion, Dr. Dafna Israeli, a sociologist at Bar Ilan University, and Col. Amira Dotan, commanding officer of the Israeli Defense Forces Women's Corps.

Woman to direct service

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Rev. Judith L. Weidman, named editor-director of Religious News Service in New York, says she hopes to make it a more profitable service.

She will succeed Gerald A. Renner, the editor-director since 1976. The appointment was announced by the Rev. Spurgeon M. Dunn III, chairman of the board and editor-general manager of The United Methodist Reporter, which took over operation of the interfaith news service in October.

Ms. Weidman, an executive of United Methodism's Board of Higher Education and Ministry, has for the past six months been marketing specialist for Religious News Service. She had previously worked as associate editor of The United Methodist Reporter and earlier was education editor of The Kokomo (Ind.) Tribune.

A string quartet from the National Symphony Orchestra will play on July 10. A visiting English choir, from St. James the Greater in Leicestershire, is scheduled to appear on July 17.

Doors for the programs open at 7:30 p.m. The cathedral is at Massachusetts and Wisconsin avenues NW.

Man writes 'how-to' book on annulments

DUBUQUE, Iowa (AP) — Joe Zwack, who is married and the father of three children, seems an unlikely person to be showing the way for the nation's Roman Catholics who are applying for marriage annulments in record numbers.

But Zwack, a local attorney, made himself an expert when he found he could not answer basic questions on annulment posed by clients in divorce cases. Now he has written a book that shows Catholics how to obtain annulments on such grounds as immaturity, alcoholism and mental instability.

Catholics may divorce, but a divorced Catholic may not remarry in the eyes of the church. An annulment — virtually a canceling out of a marriage — is the only way a Catholic may remarry and retain the privileges of the Catholic Church.

While about 350 annulments were granted in the United States in 1969, Zwack estimates that more than 52,000 were granted last year. The Catholic Church does not release the number of annulments it grants.

"This is the tip of the iceberg even today," the 45-year-old Zwack said, explaining that only 10 percent or less of divorced Catholics ask for annulments in order to remarry in the church. He said 60 percent of divorced Catholics could qualify for annulments under relaxed Church guidelines.

"We're talking about 8 million divorced Catholics out there," said Zwack, who researched the labyrinth of Catholic Canon Law to come up with a rough draft of his book before even talking to a publisher.

Harper & Row was the first publisher he contacted, and Zwack said he was quick to point out the potential market for the book.

"As soon as they learned about those numbers, they decided to go with it," he said.

The book, "Annulment: Your Chance to Remarry Within the Catholic Church," came out last November. Since then, Zwack has been sought for advice from Catholics across the country. He said attorneys weren't really needed but many Catholics turn to them because they're unclear about annulment grounds or procedures.

"Most attorneys know little about it," Zwack said. When he initially tried to get more information, he found only arcane books written for Canon Law specialists, relying heavily on Latin terminology.

"I figured there would be a how-to book on it, like there is on everything else," Zwack said. Finding none, he wrote his own.

Zwack is telling Catholics that "there's a potential for almost any marriage that ends in divorce to be annulled" under looser guidelines adopted in recent years by the Catholic Church in the United States.

He said the most significant changes have occurred since 1970, when the Church began recognizing psychological grounds for annulments. That became Church law in 1983.

Catholics still have to prove that the basis for a successful marriage did not exist at the time of the wedding, but Zwack said the acceptance of psychological grounds makes that much easier. Previously, most annulment petitions involved people who were underage or who said they were forced to marry.

Zwack said the relaxed guidelines represent the Church's acceptance of psychological advances in the past century, but that most Catholics still have not been told they can obtain an annulment on psychological grounds.

"The Church has not made its position clear, and most Catholics are in the dark on this," Zwack said, noting that the Church does not want to be perceived as promoting the breakup of families.

"But right now Catholics are divorcing at the same rate as the rest of the population. Why not tell people what their rights are? That's what I tried to do," he said.

"In fact, the parish priests I've talked to are relieved. They say, 'Well, at least it's out in the open.'"

Zwack said the Church took a big step in 1977, when it declared that divorced Catholics who remarried wouldn't be excommunicated.

Methodists to offer print for sale at service

A numbered print of Methodism's bicentennial painting "Offer Them Christ" will be presented and dedicated in a special 7:30 p.m. service Sunday at First United Methodist Church, Main Street at Illinois Avenue.

The United Methodist Foundation for Evangelism commissioned Texas artist, Kenneth Wyatt, to do the painting which depicts John Wesley, founder of the Methodist Church, giving last minute instructions to Dr.

Thomas Coke as he departs England for America to be the first general superintendent for the fast-growing Methodist churches in the New World. Wyatt chose the title of "Offer Them Christ" as possible words Wesley might have said to Coke when the boat pulled away from the shore.

Wyatt is a Methodist minister living in Tulsa, who now gives full time to his painting and speaking engagements.

The Sunday evening program, which will be held in the church patio, will begin with a time for fellowship and singing some of the old favorite hymns of the church. All persons who have joined the church in the past 12 months will be special guests and will be introduced to those there. After the painting has been presented, homemade ice cream and chocolate cake will be served.

The public is invited to attend.

At least 15 specials planned

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Christopher Columbus is going to discover America next television season — obviously just in time for the ratings sweeps.

CBS' six-hour "Christopher Columbus" is just one of at least 15 miniseries scheduled by the three networks for the 1984-85 television season.

That's the most ever, and it bodes well for the television audience. The miniseries, thanks to the huge success of such productions as "Roots," "The Thorn Birds," "The Winds of War," and "Shogun," now figure prominently in each network's ratings strategy.

Here's a look at what's in store for next season (and beyond):

"Hollywood Wives" is a sizzling look at the public and private passions of the glamorous women of Rodeo Drive and Beverly Hills, from the novel by Jackie Collins (Joan's sister). Five hours.

"North and South" follows two families whose lives cross repeatedly in the 20 turbulent years leading up to the Civil War, and then into the war itself. 12 hours.

"A Death in California" focuses on a mass murderer's con game and the glamorous socialite who became his prey, pawn, protector and love. Four hours.

"The Kennedy's of Massachusetts" spans four generations of one of America's most remarkable families. Eight hours.

ABC also has in development the 10-hour "Texas," from the upcoming book by James Michener, and the 20-hour "War and Remembrance," Herman Wouk's sequel to the immensely popular "The Winds of War."

CBS
"Christopher Columbus" tells of the sailor from Genoa who convinced the crown of Spain to underwrite his search for a shorter route to Asia. Six hours.

"Ellis Island," based on the book by Fred Mustard Stewart, is a sprawling chronicle of the lives of several European immigrants who come to New York in 1907 in search of the American dream. It stars Richard Burton, with his daughter Kate as his daughter, plus Ben Vereen, Ann Jillian and many others. Seven hours.

"Mistral's Daughter" stars Stacy Keach, Stefanie Powers and Lee Remick in Judith Krantz's story about three generations of women bound together by their love for the same man. Seven hours.

"Robert Kennedy and His Times" stars Brad Davis in the title role of this production about his relationship with his family, President Lyndon B. Johnson, and FBI director J. Edgar Hoover. Seven hours.

"Space" stars James Garner (at the head of an all-star cast) in Michener's story of America's space program from the first fizzes to landing on the moon. Thirteen hours.

NBC
"The Sun Also Rises" is a remake of Ernest Hemingway's classic novel of American expatriates in Europe between the world wars. Jane Seymour, Hart Bochner and Robert Caradine star. Four hours.

"A.D." tells of the early Christians, the Jewish zealots and the mighty Roman Empire in the years following the death of Christ. Anthony Andrews, Ava Gardner, Susan Sarandon are among the many stars. 12 hours.

"The Raoul Wallenberg Story" stars Richard Chamberlain as the 'wedid diplomat who saved the lives of thousands of Jews in the last days of World War II, then disappeared as the Soviet Army advanced on Berlin. Four hours.

"Fatal Vision" is based on Joe McGinnis' book about the sensational and mysterious murder case involving former Green Beret doctor Capt. Jeffrey MacDonald. Karl Malden plays the father-in-law, whose dogged persistence finally brought MacDonald to trial. Four hours.

"Evergreen," from Belva's Plain's romantic novel, tells of a beautiful Jewish immigrant girl who rises from household maid to wealthy matriarch. Six hours.

NBC also has under consideration miniseries based on a remake of "The Long Hot Summer," a remake of Edna Ferber's "Giant," and "Deceptions," a story about twin sisters, one a housewife and one a jet-setter, who trade places for a week.

Mondale's Congressional backers seek missing comma

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — Writing a national political platform isn't a whole lot different than crafting legislation on Capitol Hill. The players are often the same and the process is just as hectic.

Dozens of members of Congress will be delegates at next month's Democratic National Convention and about 20 of them serve on the Platform Committee.

Recent sessions of the panel have taken on the flavor of congressional committee meetings — not only because of the large number of Congress members and the type of work involved, but also because some of the sessions have actually been held in committee rooms.

That was to accommodate members who needed to rush back and forth to the House and Senate floors for votes.

On one such voting trip, the Mondale campaign lost a comma from the Democratic platform — an important comma, as it turned out.

The first draft of the platform contained a section on affirmative action programs dealing with racial quotas. It stated: "The Democratic Party opposes quotas, which are inconsistent with the principles of our country." That was the language Walter F. Mondale's lieutenants wanted in the platform.

But Mondale's top representative on the platform committee, Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., and his House colleagues had to leave the room for a vote.

While he was gone, the non-congressional members on the committee voted to remove the comma after delegates for the Rev. Jesse Jackson argued that sometimes quotas are beneficial in reversing the longtime effects of discrimination.

With the comma removed, the sentence read: "The Democratic Party opposes quotas which are inconsistent..." That meant the party was about to go on record for the first time in support of quotas so long as they weren't "inconsistent" with U.S. principles; a distortion of the sentence's original meaning.

Barnes returned, several other sections were handled, and some time went by until he blurted out: "Where's the comma?"

"The comma shouldn't be out. It should be put back in," Barnes said.

Treaties get Americans out of foreign jails

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 22 Americans being released from prison cells in Cuba represent only a small percentage of the Americans arrested and jailed around the world each year.

Over the decades many of these American prisoners have complained of harsh treatment, poor food, unsanitary living conditions and the culture shock caused by unfamiliar customs and language.

Often there is little U.S. diplomats can do to ease the conditions under which Americans are held or to obtain their release.

But over the last few years prisoner exchange treaties with a short but expanding list of countries have given the State Department a new alternative.

These agreements permit the transfer of people convicted of criminal charges in certain countries to serve their sentences in U.S. prisons if the prisoner and both governments agree.

Citizens of these nations who are convicted and sentenced to prison terms in the United States have the same privilege.

"We have an interest throughout the world in the fate of Americans held in jails in various countries, particularly in substandard jails," said John Hughes, spokesman for the State Department, in discussing the promised release by Cuban President Fidel Castro of most of the U.S. citizens held by Cuba on criminal charges. The release was arranged by Democratic presidential candidate the Rev. Jesse Jackson during his visit to Cuba on Wednesday.

"The (prisoner) transfer treaties have been a welcome thing for the families and friends of many persons in prison abroad and we think they have been a success," said one State Department official, speaking on condition he not be identified by name.

Such treaties are in effect between the United States and six other nations: Mexico, Canada, Bolivia, Peru, Turkey and Panama.

Similar treaties have been signed with France and members of the European Common Market and U.S. officials are said to be "looking for every opportunity" to reach additional transfer agreements with other nations.

Last year, 53 U.S. citizens were returned to the United States under these treaties, bringing the total returned to 756 since the first such agreement went into effect in 1979.

The overall scope of the problem is larger.

Last year, a total of 3,090 Americans were arrested on a wide variety of charges in 101 nations, according to the State Department.

At year's end, 1,815 Americans were in custody in 92 countries.

One U.S. official, speaking privately, said that while a variety of alleged criminal offenses are involved, the largest category involves illicit drugs.

American consular officials monitor arrests of Americans and keep track of their status as a standard part of their jobs.

"We visit prisoners regularly," said one official. "We communicate complaints they may have to the appropriate authorities. We help with medical assistance if necessary. We assist with communications to family and friends in the United States or abroad. And we help with legal representation."

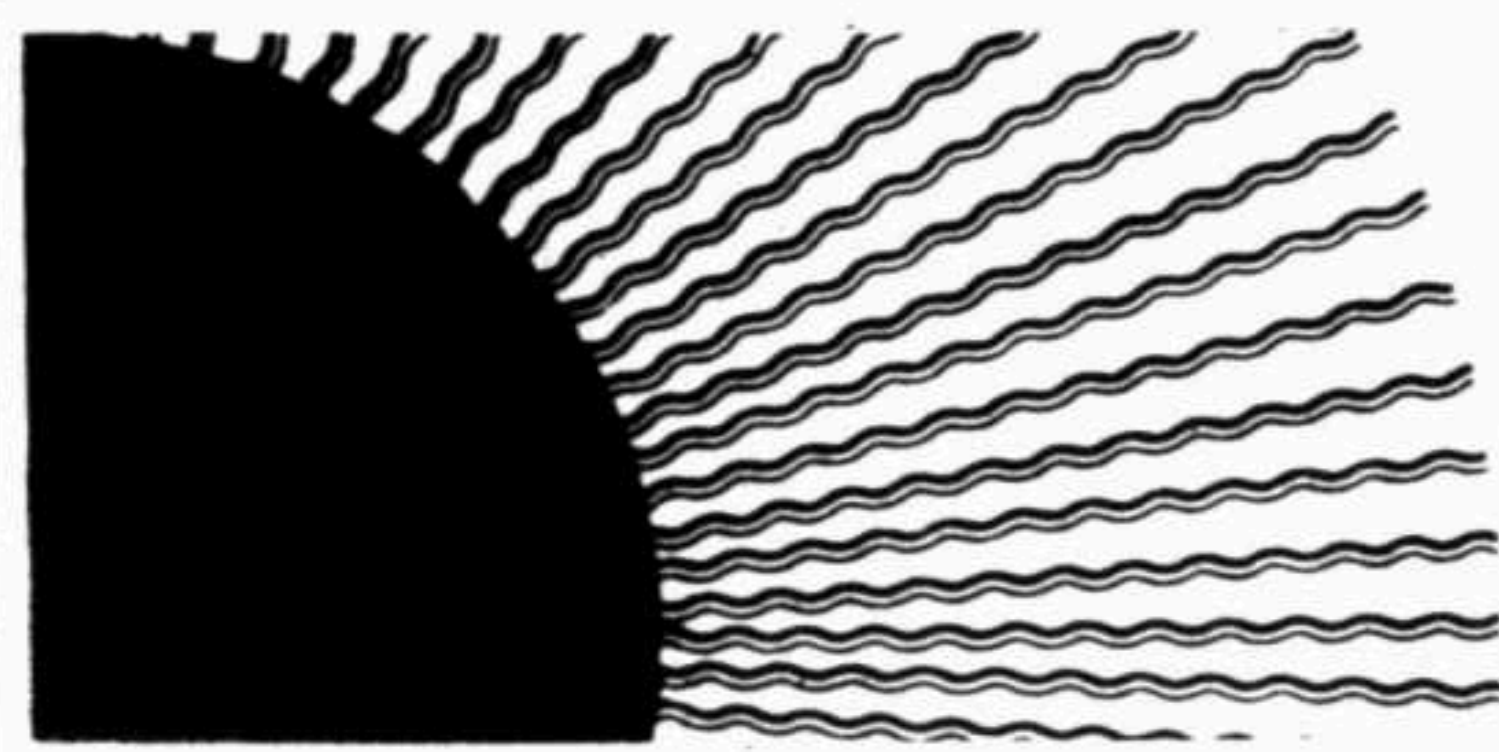

"But we cannot act as lawyers or provide legal advice and under normal circumstances we cannot act or intervene to spring an American citizen," he said.

Always, he said, prevention is the best cure.

"We advise American citizens to keep their noses clean when they are abroad and to be aware they have the responsibility to obey the sovereign law of the country they are in," he said.

"And they also have to be aware that the ability of the U.S. government to help them out of legal scrapes or problems is limited and that when Americans travel they don't take the U.S. Constitution with them."

"And they should also know," he said, "that there may be penalties for a particular crime or action that are harsher than those in the United States or where the act itself isn't even a crime under American law."

Home swap can be inexpensive trip

GALVESTON (AP) — Those who dream of traveling but have a limited budget may find their dreams can become a reality through a simple trade with someone else. All it takes is getting on the register of a home exchange agency, and a little trust in other people.

Julia Lambert, from England's Cotswold region, and a friend, Jim Hayes of London, have temporarily borrowed the home and car of Julie Bosworth of Galveston, whose mother, Jeannie Nadon, subscribes along with Ms. Lambert to the "Holiday Exchange" register.

The basic idea of the exchange and others like it is to switch homes and perhaps autos with someone else who is also on the register — and that might be someone in almost any part of the world. Subscribers pay a fee to receive listings, and then make the negotiations for the swap themselves. Some exchanges offer more planning services, and charge accordingly.

Ms. Lambert and Hayes say they are finding that exchanging homes and cars for a vacation gives them much more freedom and enables them to see a little more of the local color than most tourists do.

Ms. Lambert said she has been making plans for her visit to the United States for about a year. She originally contacted Mrs. Nadon in Galveston and another couple on the register who live at Martha's Vineyard near Boston, where the English couple plan to stay for about three weeks when their Texas visit ends.

"We did just fine, once we got past the language barrier," said Ms. Lambert, with a laugh. "You see, our pet is your gas, our lift is your elevator and when you all go around talking about flats they are on your car and not where you live, at all," said Ms. Lambert.

Ms. Lambert noted another difference. "England is much more geared to tourism, with more information and public transport," she said.

She says she read the "1984 Guide to America," but one thing she says the book did not make clear was the vast size of the country. And she says they are having problems adjusting to the temperatures — the hot and humid ones in the South and the cool ones up north.

What they are enjoying tremendously is the "sea" and "seashore," the English visitors said.

"We like the sea," said Hayes. "You see," explains Ms. Lambert, "it's nice to be able to get in the sea. At home we see it, but aren't able to get in it — as it's usually too cold."

Ms. Lambert runs a bed and breakfast in her home in England, where she is registered with the national tourist board. She says she has dealt with many Americans in the past, but she still is fascinated with their customs and differences, more perhaps than with some of Galveston's historical sites. Ms. Lambert's own home was built in the 1850s and she says she sees plenty of old structures and art at home.

The couple say they found a visit to NASA "quite interesting." And they have visited Seawolf Park and even taken in a Lassie League game at one of the Galveston ball parks.

Both say they thoroughly enjoyed the game, but Hayes was more up on the rules than Ms. Lambert, who says she found watching the excited parents was almost as interesting as the action on the field.

Ms. Lambert said the softball game was a little like the English "rounders" in which they use a smaller bat and a softer ball. Hayes also noted that English children would be less likely to have such organized evening ball games though they have "field days" occasionally at school. More popular in England are LaCrosse, hockey, tennis and swimming, he said.

One of the big advantages of the home exchange is getting an auto. The couple plans to make a trip to Austin later to visit Ms. Lambert's brother. Having use of a car enables them to get around and see the country first hand.

"The people are quite different from what we expected in many ways," said Ms. Lambert. "Even I thought those old westerns were fictitious, until I traveled through some of your cities," she said. "We aren't used to seeing guns or weapons, although I suppose they are necessary here."

The couple enjoyed a visit to the Galveston Opera House on the opening performance of "They're Playing Our Song" but they say they were surprised and somewhat intimidated by the officer at the door with his firearm in plain sight. As Hayes put it, most officers in England do not carry weapons, and if they do, are perhaps a little more discreet about displaying them.

Ms. Lambert also said she misses news from home a little.

"The Americans just don't get news here as they do in Europe. The average Londoner reads two papers a day and there are less advertisements than in the American papers. People just don't advertise as much, but the ads are more expensive," she said. "I feel we get much more news of your country than you do of ours."

A trip of this sort is great, Ms. Lambert says, "but as anything else worth while, it requires a lot of planning."

'Vid Kid' authors his first book on video games

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Two years ago, Rawson Stovall was a 10-year-old bundle of energy, innovation and ideas. He gained national recognition by becoming one of the youngest — if not the youngest — members of the working press in the country.

His weekly syndicated column, "The Vid Kid," now appears in 20 newspapers nationwide. In his two years as a journalist, he has become known and highly respected in the video industry, as evidenced by the mail and phone calls that pour into his West Texas home each day.

But as if the Abilene youngster didn't have his hands full with playing, writing columns and maintaining a straight-A average in school, he has just authored his own book.

In September, Doubleday will release "The Vid Kid's Book of Home Video Games" — by Rawson Stovall, age 12.

"It's a book of selected columns and articles written for other publications, plus original material," the grade-schooler said.

"BUT IT HAS all kinds of other things, like information on game clubs, and things like how to photograph a video screen. I did the testing myself," he said in a soft Texas drawl.

Rawson insists he's just an ordinary kid doing what any kid his age might do. And he gets concerned when people form the wrong impression.

"People think I'm just solid playing video games. I play, but I also watch TV, read books, ride my bike, visit friends. I'm really just a regular kid doing this on the side."

"I know a lot about video games, but there's a difference between doing my job and being a fanatic," he said. "Just like there's a difference between a movie critic and someone who sees the same movie eight times."

Rawson has appeared on just about every major television talk show in the last two years. But success hasn't spoiled his easy-going nature. He hates being treated differently by his peers and says it "embarrasses me" when people make a fuss.

EVEN HAVING his own paycheck hasn't colored his child-like outlook. He filed his first income tax statement this year and says that his profits — which the family would not disclose — have been turned back into the business and into a college fund. And, he notes, his allowance remains strictly controlled by Mom and Dad.

Universal Press Syndicate began distributing "The Vid Kid" column in April 1983, after Rawson already had sold the column to 10 newspapers under the name "Video Beat."

The Abilene Reporter-News, his hometown newspaper, was the first to publish the column. In January 1983, the first out-of-state newspaper, the San Jose Mercury News in California, picked up the column and retitled it "The Vid Kid."

"I write for all ages," Rawson said. "But I get my best response from kids in junior high school."

Nevertheless, he says, he aims to please as wide an audience as possible. He even included a recipe for Pac-Man cookies in a column once because he had received letters from grandmothers.

Rawson Stovall, is now an author. "The Vid Kid's Book of Home Video Games" is set for release in September, and contains reviews, information about game clubs and other information related to the games.

RAWSON SPENDS about two hours each day reviewing games sent to him from video game companies, using the $10,000 in loaned or owned video computer equipment stationed about the house. The 350 game cartridges that he has accumulated over the last two years take up every available slot in the family's bookshelves.

When not out playing or in front of a game console, Rawson spends time writing his column in longhand before giving it to his mother, Kay Stovall, for editing and typing.

"I spend more time writing than I do playing," Rawson said. "I'm a procrastinator, that's why. The other thing is, I don't like working certain times of the day. I'm like Garfield; I'm allergic to mornings," he said, comparing himself to one of his favorite cartoon characters.

Mrs. Stovall, a former high school teacher, gave her son the idea for the column. But she stays out of the spotlight, saying she is merely "Rawson's secretary" and "the one who straightens out his video games."

Rawson played his first video game in a pizza parlor when he was 6. When he was 9, he asked his father, Ronald Stovall, an administrator for the Texas Department of Health, for an Atari video game system, but got turned down.

SANTA CLAUS didn't come through either, he recalled. "So I told Dad, 'See those pecans out in the backyard? I'm going to pick them, market them and sell them.' So I dressed up like a prince and called them 'Princely Pecans.' I didn't much like the dressing up part, but it worked."

Rawson's venture netted him more than $200, a feat he lists on his four-page resume, along with such credentials as: "raised $5,480 for Mental Health Association in Benny the Bookworm Contest for Abilene children" and "won governor's award for outstanding volunteer service, youngest person ever to receive this award."
