Scharbauer Elementary School Principal Mamie Williams, who returned to work recently following a severe illness, gives a pep talk to pupils helping out with Scharbauer's holiday open house this week.

Principal recovers in time to join holiday festivities

By DAVID MORRIS
Staff Writer

For a while, it looked like Scharbauer Elementary Principal Mamie Williams might miss the school's traditional holiday open house.

Ms. Williams, a 30-year veteran of the Midland Independent School District and a principal for 15, became ill in October and underwent major surgery.

After 10 days in the hospital and several weeks of home recovery, she returned to Scharbauer on a part-time basis two weeks ago and was pleased to find the school's annual holiday decoration project well under way.

Giant-size holiday murals decorate the walls of the school; a 10-foot Christmas tree constructed entirely of tumbleweeds adorns one hallway. Elfin pupils with Santa caps greet visitors at the school entrance as Christmas carols play over the public address system.

"I think the uniqueness of it has a lot to do with the time and the effort that these folks put into it," she said.

Snow and freezing weather forecast

By DAVID MORRIS
Staff Writer

A mass of frigid Canadian air will send shivers through the Permian Basin this weekend, with snow and freezing temperatures forecast for this evening.

"A high pressure area came rolling out of Canada, pushing a dome of cold air south," National Weather Service spokesman Rick Davis said this morning. He said the vanguard of the front arrived in Midland about 6 a.m. today.

Temperatures this afternoon are expected to be in the low 20s with a windchill of -10 degrees. Cloudiness and snow flurries are forecast for tonight, with a low near 15.

Salvation Army spokesman Major Milton Wood said he is expecting an overflow crowd at his Midland shelter tonight.

"Our standard procedure in cold weather is to turn no one down," he said. He said the Salvation Army will sleep people on the floor and put them up in hotel rooms to ensure that no one who wants it goes without shelter.

"In the morning, we will allow them to stay until it warms up somewhat," he said.

Neither the cold snap nor the predicted snowfall is expected to create problems at the airport or on the highways, officials say.

Midland International Airport operations manager Ken Day said his staff is well-trained in snow-removal procedures and ready for anything mother nature can dish out.

"Here at the airport we don't foresee any problems," he said this morning. "What's coming is not that spectacular."

The Department of Public Safety, meanwhile, had not issued any travel advisories for Texas roads as of 10 a.m.

The rest of the weekend promises more of the frigid same.

Saturday morning should dawn with a windchill of -5 degrees cloudy skies, with a 30 percent chance of snow.

Sunday and Monday will have high temperatures in the low to mid 30s and lows in the 20s, and Saturday's snow flurries may turn to rain or freezing rain.

The normal high for this time of year is 60, and the normal low is 32, Davis said.

STATE

A strong Arctic cold front roared into Texas today, bringing with it the coldest air mass of the season.

Winds ahead of the front stirred up dust at Wichita Falls in extreme North Texas and the front triggered light snow at Amarillo. North winds gusted to 35-40 mph ahead of the front.

The front was moving southward along a line from south of Lubbock to near Dallas eastward to Texarkana early today.

It will be partly to mostly cloudy statewide tonight and Saturday with occasional snow flurries possible over portions of West Texas and southwestern portions of North Texas Saturday.

Long range forecasts indicated the possibility of snow or ice across portions of North Texas Sunday.

There is a slight chance of rain over western and southern portions of South Texas with possible rain mixed with freezing rain or sleet over northwest portions of South Texas tonight and Saturday.

NATION

Wicked northwest winds whipped snow and arctic air into the north central states today, spawning subzero temperatures across most of the northern Plains and Upper Mississippi Valley and wind chill indexes of 50 degrees below zero.

Dissident Sakharov dies from apparent heart attack

MOSCOW (AP) — Andrei D. Sakharov, the brilliant scientist who built the Soviet hydrogen bomb and became an unwavering beacon for the world in the cause of human rights, has died at age 68.

The 1975 Nobel Peace Prize winner died alone in his study Thursday night of an apparent heart attack, said his son-in-law, Yefrem Yankelevich. Sakharov died as he had lived the last two decades of his life, struggling for democracy, world peace and human liberty.

Sakharov risked his status as a national scientific hero and the honors the Soviet Union had heaped upon him to openly challenge the government when most others were silent. He was vilified, attacked by the authorities and banished from Moscow in 1980 to endure nearly seven years of internal exile that sapped his vitality and undermined his health.

He was freed by President Mikhail S. Gorbachev three years ago and won a seat in the Soviet Congress. He used it as a forum to press for reform and freedom in his country, gaining new stature as a conscience of the nation.

Tributes to the brave humanist came from around the world.

Sakharov's death occurred after a long day of struggle to organize an opposition to the Communist Party. He was preparing a speech demanding that the Communists' guaranteed hold on power be revoked, Yankelevich said.

The defiant activist's final words to his family were: "Tomorrow there will be battle," Yankelevich said.

Sergei Kovalev, a fellow human rights activist in Moscow and a friend, said the body was found by Sakharov's wife, Yelena Bonner. Bonner was his full partner in their human rights campaigns that embraced any cause, fought any injustice and gave strength and courage to victims and to those who wanted to reform the Soviet Union.

Children ask Santa for holiday warmth from coats, best friends

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some kiddies who write to Father Christmas get right to the point, saying what they want — "a doll and a best friend," "to get my cast off." Others ask only for the clothes their parents can't afford.

Some are concerned that Santa be able to find their house — and get in once he arrives.

Every single one claims to have been good.

"Santa, this year I don't want toys," wrote Michelle. "I need a coat for me and my brother ... my mother is good but she can't buy me a new coat, but I know you can."

Donna, the mother of "two beautiful little girls whose father has deserted them," asked Santa to explain why her children wouldn't get presents this Christmas.

Coping with a full-time job and attending college, she wrote that some paydays she can't even afford food.

"What I would like is for Santa to write my girls and explain why Christmas is not just a time for presents but also a time for sharing and being with your family. It is so hard for children to understand why Santa skips our house."

By Christmas, the Postal Service estimates, 250,000 children will have sent letters to the North Pole.

Every year, many requests are opened at local post offices and passed on to his helpers — social service agencies, charities, community groups and people with deep pockets.

This Christmas, many of the letters are being opened by his elves in Atlanta, where the Coca-Cola Co. and its employees have contributed money and manpower to screen Santa's mail and to be sure he knows where he is most needed.

The company is donating 5 cents for each letter received, up to 2 million letters, to The Marine Corps Reserve Toys for Tots Program.

What are the elves reading? Letters like these.

Andy, 4, asked for a shaving kit, "so I could shave my face with daddy," and for "a pretend blender."

A note with no name — but Santa knows anyway, doesn't he? — asked how he and the reindeer were doing and then told him, just so he'd know, that "somebody here was a little bad this year, but it could not be me." The child with no name asked for a computer and cross-country skis, among other things.

Likewise, Caitlin wrote: "I have been a good girl. My brother has not."

Desiree asked for "a doll and a best friend." Katie said: "I just want to get my cast on my arm off. I also don't want my sister to get married."

Shayla wanted to be sure Santa had directions to her house.

"You come down a dead end street. You will see a store. Next to the store you will see a blue house. ... Ring the door bell because the door is locked."

Andrea, who wants a doll house and race cars, asked Santa "how you and your elves get all the presents delivered in one night." The Postal Service would probably like to know that too.

Noriega given more power

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega is moving to give himself a political title to match his power.

The 510-member People's Assembly, which the Defense Forces chief picked and now runs, planned to name him Panama's chief executive, formally giving Noriega greater powers than provisional President Francisco Rodriguez.

The assembly will give him the post today by a unanimous vote, predicted Isaac Chandeck, a delegate from the Panama City suburb of Ancon.

Rodriguez, a Noriega friend since high school who was picked as president after Noriega halted vote-counting in a popular election in May, backed the general for the new post Thursday.

Noriega annuled returns from the May 7 vote when they showed the opposition winning by a landslide. The move also blocked the election of a new National Assembly, so Noriega picked a new legislative body.

Noriega is wanted in the United States on federal drug-trafficking and money-laundering charges. The United States has been trying to oust him with economic sanctions and diplomatic pressure.

Rodriguez told the assembly Thursday that the United States had "declared war on all Panamanians" with its economic sanctions.

"It is not Noriega they want to do away with," Rodriguez said. "They want to do away with our national capacity to be independent."

Noriega has weathered more than a year of the sanctions, opposition demonstrations and two attempted coups from inside the Defense Forces.

As chief executive, Noriega would hold the same title as that of dictator Omar Torrijos, who negotiated treaties with the United States to transfer the Panama Canal to Panamanian control at the end of the century and close down U.S. military installations.

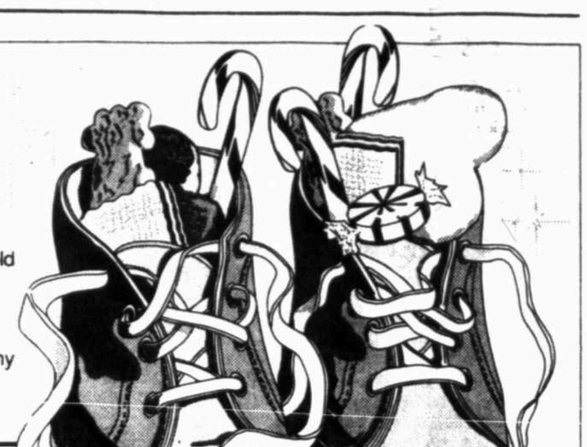

Noriega says the United States is trying to force his ouster because it wants to renege on the treaties.

In another move against the United States, Chandeck said he will be distributing "wanted" posters for two U.S. generals.

Chandeck has filed charges of destroying Panamanian property against Gen. Marc Cisneros, commander of U.S. Army South; and Gen. Maxwell Thurman, head of the U.S. Southern Command that includes all U.S. military forces in Latin America.

The generals were charged in Ancon, Chandeck's constituency. They were accused of destroying public property by driving armored personnel carriers on public roads and by other actions.

Who comes bearing gifts?

Colorful legends surround gift-giving during Christmas. Santa Claus comes from the old Dutch for St. Nicholas, one of the first bishops of the Christian Church who lived 1500 years ago in what is now Turkey. The patron saint of children, he visited homes on a donkey. Many countries have unique gift-bearers who bring Christmas gifts to children:

Holland

Sinterklaas (Saint Nicholas)

In Holland, Sinterklaas rides a white horse. With him is Zwarte Piet (Black Pete) who carries a rod to keep children in line. The two visit houses, leaving candy in shoes. On Christmas Eve, Sinterklaas hides gifts all over the house. Rhymes give children clues in their search for gifts which may be hidden under the bed or in the bathtub.

France

Pere Noel (Father Christmas)

Pere Noel and his assistant Pere Fouettard (Father Whip) visit on Dec. 6 to put gifts in shoes children leave by the fireplace. On Christmas Eve, some French children receive second gifts from le petit Jesus.

Soviet Union

D'yed Moroz (Grandfather Frost)

D'yed Moroz brings gifts on Jan. 1. With a white beard, fur-trimmed hat and red robe spangled with stars, he arrives at the Kremlin celebration aboard a Sputnik-drawn sleigh.

Denmark

Jule-Nissen (Christmas Elf)

In Denmark Jule-Nissen, a mischievous elf, lives in a manger in the stable and takes care of the family livestock. He arrives riding Jule-Buken (Christmas Goat).

Italy

La Befana (Old Witch)-

In Italy, a kind old witch brings gifts on the eve of Epiphany. La Befana who hesitated to follow the Wise Men, repents by flying on her broomstick giving candy and gifts to good children.

Czechoslovakia

Svaty Mikulas (Saint Nicholas)

Svaty Mikulas, patron saint of children, comes from heaven on a golden cord, escorted by an angel. By a rattling chain, he leads an evil spirit, Cert, in a black hood, carrying a whip. Children rush to say their prayers as they hear them coming.

Mexico

Los Tres Reyes (The Three Kings)

Los Tres Reyes, riding camels, bring gifts to children on Jan. 6. Children put straw out for the camels and leave shoes on balconies to be filled up with toys.

SANTA

Augustin, who has muscular dystrophy and can't walk, told Santa he'd like a remote-control race car, but added: "I am happy to receive anything you send me. I'm a teen-age boy who has been raised by my single mom who has taught me to be grateful."

Seven-year-old Edwin, confined to a wheelchair and with "health problems that keep me most of the time in the hospital," asked for clothes and a musical toy. He also put in a plug for his sister, who takes care of him like a "second mommy," and for his two brothers — "my best friends."

Jennifer, 2 years and 3 months old, wrote with an adult's help to ask for a pair of pants, shoes, "a jacket with a hat and a teddy bear."

She told Santa that she doesn't have a father and that her mother is 16. "I would like a gift from you because you are going to be my father," she added.

Among the requests — for doll houses and race cars, for a best friend and a sister who won't marry, for shoes and a warm coat — was a postcard in an adult hand from a ritzy hotel in San Francisco.

Marie wrote:

"Thank you so very much for all you do for all the people in the world. I'm very content in life. I don't want to ask for anything. I'd just like to encourage you to keep up the good work!"

She drew a heart next to her name.

SAKHAROV

Bonner, his strength and his companion during the years of struggle and exile, sat in a chair next to the body. A few close friends were admitted to the apartment, said a friend who spoke on condition he not be identified.

Just hours before he died, Sakharov stood on the floor of the Congress of People's Deputies and demanded that opposition delegates form an alternative party to the Communists.

He told his fellow opposition congressmen that Gorbachev and the Communist Party leadership were "leading the country to catastrophe, prolonging the process of perestroika many years."

It was the latest call in his final cause: to end seven decades of guaranteed Communist supremacy.

Vitaly I. Vorotnikov, a member of the Presidium of the Congress, opened today's session with an announcement of the death of one of the chamber's best-known deputies, a man who was officially vilified for decades.

He paid tribute to Sakharov both as a scientist and public figure.

"All that he did was dictated by his sleepless conscience, his deep humanitarian convictions," said Vorotnikov, a member of the Communist Party Politburo and president of the Russian Federation.

Gorbachev joined the Congress in standing for a moment of silence out of respect for the Congress member.

Dmitri Likhachev, another scholar-deputy, told the chamber: "With Sakharov, a part of our heart has departed from us."

Yankelevich told reporters at the apartment that his father-in-law "died last night of what the doctors say was a heart attack. We don't exactly know the cause of death yet."

Yankelevich said Sakharov had left his apartment about 9 p.m. to go downstairs to another apartment in the same building, where he had a study crammed with books and papers from his scientific and political careers.

Sakharov had suffered from angina, but during a visit to the United States in December 1988, doctors at Massachusetts General Hospital determined he did not need heart surgery or a pacemaker after cardiovascular tests.

He had aged visibly in recent months, which were busy with international speaking trips and his work as a member of the new, competitively elected Congress.

A White House statement today hailed Sakharov as a historic figure whose voice "was an important dimension in the contemporary changes under way in Soviet society."

Human rights activist Natan Sharansky, who spent nine years in Soviet labor camps before immigrating to Israel in 1986, told Israel radio today that Sakharov "had tremendous influence ... among dissidents, among free people in the Soviet Union and who by his own personal example helped change the whole climate in the Soviet Union."

In Strasbourg, France, the European Parliament unanimously paid tribute today to Sakharov, whose name it had given to its Human Rights Prize.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III, attending a NATO summit in Brussels, Belgium, said: "He was a tremendous force for peace and freedom."

The Congress formed a committee to organize Sakharov's funeral, the official Tass news agency said. It was a reflection of Sakharov's trek from his years as a lonely voice opposed to Kremlin policies to again becoming a honored member of society.

Born May 21, 1921, Sakharov's first became known as a great scientist, inducted into the Academy of Sciences in 1953 at age 32, the youngest-ever member. Like his father, he became a physicist.

In 1948, he joined physicist Igor Tamm in developing the hydrogen bomb and for 20 years lived and worked in secrecy, with privileges that included a good apartment, driver, high salary and government awards. But Sakharov began to worry about the morality of developing weapons of mass destruction.

He had his first brush with top Soviet officials in 1961, when he appealed to Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev to stop nuclear weapons tests. Khrushchev responded that scientists shouldn't meddle in politics.

After Sakharov formed the Human Rights Committee in 1970, he became better known as a dissident leader, clashing with four Kremlin leaderships over human rights, foreign policy and the morality of the nuclear weaponry he helped create.

She said the decorations have a special meaning for her this year in light of her close call.

"I don't want to be too mushy about this, because I'm not a mushy person," she said. "But looking at this lets me reflect back on the past and the many years I've put into the district. It's very meaningful."

She said she would like to put in many more years, but now she takes a more day-to-day approach to life. She has new appreciation for the people she works with and the effort they make.

Her co-workers have a deep appreciation for her, too.

Scharbauer administrative intern Robbie King, who filled in during Ms. Williams' absence, said she was on the phone with her every day during her absence to confer about running the school.

"It was just very sudden and everybody was very upset," Ms. King said about Ms. Williams' illness. "She is the most important member of this team. She makes all her people feel special."

Scharbauer first-grade teacher Louann Payne agreed.

"It's a wonderful place to work and everyone seems cooperative, especially at Christmas time," she said. "Ms. Williams is a wonderful leader."

Scharbauer pupils, who have contributed to a 1,700-can mountain of food for the needy in the Scharbauer cafeteria, are glad to have their principal back.

Jessica Johnson, 10, a hostess for the open house, said Ms. Williams is "very helpful."

"I like her a lot," she said. "She's real sweet to me."

Fifth-grader Mario Sanchez echoed the sentiment.

"She tries to make this school the best in Midland," he said.

Rodeo Drive shops offer off-beat gifts for the rich

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Velvet-wrapped chunks of the Berlin Wall, pottery animals that sprout green coats and dolls to stick on car windows just won't do as gifts for the well-heeled and adventurous this holiday season.

There is an abundance of offbeat gifts this Christmas, particularly for the indulgent rich whose urgent needs are inspired by Madison Avenue, Rodeo Drive window displays and chic catalogs.

How about a gift with spirit? Jurgensen's offers Angels Share fine Scotch whisky in an etched Baccarat crystal decanter for $8,650 a bottle. One buyer was Dan Marcheano, owner of The Arches Restaurant in Newport Beach.

"We aren't cracking that sucker open right now, I'll tell you that. I'm not about to say, 'Would you like a $750 shot of whiskey?' " said Marcheano, who put the precious elixir in a lighted display case.

The car culture dictates the wish-list for fast-lane crazies, and Beverly Hills Motoring Accessories provides drive-time necessities for those on the fast track. There's a $1,200 car fax machine, $2,100 Recaro leather seat, $100 monogrammed floor mats and a $1,500, foot-long crystal Ferrari.

For the kid who has almost everything, there's a half-scale Ferrari Testarossa that reaches a maximum speed of 30 mph. It goes out the door for $15,000 and change, and it has a trunk to store the youngster's Nintendo games.

The Nintendo video cartridges are by far the season's most popular stocking stuffers, with "Off-Road," "Super Mario Bros. II" and "Teen-Age Mutant Ninja Turtles" the absolute gotta-haves, according to video distributor Clardy Malugen, president of Tri-Coast International.

Youngsters accustomed to getting everything on a platinum platter can join their socially correct little pals in winter fun with a minimum of strain. The Hammacher Schlemmer catalogue offers a $20 hands-free snowball maker that "helps eliminate wet gloves and cold hands for safer, more comfortable winter fun." There's also an $80 folding toboggan.

An airborne holiday captures the imagination of some. Heli-LA promises an evening to remember for $189, which includes a stretch limousine, candlelight dinner and a helicopter flight along the coast and Beverly Hills.

Celebrities such as Dan Aykroyd, James Coburn and Heather Locklear are among those who have enjoyed a $500-per-couple evening presented by Amy Tunick and Matthew Sarver.

A Swedish massage kicks off the four-hour evening, which includes a gourmet feast. "It's right in step with the trend toward cocooning," said Tunick, referring to upscale couch potatoes.

There are $1,500 embroidered shawls at Federico in Santa Monica, and Pasadena's Belladonna boutique offers $298 bronze sequin jackets that promise to "dazzle her into the 1990s."

The holiday buying binge doesn't overlook the age of glasnost. A Soviet watch for $100 is offered in Spiegel's catalog, which is titled "Candice Bergen's 42 Last Minute Holiday Gift Ideas." The mail-order booklet also features a $2,950 Lindbergh Longines watch.

A $5,200 reversible mink and black leather blouson jacket was the rage at the Beverly Hills Mr. Guy store on snooty Rodeo Drive. And the glasnost theme returns with a $1,050, angora and wool blend Russian-style overcoat.

For those who want a gift that keeps on giving, Los Angeles-based Revenge a la Carte may offer a solution. For about $30, Allen Pool will put a victim's name on the mailing lists of 20 religious organizations. For the same price, he'll deliver a voodoo doll, dead flowers or a rotting sea bass.

And for $150, he'll send a pregnant woman to crash a wedding reception and tell the groom: "Don't pretend you don't know me!"

Was Santa legitimate, or did he take 'escape Claus'?

HOUSTON (AP) — Santa Claus says his helpers mugged him, knocked him down, pulled off his beard and took his goodies.

But the homeless, whom he was supposed to be helping, say Santa took off with donations meant for them and was last seen heading toward a crack house.

Either way, everyone's best laid plans went awry after Charles Russell, also known as Santa Claus, began collecting donations Monday from passing motorists.

Russell, 53, who said he has worked as a Santa since 1987, said he was walking in his Santa suit by the homeless encampment underneath Interstate 45 Monday when several of the people there approached him.

"I don't have any money either," Russell said. "I'm down to two pair of pants myself and no food, and I was just going around downtown, looking for somebody who might need a Santa and some of these guys came up to me.

"They said they'd split with me if I'd collect stuff from people for them."

Russell said he and an unknown helper "did it for a couple of days. I'd stand out by the street with my bag and people would drive up and give me stuff, you know, money, cans of food, clothes, and he'd hold the bag.

"It was OK for a couple of days, but I guess they got greedy or jealous or something. This afternoon (Tuesday) about four or five of them kept following me up and down. Finally, they started hecklin' me when I'd get anything.

"Then, just when somebody gave me some money, they knocked me down and took it and pulled off my beard.

"I just went home after that. They got me so upset."

Some of those who live under the interstate, however, disagree with Russell's account.

"Man, nobody knocked him down," said Joseph Ledale. "He was out there collectin' and the first thing I knew somebody yelled, 'Look, Santa just took off with the bag!'

"We watched him and he headed off down toward a McDonald's and across the street toward a crack house.

"That's the last we saw of him."

Russell says that's the last they will see of him.

"I'm not going back there," he said. "That's not the way you expect to be treated when you're just being a Santa."

Universe of castoffs finds new home in 'Cosmic Shed'

By CHARLOTTE LINDSEY

HENDERSON, Texas (AP) — UFO beings stare from every wall. The shadows leap from behind chairs and around corners. The doors creak from rusty hinges and the eerie footsteps from above send chills down the spines of mere mortals.

Then suddenly, the sun darts in the windows and realization hits: it was just the imagination playing tricks as the Cosmic Shed lights up with brazen colors, bold statements and the beauty of art.

The Cosmic Shed is Fred Rogers' personal collection of the quirky and unusual. He keeps it as a private art museum on his approximately 300 acres of land, and opens it to the public on Sunday afternoons.

The strange building began in 1983 with an idea to try to salvage some discarded materials.

"I had access to some honorably retired telephone poles and some old buildings (on his land) which were going to fall down that I thought I should salvage and I tried to think to something interesting to build. I gradually came up with a design of this building," Rogers said.

He said having the telephone poles led to the basic pyramid shape he used.

Rogers says he named his structure "The Cosmic Shed," because it seemed "more and more appropriate as it came along.

"The name is kind of like the building, unusual. The idea of something cosmic is interesting. These two words (cosmic and shed) go together," he said.

"It's like trying to achieve the marriage of the ridiculous and the sublime. That's often what an artist is trying to do, take something mundane and present it so we can see more than what we usually see."

The four-story building is made almost completely out of refuse, and filled with art, old books, old records, junk mementos and "Cosmic Laws."

"Everyone is entitled to come up with a cosmic law. These laws are never new, sometimes they are just reworded," said Rogers.

"Everyone has their own cosmic laws. They may not call them that, but they are things they take to be truth and things they live by," he said.

Rogers said the most important cosmic law to him at this time is "Consumerism consumes consumers."

"This is most important because consumerism is destroying us. If we don't reverse that and start wasting less and using less, we're killing ourselves," he said.

"It's all around us. Our water has become undrinkable, the air is soon going to become unbreathable, the soil is already being poisoned and we know it. We have so much trash now, one of the biggest problems our country faces is where to put it.

"It's something I tried to say in the building; we should be reusing things instead of creating more trash," he said. "It (the building) enriches my life."

He said some of the things displayed in his Cosmic Shed were "trash from my garage."

He has pieced together a "supercharged timecycle" from pieces of a bicycle and motorcycle, an electric motor, an alarm clock and different things he just "stuck together," and that runs "only in my wildest imagination."

Sketches, busts, paintings and pictures of UFO beings are displayed in every room.

"UFOs have been an interest of mine for more than 40 years and they've just grown more mysterious as the years go by.

Current special session ends with talk of the next one

AUSTIN (AP) — The ink was barely dry on the workers' compensation reform bill, which took 11 months to pass, before talk at the Texas Capitol turned to lawmakers' next special session.

Gov. Bill Clements said that session will be called in March to deal with the school finance system, which the Texas Supreme Court found unconstitutional.

Wednesday, Clements hinted that more subjects could be considered, and some legislative leaders said they expect a lengthy agenda

"The reason I'm calling it is with respect to the educational problems that we have. What we'll add later is a matter of considerable discussion between the lieutenant governor, and the speaker and myself," he said.

House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, predicted that a number of issues will be considered. He said he expects "a mini-regular session" next spring.

Court orders are dogging lawmakers on several issues.

The thorniest is school finance, which the Supreme Court said must be addressed by May 1.

A special task force is studying the issue, and several plans have been offered. But all require more money — up to $10.5 billion over five years — at a time when the state's budget already is tight.

That issue will have top priority, Clements said. "There are no plans (for other topics) at this point," he said.

But Lewis and other lawmakers said they see several issues that could wind up receiving consideration.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton of Midland recently declared that the at-large system of electing state judges in nine Texas counties dilutes minorities' voting rights. He has indicated that he might stop the 1990 elections if changes aren't made.

Lewis also suggested that Clements might open the March session to consideration of an ethics bill.

SHED

"More than 40 years ago, I was trying to make a little money between semesters in college, so I could return to college," he said.

"I was driving an oil field truck between Midland and Odessa and it was just at dawn one morning when I saw a large green fireball move from one horizon to the other.

"Before I could stop my truck and roll the window down to try to hear and see it better, it had already disappeared over the horizon.

He said he made a point of checking the newspapers to following day and "it was seen by a lot of people.

"Several months later, Life magazine had an illustration of one of these green fireballs on its cover. This was something that was happening in various parts of the United States, but no one understood it.

"That's where my interest started, and I still don't understand it and I don't think anyone else does. It's just a challenging mystery to try and understand."

Inside the Cosmic Shed on the first floor, various paintings from different artists, different mementos and different 'junk' hangs from the walls. There is old wheelchair, a Vietnamese hat and a prison ball that sits prominently on the floor.

A door to the right leads to the living quarters of the building, which is the only part of the Cosmic Shed that is not complete. Rogers plans include a bedroom, bathroom and "adequate" kitchen.

On the second floor, a ping-pong table is surrounded by various pieces of art and odds and ends made by Rogers or given to him by different friends.

The third floor is a small room with one window looking out over the front. On the wall opposite the window is another Cosmic Law that says: "You are here, the middle of nowhere or the center of the cosmos, the choice is always yours."

Climbing the curling stairs to the fourth and final floor, a visitor would find a single chair, facing a table with a Bible on top, opened to the New Testament.

"I'm a Jesus freak — I mean in a good sense," said Rogers. "As the years go by, I find myself returning to reading the Bible and each time I hear Jesus a little better.

"I have more and more sympathy for people who say this is the answer, as long as they don't get intolerant of people who don't find their answers correct.

"There is a lot of beauty in the Bible," he said. "Especially in the New Testament."

A door leading to the catwalk around the outside of the fourth story is made completely of glass, as are the four surrounding walls.

In the front of the Cosmic Shed is trash sculpture, made exclusively by Rogers.

"I began my trash sculptures a couple of years after I began the building," he said. "The first thing I put up was the wind chimes.

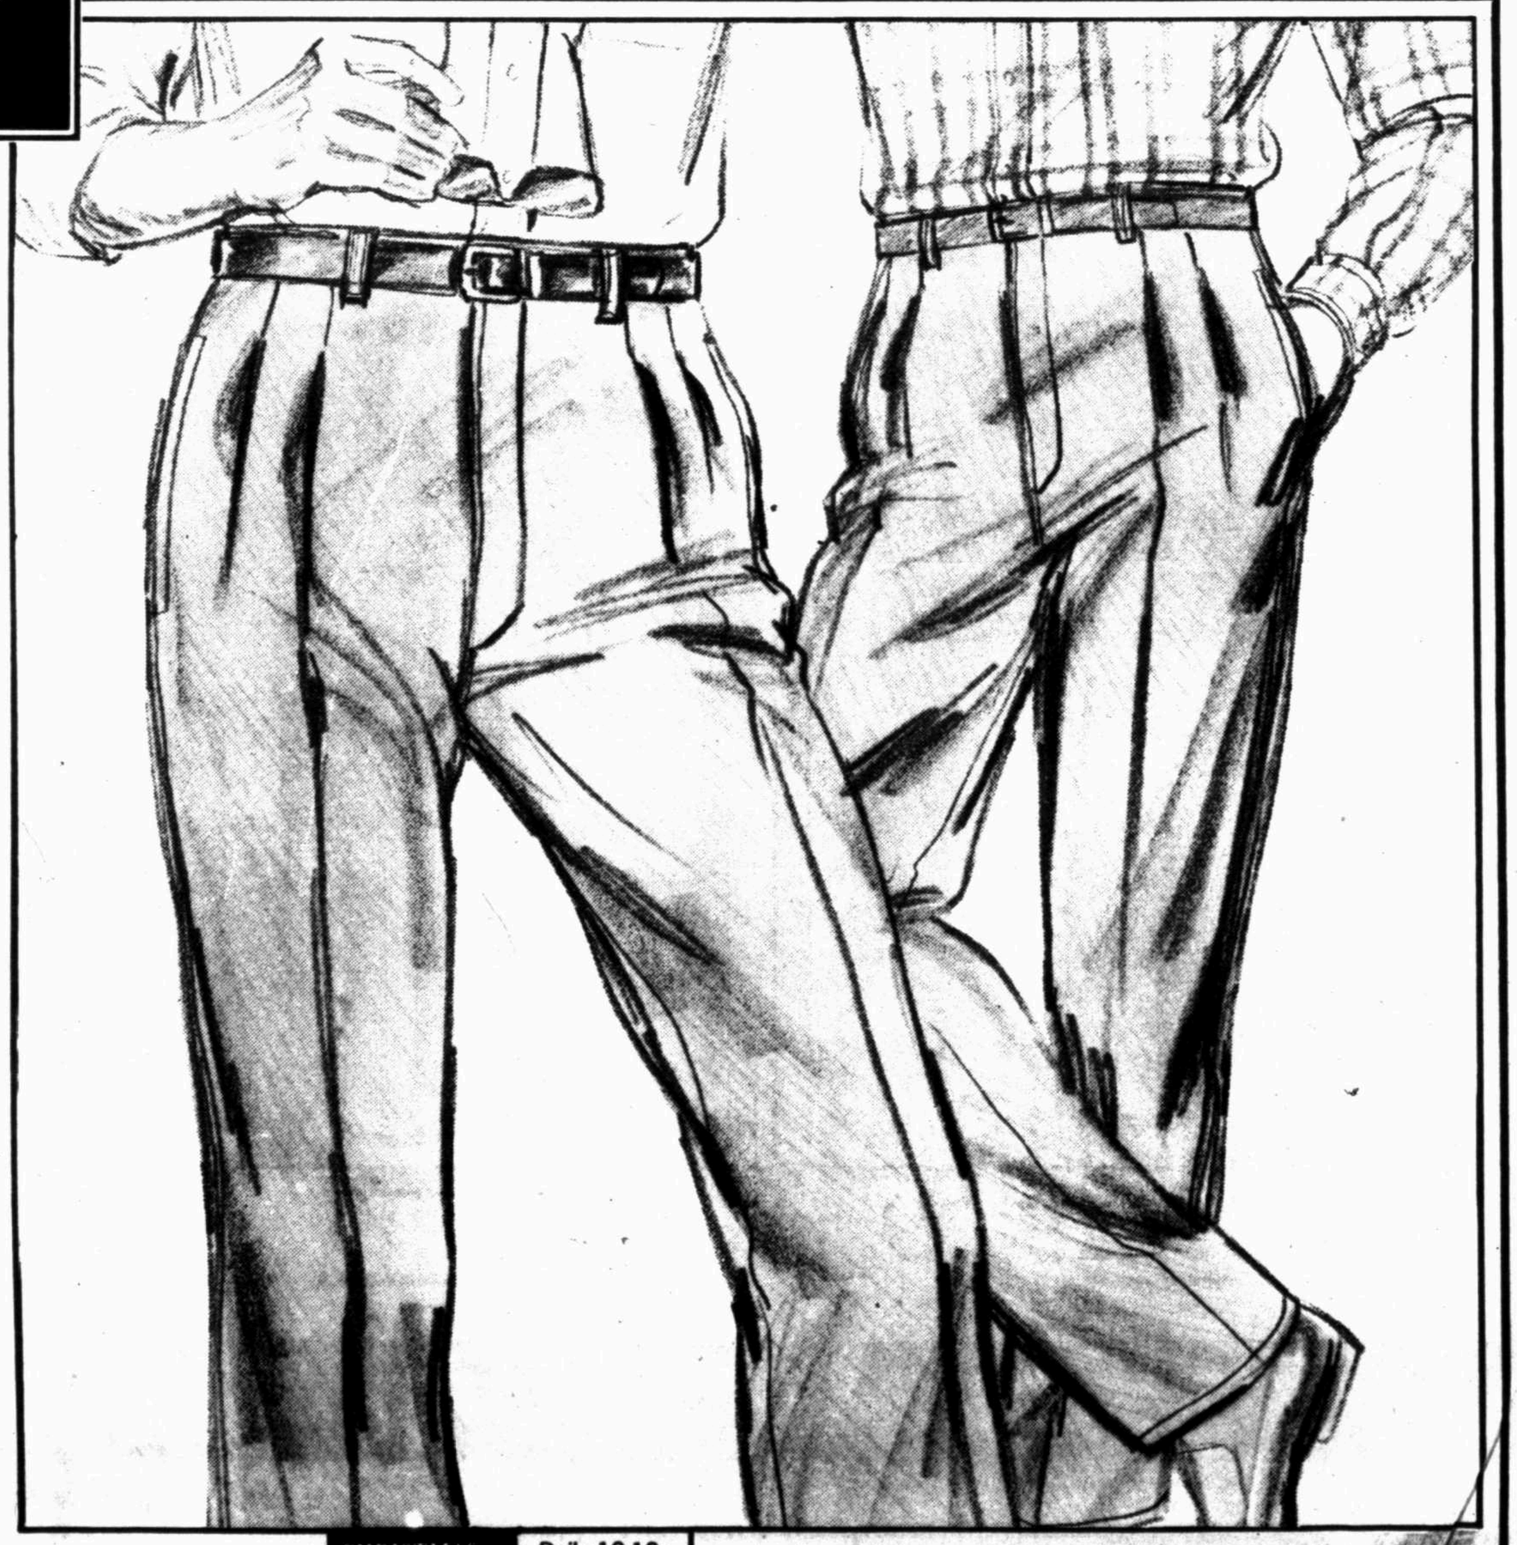

"I has some stuff I wanted to clear out of the way and I thought I'd make a wind chime that would blow in the wind, but it'd have to be a heavy wind."

Casolo gets hero's welcome, declares innocence

THOMASTON, Conn. (AP) — Jennifer Casolo received a hero's welcome and proclaimed she was innocent of hiding munitions in her yard in El Salvador as she greeted 350 residents who turned out in freezing cold to cheer her return.

Casolo

Casolo, who said she maintained neutrality while giving visiting Americans tours of El Salvador during four years there, said Thursday night she will speak out against U.S. aid to the Salvadoran government now that she has been expelled.

Casolo arrived in Miami on Wednesday, then flew Thursday to New York, where she fielded questions from reporters at LaGuardia Airport before being driven the 75 miles to Thomaston in a Cadillac with Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., who had lobbied for her release from a Salvadoran prison.

Casolo embraced her father, John Casolo, and met close friends and relatives, including her brother, John, who were waiting for her in the Town Hall of the town of 7,000 people.

"I want to thank each and every one of you from the bottom of my heart for all the prayers and letters," John Casolo told the crowd outside. "You've really made this the merriest Christmas we've ever had."

Jennifer Casolo, standing on a flatbed truck draped in red, white and blue bunting, wished the crowd "Feliz Navidad" and — when a sound system failure forced her to use a big megaphone — joked about her days as a cheerleader at Thomaston High School.

She left El Salvador Wednesday after a judge dropped terrorism charges against her for lack of evidence and ordered her deported.

Casolo, who worked in El Salvador for the Christian Educational Seminars since 1985, was arrested Nov. 26 after authorities raided her rented house and unearthed dynamite, grenades and more than 20,000 rounds of ammunition from the garden.

She said her tribulations were minor compared to those of the Salvadoran people, 70,000 of whom have died in a decadelong civil war. But the disrespect with which U.S. authorities dealt with her case demonstrated their cynicism toward El Salvador's people, she said

"It's shameful. It's disgraceful," she said in New York. "How can the Bush administration say they're working to create a just society in El Salvador when they can't even treat an American citizen with the rights of a just society?

"I tried to convey to the Salvadoran police that a person is innocent until provent guilty but I didn't know that American officials weren't giving me that right."

Bush administration officials did not press for her release and had said they thought she was probably guilty.

Casolo said she had a great love for the Salvadoran people and would not "feel free" until all political prisoners were released there.

The Salvadorans "deserve a country where they can eat, where their children can go to school, where they don't have to worry about being dragged away in the middle of the night," Casolo said.

Salvadoran President Alfredo Cristiani said he was convinced of her guilt, despite her release. Asked about that Thursday night, Casolo said simply, "I'm innocent."

She went on: "Maybe those weapons were there. Maybe a Salvadoran guerrilla tipped them off ... but there's just as much possibility that they beat the hell out of someone to get them to say it — and excuse my language."

Of the weapons cache, she said, "I don't know if it was there, if they put it there or if someone else put it there and I don't think I'll ever know."

Casolo urged an end to U.S. military aid to El Salvador.

"For four years I worked in El Salvador. ... During that time I kept my mouth shut," she said. "It's time for me to talk, so that others better understand what has happened."

After the official homecoming at Town Hall, Casolo headed for a private reunion with her mother, Audrey Casolo, who did not attend the welcome ceremony because she wanted to greet her daughter privately.

NATION

"I want to thank each and every one of you from the bottom of my heart for all the prayers and letters. You've really made this the merriest Christmas we've ever had."

Appalachian water floods upscale market

LINDSIDE, W.Va. (AP) — From smart shops in Tokyo to the White House dinner table, water from the mineral springs of Appalachia suddenly has cachet, and West Virginia bottlers are helping quench the thirst of the health-conscious.

Water straight out of these hills is just plain good and good for you, they say.

"Out West, they look at West Virginia as a wild, untouched area," says Tim Greider, managing director of Quibell Corp., bottler of the state's best-known mineral water. "They aren't concerned with pollution from West Virginia. We find that to be a good selling factor."

Janet McMillion, co-owner of the smaller Nu-Mint Springs Co. in Lindside, agrees.

"A lot of people in other states and different cities like New York think West Virginia is wilderness," she says.

Geary Campbell, spokeswoman for the International Bottled Water Association in Alexandria, Va., says the $2 billion industry has grown dramatically in recent years.

"We've seen over the past decade a growth of up to 500 percent in sales," Campbell says. "In 1988 alone, the bottled water market grew by 14.9 percent in terms of sales, which was an increase over all other beverage segments."

By far the most successful operation has been in rural Monroe County, about 140 miles southeast of Charleston, where Quibell captures 12,000 gallons of mineral water daily and trucks it 40 miles over Peters Mountain to Roanoke, Va. It is bottled and shipped in Virginia.

Greider's company has increased its profits by 250 percent since August 1987 and has more than 200 distributors across the nation.

The executive says bottled water is becoming more popular because it's no longer a drink for just the well-to-do.

"People are concerned with what they consume. We're finding that mineral water is becoming more mainstream to the American public," Greider says. "It's the fastest growing segment in the beverage industry."

Quibell, which is sold throughout the United States, was the first U.S. mineral water to be exported and can be found on store shelves in Japan and the Middle East.

Mineral water from West Virginia is even served to President Bush and his guests, says Dennis Freemyer, an assistant usher at the White House.

There are eight companies in West Virginia bottling water and officials say that number will grow.

"I certainly think it has a potential of becoming a fairly sizable industry that could greatly contribute to the state economy," says Ron Forren, director of the state's public health and sanitation division.

Nu-Mint Springs is the latest West Virginia company to get into the market, spending $400,000 for a water bottling plant in southwestern Monroe County.

"It's going to pay off. This business is real profitable," McMillion says. "It's providing jobs in the area. It's giving us some self-esteem and southern West Virginia needs self-esteem."

Forren says West Virginia's large number of springs and heavy concentration of limestone makes it a natural for producing mineral water.

"The minerals in the springs and the bacteriological quality of the water apparently make it just a good, sweet-tasting water that individuals like," he says.

Bill Clark, the Monroe County extension agent, says many of the hundreds of springs located in his county have high-quality water.

"We have tested the water and you can almost advertise that it has zero percent sodium, it's that low," Clark says. "The good things that water should have, it has in it."

California, Texas and Florida lead the nation in bottled water consumption, averaging 19 gallons per capita per year, while the national consumption rate is 6.4 gallons.

Bill Deal, executive vice president of the bottled water association, says production rankings for each state aren't available.

Driver apologizes to parents of bus victims

CARROLLTON, Ky. (AP) — The man charged with killing 27 people in what police call the nation's worst alcohol-related traffic accident publicly apologized for an act he claims to be unable to recall.

Testifying Thursday in front of a chart with the victims' photographs and names, Larry Mahoney said he had no recollection of driving the wrong way on Interstate 71 on May 14, 1988, and colliding with the packed church bus.

"It's a fact I was involved in an accident, but I don't remember seeing the bus," Mahoney said. "I remember waking up in the hospital."

He concluded his 70 minutes on the witness stand by apologizing to the survivors and families of those maimed or killed in the disaster.

"I really am sorry and I mean this," Mahoney said, his voice tight with emotion. "I know it's not going to make you feel any different toward me."

Members of the victims' families, and Mahoney's family, broke into tears.

Behind Mahoney was a large seating chart of the church bus that carried 67 passengers, the names of those killed designated with a black letter "D."

Mahoney faces multiple life sentences if convicted of the charges: 27 counts of murder, 42 counts of wanton endangerment, 12 counts of assault and a count of drunken driving.

Defense attorney Russell Baldani said Mahoney was relieved after taking the stand.

"He didn't have to tell me. ... It was readily apparent," Baldani said.

The trial recessed until Monday, when both defense and prosecution will call rebuttal witnesses.

Mahoney, a factory worker, said he was upset the day of the crash over a variety of personal problems: his attempts to reconcile with his estranged wife, Janice; his declaration of bankruptcy because of large medical bills for a daughter's health problems; and attempts, thwarted by bad credit, to buy a new trailer for his family.

Mahoney said the problems were not an excuse for his drinking and driving.

Prosecutor Paul Richwalsky Jr., said of Mahoney's testimony:

"When you compare bankruptcy, and how do I get a double-wide trailer ... to the fact that you no longer have a son or a daughter, or the survivors who will wear the badges of his mistake for the rest of their lives, it sort of pales in significance."

Mahoney described stopping for beer at two bars and a liquor store on the Saturday afternoon of the crash and drinking with friends and while driving to see an ex-girlfriend, his parents and a friend.

He described asking for a beer at a small party after giving a friend the keys to his truck. No beer was available, and a man offered him a mixed drink. A clear liquid Mahoney couldn't identify was poured into a glass.

U.S. should not bail out dictators

Fidel Castro may be crazy but he is not stupid.

That is why his recent speech assailing Soviet perestroika should be viewed with cold analysis and perspective. The Cuban dictator has not remained in power for three decades by attacking Mikhail Gorbachev and other Soviet leaders — even though his rambling ranting did not name Gorbachev.

Castro accused Soviet and other communist leaders of "slandering socialism, destroying its values, discrediting the party and liquidating its leading role. ..." He pledged to ignore the reforms of Soviet and Eastern European communism, even if it meant parting with his allies.

Yet Moscow subsidizes the Cuban economy to the tune of about $5 billion a year and spends other billions sending arms to Havana. Castro likely would fall if Moscow cut off such aid, and he knows it. So, is he crazy in attacking Soviet leadership?

Yes, crazy like a fox.

The Soviets grumble in Moscow about their big subsidies to Cuba. And well they should, because the money is coming from their people and is hindering their ability to invigorate their economy. Also, Western Europe and the United States, in particular, do not wish to assist Moscow and the East Bloc if they are still funding Havana.

What Gorbachev and Castro are saying is that the Cuban dictator is uncontrollable. That is just what Gorbachev also said of Nicaragua. It would be stupid for Washington to believe such a fairy tale, but that is precisely what Moscow and Havana are trying to get the West to swallow.

Before President Bush rushes into any new aid to Gorbachev and company, he must tell the Soviets that the American people refuse to bail out Cuba and Nicaragua. Such aid could allow Gorbachev to free Soviet funds to do just that. If Washington does not insist on a firm commitment from the Soviet leader, we are the ones who are crazy and stupid.

JACK ANDERSON

U.S. aid vulnerable to Communist graft

WASHINGTON — The glow is still on for Lech Walesa in Washington, and American greenbacks will soon start flowing to Poland. But some American grinches are quietly expressing concern.

Jack Anderson

The problem, said one American with 10 years of experience trading with East Bloc nations, is that there is virtually no one in the Polish government who can be trusted with the nearly two-thirds of a billion dollars that the United States will provide.

"Sure, the old bosses are gone, but the bureaucrats that ruined Poland are still shuffling the papers," a businessman confided between his trips to Eastern Europe. George Bush advised caution on the cash, and "for once, George Bush is right," the businessman told us.

"The only solution," he said, only half in jest, "is to give about 200,000 Polish government workers good old American golden parachutes."

What he meant was that the aid will go down a rat hole unless thousands of hacks are retired from Poland's domestic and foreign economic departments. For many, the only qualification that got them a job was Communist Party membership.

The money won't simply be misspent by incompetents. There is a great deal of bribery, embezzlement and other corruption in the Polish contracting offices.

Walesa and Congress hope to encourage large-scale private enterprise in Poland, but even U.S. government officials acknowledge that there is no Polish infrastructure through which factories and service industries can be built up.

The problem is not unique to Poland, the businessman told us.

"In Hungary, if 4 percent of private entrepreneurs know what they're doing, I'd be surprised, and they've been trying it for years," he said. "In Poland, no one has the faintest idea how to set up a large private commercial operation."

The answer, according to optimistic U.S. officials, is for American industries to send experts to Poland and other Eastern European countries to help set up companies.

But more hardheaded American traders say any American consultants would run smack into almost 50 years of unrepealed communist regulations.

"The East Bloc bureaucrats' jobs are filling out forms, interpreting regulations, delaying," said the trading source, who is also a U.S. government adviser. "And even if they got rid of these guys, who would fill their shoes?"

BUYING PRIVATE DATA — With a few keystrokes on the computer, vast amounts of information can be gleaned about a person's credit, health, finances and employment. The nation's largest credit-reporting agency, TRW Inc., has made millions of dollars gathering credit information for companies.

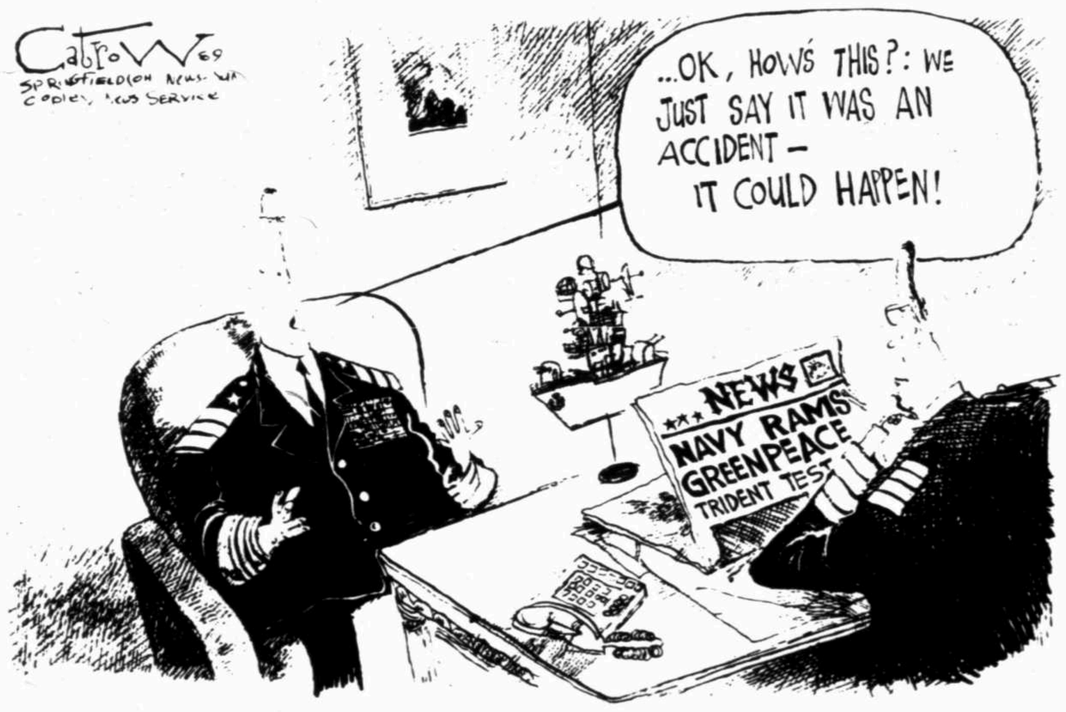

Now TRW is making money at the other end of the data chain — selling credit reports to the people who are the subjects of those reports. For an annual fee of $35, TRW Credentials will provide an annual credit report and a list of the people who have asked to see that person's file. TRW expects to have 1 million subscribers by the end of the year.

The potential market is limitless. A survey of Fortune 500 companies found that 60 percent admitted routinely disclosing computerized information on employees to non-government agencies without telling the employees. Another 40 percent said they collected information on their employees without telling them either.

David Linowes, who directed the survey and was chairman of the U.S. Privacy Protection Study Commission in the 1970s, questions whether TRW should be making more money on the privacy problem that it helped create.

Linowes is lobbying for a national privacy-protection act that would require confidentiality of employee medical files, access by individuals to their own files and disclosure of who else has requested those files.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Truth bared about nude dancing clubs

Immediately upon hearing that the Georgia Supreme Court had thrown out a law passed by the state Legislature in 1988 making it illegal to serve alcohol in Atlanta's widely acclaimed nude dancing parlors, I called my friend Rigsby, the man about town.

Lewis Grizzard

Had the law been upheld, the result likely would have been the closing of the clubs, once described as "internationally famous" by none other than the staid Wall Street Journal.

As for me, I do not frequent such places, preferring to remain home in the evenings trying to figure out the puzzles on "Wheel of Fortune," then switching to the Arts and Entertainment channel to watch a good World War II documentary.

But not Rigsby. He is a regular at many of the clubs and has spent so much time looking at the nude dancers, he is currently at work on a book about the female anatomy titled, "Mine Eyes Have Seen the Glory." (His first title choice was "A Tale of Two... ," but I talked him out of that one.)

Since the clubs received so much publicity after the law was passed, I figure business will pick up even more now, and I asked Rigsby what he might say to first-time visitors who don't know the ropes.

"I would be glad to help," said Rigsby. "First, don't try to see all the dancers at once."

"And why not?" I asked.

"Neck injury," he said. "A rookie walked into one club one night and there were 38 girls dancing in the nude. Rather than focusing on just one or two, he went for the entire enchilada and his head got stuck backwards."

"I saw the 'Exorcist,' " I said. "This is a serious matter. What became of the man whose head was stuck backwards?"

"He went to a chiropractor who turned his coat around," said Rigsby.

I continued my questions.

"The girls don't actually get completely naked, do they?"

"As jaybirds," answered Rigsby.

"I recall seeing strippers..."

"It's 'dancers,' " Rigsby interrupted. "The term 'strippers' is no longer operable. These ladies do not start with enough clothing on to be called strippers."

"Whatever," I said. "My question is, in the old days, such ladies tended to be slightly overweight, with holes in their stockings and a lot of bruises. What do today's dancers look like?"

"They'd make Vanna White look like a boy," said Rigsby. "You've simply got to get out more often. The war's been over nearly 50 years."

"But what about drugs and prostitution?" I asked. "The state Legislature was quite concerned that such places would encourage the sale of drugs and prostitution."

"If it's drugs and prostitution you want, you have to go all the way out to the suburbs," said Rigsby.

"But isn't there a lot of, well, fondling going on?"

"Touch one of the dancers and a guy named Bruno will do the 'Beguine' on your head."

I had only one more question:

"You make the clubs seem quite appealing. Aren't they terribly crowded?"

"Only when the state Legislature is in session," he said. "Then, you can't get a seat."

CHARLEY REESE

Israeli dissident's argues for talking with PLO

I try to refrain from giving advice to foreign leaders. Nothing strikes me as more laughable, absurd and egotistical than for an American journalist, ensconced in his little ivory tower, to offer advice to foreign leaders who do not even know that he exists and wouldn't care a whit if they did.

Charley Reese

On a more serious note, no American has the right to meddle in the affairs of other countries, even vicariously. I try to confine myself to explaining why some foreign leaders do what they do and don't do — and how that affects us.

So what follows is reporting, not my opinion. It is a summary of the opinion of Yehoshafat Harkabi, former head of Israeli military intelligence, whose book, "Israel's Fateful Hour," has been published in English by Harper & Row.

Israel, being a democracy, has its cranks — communists, for example, who generally spout the Arab line just as our own communists spout the Moscow line. These people, loyal neither to their country nor to real solutions, should be disregarded.

Israel, being a democracy, also has its responsible dissenters from current policy and Harkabi is one of these. Moreoever, it should be noted, that from Israel's hard experiences, it has produced moderates who are tough as steel and as unlike the wimpy American version as acid is unlike whipped cream.

So when Harkabi argues that Israel should negotiate with the PLO and agree — in advance of the negotiations — to an independent Palestinian state on the West Bank and Gaza, then people interested in the Middle East should pay attention. Harkabi is not a man who wants peace at any price or peace for the sake of peace. He is a man vitally interested in Israel's survival.

The gist of his argument is this: first, Israel can neither annex the West Bank nor continue to rule it indefinitely. It has the military power, but the price would be the loss of Israeli democracy and the loss of support of other nations without which Israel cannot survive. There is no chance that Palestinians can be forced to accept continued Israeli occupation.

Secondly, there is no one to talk to except the PLO. Harkabi, who is certainly an expert and up to date on Arab affairs, says that Palestinians, even if they do not agree with PLO tactics, nevertheless unanimously support the PLO as their spokesman and that the Arab governments are united in their support of it as the representatives of the Palestinians.

Thirdly, Harkabi believes there have been significant changes in the Arab position and in the position of the PLO. He believes, however, that while Israeli moderates can hold their positions indefinitely, the Palestinian moderates cannot. In other words if progress is delayed, the Palestinian moderates in the PLO will be defeated. He even says that both Palestinian and Israeli radicals will try to delay settlement for precisely that reason.

Finally, he believes that time is not on the side of Israel; delays will only weaken Israel's position and result in a situation far worse than can be obtained now. He warns both Israelis and Jews elsewhere that it is not a choice between good and bad but between bad and worse.

Harkabi says that Israel's special predicament is that it cannot afford to learn from adversity — that it has pursued mistaken political notions. It does not have that margin of error.

"I accept the democratic right of the Jews in Israel to commit national suicide and, if that happens, I will be with them," he writes. "But it is my duty, and the duty of others with similar views, to warn them against such a course."

Harkabi has convinced me to change my mind. I am not so stupid as to sit here in the U.S. and argue with an Arabic-speaking Israeli scholar and intelligence expert on the current status and strategy of the PLO. I would advise Americans with an interest in the Middle East to read "Israel's Fateful Hour."

MARIANNE MEANS

GOP needs to do its own House-cleaning

WASHINGTON — House Minority Leader Bob Michel complains bitterly that network television only pays attention to Congress when a scandal or hot controversy erupts and the rest of the time "we could just as well be on the moon."

Marianne Means

The veteran Illinois Republican is, of course, correct. The problem is whether there is anything the House, or rather the much-ignored House Republican minority, can and should do about it.

Michel concedes that most House proceedings, complicated by incomprehensible institutional jargon and 435 competing voices, are dull. "You get more action watching the Weather Channel," he notes ruefully. "It is an acquired taste."

The ebb and flow of national issues and presidential politics has had little impact on local congressional races, helping well-funded incumbents who cater carefully to their constituents to hang on. The Democrats have controlled the House since 1954.

But Republicans are badly divided about how to change their lowly, relatively powerless status. Minority whip Newt Gingrich of Georgia champions the notion of adopting a big picture strategy. His goal would be to stir up things and make noise, creating national issues, personalities and excitement that could lure voters to local GOP candidates.

Michel, who espouses the traditional view that all politics is local, disagrees. "Confront, confront and then confront again, and magically we will become a majority," he scoffs. "I know of no evidence to suggest that such a strategy in recent years has ever caused the Democrats to lose one seat."

Michel outlined his woes during a National Press Club seminar examining the interaction of the press and a divided government jointly sponsored by the Gerald Ford Library and the National Press Foundation.

Speaking from a partisan perspective hardened through long years of political frustration, he argued that inadequate national attention and television coverage of Congress gives the Democrats "a free ride in our divided government."

That theory, however, is based on the unproven assumption voters wouldn't like what they saw, a view with which Democrats would sharply disagree.

Furthermore, Michel is passing the buck by blaming press indifference for the GOP's repeated inability to ride presidential coattails into power in the House. If voters don't notice what their elected representative has been up to, it's their own fault. They don't have to rely on national news. Most local newspapers and television stations keep track of legislative details like voting records and cover local campaign races like a blanket.

Michel and the GOP might spend their time more usefully in re-examining how to respond to the needs of voters and improving the quality of their congressional candidates. The bottom line is that the Democrats have been doing a better job of running on issues that have the greatest resonance in their districts.

The Republicans are locked into a national theme of low taxes, less government and little federal spending that appeals to voters in the abstract, which is fine for electing presidents. But what voters want from their representatives is support for specific local projects, entitlements and domestic programs — which means an activist government and more spending — and that's where the Democrats outdo the Republicans every time. Voters may not want the government to waste money on anyone else, but they certainly want its help toward their own interests.

Next year, in fact, Republicans may have a problem holding what they have in Congress, let alone increasing their numbers.

The most potent issue is likely to be abortion. Since the Supreme Court's retreat from a constitutional protection threw the issue back into the lap of the states, voters have been signaling they prefer that women be allowed a choice, and are willing to vote in local races on that issue alone. Most Democrats are pro-choice, while Republicans are stuck with a president and a national platform opposing the right to an abortion.

Unable to develop good local issues, Gingrich and other conservative firebrands have been trying to fashion some overarching message that attacks the institution of Congress as a whole.

But this is handicapped by public confusion about who controls Congress and sets its agenda. People don't see Congress as a coherent whole. In a recent poll, more than one-third of those surveyed believed that Republicans control the House, or didn't know which party did.

And thus far, attempts to frighten voters about the malfunctioning of divided government doesn't get anywhere. The public seems perfectly happy to have a president and a Congress battling it out and keeping each other honest.

Many Republican members of Congress have been slow to join an anti-incumbent crusade because they are thinking of their own survival. Cries for congressional reform cut both ways. Wiping out some of the built-in advantages of incumbency that help to perpetuate the Democrats in office, such as the franking privilege, also wipes out those advantages for themselves.

Ethics doesn't work very well as a partisan tool, either, since there are plenty of scandals on both sides.

And negative campaigning, which seemed to be the answer for challengers for a while, now appears to backfire as often as not.

So there seems to be only one way for Republicans to increase their House minority, revolutionary though it be. Forget the grand presidential themes and start sounding more like Democrats in congressional races.

South Florida ponders turning off the tap

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — South Florida is suffering its driest year in 27 years, forcing water managers to grapple with restrictions that may mean dirtier cars and browner lawns in the region of more than 4 million people.

The governing board of the South Florida Water Management District has been asked to curtail lawn watering and car washing in 121 cities from Key West to the West Palm Beach area, 230 miles to the north.

The first regional water restrictions proposed in nearly nine years are the product of Miami's driest year since 1962, low water storage levels and a long-range forecast for lower than normal rainfall in the winter dry season.

"Even if we do get a wet winter, the philosophy is we'll still need the water restrictions," said district spokeswoman Ann Overton. "It's better to get people on board with the idea of mandatory cutbacks while we still have a little bit of breathing room rather than waiting until we have our backs against the wall."

The board was voting today on a proposal that would limit residents of Monroe, Dade, Broward and Palm Beach counties to lawn watering and car washing from 4 a.m. to 8 a.m. three days a week starting Monday.

There are also restrictions for golf courses, car washes, agriculture, pool filling, and rinsing off boats that have been in the ocean, Ms. Overton said. Fountains and outdoor water displays would be turned off and street, driveway and sidewalk washing banned.

Farmers have been asked for the past two months to cut back their water use by 10 percent, and those voluntary limits will continue.

Similar restrictions are in place from the area north of Tampa across the peninsula to Jacksonville and as far west as Blountstown on the Florida Panhandle.

California also continues to have problems. Rainfall has reached only 60 percent of normal for this time of year, and the central part of the state is facing drought for a fourth straight year.

"From San Jose to the Mexican border is the urban area hardest hit by the continuing drought," Suzanne Butterfield, deputy chief and drought response coordinator for the state Department of Water Resources, said Wednesday.

On average, water in California's reservoirs is at 75 percent of normal for this time of year, but some reservoirs along the coast are "bone dry," Butterfield said. The extended drought has meant water rationing or strict conservation programs for 10 million residents in 130 California communities, she said.

In south Florida, public agencies are pressing to meet the 15 percent water use reduction goal set by the district. The Miami-Dade Water and Sewer Authority serving the Miami area has cut water pressure and wants to impose a 10 percent surcharge on all water bills as an inducement to conserve.

Volcano hurls ash seven miles

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A volcano erupting for the first time in 23 years flung ash seven miles high and prompted the evacuation of seven oil workers.

Redoubt Volcano, near the western edge of Cook Inlet, 115 miles southwest of Anchorage, erupted shortly after 10 a.m. Thursday, a day after scientists detected a significant increase in seismic activity, the U.S. Geological Survey said.

The ash "looked like a little cloud rising over the mountain and it just started rising like an atomic bomb when it mushrooms," said Kristopher Paull, pilot of an airliner in the area at the time.

Ash rose from 15,000 feet to about 40,000 feet within 10 minutes, said Air Force Capt. Steve Stoddard, who was flying an F-15 jet fighter west of Anchorage.

Seven of 11 workers at the Drift River oil storage facility were evacuated as a precaution against flooding from melting snow, said the manager of Cook Inlet Pipeline Co., operator of the facility. Such flooding occurred when the volcano last erupted in 1966.

Manager Harold Mouser said the workers were transported in two airplanes, one of which was at the site for a routine grocery delivery. A helicopter stood by for possible evacuation of the four employees who remained at the site as monitors, he said.

A truck driver who was on the Sterling Highway, across the inlet from the volcano, when the eruption occurred said the ash was "real white and fluffy, almost like a cumulus cloud."

Men-only tests studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three members of Congress want to know if the National Institutes of Health are making good on a promise to stop testing only men when seeking cures to diseases that also affect women.

Reps. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, and Henry Waxman, D-Calif., on Thursday asked the General Accounting Office to investigate a policy adopted in 1987 after a report from the Public Health Service showed sex discrimination at NIH clinical tests.

"The gender bias in medical research isn't confined to the lab; it filters down to the health care that women receive," said Schroeder.

"If a woman wants to know if she should take an aspirin every other day to help prevent heart disease or take a cholesterol-lowering drug to bring down her cholesterol level, her doctor won't have the answer. All of the research in this area has been done on men," said the congresswoman.

She was referring to two studies that were highly criticized for excluding women — the Multiple Risk Factor Intervention Trials, which studied coronary disease risk factors, and the Physician's Health Study, which inspected use of aspirin as preventive therapy for coronary disease.

Both studies were started before 1987.

Mandela's daughter waits

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — The 4-year-old boy watched as the television news flashed a picture of jailed South African black leader Nelson Mandela.

The somewhat dated photograph did not make an impression on the child, the second generation of Mandela's family who has had to see him from afar.

"That's how he used to look," said the child's mother, Makaziwe Mandela, as she anxiously watched Wednesday the report of a historic meeting between her father and South African President F.W. de Klerk.

Although many predict Mandela will be released in January, his daughter is suspicious of the white-led government that imprisoned her father in 1962.

"Being a South African and having grown up in South Africa I still have the negative feeling that they've got something up their sleeve," she said from her modest apartment near the University of Massachusetts, where she is a Fulbright scholar studying anthropology.

But that doesn't stop her from hoping.

"As a daughter there is a little bit of excitement ... At least I am hoping," said Makaziwe Mandela, who last saw her father earlier this year. "I barely know my father."

Aviators grumble over tightened FAA rules

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Angry aviators complained Thursday that tightened federal security measures for airports nationwide will complicate Midland International Airport operations and do little to deter terrorists.

About 100 general aviation operators and pilots packed the airport pressroom and jeered Federal Aviation Administration agent John Boyer as he spoke of the new regulations.

Airport officials have until Feb. 8, 1990, to submit a revised security plan to the FAA, with the system operational by February 1992.

Victor White, airport director, said the $1 million in new measures will include closed-circuit television cameras, alarms, magnetic card readers and personal identification number controls.

Those who go into restricted areas must either wear an identification badge or be escorted by authorized personnel, White said. Being monitored on closed-circuit television could also constitute an escort, he said.

"It's an atomic bomb approach to a fly-swatter problem."

— Bill Page, corporate pilot

City officials are drawing up an ordinance carrying a maximum $1,000 fine and a possible jail sentence for unauthorized intruders caught in a restricted area, White said. The proposed ordinance is expected to go before the Midland City Council in mid-January, he said.

In addition, aviation company owners must conduct five-year background checks on their employees.

Operators and flyers said they neither have the time nor manpower to play security guards for their aviation areas.

"This is one more example of Big Brother," corporate pilot Bill Page said, referring to George Orwell's book "1984."

Page, 63, who has been piloting through the skies over the airport for 27 years, said the FAA doesn't understand the problems flyers will face in complying with the regulations.

"I'm for security, but these people don't have any earthly idea of what they're doing," Page said. "The FAA has not thought this program out in any way. They're doing something to protect the airlines and inflicting it on us.

"It's an atomic bomb approach to a fly-swatter problem."

White said the FAA in November found security breaches throughout the airport grounds, including general aviation areas.

Federal officials since December 1988 have found at least seven other minor violations for which the airport paid $1,500 in fines last spring, he said.

The incidents included unauthorized people gaining access to general aviation areas through gates opened by tenants, White said. The people walked freely in restricted areas, he said.

The FAA has planned to raise fines from $1,000 a day per violation to $10,000, White pointed out.

The $1 million in security renovations, scheduled for spring 1991 completion, at least 90 percent — and perhaps all — of the funds will comes from an FAA grant, White said.

"This isn't something Victor White created," he said of the coming changes. "We're only going along with the federal regulations. It's only going to get worse from here.

"Everybody has tried to fight this and nobody has had any success whatsoever."

Operators only will be responsible to pay for employee background checks, which mean little more than the cost of long-distance telephone calls, White said.

But aviators questioned why they had to conduct the checks when the results would not necessarily mean an employee's termination.

"What good is it going to do if you can't turn around and fire him?" said Glenn Flippin, Flippin Aviation Inc. owner. "They are asking us to do things that are irrelevant."

Boyer, who came to Midland to field aviator concerns and relay them to other FAA officials, said federal officials simply want the operators to know who they have hired.

"There's nothing in the rule that says you can't hire a rapist," Boyer said. "There's nothing in the regulation that says you can't hire a hijacker.

"If you want to hire a criminal, do it. The regulations just say verify the person's background five years back."

White said a problem city and FAA officials have yet to work out is independent flyers who simply rent airplanes and are not an airport employee.

If they fly into the airport late at night, no one will be around to escort them through restricted areas, and they might be out of closed-circuit television range.

"Obviously we're going to talk to the FAA about this," White said. "We knew this was going to be a severe problem."

2 states deny Allison bond

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Bond has been denied in two states for former Midlander Gary Fay Allison, 49, who is fighting his return to Midland from California on a charge of trying to kill his ex-girlfriend, authorities said.

Allison was indicted Wednesday by a grand jury here for the Dec. 9, 1988, shooting of 42-year-old Lola Jones of Midland. The indictment came four days after his arrest by FBI agents in Riverside, Calif., a Los Angeles suburb, where he was living and working as a mechanic, investigators said.

Bond for Allison was denied Wednesday by 142nd State District Judge Pat Baskin of Midland, and earlier had been denied by a magistrate in California.

Allison is fighting extradition to Texas, Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said.

Sheriff's investigators said Ms. Jones was shot once in the head after she was flagged down by a man near the intersection of Interstate 20 and County Road 1140. She recovered from the wound, but is virtually blind in one eye and suffers some paralysis.

She also has undergone surgery to remove a bone fragment from her brain.

Ms. Jones spent several weeks at a Dallas hospital for treatment of seizures and other ailments connected to the shooting.

Painter said officers — who spent nearly a year searching for Allison — are anxious to keep him in custody.

Midland, Odessa sales tax returns increase

Rebates to Texas cities top $1 billion

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland and Odessa reaped significant gains in sales tax returns this month as rebates to Texas cities in 1989 topped $1 billion for the first time in the state's history.

"People are spending more money and that means more tax dollars are going back to communities for fire fighting, police protection and safe roads," State Comptroller Bob Bullock said in releasing the monthly report.

This year's total payments to cities reached $1.04 billion, 9 percent more than last year's total of $956 million, while December payments to cities totaled $72 million — a 13 percent increase from last December's payments of $64 million.

Midland's payment of $538,091 reflected a 6.36 percent increase over last December's check of $505,930, bringing the city in at $8.06 million for the year.

In Odessa, sales tax returns topped $521,509 compared to the $450,393 received in December 1988. The 15.7 percent monthly increase leaves the city with $7.02 million for the year.

This month's checks to cities and counties reflect taxes collected in October by businesses that file monthly tax returns.

Merchants collect the state and local sales tax and send it to the comptroller's office with their tax returns. The state keeps its 6 percent share and returns the local sales taxes each month to local governments.

Bullock said cities and counties may levy a combined tax of up to 2 percent above the state's sales tax.

Houston received a $12 million check, which represents a 12 percent increase over last year. Dallas received the second largest payment at $8.2 million.

Total payments to counties surged to $7.1 million as the result of more counties collecting sales tax this year, but Midland County's check fell off 0.44 of a percent, from $300,440 last December to $299,132 this month.

Also included with this month's checks are quarterly payments totaling $130 million for the state's metropolitan transit authorities (MTA) and one city transit department. The payment to MTAs reflect taxes collected in August, September and October.

Other West Texas cities reaped sales tax increases this month.

- Andrews' payment of $42,058 reflected a monthly increase of 8.15 percent over last December's check of $38,887. That brings the city in at $612,125 for the year.
- Lamesa received a $33,937 check, which is 1.89 percent higher than last December's payment of $33,307. For the year, Lamesa brought in a total of $533,141.
- Big Spring's payment of $104,016 was 25.5 percent more than the $28,829 check sent in December 1988. That brings the city in at $1.4 million for the year to date.

In Stanton, the monthly sales tax rebate fell .41 of a percent, from $3,812 in December 1988 to $3,796 this month. To date, the city's total stands at $61,407.

Bunton rules search proper

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A California lawyer's bid to foil federal credit-card fraud charges by alleging the federal agents' search of his car that found the cards was illegal proved futile this week.

U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton of Midland ruled that the inventory search proper and legal.

The lawyer, 47-year-old Lowell A. Hahn, had accused Internal Revenue Service agents of searching his car for the wrong reasons — to gather incriminating evidence against him — and broke into his unlocked briefcase to find a stack of credit cards in Midland on Sept. 6, 1988.

Following his arrest on the warrant, Hahn served a year in prison for being a fugitive for five years while he was under tax-related charges, which he was able to defeat in a California court.

But he alleged that the evidence — the credit cards — gained in the search was illegally gained and should be suppressed.

Bunton disagreed.

Hahn, who used the alias Jay Woods, has been indicted for fraudulently using at least 15 credit credits and running up $207,000 in bills. Twenty-four of the 28 counts in the indictment against him are tied to the cards and the use of fraudulent Social Security numbers in obtaining those cards. Further, he is charged with using the alias and false Social Security number in securing a job with the U.S. Postal Service in Midland in the mid-1980s.

Hahn's car was impounded "for safety" after the Sept. 6, 1988, arrest, but only after agents had unloaded a .32-caliber rifle in the car's trunk. Agents did not inventory the car when he was arrested by IRS agents outside the downtown Midland Post Office.

But the next day in a hearing before U.S. Magistrate Robert Sykes, Hahn said that he had "funds" in the car to hire an attorney.

"When I was arrested, I believe I had the funds," he testified, "but I don't know now because I don't know what's been done with the car. ... I have to get my hands on the money. ... I don't know if the cash is still there."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery of Midland, surmised that Hahn "apparently had funds stashed" in his car to cover attorney's fees, Bunton said in his order this week.

Beery had instructed IRS Agents Bruce Scott and Gary Peters immediately to inventory the car and not leave it " 'to the tender mercies of a wrecker driver.' "

Subsequently, IRS agents found a "considerable amount of cash and jewelry," a stack of credit cards and a passport in the car. Hahn later claimed that he had in his car $165,000 in money, checks and valuables, including the jewelry.

Hahn had claimed the search of his car was made prior the inventory, which Beery had ordered for the safe-keeping of Hahn's cash and personal effects.

Bunton ruled that the IRS inventory of Hahn's car was "not made pursuant to a search for incriminating evidence, but rather as a caretaking function" to secure Hahn's property. The credit card evidence was uncovered as a byproduct of that inventory.

Further, said Bunton, the inventory of Hahn's briefcase, which the agents said was unlocked, and the search of "numerous other containers" in the car and its trunk "did not violate Defendant Hahn's Fourth Amendment rights to be free of unreasonable searches and seizures," Bunton said in his ruling.

The inventory of Hahn's car by IRS agents "was undertaken in good faith and as a caretaking function," Bunton said.

Hahn, who has been jailed or imprisoned since his September 1988 arrest, had presented his case for suppression of the credit card evidence in a mid-November hearing before Bunton. Hahn was represented by Federal Public Defender Elizabeth Rogers of El Paso.

The government's position was presented by Assistant U.S. Attorney Wayne Speck of San Antonio. Beery bowed out of the case after Hahn had sued Beery and eight IRS officers for $1.165 million for allegedly violating his constitutional rights by carrying out the search of his car.

Two Cubans convicted of trafficking cocaine

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Border Patrol narcotics dog called "wonderful Basco" by prosecutors, set off a search and investigation that resulted in the conviction of two Cubans of trafficking 22 pounds of cocaine worth about $3 million.

"I would like to kiss him right on the jaw," Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery said of the Border Patrol drug-search dog.

Beery successfully prosecuted Aralio Diaz and Lazaro Puig of Havana in a two-day trial in federal court in Pecos this week.

Basco, handled by Border Patrol agent Ron Gutierrez, sniffed out drugs in the trunk of a rented car at the Sierra Blanca checkpoint about 80 miles east of El Paso on Interstate Highway 10 on Oct. 18.

Basco, who did a "passive alert," as is the custom of Border Patrol dogs, "just sat down" quietly after the dog sensed the cocaine, Beery said. Customs Service drug dogs, however, are trained to do "active alerts" and bark, howl, scratch and otherwise carry on after they locate contraband, including smuggled dope, and concealed illegal aliens, Beery said.

The jury deliberated less than an hour before convicting the defendants, who claimed they were unaware of the cocaine and that the drug must have been in the truck of the car when they rented it in Arizona.

However, Beery presented testimony to prove otherwise.

The 22 pounds of cocaine was in a single package in the truck.

"They (federal agents) opened up the trunk, and there was a gray bag of cocaine — 90 percent pure," Beery said.

When they rented the car, the two defendants indicated that they had no particular destination but were just "touring."

However, Beery said, the two men apparently were en route to Miami, to sell or deliver the drugs.

"By the time you break it down," Beery said, "it would be worth about $3 million on the street."

Diaz and Puig, who were represented by Alpine lawyers Mike Barclay and Kenneth DeHart, were convicted of conspiracy to possess cocaine with intend to distribute the drug and with possession of the dope.

At sentencing on Jan. 29 in Pecos, U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton could sentence Diaz and Puig each from a minimum of 10 years in prison up to life in prison on each of the two counts.

MISD officials conclude community meeting series

By DAVID MORRIS
Staff Writer

Midland Independent School District officials said they were pleased with the results of a series of community meetings to solicit input on the district's long range-plan.

Thursday's District 7 meeting at Santa Rita Elementary School, 5306 Whitman Drive, was the last in a series of seven which began in October at Travis Elementary School.

"We as a staff and a school board have actively sought the input of the community and will continue to do so," MISD Superintendent Joe Baressi told the crowd of about 50 parents and teachers Thursday. "We are committed to allowing as much input as possible."

The plan discussed at the meetings calls for a reduction in MISD dropout rates to 10 percent or less by 1995, an increase in minority hiring, and the construction of $20 million in new facilities by 1993, including a junior high school and two elementary schools.

MISD board president James Fuller said the school board will take community input into consideration when it reviews the long range plan in late January.

"It will have a bearing on decisions that we make," he said. "Those decisions will be made in terms of what is best for the total district."

He said the consensus at all the meetings, which were held in each of the school board's single-member districts, was that MISD needs new and renovated facilities to accommodate a growing student population.

The long range plan calls for the proposed junior high school to be in use by fall of 1992.

A Fort Worth architectural firm already has been chosen to design the $8 million facility, but final approval for the project will depend on the outcome of a planned bond election next spring or fall.

Planning Director Joe Cummins said there has been little opposition to the idea of a new school, but some debate over where it should be built.

"All of the new facilities can't go in the northwest area of Midland and everybody be happy," he said. "The discussion of the site for the new junior high school will continue for several months."

Cummins said his job is made easier when he knows community viewpoints.

"I think the participation in the meetings has been very helpful," he said. "And I hope we can find a way to allow every (Midland) community to benefit from new construction."

District 7 trustee Ken Marks said the meetings have been worthwhile.

"This is a good way to find out what direction people think our schools should take," he said. "Without that input, we can't make good, sound decisions."

Funeral services for Raymond W. "Ray" Buck, 57, are set for 2 p.m. Sunday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Dr. Casey Kay, vice chancellor at Abilene Christian University, and the Rev. Alan Williams, chaplain at Midland Memorial Hospital, officiating. Burial will follow in Fairview Cemetery.

Buck

Survivors include his wife, Jacqueline Buck of Midland; four sons, Tim Buck and Tyler Buck, both of Duluth, Tom Buck of Denver, and Lt. Ted Buck of Zwiebruecken, Germany; two stepsons, Kevin Krenik of New Orleans, and Kurt Krenik of Billings, Mont.; his mother, Hattie Buck of Denver; a brother, Norman Buck of Groton, Mass.; a sister, Ruth Cummings of Denver; and one grandchild.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests that memorials be directed to the Confederate Air Force.

Survivors include two sons, Paul L. Davis Jr. and F. Ferrell Davis of Midland; and four grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Toyota Motors seeks to set aside verdict

HOUSTON (AP) — Toyota Motor Sales USA Inc. and Toyota Corp. will ask a Houston judge to set aside a verdict that resulted in a $43.2 million award for a Nigerian woman whose husband and two daughters died in the family's burning car in 1982, officials said.

Jurors in a state district court awarded $18.2 million in actual damages and $25 million in exemplary damages — the largest ever against Toyota — to Nike Adegbite, 36, who watched as her family and two others were killed in the fire.

Douglas West, vice president and general counsel for Toyota Motors in Torrance, Calif., said the company was surprised and disappointed by Wednesday's verdict against Toyota.

West said Toyota will ask the judge to set aside the verdict and order a new trial. If the judge refuses, Toyota will appeal the judgment, he said.

Mrs. Adegbite escaped with only minor burns and cuts from the 1973 Toyota Corona station wagon when it caught fire after being rear-ended by a van.

Her husband, Adeyemi, 35, and her daughters, Yetunde, 7, and Adeloa, 8 months, were killed. The van's driver, Boyo Adetoye, received minor injuries, but his wife and child were killed.

Mrs. Adegbite's attorney, Stan Pfeiffer, said the lawsuit claimed Toyota was negligent in its design of the station wagon and failed to recall it. The trial lasted six weeks.

The attorney said Mrs. Adegbite and her family were in the back seat of the station wagon when it was struck on a Houston highway Sept. 26, 1982. The van's impact pushed the station wagon's gasoline tank forward, Pfeiffer said, and the tank was punctured by an empty spare tire carrier and a valve on the rear axle.

"Upon impact, the Toyota burst into flames when the gasoline tank was punctured," Pfeiffer said.

Adetoye was not involved in the case because he had reached a settlement on a similar lawsuit about a year ago, Pfeiffer said. The settlement amount was not disclosed.

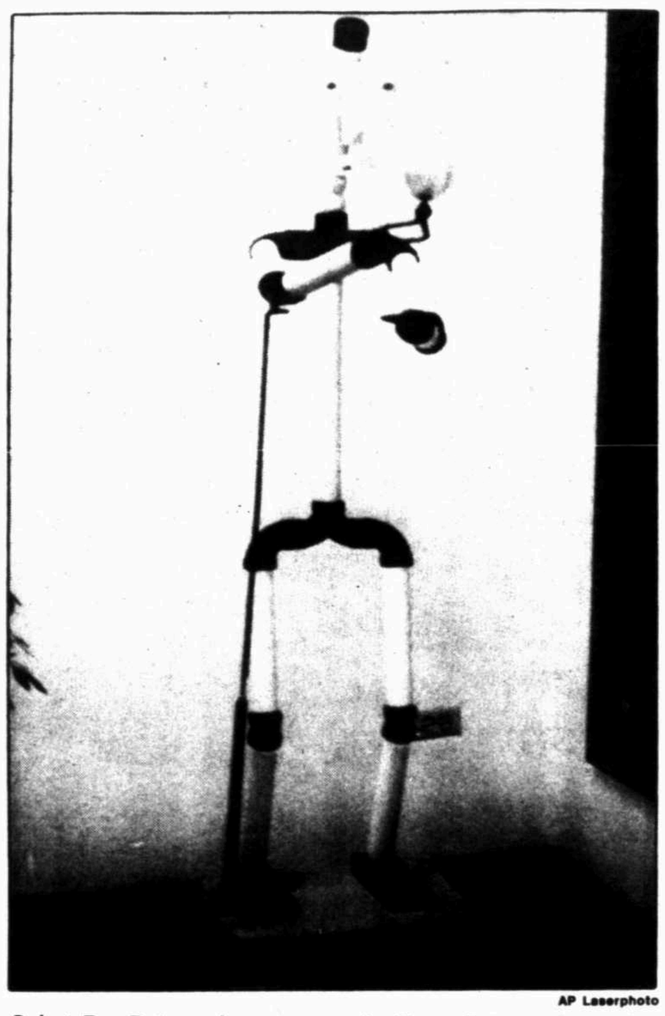

West said Toyota has never had any other claims against the design of the vehicle.

"This is the only claim that Toyota has ever received on that issue," West said, adding that the company denies claims the design was defective.

Lawyers on both sides expressed surprise at the size of the judgment.

"We were of course surprised at the verdict — not only by the extraordinary amount, but that the jury decided against us," West said.

He said the verdict "is the highest award against Toyota by a very wide margin." Previously, the largest award against Toyota was about $5 million, he said.

Robot Tex Twister demonstrates the Texas Twister, a toy that consists of gyrating plastic on a metal rod.

Robot adds twist to gyrating toy

GAINESVILLE (AP) — When David Lloyd began producing the Texas Twister, little did he know he would ultimately create Tex Twister to operate it.

"The Twisters are off of an old idea, but the robot is my original," said Lloyd, a Moss Lake resident.

Lloyd's wife Danea makes arts and crafts, and Lloyd began producing the Texas Twister, a toy that consists of gyrating plastic on a metal rod, three years ago to have something to sell in arts and crafts shows. Since then, he quit his job as a welder to produce the item full time.

Lloyd ran into a problem when he was to attend a three-day Czechoslovakian Folk Festival popularly known as "Westfest" in West in August. The festival began at 9 a.m. every day and ended at midnight. He was supposed to demonstrate his Texas Twister during that time and realized 15 hours a day would be a long time to play with the Twister.

He needed help. Thus, the mechanical Tex Twister was born out of the depths of Lloyd's mind. Tex was constructed from pieces of PVC pipe, among other household items. He comes fully equipped with a motor to rotate his arm up and down, operating the Texas Twister.

Tex's base is a laundry basket, covering the motor. His legs, abdomen, arms, neck and head are all made of plumbing pipe.

Clenched in his hands, which are made of metal, is a Twister, with the toy's colored pieces of plastic twirling down a twisted piece of wire after being pushed upward. One arm rotates up and down while the other arm holds Tex's Twister.

Tex's face was created during a leisurely stroll through Wal Mart, Lloyd said. He and his daughter were walking through the store when they spotted a water faucet, thus originated Tex's nose and eyes. A bicycle reflector was selected as a mouth.

"When I first started building them (the robots), I didn't plan on selling them. I didn't think anyone else would want them," Lloyd said.

He said that he usually has one or two sitting around the house, but they've been selling so quickly that he can't keep them.

Since the first robot, Lloyd has completed and sold five and is now building his sixth, selling them for $200 a piece mostly to wholesale buyers of the Texas Twister.

Lloyd says he spends his time making the Twisters and Tex, traveling to craft shows with his wife, lifting weights and running.

"I don't see how anyone could go to work for anyone else," Lloyd said.

Smith to file for re-election

From Staff Reports

U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, will file with the secretary of state for re-election to the House of Representatives next week, he said Friday.

Smith is serving his second term as congressman for the 21 District, which includes Midland, and is currently unopposed in his bid for a third two-year term.

"Residents of the 21st District care about our strength as a nation, our values as a community and our responsibilities as individuals," Smith said in announcing his candidacy.

"These are the values I strive to represent in Washington. I look forward to serving the residents of the 21st District for a third term," he said.

Smith's career has been highlighted by his work on government ethics refor and by his service as vice chairman of the House Immigration Subcommittee. He also introduced legislation this year to ease federal prison overcrowding and strengthen law enforcement on the U.S./Mexican border.

The congressman sits on the Judiciary and Science, Space and Technology committees, as well as the on the Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families.

Rains first GOP to file for governor's race

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — Republican gubernatorial hopeful Jack Rains Thursday became the first GOP candidate to file for office in the hotly contested March primary race.

Rains, a 52-year-old Houston businessman, paid the filing fee and officially declared his candidacy for governor following an Austin press conference.

The other announced GOP candidates for governor include Midland oilman Clayton Williams, Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance and Dallas attorney Tom Luce.

Rains has called for an "education renaissance" in Texas to enhance the state's chances of competing in a global economy and reducing crime and drug abuse.

"Texas is at a crossroads. We need a leader who knows how to stand up to special interests, create jobs and deal with the social problems that threaten our future. I will offer voters a clear choice, bold leadership and an end to politics as usual," he said.

In other developments, Rains announced the formation of "Women for Rains," an 18-member panel to advise the candidate on issues affecting women.

"Texas has changed, but institutions such as state government have not changed. As governor, I will ensure that women are full partners in the decision-making process that affects all aspect of our lives," he said.

The list of steering committee members include two Odessans, Mary Lou Parsons and Johnnye Davis, and other female leaders from across the state.

A member of the Texas Water Drillers Board, Ms. Parsons served on the Texas Sesquicentennial Commission, Texas Alcohol and Drug Abuse Council and was a officeholder in the Ector County Republican Womens' Club for 10 years. She also served as tri-county chairman of the Reagan-Bush campaign in 1980 and 1984, and was regional chairman of the Clements for Governor campaign in 1982.

Ms. Davis, who is a member of the Permian Basin Drug Task, served four years on the Podiatry Board of the Sunset Commission; and formerly was regional vice chairman for the Clements for Governor campaign in 1986, regional chairman of the Bush for President campaign in 1988 and county chairman of Roy Barrera's Attorney General campaign in 1986.

Ethics panel member to report campaign finances

AUSTIN (AP) — An El Paso state lawmaker, who serves on the House panel studying ethics reform, said he would start filing legally required campaign finance reports that he has neglected for several years.

Rep. Nick Perez, a Democrat, outlined a schedule for catching up on the financial reports in a Thursday letter to Secretary of State George Bayoud.

House Speaker Gib Lewis thanked Perez for agreeing to provide the reports.

"In our discussions about this matter, you indicated a strong desire to rectify the situation," Lewis told the lawmaker in the letter. "Financial disclosure, while time-consuming, is a responsibility which requires our full and undivided attention."

The Austin American-Statesman reported Wednesday that Perez collected and spent thousands of dollars in political donations without publicly reporting those transactions.

The newspaper reported that while the issue had surfaced in Perez's past campaigns, he continues to be re-elected and thinks voters should judge legislators' ethics.

State law requires all candidates for state office to file semiannual reports of contributions and expenses. Those who have opponents must file more frequently.

Lawmakers also are required every April to file personal financial statements documenting their sources of income and gifts from political supporters.

"I'm disorganized," Perez told the newspaper in explaining his failure to file reports for three years. He said he could no longer swear to the accuracy of his contribution records, and that he was more fearful of being prosecuted for lying under oath than for not filing a report.

Mike Millsap, the speaker's chief of staff, said he informed Lewis, who was in Fort Worth, of Perez's situation. Millsap then met with Perez and Bayoud, and said the lawmaker "expressed a willingness and desire to take care of it immediately."

In the letter to Bayoud, Perez said, "I appreciate the efforts from you and your staff, as well as those of your predecessor, Jack Rains, in delineating a procedure by which I can be in full compliance with the letter of the law as well as its spirit."

Perez said he would file three reports due in 1989, as well as one due on Jan. 15, on or before Jan. 15. He said he would file six 1988 reports in February "if not sooner."

Of three reports that were due before 1988, relating to the 1986 election year, Perez said, "I will try as best I am able to reconstruct the records and file those reports ... I would like to point out that I feel a responsibility to file these early reports even though reconstruction will be time consuming and difficult."

ALLISON

"This guy is dangerous," the sheriff said. "We feel like if he is not held in custody, he could flee and there could be further criminal activity."

Sheriff's Lt. Joe Carr of the warrants division said he has requested a priority governors warrant from the office of Gov. Bill Clements. The warrant, if signed in Austin and by California Gov. George Deukmejian, would empower Riverside County authorities to release Allison to Midland officers.

Texas Rangers are assisting Midland officers with the governors warrant, which normally takes at least a month to obtain. Carr said Allison could be in Midland sooner than that.

Assistant District Attorney Ralph Petty said he was unsure if bond could be denied Allison after his return to Midland.

"That will depend on what happens when he gets back here," Petty said, referring to a likely bond hearing. "But we are going to do everything we can to deny this man bond until trial."

RULES

A person will qualify for a badge if they are either an airport employee or own an airplane stored in one of the general aviation areas, he said.

About 90 percent of the people who travel through restricted areas are airport employees, while the rest are airplane owners.

Aviators also complained that having to use magnetic card readers or punch identification codes to get to their airplanes, White said it's less troublesome than the alternative.

If the airport keeps its lock-and-key system, FAA guidelines would force officials to change locks every time a restricted-area employee is fired or a pilot decommissioned, White said.

Depending on the person's airport accessibility, that could mean changing every restricted-area lock within eight hours, he said.

Boy lost in park found after 4 days

BIG BEND NATIONAL PARK, Texas (AP) — Being alone in the frigid wilderness for four days changed the life of a rebellious 16-year-old who walked away from a campsite, his mother says.

"What he's feeling now, he's never felt in his life," Elaine Paddor said Thursday night of her son Paul, who was found earlier in the day by three people hiking along the Rio Grande.

Fishery officials hooked on abandoned coal mines

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — When Charles Wagner pulled a whopper rainbow trout from the Elkhorn River last summer, his state-record catch spawned an idea.

Officials marveled that the 11-pound, 3-ounce beauty thrived in springwater fed in part by an abandoned coal mine, and want to make it a fish hatchery.

"Trout are extremely fragile," said Ed Hamrick, director of the state Department of Natural Resources. "They need so many factors in order for them to perpetuate themselves naturally."

"Most people, when they think of a coal mine, don't think of a hatchery," said Don Phares, state assistant chief of cold water fisheries.

Good sites for trout hatcheries are hard to find because many count on natural springs for water, Phares said. He and U.S. Rep. Nick Rahall, D-W.Va., chairman of the House mining and natural resources subcommittee, insist water conditions at some old coal mines are just right to produce the big ones.

Water draining from coal mines is usually very acid because of the residue of high-sulfur coal. The mine that feeds the Elkhorn was always low in sulfur.

Phares and Rahall refused to name the mine or give its location until it can be purchased. Congress will take up the project next year; it must approve $2.5 million to buy the mine and build the hatchery.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and state Department of Natural Resources would build the hatchery, with a series of concrete runways eight feet wide by 100 long to produce up to 200,000 fish a year, Phares said. The mine drainage would be recirculated, with some outside water added for volume.

The prototype hatchery could spawn new life for many old mines, said Jim Zoia, staff director of the House subcommittee. "There's a lot of potential in the Appalachian area."

Ed Hayne Jr. of Charleston, vice president of West Virginia's southern chapter of Trout Unlimited, said there are high hopes for the hatchery. "Being a big trout fisherman, I think it's needed and it could very well turn out to be a big economic boost to McDowell County."

Sunny side up showing for girl's egg-cholesterol experiment

SHERMAN, Conn. (AP) — She's been called the "Chicken Feed Queen" by schoolmates and doubted by scientists, but Alice Havens remains undeterred in her quest to help millions of egg-loving Americans.

Every day around 5 a.m., the 17-year-old high school student slips out of bed and into a pair of boots by the kitchen door, then heads for her backyard, where she feeds 25 hens a special formula to cut the cholesterol in eggs.

Cholesterol-lowering research also is going on in laboratories where researchers with advanced degrees and heavy funding measure results with fancy instruments. Havens' experiment started out as a project for the science fair.

Sitting at the kitchen table, she opens a notebook to the typed pages that detail her research. She says the charts show that the special feed has dropped the cholesterol count 22 to 27 percent, and that it's going down even further.

Some scientists are skeptical, questioning her testing methods and results. Dr. Edward Naber, who's been doing egg experiments for 30 years at Ohio State University, doesn't think her numbers are significant.

Havens, who has applied for a patent, is pushing on. Her words get stronger, her pace quicker, when asked to respond to skeptics: "Well, that's your opinion and I've got mine, and just because of what you said isn't going to make me stop."

The Havens family lives in a big wooden house tucked deep in the woods in Sherman, with two horses, a collie, two cats and Alice's 25 chickens.

Science has occupied her since seventh grade, when the papier-mache volcanoes she made with her best friend, Hannah Roberts, won a prize at the Science Horizons fair in Danbury. "We built all these volcanoes, and we had a backdrop and everything, with moss and paint, and it was a huge mess."

Inspired by her teacher, John Halloran, she kept entering the fair, studying vision in horses one year, chicken feed in another. In early tests, she gave her hens different diets, like sunflower seeds and oyster shells; she started testing for cholesterol when she entered New Milford High School.

"What I did was I tested different things on the hens, things farmers sometimes fed, to see if the cholesterol level would change in any way."

She hit pay dirt with the third diet, an ingredient she decided to try — and won't disclose — because a friend of her sister had a lot. Before, the hens laid jumbo eggs with 388 milligrams of cholesterol; after, it was 340.

Havens says the level has dropped even more, but she won't release the figures until the next phase of the experiment is over. She's also trying to pinpoint exactly what in the feed is working.

Many researchers have tried to cut eggs' cholesterol but failed to find a safe, cheap diet, said Naber, a food science professor. He questioned Havens' figures, and said a large Connecticut egg has 202 milligrams of cholesterol and the national average is 213.

Havens sticks by her guns, saying she started out with bigger eggs and hasn't relied on U.S. Department of Agriculture standards as a benchmark. She's also egged on, so to speak, by the accolades she's won in the last two years.

At the kitchen table, she flips through a scrapbook to certificates and letters from the American Heart Association and the Nutmeg Institute of Food Technologists, and mementos like an luggage tag from her trip to Knoxville, Tenn., for the International Science Fair. Her booty includes an encyclopedia set, five shares of stock from United Technologies Corp., a leather briefcase, five trophies on her bedroom dresser, four framed certificates on the wall above her bed, and enough cash to pay for the experiment.

Last summer, Havens went to London for a science symposium with 800 students from around the world. She presented her research, made friends, toured castles — and intiated a walkout at one session when a boy from Ireland made disparaging remarks about Vice President Dan Quayle. She was reprimanded for taking 400 students with her when she left in disgust.

She's also learned to handle the kidding she gets from some schoolmates. "When I first started my sophomore year, I got a lot of ribbing for it," but now that she's onto something big, "it doesn't bother me anymore."

Alice Havens, a 17-year-old high school student from Sherman, Conn., feeds her chickens a special diet of grains to see it she can cut the cholesterol levels in eggs.

EARNEST KIKER

Other plants available for Christmas decorations

The boughs of holly have been used to deck the halls and sprigs of mistletoe hang over every door, but the one plant with which Christmas would be complete is the Christmas tree. For something new and longer-lasting, choose a living tree. Consider one of the following:

Kiker

- Aleppo Pine
- Japanese Black Pine
- Japanese Yew
- Loblolly Pine
- Deodar Cedar
- Juniper
- American Holly
- Burford Holly
- Compact Cherry Laurel
- Yaupon

Of if you prefer, decorate a tubbed plant that can remain inside after the holidays:

- Norford Island Pine
- Kumquats
- Calamondins
- Yews

Once the tree is selected, if it isn't tubbed, a container must be chosen as well. If the tree's roots are balled and burlapped, the container must allow at least an inch of peat moss, potting soil or compost around the ball to prevent it from drying out.

If the plant has been grown in a container, it can be made more attractive by placing it in a redwood tub, ceramic or clay pot or even a polyethylene-lined wooden box. All containers should be well-drained to prevent excessive moisture from damaging the roots. (A pan underneath the container will protect the floor).

The tree should be placed that is not in the stream of heat, or near a stove or radiator. The room should be kept as cool as possible and the plant should be watered when dry. A simple way to determine when the tree needs watering is to push a pencil into the soil. If it comes out dry and clean, don't water until the next day.

After Christmas, it is best to plant the tree outside as soon as possible. It should be planted where it will have enough room to grow; the hole should be large enough to have three or four inches of soil on all sides of the ball. It should be planted at the same depth it was at the nursery or in the container. One part pest moss, pine bark or compost to two parts soil should be mixed and packed around the ball.

When the hole is three-fourths full, the tree should be watered thoroughly and then filled the rest of the way. If the plant is balled and burlapped, the burlap should be loosened before filling the hole.

To keep the tree healthy while it's adapting to its new environment:

- Water it regularly, but allow the soil to dry a little between waterings.
- Mulch the surface with some kind of organic matter to reduce weeds and conserve moisture.
- Avoid fertilzation until June or July.
- Keep weeds and grass cut to prevent competition.

The tree can be used for beautification of your yard and can serve as an outdoor Christmas tree for future holidays.

Cotton crop to be smaller than previous years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says the 1989 cotton crop is expected to be slightly less than 12.1 million bales, down 22 percent from last year's harvest but virtually the same as estimated in November.

In its new estimate Tuesday, based on field conditions as of Dec. 1, the department's National Agricultural Statistics Service said a 20 percent drop in the acreage for harvest and slightly lower yields account for the decline from 1988 levels.

Overall, cotton farmers had 9.53 million acres for harvest this fall, down 20 percent from 1988. The yield is expected to average 608 pounds per acre, down 11 pounds from last year but up a pound from the November forecast.

"The Delta states experienced favorable weather during harvest and show an increase from last month," the report said. "In Texas, an October freeze lowered expected yields."

But cotton harvest made good progress last month in the Plains and could be completed ahead of normal, the report said. By Dec. 3, the harvest was 89 percent completed in Texas, compared with 75 percent a year earlier and the average of 60 percent.

Orange production was forecast at 194 million boxes, unchanged from the previous forecast two months ago based on Oct. 1 indications, but 6 percent below last season.

"This decline is due mostly to Florida's 11 percent decrease from last season," the report said. "Freezing weather in Florida during late February killed some of the open bloom and damaged new growth."

The report also indicated dry edible bean production this year at 24.1 million hundredweight, up 25 percent from last year's drought-reduced harvest but still 7 percent short of 1987 production. Acreage for harvest was up 24 percent from last year and the average yield, at 1,436 pounds per acre, was up 1 percent.

Burley tobacco production was estimated at 543 million pounds, up 14 percent from 1988 but fractionally below the November forecast. The area for harvest is up 13 percent from last year and the average yield is up 18 pounds per acre.

No new estimates were issued for the major field crops such as corn, wheat and soybeans.

In a related report, the department's world outlook board said prospective levels of cotton production and use in 1989 remain at near the levels indicated last month, although production prospects are up on a few foreign countries.

"This likely will mean reduced needs for U.S. cotton in world markets and lower U.S. export prospects," the report said.

The global outlook for wheat is "largely unchanged" from the November forecast, the report said.

Groups say Poland's harvest critical, ask for equipment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three organizations trying to pull Poland into the world of agricultural capitalism say the 1990 harvest is critical, and are urging U.S. agribusiness to donate machinery and chemicals.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, Sabre Foundation and the Foundation for the Development of Polish Agriculture told representatives of farm-related businesses at a seminar Monday that their donations would be tax deductible.

The U.S. tax code allows for a deduction of twice the cost for donations of inventory property for the care of the ill, the needy or minor children. Private Polish farmers qualify as needy under the code, said tax lawyer Stuart A. Smith, who appeared on a panel at the seminar.

"Poland has the potential to be a major contributor to the world food supply, but it is not a major contributor at this time," said David Hopper, World Bank senior vice president.

He said 77 percent of the farms are privately owned, while 23 percent are state-owned cooperatives that have been the only beneficiaries of technological advancements made in Polish agriculture.

"The private sector has been starved from modern inputs," Hopper said, adding that productivity is low as a result.

"They are good farmers, but they don't know how to farm in the context of modern agriculture," Hopper said.

Under the plan devised by the Sabre Foundation, state cooperatives would be omitted from U.S. private sector donations because the tax code requires the donations to go to private individuals to qualify as deductions.

That will keep the remnants of the communist system from benefiting from American private industry's efforts and will boost the private side of Poland's agricultural economy, Smith said.

The donations are needed because of a gap in the $533 million aid package Congress provided Hungary and Poland, said Josiah Lee Auspitz, secretary of the Sabre Foundation.

The government is sending commodities and expertise to Poland, but there was no provision in the law for the products and equipment.

Prosecutor says he'll work to keep Brandley behind bars

CONROE (AP) — A district attorney said he will do everything he can to keep Clarence Brandley behind bars, despite a decision overturning the death row inmate's conviction for the rape-slaying of a teen-ager.

Montgomery County District Attorney Peter Speers said Thursday he still believes Brandley killed Cheryl Dee Fergeson nine years ago and that he will ask the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals to change its decision.

"I believe the opinion is wrong," Speers said. "If this opinion stands, the door will be wide open for convicts to manipulate weak-willed witnesses, invent witnesses and pervert the entire criminal justice system.

Brandley's first trial ended with a hung jury. An all-white jury from the second trial convicted Brandley of raping and strangling the 16-year-old girl while she was attending a volleyball tournament in 1980 at Conroe High School, where Brandley worked as a janitor.

The appeals court ruled Wednesday that Brandley, who has been on death row for nearly nine years and has had two execution dates, was the victim of an unfair trial.

Brandley's attorneys and supporters claim the investigation and prosecution was racially motivated since Brandley is black and Miss Fergeson was white.

His attorneys also say they're confident of acquittal in a third trial, but doubt there is sufficient evidence to prompt another trial.

Brandley, 38, has said he would welcome a new trial.

Speers said he would exhaust all legal avenues, including a third trial, to keep Brandley behind bars.

"If this result stands, it is possible, even likely, that he will have literally gotten away with murder," Speers said. "I believe this would be a gross miscarriage of justice."

James Keeshan, the original prosecutor on Brandley's case and now a district judge in Conroe, agreed.

"I remain convinced, based on the evidence I saw, that Clarence Brandley murdered Cheryl Fergeson," Keeshan said. "I am concerned about what effect this decision will have on future cases where orchestrated events years after the trial may result in the overturning of convictions."

In the 86-page opinion, the appeals court said the investigative team failed to follow up leads from witnesses, failed to take blood and hair samples from other janitors who had been Brandley's chief accusers, provided an opportunity for a common account of the incident from the janitors, threatened witnesses and lost evidence from the trial.

Three white janitors testified in the first trial that they had seen Brandley follow Miss Fergeson to a restroom.

Brush fires may have been arson

FORT WORTH (AP) — Fire officials say that a series of brush and grass fires that scorched hundreds of acres on Fort Worth's western edge and destroyed one home may have been arson.

At least 150 firemen battled at least nine brush and grass fires that started along Interstate 820 on the western edge of the city Thursday.

Several roads had to be closed temporarily because of the smoky fires. No one was injured in the fires that were fought by fire departments from several area towns.

A volunteer fireman from Haslet was questioned for a time, but was released without being charged. The man, 18, was arrested by Texas Department of Public Safety officers near the scene of one of the fires.

Any charges that could be filed in the fires would be a misdemeanor for accidentally starting a fire due to negligence, Tarrant County Deputy Fire Marshal Dan Praytor.

Lt. Kent Worley of the Fort Worth Fire Department labeled the fires "extremely suspicious" because of the timeframe in which they happened and because of their locations along I-820 and Boat Club Road.

"I can't really think of a reason how and why all the fires started like they did in a short time frame along the road," Worley said. "The chances of it not being someone starting it are extremely slim. It could have all happened without intentionally being set, sure the possibility is there, but it would be extremely slight."

"As many (fires) as we've had, and as widespread as they are, we don't feel one was caused from the other," said Walter McConnell, an engineer with the Fort Worth department.

The first fires were spotted about 1 p.m. on the outskirts of the north and south sides of Fort Worth. By 7 p.m., McConnell said most of the fires were under control, but a few spotted fires remained.

Pete Anthony uses a hose to help Fort Worth firemen water down the remains of a grass fire that burned out of control in the city on Thursday.

One of the fires destroyed a house valued at about $100,000, officials said. Another came within 100 yards of a large apartment complex, he said, but most of the destruction was to about 500 acres of grass and woodlands.

Yolanda Cortez, who moved into the house about a month ago, was taking a nap with two of her children, Daniel, 2, and Erica, 6, when a woman knocked on the door and told them about the fire.

"We tried to get to the water faucet to start spraying the house, but we couldn't get to it," said Mrs. Cortez, who watched as firemen worked to battle the fire that destroyed the home and the family's Christmas gifts.

"It's sad," Mrs. Cortez said, crying. "Everything we worked for is gone."

Several brush and grass fires also kept firefighters in East Texas busy Thursday.

Firefighters in Hopkins County responded to four grass fires in a 10-minute period, Sulphur Springs Fire Capt. W.L. Bowen said.

The fires engulfed three mobile homes and two barns, Bowen said.

No one was hurt, but volunteer firefighter Jeff Strickland was treated at Hopkins County Memorial Hospital for smoke inhalation and heat exhaustion, Bowen said.

In Smith County, volunteer firefighters responded to 11 grass fires in about 3½ hours.

One home was destroyed in a fire that burned about 100 acres, according to David Wintters, volunteer assistant fire marshal.

FAMILY MATTERS

Denial can affect entire family

By JIM MAY, Ph.D.

May

DEAR FAMILY: I am very worried about my sister-in-law. Whenever she starts drinking I don't think she can stop. I tell my brother that I think that she has a drinking problem and he tells me that I'm the one with the problem. He says that she just likes to have a good time. His idea of a "good time" is very different from mine. Last year at the family Christmas party she was having fun and was hanging all over her brother-in-law and her sister got mad and started a fight. We had to separate them before they started hitting each other. Everyone in the family just laughed about it, but my 6-year-old still remembers when Aunt (name) and Aunt (name) got into a fight.

Now my real problem is that this year the Christmas party is at my house and all the family is invited again. I happen to know that my sister-in-law is still drinking almost a six-pack of beer when she drinks. I think that she probably is worse this year than she was last year. What am I going to do about all this? I don't want my children to grow up remembering our family Christmas as Saturday Night at the Fights. My husband says that there isn't anything to do because it's no big deal. He thinks that I am overreacting. Am I? WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: I don't think you are overreacting. I believe there is a real problem that you can see but your husband and his family cannot. Whether they don't believe your sister-in-law has a drinking problem or they don't believe her behavior is a problem, it is a problem. A family in denial is very difficult to help because they don't believe there is a problem to be solved.

Unfortunately, if you continue to "name" the problem you will have broken the "rule of silence" and may be ostracized for your courage. You have every right to demand no repeat of last year's debacle in your home. I encourage you to tell your husband that you will not have the party at your house unless: (a) he tells his sister that she cannot drink if she comes, or (b) there will be no alcohol served. I realize how difficult it will be to give him such an ultimatum and then carry it out, but in order to truly help your sister-in-law you must confront the problem.

I also encourage you to attend some Al-Anon meetings. Call 682-4721 for meeting times.

DEAR CONFIDENTIAL: Suicide among young people is a frightening phenomena that is becoming a national epidemic. Approximately 5,000 young people commit suicide each year. Causes or triggers are still largely unknown, but some of the more common reasons are depression, interjected anger, social isolation, alienation from peers, and drug and alcohol abuse.

Alcohol is a depressant which, when combined with an existing depression, can support an act that the sober person would never commit.

The intent to commit suicide isn't always communicated. Research indicates that while about 80 percent of those attempting suicide verbally expressed their intentions, 20 percent did not.

Dr. Charles Fishman, an internationally known child psychiatrist, said that an adolescent's suicide attempt may be partially the result of culture's demand for immediate gratification and an inability to tolerate contradiction or pain. As parents we must prepare our children for the inevitable frustrations of life and help them regulate impulsive behavior. Children don't always realize the finality of some actions.

I encourage you to attend a meeting of 'Survivors of Suicides." The group is for friends and family members of suicide victims. Call 685-1566 for more information.

Recipes require food, foil, car

Copley News Service

You can turn your car into a rolling oven, according to chef Chris Maynard.

All you need is aluminum foil, your car's manifold and a destination — about 55 miles from home for a nice halibut dinner or about 100 miles for a medium-rare steak.

The recipes are in Maynard's new cookbook, "Manifold Destiny."

The trick is to triple-wrap the food in aluminum foil and tie it to the car's exhaust manifold. Start your engine and off you go.

A nice pork loin dinner requires you to drive from Philadelphia to Norfolk, Va.

But if you want to reheat your dinner, just drive around the block a couple of times.

Study researches causes for divorce-bound marriages

Copley News Service

Most modern marriages are destined for divorce — even before the knot has been tied — that's one conclusion of a 20-year scientific study of marriage. The verdict on vow-taking is that 80 percent of marriages are destined for divorce.

Clinical psychologist Howard Markman says there are two main factors for predicting marital success.

Divorce looms if the male withdraws from conflict and shies away from discussing issues, or if the female uses invalidations such as, "You never listen to me."

Markman says being able to negotiate solutions to issues is mandatory for marital success. So if couples learn to argue constructively, soul mates may successfully make it through marriage.

Artists depict migraine pain

CLEVELAND (AP) — They seem out of place in a hospital lobby, these graphic paintings and pencil drawings that portray jackhammers piercing the skull, eyes plucked out, stomachs disemboweled.

"You feel extreme pain throughout the head," said Jason Buddie, 16, a migraine headache sufferer who illustrated his ordeal for a national art contest.

"It's a picture of a man sitting on a park bench with arms tearing him apart," said Buddie of his entry, which was among the winners.

Buddie, who takes art classes at Brunswich H.S., where he is a junior, and at the Cleveland Institute of Art, says he has suffered from migraines since he was 13.

"Your vision is blurred and you see blotches of color...," he says. "Then you feel extreme pain throughout the head. It's like a piercing feeling in the middle of your head. You can't do anything when you have one."

That picture emerges forcefully in Buddie's color pencil drawing of the sitting man, his legs held down by arms reaching from under the bench "to show," he says, "I really can't do anything but just sleep it off. Another (hand) is reaching into the stomach to show I get sick."

Buddie's youthful vision of a migraine was among works displayed in the lobby of the Cleveland Clinic as part of a traveling exhibition sponsored by the National Headache Foundation and a pharmaceutical laboratory. The exhibition is in Philadelphia through the end of the year and will move to Palm Springs, Calif., in early 1990.

Dr. Robert Kunkel, a migraine specialist at the clinic and a foundation vice president, says he isn't surprised at the artistic severity of the pain depicted by the victims.

"Being one who sees a lot of people with migraine headaches," he says, "they do describe their headaches in these bizarre terms."

Many of the works on exhibit focus on the head. One shows a jackhammer piercing the skull, another shows a head in a vice while still another depicts a needle jutting into an eye. There's a person hit by lightning, with shattered body parts and an exploding stomach.

Mary Wawrytko, 39, a free-lance artist from Cleveland and one of the 22 national merit award winners, says she was impressed with both the graphic portrayals of pain and the artistic quality.

"I thought it was very high quality," said Wawrytko, whose charcoal drawing is of a face half in darkness to reflect the common complaint of a migraine focusing on half the head.

"The half in darkness depicts the site where the pain is. The figures circling around the portrait...show a lot of pain and discomfort."

Kunkel says migraines affect about 15 percent of Americans. Many victims can reduce the impact with medication and by avoiding "trigger" factors such as stress, hormones such as birth control pills and foods such as chocolate, aged cheese and red wine.

Migraines are inherited, says Kunkel, and the pain is associated with changes in blood vessels susceptible to hormones and chemicals.

DEAR ABBY

Taking children to violent movies gets bad review from reader

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Last night, my husband and I went to an R-rated movie. It was a big box-office hit and had a lot of publicity. There was a lot of graphic sex and violence.

What disturbed me more than anything was a little boy, about 4 years old, sitting behind us. His comments broke my heart: "Daddy, why did he kill that lady?" "Is the other man dead?" "Why are they hurting him?" "Is it over yet?" "I want to go home."

His daddy couldn't make his son understand that what he was seeing was only make-believe — it looked so real. That child might as well have witnessed 25 live murders that night.

Is it any wonder our children are revved up emotionally, acting up at school and using foul language at such a young age? What I witnessed last night was a passive, yet very dangerous form of child abuse. — A WITNESS IN ORANGE, CALIF.

DEAR WITNESS: Yours is a very significant letter, and I thank you for it. Too few adults realize how easily influenced 4-year-old children can be.

Parents would never knowingly feed their children garbage, yet they expose their impressionable young minds to the worst examples of brutality and man's inhumanity to man — believing they're too young to be affected.

DEAR ABBY: I have a relative who drives me crazy. She's a nice person, but she is never on time. Every time I meet her somewhere, she is always at least half an hour late. Her excuses run from "Just as I was leaving the house, my telephone rang ..." to "The traffic was terrible ..." blah, blah, blah.

I suppose it's silly for me to ask you what I can do about this, but I just had to get it off my chest. — TIRED OF WAITING

DEAR TIRED: If you're going to meet this woman at 1:00, make the date for 12:30. And, since you know that she is always late, be prepared to wait for her. Do not let your anger build. Always carry something to read. I will make the waiting more tolerable, reduce your blood pressure — and you may learn something.

DEAR ABBY: I have the perfect solution for all those people out there who are always complaining about not receiving thank-you notes. Simply do not give a gift out of obligation — try giving it out of love. Then notice that the person you give this gift to will give you a very sincere "thank you" (unless the person has no manners, in which case he or she didn't deserve the gift in the first place).

I do not mean to be ugly, but do you buy a gift only to get a thank-you note? I give gifts because I care about the person I am giving it to. If giving because you care isn't the reason you give, then go out and buy something for the person you love the most — yourself. And don't forget to send yourself a thank-you note. — A TRUE GIVER IN ALABAMA

DEAR TRUE GIVER: People "give" for a variety of reasons. Some people give a gift to reciprocate for a gift they were given. Most people give a gift because they sincerely want to express their affection or friendship with a material token. Then there are those who give gifts spontaneously for no rhyme, reason or occasion — they just happen to see something they think someone they know will appreciate. I've known people like all of the above. In fact, I am one of them. But I have never met anyone who gave a gift because he or she wanted a thank-you note.

DEAR ABBY: The letter in your column about the importance of teaching children the proper way to answer a telephone brought back memories of a little lesson I taught my grandsons concerning telephone etiquette.

They used to call my home and say, "Grandma, is my mom there?" My stock reply was: "I'm fine, thank you. And how are you, dear?" — LA JOLLA GRANDMA

We are deep in the maw of the Christmas season, that magical time of year when we put aside our petty animosities and take solace in the gentle, innocent voices of little children clamoring for Ghostbuster laser death-ray weapons.

There are some who would blame the proliferation of violent children's toys on television, but I don't think that this is the case.

Yes, it is true that my 3-year-old son owns at least 83 Teen-age Mutant Ninja Turtle action figures, each one of which comes with its own personal arsenal of swords, daggers, crossbows, hatchets, machine guns and hand grenades.

And, yes, it is also true that his Christmas list consists entirely of toys that he has seen advertised on television and that his description of those toys is exactly the same as the TV announcer's description, right down to the inflection.

But I still don't think TV is as powerful as people say. At least I didn't think so until the other night when my son came into the living room where my wife and I were reading.

"Why aren't you watching Dumbo?" my wife asked him.

"Mommy," he said, "we'll be right back after these messages."

But there is more to Christmas than sheer, pure, bald, rude, unvarnished commercialism.

For example, there are Christmas cards. I know of no better way to get into the true spirit of Christmas than to put on a cheery Christmas record, pour myself a cup of eggnog, and then sit down with my list of relatives and friends and start crossing off names.

Over the years, I have used many excuses for crossing people off my Christmas list:

1) I see them so often that it would be a meaningless gesture to send them a card.

2) I see them so infrequently that it would be a meaningless gesture to send them a card.

3) They have not sent me a Christmas card in several years, so they don't deserve one from me.

4) I have not sent them a Christmas card in several years, so it would be embarrassing to start doing so now.

5) They might interpret a card in the wrong way.

Of all the excuses, the last one has saved me the most postage. There are many ways that people can misinterpret your Christmas card.

For example, they might think that I'm fond of them, when I'm not, or they might think that I'm being impersonal, when I'm trying to be friendly.

They might think that I'm trying to get something, give something, buy something or sell something when that's the farthest thing from my mind, or they might be too slow to pick up on it if I am.

They might think that I'm sending them a card because I'm too cheap to telephone, or they might think that I'm putting them down for always phoning and never writing.

They might be offended if the card has a religious message.

They might be offended if it doesn't.

They might be slightly offended if I enclose a form letter describing in intimate detail all the wonderful things that have happened in our family the past year.

They might be really offended if I enclose a form letter describing in intimate detail all the wonderful things that have happened in our family the past year.

Clearly, Christmas cards are fraught with dangerous hidden meanings, which is why I've pared my list down to almost nothing.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Estate planning is necessary

By STEVE EDWARDS

Edwards

When planning for retirement, establishing goals is important in determining the ultimate financial plan.

Determine how much money will be needed to meet your retirement needs, and how much of your current income can be safely spent today without destroying you financially in retirement. Financial planning will help answer these questions realistically.

Creating an estate is a difficult process, thanks to inflation, increasing taxes, excessive government spending, political turmoil and permissive credit limits. Unfortunately, in many families planning decisions are based on misconceptions, rumors and incomplete knowledge, such as:

- "I have everything in joint tenancy — I don't need a will."
- "I have a will — therefore there will be no probate."
- "I saw an attorney not more than five years ago and took care of everything."
- "My life insurance is going to my estate, to make it easier to pay taxes."
- "Everyone should avoid probate."
- "My brother is a successful businessman — he should be my executor."

Failure to carefully plan your estate means failure to achieve some of your objectives, and will add to the costs and frustrations your loved ones will have to face.

Estate planning is the accumulation, protection and disposition of your estate assets. Penalties for failure to plan can be severe. Generally, the larger your unplanned estate, the greater amount you pay in taxes, probate and administration expenses. But the smaller your unplanned estate, the more any reduction will be felt by your family and the more serious its effects can be.

Laws governing estate planning and estate taxation are complex, but time spent in unraveling and understanding them is worthwhile. By completing necessary estate planning steps, you provide immediate and necessary personal data for those who must act for you in case of emergency.

Most people intend to plan and organize their financial affairs, but then put off the actual planning. Such procrastination can cause hardship on a family in the event of illness, disability, prolonged absence from home or premature death of a loved one.

Homemade gifts show thoughtfulness

NEW YORK (AP) — If Jaguars and diamonds are a little pricey and store-bought baubles aren't personal enough for those on your list, gifts fresh from your kitchen in attractive reusable containers make doubly delightful presents.

The time, thoughtfulness and care that go into something hand-made touch us all, and part of the pleasure is looking for reusable containers. I've found them in all sorts of places. Import-export stores have pottery, glass, baskets, from all over the world. A thrift or antique shop may unearth a charming tray or vintage Mason jars, and local artisans offer one-of-a-kind pieces for the kitchen and home that will be treasured for years.

Anything will be happily received, from a cut glass cruet for your homemade vinegar to a tiny, tiered jewelry box with each drawer filled with tantalizing two-bite confections.

When it comes time to stir things up in the kitchen, be sure to include your grandchildren, or any small children for that matter. The sights, sounds and smells enliven the creative spirit, and simple tasks such as helping stuff dates and rolling out cookies are just the ticket. They can have the fun of making a present for a teacher or treats for stocking-stuffers.

Following are some suggestions for your Christmas or Hannukkah table and for gift-giving. This holiday season we most certainly want to offer the precious gift of our time to programs in church, synagogue or school to cook and serve a holiday meal to people without the warmth and love of home and hearth and family.

HOLIDAY SPICED FRUIT

1½ tablespoons candied ginger, minced
1 pound dried pears, cut in half
1 pound dried apricots
½ pound golden raisins
¾ tablespoon allspice
¾ tablespoon cardamom
1 tablespoon curry
2 one-pound cans of salad fruit, with juice (remove maraschino cherries)
2 cups apple cider or apple juice
6 ounces fresh cranberries, washed, stems picked off
1 pound apples, cored and sliced but unpeeled
¼ cup brandy, optional

In 6-quart casserole or pot, add ginger, dried fruits, canned fruits with liquid and apple cider or juice. Add seasonings. Cover and cook at 350 degrees about 45 minutes, stirring every 15 minutes. If it becomes too dry, add more liquid. Add apples and cranberries and cook approximately 15 minutes more. Serve in a glass or pottery bowl on buffet with ham and salad.

For gift-giving, fill 16- or 32-ounce jars with spiced fruit. They can be stored in refrigerator for months or frozen.

CHOCOLATE PISTACHIO SQUARES

SHORTBREAD BASE:
1 cup unbleached white flour
½ cup melted butter
¼ cup powdered sugar

Mix flour and sugar together in bowl. Add melted butter and form into dough. Press dough with hands into 8x8-inch pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes until lightly brown on top. Cool. This can be done in advance.

FILLING:
1 12-ounce bag semi-sweet chocolate chips
¼ cup water
¼ cup pistachio nuts, chopped fine

Melt chocolate chips in water in top of double boiler (If you don't have a double boiler, put ingredients in a stainless bowl and place over pot with boiling water). Whisk until smooth. Pour evenly over crust. Spread with spatula to ends of pan. Sprinkle with pistachios. Cut in 1½-inch squares.

Steers dreaming of white Saturday in grid playoffs

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

BIG SPRING — Not many coaches want to stand out on the sideline in bitterly-cold weather, unless it would be to their team's advantage.

David Thompson wants it cold — the colder the better for his Big Spring Steers. The Steers' head coach figures his team has a better chance in the cold against Tyler Chapel Hill in Class 4A state semifinal action Saturday, since a cold day might neutralize some of Chapel Hill's speed.

"The weather's supposed to be cold, and that's what we want," Thompson said. "It might help us a little bit."

Kickoff is 2 p.m. at Pennington Field in the Dallas-Fort Worth suburb of Bedford.

The Steers will "dance with what brung 'em," to quote former University of Texas mentor Darrell Royal. Thompson said power football will be the order of the day Saturday in Bedford.

The Big Spring mentor doesn't feel his team can afford to lose four fumbles, which happened during last week's 20-19 quarterfinal win over Monahans.

"Our defense played pretty well the whole time, but the offense has to take care of their part," Thompson said.

The Steers gained twice as many yards as Monahans last week, but the four fumbles allowed Monahans to lead into the final 90 seconds before Steer quarterback Rance Thompson hooked up with wingback Neal Mayfield for a 32-yard touchdown pass.

Thompson will again lead the Steer offense with stats that get ever-gaudier. The 170-pound senior has completed 99-of-187 passes for 1,564 yards and 14 touchdowns.

Mayfield remains his favorite target. The junior wingback has caught 40 passes for 830 yards and 10 touchdowns, while he has rushed for around 1,000 yards and 20 touchdowns.

The Steers have also gotten a lift from tailback Jermaine Miller, who has gained 225 yards in three playoff games, including 100 yards last week.

But from all indications, Chapel Hill's defense will put the Steer attack to the test. The Bulldogs, 10-4, have shut out three of their four playoff opponents and have allowed 171 yards rushing in four playoff appearances.

"We're playing good defense," first-year head coach Dickie Meeks deadpanned. "They play good technique, but the key is they play so hard."

Major college prospects like standup end Willie Mitchell (192 pounds) and tackle Elvin Massenburge (220) key the Chapel Hill defense, while free safety Kendrick Price tries to hold things together.

Something's worked. The Bulldogs have posted eight shutouts this season.

But the offense has been a state of flux for much of the season, and therein may lie much of the reason for the Bulldogs' four losses.

Chapel Hill depends heavily on junior tailback Kendrick Bell, a 170-pounder who has gained 1,360 yards and 19 touchdowns in 237 trips to the line. But the rest of the Bulldog backfield has undergone a complete turnover since the beginning of the season.

Sophomore fullback Delithro Bell, Kendrick's cousin, has rushed for about 600 yards after taking over in mid-season, while Price has provided a rushing threat at quarterback since taking charge of the offense in the ninth week.

Price took over after the Bulldogs' top two receivers were ushered out of action with an injury and academic ineligibility, respectively, and Meeks decided he needed more of a running threat.

The senior has come through with a high of 55 yards rushing against Lancaster in the second round of the playoffs — not all-world numbers, but enough to take some pressure off K. Bell.

The Steer defense will again be paced by middle linebacker Felipe Saiz, free safety Freddie Rodriquez and tackle Pat Wilbert.

Chapel Hill broke into the playoffs for the first time in 19 years after several years as a Tyler-area grid doormat. The Bulldogs were knocked out in the second round last year, but have been almost impenetrable in this year's "third season."

The Bulldogs opened their playoff push with a 17-0 shutout of Terrell, beat Lancaster 25-0; nipped Denison 16-14; and shut down Mount Pleasant 13-0 last week.

Thompson said the Steers can't worry about the Bulldogs' penchant for shutouts going into Saturday's game.

"We can't look at what they've done," he said. "If we did, Brewer would have beaten us (in a Region I semifinal two weeks ago).

Big Spring had a bye in bi-district play before nipping Hereford 22-19 in the second round; crushing Fort Worth Brewer 39-6 two weeks ago and just getting by Monahans 20-19.

The Steers prepared for their first game on artificial turf with practice at Ratliff Stadium in Odessa on Monday and Tuesday. Thompson pronounced those sessions a success despite some wicked weather on Monday.

"Monday, we just kind of talked, but we had a great practice Tuesday. I thought we looked quick on the turf, and I never have thought we were that quick," Thompson said.

"They're good, but we feel like we're pretty good."

Mojo hopes to spellbind Marshall

By BILL PRICE
Sports Writer

ODESSA — As if any team needs more incentive against Odessa Permian, Marshall can look back to the second week of the 1989 high school football season for inspiration entering Saturday's Class 5A state semifinal at Texas Stadium in Irving.

When the ball it kicked from the tee at 2 p.m., it will begin Permian's third consecutive semifinal appearance and the school's 13th in its storied grid history. In addition, Mojo owns four state championship trophies.

So obviously, everybody guns for perennially powerful Permian. But Sept. 16 saw the Panthers upend the then No. 10-ranked Mavericks 21-7 at Ratliff Stadium. That was also the date of Arey Villa's coming out party, as the senior running back marched onto the Mojo scene with 202 yards in 11 carries.

Villa and Permian have gone on to an undefeated season so far (14-0) while the Mavs enter the game with an 11-2-1 mark. Marshall has gone unbeaten since losing to Permian, having lost its season opener to Monroe (La.) Neville 22-17, and tying Temple 10-10 in bi-district play.

Marshall advanced from that game on penetrations and, coming off a 21-8 win over Huntsville in the quarterfinals last week, is looking at the Panthers with a big chip on its shoulder.

That concerns Permian head coach Gary Gaines, who added that — just as would be expected after playing 12 games since their last meeting — both teams have improved.

"The main thing that's different for them now is that they throw the ball a lot more," Gaines said. "When we played them they had an inexperienced quarterback (senior David Haynes), but in the last six games they have thrown the ball quite a bit."

Gaines also points to Marshall linebacker Londell Johnson, who missed the first meeting with Permian but has emerged as a defensive star for the Mavericks.

"Johnson didn't play against us but he has been one of their defensive leaders ever since then," he said.

In short, the Mojo mentor hopes his squad can be successful at doing what it has done effectively all season; balance the offense and slow the competition's attack.

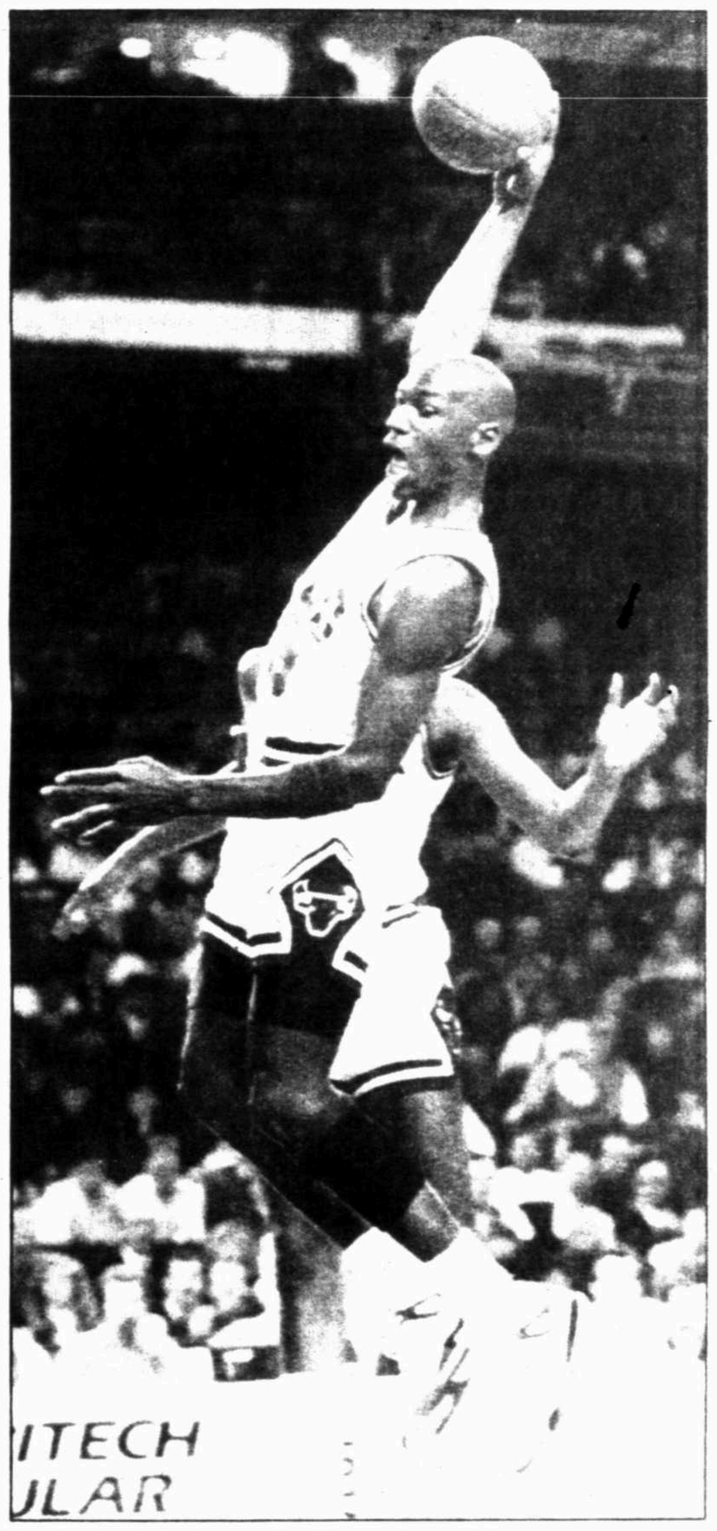

In the first Marshall game, the Panthers weare able to accomplish that goal by piling up 371 yards and allowing 230.

"We are going to have to find some way to be effective offensively. We're going to have to move the football by mixing it up with the run and pass. Defensively, we are going to have to do a good job of reading their multiple formations and not give up the big pass play like we did against Arlington Lamar," Gaines said.

Lamar, who the Panthers downed 20-10 in the quarterfinals, was able to hit for a pair of big pass plays on the Mojo defenders, but Gaines showed more concern for an often overlooked aspect of the game.

"Lamar burned us a couple of times and I'm sure Marshall will try to exploit our pass defense. But what Marshall does so well is play special teams.

"They have blocked punts on Huntsville and Temple, and another blocked punt back for a touchdown against Klein Forest. They nearly blocked three on us. That's been a big part of their game and they just have great team speed," he said.

Girls open district basketball play

By BILL PRICE
Sports Writer

With the arrival of the District 4-5A girls basketball season comes the glimmer of hope for championships and playoff berths, and the determination to turn the intensity level up a notch.

Accompanying that hope is a clean slate for both Midland Lee (4-8 on the season) and Midland High (5-7). All the 4-5A girls teams are 0-0 in loop play entering tonight, but that will change with the conclusion of the Odessa Permian at Lee and MHS at Odessa High games.

The Lee-Permian games will be played at 8 p.m. in the Lee gym while MHS-OHS will be played at the same time in Odessa High's house.

In non-district boys play, Lee hosts Greenwood at 8 p.m. tonight in the Chaparral Center and MHS travels to Big Spring for an 8 p.m. game.

"We've played some good teams in the preseason and have played well at times," said Jane Young, Lady Bulldog coach at MHS. "Hopefully, we can put it all together against Odessa High and on into the district schedule."

"We really don't know what we've got yet. We have been improving a lot, but Permian has a good team. It should be a good game," said Shirley Stephenson, Lee coach.

For point production, the Lady Rebels have so far relied on the services of Mary Ann Isom and Sheena Parker. Isom enters the Permian game with an average of 14.9 points per game through Lee's first 12 outings. Parker is also averaging in double figures with 10.7 points a game.

But according to Stephenson, the Lady Rebs might need big games from a pair of tall young players to come away with a win.

"When they called me in and told me I was traded, I wasn't that thrilled about it. But when they told me I was going to Phoenix, I had to control myself from jumping up and down." — Kurt Rambis on being traded from Charlotte to Phoenix.

Trivia Teaser...

Friday's Question — The Southwest Conference had the second-largest basketball attendance increase last season, with 111,157 more fans passing through the turnstiles than in 1987-88. Which conference had the largest fan increase?

Thursday's Answer — Neil McCarthy also coached at Weber State University in Ogden, Utah.

Prep Playoffs

SCHULENBURG (AP) — Elvin Adams Sr. can remember when Schulenburg High School's colors were orange and black.

The 49-year-old was a quarterback in the late 1950s. And a pretty fair one, as he'll readily tell you. But Adams is black, so he did his quarterbacking for old J.A. Green High School instead of Schulenburg. The only Schulenburg uniforms he wore were the hand-me-downs the Green players got when the Shorthorns got new ones.

Integration, like the birth of his son Jeffery, was still a long way off.

"We wanted to play them but they didn't want to. Sometimes some of the older guys talk about (getting the chance to play for Schulenburg)," Adams says without a trace of bitterness. "If we had had the opportunity like they have ... but we didn't."

Friday night Adams will be in the stands at Kyle Field in College Station, watching what time and change has brought to his family. Jeffery "Bo" Adams will start at quarterback for the No. 2 Schulenburg Shorthorns in their 8 p.m. Class 2A semifinal playoff meeting with top-ranked Groveton.

"It's something I want to do that he didn't do, or couldn't do," says the 18-year-old junior. "He was quarterback at his school and he was pretty good from what he tells me."

Word-of-mouth evaluation is not necessary for his son. Bo Adams, a muscular 5-foot-7-inch, 160-pounder, has the statistics. He's rushed for 714 yards on 68 carries, including 12 for touchdowns. Although he's nursing a sore elbow, he's completed 57 percent of his passes (128 of 226) for 2,366 yards. His touchdown-interception ratio is an incredible 29-to-5 and he currently ranks fourth all-time in Class 2A single-season passing.

"I've got a quote for you," says Shorthorns Coach Dave Husmann. "If anyone redefines what it is to be a prototype quarterback, it's him. He doesn't have the height, but that son-of-a-gun can do it."

Which is one less headache for Husmann. The fifth-year head coach sits in his office with the space heater on one side and the telephone on the other. On this day he'd need both.

Spurs in 7-foot heaven

NBA Roundup

Associated Press

Rookie David Robinson and the San Antonio Spurs won their first confrontation with veteran Akeem Olawjuon and the Houston Rockets.

Robinson won on points 19-15 but Olajuwon dominated the boards 16-9. The Spurs won the game 104-100.

"You have to give credit where credit is due," said Olajuwon, who made only five of 17 shots. "He was very aggressive and very, very quick. He's one of the most physical centers I have faced this year.

"He was really tough. I don't know what I'll do different next time I play him. I know I'll have to shoot better."

In other NBA games Thursday, it was Chicago 124, Orlando 113; Indiana 102, New Jersey 78 and Washington 105, Charlotte 101.

While the Robinson-Olajuwon battle drew most of the attention, Terry Cummings and Willie Anderson provided most of the heroics.

Cummings scored 26 points and Anderson sparked a fourth-quarter burst with 10 of his 19 points. San Antonio outscored Houston 19-9 in the final 7:24.

The Spurs trailed 91-85 with 7:40 left but scored six straight points to tie the game. Olajuwon's basket with 5:18 left gave Houston its last lead, 93-91. The Spurs took control of the game with an 11-2 run over the next five minutes, including seven points by Anderson.

"My objective is to go in there and take control of the boards," Robinson said. "Tonight Akeem did that. We're both going to come up with points, so that doesn't matter. I wanted to go in there and grab rebounds. I didn't do a good job of that."

Houston coach Don Chaney said the giant centers "were tight and both were conscious of each other. Next time we play them you'll see a better performance from Akeem. I guarantee it."

Bulls 124, Magic 113

Michael Jordan scored 26 of his 38 points in the first half as Chicago jumped to an early lead. Jordan, the NBA's leading scorer with a 32.5 average, played only 25 minutes, the fewest he has played this season.

Scottie Pippen added 20 points and eight steals for the Bulls. Reggie Theus led Orlando with 19 points.

Pitt coach refuses to resign, gets fired

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mike Gottfried apparently has learned that same lesson as predecessor Foge Fazio. At the University of Pittsburgh, winning isn't good enough. You've got to win big.

Gottfried, who couldn't restore Pitt to the national prominence enjoyed under Johnny Majors and Jackie Sherrill, was fired Thursday by Athletic Director Ed Bozik after he refused to resign, according to athletic department sources.

Neither Gottfried, who feuded with the media and had several rifts with his Pitt superiors over academics, nor Bozik could be reached for comment.

Pitt issued only a terse statement confirming the two met on Thursday.

"The University of Pittsburgh has confirmed that Athletic Director Ed Bozik and Coach Mike Gottfried have had discussions concerning the future of Pitt's football program," the statement said. "The university is awaiting Coach Gottfried's reactions to those discussions."

Sources said a news conference was expected as early as today to clarify the situation.

There was no immediate word on whether Gottfried, who was 26-17-2 at Pitt, would coach the 23rd-ranked Panthers (7-3-1) against Texas A&M in the Hancock Bowl at El Paso, Texas, on Dec. 30.

Gottfried enjoyed moderate success while going 15-18-1 at traditional Big 8 Conference also-ran Kansas, but quickly discovered after his December 1985 hiring that Pitt isn't Kansas.

And he learned that excellent recruiting doesn't always guarantee success on the field. Gottfried's recruit classes were annually ranked among the best in college football, but didn't lead to a single major bowl bid.

Pitt played in nine consecutive bowls from 1975-83 under Majors, Sherrill and Fazio. And even the embattled Fazio (25-18-3), also fired after four seasons, took Pitt to the Fiesta Bowl, something Gottfried couldn't do.

Pitt went 5-5-1, 8-4, 6-5 and 7-3-1 under Gottfried, but had no Top 10 finishes in the poll and played in just one bowl, losing 32-27 to unranked Texas in the 1987 Bluebonnet Bowl.

Pitt briefly moved back into the Top 10 this fall with a 5-0-1 start, but lost three of its last five games, including embarrassing defeats to No. 4 Notre Dame (45-7) and No. 2 Miami (24-3).

Pitt's last loss may have accelerated Gottfried's departure.

With Pitt trailing archrival Penn State 13-10 on Nov. 25, Gottfried ran three straight plays up the middle and settled for an tying field goal with 2½ minutes left. Penn State responded by driving the length of the field for a game-winning field goal.

Gottfried, booed by Pitt fans for kicking the field goal, declined to discuss his strategy after the game.

As the wind-chill factor dips below the teens Husmann is juggling phone calls with other coaches, reporters and a shoe supplier.

In between calls and warming his hands by the heater, and over the cacophony coming from the locker-room, where a junior high class was engaged in a heated game of "Weiner" — a wrestling drill in which the participants try to tear a weiner-shaped towel away from each other — Husmann talks about his District 26AA runnersup.

Husmann talks about the impact sophomore Marc Tidwell has had at tight end. He talks about the boost the offense has received from the return from sprained ankles by halfbacks Tracey Moore and Darrell Demel.

"Then of course, there's Bo."

He goes on about the contribution of halfback Michael Moore, Tracey's nephew, and told of the importance of wide receiver Terry Thomas and Daniel Adams.

"Then of course, there's Bo."

There's a defense called the Mad Dogs. Wide receivers called Peter Pan (Thomas) and Dan the Man (Adams). But it always comes back to Bo.

"Bo, he runs the show," says Tidwell, revealing an ear for poetry to go along with his nose for the ball.

Gloria Adams, Bo's mother, says the youngest of her six children just got tagged with the nickname for no apparent reason. Bo sheepishly says at first it was short for "Bozo," that courtesy of a neighbor. Adams' teammates are more favorable, adjusting the nickname to "Bo Duke," after the character from the "Dukes of Hazzard" television series who claimed he could make things fly.

"'Cuz Bo (Adams) could fly," Tidwell then explains.

Real-life has brought a more apt namesake. Bo doesn't refer to himself in the third-person, but he does play baseball and football like another Bo (Jackson). With the retirement of Tony Dorsett, Adams has made the two-sport star his idol.

After Orlando scored the game's first basket, the Bulls scored 11 straight points. Orlando trailed 41-35 when Jordan took control, scoring 15 points, including two 3-point baskets, as the Bulls led 66-52 lead at halftime. He added 12 points in the third period.

Pacers 102, Nets 78

Rik Smits scored 13 of his 30 points as the Indiana Pacers built a 25-9 lead after one period on the way to their 10th victory in 12 games. Smits, who also had 15 rebounds, scored nine points as the Pacers started the game with a 17-3 run. The Nets missed 17 of their first 18 shots and committed eight turnovers in the first quarter.

Reggie Miller scored 17 points for the Pacers and Chuck Person added 15. Sam Bowie and Dennis Hopson led the Nets with 15 apiece.

Bullets 105, Hornets 101

Mark Alarie sank an 18-foot jumper with 15 seconds left to snap a 101-101 tie and Washington handed Charlotte its ninth consecutive setback, tying the club record. Ledell Eackles led Washington with 21 points, seven during a key third-quarter run.

The Hornets, whose losing streak matches the longest in the NBA this season, failed to shoot 50 percent for the 14th straight game, making just 39 of 92 shots for 42.4 percent. Rex Chapman had 23 points and Robert Reid, in his first game since being re-signed, added 20.

Group offers piece of Rangers to private citizens

ARLINGTON (AP) — A group that owns one-fifth of the Texas Rangers is offering a deal to let private citizens buy a piece of the American League team.

But the offer, which requires a minimum $2,000 investment, isn't for everybody.

Investors must have a net worth of at least $150,000 and annual income of at least $60,000. Homes, furniture and cars don't count in the calculation of net worth, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Thursday.

Most professional sports franchises are privately-owned. The Anheuser Busch Co. of St. Louis owns the Cardinals

NBC wants Berman

Copley News Service

He was cable when cable wasn't cool. Now, there is a distinct possibility that he's about to go positively establishment on us.

The wisecracking, nicknaming golden throat of ESPN, who has successfully pushed the envelope of conventional sportscasting on cable for the last 10 years, has caught the attention of big-league scouts.

The network, NBC, wants him.

Say it ain't so, Chris Berman.

Terry O'Neil, executive producer of NBC Sports, plans to emphasize a weekend studio show that will pick up where "NFL Live" expires at season's end. Never mind that NBC already has Bob Costas, Marv Albert, ESPN alumna Gayle Gardner and O.J. Simpson in its stable — O'Neil sees Berman as the exclamation point, the anchor in a yet-untitled format that will cover breaking sports news as it happens and try to be interesting when it doesn't.

Reports say Berman also has been offered a major role in NBC's coverage of the 1992 Olympics and enough perks to make Deborah Norville green with envy.

Will Berman be NBC-ing us anytime soon?

"We have almost six months left on a contract with ESPN," said his agent, Art Kaminsky, who represents a New York management firm, "and we intend to fulfill that. We're continuing to negotiate. Chris has received some really nice offers ... he's got a very tough decision to make."

In some ways, the decision on whether Berman should decide to move up to "the show" (in "Bull Durham" parlance) isn't so difficult. It's the logical move. NBC is, um, bigger. ESPN is found on about half of the nation's TV sets. NBC is on every one of them.

But as a network anchor, Berman's exposure would be greatly reduced — he currently appears on ESPN's "SportsCenter" five nights a week and anchors the "NFL GameDay" show in the fall. NBC's job is essentially weekend work. "But you have to remember that audience," said Kaminsky. "It's much bigger."

A network job theoretically is confining, at least compared with the boundaries Berman established at ESPN, "but I don't think the network has been very rigid with John Madden and Dan Dierdorf ... Chris can still be the star," answered Kaminsky, who is closing no doors.

Then there's the money. Berman is making less than $200,000 a year with ESPN, a fraction of what the Costases, Musburgers and Enbergs get from the networks. If Walt Terrell is worth $1.2 million, Berman is worth $12 million.

When Kaminsky sits down with ESPN, NBC and any other interested parties in the next week — "We hope to have something settled before the new year," he said — a pie-in-the-sky figure will make a dandy opening salvo. As successful as ESPN has become, it will be shot down a lot sooner in the bidding than NBC will.

What price will sway Berman? He's not saying. The glib man from Brown is, for once and for now, at a loss for words when it comes to discussing his value. Kaminsky is fielding all inquiries.

But when the question "What happens when the networks come calling?" came knocking this summer, Berman opened the door.

"I never say never," he said, "but let's face it, I've been here, at ESPN, almost from the start. ESPN has helped make me, and I've helped make ESPN. Money? Yeah, that's important. But I'm doing exactly what I want to do. Why would I want to leave?"

IN NEED OF SENSITIVITY TRAINING

Oh, those unfeeling TV types.

A moment of silence was scheduled for former Eagle assistant coach and San Diego State football coach Doug Scovil, who died unexpectedly earlier in the day, just before the start of Saturday night's San Diego State-USC basketball game. The tribute would delay the start of the game and the national anthem by a minute or so.

But a minute can seem like an eternity for television. And Prime Ticket's production people became antsy — a delay might have meant the band would strike up "The Star-Spangled Banner" during the pregame show. Tacky, that.

NOTES:

TNT and Cablevision have reached an agreement that will bring the NBA cablecasts to about 1.4 million households.

Report say Hess new NMSU coach

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Stephen F. Austin State Athletic Director Jim Hess will be New Mexico State's next football coach, the Albuquerque Journal reported today.

The Journal reported that a source in Texas, who asked not to be identified, said Hess was offered the position and accepted.

A spokesman at New Mexico State would not confirm the reported hiring. Steve Shutt, sports information director at the Las Cruces school, said Hess interviewed for the job earlier this week but the school would not make any announcement before Monday.

Hess, who is in Statesboro, Ga., as Stephen F. Austin is preparing to face Georgia Southern Saturday in the Division I-AA national championship game, was not accepting telephone calls at his hotel room Thursday night.

Hess said Wednesday the earliest he'd be willing to talk with New Mexico State officials about the job is Sunday.

"This (Saturday's) football game is foremost on my mind, and right now, I don't have any other job than this one," Hess said.

Hess, 53, coached Stephen F. Austin 1982 through 1988, where he compiled a 47-30-2 record, the winningest mark in the school's history. He retired in 1988 because the increasing pressures and demands on his time as coach and athletic director.

PITT

Two days later, he finally defended his decision, saying, "I've never played for a tie and I never will."

During Pitt's recent trip to Dublin, Ireland, to play Rutgers, he ridiculed reporters who criticized his play-calling. Stung by earlier criticism, Gottfried closed all practices to the media and allowed players to be interviewed only a few minutes each week.

Gottfried may have coached by the book against Penn State, but a battle over the books with Bozik may also have hastened his apparent ouster.

Pitt officials confirmed Thursday that Pitt will adopt stricter academic standards than required under the much-publicized NCAA Proposition 48, which Gottfried vehemently opposes.

While Prop 48 mandates prospective student-athletes maintain a 2.0 grade-point average and score 700 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test, Pitt will require a 2.3 average and a 750 score.

A seven-member review committee will consider applicants who don't meet the standards.

Plans for the heightened academic standards were speeded up when Pitt's entire five-man freshman basketball class was declared ineligible under Prop 48.

"If the public's perception is that this plan will hurt Pitt athletically, all I can do is ask the public to give us a chance," assistant provost Jack L. Daniel said.

Gottfried and basketball coach Paul Evans, who oppose the admission of recruits based on standardized tests, reportedly oppose Pitt's new guidelines.

Gottfried also criticized Pitt's academic standards last spring when quarterback Darnell Dickerson was suspended over the coach's objections. Gottfried called the decision the most disappointing of his career.

Like Fazio, Gottfried was fired shortly after his contract was extended.

Gottfried's contract, similar to Sherrill's old contract, was a five-year rollover deal that calls for a buyout if he is fired. Gottfried donated $50,000 to Pitt's new indoor facility after signing what was then called a lifetime contract in April 1988.

When Gottfried signed the contract, Pitt president Wesley Posvar said, "Coach Gottfried is the right person to ensure ... Pitt remains one of the elite football programs in the country. Our football program is in the right hands."

Gottfried, 45, a former Morehead State quarterback, has a 75-56-4 career record at Murray State, Cincinnati, Kansas and Pitt.

Raghib "Rocket" Ismail of Notre Dame, shown here against Stanford, is recovering from a separated shoulder and is questionable for the Orange Bowl game with Colorado Jan. 1.

Holtz gets Irish up over 'injury'

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Lou Holtz sees the football world through very dark lenses, and things are looking gloomy again.

Defending national champion Notre Dame is depressed despite a 23-1 record the last two seasons, he said.

"The confidence is gone," Holtz proclaimed Thursday.

And a key player may be grievously injured, he added. Raghib "Rocket" Ismail, Notre Dame's All-American return specialist, has a separated shoulder and could miss the Orange Bowl.

A reality check with his players, however, reveals a brighter picture for the fourth-ranked Irish (11-1) heading into the New Year's Day Orange Bowl against top-ranked Colorado (11-0).

Co-captain Ned Bolcar said the team, and Ismail, will be fine, and adds that Holtz habitually is a pessimist. "He's not always an optimistic person," Bolcar said. "He's a perfectionist."

Is Holtz, who likes to sidestep his team's genuine strengths, dodging the truth? Could he be trying to lull Colorado?

He talked glumly about Ismail's chance of being ready by New Year's Day.

"I found out when we got ready to practice (last week) and looked on the injury list," he said. "I think he'll be on it from now on."

Ismail seemed stunned by the news. As he entered a room for a news conference, sports information assistant Jim Daves warned him to expect a shower of questions about his shoulder.

"Why?" the puzzled Ismail said.

Ismail separated his left shoulder in Notre Dame's 27-10 loss at Miami, and he admits there's still some discomfort when he raises his arm. But sitting on the bench during the Orange Bowl?

"What did he tell you?" Ismail asked reporters who had spent an hour with Holtz. Ismail rolled his eyes in disbelief at the coach's prognosis.

"Right now, all I'm doing is resting it and trying not to aggravate it," he said. "They told me if I had to play tomorrow, I'd be OK."

Asked whether he'd play at full speed in the Orange Bowl, Ismail answered without hesitation, "Yes." He declined to speculate about why Holtz strongly suggested otherwise.

"I have no idea what his intentions were," Ismail said.

This season, Ismail returned two kickoffs for touchdowns against Michigan, rushed for a 7.5-yard average and two touchdowns, and averaged 16.8 yards every time he touched the ball.

Ismail's shoulder seemed not to be serious enough even to mention to Holtz, who learned of it when he read the injury report.

"Now, they say it's not a serious shoulder separation," Holtz conceded. "I don't know what a serious shoulder separation is, but I'd have to say we're making plans to go without him. Anything we get from him we're going to look on as surplus.

"So that takes on a different meaning, because you can't count on him to play a prominent role. You just have to hope he can be there and play, but you've got to be prepared to go without him."

HPU bans baseballers

BROWNWOOD (AP) — Three players were dismissed from the Howard Payne University baseball team, said sports information director Bill Jones.

Coach Tres Womack released the players — Richard W. Carter, Adam Fillinger and Scott Sears — for disciplinary reasons, Jones said Thursday.

"They have involved themselves in activities uncharacteristic of Howard Payne University and will no longer represent this school as baseball players," Womack said in a memo.

Neither Jones nor Womack would elaborate on the action.

The school's baseball team competes in NAIA Division II.

Oregon, Tulsa set for showdown

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A lot of pre-Independence Bowl attention has been devoted to Oregon's high-powered offense and nearly a ton of western Pennsylvania talent on Tulsa's offensive line.

Oregon (7-4) and Tulsa (6-5) meet Saturday night in the 14th Independence Bowl. It is Oregon's first bowl appearance in 26 years, Tulsa's first since 1976.

Oregon fields a team that set 16 school offensive records this season. There was enough yardage gained to cross the Oregon Trail and enough points to keep even the Dow Jones big board blinking.

But while the Ducks' offense has gotten most of the attention, it is the Oregon defense that may hold the key to success against Tulsa.

In Oregon's four losses, the Ducks have allowed an average of 466.5 yards. In its seven victories, Oregon has allowed 273.2 yards.

Oregon faces a Tulsa team that has shown ability to run and pass. Quarterback T.J. Rubley is a 2,000-yard passer and fullback Brett Adams has run for 1,102 yards. They are both concerns for Oregon.

"The biggest key is the defensive line and trying to control Adams," Oregon coach Rich Brooks said. "If he runs wild, we'll be hurting."

In a demonstration of its resolve, Tulsa issued a "Hurricane Warning" for its fans.

"We're small but we're mighty," the Warning reads. "And we're hungry for victory."

The performance of Tulsa's "Pennsylvania Connection" figures to play a major role in the outcome.

"We've got so many of us running around here, it's kind of like home," backup offensive guard Lou Spanos said.

Spanos backs up another Pittsburgh guy, his brother Gus. And Lou Spanos rooms with freshman Mark Govi, also from Pittsburgh. Gus Spanos rooms with Dan Tarabrella, who's from Pittsburgh, too.

Seventeen members of the Golden Hurricane, most of them linemen, have western Pennsylvania accents.

"My theory is that there are so many ethnic groups up there and so many big guys, that it's just a haven for linemen," Lou Spanos said. "There's big Polish guys, and big Italian guys and big Greek guys."

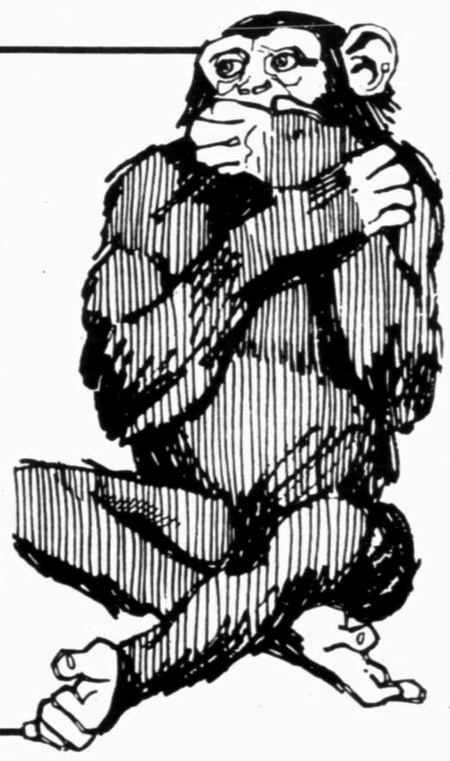

Big is the operative word for the Tulsa offensive line, which averages 273 yards.

Greenwood's Shelley Mackey drives past Mitzi Koonce of Stanton in first round play of the Greenwood tournament Thursday. Action in the eight-team tourney continues today.

Rangerettes drop Stanton 51-28

From Staff Reports

GREENWOOD — Kendra Underwood led the Greenwood Rangerettes to a 51-28 first-round win over Stanton in Greenwood girls basketball tournament Thursday at the Greenwood gymnasium.

Underwood was the only double-digit scorer in the contest, a rematch of a five-overtime game in last year's tourney. The win pits Rangerettes against Big Lake Reagan County at 7:30 p.m. today in the semifinals of championship bracket play.

Big Lake downed Alpine 52-42 Thursday to advance. Christy Monzingo scored 14 points and Tonya Lennox 12 for Big Lake, while Alpine's Janel Reed delivered 21 in the losing effort.

Other first round games Thursday saw Coahoma down McCamey 43-29 and Wall drop Crane 53-24. Coahoma's Kelly Williams scored 11 points and teammate LaTisha Anderson was good for 10 in the win. McCamey was paced by Barbara Cantrell's 15 points.

In Wall's win, Melissa Multer scored 25 points and Robin Jansa had 10, while Denny Young led Crane with 14.

Coahoma and Wall face off at 6 p.m. in the other championship semifinal, while consolation bracket action will see Stanton play Alpine at 6 p.m. and Crane face McCamey at 7:30 p.m.

Saturday's games in the three-day tournament feature the McCamey-Crane winner against the Stanton-Alpine victor for the consolation title at 3 p.m.

The third-place game will be played at 4:30 p.m. Saturday, and the championship game is set fot a 6 p.m. start.

The Big Lake-Greenwood and Coahoma-Wall losers play for third place, while the winners of those games advance to the title competition.

Radio station to broadcast Mojo

From Staff Reports

KCRS-AM radio will provide coverage of a plethora of upcoming sporting events, beginning with Saturday's Odessa Permian-Marshall 5A state semifinal at Texas Stadium beginning at 2 p.m.

KCRS (550), orginially scheduled to carry the Dallas Cowboy-New York Giants game at noon Saturday, will preempt the NFL contest in favor of Permian football. The broadcast, beginning at 1:25 p.m. Saturday, will be produced by the Diamond Shamrock Network.

The Houston Oilers-Cincinnati Bengals game will be carried as scheduled Sunday at noon.

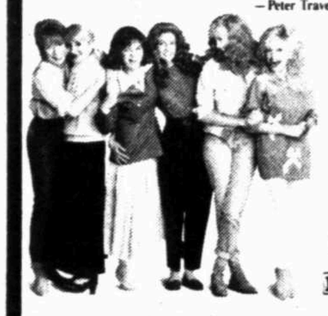

On championship Saturday, Dec. 23, KCRS and Diamond Shamrock will carry the 5A state title game beginning at noon, regardless of whether Permian advances to the championship.

Should the Big Spring Steers advance to the 4A state championship game that day, KCRS will provide joined-in-progress coverage following the 5A title game.

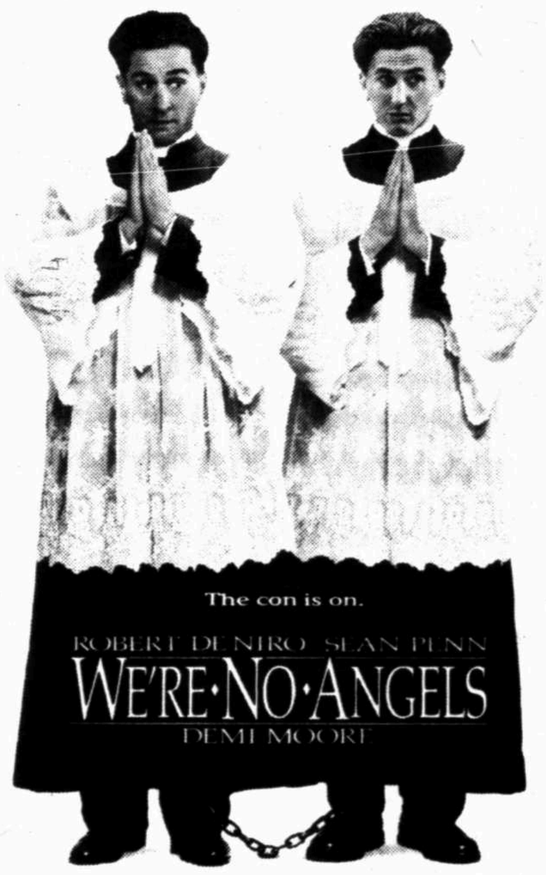

KCRS will also carry the Aloha Bowl (Dec. 25), All-American Bowl (Dec. 28), John Hancock Bowl (Dec. 30), and Cotton, Orange and Rose Bowls (Jan. 1). The Holiday Bowl (Dec. 29) might also be carried by the station, depending on whether the Midland College Chaparral basketball team advances to semifinal action at the Mesa (Ariz.) Rotary Shootout that same night.

KCRS's Rick Victor will travel to Mesa to announce the Chaps' games in the Shootout, Dec. 27-30. The Chaps' first game in Mesa is set for a 3 p.m. tipoff, Dec. 27. against Waukesha, Wis.

It's an early Christmas for oilpatch

AUSTIN (AP) — The active rig count in the state hit 342 last week, the highest weekly total in two years, the Texas Railroad Commission said.

"You can't help but feel that Santa's come early to the oil patch," said Railroad Commissioner James E. "Jim" Nugent.

Three straight months of rising rig counts, oil well completions and applications to drill new wells "add up to an early dose of Christmas cheer for the state's energy industry," he said.

Trade deficit worsens

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's merchandise trade deficit soared to $10.2 billion in October, the biggest imbalance in 10 months, as imports climbed to a record level, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said the October deficit was 19.8 percent higher than the September imbalance of $8.51 billion.

The worsening trade balance reflected a big jump in imports, which climbed 5.1 percent, to an all-time high of $41.21 billion.

U.S. exports were also up, by 1.1 percent, rising to $31.01 billion. The trade deficit is the difference between imports and exports.

A worsening in the trade deficit had been expected, given the fact that imports normally shoot up in October as merchants restock shelves in preparation for Christmas. However, the size of the increase caught many economists by surprise.

For the first 10 months of the year, the U.S. merchandise trade deficit is running at an annual rate of $109.4 billion, down a modest 7.7 percent from last year's deficit of $118.53 billion.

Many economists are looking for very little improvement in the trade imbalance in the coming year, a forecast which would spell trouble for the U.S. manufacturing sector, already suffering job losses because of weakening sales.

The Bush administration is likely to come under growing pressure in Congress to erect trade barriers in an effort to stop the flood of imports into the country.

As usual, the biggest deficit in October was recorded with Japan, an imbalance of $4.9 billion, almost half of the total for the month, as imports from Japan hit a record level.

Other large deficits included a $1.28 billion imbalance with Taiwan, an $843 million deficit with Canada and a $783 million deficit with China.

The Soviet Union continued to be one of the few countries with which the United States enjoys a trade surplus, with the October surplus totaling $123.2 million.

The overall October deficit of $10.20 billion was the largest since a $10.80 billion deficit in December 1988, although the August imbalance of $10.10 billion was nearly as high.

The poor trade showing in October reflected import gains in a variety of areas.

America's foreign oil bill shot up 8.5 percent to $4.38 billion as the price per barrel rose 71 cents to $17.09 while the number of barrels imported daily held basically steady at 8.26 million.

Imports of agricultural products shot up 18 percent to $2.24 billion while imports of industrial supplies were up 14 percent to $11.7 billion.

Campeau on supplier skids

NEW YORK (AP) — Suppliers to department stores owned by financially distressed Campeau Corp. are taking a cautious approach regarding future merchandise shipments.

One of the companies that act as middlemen between manufacturers and retailers, known as factors, said Thursday it no longer would extend credit on goods bound for Campeau's stores.

Meanwhile, several apparel and accessory manufacturers said they were keeping in close touch with executives in charge of Campeau's U.S. retailing operations. Bills have been paid on time so far, they said.

The suppliers, whose fates are tied to retailers, expressed hope that business wouldn't be disrupted as Campeau copes with a worsening cash shortage.

"I'm very worried about the situation," said Howard Bloom, president and chief executive of Chetta B Inc., a clothing maker. "It gets progressively worse looking every day. I'm taking a wait-and-see posture."

Retail analysts said disclosures by Campeau's Federated Department Stores Inc. and Allied Stores Corp. of deepening financial difficulties were unsurprising given the fierce competition in the industry.

Federated and Allied said in documents submitted to the Securities and Exchange Commission that their cash could run out by March or sooner and that they might seek protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code.

The move would permit Campeau-owned retailers to remain operating while their Canadian parent company sorted out its financial problems. At the heart of the trouble is the massive debt Campeau acquired in taking over Federated in 1988 for $6.7 billion and Allied in 1986 for $3.4 billion.

A threatened inability to meet interest payments on junk bonds sold to pay for the acquisitions forced the Toronto-based retail and real estate company to turn to outsiders for help earlier this year.

Canada's Olympia & York Developments Ltd. came to the rescue with a $250 million loan to Campeau. As part of a deal for an additional $800 million next year from Olympia & York, Campeau put the Bloomingdale's department store chain up for sale in September. About a half dozen bidders are evaluating the chain and Campeau has said a final sale could be arranged by February.

In the SEC filings, made public Wednesday, Federated and Allied said bankruptcy court protection would be an alternative if lenders won't ease repayment terms. Federated owes creditors $1.15 billion by the end of April and Allied faces debts of $633.7 million due by the end of March.

Failing a rescheduling of the payments, Campeau said it would consider selling additional holdings, raising money by taking out mortgages on its stores or possibly seeking bankruptcy-court protection.

In addition to the 17-store Bloomingdale's chain, Federated operates Abraham & Straus, Burdines, Lazarus, Rich's and Goldsmith's. Under the Allied umbrella are The Bon Marche, Jordan Marsh, Maas Brothers and Stern's. Combined, the two have about 100,000 employees and 260 stores.

Merritt named to Reserve

By JULIE JEROME
Business/Oil Writer

Wayne Merritt, chairman and president of United Bank, is pleased with his recent appointment to the board of directors of the El Paso Branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, and is anxious to be the energy industry's voice at the Fed's monthly meetings, he said this morning.

Merritt was appointed to serve a three-year term beginning Jan. 1.

Merritt recalled a recent reception in Dallas where he met Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, and during which time representatives of each branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas and each member of the board of directors of the Dallas Fed spoke for a moment about the area's economy.

"And not one person said anything about the energy industry," Merritt said, adding he is ready to offer his input about the energy industry during upcoming monthly meetings in El Paso.

Merritt has 19 years in the banking business, has a master's degree in economics, and has taught finance and economics courses, he said.

Three of the Fed's primary responsibilities are: to serve as a "bankers' bank" with duties such as clearing checks; to regulate bank holding companies; and to control the U.S. monetary policy.

Alliance Airport paving the way

Perot dream could be glimpse of future

By JOHN BOLT
AP Business Writer

When an American Airlines jumbo jet touches down today at spanking new Fort Worth Alliance Airport, it will signal a major step in a unique project conceived by the son of billionaire H. Ross Perot.

The project is touted as the nation's first industrial airport and an example of how to rebuild America.

"The whole point of what we have done and achieved is that working with the government, you can build a lot of infrastructure programs rather quickly," said H. Ross Perot Jr.

"This is a great example of teamwork," he said. Indeed the name comes from the "alliance" of Perot and local, state and federal agencies.

"A lot of experts say the 90s will be the decade of rebuilding America, and this is one way, these public-private partnerships," he said.

The VIP-filled plane will land "18 months, 19 days, 23 hours and 25 minutes" after the airport's groundbreaking, something of a record in cutting through a federal bureaucracy: airport certification averages three to five years.

Federal employees were even at work Thanksgiving Day installing equipment, said Jack Sasser, deputy regional administrator for the Federal Aviation Administration.

Much work still needs to be done, including building a permanent tower to replace temporary facilities in a trailer, although American Airlines already has begun construction on its $400 million maintenance base — the plum Perot landed last summer that gave the $250 million project credibility.

The federal Drug Enforcement Administration plans to base a fleet of 90 planes at the airport. Sante Fe Railway has completed a car distribution facility for Honda and is beginning work on a similar facility for Ford.

Although the project is ahead of schedule, "before the whole thing is really, no kidding ready, it'll probably be two years," Perot said.

The airport, on land donated by Perot and owned by the city of Fort Worth, was first proposed by the FAA as a relief valve for busy Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport 15 miles away.

The FAA approached The Perot Group with the idea in 1987 because Perot had spent millions of his father's dollars amassing 17,000 acres to become the largest landowner in rural Tarrant and Denton counties.

The money came from the $2.7 billion Perot received when he sold Electronic Data Systems Inc. to General Motors Corp. and then was bought out of his additional stock and kicked off the board in a bitter dispute with GM Chairman Roger Smith.

Instead of creating an adjunct to DFW, Perot Jr. thought bigger, dreaming up Alliance Centre. Although the FAA at first was reluctant to increase the scale, it eventually went along, especially after then-House Speaker Jim Wright of Fort Worth pushed through a bill telling the agency the airport was a high priority.

The airport, which will be managed by a Perot company, consists of a 9,600-foot runway and two taxiways that can handle planes up to the mammoth C-5A cargo jet and 747s. It is the largest U.S. airport constructed since DFW opened 15 years ago.

Chevron hit with second suit

N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Chevron Corp. has been hit with a second shareholder lawsuit charging that its board of directors neglected its responsibility in seeking to thwart a possible hostile takeover bid by Pennzoil Co.

The suit, filed in San Francisco Superior Court, claims that the board "embarked on a scheme of entrenchment ... to the detriment of Chevron's public shareholders."

Chevron replied that its board acted in conformity with its responsibilities to shareholders. It said that the board — which includes several directors who aren't members of management — acted with due care.

In other legal maneuvering, U.S. District Court Judge Thelton Henderson is expected to rule Tuesday whether to extend a temporary order that blocks Pennzoil from suing Chevron in courts outside the San Francisco federal district. That order was issued in response to a suit filed last Friday by Chevron.

On Dec. 22, Henderson will hear a motion by Pennzoil that would force Chevron to re-file its claims against Pennzoil. Pennzoil, in court papers filed Wednesday, accused Chevron of building a "gigantic litigation edifice ... upon a foundation of speculation and insupportable inference."

Pennzoil insists that it bought its 8.8 percent stake in Chevron strictly for investment purposes. It denies suggestions in Chevron's suit that the stake is the foundation for a hostile takeover or break-up of Chevron.

Chevron will file a formal response to Pennzoil's papers on Monday.

Pennzoil, which disclosed its Chevron holdings on Dec. 7, said that it didn't plan an acquisition bid.

But Chevron, expressing doubt, filed suit the next day to force Pennzoil to sell its stock.

The 11-page lawsuit was filed Monday by Jerome Katz and Barnett Stepak, said to be Chevron stockholders, through the San Francisco lawfirm of Hallisey & Johnson.

The earlier shareholder suit against Chevron was filed in federal court in San Francisco by three individuals through a San Diego lawfirm.

Mesa moves to reduce debt

By JOHN A. BOLT
AP Business Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Mesa Limited Partnership, T. Boone Pickens' energy company and investment vehicle, will stop cash payments to its unitholders next year and sell off some of its natural gas holdings to reduce its $1.5 billion in long-term debt.

Mesa announced Thursday the suspension of cash distributions to unitholders to maintain Mesa's "financial integrity while gas prices remain low."

Analysts had been expecting a reduction, the second time this year the partnership has slashed its distribution, which is similar to a dividend on common stock.

Mesa's units fell in active trading Thursday on the New York Stock Exchange, closing down $1.25 at $7.75.

Since shifting from a corporation to a partnership in 1985, Mesa maintained a 50-cent-per-unit quarterly distribution through the first half of 1989, even though cash flow would not cover the payout.

Instead, Mesa used earnings from Pickens' stock plays to make up the difference. Pickens said Thursday the strategy was a way of "prepaying" unitholders for future natural gas profits.

But in March, Mesa announced third and fourth quarter distributions would be 37.5 cents. Thursday's announcement eliminated the payment altogether "until industry conditions and cash flow improve."

A filing with the federal Security and Exchange Commission shows Mesa owned $222.5 million worth of stock on Nov. 13, mostly in issues active in takeover speculation.

Energy futures rise slightly

From Staff and Wire Reports

The price of West Texas Intermediate Crude was $20.70 per barrel this morning, up 5 cents from Thursday's close.

On Thursday, energy futures weakened with prices of wholesale home heating oil taking the biggest tumble.

The contract for January delivery of No.2 heating oil dropped 0.68 cent to 67.28 cents a gallon on the New York Mercantile Exchange, wiping out the 0.66-cent gain registered Wednesday. Contracts for delivery during February through April fell by amounts ranging from 0.70 cent to 0.84 cent.

The slide in the January heating oil contract ended an 11-day string of consecutive increases. Analysts said the downturn was caused by a slump in prices in London for gasoil, the equivalent of U.S. heating oil.

The January contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of U.S. crude oil, fell 12 cents to $20.65 per 42-gallon barrel. The February through April contracts ended 9 cents to 11 cents lower.

Among other refined oil products traded on the New York Merc, wholesale unleaded gasoline for January delivery, which fell 0.10 cent on Wednesday, lost another 0.32 cent and closed at 51.61 cents a gallon. Other contracts also closed lower.

Dollar investors await trade results

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was little changed in light European trading early today as the foreign exchange market awaited the latest U.S. trade figures. Gold prices were higher.

Dealers said the market was positioning itself before the release of U.S. trade figures for October. Analysts predicted the deficit would widen to around $8.8 billion from $7.9 billion in September.

Dealers said that unless the figures were out of the ordinary, the dollar should trade within a narrow range for the rest of the session as markets wind down before the weekend.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.23 Japanese yen to a closing 144.30 yen. Later, in London, it fell back to 144.04 yen.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.6016 from $1.5970 late Thursday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $409.50 a troy ounce, up from $407.50 bid late Thursday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $410.35.

In Zurich, the bid price was $410.50, up from $408.50 bid late Thursday.

Gold in Hong Kong rose 65 cents to close at a bid $409.30.

Silver rose in London to a bid price of $5.62 a troy ounce, up from $5.58 bid late Thursday.

Outlook worries put lid on market

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took a downward turn Thursday amid renewed worries about the business outlook.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 32.85 points in the two preceding sessions, dropped 7.46 to 2,753.63.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by nearly 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 529 up, 996 down and 494 unchanged.

Analysts said traders were unsettled by word late Wednesday of deepening problems in the debt-burdened retailing empire of Campeau Corp. in Toronto.

Adding to the wary mood was anticipation of a quarterly "triple witching hour" on Friday involving a series of expiring options and futures on stock indexes.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 178.70 million shares, against 184.66 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 210.72 million shares.

BUSINESS TRENDS

Needed: New airports

It takes at least 10 years for a new airport to be designed and built, but only Denver and Austin, Texas, are under way with new airport plans. By 2001, over 58 U.S. airports will be handling an estimated 160 percent or more of the traffic for which they were designed.

Presidio Oil finals Home Petroleum buyout

DENVER (SWN) — Presidio Oil Co. has completed the purchase of the assents and operations of Home Petroleum Corporation, the U.S. oil and gas subsidiary of Gulf Canada Resources Ltd.

The principal assets purchased from Home included approximately 10 million barrels of proved oil reserves, 65 billion cubic feet of proved natural gas reserves, substantial probable undeveloped oil and gas reserves, and 239,000 net undeveloped acres of oil and gas leases.

He said the increased activity is due to relatively low drilling costs, steady oil prices over the past six to eight months and the rapid development and use of horizontal drilling.

The number of new oil wells coming on line is also rising, from 387 in September to 470 last month, he said.

"That's good news for the producers, but it's also a nice early Christmas present for the investors, royalty owners, local governments and school districts and merchants in nearby towns," he said.

Nugent said indicators are pointing to a "rosy start" for the Texas oil industry in the 1990s.

The commission issued 1,366 drilling permits in November, the highest monthly total in all of 1989, he said.

with many of the stores said they would continue to monitor developments at Campeau and that up to now they've been satisfied with how promptly the company has paid for goods.

Another yardstick of Campeau's relationship with vendors could come when some manufacturers seek credit in coming weeks to ship spring merchandise to the stores.

Bernard Chaus, chairman and chief executive officer of the ready-to-wear clothing company that bears his name, said: "We certainly are going to support them on all fronts." Chaus added, however, that he assumes Federated and Allied stores would "have some major problems with merchandise shipments."

Chaus doesn't use factoring, which involves companies buying accounts receivable and taking over the job of collecting the money due.

AIRPORT

"Alliance will be an airport surrounded by business and industry," Perot says. "It will allow aircraft to carry raw materials directly to manufacturing facilities around the airport. These materials can be quickly integrated with on-site manufacturing processes before loading onto aircraft for transport around the world."

In addition, Alliance lies on a major north-south rail line and Perot has gotten state agreement to improve roads around the development to better connect with nearby interstate highways.

Perot even donated $500,000 to a local school district to allay its fears over lost tax revenue because of concessions granted American to lure its maintenance base.

Perot admits success of the concept can't be measured for 20 to 25 years, but ."if it works, it will be profitable."

In the meantime, Perot is focusing on bringing traditional aviation-related clients to Alliance, selling them Perot-owned land by the runway or on the same 3,800-acre plot as the airport.

Employees can live in a Perot-owned development nearby — 150 houses already have been built — and shop at a planned shopping mall — a development company recently purchased land to build the complex.

One estimate put possible revenue from land sales at $1 billion. Estimates on the cost of the property range from $100 million to $500 million.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Money market, mutual fund similar but different

By BILL DOYLE

Q. What is the difference between a money market account administered by a brokerage firm and a mutual investment fund?

A. They can be the same thing — a money market mutual fund. Technically, that's an open-end investment company holding short-term, interest-paying securities as investments.

Doyle

It's open-end because it stands ready on every business day to redeem its shares at net asset value — meaning investors can cash out at any time. Also, most mutual funds continuously offer new shares for sale. However, it is the redemption feature — not the continuous offering — that makes them open-end investment companies, popularly known as mutual funds.

Money market mutual funds invest in such things as U.S. Treasury bills, Treasury bonds and notes with short maturities, federal agency issues, commercial paper, repurchase agreements, letters of credit, certificates of deposit and other short-term debt obligations.

Short-term is the key, here. If the average maturity of the securities exceeds 120 days, the fund no longer meets Securities and Exchange Commission qualifications as a money market mutual fund.

All brokerage firms sell shares of money market mutual funds. The shares of some such funds, however, are not sold through brokerages. Instead, investors purchase the shares directly from the funds.

So, chances are you buy shares of a money market mutual fund when you open a "money market account" at a brokerage. However, some brokerages have arrangements somewhat similar to money market mutual funds, but actually different. Customers' money is placed in accounts which earn interest, often equal to the yields on money market mutual funds. As investment companies, however, money market mutual funds are under tighter regulations, thus providing more investor protection, than brokerage accounts.

You asked about "mutual investment funds." Besides money market mutual funds, there are many other types of mutual funds. Some invest in stocks, some in bonds, some in other securities, some in combinations.

Before you put any money into a mutual fund, make sure you study its prospectus — a disclosure document the broker or salesperson is required to give to you.

Q. Since money market mutual funds invest in CDs, etc., I assume some of those investments do not always pay off. When a fund has investments that go belly up, how does this pass through to investors in the fund?

A. Usually in a lower yield. Money market mutual funds use accounting techniques that keep share values constant — at $1, in most such funds. When an investment a money market mutual fund has made turns bad, the fund usually does not report a lower share value. Instead, the fund reduces its dividend for a while — until interest received from other investments bolster the fund's treasury.

That accounting practice is allowed by the SEC, as long as the damage to the fund's assets caused by the investment gone bad would not force the fund's per share value below 99.5 cents. The fund is permitted to continue reporting its per share value at $1, while that actual value ranges between 99.5 cents and $1.005.

Q. I fully understand that money market mutual funds are not insured by the federal government. But most advisers indicate they are risk-free. Do you agree?

A. Not quite. I call them virtually free from risk. There was one case — First Multi-Fund for Daily Income — in which shareholders lost seven cents on the dollar. It would be terribly naive to state, as the old song goes, "There will never, ever be..." another loss.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Be a trail blazer! Innovative ideas count big. A social whirl catches you by surprise in February. Seek financial counseling in March. Answer important mail and telephone calls promptly. June brings the unexpected. A new relationship will start out strong. Wait to see how things develop before seeking a permanent commitment. Business affairs will keep you hopping in autumn. A windfall in October will reduce your concerns about retirement. Diversify investments.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: composer Ludwig Van Beethoven, anthropologist Margaret Mead, news anchor Lesley Stahl, actor Terence Knox.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Rely on your own devices and you will have a happy weekend. Your ideas are sound; put them to good use. Help your mate get ready for the holidays ahead. Address invitations.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Although certain statements could come back to haunt you later, today they will bring happiness to an older family member. Soft-pedal a dispute and you will find a solution in record time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Inspiration comes when you meditate today. Get involved in community affairs. Romance is simmering just below the surface. The rest of the family recognizes what is happening. Someone urges you to set the date!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Surprises will make this a special weekend. You need to be more circumspect about your personal relationships. Be prepared to work with teen-agers on their terms. Make last-minute Christmas purchases.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Resist the urge to buy something you cannot afford. The social pace picks up as you get closer to Christmas. Romance gets top priority this weekend. Show loved one your sentimental side.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Secret affairs spell trouble. Bring things out into the open. Try to maintain a low profile at a social event and love could find you. A family member proves to be a valuable ally.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Check your budget before ordering airline or theater tickets. Households with little children find the holiday spirit beginning to bubble. Study the tactics of a romantic rival. You could learn something very important!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Review your finances before going on a shopping spree. Temptation can be a dangerous thing when large sums of money are involved. One thing leads to another at a social gathering.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be on time to all engagements. A new cookbook could get you deeply involved in cookie or candy making. Enlist loved ones' help. Homemade treats make the holidays extra special.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your personal magnetism helps you stay out in front of the crowd. Family relationships are more rewarding than ever. Your keen sense of humor makes you popular as a host or guest.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An unexpected reunion with a school chum brightens your weekend. A change of scenery works like magic when it comes to getting you out of a rut. Look forward to seeing good friends tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Change works in your favor, especially as it affects your family. Put on your thinking cap and devise new ways to pay the rent. Travel lets you solve several problems at one time.

Opening lead: King of ♠ Bridge in the U.S.S.R. seems to be flourishing. At a recent tournament in Estonia, 128 pairs and 61 teams entered. This hand features brilliant defense from a match between two Latvian teams.

South's one club was artificial and forcing. The rest of the auction was natural.

Declarer ruffed the opening lead, then took five rounds of trumps, West discarding three spades while East parted with one card in each suit. Next came a diamond to the jack, and East won the ace! Declarer ruffed the spade return and, to learn more about the distribution, cashed his last trump. West sluffed a spade and East a club.

Declarer crossed to dummy with the king of clubs, noting West's ten, and cashed the king of diamonds. When both defenders followed with a low diamond, declarer thought he had a complete count of the hand. West had shown up with seven spades, and had followed four times in the red suits. Since he was "marked" with the queen of diamonds, he "had" to have started with only one club. So declarer confidently ran the jack of clubs. Down two.

Winning with the ace from an ace-queen combination in this position is not new to us. We first saw the play pulled off by Britain's Tony Priday some 40 years ago. However, then it was made to tempt declarer into repeating a finesse which was going to lose. The version where it is used to give a false count of the hand is a new twist.

Vets group suing Greenwood because he refused to perform

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — A veterans group is suing country singer Lee Greenwood for refusing to perform at a concert when the group refused to pay in cash upfront.

The federal suit, filed Wednesday by the Veterans of the Vietnam War, says Greenwood was hired in April to perform at a concert in Albany, Ga., on Aug. 18. He received an $11,250 check and was to get the balance on the day of the concert.

On that day, Greenwood allegedly demanded the balance in cash, despite the contract's provision for payment by check, and refused to perform. The suit claims he also failed to provide sound and lighting equipment, preventing other bands from performing.

The veterans group lost about $228,000 as a result of his actions, the suit claims.

Greenwood disputed the allegations Thursday, saying the group had promised him a 30-day promissory note, not a check.

NEW YORK (AP) — Author Nicholas Gage says his writing skills were unleashed in a chance encounter with a salty-tongued teacher when he was a struggling, 13-year-old refugee.

Gage writes in the Dec. 17 issue of Parade magazine how as a seventh-grader he met Marjorie Hurd Rabidou in Worcester, Mass.

Told to choose a hobby, Gage said he "decided to follow the prettiest girl in my class — the blue-eyed daughter of the local Lutheran minister."

"She led me through the door marked 'Newspaper Club' and into the presence of Miss Hurd, the newspaper adviser and English teacher who would become my mentor and my muse."

Gage wrote an essay for the school paper about his mother, who was killed by Communists during the Greek civil war. Hurd sent it to the Freedoms Foundation in Valley Forge, Pa., where it won a medal.

Gage was a reporter for The New York Times and later recorded his mother's life and death in the book "Eleni," and his father's story in "A Place for Us."

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Former Olympic gymnastics champion Olga Korbut has been campaigning to raise money for a group bringing young leukemia victims from the Soviet Union.

The first of the Soviet children, 5-year-old Irina Chechkovsky, is expected to arrive in Indianapolis within two weeks, said Mary Maxwell, a spokeswoman for Riley Children's Hospital.

Irina became sick apparently because of exposure to high levels of radiation from the 1986 accident at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant. She may undergo a bone marrow transplant, Maxwell said.

Korbut lives in Minsk, the Soviet city where the girl is from.

Winner of three gold medals during the 1972 Olympics, Korbut made more than a dozen public appearances over several days to appeal for donations to the Emergency Fund for Children Foundation, created in July to locate and help children around the world suffering from grave ailments.

Twelve Soviet children slated to visit Riley in the coming months will be the first to benefit from the organization's efforts, Maxwell said.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Having traveled to Africa and the Amazon jungle during a 14-month sabbatical, cartoonist Gary Larson should have even more loopy animals with which to draw his popular cartoon "The Far Side."

The Universal Press Syndicate, which carries Larson's strip, kept busy during his absence, adding newspapers for a total of more than 900 that run the cartoon.

Under his new schedule, Larson will produce five original panels a week, with reissues of old cartoons for the other two days.

He said he had mixed feelings about being back at work; the first new cartoons will be published Jan. 1.

"I currently feel fresh and recharged, and a reduced workload I'm sure will play a big role in maintaining that feeling," Larson said. "But, as I'm sure anyone who has had an opportunity to take a full year off will agree, that first Monday morning back to work is quite a sobering experience."

TOKYO (AP) — Former U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz and his wife were received by Emperor Akihiko and Empress Michiko, and Shultz was decorated for his contribution to strengthening ties between Japan and the United States.

Shultz

Following the audience Thursday at the Akaska Palace, Shultz and his wife, Helena, had lunch with the royal couple and their son, Crown Prince Naruhito.

Shultz later met with Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu and received the Grand Cordon of the Order of the Rising Sun, Paulownia Flowers, a foreign ministry official said.

The Shultzes arrived in Tokyo on Wednesday for a five-day visit.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — "Today" anchorwoman Jane Pauley will deliver the commencement address May 5 at Indiana University, school officials announced.

Pauley

Pauley, born in Indianapolis and a graduate of Indiana, began her broadcast career in Indianapolis in 1972 as a reporter for WISH-TV. She joined NBC's "Today" in 1976. Deborah Norville is replacing her on the show next year.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sammy Lerner, the Hollywood songwriter whose lyrics "I'm strong to the finich 'cause I eats me spinach" created a loyal following for Popeye the Sailor Man, has died of cancer. He was 86.

Lerner died Wednesday at a Los Angeles nursing home, said a spokeswoman for the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

The serious songwriter said he was horrified by the 1932 theme "I'm Popeye the Sailor Man," which he composed in less than two hours for cartoonist Dave Fleischer.

"When I saw that first cartoon, I wanted to crawl in a corner," Lerner said in a 1977 interview. "'Just do me a favor,' I said. 'Don't put my name on the screen.'"

Lerner was as adept at nonsense cartoon lyrics as he was with the romantic and breezy standards of Tin Pan Alley.

His work in the 1930s and 1940s included "Is It True What They Say About Dixie," a song immortalized by Al Jolson, and English lyrics to "Falling in Love Again," Marlene Dietrich's song in the film, "The Blue Angel."

Lerner also wrote the theme for Betty Boop and a number of "bouncing ball" musical cartoon songs.

Born in Saveni, Romania, in 1903, Lerner emigrated with his family to Detroit, where he attended Wayne State University.

Soviet dissident remembered as beacon of honesty

MOSCOW (AP) — Andrei D. Sakharov was remembered today by colleagues in science, human rights and public affairs as a beacon of honesty and the conscience of a nation struggling to free itself from decades of official lies and corruption.

"We have lost our moral compass," said Roald Sagdeyev, the former head of the Soviet space program who worked with Sakharov in the Congress of People's Deputies and the Soviet Academy of Sciences, and was named to an official funeral commission.

"An outstanding person has died, such as maybe appears once in a hundred years," said fellow deputy Alexei Kazannik of Omsk.

The Congress of People's Deputies, including both supporters and political foes of Sakharov, stood for a minute of silence today morning when his death Thursday night was announced.

Linguist Dmitri Likhachev, one of the country's most respected scholars, told the deputies: "With Sakharov, a part of our heart has departed from us. We could agree or disagree with him, but he was a man of absolute sincerity and absolute purity, and this led him to achievements in science and his position in public life."

Even long-time members of the Communist Party apparatus, which under President Leonid I. Brezhnev in 1980 ordered his exile to the industrial city of Gorky, praised his honesty and principle.

Sakharov was exiled Jan. 22, 1980, for criticizing the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan less than a month earlier. But society, as well as top officials, now agree with Sakharov's point of view.

Politburo member Vitaly I. Vorotnikov, a Politburo member, told the Congress that Sakharov had been "one of the country's greatest scientists, a major public figure."

"Everything that he did was dictated by his tireless conscience, his deep humanitarian convictions," Vorotnikov said.

Another Politburo member, conservative Yegor K. Ligachev, told the Tass news agency: "I was very well disposed toward Sakharov as a personality."

"He did much for the country. He adhered to different views and positions, but this is only natural," Ligachev said.

Sakharov's last political battle was to try to break the monopoly on political power enjoyed by Vorotnikov, Ligachev and other members of the Communist Party apparatus.

Sakharov said in his last public statement that the leadership was bringing the country to a catastrophe. He supported a call to create a formal political opposition.

Yuri Afanasyev, a historian who sided with Sakharov in that political battle, pledged to continue his work.

Communist reformer Boris N. Yeltsin, who with Afanasyev and Sakharov was a co-chairman of the Inter-Regional Deputies group of legislators, told Tass that Sakharov was "the people's conscience, and all honest people in the U.S.S.R. and throughout the world will grieve for him."

Sakharov's relationship with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who brought him back from exile in 1986, was difficult politically but based on a mutual understanding of each other's importance, said historian Roy Medvedev, who knew Sakharov for many years.

"Sakharov realized the great significance of Gorbachev's reforms, while Gorbachev realized Sakharov's significance in political life, helped him return to politics," Medvedev told Tass.

"Sometimes Sakharov went even further and demanded from Soviet society more than it could provide. But he always treated Gorbachev with great respect and always stressed this," he said.

Worldwide leaders, human rights activists praise Sakharov's efforts

WORLD

Leaders and human rights activists worldwide today praised Andrei D. Sakharov as a tremendous force for freedom who outlived his Soviet persecutors and saw the liberty he championed take root throughout Eastern Europe.

The 68-year-old scientist and human rights activist died Thursday night of an apparent heart attack in his Moscow apartment, his family said.

The Soviet Congress stood for a minute of silence for their colleague, once considered a national hero for discovering the Soviet hydrogen bomb but later reviled by Kremlin leadership for his uncompromising stands for human freedom.

Aase Lionaes, who was chairman of the Norwegian Nobel Committee that awarded him the Peace Prize in 1975, said Sakharov "fell in the struggle for democratic reforms. His death represents a great loss, especially at a time with hopes of a positive development in the Soviet Union and in all Eastern Europe."

Norwegian painter Victor Sparre, a long-time friend in Norway, called Sakharov "the greatest reconciler of our century. He gave his life for other people's freedom."

Political leaders worldwide commanded Sakharov as a man whose causes went beyond ideology.

In Strasbourg, France, the 518-member assembly today unanimously paid tribute to Sakharov, whose name it had given to its Human Rights Prize.

Former President Reagan called Sakharov as "a man of great principle and a true general in the fight for human rights."

Human rights activist Natan Sharansky, who spent nine years in Soviet labor camps before immigrating to Israel in 1986, told Israel radio today that Sakharov had helped thousands of Soviet Jewish refuseniks.

"Sakharov had tremendous influence ... among dissidents, among free people in the Soviet Union and who by his own personal example helped change the whole climate in the Soviet Union," Sharansky said.

Marie Staunton, director of the human rights group Amnesty International, said Sakharov "represented a whole generation of people who were very brave in standing up and struggling in what seemed at that time a hopeless situation."

"Everybody looked up to him, his death is really the end of an era," she told the British Broadcasting Corp.

Britain Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd said: "I hope the torch will be handed on and that that work, which is not yet complete, will be carried forward by people who will remember him."

Roland Leroy, member of the Politburo of the French Communist Party and editor of the Communist Party organ L'Humanite:

"He was a victim of the repression of the Brezhnev period. His name became a symbol of this repression. Today, he dies a deputy in the congress of the people where he was able to express his opinion freely."

Former French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing recalled Sakharov's legendary drive and benevolence.

"I remember the emotion I felt last winter, climbing the damp and dilapidated stairway that led to his apartment. It was he who partially opened the door. I saw on his face the signs of a great man: intelligence and goodness.

"He seemed luminous. That light has gone out. The flame that lived within him will burn forever. His way of defending liberty and human rights was not that of a doctrinaire, but of a liberal. In the passion of his combat, he conserved his benevolence."

Wall openings, talk of German reunification boosts Deutschmark

Hearst News Service

PARIS — Almost from the moment the Berlin Wall began cracking wide open, the world's financial markets have been whistling a tune that sounds suspiciously like "Deutschmark Uber Alles."

Political re-unification of the two Germanys may be years off, but, for the people whose business it is to judge such matters, economic re-unification already is underway.

The virtually irresistible rise of the Deutschmark against the dollar and other western currencies since mid-November is testimony to that view.

However vociferously the East German leader, Egon Krenz, may reject re-unification and however insistent West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl is that aid to East Germany depends on how fast it introduces democracy, the economic integration of the two countries is widely regarded as inevitable and imminent.

The result will be the creation of an economic juggernaut in the heart of Europe — at least, according to a wide consensus of Western European political and business leaders.

As Alex de Takacsy, a senior executive of the Franco-Swiss investment bank, Hottiinguer, put it: "Let's not kid ourselves, the situation in which the Germans find themselves is favorable on almost every count."

By western standards, East Germany industry may be flagging and obviously needs bailing out. But, compared to the rest of communist Europe, it's in good shape.

The East German work force is skilled, disciplined and clearly doesn't suffer from the degree of social demoralization afflicting workers in the Soviet Union and Poland and disastrously undermining productivity there. Drunkenness, for example, isn't a major problem in East Germany, as it is nearly everywhere else in the Eastern Bloc.

To bring themselves up to western levels, East German factories need what West Germany is best at providing. In that sense, experts say, the two Germanys' economies are ideally matched.

"West Germany leads the world in making machinery which makes other machinery; in other words, dyes and machine tools of all kinds," de Takacsy said.

East Germany's most pressing requirement is to re-tool its plants, most of which date from before World War II and are wholly outmoded.

As anyone who recently has been aboard a Lufthansa airliner headed for Warsaw, Budapest or Moscow can testify, West German businessmen have embarked on a massive economic invasion of Eastern Europe.

In East Germany, the industrialists from Dusseldorf and Essen don't really need to make a sales pitch, at all.

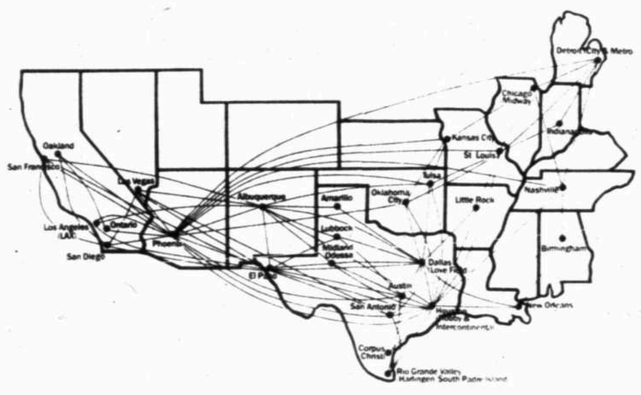

Comparatively close economic ties between the two Germanys have existed for decades. What's known as "German-German" trade is already fairly heavy, encouraged for political reasons by the Bonn government long before re-unification seemed a realistic prospect.

Opposition ends rule of Pinochet

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Opposition leader Patricio Aylwin told his jubilant supporters today that Chileans have regained their freedom by electing him president, ending the dark era of military rule under Gen. Augusto Pinochet.

Aylwin

Chileans danced, waved national flags and set off fireworks to celebrate Aylwin's landslide victory Thursday over Hernan Buchi, a pro-government candidate. Celebrations lasted into the morning in Santiago and cities nationwide.

The election was intended to bring back democracy to the last South American country still ruled by the military.

Pinochet was forced to call the election after losing a referendum in October last year, in which voters rejected a military proposal that he remain as president until 1997.

Speaking to hundreds of supporters early today from the third-floor balcony of a downtown hotel, Alywin referred to the generations of democracy enjoyed by Chileans until Pinochet overthrew elected President Salvador Allende in a bloody 1973 coup.

"Chile has refound her history. Chile has regained liberty. Chile has regained democracy," said Alywin, who promised a government of national unity to repair the political and social divisions under the Pinochet regime.

Pinochet's government officially recognized Aylwin's triumph. Interior Minister Carlos Caceres said in a nationally broadcast address that authorities would abide by it.

Official results from 93 percent of all polling stations in Thursday's election gave Aylwin 3,577,669 votes or 55.2 percent of all valid ballots. He was supported by a coalition of 17 parties ranging from right to left.

Buchi, Pinochet's former finance minister and architect of a free market economy, had 1,901,668 votes or 29.4 percent. A third candidate, populist businessman Francisco Errazuriz, had 998,786 votes, 15 percent.

His absolute majority and 2-1 advantage over his nearest pro-government challenger appeared to give him the mandate for a possible upper hand in future relations with Pinochet, who has vowed to remain on as army commander.

Alywin, 71, a Christian Democrat and former Senate president, is to begin a four-year term on March 11, when Pinochet's term ends.

Much of his future authority was expected to depend, however, on results from Thursday's voting for the 38 elected Senate seats and 120 House of Deputies seats. Up to 10 more senators are to be designated by the Supreme Court, National Security Council and other government bodies.

Conclusive returns in the congressional races were not expected until later today. However, there were indications from preliminary, unofficial returns that the pro-government forces may have fared better in the congressional vote than in the presidential race.

From the moment Aylwin's victory became evident, supporters took to the streets, dancing and chanting or roaming in noisy caravans of buses, trucks and automobiles. They waved Chilean flags and party banners, blowing on horns and shooting off fireworks.

Similar celebrations were reported in other large cities, and in the Pacific resort city of Vina del Mar, national police used water cannons to clear the streets.

Demonstrations are legally banned on election day. Police in Santiago, who had blocked many anti-Pinochet protests and fired water cannons and tear gas at demonstrators in the past, did not intefere with the celebrations and even suspended traffic on the city's main boulevard to allow Aylwin supporters to listen to their leader's victory speech.

Havel gains further backing for presidency

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Opposition leader-playwright Vaclav Havel has gained more support for the presidency, with 40,000 supporters cheering him in the streets and the nation's Roman Catholic primate joining his chorus of backers.

The opposition and Communist leaders planned to resume negotiations toward selecting the new president. Communist hard-liner Gustav Husak resigned Sunday after swearing in the first government here since 1948 not dominated by Communists.

Opposition spokesman Lubos Dobrovsky told a news conference Thursday night that negotiations would resume soon but did not say when.

He said negotiators were exhausted after intense discussions that lasted until late Wednesday and decided to take Thursday night off.

About 40,000 people poured into Wenceslas Square in Prague on Thursday to show their support for Havel. The rally was called by students who were the vanguard of the pro-democracy movement.

Police action on Nov. 17 against peaceful student demonstrators left 143 injured and launched the peaceful revolution that forced the Communists to relinquish their monopoly on power.

"Havel for president!" and "We want Havel!" chanted the crowd Thursday.

The voice of Czechoslovak Primate Cardinal Frantisek Tomasek on Thursday joined others supporting Havel, according to the state news agency CTK.

"My choice for the function of the country's president is Mr. Vaclav Havel, fighter for the right, justice and truth, not only for himself, but for all of us," wrote the popular, 91-year-old cardinal in a statement of support carried by CTK.

The talks Wednesday night at first seemed to have produced agreement in how a new president would be named.

Under the constitution, the Federal Assembly has two weeks after the resignation to elect a new head of state.

Opposition leaders thought they reached an understanding with the Communist Party in earlier negotiations that Havel would be named president until free elections next year.

But the 350-member, Communist-dominated parliament has resisted electing the former dissident, who spent years in jail for fighting Communist rule and defending human rights.

In parliamentary sessions Tuesday and Wednesday, the Communist deputies introduced a proposal to hold a referendum to choose the new head of state.

Negotiators met until late Wednesday and concluded by issuing a joint statement saying the deadline would be extended by a constitutional amendment to give Parliament 45 days to select the president.

WORLD IN BRIEF

1995 World's Fair will be joint effort

N.Y. Times News Service

The Bureau of International Expositions in Paris announced Thursday that the 1995 World's Fair would be held jointly in Vienna and Budapest, with the governments of Austria and Hungary acting as sponsors.

As a cooperative effort between Communist and capitalist countries, the fair is envisioned as the first large-scale cultural event to symbolize and to celebrate the lifting of the Iron Curtain.

It will also be a concrete expression of the resurgence of Central Europe, particularly the Danube basin, as the cultural and economic entity it was for centuries before disruption by two world wars.

"It will mark the restored harmony of the Central European sphere," said Erhard Busek, Austria's minister for science and research.

Gerhard Feltl, a member of the planning commission, said that the fair's theme would be "Bridges to the Future."

"We feel the fair, like a bridge, symbolizes a regained continuity, a linking of the past and future of Central Europe," he said.

Feltl said that exhibition sites had already been selected in Vienna and Budapest and that the cities would be linked by a high-speed maglev, or magnetic levitation train. The train, suspended in the air by magnetic forces, will cover the approximately 140 miles between the two capitals in about 90 minutes.

Austrian and Hungarian officials said they hoped that a joint World's Fair would demonstrate an industrial resurgence in the Danube region.

Bethlehem cancels celebrations

JERUSALEM (AP) — Municipal officials in the biblical town of Bethlehem announced Thursday they had canceled community Christmas celebrations for the third year in a row to support the Palestinian uprising.

The town in the occupied West Bank is revered as the birthplace of Christ.

Municipal officials in Beit Sahour, to the east, also said they would call off their Christmas celebrations to back the uprising.

Beit Sahour is surrounded by fields where Christians believe the birth of Christ was announced to shepherds.

It will be the third consecutive Christmas that the towns, both homes to Christian Arabs, will forgo putting up decorations, lighting municipal trees or holding receptions.

However, several holiday events sponsored by the Israeli military government or by Christian groups will go ahead in both communities, Israeli officials said. Included is a government-sponsored choir program near the Church of the Nativity in Bethlehem.

Municipal officials cited both the uprising and six weeks of tax raids carried out by soldiers and Israeli revenue agents in Beit Sahour as reasons for canceling Christmas celebrations.

Tower of Pisa to be closed

ROME (AP) — The mayor of Pisa agreed Thursday to sign an order to close the famed Leaning Tower to the public at an as yet undisclosed date, the ANSA news agency said.

Pisa Mayor Giacomo Granchi, who met with Minister for Public Works Giovanni Prandini in Rome, agreed to sign the closure order on Friday.

Granchi agreed to sign the order after he was assured the restoration work would begin as soon as possible, perhaps in the next three months, ANSA said.

Granchi, who had opposed closing the tower, said Monday he now agrees it is necessary. However, he said the shutdown would not begin until after the Christmas holidays.

Prandini said the government would not reimburse Pisa for any financial losses suffered by its tourist industry. An average 1,500 to 3,000 tourists climb the tower daily, paying a fee of $2.80 each.

The 180-foot tower tilted almost from the time Bonnano Pisano started building it in 1173 because the ground shifted underneath. Experts in Pisa said it would not topple for another century if its tilt pursued at the same rate.

Robbers flee with $3 million

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — Masked bandits rammed an armored van, shot its driver and then fled with more than $3.1 million, police said.

Police said the bandits knocked the armored vehicle into a wall with their own van, encircled it with three other cars to block its escape routes and then rushed it under a hail of gunfire that seriously wounded the driver. Two guards inside the van were not injured.

Police found more than 20 spent rounds at the scene, indicating the bandits might have fired an automatic rifle, the Italian news agency ANSA reported.

Witnesses said there were at least six bandits in the cars and van and another two on motor scooters.

Police said the bandits took three bags of cash the armored van was delivering to post offices and a branch of the Bank of Italy.

The thieves abandoned some of the cars at the scene and others at a two service areas on the toll road north of Florence, police said.
