Park Board Pleased With Cisco Site

BUILDING TO BEGIN WHEN CAMP READY

Two members of the state parks board, in Cisco for an inspection of the proposed state park here, this morning expressed "complete satisfaction" with the park site and promised that the park would be brought here to do the construction work. The two board members were Wendell Mayes, vice chairman and Tom L. Beauchamp.

The two parks board members said they believed that the Cisco site was "the best we have found anywhere," and pledged the board's cooperation to begin work on it as soon as possible. Mayes and Beauchamp were taken for a tour of inspection of the park site, and shown the lake, canyon, and facilities for making the park an important spot in West Texas recreation.

"Beauty of Site" They expressed a desire to see more of the location, just "for the beauty of it," but were unable to do so because of limited time. They said, however, that the park situation had been well covered in the plans already drafted. It was pointed out that Cisco has an ideal natural location for an important state park, which will be developed at the earliest possible date.

HITLER LOVE STORY INQUIRY IS PROTESTED

PARIS, Feb. 25 —(U.P.)—The Federation of French Newspapers protested today against the opening of a judicial investigation of the morning newspaper Le Journal for its publication of a story on Chancellor Adolf Hitler's love life. The article was suppressed after the protest from the German embassy.

The article, which caused the German embassy's protest and confiscation of the issue of the paper on Saturday, said Hitler's first love during his pre-war days in Vienna was for the daughter of a rich Jewish merchant who refused to consent to the marriage because Hitler was only a modest worker.

The starvation of Hitler's love, the article continued, found expression in violent speeches and political acts, drawing him toward grandiose ideas and Wagnerian music. It was extensively rumored in Munich in 1922, the article said, that Hitler was engaged to Jennie Hang, his chauffeur's sister. She was described as 23 and charming, with green eyes and a reddish complexion. She had two faults, the article said. She was talkative and jealous and she broke with Hitler because of his friendship with other women.

HOCHMUTH IS PREPARED TO DEFEND TALE

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 25 —(U.P.)—Amandus Hochmuth, 80-year-old Franco-Prussian war veteran, stopped shoveling snow in front of his Hopewell home today long enough to say he could and would identify Bruno Richard Hauptmann again as the man he saw with a ladder near the Lindbergh estate before the Lindbergh kidnapping. Hochmuth is one of two witnesses whose testimony against Hauptmann at the Lindbergh kidnapping trial has been challenged by Governor Harold Hoffman.

The veteran's statement came as Attorney General David Wilentz was speeding back from a Florida vacation with the reported intention of going to court if necessary to prevent another reprieve for the convicted slayer of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

Hochmuth has been put in the position of vital importance to the Hauptmann prosecution because of the attacks on the credibility of Millard Whited, the other main identification witness, by Governor Hoffman. The governor has branded as a "lie" Whited's claim that he saw Hauptmann prowling in the woods near the Lindbergh home.

Story Key Point

Should the governor be able to substantiate his charges and invalidate Whited's testimony, the extradition and subsequent trial would be thrown into doubt. Then the main hope of new extradition proceedings would rest on Hochmuth as the witness best able to place the German carpenter at the scene. "I identified Hauptmann at the trial and I am prepared to do so again at any time or place," Hochmuth told his son-in-law, Henry Plump. "He was the man who stopped in the ditch at the side of a house here. He had a ladder strapped on his automobile."

PARK JOB ON ROAD STARTS WITH 10 BOYS

Work began on the roadside park on West Eighth street this morning with 10 boys reporting for the project, which is under the supervision of Joe Blankenship of the state highway department. National Youth Administration officials were disappointed at the small number of boys reporting after 45 had been certified and were eligible for assignment to the work. One other youth reported this morning and was immediately assigned to the job. Mrs. Bernice Landers of the Abilene WPA office today was expressed disappointment at the small number of boys asking for assignment to the work. "It seems a shame that after their families have been on the relief rolls for so long, when there is work for them only this number report for it," she said.

Here Till 5 p. m.

Mrs. Landers said that she would be here only until 5 p. m. today and then would return to Abilene. She urged all who can do so to register for the park work today. After that time, she said, the assignment will entail more delay. Mrs. Landers pointed out that it is first necessary for each youth who wishes to secure an NYA job to be certified by the relief office. He then must register with the NRS office at Eastland — at the Cisco Chamber of Commerce today. As soon as he receives his identification number he is to write to Mrs. Landers for assignment to the project. All this necessary "red tape" can be shortened by appearance of the boys who wish to be assigned to the job, at the Chamber of Commerce before 5 o'clock this afternoon. The entire process can be completed within two days, however, if it is not accomplished in Cisco today. Mrs. Landers said. The roadside park is at the west end of West Eighth street, and will be beside the proposed new Highway One route.

AMERICAN LEGION

John William Butts Post, No. 123, American Legion, meets every first and third Monday nights of each month at the... Some time ago the commission agreed to reinstate the Cisco relocation of Highway One, after it had been temporarily dropped from the list of approved projects. Changes were necessary after the project was reinstated, however, causing a delay in the letting of contracts.

It was believed that the project would include three different contracts, all to be let at the same time. These probably would be the Katy overpass and the paving on each side of the railroad. It was learned some time ago that plans for the western end of the paving already had been completed.

In recent weeks contracts for a number of highway projects have been let by the state commission but the Cisco relocation of Highway One has not been among them.

Although this was not a date for a regular open hearing, Ciscoans felt that they should seek to contact the commission in order to secure as early action as possible on the road.

VOTERS FACE SPENDING CUT AT ELECTION

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 —(U.P.)—The administration plans to place before the voters in the coming presidential campaign a definite program of spending retrenchment, the United Press learned today.

Not directly connected was a $20,000 senate investigation of government expenditures intended to develop methods for saving in administration of federal agencies. The administration plans involved a merging of functions of several agencies which at present do overlapping work. The plan was believed to have been discussed at White House conferences attended by heads of lending and spending agencies recently.

The senate's report will not be made until next year. While the two moves are not related, the senate's investigation may be made the basis for carrying out plans which are being shaped by New Dealers as an answer to the charge they failed to carry out economy pledges in 1932.

Erosion Control Needed

him and impersonate him for the rest of your life?

storm of the year has struck Cisco. Last year, although Texas had more rainfall than it did the year before, the "dust bowl" conditions, Kansas, and Colorado. The dusts endangered the soil and productive soil, besides being a nuisance during the period of the storm.

The prediction of further drouth, coupled with the dust storms last year and those which have already blown out of the "dust bowl", should mean just one thing to the people of Texas. They should wage their fight against soil erosion even more vigorously than they have in the past.

In this part of the state we are troubled more with water erosion of the soil than we are with wind erosion—which brings the dusts. But the two go hand in hand, along with drouths, floods, and working the soil to death with single crops.

Much of the land about Cisco has already been terraced. That is the first step against either wind erosion or water erosion. But terraces alone cannot fight erosion. They need help. Much yet remains to be done in the way of strip-cropping, planting of green-manuring crops, and converting much land into permanent pasture.

Historians tell us that Egypt, Arabia, and Palestine were one fertile lands until erosion got in its work and made deserts of them. Texas and the great Southwest will do well to begin their fight on erosion again before it is too late.

Dictator Talmadge Takes Charge

Huey Long is in his grave. He was the absolute dictator of Louisiana. Now Governor Eugene Talmadge of Georgia appears to have stepped into his vacant shoes. By proclamation Monday the Georgia Caesar set up a financial dictatorship of his state, holding "that no further legislative action is necessary to operate all agencies of his state government." Dictator Talmadge assumed control of the state's fiscal affairs on January 1, contending that the failure of the 1935 legislature to pass an appropriations act of 1936 placed the duty on him as head of the executive branch of the government to operate the state.

Sinclair Lewis must have been correct. He had legitimate bearings all right when he sent from the press a novel which became the best seller of the year. Now the legislature of Georgia appears to have found its level in the waste basket of the new southern dictator who butted into the big picture after Huey Long was sent to a bloody grave. Is Georgia a democracy or a conquered province?

By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, Feb. 25.—Nearly 300,000 persons will apply for the old-age pension, instead of 200,000, as originally estimated.

This may change the basis of the $40,000,000 estimated to win final state approval to receive pension payments. Every increase means substantially raising the amount of money the state will have to raise to pay its $15 maximum pensions, or reducing the pro rata paid until revenues reach the maximum.

There is some evidence though that the actual distribution of 300,000 blanks will not mean just so many applications. For one thing, the blanks are distributed through more than 1,000 outlets, and it is certain an oversupply or surplus will pile up at some of these points.

Purser, in the eager first rush, not merely did the actual applicants secure the blanks, but in some cases two or three members of their families also gathered up blanks.

Still further, many applicants got so mired in the mass of detailed information, and due to confusion in efforts to answer the questions, that they required a second or third blank to start the job over. In the aggregate, these involved differences of thousands of dollars in the prospective pension outlays.

tive to the right of the taxpayers in not exceeding the spirit and purpose of the law. His suggestions were relayed by Executive Director Orville S. Carpenter as instructions to every employee of the pension administration.

Opinion in Texas is that the supreme court decision abolishing the AAA was a "lucky break" for the democrats in the 1936 campaign, in giving them credit for all the benefits and somebody else to blame for taking them away; and further giving them credit for efforts to aid the masses of farm population, and challenging opposing groups to offer something as extensive or better.

At the same time the TVA decision, supporting President Roosevelt's policy, was hailed as equally beneficial to the party, in that it continues a determination to extend benefits yet prospective, and continues as an opportunity for relief from what many consider excessive utility rates.

CRUISE TO NOWHERE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JANE WESTON feels her dreams have come true when she sets out on a three weeks' ocean cruise, accepted in payment for the salary due her when the magazine for which she worked as a travel suspended publication.

On board the ship she meets handsome DIRK, a former ski jumper, as a gift to him from the parents of a child whose life he saved.

DIRK introduces Jane to his friends, SNOWSHOES, a detective, others on board are: NORA LANE, famous actress and owner of the Kokinor diamond, wealthy eccentric MADAME DOHRMUS, DITCH LENZ and MAXIE JACKSON, blackmailer; TINO ROSSI, opera singer; KEN MARTIN and LINDA BATES, floor show entertainers.

Dirk and Jane spend much of their time together. Then a misunderstanding comes between them.

Dirk meets Nora Lane and reports her to the cabaret entertainers in which the ship's passengers are to take part. Miss Lane appears on the program but Tino Rossi, with Jane, refuses to sing. Later Dirk overhears a romantic scene between Jane and Tino.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XII

JANE did not go directly to the bar. She went to her stateroom to repair imaginary ravages to her face and hair, and Tino waited for her outside in the passageway. She glanced in the mirror, and stood back in wonder. Her face had a radiance it had never owned before.

For a moment her thoughts drifted back to the chill fall winds in the city, back to her jobless state. But she banished these now, as easily as she powdered a shiny spot off her nose.

The Bahamas were right out there under that gorgeous moon! She had a romantic figure in tow.

Tino didn't seem impatient when she came out to join him. Together they made their way into the Venetian Room.

Last night she had made a spectacular entry into this room, alone, after her quarrel with Dirk Strom. But tonight she felt keenly this moment of personal triumph. The heady wine of Tino's flattery and his flowery words had gone to her head!

They stopped at the bar, and Jane sat on a high stool where her reddish head glistened under the lights. At her side Tino made a distinguished appearance.

To Jane it seemed that everyone had merely come on from the ballroom to the bar. Looking across the room she saw Dirk seated with Nora Lane and the detective at a corner table. They seemed quiet, subdued.

Dirk bowed to her slightly, and she nodded in return. It was the first friendly exchange they had passed since their quarrel last night.

DIRK had turned to Nora Lane again. He was afraid the actress had been aware of his distraction over the newcomers in the bar.

But Miss Lane was busily engaged in talk with Snowshoes. Snowshoes asked her about the Kokinor diamond and she smiled. At the same time she let a hand slip to her throat where the Kokinor usually nestled, and she seemed almost surprised not to discover it there. Dirk saw her flush.

"I was so distracted I forgot to wear it tonight," she said.

"I feel better," Snowshoes said, "if you'd hand it over to the ship's purser for the rest of this cruise."

Her returning smile was one of sincere gratitude. "It's nice to have you both think about my welfare. I have two friends on board," she said happily. "Tell me more about that fantastic numbers racket. I think that is the worst one of them all."

"If there were a few more indignant persons we could do something about it. But we Americans, since the Spanish-American War, seem to have lost the power of getting indignant over anything."

"It's outrageous!" the actress added.

"We haven't outsmarted the mobs yet. The numbers racket gets the little change, and now the jewel thieves are organized to take care of our new zeal for hoarding precious jewels. You might be interested to know how carefully they work the whole country. A diamond merchant was forced off the road outside a small Mississippi town last week. They found his riddled body in a ditch. The haul in diamonds was forty thousand dollars. The old-time diamond salesman, amiable cuss, carried them around in a leather wallet. Just as Diamond Jim Brady did. But that's all changed in the last six months. Jewel salesmen make the rounds in armored cars. Women won't wear their jewels outside the house. You'd think precious stones had become the only medium of exchange."

"To get at the jewels which belong to the Sultan of Hyderabad," Dirk put in, smiling, "you would have to pass through dens of cobras, saber-toothed tigers and fire."

SNOWSHOES scoffed. "One of our monodent jewel thieves would charm the cobras, make the tigers purr like pussy cats and put out the fire. They'd get the diamonds if they found the cave. They're clever."

"And you think we have them with us on this cruise?" Nora Lane smiled at him, as one always smiles at a man's pet alarm.

"Never can tell. You see them in Paris. You see them in Amsterdam. You see them most frequently in the luxury resort hotels, where the rich congregate and wear their jewels. I've seen hundreds of them in my career as a hotel detective. We caught one with the goods at Lake Placid last winter. He was posing as a Belgian count. He wormed his way into everybody's confidence, and on the night of the Carnival ball at the Lake Placid Club, when guests were in fancy costume and naturally did not wear their jewels, 50 people were robbed. A housemaid caught him in the fifty-first room and locked him in. When he tried to escape from a window he fell and broke his arm. We caught him."

Nora Lane said, "I will be more careful with my diamonds in the future. I didn't know jewel thieves were so prevalent. Why, a few years ago, you couldn't set a diamond! They were drugs on the market."

"But not any more. People are jittery about gold and silver money today—unsettled conditions. Nothing seems safe to some people but a store of precious jewels."

"Persons in the public eyes are more subject to attack than others," the actress advised. "They are publicized. Everybody knows their personal habits, where they lived and where they travel. I must admit I was rather unnerved by that photographer on deck this afternoon."

"You had a right to be!" Snowshoes put in. "Since the snatch racket fell under G-men blows, blackmailing has got its nose under the wire. Every yegg that thinks he has something on another person tries to put on the squeeze."

"I've been subject to extortion threats for a long time. My name is in the papers too much. This person—Mamie Jackson, as you call him—may have meant no harm. But I suppose I've become a little jittery on the subject. My nerves—"

Snowshoes said laughingly, "You need a bodyguard, Miss Lane!"

Nora Lane looked at him and without hesitation said, "You're hired!"

Snowshoes laughed out loud. "No, no," he said, "I'm on my first vacation in 20 years. I was only joking—"

SHE seemed terribly in earnest, and Dirk decided to take her side. At the thought of protection she seemed to be happier.

"I'd like to see you undertake that job, Snowshoes," Dirk said. "Really, I'm a little afraid about Miss Lane's safety myself. Maybe I've got the jitters, too, but—"

"Oh, please, do!" she added. "I'm sure you wouldn't leave me with this feeling now. I do believe I am in danger. Every instinct in me warns—"

Snowshoes was weakening. He was old-fashioned enough to be moved by the thought of a lady in distress. "I'm not getting any rest, anyway," he said. "Gamblers. Tough-looking customers all around."

Dirk laughed heartily. "I am a woman of experience," Nora Lane went on. "I've had a bodyguard before and I am prepared to discuss the business end of it. I would be grateful to you if you'd undertake the job, and I'd like to quote your fee—three hundred dollars for the duration of this cruise."

Snowshoes waved a hand, as if he hadn't expected to be paid for anything, but Miss Lane was insistent. "On no other terms," she said firmly.

"If I take the job," Snowshoes said, "I'll be the first thing we'll do is to go straight to Suite AA and get the Kokinor diamond. We'll take it to the purser to be locked up in the ship's safe for the remainder of this cruise."

He admonished her gently, smiling. "You ought never to leave a jewel like that locked up in a room, hotel, private or stateroom. I can take care of any blackmail or extortion threats. All right, let's go."

Nora Lane stood up. Already the harassed look on her face seemed to have faded away. She was no longer tense. She felt safe in his hands.

She looked at Dirk, and said, "I hope you'll forgive me for wanting to retire. I've enjoyed the evening so much, and don't let me spoil your fun. I know you'll want to stay in the bar. Goodnight," she said, and gave him her hand.

As Nora Lane and the detective went out of the bar, Dirk crossed the room toward Jane. He approached her smiling, wondering what kind of reception he'd get at her hands tonight.

highway department and they are keeping it clean. In the past two years many thousands of trees and shrubs have been planted by cultivators and mail boxes and at the entrances of towns. Only last week the department planted 300 crepe myrtle shrubs at the entrances of towns in this county. These new plants will be kept watered by wagons so that they will be very beautiful in a very short time.

"Let's do our share by cleaning up and beautifying our property. You can help."

Clean Yards

"The vision extends many yards beyond the fenced-in highway. If you are a property owner or owner, does your home look clean and cared for? Old cars, fenders, tires, oil well materials, tin cans and unsightly lumber piles look badly to visitors. Let us tear down outbuildings and sheds which are no longer being used. Make your place look as well cared for as possible.

"This is the time of year to make plans for plantings. February and March are months in which to plant shrubbery. We are urging the planting of crepe myrtle over the entire state of Texas. Plant two crepe myrtle, if you can, and help with this state wide campaign. Good healthy crepe myrtle plants should cost from 35 to 50 cents each and can be purchased from your nurseryman. Make little colorful flower beds of phlox, zenias, petunias or cannas. Morning glories are to be planted over the entire state. They will cover unsightly places along public highways. Plant a five cent package and trail these beautiful morning glory vines over your front porch. These can be purchased from your groceryman.

"It is said that a can of paint will cover a multitude of sins. Why not cover some of the sins of Eastland county? Painted building look better and last longer.

"Plant, paint and paint and let's make Eastland county the clean county."

GREATER YEAR FORECAST FOR MOTOR RACING

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—(UPI)—Automobile racing is due for a "headline year in the speed realm" during 1936, according to Ted Allen, secretary of the contest board of the American Automobile Association, governing body of the sport.

The contest board's pre-season card of dates has listed five national championship classics, not including several dates on the 1935 six-race championship card. When these are added, Allen said, the 1936 title roster should be the longest of recent years.

The national championship circuit opens May 30 with the running of the annual 500 mile International Sweepstakes on the historic Indianapolis Motor Speedway. Kelly Pettilo, of Huntington Park, Cal., took first place and the national title in the classic last season.

Pettilo Ranked First

In the national ranking, Pettilo was first with a total of 890 points. His closest rival, Bill Cummings of Indianapolis, ended the season with 630.

In addition to the title events, 20 sprint racing programs will be held at various fair grounds throughout the East and Midwest. Three road races have also been approved.

"Doc" MacKenzie, of Eddington, Pa., was crowned champion of the eastern states with a total of 1,397.6 points in 34 events. The Middle-Western states champion was taken by "Babe" Stapp, of Los Angeles, who tallied 570 points in four events.

Applications Arrive Early

"The racing fraternity is preparing for the biggest summer of recent years," Allen said. "Applications for racing dates usually are not made until April and the long list already assigned is a true indication that 1936 will be a headline year in the speed realm."

promises racing fans can look forward to one of the most thrilling racing seasons in years.
