ELECTRA BUS IS WRECKED; 2 ARE INJURED

2 Suspects Held At Memphis In Estelline Safe Blowing

DENVER ROAD'S DEPOT WRECKED BY HEAVY BLAST

Bandits, Frightened From Scene of Robbery Believed Caught

IS WORK OF EXPERTS

Nature of "Job" Indicates Theft Was Attempted By Master Craftsmen

MEMPHIS, Jan. 17. — Two men were arrested and lodged in jail here by county officers this afternoon in connection with the blowing of two safes at Estelline early Saturday morning in the Fort Worth and Denver depot. About $50 was secured from one safe, while the yeggs were unable to gain entry to the cash box of the second.

Nitro-glycerine was used. The first charge wrecked the safe and did great damage to the building. The night watchman heard the first explosion and after securing assistance hastened to the depot which is about a mile from town.

Second Blast Fails

While the second charge was being fired, the officers were rushing to the scene. The second explosion failed to open the safe completely and the robbers made a hasty getaway.

The robbery is the work of expert safe-crackers, officers believed. Several other depots along the Fort Worth and Denver have been robbed recently. In each robbery the bandits sought to enter at times when large sums of money were being collected.

Bandits Frightened Away

Appearance of the officers is believed to have saved the large sum of money which the bandits failed to get. The yeggs were frightened away before they completed the "job" on the second safe.

Woman Confesses Slaying Pastor

EAST LIVERPOOL, Ohio., Jan. 17.—(AP)— A lunacy commission probably will be appointed at Lisbon tomorrow to determine the mental responsibility of Mrs. Laura E. Christy, 48, alleged to have poisoned her husband, the Rev. William Christy, 56, who died here Wednesday. Prosecuting Attorney Robert M. Brooks, said tonight he intended to question the woman, who, according to police, andmitted she gave her husband three doses of poison last Tuesday while he was ill with indigestion. He then will decide whether he will prefer an insanity affidavit against the accused who is charged with first degree murder.

Mrs. Christy spent most of today crying in her cell. She is believed to be o nthe verge of a breakdown. She repeatedly murmured, "I don't know why I did it."

Police tomorrow will question Charles Whippler, a brother of the accused, who lives here, regarding what he knows about his sister's four previous marriages, in which all her husbands are said to have died suddenly. Mrs. Christy says all of them died from natural causes.

Raw Rubber Takes 3 Shilling Drop

LONDON, Jan. 17.—(AP)— Whether by reason of Herbert Hoover's campaign or because of timidity among the speculators is not quite clear but raw rubber has had a setback to 3 shillings, 4 1-4 pence a pound in Mincing Lane, the raw rubber market.

This is three pence down on the week and 14 pence below the highest touched recently. The wee's record in share quotations on the stock exchange has been consistently downward.

LENINGRAD, Russia, Jan. 17.—(AP)—The soviet states' motion picture monopoly has invited Charlie Chaplin to take part in a film based on Nikolai Gogol's satire on Russian life, called "The Overcoat."

Picture experts are of the opinion this vehicle would give Chaplin an opportunity to distinguish himself as much by his overcoat as he did by his trousers and shoes.

INTIMIDATION IS CHARGED TO CAL

Employes Who Reveal Fraud Are Ostracized, Senator Wheeler Says

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 15.—(AP)—Never has the legislative power under the constitution been flouted and defied by the executive as it has been in the last few years, Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, declared today in an address at the Baltimore Forum.

"Instead a government by the people, for the people" Senator Wheeler said, "we have a government by propaganda and by executive order, transmitted through the medium of lame ducks and other servile appointees named by the president to positions of enormous power in the departments and bureaus.

Charges Blackmail

"We have government by intimidation by which members of congress and government employes who have revealed fraud or inefficiency are punished by ostracism or dismissal from the service, we have government by blackmail for the details of which I refer you to the experiences of Senator Couzens of Michigan.

"The executive branch of the government in the contest for supremacy for the legislative branch is dominated today by the great financial, industrial and commercial interests. There was a time when the Napoleons of finance and the captains of industry came to Washington by night and held secret conferences with the White House.

Brazen Visits Cited

"That day is past. They now come in the full light of day, breakfast with President Coolidge or spend a week end on the Mayflower at government expense.

"The actual governmental business of Washington is executed today through the departments and bureaus. These have become the tentacles of the executive power, reaching into every function in government, even to the legislative branch.

"No law can be presented to congress that affects in any way a departmental matter before it has been submitted to that department and a report had thereon. The departments and subordinate bureaus have become the censors of legislation."

LYRICS OF LIFE.
By Douglas Malloch,
The Fire Next Door.

They had a fire last night next door,
I learned a lesson from it.
The engines came with a clang and roar
And men to overcome it.
The coals were gleaming in the grate
But just next door a thing of hate
Struck out its tongue, forgot its duty,
Destroying hope and joy and beauty.

And so it is with human wills:
Good things when good intending,
And yet they fill the world with ills
When angry and unbending.
For thoughts of hatred and of fire
Are like the angry flames of fire.
The flames that get beyond controlling
And set the bells of sorrow tolling

Be brave, yet courage must be kind,
Be strong, and yet be tender;
Who fights for self might better find
Some service he can render.
Men may be giants, yet be wrong;
Men must be just as well as strong,
Contend in proper time and season,
But think with fairness, act with reason.

'CAN'T AFFORD TO FAIL ON C-C BUDGET;' KELL

Business Man Here Strongly In Favor of $100,000 Sum

"GOOD PUBLICITY"

Announcement of Drive's Success a Boom For City, He Says

Wichita Falls is under the necessity of raising a $100,000 chamber of commerce budget speedily and at once, in the opinion of Frank Kell, business man and capitalist here, who declared Sunday that the amount sought by the chamber for its 1926 work was, in itself, an advertisement of civic value. He asserted that announcement that this much had been subscribed would "be worth almost that sum in constructive publicity.

Cannot Afford to Fail.

"Wichita Falls cannot afford to fail in the present effort to raise $100,000 for an enlarged chamber of commerce program," Mr. Kell said. "The entire southwest is watching us. Success in this campaign will be heralded throughout the United States as conclusive evidence of the permanence and soundness of Wichita Falls as a city able to do big things. The announcement that $100,000 has actually been raised for development purposes here will be worth almost that sum in constructive publicity."

"I had felt," Mr. Kell continued, "that we could carry on our program in 1926 for approximately $75,000 but I fully agree with the plan of the officers and directors to create a special fund of $30,000 for industrial development or any emergency that may confront us in 1926 to be used under the direction of an industrial committee. I believe that now is the time for the most aggressive action for new factories and wholesale houses of known value and financial strength.

Endorse Budget.

"I endorse the chamber of commerce budget of $100,000 for 1926 with the feature I have mentioned. I believe the balance of our enlarged program should be carried out with the utmost vigor and efficiency. With our wonderful outlook here, the year 1926 is a time to push forward to the fullest extent of our resources. A subscription to our chamber of commerce should be looked upon as an investment and every citizen should pay his share."

The chamber of commerce now has approximately $67,000 in cash or pledges and sufficient more on rating cards to give assurance the $100,000 total can be reached. Plans for a determined follow-up campaign to see every business man in the city who has not been given opportunity heretofore to make an investment this year. President J. C. Mytinger has called a meeting of the directors and a follow-up committee of the chamber for 10 o'clock Motday morning in the chamber's rooms and the matter will be taken up in detail then.

Rum Problem Laid To "Wet" Officers

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 17.—(AP)—The cause of most of the difficulties of prohibition is the fact that the majority who enacted the Volstead law are not sufficiently organized to enforce it, F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, told an audience gathered here tonight to celebrate the sixth anniversary of prohibition.

"The time has come," Mr. McBride said, "when we must drive out of public life every man who is not willing to keep his oath of office and stand by the expressed prohibition policy of our country. By organization of our prohibition friends we must back up the officers elected in doing their duty to enforce the law."

Here's How It Looked Just 1 Year Ago Today

Remember this?

If you happened to be here a year ago today, you do, for on Jan. 18, 1925, Wichita Falls woke up in the middle of the biggest snow fall of modern times. The official weather bureau reading reported 9.8 inches, which is enough to attain classification as a real snow fall any place, let alone Texas.

The 18th last year happened to fall on Sunday, so the unprecedented storm caused little inconvenience, and by Monday it had begun to melt.

Yesterday was quite a contrast with a warm and partly cloudy day coming on the heels of a heavy downpour of rain Saturday night.

The two scenes above show a local residence as it appeared a year ago; while the other picture was snapped in the railroad yards just south of the depot.

Street Car Plunges Off Bridge Into Icy Water; 3 Are Killed

Crash Victims Break Glass And Crawl Out After Car Settles

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Three unidentified persons are dead and a score or more are in hospitals suffering from exposure and injuries as the result of the plunge of a street car into the icy waters of the Ohio river from the Fleming Park bridge at McKee's Rocks tonight.

Two of the dead, a woman and a girl, seuccumbed after reaching a hospital and one body, also that of a girl, was found floating in the river. Whether the latter body is that of a man or woman is not known.

Whether or not there were more fatalities is not yet known.

The passengers saved were brought to shore by police and volunteer rescue workers, and then rushed to hospitals.

According to an eye-witness, the car was running at a fast rate as it came onto the bridge and left the rails. It first struck a telephone pole, the witness said, and then broke through a guard rail and plunged into the water.

Immediately after the trolley had settled to the bottom of the river, he said, there was a smashing of windows, and passengers and crew crawled out into the icy waters.

Bullets Fail To Stop a Negro, But He Drops His Loot

Four shots from Patrolman W. A. Ogle's pistol may not have stopped a tall, fleet-footed negro Sunday night, but they made him disgorge, so to speak.

The negro man, walking in a manner to excite suspicion, was challenged by the officers near the railroad yards shortly after 10 o'clock. Instead of stopping the negro broke and ran at full speed, dropping assorted pairs of men's trousers, still bearing their price tags, as he went. Evidently, they had just been removed from some clothing store in the city. Te negro got away among the box cars and the trousers were picked up and brought to the police department to await indentification this morning.

LIQUOR SHIPPED OUT ON APPROVAL BY MAIL

DALLAS, Jan. 17.—(AP)—New York bootleggers are catering to mail order trade with customers much along the same lines as former advertising jobbers of intoxicating liquors invaded their trade territory. This is indicated by a letter to a Texas traveling man from Emory R. Buckner, federal district attorney in New York City, wrning him not to make payments for goods received from a certain Gotham concern.

The offending concern was said to have made express shipments of liquors into many sections of the country, sending it on 30 and 60 days credit as a guarantee of its quality.

The Texas customer admitted that it was good.

BRITISH LECTURER SEES GOOD BUSINESS FOR YEAR

DALLAS, Jan. 17.—(AP)—England has taken fresh hope from the Locarno peace settlement, tending to "lift it from the morass of mistakes made by the peace makers of Versailles," and from the probability of a definite readjustment of the coal industry of the country during the year. This was the conclusion drawn by S. H. Ratliff, English author, lecturer and publicist, in an address Sunday afternoon to the Dallas open forum, on "British Labor in Retreat." These factors had tended to produce a vast betterment in the country's in-

Extension Given Dyson Sand Area

Landreth Production corporation apparently has extended the 1,800-foot or Dyson sand production in southern Wilbarger county three-eighths to a quarter of a mile eastward in its No. CC-1, Waggoner, in the northeast corner of the northwest quarter of section 42, block 2, which had filled up nicely when the sand was just touched at 1,890 feet and was being drilled in Sunday.

Humble has an offset to be well which is reported on the sand an about due for completion, their No. M 1, Waggoner. The north offset acreage is also Humble's, being their C-lease, while the northeast offset is Landreth's, being that company's Q-lease.

U. S May Abandon Tangle in Arica

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP) —Developments of the past 24 hours are regarded here as lessening the likelihood that General Pershing will return to Arica after receiving dental and medical treatment here, to resume the post as neutral head of the plebiscitary commission under President Coolidge's arbitral ward in the Tacna-Arica dispute between Chile and Peru.

The reflection of his view that there is little hope for a fair plebiscite unless the Chilean government can be brought to restrain the conduct of Chileans in the provinces, carried in an Associated Press dispatch from Arica yesterday, served to confirm, in the minds of many observers, an opinion that he cannot return to complete the work.

1 Killed, 1 Hurt, As Auto Turns Over

SHAMROCK, Texas, Jan. 17.—(AP)—George W. Huster, 42, farmer of Sweetwater, Okla., was instantly killed, and Claude Brown, 45, Wellington, Texas, his brother-in-law, was badly injured when their motor car jumped an embankment on highway number 4, two miles south of Shamrock, Sunday morning. Brown was thrown clear of the wreckage while Huster was pinned beneath the car in a crek into which it had fallen. The car apparently had turned over at least four times before it stopped, a mass of debris.

Huster's body is being sent to Erick, Okla., for burial, and Brown is being cared for in a Shamrock hospital. Huster leaves a wife and four children.

LAREDO, Jan. 17.—(AP)—A freak storm—a combination of wind, hail and rain aggravated by an intense electrical display—formed just northwest of Laredo and passed directly over this city, leaving in its path a sheeny strip of large hailstones to be melted by the rain that followed. For winter time the storm was most unusual. Within fifteen minutes after its formation, the fickle flurry of weather had dissipated.

Little damage by the hail has been reported.

WOMEN STORM WHITE HOUSE

Seeking to See Cal on Equal Rights Plea, They Are Greeted By Cop

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Armed with a petition seeking for women "the right to earn their own living in their own way, unhampered by laws which do not apply equally to their male competitors" a delegation assembled by the National Women's party marched to the White House executive office today and left their plea with a policeman on duty there for delivery to the president.

The party's leaders, who participated in a mass today at the Belasco theatre, near the White House, have an engagement to see President Coolidge in furtherance of their campaign for an equal rights amendment to the constitution "for no sex in labor laws" wage legislation or other measures.

President Coolidge was in the White House when the petition was left at his office today, but his secretary, Everett Sanders had made it clear to the party leaders that no engagements could be made with the chief executive Sunday. The president spent a quiet day, not even following his custom of attending services at the First Congregational church.

The atmosphere has been cleared by M. Briand's diplomatic victory of Friday in which he persuaded the committee to consider again a stamp tax of limited duration.

WILKES-BARRE, Jan. 17.—(AP) Delivering the first of a series of addresses in the heart of the anthracite fields today, John L. Lewis, president, and other officers of the United Mine Workers of America, justified to the striking miners themselves the conduct of the hard coal strike.

Mr. Lewis addressing more than 4,000 miners who filled the Capitol theatre, struck back at the operators committee which has publicly charged him with responsibility for failure of negotiations to end the strike. That responsibility, Mr. Lewis said, rested entirely with the operators, and particularly with Samuel D. Warriner, chairman of the operators committee.

MRS. BRYANT OF WICHITA FALLS AMONG INJURED

J. T. Dixon, Resident Of Oklahoma, Also Painfully Hurt

BIG CAR HITS TRUCK

Laden With Pipe, Oil Field Transport and Motor Car Collide

Two people were painfully injured and extensive damage done to a large passenger bus and a heavy oil field truck shortly after dark Sunday when a Wichita Falls bound Electra bus collided with the rear of a heavy truck and trailer loaded with casing, two miles west of Iowa Park.

While injuries to those hurt did not exceed painful cuts and bruises the right side of the bus was demolished as a result of the impact with a truckload of casing. It was regarded as little short of miraculous by those who saw the wreck later in the night that there were not one or more killed. Those injured were Mrs. Anna Bryant, 601 Burnett street, and J. T. Dixon, a resident of Oklahoma.

Driver Tells Story

According to the story told by A. P. Crain, driver of the bus, the headlights of two cars coming over the crest of a hill just in front of him blinded him to the position of two trucks parked by the side of the road. He was almost on them, he said, before he saw them and then it was too late to stop his heavy bus. He could do nothing other than switch it partly to the left as if to pass the trucks. It was the little switch that kept the bus from hitting the truck square, allowing the casing on the truck jutting out two or three feet over the rear of the trailer to rip off almost the entire right side of the bus. The heavy truck was shoved down the road some 12 or 15 feet by the force of the collision.

Lighting Lamps

W. C. Little, driver of one of the trucks, said that he and A. R. Matthews, driver of the rear truck, had stopped by the side of the road to light the acetyline head lights. This had just been accomplished, he said, when the accident occurred. Crain, driver of the bus stated that he saw neither head light or tail light on the trucks. Both of the trucks were the property of the T. & P. Coal and Oil company of Ranger and were headed from Vernon to Holliday. Damages to the rear truck consisted in the main of a broken radiator, possible damages to the enegine, and a demolished cab where the casing was shoved through its back wall. The damages to the radiator and engine occurred when the rear truck was shoved up into the front one.

Both of those injured, Mrs. Bryant and Mr. Dixon, were at the general hospital last night, where it was stated that their injuries would probably not prove serious. Dixon was badly cut about the face by flying glass and Mrs. Bryant suffered deep cuts and severe bruises about the face and limbs. There were seven passengers in the bus at the time of the accident.

Texan Attacked By Bandits Dies

WACO, Texas, Jan. 17.—T. F. Watson, 59, who was found wounded and unconscious by Waco police Saturday night at the door of his little store at the east end of the old suspension bridge, died today at 1:30 p. m. at a local sanitarium, having lived 16 hours after being shot through the head, apparently by robbers. He never recovered consciousness.

His death brings Waco's toll of violence for the new year to five, not including George Adas, Greek store keeper, victim of a mysterious attack January 2, who is now recovering from a fractured skull.

The cash register was found open and empty by police. Watson's pockets had been turned wrong side out.

ATLANTA YOUTH IN BATTLE OVER COST OF DATES

Boys Protest at High Cost Of Dates; Girls Say It Is Their Fault

BY MILLARD FERGUSON,
Special Correspondent of The Record News.
Copyright, 1926, By The Consolidated Press Association.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 16.—Parents of the younger generation who have grown gray trying to solve the problem of what makes a "jazz hound" wild may get a few pointers by tuning in on the debate on that self same subject which broke out this week among Atlanta's young moderns.

A good deal of discrimination will be necessary however, to keep from ending up in a worse muddle than ever. For Atlanta's sheiks and shebas are pointing the finger of blame at each other, each insisting that it is the other's fault that the old fashioned "home date" has been supplanted by the present high speed, high cost affair.

The issue was joined when a group of college boys proposed organization of a union to limit the cost of "dates" to $5, instead of the customary $25 or $50. The boys asserted they were always broke because the girls insisted upon being teased, danced theatered, hip-flasked, and fed—particularly fed.

Girls Fight Back

Representative girls came back with a shower of verbal brickbats, the purport of which was that the high cost of "dates" was entirely the boys' fault; first, because the boys were essentially vain and tried to out-do each other in the matter of magnificent entertainment; second, because the boys were so dumb they couldn't contribute more than five minutes of intelligent conversation to an evening of home entertainment. But let the debaters have the floor:

"I don't see how the modern girl keeps her girlish figure and eat she way she does," says Garland Walraven, one of the leaders in the movement for a date keepers union. "I have never met a girl who wasn't always hungry and who didn't want to go to the most expensive theatres and dances. I've heard tell of girls who said 'oh, don't let's go out tonight, we've been out so much,' but I've never met one."

Boys Like to Show Off

"The boys are to blame far more than the girls for the high cost of dates," replies Ruby McNeely, one of the spokeswomen for the girls. "Boys like to be seen at the most exclusive and most expensive places in town and they glow with gratified vanity in the fact that the flowers they have given their girls to wear are prettier than those of any other girls present. It makes them feel like the prince of the evening.

"I dearly love to have couples come in for fudge parties, sandwiches and bridge, but I have yet to find the first young man who enjoys those things."

"I know of only one home in Atlanta where I can go on a date and not find the girl waiting in the front hall with her hat on her head and a 'well, where are we going?' on her lips," rebuts Donald Keller. "The high cost of rushing is due to the fact that the girls don't want to stay at home for dates. The growing reluctance of boys to take girls to dances and their delight at going as stags, is due to the fact that a dance means first flowers pretty enough to compare favorably with those of any other girl; then if you don't happen to own a car a taxi and after the dance food. Always there is food. And I don't mean lettuce leaf and a sandwich I mean a dozen raw, a planked steak and a pound or so of French frieds."

She Likes to Stay Home

"Compared with girls in New York and other large northern cities, Atlanta girls are home bodies," argues Jeanette Bailey. "Personally I don't want any boy to spend a lot on me and be forever taking me places. If he has any personality at all, it is more interesting to stay at home and talk to him than it is to go to a movie that would probably be stupid."

Ted Atkinson closes for the boys with this:

"When social life was not so complicated, a movie or a play, an occasional dance and the usual box of candy made a girl feel that she had a real Romeo. But now the cost of courting is so high that it is interfering with marriage. Boys who would like to marry young and start out on a modest salary like dad did, are confronted with the fact that they can't give their girls gold mesh bags, two and a half carat diamonds, summer ermine and closed cars, so they don't marry. That forces the girls to marry older men who have made money and can give them what they want. And the higher the girls raise the cost of entertainment, the older the 'husbands' age becomes."

Says Men Cannot Talk

To all of which Elisabeth Carroll retorts:

"Nine times out of ten it is the boy who suggests going out and not the girl. Boys are afraid that girls will think they are pikers if they aren't always feeding them or taking them to theatres. Men talk a lot about liking the old fashioned girl who makes fudge and lemonade and plays the piano but they don't. Most men don't like to stay at home for dates because they don't know anything to talk about that will take up more than five consecutive minutes."

$2,500,000 IS GIVEN TO HELP AIR INDUSTRY

Daniel Guggenheim Seeks To Develop Aeronautics In United States

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Donation of $2,500,000 to aid in the advancement of aeronautics and aviation in this country was announced today by Daniel Guggenheim, banker and mining man, who gave $500,000 last year for the establishment of a school of aeronautics at New York university.

Mr. Guggenheim, in making the announcement of his endowment in a letter to Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, said the fund would be used in co-operating with Mr. Hoover and all agencies of the government and the public generally, in promoting aeronautics. He expressed the desire that the fund be restricted to civil activities and that work which is properly a government function be avoided.

To Co-operate With U. S.

Mr. Hoover assured that his department would be co-operated with in "every possible manner." Mr. Guggenheim explained that his action in deciding to establish such an endowment was taken particularly in view of President Coolidge's endorsement of the recommendation by the national advisory committee for aeronautics that a bureau of air navigation be established in the department of commerce.

The fund will be administered by the Daniel Guggenheim fund for the promotion of aviation, the trustees of which will be "men of eminence and competence." Mr. Guggenheim announced. He said he immediately would place $500,000 at the disposal of the trustees and would supply further funds, up to an additional total of $2,000,000, when, in the judgment of the trustees it could be used wisely to promote the aims of the fund.

The general purpose of the fund, in part, as outlined by Mr. Guggenheim, are to be as follows:

Commercial Aviation.

"To assist in the extension of fundamental aeronautical science.

"To assist in the development of commercial aircraft and aircraft equipment.

"To further the application of aircraft in business, industrial and other economic and social activities of the nation.

"There is urgent need in our country for immediate practical and substantial assistances in aviation in its commercial, industrial and scientific aspects," he said in his letter to Mr. Hoover. "No less urgent is the need to awaken the American public, especially our business men, to the advantages and possibilities of commercial aircraft—in a word, to make the American public in a very real sense "air wise."

Megargel School Patrons Hope For Construction of $40,000 Building And Better Affiliation This Year

Improvement of Educational System in City are Among Foremost Issues With Citizens, Says H. L. Groner, Superintendent, on Visit Here

The construction of a new school building to cost between $40,000 and $60,000, and the addition of four more credits of affiliation with the Texas State University were named by H. L. Groner, superintendent of schools at Megargel, as two things that city was attempting this year as improvements to the public school system there. The school has completely outgrown its present building, Mr. Groner said here yesterday, and little opposition is anticipated to a proposed bond issue to be put before the people of southwest Archer county soon for a new, modern structure, he says.

Mr. Groner was in Wichita Falls on business.

600 Students.

The Megargel public schools now have an enrollment of about 600 students, he said Saturday, an increase of slightly less than 500 in six years. Ninety of those enrolled are in the high school, which graduated nine pupils last year and has that many in its senior class this year. There are twelve units of affiliation in the high school, and it is hoped by this year's work to increase that number to twelve, Mr. Groner declared.

Between 225 and 250 of the students in the school are from the rural districts. Six trucks, carrying passenger insurance of $30,000 each, bring the students in from as far away as eight miles, and as close in as three miles, furnishing the transportation free.

New Gymnasium

The district has an area of some 54 square miles including a larger portion of southeast Baylor county, as well as southwest Archer.

The Megargel schools have only recently completed a new gymnasium with an indoor basket ball court and considerable physical training apparatus.

ROAD CLEARED FOR TAX BILL

Leaders Endorse Measure Which Received Support Of Committee

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP.)—The house tax reduction bill, somewhat changed in the senate, starts off this week with the ways apparently cleared for early action as a result of a compromise reached yesterday by republicans and democrats.

Leaders of both parties today endorsed the bill, which was unanimously ordered reported yesterday by the finance committee. They described it as non-partisan and predicted prompt passage by the senate.

The compromise reached on the bill involved further reductions in the surtax rates and repeal of the inheritance tax. The only prospective fight against the measure in the senate now lies in threats of republican insurgents to propose continuance of publicity of income tax returns and to oppose repeal of the inheritance levy.

Another fight in prospect, however, when the bill, if passed as written by the finance committee reaches conference with the house.

Chairman Green of the house ways and means committee, which proposed repeal of the capital stock tax and increase of the corporation levy. Commenting on repeal of the inheritance tax voted yesterday by the senate financial committee, 18 to 1, Mr. Green remarked that the "bill has yet to be acted upon in conference."

Chairman Smoot, of the finance committee, will report the bill to the senate Tuesday, giving printers ample time to get the amended message into shape, but he declared yesterday he would wait a coupl of days at least before asking the senate to take it up in order to permit a vote on the world court.

CROWN JEWELS DAZZLE MASSES

Russian Peasants Flock To See $250,000,000 Gems On Exhibit

MOSCOW, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Russian workers and peasants are flocking by many thousands to enjoy the dazzling splendor of the crown jewels of the Romanoffs, now the property of every poor citizen of this communistic republic. This collection, estimated to be valued at $250,000,000 has been turned into a source of revenue by the soviet government which has placed it on exhibition at the soviet trade union house in Moscow, formerly the club of the nobles.

The general public is charged an admission fee of $1, but members of the trade unions and communist organizations pay only 25 cents.

The regal collection represents the accumulated treasure of ten Russian royal families, and includes crowns, sceptres, coronets, emblems, tiaras, diadems, necklaces, bracelets, rings and gems of many other kinds. Soldiers are stationed throughout the building as a precaution against theft.

The object of greatest curiosity is the huge imperial crown of all the Russias, a magnificent dome-like patriarchial mitre, containing more than 4,000 carats of diamonds of the first water and carrying on its summit a cross of diamonds and rubies of exquisite beauty, the whole value at $52,000,000.

ISN'T IT SHOCKING?

THERE are three women on the rolls of the lower house of congress. Mrs. Mary T. Norton is a democrat. She represents a New Jersey district. She demands the modification of the Volstead Act and the return of light wines and beer.

Mrs. Julias Kahn is a republican. She hails from California. She demands the return of light wines and beer. Mrs. Edith Rogers is a republican. She hails from Massachusetts. Mrs. Rogers is on the fence with a strong leaning to the dry side of the issue.

Now what is the Rev. Atticus Webb going to do about it. Texas has a woman governor, why not a woman congressman. Old John Barleycorn has more lives than a cat. He bobs up in unexpected places.

General Smedley Butler found it so in Philadelphia. He fought and he lost. Governor Gifford Pinchot found it so in Pennsylvania. He fought and the Mellonites licked him. He is going to stage another fight for the United States senate. If the Mellonites or regular republicans whip him again, where will Pinchot go for solace.

Just now Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana is camping on the trail of Secretary Mellon. Walsh suspects that Mellon is head of the aluminum trust, a $500,000,000 corporation. Walsh is the sleuth of the senate. He is like a bloodhound. When he catches the scent he follows it to the end of the trail. This is the age of big business. Big business is in control everywhere. Really the people were given just what they voted for in 1920 and 1924.

There are signs that the corn farmers in the corn belt state are ripe for a revolt. They produced a great crop of corn in 1925. There was a great surplus. Prices tumbled. Corn growers were hard hit. Just as cotton would have been hard hit if drouths and boll weevils had not kept the yield below the 16,000,000 bale mark.

If there is a light crop of corn next year, high prices will return, and then the corn belt states will roll up majorities for the republican nominee.

Touch a man's pocket and you touch his politics. Manufacturers control production. They know how to go about it. Farmers do not control production. It is a hit or miss policy in the tall sticks country.

THE PRICE THEY PAY

LEADERS in live stock and agriculture development in north Texas were told by the industrial agent of the Fort Worth stock yards that federal statistics show 386,000 hogs to have been shipped into the hog raising state of Texas from outside states from January 1 to November 20 in the year 1925.

Not only that, he told the aforesaid leaders that the same figures show $160,000,000 was spent in 1925 for importation of feed stuff and live stock into Texas. Addressing the live stock growers he said that not enough first class baby beef was produced and slaughtered in Texas to supply Fort Worth and Dallas alone; but admitted Texas produced more lambs than any other state in the union last year, but these often were contracted for before they were born and afterwards were shipped north for fattening when they could have been fattened on the grain sorgums of west Texas.

Leaders in live stock and agriculture are telling homely truths to the farmers of Texas who are not diversifiers and sneer at the importance of modern methods of farming and the prime necessity for the tillers of the soil to grow their own food stuffs and feed stuffs.

"CONFIRMED WITHOUT DELAY"

POSTMASTER JOHN W. PHILIP of Dallas, is a lucky individual. Dallas republican organizations refused to indorse him for a second term. Postmaster General Harry New did indorse him. President Coolidge sent his nomination to the senate Monday, and the senate confirmed the nomination Thursday "without delay."

Boss Creager of Texas has the White House number and the listening ear of the New England genius who is the throne and the power behind the throne.

John W. Philip is a native Texan. He is a native republican. He is not a new recruit to the party of the elephant. He is a business man and was a business man before he was made postmaster.

All postmasters should be business men. Government should be a business proposition.

TEACHERS

I ONCE heard a great educator, in answer to a question about the need of teaching children to play make this reply:

"They will learn to play. Our business is to teach them to work."

Without work, there can be no real education.

If the average youngster could be made to expend as much real effort on his studies as he does on an athletic game, the time of teachers would not be as often wasted as it is.

It is not that he spends too much effort on the game. It is that he spends too little on his studies.

And one of the reasons for this, is that despite the great advance in educational methods, really good teachers, who can make work interesting for children, are extremely rare.

The games are always interesting. Consequently they are never regarded as something to be done as speedily as possible and forgotten.

In the future some studies which are now very dull will be made more fascinating by the use of pictures! not the commonplace pictures that appear in books of history or geography, but moving pictures of foreign countries and cities, and of pageants which reproduce as far as scholars are able to reproduce them, some of the important events in history.

But even this sugar coating of the educational pill will not be a remedy for ignorance if the pupil is not made to feel that what he is studying is important, and that it is as fascinating as romance.

To do this requires rare personality, and this is very hard to find.

But a more thorough search for it will be made when those in charge of education discover its necessity.

Talk to the middle aged, and you will find that only those who had some particular taste for a special study remember much of what they learned in school.

Unless in their business or professions they have occasion to use the branches they were taught, the memories become dim.

The average boy of between six and fourteen will, with no trouble at all, learn to recognize the make of every motor car he sees on the street, and most of them can tell by the look of it how many cylinders it has, what kind of springs, and in what year it was manufactured.

This shows how capable his mind is in acquiring facts which seem to him important.

The difficult business of education is a making everything that he is asked to learn in school important.

In almost every generation in almost every great school some teacher has stood out as a shining example. Stern or kindly, his pupils remembered the lessons he taught them.

But such men are far too few. Not until the world—which includes the parents of children—finds out that teachers should be as well paid as lawyers or doctors, will education become what it ought to be.

EAST TEXAS MISSED THE DROUTH

MANY East Texas counties missed the drouth and its ravages in 1925. There were 53,285 bales of cotton ginned in Smith county from the 1925 crop prior to December 13, as compared with 24,411 bales ginned prior to the same date from the 1924 crop.

All East Texas counties show from twenty to fifty per cent increase over 1924, with Rusk and Smith leading and vieing for first honors for total production. Smith county is the home of Colonel T. N. Jones. In the not remote past, the colonel insisted that the farmers of Smith county were doing so poorly in the money getting line, that it was almost impossible to prevent the closing of many rural schools.

Well, there should be money in the pockets of the Smith county cotton growers this year and the rural schools should be in a flourishing condition.

AN IMPORTANT INDUSTRY

MANUFACTURE of automobiles consumed 3,905,686 tons of steel in 1925. This was 14.58 per cent of the total consumption of steel in the United States, and the production of crude petroleum is decreasing. Why worry? In 1920 the highest authority in Great Britain predicted before the coming of the year 1923 all the motor vehicles in Europe would be scrapped, because the price of petrol in Europe would be so great that the use of the motor vehicle would be prohibited.

Well, he was a false prophet. And the output of motor vehicles this year will be greater than in 1925.

"Love Bound In Wichita Falls"

By the Author of 'The Flapper Wife'

READ THIS FIRST:

FLOSSIE and MARY ROSE MIDDLETON are two pretty sisters, the daughters of a widowed mother. They work for the Dexter Automobile Company.

Mary Rose is secretary to JOHN MANNERS, the sales manager, and is in love with him. He is engaged to DORIS HINIG, an heiress. Because of her feeling for him, Mary Rose repeatedly refuses to marry DR. TOM FITZROY.

Flossie, a born vamp, does a very poor job of keeping the office files. Mary Rose discovers she is carrying on a flirtation with the president of the company, HILARY DEXTER, although she's engaged to marry his secretary, SAM JESSUP. She accepts gifts of jewelry from Dexter, a married man, and goes joy riding with him until all hours. The girl's mother can do nothing with her.

John Manners falls in love with Mary Rose, as he has never been in love with Doris Hinig and tells her so. That night the two sisters quarrel, and to get even with Mary Rose, Flossie goes to Manners the next day and tells him that Mary Rose is "just stringing him along, pretending to care for him, when she really intends to marry Tom Fitzroy. Manners believes the lie, and Mary Rose is hurt and puzzled by his sudden coldness toward her.

MRS. DEXTER finds out about her husband's love affair with Flossie. When she comes to the office to tell him she's going to divorce him, she finds Mary Rose taking his dictation and mistakes her for the guilty Flossie. She loudly accuses her of "vamping" Dexter. Every one in the office hears her, and MISS MINNICK and the other stenographers snub Mary Rose.

Flossie, the real culprit, begs Mary Rose not to let a soul know that it was she who ran around with Dexter, because she's afraid that Sam won't marry her if he finds it out. So Mary Rose, who devoutly hopes that Flossie will marry Sam and settle down, takes the blame. But she decides to leave the Dexter Company, and Manners coldly accepts her resignation. One night Dexter goes too far in his love making with Flossie and lets her know how little respect a married man has for a girl who goes out with him. Flossi quits her job and disappears. She's gone all of one night and the next morning Mrs. Middleton calls up Mary Rose at the office to tell her some news of Flossie. But she breaks down and hangs up the receiver.

(Now go on with the story)

But there was no time. Hilary Dexter's great blue car—the car in which he and Flossie had taken so many drives—stood quivering at the curbstone. Mary Rose jumped in and it shot forward.

"It's quite some job bringing up a girl these days—" Dexter remarked, when they had covered half the distance between the works and Beckwith Street in less time than Mary Rose had ever covered it before.

She thought that he was speaking of Flossie and his next words surprised her. "I have a young daughter about the age of little Flossie," he said, "and her mother and I don't know what to do with her. Her latest crush is on a bachelor friend of mine—a man old enough to be her father—"

He broke off abruptly and looked embarrassed. He had just remembered that he was old enough to be the father of Flossie Middleton.

Then presently he went on: "Girls certainly have changed since I was young, Miss Middleton. I didn't notice them much for twenty years, while I was making money and automobiles, and the next time I looked at 'em they swept me off my feet. Smoking and drinking and telling snappy stories—going out, tooth, nail and hammer, for any man they happen to like the looks of—"

He scratched his head. "What d'you think Flossie's been up to now?" he asked.

Mary Rose shrugged her shoulders that drooped spiritlessly. "I'm afrad to think," she answered in a voice so low that he heard only half what she said and guessed the rest.

"Now, don't worry too much about Flossie," he told her in a kind, fatherly voice. "That's what I say to Mrs. Dexter about our daughter—I say, 'Now, don't you worry about Elizabeth! These young things know more than we'll ever know. They can get around without crutches!' That's what I say."

The car swung onto the smooth pavement of Beckwith street.

"I'll let you out at your house and then go straight back to the works," Dexter said, as they streaked past the familiar houses. "You call me up and let me know how everything is. And if Flossie's all right, get her to come back on the job—won't you?"

Mary Rose nodded absently. She was leaning forward, trying to see whether an ambulance, a hearse or a Black Maria stood beside the hedge. She felt sure that some such vehicle had brought Flossie home. But the space before the house was empty.

Dexter watched her go in and close the door behind her. Then he sat still in his car for a moment, looking up and down the street where he had dropped Flossie Middleton so many times during the last six months. There was a certain wistfulness in his look—the look a man who has had a dream of Paradise Forbidden, and remembers fragments of his dream.

* * *

That renowned and dangerous gossip, Aunt Henny Blair, opened the front door to Mary Rose.

"This is a fine to-do about your beautiful sister, isn't it?" she asked nodding her imposing gray head sagely. "I always said she'd come to some bad end—I always said it, and I say it still! When you know the truth about what's happened to her, it's sure to be something disgraceful!"

"Why, don't you know what's happened?" Mary Rose asked, looking from Aunt Henny to her mother, who sat, shaking with sobs, in her little hickory rocker. "I thought mother phoned that she knew something about Floss—"

"Well, and so she does know something about her, if you'll just give her time to tell you!" Aunt Henny glared at Mary Rose. "Can't you see that she's too weak to talk right now. She's been crying like that for a good half hour."

Mary Rose went to her mother and put her arms around her.

"Flossie phoned—" Mrs. Middleton began and could say no more. Her whole body was racked with tearing sobs.

"I heard her call up, myself," Aunt Henny confessed. She was on the same telephone line with the Middletons, and Mary Rose knew that she listened religiously every time the Middletons had a phone call. "I thought it was our ring, instead of yours, and I took down the receiver. And I heard Flossie say that she was up in Connecticut with—"

"Oh—ooh—ooh—" wailed Mrs. Middleton. "My baby that I brought up so carefully—" She fell back in her little rocker, her arms hanging limply at her sides, her poor face all puffed and swollen and discolored with tears.

"Oh, I may as well tell you what she said," broke in Aunt Henny, who got no thrill from life like the thrill of telling bad news. "She's up in Connecticut with Sam Jessup! That's where she is, if you want to know—up ther alone in some God-forsaken little town nobody ever heard of before!"

"But she's married him, then—" began Mary Rose. "She's married him or she wouldn't have called up. She wouldn't have dared to!"

Aunt Henny said "Hah!" and snorted.

"That one? That Flossie? Why she'd not be ashamed to let anybody know about anything she was doing!" she went on frankly. "And as far as phoning goes, she never would have phoned except that they haven't any money to get back home on! She didn't say she was married, either!"

"We were cut off, though," Mrs. Middleton sobbed. "She didn't finish talking."

"Why, of course she's married," Mary Rose cried. "And I think it's horrid of you to pretend that you think she isn't! You talk like a dime novel, Aunt Henny—"

Aunt Henny gaped with astonishment. "Well!" she exploded, after a moment. "I talk like a dime novel, do I? That's a fine insult to throw at me, when I'm trying to be a fricnd to your poor mother there—"

She flung a fat hand in the direction of Mrs. Middleton. "Trying to be a friend to your mother, in this hour of her trial and disgrace!" she repeated grandly. "And you, you chit, tell me I talk like a dime novel! You'll change your tune when that dreadful child sneaks home from Connecticut—"

And with her Paisley shawl trailing from her shoulders, like the court train of a grand duchess, Mrs. Blair betook herself off to tell the rest of Beckwith street more than she knew about Flossie Middleton.

The telephone in the hall rang and Mary Rose flew to answer it.

"Connecticut calling Mrs. D. A. Middleton. Is she there?" asked the long distance operator.

"Yes, put 'em on—come on, mother, it's Flossie again, for you!" Mary Rose cried. "Now, ask her if she's married, the very first thing!"

Mrs. Middleton took up the receiver, held it to her ear for a moment and then let it drop from her fingers.

"You'll have to talk to her, Mary Rose. I c-can't," she said in a trembling half-whisper. As she went back to her little rocking chair, Mary Rose could see that she was still shaking from head to foot.

"Hello, mother? I guess we were cut off before," Flossie's light voice came to Mary Rose over the telephone wires.

"It's not mother. It's Mary Rose," she answered. "Where are you, you wild child? And what are you doing? We've been worried sick about you!"

Flossie gave her careless laugh that was like molten, dripping silver.

"You have been?" she asked cheerfully. "Well, that's too bad. There wasn't anything to worry about. Sam and I are married, and we're honeymooning up here in a teeny place called Ridalmont. We're at the Jungfrau Inn."

Mary Rose put her hand over the mouthpiece and whispered, "It's all right—they're married!" to Mrs. Middleton. But, to her surprise, her mother began to cry harder than ever at the news.

"What we're phoning for so frantically is m-o-n-e-y," Flossie went on cheerfully. "We just ran off and got married on the spur of the moment and all we had was $15 with us. If you can't get some money for us any other way, you can get Sam's salary in advance down at the works. Wire it to us, will you?"

"Has Sam wired Mr. Dexter that he's married?" Mary Rose asked cautiously.

"He just did about half an hour ago," Flossie answered as indifferently as if Hilary Dexter had never meant anything in her life. "I'll bet the news knocked him for a row, don't you?" she giggled.

"I'll wire the money," Mary Rose said shortly, and said good-bye.

"I forgot to tell her how glad I was that she's married," she thought, a second after the connection was broken.

She was glad. She was so glad and thankful that she sent up a little prayer as she sank down on her knees beside her mother and pressed the gray head up against her shoulder.

THOSE CHARMING PEOPLE
(With a Bow to Michael Arlen)
By Ernest G. Sharrow

Into our lovely neighborhood,
In every way restricted,
There moved a family named Wood.
Were we to be inflicted?
Or would they prove to be all right,
Acceptable as neighbors?
We polished up our hammers bright,
And furbished up our sabres!

But they went quietly about,
In manner most disarming;
Ere long we all said, "Without doubt
The Woods are very charming."
His game of golf was just so-so;
Her bridge was not too clever,
And soon a friendship seemed to grow
We felt that naught could sever.

The Woods moved suddenly last week;
Now all of us are wiser,
Because since then we've been to seek
A big-league law adviser
Who gave us all a fearful shock;
Said he, "You're in a pickle;
Wood charmed you into buying stock
That isn't worth a nickle!"

Aged In the Woods.

Scientific Diner: "Waiter, what kind of eggs are these that the cook scrambled for me?"

Cautious Waiter: "Chicken eggs, I suppose, sir."

Diner: "I doubt it. They suggest a rare old vintage. Are you sure they aren't some of the dinosaur eggs they've been finding lately?"

THE DOCTOR AT HOME.
(Observed by Roy W. Wilkinson.)

Doctor—Dear me, but I'm hungry! If my dinner jacket has been properly sterilized I'll sit down to eat.

His Wife—Here it is, dear. Now please carve the chicken.

Doctor—Just wait until I get on my rubber gloves, my dear. (Eyes Chicken). Er—has the patient been properly prepared for this operation? Is this dressing sterile H'm, this seems a very serious case. It is rare to see a case of pernicious anemia in a chicken so senile. Well, I'll make an incision over the throax.

His Wife—Hurry, dear. It will get cold.

Doctor—What part of the patient's anatomy do you wish? Will you have the calvicle, commonly known as the collar bone? Or will you have the humerus, which seems to be the best part of the wing?

His Wife—I want the wishbone!

Doctor—I thought as much! Now, I suppose I'll get the spinal column, as usual! I'm not a chiropracton, my dear.

His Wife—Why don't you take the neck

Doctor—The cervical vertebrae? No thank you, not while there's a feur—commonly known as a durmstick! I'll amputate that.

His Wife—Very well, dear. Eat it before it gets too cold.

Doctor—And neglect this patient! My professional duty comes first. Pass those needles and I'll sew up the incisions!

ONE WHO LAUGHS

"Ha, ha, ha! Hee, hee, hee! Ho, ho, ho!"

What dreadful shrieks, and they came from the cage next to Polar's Wild, shrill—there was something about them that the White Bear didn't like at all. They made him feel uneasy. He wasn't afraid—oh, no, but if he could have run away from the hateful noise would have turned tail and made off as fast as his legs would take him. As it was he was heading for a dark corner on the furthermost side of his cage when he heard Brown Bear growling. He paused to listen.

"Don't be nervous, Polar," grunted that good friend. "Nothing is wrong. 'Tis only Hyena laughing, and his voice is very sweet for a Hyena—so I know he is not angry. He's just excited about something—what you've been saying, very likely. How I wish my cage was across the aisle! 'Tis such fun to watch that silly fellow. He not only laughs with his mouth, he laughs wit his whole body!"

"I have quite a long nose. I believe if I poked it through the bars I could get a peep at him," growled Polar, his curiosity getting the better of his dislike. No sooner said than done. And what he saw made him hold his own sides with laughter.

Hyena was standing up straight upon his hind legs and dancing—yes, sir, dancing. Round and round and round he whirled—bobbing up and down like a cork in a basin; now his head wabbled from side to side, now he bowed it so low that Polar thought the queer creature intended to beat it upon the floor, and not for a second did Hyena stop that hideous laughing cry. Never in all his life had Polar seen such a sight, nor heard such a sound. Had his neighbor gone mad?

More Truth Than Poetry

TIMES AND MEN

When Caesar was merely a lad,
If history tells us aright,
A horrible habit he had
Of sipping Chianti all night.
And yet he arose to the peak of renown,
His future loomed bright and propitious;
And he only fell short of achieving renown
By being too doggoned ambitious.

Mark Antohny, also in youth,
Was little addicted to toil—
His habits were rough and uncouth,
And he burned lots of Two A. M. oil.
But still in the Cairo-and-Roman "Who's Who"
He had rather prominent mention,
And students in all of the centuries through
Have given him eager attention.

Napoleon seldom got drunk,
Hard work was his favorite game—
He thought that night life was the bunk,
And seldom indulged in the same.
Napoleon also on history's page
Stands out as a Shining Example,
And though he was finally hooked off the stage—
The fame he collected was ample.

If fame is a thing that you crave,
You can gain it in various ways,
You can even become a great knave
And still receive plenty of praise.
But all of these gents, had they sought to impose
Their ways on the Twentieth Century,
Would like be clad in the very plain clothes
That they wear in the state penitentiary.

It is said that Mickey Shay, windy prizefighter, has threatened to pop a certain sports writer on the optic, but isn't running any risk of getting crippled before his match tonight with Sailor Murphy, so he defers his lamp-blacking act until tomorrow.

What may be tetrmed "The Battle of the Thomases" may be staged in the American League the coming season, if Tommy Thomas holds a job with the White Sox and Myles Thomas clings to a berth with the New York Yankees.

Both these lads pitched in the International League last season and when the smoke of the final battles had cleared away the question of supremacy was undecided.

Tommy labored for the Baltimore club, and under Jack Dunn's tutelage became a star, after the Buffalo bosses had tried him out and decided to let him go. Dunn labored two years to teach Tommy what he lacked when he joined the Oriole team. That was control.

Meanwhile Myles, who started his career in the International League with Reading, and then moved to Toronto, had found his and became a star with the Canadian team in 1925.

Now the battle for the supremacy of the Thomas clan will be carried to the big show—for a few weeks at least.

Red Grange Gets $45,000 For Game

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 17.—(AP)—The football game here yesterday between the Chicago Bears and the Los Angeles Tigers netted Red Grange the largest purse he has received since he became professional.

P. S. Halbrieter, promoter of the game, said tonight the total receipts would amount to nearly $135,000 and between $45,000 and $50,000 would go to Grange.

Attendance was estimated at between 75,000 and 76,000.

LEGION BOUTS GO ON BOARDS 8:15 TONIGHT

Principals In Good Shape For Elimination Glove Battles

Jimmy Owens, Oklahoma City, versus Tommy White, Texas City. Welterweights, ten rounds.

Sailor Murphy, Paris, Texas, versus Mickey Shay, Oakland. Welterweights, eight rounds.

Buckshot Peoples, Wichita Falls, versus Jack Ercanbrack, Wichita Falls. Welterweights, four rounds.

Sam Mitchell, Wichita Falls, versus Six Second Smith, Wichita Falls. Negro heavyweights, six rounds.

Place: 812 1-2 Scott street gym.
Time: 8:15 o'clock tonight.

The principals in the legion fight card scheduled tonight all tapered off their training activities yesterday. Each declares himself in the best of condition.

Both White and Owens are ready for the gong in the second elimination bout for the southwestern welterweight championship trophy. The scrap is expected to be an exceedingly speedy one.

The Murphy-Shay and Peoples-Ercanbrack bouts are sort of elimination affairs themselves. Ercanbrack wants Shay. So does Peoples. Each says that if he wins tonight he wants to meet the winner of the Shay-Murphy fracas.

The negro bout is expected to be a whale of a mill because these big black boys bear no love for each other and will be fighting it out to decide a supremacy that has been checkmated in two other bouts. Each has defeated the other once.

PORKERS TAKE LEAD S'WEST BASKET RACE

Frogs Menace—Season To Open In Earnest Monday

DALLAS, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Winning two games from the S. M. U. Mustangs, the Arkansas Razorbacks, favorites to cop the 1926 southwest conference title, last week took the lead in the championship race.

T. C. U., Rice and Baylor won their single game of the week, while the Texas university Longhorns dropped both their encounters, and the Texas Aggies lost the only game they played.

The season opens in earnest this week. Monday Baylor meets Rice at Houston; Tuesday S. M. U. plays Texas university at Austin; Wednesday T. C. U. opposes the Aggies at College Station; Thursday T. C. U. takes on the Rice Owls at Houston; Friday, the Aggies meet the Owls at Houston, and Arkansas plays Baylor at Waco; Saturday S. M. U. plays T. C. U. at Fort Worth, and Arkansas plays Baylor at Waco.

If results of the first week's play may be taken as criteria, the 1926 race may be as closely contested as the 1925 chase, from which the Oklahoma Aggies emerged as champions by staging a terrific last minute rally to win their final game from Arkansas. Last week T. C. U. came from behind in the last five minutes to defeat Texas 20-16, while Rice turned the same trick Saturday night in a five-minute playoff, defeating the Longhorns 22-17. Baylor university defeated the Aggies 21-19; and the Arkansas Razorbacks Friday night were lucky to fight their way to 29-27 victory over the Mustangs.

Hogs on Rampage.

Saturday, however, Coach Francis Schmidt's defense functioned more effectively, and the Razorbacks trounced the Ponies 28-8. The games were played on the Razorbacks' court where the Hogs are likely to win every conference game played there. Seven of their 12 games will be played at home.

The Hog offensive is built around Adams, Sterling forward and Pickell, elongated center. Last season Adams was acclaimed the outstanding tosser in the conference; he should be even more sensational this year. Pickell again will be a rival of Long Tom George of T. C. U. for all-conference honors at the pivot position.

Last season the Hogs lost the conference title, when their daring offensive shattered against the man for man defense of Coach "Doc" Stewart's Longhorns. They dropped both games played at Austin. This year they will play two games against the Longhorns at Fayetteville, and will be favored to win both, avenging last year's setbacks.

Since six of their 10 remaining conference battles must be fought on foreign courts, the Longhorns virtually were eliminated from the titular chase by dropping their first two games. Stewart's men can hardly be expected to win more than three of their out-of-town games, and it's no cinch they will win the four game sto be played at home. Lack of endurance was largely responsible for the two defeats of last week; the Steers wilting in the critical last few minutes of play.

Doc Up Tree.

Coach Stewart has not been able to find a combination that functions smoothly, though he has in Captain Esquival, Stalliter, King, Olle and Penney performers of merit. The Steers will be materially strengthened this week by return of Johnny Estes, brilliant young guard, who captained the 1926 freshman combination. Estes has been out of practice and play for three weeks because of an injured ankle.

All indications are the Rice Owls and Baylor Bruins have their strongest quintets of several years. In winning over the Steers, Coach Asbcraft's crew showed fight, determination, and general technical ability not possessed by Owl basket ball outfits of recent years. In Ralph Nevinger, former Illinois all-state performer, the Owls have a running guard who already has served notice he intends to earn consideration for all-southwestern honors. Nevinger's brilliant play brought victory to the Owls in an extra period Saturday.

Coach Bridges' Bruins played stellar ball to win over the Aggies in the big College Station gymnasium. If they are able to split even with the Razorbacks this week, the Bears may well prove the sensation of the conference, for Bridges has a combination due to improve with every contest. Louis Slade, center, was the high point man against the Aggies.

The Aggies and Mustangs have in the making strong teams. Kyle and Baker are Aggie stars; and Big "Ox" Key may win all his conference honors in basket ball as he did in football. He was rated the best end in the conference in 1925.

A No-Hit Game In Only One Day's Work

So Charley Robertson, Bought On Payments, Goes to St. Louis Browns As A Bargain

ON THE 30th of April, 1922—many a man is now alive who remembers that famous day and year—Charley Robertson, youthful pitcher with the Chicago White Sox, joined the other five immortals who had pitched a not-hit, no-run, no-man-reach-first game.

A few days up from the Minneapolis club of the American Association this lad faced the ball-murdering Tigers—Cobb, Heilmann, Veach, et al) and figuratively wound the ball around their necks.

The two men who had accompanished the feat in the American League up to that day were Addie Joss and Cy Young—Young in 1904 and Joss in 1908. These men had won fame and glory—had established themselves as great pitchers before their no-hit games. Roberston stepped from the buses to the ranks of these men.

Back in 1870 G. W. Bradley of St. Louis had amazed the old National League with a not-hit game. Ten years later and within five days of each other, J. L. Richmond of Worcester and J. M. Ward of Providence pitched such contests. Richmonds came on June 12 and Ward's on June 17.

But never since then has a National League pitcher turned the trick.

Yes, it was some feat for a rookie hurler. The first thought of the baseball world was that this lad loomed as a future great. A study of his work the next two years indicated he might live up to their expectations. He won 14 games and lost 15 with a losing ball club that season and won 13 the following year.

But in 1924 he apparently lost all his cunning. Or perhaps fame had come too quickly and had given him the wrong conception of the endeavor success demands. Whatever the case, Robertson won but four games in 1924 and lost 10.

Last year, despite the improved condition of the ball club under Eddie Collin's regime, Charlie failed to do anything. The final averages gave him just eight victories and 12 defeats.

So now we find this same hurler, who rode the crest three years ago, sold to the St. Louis Browns at the waiver price; this lad who baffled the best in the early days of 1922, passed up by seven clubs as not being a valuable addition to their staff.

All of which seems just simple proof of the moral that a no-hit game lasts just one afternoon and counts for just one victory in the records. And the main idea in pitching, after all, is to pitch just efficiently enough at all times to give the home team a reasonable chance to win.

Robertson's feat brought to light the fact that the Sox had bought him on the installment plan.

The Sox found him pitching for the Sherman, Tex., club of the Western Association in 1917. They agreed to pay $2,000 for him, $250 down and the rest if he fit when they got him home. The war interrupted his hurling for a while and when he did report to the Sox they decided he wouldn't do and sent him to Minneapolis. When he finally delivered there the Sox paid the $1,750 for him.

Now the Browns get him at a bargain. It may be that George Sisler will make a real pitcher out of him. It may be, too, that Charlie, with his dander up, may try to prove that Owner Comiskey made a mistake when he put him on the remnant table. For, as far as service is concerned, Charlie hadn't ought to be very soiled. He's only 29 and four years old as a big leaguer.

How Robertson Baffled Tigers

First Inning—Blue struck out. Cutshaw popped to Collins. McClellan threw out Cobb.

Second Inning—Mostil caught Veach's long drive. Hooper got under Heilmann's fly. Hooper caught Jones' line drive.

Fourth Inning—Blue struck out. Cutshaw lined to Collins. Cobb flied to Mostil.

Fifth Inning—Veach lined to Hooper. Robertson tossed out Heilmann. McClellan caught Jones' foul fly.

Sixth Inning—Rigney fouled out to Sheeley. Collins threw out Manio. Pillette fanned.

Tribe Quint Plays Meridian Tonight

Coach C. C. Frazee's sturdy Junior college Indians tangle up with the speedy Meridian college five tonight on the Tribe court in the first of a two-game series. The second game is billed for Tuesday night. The Commercial league has a duble header billed for tomorrow night, too, but these games have been postponed to Wednesday night.

The Meridian contests are conference affairs, and Frazee will send his best onto the floor in an effort to take both games. The Tribe came out of a two-game series the past week-end with Weatherford college, winner in the first and loser in the second.

World Wheat Crop Put At 4 Billion

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP) The world crop of wheat for the crop season 1925-26 was estimated by the department of agriculture today as approximately four billion bushels on the basis of returns received from except China.

The latest estimates have indicated a production of 3,350,000,000 bushels, outside of Russia and the most recent reports from that country have placed its crop at 646,000,000 bushels. The Argentine crop was estimated at 215,000,000 and the Australian at 110,000,000 bushels.

Floods and storms in Europe followed by severe cold are believed by experts there to have caused considerable winter killings.

Sees Big Boom In Building For 1926

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(AP)—More than 800,000 new buildings will be constructed in this country in 1926, Earl Schultz, anager of the Chicago Trust company building, predicted today.

Mr. Schultz was a speaker at an executive meeting opening a three-day session of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers. He is president of the Chicago unit of the organization. Delegates from 25 larger cities were present.

The expansion of the automobile industry, Mr. Schultz said, would be reflected in the construction this year of 10,000 public and 200,000 private garages.

6 RESCUED AT SEA

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 18.—(AP)—News has been received in New Orleans by radio of a rescue of six persons at sea by the officers and crew of the steamship Ogontz, which cleared from New Orleans December 21.

Sports Done Brown

George Sisler, manager of the St. Louis Browns, is hoping that Dame Fate will smile on Ernie Nevers, great football artist of Stanford University, during the remainder of the games he plays this winter as a pro.

For Sisler has invested considerable in the young man.

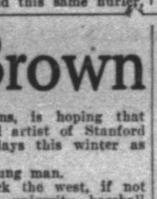

Nevers, while developing into the greatest fullback the west, if not the game, has ever produced, also played on the university baseball team and starred as a pitcher and batter.

Several big league clubs angled for his services, including the Giants. It is understood McGraw offered Nevers a $5,000 bonus to sign a Giant contract. However, the Browns landed the coast star, which leads to the belief that Sisler got the club owners to open up the John bank roll for the grid hero.

Before signing with the Browns, Nevers arranged to sell his services as a football star for a series of games in Florida. Sisler signed him between games there.

Sisler probably recalls the cases of several promising baseball players who found themselves handicapped by injuries received on the gridiron after planning their diamond future.

Davy Robertson, former Giant outfielder, was one of these. While the fans remember Davey as a mighty sweet fielder he originally planned to seek baseball fame as a pitcher. He was pitching for North Caroline A. and M. when McGraw found him. Davey was a southpaw and was making the college batters look foolish.

ERNIE NEVERS

McGraw signed Robertson with the verbal agreement that Davey would refrain from participating in football the following fall because of possible injury. Davey, however, weakened and the ripping of a muscle in his left arm during scrimmage ruined him as a pitcher. He was forced to make himself over into an outfielder.

DAVE ROBERTSON

The case of Riggs Stephenson, former member of the Cleveland club, was an unfortunate one. Riggs was a teammate of Joey Sewell, star shortstop of the Indians, on the Alabama university team. Stevie had hopes of playing big league baseball. He was also, however, a football hero at ol' Alabam.' An injury to his right arm during a football game left that wing with a "crook" in it which so handicapped him in his throwing that, despite a long trial, he was unable to hold his own in fast company.

Manager Speaker of the Indians labored hard to teach Stevie how to play second base despite the handicap and then gave him a chance in the outfield. At bat Stephenson could whale the ball all around the lot and would have made a valuable man on offense had he been able to throw the ball.

Sisler does not blame Nevers, of course, for his desire to collect a handsome sum playing pro football through the winter months. But he hopes the coast phenom will come through unscathed. So do thousands of coast fans who believe that Nevers is one of the greatest all-around athletes the country has produced.

TUCSON, Ariz., Jan. 17.—(AP)—A report received today by President H. B. Titcomb of the Southern Pacific of Mexico railroad from the committee in charge of relief of the recently flood stricken state of Nayarit, on the west coast of Mexico states that the loss of life is fixed at 150, property damage at $5,000,000, and 15,000 persons are homeless.

Medicine is badly needed to combat the diseases, the report said.

CABLE OF 6,561 WIRES.

A cable at the English radio broadcasting station at Rugby contains 6,561 wires. The wires are separately insulated with enamel and connected together at the ends, forming one conductor with all wires in parallel. The cable forms a part of a variable inductance in the high power radio frequency circuits.

Contrary to widely circulated reports that "The American Indian is dying off att an alarming rate in the great Southwest," the Pueblos and other Indian populations are holding their own and increasing at a rate nearly as high as that shown by census figures for the white population.

Trade Narrow In Cotton Market

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 17.—(AP)—The past week in the cotton market has bene mostly a period of slack trading and narrow fluctuations. Prior to Friday the daily spread averaged from 8 to 15 points with the net changes small from day to day. The undertone of the market was steady but the desire to trade was restricted by the slow movement in January and March. Considerable short interest remained to be liquidated in the January option and an even greater short interest in March.

The following table shows high, low and close prices for each month during the past week compared with a year ago:

	High	Low	Close	L'st Yr

SMITH GRABS TEXAS OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP

Bobby Cruickshank Comes Stroke Behind—Mac Shoots 288

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 17.—(AP) Missing of a ten-inch putt on the home green cost Bobby Cruickshank of Chicago a tie for the Texas open golf championship tonight and the title and first prize of $1,500 went to the lanky MacDonald Smith of Great Neck, Long Island.

Coming from behind on the last of the 72 holes played for the crown, Smith did par 3 on the 175 yard 18th while Cruickshank fell down on his putting and took five, giving him a total of 289 against Smith's 288.

It was a hard defeat for the former Oklahoma City star, who had a grasp on the national open championship at Inwood, New York, in 1923, only to lose to Bobby Jones of Atlanta. For Cruickshank had a two-stroke margin over Smith when they teed-off on the 17th and had been going in fine style all through the nine of the final round. He had 1 three and 6 fours on that nine up to the 17th, when he fell down in making the cup and lost a stroke to the Great Neck pro.

3 Tie For Third Place.

Tied for third place in the final standing with 292 were Jack Burke of Houston, Harry Cooper of Dallas, winner of the Los Angeles open last Sunday, and Abe Espinosa of San Francisco. Perhaps as heart-breaking as Cruickshank's slump was the elimination of the little Houston pro, for he had been beating Smith and Cruickshank on a good many hole and was looked to as the next champion. But his Waterlo was the twelfth hole on the final round. There he twice drove out of bounds and took a seven on a par four hole.

A Great Shot.

In annexing the Texas open title, which he lost last year to Joe Turness of Elmsford, N. Y., by the same margin by which he won today, Smith made what he characterized as the greatest golf shot he ever achieved in his long career. It happened on the 300 yard 16th hole of the first round. Smith had driven about 200 yards down the fairway, slightly to the left, a few feet from a tree. It was 100 yards to the elevated green across a stream and traps. He sent the ball up with a pull-back stroke intended to dro pit dead, and it landed on the green, rolled a few inches and stopped four feet from the cup. He holed out for a birdie 3.

Yet, after the determined fight was ended, Smith, in reply to a newspapermen's query as to what he had to say, mumbled modestly: "Oh, nothing, just a little luck."

Course Is Heavy.

The winner, as well as the 90 other players, had some difficulty with the Brackenridge municipal links due to the heavy rain of yesterday despite today's warm sunshine and none averaged par for the 36 holes. While the soft green made iron and mashie shots easier, the sanded green were deceptive and in some fairways on the in nine the ground was muddy. The enormous gallery, numbering 2,000 persons, that followed the Smith-Cruickshank-Burke threesome, went wild and caused no little annoyance to the golfers, despite the cordon of military police from Fort Sam Houston.

Smith's Card.

Smith, who had two 69's in the first round Friday, had 73 and 77 today. His card follows:

Morning round:
Par out: 435-444-435—36.
Smith out: 435-454-445—38.
Par in. 344-544-443—35.
Smith in: 344-545-344-35-38—73.
Afternoon round:
Smith out: 545-444-725—40.
Smith in: 344-654-443-37-40—77.

Cruickshank, by placing second, drew $800 in prize money, and Burke, Cooper and Espinosa, $400 each.

The leaders and their scores follow:

MacDonald Smith, Great Neck, L. I. 138-73-77—288.

Bobby Cruickshank, Chicago 141-73-75—289.

Jack Burke, Houston 142-72-78—292.

Michigan Still Unbeaten in Race

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Michigan remains the only undefeated team in the Big Ten basketball race at the end of the third week of competition, with victories to its credit over Iowa and Northwestern.

Wisconsin, Iowa, Ohio State and Purdue went into a tie for the runner up berth with two games and one lost apiece. Illinois, the last of the conference teams to go into action, trounced Minnesota 17 to 8, last Monday but was in turn bumbled by Ohio State, 30 to 18, yesterday.

ALLEN JOINS VARSITY.

AUSTIN, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Texas university championship prospects in baseball took a boost last week with removal of a large thorn from the knee of Pottsy Allen, Luling, star catcher of the 1925 freshman team. Allen injured the knee in a football game last fall, but the cause of the enlarged knee cartilage was not known until the thorn was discovered. Allen is a brilliant halfback prospect for next fall.

Alpine Chamois Breaking Jumping Records As Swiss Sock, Sober As A Skyrocket, Comes From London

This Latest Sartorial Embellishment From England Looks Like Double Twist of Rainbow, Writer Avers

By JESSE HENDERSON
Special Dispatch to The Record News
(Copyright 1925 by the Associated Press).

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Because of the American winter invasion, the weather or something or other, London has gone absolutely balmy on the subject of clothes.

What started the story that the English are a staid and sober set of dressers, who go in for nothing wilder than brown or navy blue? Compared with the way they're dressing this season, the gay Parisienne is a Quaker maid and the colorful Italian peasant is a washout.

And the English make these things up out of their own heads, too. Glance for example, at the latest: The Swiss sock. Just a glance, and a quick one will be sufficient until you get acclimated.

Unobtrusive—Quite.

They pretend that the Swiss sock came from Switzerland; but if it did it suffered a sea change on the way across the channel. The Swiss sock, as flaunted on London streets today, merely proves to what lengths a haberdasher will go when his unbridled passions are let loose on a handful of tinted yard. Just a little something to go around the ankle is this sock; just a little something to wear over the thin silk hose; just a little something to reconcile the low shoe to the rigors of a London winter. Of course, nobody ever dreamed that the Swiss sock would attract attention to a slim or otherwise ankle. Oh dear, no. It's just as unobtrusive as a double twist of rainbow or a fistfull of fire works.

As a matter of fact the sock is really a wrist worn just above the instep. In some cases it assumes the proportions of a knitted spat in violet blues and greens, magenta, orange and scarlet. In other cases it is merely a straight band about four inches wide.

The ladies who flash through the streets in these socks know a dozen good reasons for wearing them. They protect one's limbs from the snow which almost never falls in London and which, when it does, is whisked away with phenomenal speed. Lacking heels, they provide warmth without galling the kibe, as Shakespeare put it, which is something the girls have discovered that wool stockings used to do—a recent discovery made since the advent of the Swiss startler.

Indeed, there are as many reasons for wearing the socks as there are colors in any of them, which is a plenty; but the reason easily boil down to two, and the two are spelled "ankles" nothing, not even the clanky gold and jewelled anklets; not the ankle watch, not the embroidered clock; nothing ever served more effectively to call the notice of the world to a trim ankle.

Some Protests.

Of course there have been some murmurs of protest against 'em. What new style would be popular otherwise? But the protests have been entirely feminine, and it would be necessary to measure the ankles of the malcontents before one could be certain that the strictures were entirely unprejudiced. Already there is hot dispute over the birthplace of the radiant sock, just as seven towns fought for the honor of being the birthplace of Homer. You've got to hand it to the Swiss for a lot of things. They invented the ski, hte yodel, the Geneva conference and the insertion of apertures in cheese. But to attribute to the Swiss temperament or imagination this new, scientillating, blazing creation which outplays the Scotch is like attributing to the first flit scratching cave man the frescoes in St. Marks. The Swiss could only have evolved from the intricate inner counsciousness of the conservative London haberdasher. It could only have been introduced to the public thoroughfares by the daring English woman, compared with whom in satorial courage the Parisienen is as a lark to a lion.

The Swiss sock has been taken from London to the Alps on the ankles of English girls bound for the Alpine playgrounds. No wonder the chamois is breaking all records this season in the swiftness, height, and breadth of its jumps. No wonder even the heaviest snowfall quickly melts. You'd jump and melt yourself, under similar provocations.

JACK IS HIT IN BORDER BANDIT

Edwards Puts Three-Act Farce Over With Bang At Majestic

Jack Edwards, playing a very strong character part, walks away with the current offering of the Edna Park players at the Majestic theatre.

"Smilin' Thru," three-act comedy originally billed this week as the Jack Edward' production, gave way Sunday, because of the inability through illness of Miss Edna Park to carry her role, to a rapid-action farce entitled "The Border Bandit."

Jack Edwards is the bandit, a fierce, swash-buckling type of Mexican bandero generalissimo, so to speak, of an outlaw gang, a brown-skin rover is he who apparently has no scruples and yet has a heart, after, all, if two such conflicting conditions can exist under the same breast.

Bang! Bang!

Jack breezes into the accompaniment of gentle pistol volleys, and all but goes out on several occasions to the same tune. There's dash and fire in every move of this swaggering "bad man" from across the Arizona border. The characterization is perfect, and if it isn't then Sunday night's audience didn't know the difference, for it attested enthusiastically that it is.

The scene is laid on an Arizona ranch. The story, or course, involves a couple of lovers and a villain, only before it advances far one discovers there're a quartet of lovers and several villains. One of the "villains" proves a hero, does a bit of quick shooting—out goes another villain, and everything is muy bien, or maybe much bueno again. There's a laugh in every other breath tempered to an extent with a heavy anxiety as to just how our poor misterated hero and heroine are going to come out.

Song Contest Tonight.

Andrew Streng in the characterization of Gilbert Jones, border ranch owner, played the part well with exception of a defect in his enunciation, which may have been due to a heavy cold.

Edouard D'Oize plays the heavy role of a villainous Wall Street financier to perfection. D'Oize succeede in making every person in the audience hate him with intensity.

George (Pop) McManus is good as a crusty and rheumatic, or mayhaps it was gouty old uncle.

"The Border Bandit" will show in night performances today, Tuesday and Saturday with a matinee Saturday afternoon. The first round of an elimination contest to decide the best amateur songster in Wichita Falls will be staged this evening, announces Bentley Wallace, company press agent.

Senate Resumes Peace Work Today

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—While the house is approving tomorrow the $50,000 appropriation for American participation in the Geneva disarmament conference, the senate will resume consideration of the resolution for American adherence to the world court.

Talk of invoking cloture on the court discussion so as to get this issue out of the way before the tax bill is reported has begun but it has not yet developed into a definite movement. This may come tomorrow.

The tax bill will be ready by the end of the week, but the managers want to give senators time to study it before asking for its consideration. They believe that by taking it up early in February a vote can be had before the end of that month.

Caution Slows Down Business

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Little progress toward determining the trend of 1926 trade has been made in the first two weeks of the new year, although it has been apparent that the cautious attitude adopted by bankers and industrial leaders was promoting greater moderation in business.

In many branches of trade, the year has got off to a slow start, with all indications pointing to further quieting over the next few months. This prospect, however, has occasioned little concern since mid-winter developments have rarely been accepted as a criteron for business in the succeeding months.

In addition to restrictive seasonal influences, the business world has not overlooked the tendency to regard the latest increase in the New York Federal Reserve bank rate as a possible warning against over-extension of business activities or speculation in the securities markets.

Presiding Elder Preaches Sunday

"Leprosy is a disease that has a small beginning. It spreads over the body and infects other persons until the entire community is afflicted. It is incurabe. In the days of Jesus, the leper came to Him and was cured. The leper knew that it was only through faith in Jesus that he could be cured. So it is with sin today. Like the leper, the sinner must come to Jesus to be cured and saved."

So said Dr. Frank M. Richardson, presiding elder of the M. E. church, south, for the Wichita Falls district, who preached at the Floral Heights Methodist church last night. Dr. Richardson filled the place of the pastor, Rev. S. A. Barnes, who is ill.

The text was taken from Mark 1:40-41. The subject, "Our Greatest Evil."

Dr. Richardson's sermon was a strong illustration of the evil of wrong doing. He appealed to the sinners to come to Jesus and be saved.

CHURCH BOARD NAMED SUNDAY

Highland Heights Christians Elect Bradley Their President

Dr. Paul Packard in the revival services at the Highland Heights Christian church, preached to two large audiences Sunday. A total of 39 members were taken in at the two services. In discussions at the evening services, "The Church That Christ Told Peter He Would Establish," he said in part:

"The Church of Christ was built by men and women of one body and one spirit. The criticism of the church is without foundation. It has withstood all the opposition of the ages.

Must Have Jesus.

"No world brotherhood can be established apart from Jesus. Kingdoms may fall but the church Jesus gave will abide forever. The church is a new testament institution. There are churches and churches, but Jesus came to establish but one—his church. The creed of the new testament church is so simple—it has no articles of faith except the confession Peter made: 'Thou art the Christ, the son of the living God.'"

The revival services will continue through the week, services each evening at 7:30.

Elects Board.

The church elected the following board at the morning services Sunday:

Elders: John W. Bradley, W. P. Killingsworth, W. M. Baldridge, T. F. Durrett, A. C. Howard and J. A. Patton.

Deacons: Judge B. D. Sartain, S. B. Wilson, E. H. Taubert, W. F. Sims, Paul Barnett, Paul Putty, John Glabb, W. R. Browning, Dr. W. S. Tyson, Harley Syner, G. C. Shankle, V. R. Henderson, P. B. Curd, Joe Crouch, F. L. Adair, John W. Bradley. Mr. Bradley was named chairman of the board; W. F. Sims, secretary; T. F. Durrett, church treasurer.

1,000 Expected At Texas Farm Meet

Approximately 1,000 farmers and business men are expected to attend the sessions. County agents and home demonstration agents will hold their annual meeting on Wednesday and Thursday.

Discuss Washington Meet

The convention of the farm bureau federation follows closely the recent convention of cooperatives held in Washington under the auspices of the national council of Farmers Cooperative Marketing Association, and several leaders in the farm bureau movement in Texas who were present at the national meeting will discuss the various views and decisions reached at the national conference dealing with agricultural progress.

The largest financial aspects of agriculture will be discussed by Charles Makepace of New York, while farmers' organization progress from a national standpoint will be treated by Frank Evans of Utah and Chicago, secretary and marketing counsel of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

College Student's Wife Ends Life

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Fear that approaching motherhood would ruin her husband's career caused Mrs. Helen Whalen, 17, wife of Thomas Whalen, a pre-medical student at the University of Omaha to commit suicide at their home here today.

The couple had been pressed by financial difficulties, according to the wife's mother, Mrs. Thomas Mills, and she feared the expense of caring for a baby would force her husband to abandon his studies.

ADMITS STATEMENT THAT WASHINGTON WAS GAMER

RIDGEWOOD, N. J., Jan. 17.—(AP)—J. Watson James Jr., historian for the General Society of the Sons of the Revolution admitted today Rupert Hughes was right when he said recently that George Washington was "a gamester, a champion cusser and a distiller of good whisky," but Mr. James said he saw no reason for bringing out as sensation "a few natural inclinations of a great man all of which were accepted by that man and by a few of his biographers."

CATHOLIC, PROTESTANT AND JEW ADDRESS AUDIENCE

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Catholic, Jew and Protestant today expounded their views of their faiths before the Chicago Forum and united in pleading for tolerance, cooperation, brotherhood and friendliness.

They were the Reverend J. W. R. MaGuire, professor of sociology at St. Viator's college, Bourbonnais, Illinois; Rabbi Gerson Levi of Chicago, and the Rev. Hubert C. Herring, pastor of a Boston congregational church.

"RAZZING" COSTS CHICAGO MAN TEXAS GOLF TITLE

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Leading professional golfers here tonight attributed the defeat today of Bobby Cruickshank of Chicago in the Texas open golf championship to the "razzing" given him by a nationally-known pro from Chicago.

Cruickshank, coming to the final hole with a one-stroke advantage over MacDonald Smith of Great Neck, L. I., took four putts on the home green and Smith won, 288 to the former's 289.

Perched in a tree, this golfer shouted "look out, he's going to hit it," as Cruickshank swung on the second putt and missed the cup that cost him a tie for the title and first prize of $1,500.

SENATE DEMOS JUMP TRACK IN BALLOT ON NYE

Old Party Leaders Are In a Quandary Over Their Action

BY ROBERT T. SMALL.

Special Correspondent of The Record News.
Copyright, 1926, By The Consolidated Press Association.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Of more interest politically in Washington during the past week than any other question has been the attempt to fathom the Democratic position on the national issues of the hour. Thus far no fixed Democratic policy has been apparent. The Democrats of the house of representatives have been going in one direction; the Democrats of the senate in another.

It is perfectly true that the Democrats of the house do not amount to a great deal under the rules of that body. The regular Republicans—the Coolidge Republicans—have a large majority in the house. They are in command of the steam roller and whenever they want to steam roll the minority Nick Longworth merely blows the whistle and the rest is easy.

Different in Senate.

With the Democrats of the senate it is different. They really are potent. The Republican majority in the senate is purely a paper one. The administration cannot count upon sufficient votes at any time to put through a strictly administration measure. Therefore for any reflection of national Democratic policy one must look to the Democrats of the senate.

Up to the present moment their tactics have been puzzling to say the least. Ostensibly the Democrats are strong for American adherence to the world court, yet they voted almost solidly this week to seat a radical Republican from North Dakota who is a sworn foe of the court and who can help delay if not defeat action on the resolution of adherence. The world court is hailed as a Wilsonian ideal. About the only charge its opponents can bring against it is that it is or is likely to become too closely affiliated with the League of Nations. To seat the opposing senator the Democrats had to override the recommendations of the senate committee which reported adversely upon his eligibility. The senator in question is Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota. Senator Ney as a radical promises to out-LaFollette Young Bob himself.

The vote on Senator Nye showed an alliance between the senate Democrats and the radical Republicans which was alarming to some of the Democratic leaders of the country. Perhaps there was gratification in the evidence that President Coolidge could not control the senate but there was alarm lest the Democrats use their power in the upper branch of congress in a purely destructive fashion.

Shaver Hurries Back.

Clem Shaver, Democratic national chairman, holding over from his management of the Davis campaign in 1924, hurried to the capital and pleaded with the senate Democrats not to delay the passage of the tax reduction measure to the extent of jeopardizing the new returns and first payments of March 15 next. The alliance with the radical Republican elements had shown that the Democrats could, if they would, play havoc with the whole tax reduction scheme.

It is admitted that some of the provisions of the Democratic tax plan as brought forth by Senator Simmons of North Carolina cannot be passed. Possibly they were brought forth for trading purposes. The Democrats have one big point of difference with their Republican colleagues, however, which probably will form the basis of their entire fight. It is the effort to give greater tax relief to persons with incomes ranging between $20,000 and $100,000 a year. Tax payers included in these so-called middle brackets have virtually been overlooked in the Republican measure. The percentage of decrease accorded them in comparison with persons of smaller and larger incomes is ridiculously small indeed. Included in these brackets are the men and women of attainment and of brains, leaders of industry and the professions. The Democrats claim the Republicans are trying to tax the brains of the country to relieve persons of extreme wealth, most of whom inherited their fortunes and have nothing at all to do with the management of their funds.

Promises Prompt Action.

The demand for tax reduction is so insistent the country over that Senator Simmons has promised there will be no delay sufficient to imperil the benefits of the reduction on March 15. This has been extremely reassuring to the country.

The Democratic position on the tariff is no clearer than it was. There has been a disposition to fall in with the farm bloc Republicans who are shouting at the tariff as one cause for the predicament in which the middle west farmers have found themselves. But here again the Democrats of the senate have had to be warned. The farmer Republicans are merely making threats about the tariff. They would not support a Democratic platform of free trade or a tariff for revenue only. They may play with the Democrats for the moment but at election time they will be voting the G. O. P. ticket straight as usual. There is no unanimity of opinion among the Democrats anyway on the tariff. In the south as well as in the north and west consuming communities want a low tariff and producing communities want a high tariff. Human nature is much the same the country over and north as well as south there is a natural desire of self preservation and self-protection.

Meanwhile the Democrats are not doing a great deal of building for their campaign of the coming fal.

Through arrangements with the American Bookseller's Association it is now possible to telegraph a book to a friend at a distance. The buyer gives his order to a local bookshop and the book is delivered from the shop nearest the person who is to receive it.

England and Wales enjoy the distinction of having closed nearly a third of their prisons since 1914.

The New General Motors Six will be announced Sunday, January 24. Watch for it.

Out Where the Sun Comes Up Behind the Silo!

What are the boundaries of this city's market?

Not the crowded square mile around the merchant's store. Not the limits of the city itself.

Sift the throngs that flock through stores and up and down the streets on any busy market day. Thousands upon thousands of local families, of course, but as many OR MORE suburbanites and families that live out where the sun comes up behind the silo.

The annual contribution of suburban and rural families to the treasuries of city stores is a shrewd compliment to modern transportation, and the enlivening, broad and magnetic power of morning newspapers.

For morning newspapers, abetted by modern transportation, have extended the boundaries of market zones from city blocks to long country miles.

USE MORNING NEWSPAPERS

What has become of the old-fashioned farmer whose attire proclaimed him "from the country?"

He passes you every day—but now he is serene in the knowledge that he is correctly dressed.

Advertising is responsible. It shows him the fashions and helps him select proper clothing.

Economic Analysis of a Representative Market

Measure the potential buying power of an outside area against city families.

Here are the figures on a typical American trade zone, 50 miles in radius:

Population	Total Annual Manufactured and Agricultural Wealth	Passenger Automobile Registration	Incomes Reported Over $1,000
314,194	$398,666,000	51,765	29,237
1,246,465	757,779,000	178,324	44,103

Morning newspapers move ENTIRE markets. Your potential market OUTSIDE of the city is greater than it is within the city. Discuss with your advertising executive—your coverage of this ENTIRE market.

O. C. Smith Jury, Unable To Agree, Is Discharged Sunday Noon

6 TO 6 IS ITS STAND, REPORT

Defendant Back to Jail To Await Setting of Case Again

The jury in the case of O. C. Smith, trial in the 89th district court Friday and Saturday on a charge of criminal assault, was discharged shortly before noon Sunday morning without rendering a verdict when it reported that it was hopelessly hung with no prospect of reaching a decision. The jury was unofficially reported to have stood six and six.

Smith was remanded to jail without bond. Setting for a new trial in the case for sometime in the near future will be made at 9 o'clock this morning, Judge P. A. Martin said Sunday night.

Smith's indictment and trial grew out of an incident last August in which the prosecutrix, Mrs. Emma McGaughy, alleged that Smith enticed her from her home on Tenth street to a down-town rooming house where an alleged assault is said to have taken place.

Hotel Men Hold Meeting at Vernon

Round-table discussion of problems common to north Texas and southwestern Oklahoma hotel proprietors and an address by E. A. Newman of Seymour, manager of the Hotel Seymour, featured the quarterly meeting of the Red River Valley Hotel Keepers association at Vernon Saturday evening, according to Joseph Huckins, III, who returned to Wichita Falls early Sunday from that city. It was voted, Mr. Huckins said Sunday, to hold the next quarterly meeting of the association at the Seymour Hotel in Seymour on April 10.

Those present at the Cernon meeting included Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Bailey and Mies Ada Pierce of Vernon, E. A. Newman of Seymour, Roes Eaton, C. Clara Girl Weds Wichita Falls Man

Robert C. Campbell, of this city, and Miss Mabel Heins, of Clara, were married at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the parsonage of the First Church of Christ, 1612 Kemp Boulevard, with the pastor, Rev. L. S. White, performing the ceremony. They were accompanied by a number of close friends.

Immediately following the ceremony the wedding party went to Clara, where a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell will be at home in the Scotland Addition near the Woody Oil and Grease Company, where Mr. Campbell is employed.

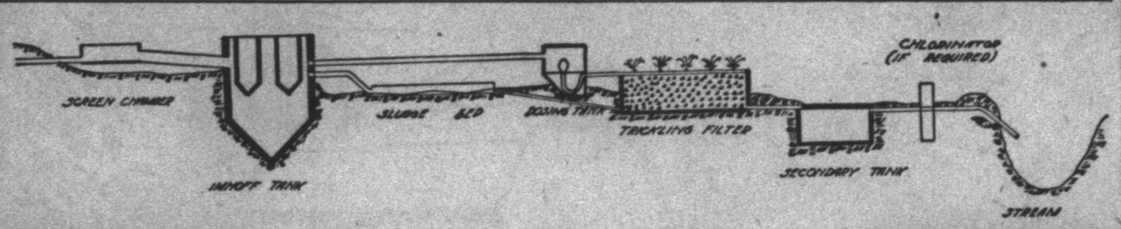

Inch of Rain Falls Over North Texas

An estimated inch of rainfall fell over north Texas Saturday night and Sunday morning, reports received in Southern Oklahoma reported only a sprinkle, while an inch or more of Fort Worth and Denver between Vernon and Fort Worth, on the Wichita Falls and Southern between Wichita Falls and Breckenridge, and on the Wichita Falls and Northwestern north as far as Burkburnett and the Red river.

The rain will be of great benefit to crops in this section, it is believed. Temperatures remained mild enough all day Sunday despite occasional symptoms of a north wind, and cloudy skies gave way to clear

'DON'T LIE TO YOURSELF;' KAY

Honesty to Self One Thing To Be Demanded, He Declares

"The largest fool in all nature is the fellow that tells himself a lie," said Judge John C. Kay Sunday morning in his sermon to his men's Bible class at the Strand theatre. And continuing, he declared that honesty to one's self is a thing no one can afford to demand. There were 232 men present to hear the address, which was as follows:

The lesson this morning is about two kinds of a man. Now, some of you university fellows started to say that I ought to say two kinds of men, but you are wrong. I mean two kinds of a man in the same body, the spiritual man and the earthly man.

Once in a while you will strike a fellow that says honesty is enough for religion. I am a good deal of a Primitive Baptist myself. I don't know whether honesty is enough for religion or not, but I don't believe there is much religion without it. I think honesty is little enough for religion; how far it goes I don't know, but it is a good, long, start. How honest are you? I am not talking about stealing. I am assuming that all the fellows that will steal are in jail already on account of the efficiency of our courts, officials, grand juries and petit juries. Are you honest with yourself? The biggest fool in all nature is the fellow that tells himself a lie. Have you been doing anything of that kind? Have you been saying: "I am going to do a little better." Of course, some of us old hard rocks have got so we don't make any New Year's resolutions. We have just got ashamed to make them. Have you said to yourself that you were going to be more commercially honest? Have you promised yourself that you were going to read good books, and more of them? That you were going to pay more attention to the finer things of life, and then, did you live up to it?

Went to See the Saviour.

Now, in this lesson, there was a fellow —not an ordinary man, but an extraordinary man—went to see the Saviour at night. His name was Nicodemus. He went over there at night; in the dark. The Saviour treated him nicely, courteously, kindly. You will find that the Saviour went about in day time, in the bright sunshine, to perform His miracles, and to do His mighty works, and to teach His great teachings; right out in the open. But, here was a big man that went to see Him at night, because he didn't want to be seen by the crowd going there in the day time. God help you and myself if we have got the kind of religion that we would rather people wouldn't know about it.

You know, there are a lot of "isms" in the world, lots of queer churches; lots of foolishness, like one of these mediums that has to work in the dark and talk to little "Bright Eyes," and make the table rap. I am not stopping to condemn that, or to throw any rocks at it. It might be all right for some people, but whatever virtue there is in it, it is not strong enough medicine for a man that wears a big hat. I would rather they would turn on the lights when they are going to show me around in a church. I would rather you would turn on the bright lights when talking to me about the things of a soul, and the mysteries of a world other than this.

So, this man went down there in the night time, and he was told some mighty truths. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the spirit is spirit," and that the wind blows where it listeth and you hear the sound of it, but you don't know where it comes from, nor where it is going." Then, He said: "You must be born again." Now, what does that mean to you? What does it mean to me? It can't mean anything unless it means that a man's heart and a man's conscience and soul is swept, and cleansed, and burnished for a new tenant, the Master. It don't just mean, I think, that I am going to quit "cussing," and quit lying, and quit stealing. It just don't mean that I am going to quit hating somebody, but it means a new heart, a new conscience, a new set of principles, and a regenerated consecrated disposition. I think that is what He meant. It is a deep subject. I don't know that I can elucidate it here like a preacher might, but it is a strong statement.

How to Tell.

How are you going to tell when a man's heart has been cleansed that way? I am not talking about myself. You are not talking about yourself. But, I am talking about a man out here on the street, a given man other than myself. How am I going to know that he has been regenerated, that his heart has been swept and burnished? How am I going to know that? I can't know it by what he says about it. Some times, I could; often, I might, but, here and there, there would be a liar slip in and say: "Yes, on a certain occasion I was regenerated." How am I going to know it, then? By the new life that he leads seven days in the week, and in the day time, and at night time, and at home, and away from home. I think that is the only way we can know about another man's heart, and his soul, and his conscience. The world doesn't need christianity, humanity doesn't need christianity, unless it is going to lift us up, and up, and up. We don't need it just to have a set of principles; we don't need it just to have a bunch of opinions, but we need it in order that we may walk along in this life with a face brighter, and a face kinder, and that other men may be safer, because we are leading correct lives.

How many times have we been to church? Let's just take a little sober reckoning here this morning. You ought to check up your accounts once in a while and see where you stand, because they have got expert accountants in heaven, keeping books, and we might as well know, somewhat, the condition of the books while we live here. Are you willing to do that? The hardest thing in this world for you to do, and for me to do, is to stack yourself on a little platform and walk clear around yourself, and see what you are doing, and how you look. So, I say, as we check up these accounts and examine them, how many times has religion been preached to you? How many times did you sit in the church while the preacher was preaching, and be thinking about something else altogether? Now, I hope there is nobody here that is hard enough to sit there in the church while religion was being preached, and think about something else altogether. I reckon there is nobody else but I that ever did that, but if I have done that once, I have done it three hundred times, and that is a shame. We are not talking about this Sunday school at all, this morning, we are talking about a fellow that goes to church and misses everything except the front door. We ought to go to church reverently, soberly, and make a diligent effort to find out what the church can do for us, or we ought not to go at all.

Must Be Honest.

The man that claims the most in religion, and to be the best man, and to be the closest to God, owes it to himself, and his family, and the church, and the community, and the nation, to show that his religion is honest. Is your religion a thing that just belongs to you, or are you in partnership with God?

Now, we would do better along these lines. We could go down to church—not as a solemn and somewhat painful duty, as I have done that on occasion—but, we could go there and exercise it as a sacred, consecrated, valuable, glorious right, because that way lies life.

Sewage Disposal Plant Plans Come Up Before City Council Monday Eve

Monday evening the city council will be submitted plans for the city's new $300,000 sewage disposal plant, recently completed by Montgomery and Ward, Wichita Falls consulting engineers, and John H. Gregory, dean of engineering of the John Hopkins University at Baltimore, M. D. The plans, which have already been checked and approved by the engineering department of the state board of health.

The $300,000 expenditure for the plant was recently authorized by the city in a bond issue, making available nearly half a million dollars funds for that and other purposes. Some six or eight months will be required for the construction of the plant, in the opinion of the engineers, who state that, pending adverse development it should be ready for use some time before the end of the current year.

Sewage Flow Measured.

In evolving plans for the new plant measurements of Wichita Falls sewage were conducted over a period covering several days to arrive at an accurate estimate of just how much raw sewage must be handled, the figures showing an average of about 1,800,000 gallons per day, or sixty gallons per person for the contributing population to the sewers in Wichita Falls. An allowance for an increase of fifty per cent in the contributing population of the city and the amount of ra wsewage is being made in the prospective plant with additional room for expansion of the plant facilities for such time in the future when this may become necessary. The new plant, according to the plans, is designed to handle an average of 3,000,000 gallons of raw sewage per day to provide for the needs of a fifty per cent increase in the contributing population of the city over the number of those contributing at present.

The raw sewage after treatment in the plant is discharged in the Wichita river, with the sewage content in the water flowing into the river so broken up as to be unrecognizable and unobjectionable. Similar plants in other cities have obtained what is characterized as 99 per cent stability, and the report of the designing engineers to the state board of health indicates that similar results may be expected in Wichita Falls. Stability, it is explained, is the sanitary engineers' term designating the relative time required for the beginning of putrification. Raw or unstable sewage putrifies in three or four hours, while the so-called 99 per cent stable sewage requires twenty days or more to become stagnant and putrify.

Visit Various Types.

In choosing the design of the prospective plant for Wichita Falls the engineers visited various cities of the north and east, choosing finally the type of plant designated as Imhoff Tank sprinkling filter-final - settling tank type. Similar plants are in use with marked success at Fitchburg, Mass., at Worcestor in the same state, at Cleveland, at Baltimore, and at Rochester, New York.

The plant as designed includes and makes provision for a river syphon, a pumping station, a screen chamber, a grit chamber a number of Imhoff settling tanks, sludge drying beds, dosing tanks, sprinkling filters, final settling tanks, disinfection apparatus and an outlet. The plant at Wichita Falls is to dispense with two units included in the original design and which are generally installed, that is, the grit chamber, and the disinfection apparatus. The first is dropped since there is little grit or sand content to raw sewage from Wichita Falls, and the second since so-called sterilization of sewage is not required at present. Both can be installed if at any time in the future they are thought necessary.

Raw sewage in Wichita Falls is collected from both sides of the big Wichita River. While a definite location for the plant has not been agreed upon as yet, it is understood that it will be situated somewhere on the south bank of the river, in which event transportation of sewage from the north side of the river will be accomplished by means of a river syphon.

A complete pumping station is to be the first unit of the plant. The structure will be a small three-story concrete and brick affair of which a large portion will be placed underground. The bottom floor will have three pumps of one, two, and three million gallon per day capacities located on it, with room for the installation of another if this ever becomes necessary. The second floor will contain the meters and similar apparatus while the top or ground floor will be a work shop and store room. The raw sewage will enter the pump station, be transmitted through the meters, and through a cast iron porch main into what is known as the screen chamber.

The screen chamber is a large sieve like affair with one-inch openings designed to exclude from the remainder of the plant large solids and foreign matter. The chamber is so arranged as to facilitate the periodical clearing of the screens, the screenings to be taken away and burned. From the screen chamber sewage is run through the plant with no other force than gravity.

Grit Chamber Next.

The grit chamber is the next unit in the usual plant, it being such as to allow settling of sand and grit content of the sewage. There is little sand and grit in Wichita Falls sewage, however, analysis shows, and this portion of the plant is not to be built until such time as it may be actually needed.

Four large Imhoff type two-story settling tanks comprise the next unit of the plant, and in many respects they are the most elaborate. The tanks are each 58 feet by 38 feet by 33 feet deep, and of 750,000 gallons flow per day capacity, so large that the sewage supply in the sedimentation chamber will be changed only once every two hours. Solid matter in the sewage will largely settle as the sewage is run through these tanks. It is estimated that a minimum of 50 per cent of the solid matter will be thus extracted and that an average of between 65 and 75 per cent will usually be removed.

Solids thus extracted settle to the bottom of the tank where in time bacteriological action by anaerobic bacteria, liquefy the solids. The remaining solids after thus underging "digestion," known as sludge, are drawn off into the next unit of the plant, known as the sludge drying beds. These in the Wichita Falls plants will be ten in number, each of 20 by 80 feet dimensions. The sludge placed on them dries and may in time be burned, used to fill in low places, used as fathom or otherwise disposed of.

The sewage itself leaving the settling tanks goes to what is known as the dosing tanks, where by the action of automatic siphons the sewage is sprayed intermittently over the trickling filter. This portion of the plant will occupy an area of about one and a half acres, and will have a depth of about eight feet of coarse filter material, in which the fluid will be subject to action by aerobic bacteria, and from which it will emerge into the final settling tank, where it remains approximately an hour before going back to the pump station into the river for final disposal, technically a stable and prove product. It is between the final settling tank and the disposal outlet that a chlorinator or disinfection plant is sometimes installed, but as stated above this is to be dispensed with in this instance.

The complete plant will care for Wichita Fall' domestic sewage. There are no manufacturing sources for sewage here, it is pointed out, with the exception of the oil refineries and other provision for trade wastes from that source is to be provided, inasmuch as to combine it domestic sewage would, it is stated, render ineffective the usual bacteriological action in the settling tanks.

TO OPEN BRIDGE BIDS.

Bids for the free bridge across the Red river at Burkburnett will be opened in the county commissioner's court and before the state highway commission of Oklahoma at Oklahoma City simulatneously this morning. It will be the second time the commissioners have opened bids on the bridge, the first having been invalidated by a court ruling which decreed that inasmuch as the Oklahoma highway commission had not participated in the first operation it was illegal. The contract was awarded the first time to Mackey interests of Denver, Colo., for a figure approximating $233,000.

GRADUATES HEAR BACCALUREATE

Rev. G. B. Hall In Recommendation for Christ's Acceptance

Recommending Jesus Christ as a guide through their lives, was the theme of the Baccalaureate sermon preached to the fourth mid-winter graduating class of the Wichita Falls high school and to the first midterm graduate of the Wichita Falls Junior college by the Rev. Gaines B. Hall, minister of the First Southern Presbyterian church Sunday morning at the exercises held at the college. He spoke on the subject, "Christ, the Way of Life."

"Down the ages students have been testing and verifying by faith and experience what his eight disciples have written about him. Never man spake like this man, he died, rose again from the dead by his own power, ascended to the right hand of God, and is coming again to judge the quick and the dead. What think ye of Him. What does your life say you think this morning?"

Opens With Processional.

The service opened with the processional played by the high school orchestra directed by Miss Winnifred Alvis. The invocation was said by Judge W. B. Chauncey, president of the board of education. S. H. Rider, dean of the college, read the scripture lesson taken from the sixteenth chapter of Matthew, from the twentieth verses. Music was furnished by the high school girls' glee club and the junior college and high school choruses. The benediction was said by Rev. Hall.

The sermon in part follows:

"Our text contains a question, an answer, and a statement of belief in the correctness of that answer. "Whom say ye that I am?" Jesus said unto them I am the way, the truth and the life. No man cometh unto the Father but by me. His disples testify saying: "We believe and are sure that Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." When a man starts on a trip over one now and undiscovered country he needs a guide or director. I was reading recently about an exploring party in the Claybills of Utah that part of the state about which little is known, how they used the Indians to pilot them. We this morning, and especially these graduates are making a journey over what to most of us is an untried way.

"We have never been this way heretofore."

New Territory Opens.

New territory is opening up day at a time. The results of this pilgrimage will depend largely upon the guide we employ, the start we get. Up yonder in the Appalachain system of mountains there is a little house sitting upon the top of a peak. It is said that water falling on one side of that house trickles down the slope into the ravens and on into the Ohio and out through the Mississippi emptying into the Gulf of Mexico. On the other side of the house the water falls, trickles down the slope and out through the rivers, finds its way into the Atlantic ocean. If a drop of water splits on the comb of that house one half of it reaches the cold waters of the Atlantic the other the warm waters of the Gulf of Mexico.

There are mountains and peaks in your lives that determine largely the future trend of you and your destiny hereafter. At this peak in your life I desire to recommend as your guide Jesus of Nazareth.

About 1900 years ago there was a man in Judea about whom some question was raised. He was this Jesus who went about doing good? This was the most momentous question of that time. It is the one that means most to the world today. Upon the answer of that question will depend your real joy and usefulness here and your eternal reward hereafter.

Herod Troubled.

When Jesus was born, Herod was troubled and all Jerusaleum with him. He called together the ecclesiastics and priests, inquired concerning the place, time, and meaning of the birth and set out to destory him, issuing that decree which made them slaughter the "innocents" of Israel. John the Baptist, that rugged forerunner of him dispriscn and discouraged, sent messengers to Jesus asking: "Art thou he that should come or do we look for another?" Jesus said: "Go tell John again those thing which ye both see and hear, how the deaf hear, the blind see, the dead are raised to life and the poor have the gospel preached unto them." The fruits of such a life dispelled John's doubts and he was satisfied. On one occasion Jesus knowing their questionings asked whom say ye that I am. Let me ask you this same question this morning whom do you say He is?

Church Needs Them.

As young men and young women, trained in body, mind and heart, society needs you to help lift it above the mire. As young lives of vision and sterling character your state needs you, men and women who love honor rather than fame, who can not be bought, nor swerved from the right. As young men and women of warm personal faith in Christ, the church needs every one of you, so that the work of God's kingdom shall not be left to the aged men and overworked women of the land.

If in your youth you give God right of way in your lives, no matter what your calling or profession, He will bless you in your joys and increase them a thousand fold. He will sanctify all your sorrow, be your companion all along the way, and as you descend the westward slope toward life's sunset He will take you by the hand and lead you even across the river of death into that "City whose maker and builder is God." You have received from your parents and these faithful teachers a part of their very lives. Gratitude will lead you to make some expression of appreciation to them as you climb upward in the development of your lives, with Christ dwelling richly in your hearts, guiding your lives, you, like the earthern jar filled with attar of roses, will be giving the world the sweet aroma of a beautiful and worthwhile life. And Jesus said: "I am the way the truth and the life."

HEAVY DOCKETS ARE TO BE TRIED

Many Cases Scheduled For Attention Before Judge Wilson This Week

Trials of an unusually heavy docket of criminal cases will start in the 30th district court tais coming week, beginning this morning at 9 o'clock before Judge H. R. Wilson. Nine cases, to be started with that of D. L. Tipton, charged with failing to stop and render aid following an automobile accident, are scheduled for today. Tipton is also under another indictment charging driving an automobile while intoxicated, but a trial date on this has not been set as yet.

In addition to the Tipton case will come that of R. J. Russell, charged with highway robbery. Other cases set for today include that of A. C. Lewis, charged with highway robbery, Manuel Gonzales and Berkley Thomas, all charged with theft, H. E. Garrett and Henry Knight, charged with violation of the liquor laws.

Due to the unusually heavy docket a transfer of several of the cases to the 89th district court to be tried before Judge P. A. Martin is considered likely.

S. W. Wichita Test Down 1,750

White Brothers and Jackson were down to 1,750 feet Sunday and drilling on their No. 2, Olds, in southwest Wichita county, about three-quarters of a mile north of the old No. 1, which was located in section 25 of the H& TCRRCO survey. The No. 2 had 21 feet of dry sand at a depth of 1,727-48 feet.

1. Name some of the more important sources of the vitamines.

2. How often should these foods appear on the table?

3. How do they compare in expense with other foods?

Answer:

1. Vitamines are found in whole milk, cream, butter, cheese, egg yolks, yeast, practically all fresh vegetables, especially lettuce, raw carrots, cabbage, spinach, greens, tomatoes, raw fresh fruits, green salad plants, fish oils, cereals (if the germ included).

2. Some of these foods should appear in the diet each day. Vitamines are necessary for proper growth and development and every one needs them —especially young children.
