Senate passes bill

■ The emergency bill approved by the Senate would allow the government to operate normally until Oct. 19

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate passed an emergency bill Monday night that would end the government shutdown, and final approval by the House and President Bush appeared assured.

The Senate passed the measure on a voice vote after day-long negotiations in Capitol back rooms. The House planned to vote on the measure later in the evening, and send it to Bush for his signature.

Congressional sources, who spoke on condition that their names not be revealed, said Bush had signaled to Republicans that he would sign it.

The House had approved a slightly different version of the bill early Monday, providing small amounts more for more for domestic programs than the Senate, and small amounts less for defense programs.

The measure would allow the government to operate normally through Oct. 19. Congressional leaders hope all budget work will be completed by then.

After the vote, the Senate immediately started moving moved toward final approval of a $500-billion deficit-reduction plan envisioning smaller cuts in Medicare, but possibly higher tax increases, than an earlier version the House rejected last week. This outline plan, which leaves specific spending cuts and tax increases to congressional committees to fill in before Oct. 19, had been agreed to by a House-Senate conference committee.

The Statue of Liberty, museums and national parks have been closed since Saturday because the budget crisis had prevented Congress from approving any spending legislation for the new fiscal year. But the full brunt of the federal shutdown was masked because of the long Columbus Day weekend.

Earlier in the day, lawmakers warned of chaos if the White House and Congress failed to resolve their months-long impasse over the federal deficit.

"We're not just dealing with programs," warned Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, urging his colleagues to pass the measure quickly. "We're dealing with individual human beings and families, and their hopes and fears and dreams."

"This has just been playing marshmallow stuff" so far, said Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., the Senate's assistant Republican leader, referring to the limited impact on the government during the Columbus Day holiday weekend.

"Any thoughtful, reasonable person now knows what happens to this government tomorrow."

Debate on the budget began in the early evening. Leaders of both parties had spent the day trying to line up support for the budget and for a separate measure bringing the shut-down government back to life Tuesday morning.

"This is not a shining moment for anyone," Senate Budget Committee Chairman James Sasser, D-Tenn., said of the budget mess as debate began. "And frankly, our countrymen are rightly tired of it."

The House passed the budget outline 250-164 in a post-midnight session early Monday. The measure contains far fewer specific spending cuts and tax increases than the version that went down to defeat last week, putting off those deci-

City of Midland fire inspectors will no longer investigate county fires

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

The "thunk" of the axe falling on the city budget reverberated across the way to the courthouse recently.

The city's elimination of two fire inspectors left the county in the lurch Oct. 1 when it was told the fire department was stretched too thin to investigate suspicious fires in the county any more.

"It's a hardship on us," said Sheriff Gary Painter, whose office must now bear the brunt of the arson investigations. "We depended heavily on the fire marshal's office."

Fire Marshal Jerry Petree said his office formerly looked into suspicious fires' origins as a courtesy to the county, but with cuts in personnel that whittled his inspectors from four down to two, he no longer has the staff to expend.

"There came a time where we had to cut services

Change of venue granted in Permian, UIL case

By David Morris
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Attorneys for both sides in the lawsuit filed by Permian High School coaches against the University Interscholastic League (UIL) said Monday they have agreed to transfer the case to Travis County.

The Ector County District Clerk's office reported that a UIL representative Monday filed an agreed motion to transfer venue. The motion was reportedly signed by UIL attorney Lucius D. Bunton IV and plaintiffs' attorney T. Gerald Treece of Houston.

The motion awaits the signature of 358th District Court Judge Bill McCoy, who could not be reached for comment Monday.

Bunton, reached at his Austin office, said a trial date would not be set until McCoy signs the motion and the case is officially transferred.

Treece said the transfer is a victory for the plaintiffs because the request to move the suit was based on the

NEW YORK — If misery loves company, homeowners, junk-bond investors and uninsured S&L depositors can take heart. The richest people in America also are feeling a lot poorer this year.

From debt-dogged Donald J. Trump to financial felon Michael R. Milken and others, fortunes of the wealthiest declined dramatically this year, Forbes magazine says.

Fifty-three members of the Forbes 400 list suffered declines in net worth ranging from $100 million to $880 million, the magazine said

SHENZHEN, China (AP) — McDonald's hamburgers, fries and golden arches came to China on Monday when the fast-food chain opened its first restaurant.

Hundreds of Chinese waited for hours outside the restaurant in Shenzhen, an economic boom town near Hong Kong, for their first taste of a McDonald's hamburger, fries or shake.

At the restaurant, a Big Mac costs $1.14, a bag of fries 48 cents and a shake 74 cents.

Pauley's career

NEW YORK (AP) — Doonesbury creator Garry Trudeau says he urged wife Jane Pauley to "walk away from NBC altogether" when she was edged off the "Today" show in favor of Deborah Norville.

Trudeau wanted to satirize the morning program in his irreverent comic strip because "it had a formal, Kabuki-like quality ... that would have been a natural for me," he said in a rare interview in the Oct. 15 issue of Newsweek magazine.

But Pauley's broadcast career appears, in retrospect, to have benefited from her move. And Trudeau says writing about his own family in his comic strip would be "a violation (as well as) infinitely banal."

Front cools off Basin

Staff Report

A cold front, driven by a high pressure system centered over southeast Wyoming, brought drizzle and cooler temperatures to Midland Monday evening, and forecasters said the cold snap is expected to last until Wednesday.

National Weather Service forecasters at Midland International Airport are calling for cloudy skies today, with a high between 55 and 60 and a 30 percent chance of light rain and drizzle. Winds will be from the north at 10 to 20 mph.

Tonight will see decreasing cloudiness with a low between 40 and 45 degrees.

The forecast for Wednesday calls for mostly sunny skies and a high in the mid-60s.

The high Monday was 85, compared with the record for the date of 100 set in 1979. Monday's low was 62. The record low for today's date is 43, set in 1988.

STATE

Damp, dreary weather dominated the West Texas Panhandle Monday afternoon in what was expected to be a prelude to more rain mixed with snow by Tuesday.

Showers and thunderstorms developed from the Permian Basin through the Concho River Valley to the lower Pecos River Valley. But skies in far West Texas were clear and sunny.

A flash flood watch was in effect overnight for much of the state. And a stationary front extended from near Clarksville to just south of the Dallas-Fort Worth area. The front was pushing south, bringing cooler temperatures.

Fog and drizzle in the Panhandle and South Plains kept temperatures in the 40s and 50s on Monday. But the mercury climbed into the 80s in the Permian Basin. The extremes Monday were 42 degrees at Dalhart and 98 degrees at Beeville.

The front was expected to drop temperatures into the 60s in the Hill Country to near 70 in North and South Texas. The highs Tuesday will range from the 60s to low 90s in deep South Texas.

NATION

A weather system spread rain across the south-central part of the nation Monday after dumping snow on the western Plains and Rockies, and temperatures fell to record freezing lows in the north.

Light rain and drizzle prevailed from the central Plains to the upper Great Lakes.

Light snow fell across parts of the central high Plains region after a weekend in which up to 13 inches fell at Colorado's Vail ski area.

The Associated Press also contributed to this report.

GULF: 2 airmen die, 8 Marines missing

(From 1A)

Long.

Ms. Long identified the victims as Maj. Barry K. Henderson, 40, a senior pilot from Tuscumbia, Ala., and Maj. Stephen G. Schramm, 43, a master navigator from Birmingham, Ala.

Both were assigned to the 106th Tactical Reconnaissance Squadron of the 117th Tactical Reconnaissance Wing and had volunteered for duty in Saudi Arabia, said Ms. Long. Their unit had not been activated.

A military spokesman, Navy Cmdr. J.D. Van Sickle, said the crash was under investigation and that he could provide no other details.

The two Marine helicopters disappeared about dawn during a training flight over the north Arabian Sea, east of the Persian Gulf, said Van Sickle.

Naval officers ruled out hostile action and said there was no indication that the helicopters might have collided.

Pentagon officials in Washington said the Marines were from Camp Pendleton, Calif.

The helicopters were operating from the carrier USS Okinawa, one of more than 12 ships deployed in the region after Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2.

Before Monday, five American service members had been killed in the region since the deployment began. In addition, 13 crew members died Aug. 29 when a giant transport aircraft loaded with supplies for U.S. forces in the gulf crashed and burned shortly after takeoff in West Germany,

The United States leads a multinational force of ships in the region and troops in Saudi Arabia, and the United Nations has imposed a land, sea and air embargo to isolate Iraq and try to force it to withdraw from Kuwait.

The warning shots fired at the Iraqi freighter Al-Wasitti marked the first time a British warship has shot to enforce the embargo.

The British Defense Ministry said the Iraqi freighter had been shadowed by the HMS Battleaxe, the USS Reasoner and the HMAS Adelaide during the night, then called to stop for inspection.

But the Al-Wasitti ignored repeated appeals and at daybreak, the three vessels fired warning shots across the bow of the freighter, the ministry said in London.

It said Royal Marines boarded the 5,885-ton vessel, with a Coast Guard team from the Reasoner following them. It was empty and was allowed to continue on its way, presumably to Iraq, British defense officials said.

The second Iraqi ship, the Tadmur, was ordered to an undisclosed port after boarding teams found rice, flour "and other prohibited cargo in substantial quantities," said a statement from the U.S. military command in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia.

The tanker was first boarded by Royal Marines from the frigate HMS Brazen, followed by teams from the USS Goldsborough and the Australian frigate HMAS Darwin.

Authorities did not disclose where the the Tadmur was sent, but the closest Omani ports would be Muscat and Ras-al-Hadd. No shots were fired in that incident.

The Tadmur, which officials said was bound for Basra, Iraq, was stopped in the Red Sea on Sept. 27 after a U.S. warship fired across its bow. After a boarding party found it empty, it was allowed to proceed.

U.S. warships had been playing a dominant role in enforcing the U.N.-ordered naval blockade to pressure Iraqi President Saddam Hussein into ending the 2-month-old occupation of Kuwait. But in recent weeks, British, Canadian, Australian and Spanish warships have joined in the interceptions.

"In our maritime intercept operations, it is truly a multinational effort in support of U.N. Resolutions 661 and 665," said Vice Adm. Henry H. Mauz, commander of U.S. naval forces in the region.

He said that as of Monday, 2,061 ships had been intercepted since the embargo began Aug. 12.

Of those ships, 207 were searched — 37 the past four days, he said. In only a handful of cases have warning shots been fired, the first by U.S. warships inside the Persian Gulf on Aug. 18.

In other developments:

■ A Kuwaiti official said his nation's government-in-exile will ask the United Nations to allow an airlift of medicine into Kuwait City to help people who are critically ill. "We are very concerned about people who are dying because of a lack of medical supplies," Suleman Mutawaa, the government's planning minister, said in London.

■ Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu completed a five-nation Middle East tour with a visit to Oman and repeated his country's position that Iraqi must pull out of Kuwait.

■ Extra production by OPEC members in September made up for three-quarters of the 4 million-barrel-a-day loss caused by the Iraq-Kuwait crisis, the Middle East Economic Survey reported.

BUDGET: Senate OKs emergency bill

(From 1A)

sions for later in the month.

The vagueness of the new package left some senators unhappy.

"I'm not going to sign onto this fill-in-the-blanks package," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who supported and helped write the first package.

Sasser said of the new proposal, "The best argument is it reduces the deficit by historic proportions over the next five years and gives Congress flexibility on issues and problems that have troubled members and constituents over the last few days."

Many lawmakers of both parties believe that in the end the new plan will also contain a cut in the capital gains tax rate and higher income taxes for the wealthy. Bush has wanted to slash the capital gains tax — levied on sales of property — for years, while Democrats have demanded the higher rates on the wealthy as a tradeoff.

The new proposal would eliminate many of the specifics from savings proposals that had driven a majority of both Democrats and Republicans to reject an initial package Friday in the House.

Gone was one-third of the earlier plan's $60 billion in Medicare reductions — including higher costs and lower benefits for beneficiaries. Specifics on higher taxes for gasoline, home-heating oil, alcohol, tobacco and other items were also deleted.

Instead, the new version would pare Medicare savings to $40 billion. New taxes over the five years could total $10 billion more than the $135 billion in the old package, but all decisions about specific spending cuts and tax boosts were to be left to Congress' committees.

This approach worked in the House, which approved the new plan despite opposition from most minority Republicans.

Like the rejected package, the new plan claims to save $40 billion in the fiscal year that started Oct. 1, and $500 billion over the next five years.

House Democratic leaders told their rank-and-file that under the new plan, the Medicare deductible paid by recipients for doctors' costs would rise gradually from $75 to $100, instead of the $150 in the old package.

The House also approved, 305-105, a separate measure early Monday providing enough money for the government to function normally through Oct. 19.

FORBES: Richest Americans not as rich anymore

(From 1A)

in its Oct. 22 edition, released Monday.

Three Midlanders made the Forbes list: oil magnates Cyril Wagner Jr., 56, and Jack E. Brown, 65, came in at No. 239 and No. 240 on the list with fortunes of about $400 million each, while Clarence Scharbauer Jr., 65, whose $275 million inherited fortune rests on both oil and land holdings, barely made the list, at No. 384.

For the first time since Forbes began publishing the list in 1982, the minimum net worth required to join the elite ranking dropped, from $275 million in 1989 to $260 million this year.

Some, such as Trump, were evicted, another symbolic boot to the 1980s era of living on borrowed money. Forbes said Trump's fortune, estimated at $1.7 billion in 1989, was possibly within "hailing distance of zero" because of looming loans and a slow economy.

Trump, who previously has denounced Forbes for downgrading his ranking on the list, did not immediately return a telephone call seeking comment.

"This year the entire Forbes 400 list seemed to stop going up and, on balance, start going down," the magazine said.

"This year all kinds of things went down: real estate, media, banks, public stocks, private companies, you name it," Forbes said.

It said the declines "reflected a general scaling down of capital values, brought about in good part by a worldwide shrinkage of credit and sinking stock markets."

That's not to say the wealthiest are hurting unbearably.

FIRES: Sheriff's office to investigate in county and since we're paid by the city, the county was the first place to cut back," he said.

(From 1A)

"This is an inconvenience and it won't be as effective and handy as it has been to have an investigation, but it's a matter of manpower.

"We're hurting for people but we're trying to make the best of a bad situation."

Petree stressed that the service reduction has nothing to do with the fire suppression and ambulance services the department provides to the county. Nor will it affect fire investigations within the city.

"We've got a manpower shortage but the department's there to help in any emergency," said City Manager Fred Poe, who explained that the department lost one inspector last year and another this year to relieve the budget crunch.

Precinct 2 Commissioner Guy McCrary said conversations with Poe indicated that the sheriff could ask for auxiliary help from the city fire department, but should refer most problem fires to the state fire marshal, who has 12 inspectors available for arson investigations in areas without a fire marshal.

"This is not going to prohibit investigations from being conducted," McCrary said. "Nothing is going to fall between the cracks."

Painter said Dale Little, the assistant fire chief of Greenwood Volunteer Fire Department, has volunteered his services as a county fire marshal, an offer the county can't refuse.

Little is already state certified as a volunteer fire marshal, has worked with Greenwood VFD for four years, and will complete his law enforcement certification in the next two weeks.

"What I can do is the same as what a fire marshal does," Little said. "If a sheriff's deputy calls (about a fire), I'll go out.

"I like being a volunteer."

Little also works as an operations supervisor for Rogers Exploration.

Painter said he plans to deputize Little as soon as he finishes his law enforcement course.

CHANGE: Permian, UIL case moved

(From 1A)

UIL's contention that it is a state agency.

State agencies are required to follow certain rules of evidence and procedure which the UIL did not when it disciplined the Permian football program last month for rules violations, Treece said.

By law, lawsuits against state agencies must be heard in Travis County.

The Permian coaching staff filed suit against the UIL on Sept. 28, claiming the UIL followed improper procedures during an investigation of the Permian program.

The investigation resulted in Permian's disqualification from the state playoffs and the temporary suspension of two Permian coaches.

Correction

In Monday's edition, the time for Thursday's Leadership Midland opening session was incorrect.

The meeting, which kicks off the group's 13th year, is set for 8 a.m. at Midland College's Health Science Center auditorium.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

Clarification

In Sunday's Reporter-Telegram, Elias Hernandez Jr. was correctly reported as pleading guilty to possession of cocaine and being sentenced to six years probation.

The Hernandez named, however, is not a member of the Midland Police Department, which has an officer with the same name.

League of Women Voters officially cancels debate

AUSTIN (AP) — The League of Women Voters on Monday formally canceled plans for an Oct. 30 debate between gubernatorial candidates Clayton Williams and Ann Richards, saying Williams wouldn't commit to it.

"It takes two to debate, and without his cooperation the show cannot go on," said Diane Sheridan, head of the league's Texas Education Fund.

Williams, the Republican nominee, has said he won't debate Richards unless the Democrat signs a pledge to stop all negative television advertising.

Richards spokesman Bill Cryer said Williams first should agree to debate. He also said Richards doesn't trust Williams to keep his side of a pledge against negative TV ads.

As an example, Cryer pointed to a Monday news release from Williams' campaign that compared Richards to unsuccessful Democratic presidential candidate Mike Dukakis.

"Like Dukakis, Richards is a captive of liberals and special interest groups," the release charged.

Among others, it says Richards is supported by "left-wing Hollywood liberals," the Gay and Lesbian Caucus, Wall Street brokerage houses, National Organization for Women President Molly Yard and death row inmates.

"The average person is who they're missing on that list — the average Texan earning an average wage, doing a good job keeping home and family together, as opposed to Clayton Williams and his big money friends, his insurance pals," Cryer said.

He called the comparison with Dukakis "ridiculous" and the news release "completely negative. It shows the complete hypocrisy of their campaign."

Williams spokesman Gordon Hensley said, "We don't view this as negative. We view this as truth in advertising."

In other political developments Monday:

— Republican lieutenant governor candidate Rob Mosbacher asked rival Bob Bullock to specifically outline an income tax plan, saying the Democrat left the door open to such a levy in a Saturday debate.

"Not only will I close the door on an income tax, I'll nail it shut," Mosbacher said.

Rafe Greenlee, Bullock's press secretary, said Bullock has consistently said he's opposed to a state income tax.

However, he said, "Bullock doesn't want to start ruling things out before we've had a chance to study everything ... He's not making any stupid, rhetorical campaign promises."

— Republican attorney general candidate J.E. "Buster" Brown charged that his Democratic opponent, Dan Morales, apparently violated an ethics rule of the State Bar of Texas by allowing his name to be listed on the letterhead of a law firm.

Morales lists no income from the law firm, with which he holds the title "Of Counsel." Morales, of San Antonio, says he's provided free legal services to his constituents since being elected to the Texas House.

Brown, of Lake Jackson, cited an ethics rule forbidding a lawmaker to list his name on a law firm's communications "during any substantial period of time in which the lawyer is not actively and regularly practicing with the firm."

One killed, pilot critically injured in helicopter crash

MESQUITE (AP) — An off-duty Dallas police pilot critically injured in a private helicopter crash Sunday apparently had been hired by a Mesquite physician to take party guests for helicopter rides, authorities said.

Sgt. Don W. Crum, 42, a 22-year police veteran who has flown 10 years for the department, was listed in critical condition at Methodist Medical Center with a broken shoulder, arm and legs.

His passenger, Linda Eubanks, 40, an employee at a Dallas hospital, was dead on arrival at Methodist.

Officials said a Mesquite doctor had hired Crum to take party guests for helicopter rides. Dr. Randolph Gillum, who owns the 1977 Enstrom helicopter, was throwing the party at his home.

The helicopter was about 600 feet in the air when it apparently lost power over a grove in near this Dallas suburb about 2:50 p.m., said Cpl. Michael Yates of the Dallas County Sheriff's Department.

The helicopter hit the ground nose first and bounced several times on the passenger side before the canopy broke, he said.

Officials with the Federal Aviation Administration are investigating the crash.

Hepatitis B kills average of 14 daily

DALLAS (AP) — Most people know little about Heptatis B, an inflammation of the liver, even though it kills about 14 Americans every day, a Gallup survey shows.

Eighty-three percent of those surveyed acknowledged they knew little or nothing about the disease, said Dr. David L. Hoff, medical director of the Akron (Ohio) City Health System.

"The survey shows that 69 percent of all U.S. adults, from 18-55, do not know that a vaccine exists to prevent people from becoming infected with hepatitis B," said Hoff of the results released Monday.

Some 1,000 people were surveyed nationwide by telephone Sept. 10-17 as part of a patient and physician education program for SmithKline Beecham.

Hoff said that of the adults questioned, nearly two-thirds were married, 40 percent were high school graduates or had taken technical courses, and 40 percent had taken college courses or had college degrees.

"The real cause of concern of the data from this survey is the lack of awareness of the seriousness of the disease and the availability of a preventive vaccine," Hoff said. "This is particularly worrisome when you think of those in our society who are presumably less in touch with such issues and could be at high risk for contracting the disease."

The results were to be discussed by Hoff during the annual meeting of the American Academy of Family Physicians on Monday.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Give more consideration to the feelings of your mate or partner. A romantic crisis in November will require very careful handling. Business profits begin to rise in December. Your career will surge forward after the first of the New Year. Better eating habits will give you more energy. April is the best month for travel. Getting away from your daily routine helps you put things in perspective. Romance should be a source of special happiness next June.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Jackson Browne, football's Mike Singletary, Beatle John Lennon, actor Edward Andrews.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): New procedures result from a closed-door meeting. You find the right answers in an emergency. Fresh approach helps to resolve financial difficulties. Some communications may be delayed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your mate or partner gets news that could increase your happiness. Although your co-workers are cooperative, you may prefer to move forward on your own. Rest will mend frayed nerves.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your knowledge of an important subject could be tested. You are able to communicate effectively with higher-ups. Discretion will strengthen a promising personal relationship.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Previously closed doors open to you now. Partnership or legal affairs could be involved. You make the most progress when you work calmly and efficiently. Children influence your evening plans.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your money situation improves, but you may still have to limit your spending. A member of the opposite sex boosts your confidence. You make overdue changes and reap wonderful new benefits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Someone's indecision could slow you down now. Reach beyond an apparent limitation. Do not take rumors seriously. Maintain your sense of humor. A gentle answer turns away criticism.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Cut loose from the past and focus on building a strong financial foundation. New starts and contacts are favored. Refuse to be kept on a string by member of opposite sex. Be proud.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): At work, take on the tasks you can do best. Real estate ventures are worth investigating, but you will have to strike a hard bargain. Diplomacy is your strongest ally on the home scene.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Keep your valuables in a safe place and stick to routine work. Protect profits by using tried-and-true methods. Gossip may be rampant. Ignore it! Home is the best place to relax.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may be delayed this morning by a problem involving a family member. The key to greater business success is having a variety of projects. Study alternatives.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your finances may be sensitive if you are self-employed. Avoid putting all your eggs into one basket. Brooding over past mistakes is a waste of valuable time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your co-workers could act contrary today. Concentrate on work you can handle alone. Review financial figures, especially where taxes are concerned. Someone may try to make you a scapegoat.

Over the years, great players have been credited with playing or defending hands they had never even seen. Among the best-known of these is a hand reputedly declared by Giorgio Belladonna at the 1965 European Championship which, in fact, was a problem composed by Paul Lukacs. The latest to make the rounds is the above hand, credited to Jaime Ortiz-Patino, president emeritus of the World Bridge Federation, in the Daily Bulletin of the Central American Championships. World-class players who have earned the respect of their peers through their own brilliancies do not need artificial enhancement of their reputations by sycophants. To his credit, Jaime was quick to disclaim a dazzling defensive effort attributed to him, stating unequivocally that neither he nor his partner, Pietro Bernasconi, ever saw the hand.

No auction was given, but it might go as in the diagram. West leads a diamond in response to East's opening bid and, in an attempt to get rid of a diamond from dummy, declarer wins, cashes dummy's club winners and plays a spade. East captures the king with the ace and reverts to diamonds, leading the queen.

When declarer covers with the ace, it does not help West to ruff with the deuce. Declarer will win any return and dispose of a diamond on the king of clubs, using a spade ruff as an entry. When the trump honors crash, the defenders score only a spade, a ruff and one trump.

The secret of the hand is for West to ruff with the ace of trumps! That alone is not enough. West must now lead a trump to enable his partner to gain the lead and cash a diamond before declarer can take a discard.

It sure smells like a composed problem to us!

The Kentucky HeadHunters, a five-piece band that's been together for 22 years but signed a recording contract just a year ago, won vocal group of the year and best album for "Pickin' on Nashville."

"Thank you for letting us be a part of your town," Richard Young of the HeadHunters said.

Clint Black was voted male vocalist of the year, unseating Ricky Van Shelton, and Kathy Mattea was best female vocalist for the second straight year.

Newcomer Garth Brooks won twice, for his music video "The Dance," and the Horizon Award for career development.

Tennessee Ernie Ford, 71, "The Ol' Peapicker," was chosen for induction into the Country Music Hall of Fame.

"Bless your little pea-pickin' hearts. Tonight I'm a happy man," said Ford, known for his 1955 hit "Sixteen Tons."

"When I Call Your Name" by Vince Gill, a weeper about a man who rushes home from work to find his lover has left him, was voted single of the year.

"I've been around for a long time and I've waited for this for a long time so I'm going to stand up here for a long time," Gill, 33, said in accepting the award.

The Judds, a mother-daughter duo, were chosen best vocal duo for the third straight year.

"I have just one more space on my mantel. I was really hoping for this," daughter Wynonna Judd said.

Lorrie Morgan and her late husband, Keith Whitley, won vocal event of the year honoring performers who normally don't sing together. Their award was for "Til a Tear Becomes a Rose," which Whitley recorded alone. Morgan added her vocals after his death in May 1989 of an accidental alcohol overdose.

Fiddler Johnny Gimble won musician of the year.

SOUTH QUEENSFERRY, Scotland (AP) — Prince Edward, youngest son of Queen Elizabeth II, switched on lights to illuminate the historic rail bridge crossing the Firth of Forth near Edinburgh.

The ceremony Sunday was watched by about 250,000 people in the centennial year of the Forth Bridge, regarded by Victorians as the eighth wonder of the world.

The lighting followed a day of festivities and a sound-and-light show using five tons of fireworks as well as lasers and searchlights.

The cantilever bridge was the largest steel structure in the world when it opened on March 4, 1890. It is 8,296 feet long, or just over 1½ miles, and stands 361 feet from high water to the top of the main towers.

NEW YORK (AP) — Ivana Trump's pay for running the Plaza Hotel has been increased from $1 per year and all the dresses she can buy, to an actual salary, according to a published report.

New York magazine quoted an unidentified source inside estranged husband Donald Trump's organization as saying she recently succeeded in getting a salary.

I. Trump

Eleanor Lambert, a Plaza spokeswoman, said Mrs. Trump "made a big stand to get a salary."

But the magazine adds "that clearly won't be enough to let her continue to live like a Trump."

Mrs. Trump stands to collect $20 million from a prenuptial agreement, later updated during the marriage, if it ends in divorce. She has indicated she will contest the agreement.

Since the news of the Trumps' estrangement became public in February, Trump has suffered a series of financial setbacks.

Tribal passions driving strife

The word from Liberia is that the fighting and the killing continues, even though Sgt. Samuel K. Doe is dead. The rebels are fighting between themselves. The killing of the members of Doe's tribe, the Krahns, continues so that the 50,000 Krahns remaining in the country face certain death, according to Human Rights Watch.

Meanwhile, in South Africa, Zulu Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi and Nelson Mandela of the African National Congress continue to maneuver for advantage and refuse to join in an appeal to their followers to stop killing each other. Eight hundred have died in the black townships in the past two months, more than 5,000 in recent years. It is clear that tribal passions are the driving force. Mandela is descended from chiefs of the Xhosa tribe, which dominates the ANC. Buthelezi heads Inkatha, a Zulu movement. Zulus and Xhosas are ancient tribal enemies.

It is said that whites are responsible for stirring up such enmities, using the strategy of divide and conquer. Surely there is some of that. But it is not the whole story. It is only a small and relatively insignificant part of the story. To believe otherwise is to delude oneself.

Liberia is a case in point. It never went through a colonial period. It has been independent since 1847 under a black government which worked for public education, introduced universal suffrage and enjoyed 133 years of stability until Doe and his colleagues scaled an iron gate one night in 1980 and shot President William Tolbert dead in his bed. It was Doe who inflamed tribal tensions in the last decade. And finally, rebels of the Mano and Gio tribes overthrew him. Now they are fighting each other, when they are not killing Krahn and Mandingo people.

It is often distressing to face reality, but it is always dangerous not to.

"Tribalism is one of the most difficult African concepts to grasp, and one of the most essential in understanding Africa," writes David Lamb in The Africans. "It remains perhaps the most potent force in day-to-day African life."

There are those who believe themselves to be benevolent and who refuse to see the dark side of these African black-on-black conflicts.

They should remember Kurtz, the trader whose high-minded mission was to bring civilization to the Belgian Congo in Joseph Conrad's novel, Heart of Darkness. Reality overcame him and his ambiguous idealism. In the end, he is sick and dying as he travels down the great river in a company steamer, murmuring as he lies in his berth in a dank, dark cabin, "Right motives — always," and finally, "The horror! The horror!"

Poland itching for U.S. business ties

GDANSK, Poland — Lech Walesa thinks Americans are missing a prime opportunity to invest in Poland, simply because they can't function without fax machines and car phones.

Anderson

Between the lines in his recent interview with us was a message that is spoken more bluntly by other Poles — that they will do whatever is necessary to attract American business, instead of German business.

The reunification of Germany concerns many of the Eastern Bloc countries that were occupied by the Nazis, but none more than Poland. The Nazis used Poland as their primary slaughterhouse. If there is to be a new prosperity in Poland, the Poles would rather share it with American entrepreneurs.

Walesa was expansive as he told us about the Polish desire to cultivate economic ties with the United States. The Poles have a lot to offer, he said, if only U.S. entrepreneurs could put up with some inconvenience.

"You Americans don't know how to make good business," Walesa chided. "You do business in a definite, technological way. You need telephones, you need faxes, you need planes to do business. And that's what we don't have. So you say it's difficult. But you can do good business here."

The Poles are famous throughout the Eastern Bloc for their low-tech successes. They have set up shop on the backs of trucks from Berlin to Bucharest.

Their circumstances have taught them that they have no choice but to do things the hard way, given the business choices made for them under communist regimes. Walesa told his two "favorite" examples:

"The great and beautiful Katowice Iron Works was built there just because Soviet General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev happened to drop a pen on that exact spot on the map!

"Another such iron works used to be called Lenin Iron Works and was built near Krakow. And the reason was to create a large working class to oppose the Krakow intellectuals (who were generally anti-communist). Factories based on such principles can never be competitive."

One of the early and inevitable costs of the quick Polish conversion to capitalism has been unemployment. Work was guaranteed under communism, even if there was nothing for the worker to do. Now, more than 500,000 Poles are out of work. But there has been a sharp decrease in absenteeism, and a willingness to take menial jobs at lower wages. In the American business formula, those are pluses.

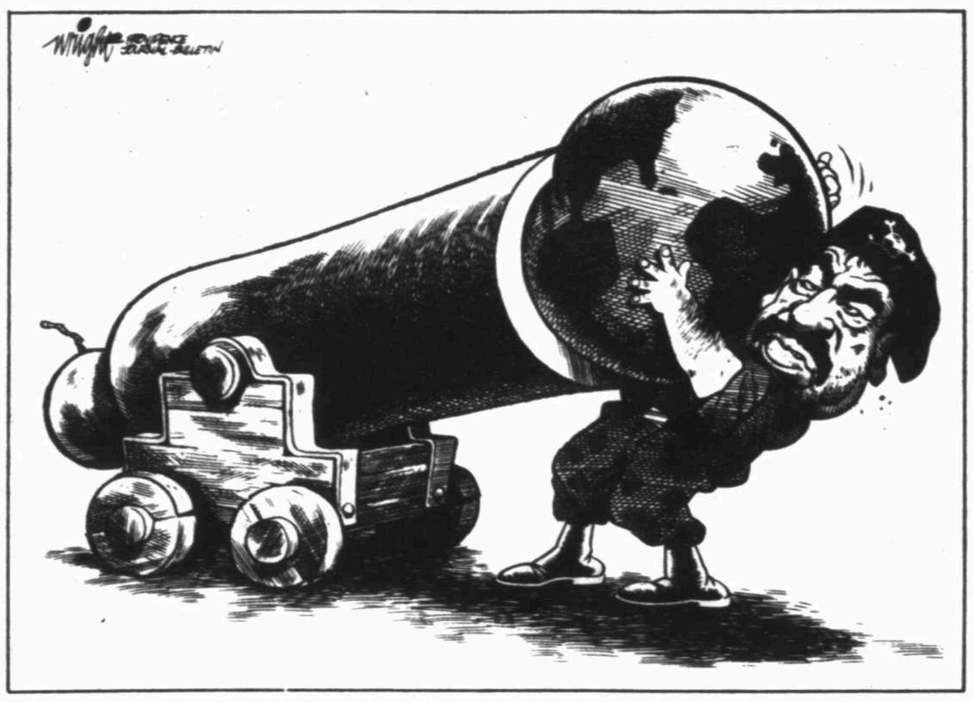
The Polish finance minister called the overnight conversion to capitalism "shock therapy." Others call it the "big-bang theory" of economic transformation.

So far it has been surprisingly successful. Polish currency has held strong against the U.S. dollar. Black market money-changers have been put out of business because they can't do much better than the official rate of exchange. Hyper-inflation has been tamed. Last year it was 1,266 percent. By March, it was 5 percent a month.

The government dropped many price subsidies including one on bread, which had kept the price so low that Poles used bread as pig feed. Prices rose rapidly, but leveled off, and now the stores are full of food and other necessities.

Poles have been stoic through the austerity that the change has imposed on them. That is astonishing in light of the fact that the anti-communist riots of the past were often triggered by a rise in food prices.

No other country has attempted such an economic conversion. Now Walesa hopes American entrepreneurs will have as much faith in the Poles as the Poles have in themselves.



IGNORING AN ALLY — The leaders of Iraq's Kurdish underground are plotting the overthrow of Saddam Hussein, but President Bush is keeping his hands off the Kurds — Saddam's most militant internal opposition. Bush is reluctant to finance or support Kurdish operations for fear of alienating Turkey. The Kurds spill over into Turkey, which is nervous about the underground. For the moment, Bush is confining his support to the Kuwaiti underground which is building a resistance movement inside occupied Kuwait.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Haven't we been down this road?

Here we go again. The U.S. Supreme Court, in its new term, sits in solemn deliberation on a suit about busing for racial balance.

It is too bad these things keep coming up, but there is proportion and fitness here, too. Busing is the High Court's illegitimate offspring. No blood test is needed to establish paternity. "They're" the ones — those people in black robes; and, oh, what a mess they have made!

Murchison

Busing is the most destructive social experiment of the 20th century. It started 19 years ago; it drags on.

Comes now the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, in Oklahoma City, praying that busing be — not instituted. No, re-instituted; revived; brought back, like Dracula, from the grave. To the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's legal counsel nothing succeeds like failure.

Busing, which ended in 1984 for 3,000 children in grades one through four, has failed triumphantly in Oklahoma City. Which is why it was ended, with the local federal court's permission. A school system that was 25 percent black in 1972, when the U.S. district court first ordered busing, is today 40 percent black. It can hardly get less so because enrollment, 69,000 at the outset of busing, is today only 38,000.

How come? On the surface it is because whites moved to the suburbs or the private schools. The surface element is important to consider, but too much pondering gives the impression that stark racism was the crucial factor.

Human motives are more complex than judicial legislators generally acknowledge. The U.S. Supreme Court, in two 1971 cases — Swann v. Charlotte-Mecklenburg Board of Education (402 U.S. 1) and Davis v. Board of School Commissioners of Mobile County (402 U.S. 33) — had breathed life into the dubious proposition that good education required schools to reflect local racial ratios.

This was an ideological notion pure and simple; it drew on the theories of a sociologist, James P. Coleman, who has since pronounced busing a failure.

Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka (347 U.S. 483) and Boiling v. Sharpe (347 U.S. 497) had shot down arbitrary, state-imposed distinctions between black children and white children. The decisions had enjoined freedom. Busing was pure compulsion. Children would get on the bus and ride whithersoever his highness the judge said they would ride.

Parents not unreasonably resented this infringement of their freedom to pick a neighborhood and send their children to its schools. They resented the idea of packing their children off at cock's crow to schools far across town or county. Often enough, black children arrived at the new educational Mecca to discover that whites had departed. More and more, black children were bused from black neighborhoods to all-black or mostly black schools. Parental involvement in schools — a key component of the educational process — declined commensurately.

It was the courts that did this, let us recall — judicial autocrats. Chief Justice Warren Burger wasn't enthusiastic about busing, but it happened on his watch, with his intermittent support.

I would be flabbergasted, truly, to see the High Court go back to the bad old days of full-speed-ahead busing. One hopes we are past all that. If so, one of the parties chiefly deserving of credit is Ronald Reagan. The Reagan administration's deliberate purpose, in choosing federal judges, was to seat jurists instead of social legislators.

CHARLEY REESE

David faces Goliath — without the sling

A critical issue is at stake in Eastern Airlines effort to get an appellate court to over-rule a lower court which ordered the airline to employ former striking pilots.

I will not rehash the details of the long strike because what's left of Eastern, now under bankruptcy protection, is probably not long for this world anyway. The principle involved in the dispute, however, applies to every labor-management situation in the country.

Reese

It's simply this: is it public policy to allow free trade unions or not? If it is, then employers cannot be allowed to fire and replace striking workers. The right to have union is meaningless without the right to strike. The right to strike is meaningless if the employer can unilaterally replace the striking worker permanently.

The answer from the point of view of most employers is probably unions, being a damned nuisance, ought to be gutted and disposed of anyway possible. The answer from the union man's point of view is that to fire striking workers undoes nearly a century of labor law reform.

But what about those of us who have no particular axe to grind, being neither union nor management? I have never belonged to a union and never will if I can help it. It's bad enough being told what to do by the boss, who pays your salary, without paying some other guy a monthly fee so he can tell you what to do. Unions, being human organizations, have precisely the same potential for corruption, stupidity, poor management, and outright idiocy as management.

But in an age of megacorporations, people ought to think twice before they consent to the destruction of trade unions. An individual facing a corporation is rather like David facing Goliath — only without a stone, a sling or heavenly help.

The original Henry Ford, a true maverick with no aspirations of aristocracy, was wise enough to realize that if you are going to mass produce products, then the mass of potential customers better earn enough money to buy them. Consequently, far in advance of unions and to the dismay of fellow capitalists, Ford doubled his workers pay and started the 40-hour week.

But Ford's insight is as valid today as it was in his day. You cannot have a healthy economy built on a low-wage population. If you could, then India and China and most of the Third World would be bursting with prosperity.

But if, for example, you are an aspiring businessman in Egypt, your main problem is not lack of labor but lack of customers with the cash to buy whatever you wish to sell. There are plenty of people who might want your product, but they can't afford it.

We see this principle at work in our own economy. When there is a real estate slump, it is not the absence of people who desire and even need housing that causes the slump. The reduction is in the numbers of those people who can afford housing.

We can also observe the ripple effect. Shut the factory and lay off the workers. The workers can't spend with the merchants and their business goes to heck. They then can't buy from their suppliers and their business goes to heck. The suppliers then reduce their purchases from the manufacturers. An economy is an interrelated whole piece, except in master-slave economies in which a minority simply exploits the rest and preserves the system with brute force.

For that reason, we should not consent to the wholesale dismantling of free trade unions even if we, on some occasions and some issues, disagree with them. It is never wise to seek or wish for another's misfortune. If malice or envy were tangible and had a shape, it would be the shape of a boomerang.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

With love, your four-eyed, fish-faced fool

People ask, "Do you read all your mail?" Of course, I do. The mail is great fun. I get letters that say I'm a terrific guy. I get letters that say I'm a disgrace.

I enjoy both kinds. The love mail fires my ego and makes me feel wanted.

Grizzard

The hate mail tells me I'm hitting nerves and stirring things up. I've always been an irreverent little cuss.

The hate mail is also enjoyable because of the names I get called. Here are some examples I've collected over the years:

"You Godless Gizzard."

"You Tunnel-Visioned Toad."

"You Ignorant Maggot."

"You Four-eyed Fur-mouthed, Fish-faced fool."

These come from religious nuts, gun lovers, bleeding heart liberals, soccer fans and the left-handed Chinese Yacht Racers Anti-Defamation League."

But the all-time all-time came in the other day.

A man who signed himself as A.M. Lamar of Montgomery, Ala., put me in my place as no one ever has before.

Mr. Lamar took exception with a column I wrote suggesting we immediately kick butt in Iraq, which sounded like a good idea at the time.

His letter began: "Like most childless, middle-aged, medically deferred megamouths, you just can't wait to see someone else's young sons charge in to 'kick butt' in another bloody and stupid patriotic war."

Brilliant. In one sentence, Mr. Lamar refers to my inability to stay married, my advancement to middle age (a sure sign of stupidity), my health problems and my occasional tendency toward mindless pontification.

But that wasn't the best part. Here's what Mr. Lamar's letter said next:

"Are you ready to volunteer in Iraq, you pecksniffian, pusillanimous, pig-valved (rhymes with 'hiss') ant?"

That is taking alliteration to previously uncharted heights.

"Pusillanimous," you can look up. It's "lacking courage or spirit; cowardly."

And I do have an aortic valve that once belonged to a pig and you certainly should know of the lowly ant to which Mr. Lamar refers and how it implies that one is terribly insignificant, as in "run you little (rhymes with "hiss") ants" (from the movie "The Last Picture Show").

"Pecksniffian" took some work. I went to the Random House Dictionary of the English Language, Second Edition, Unabridged, and there it was.

It comes from the Seth Pecksniff character in "Martin Chuzzlewit," a novel by Dickens.

Pecksniffian's definition read, "Hypocritically and unctuously affecting benevolence or high moral principles" — whatever that means.

So I went to "unctuous." It is, "characterized by excessive piousness."

Basically, I think "pecksniffian" means I'm an ignorant maggot.

At any rate I wanted A.M. Lamar to know how much I appreciate his letter and that his points were well-taken and I'm also glad "pecksniffian" didn't mean anything dirty.

Souter takes initial oath in ceremony at White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — David H. Souter, a day away from becoming history's 105th Supreme Court justice, swore Monday to uphold the Constitution and pass it on to future generations "in as vigorous condition as I have received it."

Souter

Souter, a 51-year-old judge from New Hampshire, took the oath in a brief White House ceremony in which President Bush praised his first nominee to the high court as "a very thoughtful and caring man."

Bush, alluding to the budget crisis that has trimmed federal services and threatened to shut down the government, invited guests to attend a bare-bones reception afterward.

The impasse has caused a shutdown of all but "essential" government services, reducing the White House staff to about one-sixth its normal size.

Joking that a Spartan gathering might appeal to Souter's Yankee upbringing in New Hampshire, the president said it would be "reception without a lot of largesse."

Souter's oath-taking was a preliminary step. He will not become a justice until he is sworn in Tuesday morning in a separate ceremony at the Supreme Court.

The oath, administered by Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, is one all federal employees must take. The chief justice will administer a second oath, taken by all federal judges, in Tuesday's Supreme Court ceremony.

After receiving a warm, standing ovation from those in the White House East Room, Souter demonstrated the soft-spoken humility that helped him win easy Senate confirmation.

He recounted how 11 weeks ago when Bush nominated him he was practically in a state of shock. The president and Mrs. Bush offered him a drink to revive his flagging spirits and then Bush telephoned Souter's mother in New Hampshire, Souter said.

The justice-to-be recalled how Bush told Souter's mother, "I want you to know he's OK. We'll look after him."

"That epitomizes why my sense of gratitude goes beyond anything that could be called official," Souter said.

Monday's ceremony was notable for the praise showered on Justice William J. Brennan, whose retirement in July opened the way for Souter's nomination.

Brennan sat in the front row facing Bush as the president described him as "one of the most personally beloved and respected members of the court."

Brennan often has been reviled by conservatives as a symbol of liberal judicial activism.

In the Supreme Court's ornate courtroom Tuesday, Souter was to pledge to "do equal right to the poor and to the rich."

His working career at the court was to start soon thereafter, when the justices were to begin the 1990-91 term's second week of hearing arguments in cases to be decided by July.

Souter is expected to move the court further to the right.

Brennan, on the court for 34 years, was its leading liberal. Souter, in a recent interview with The Boston Globe, described himself as "a moderate conservative."

"'I wouldn't ... put myself smack in the middle ... closer to the center than some but still on the right side," Souter was quoted as saying.

He joins a court deeply divided over such contentious issues as abortion, affirmative action and church-state relations.

GOP chairman Atwater censures Duke

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Ex-Ku Klux Klan leader David Duke is making it clear he won't disappear from Republican politics despite the criticism heaped on him by GOP leaders during his strong but unsuccessful campaign for the Senate.

But Duke, a state representative from suburban New Orleans, drew instant repudiation from party leaders once again after Saturday's election.

As Duke was piling up 44 percent of the vote against incumbent Democrat J. Bennett Johnston, Republican National Committee chairman Lee Atwater was denouncing the ex-klansman.

"We have taken the unusual step of censuring Mr. Duke and as far as the Republican Party is concerned, he does not exist," Atwater said in a telephone interview late Saturday.

"This is the first political action I've taken in many, many moons," said Atwater, hospitalized in recent months for treatment of a brain tumor. "I can't think of a better way to spend my political energy than denouncing David Duke and everything he stands for."

RNC spokeswoman Leslie Goodman continued the criticism in an interview Sunday.

"He's a charlatan and a phony and he's looking to hang his views on any mantle of legitimacy that he can find," she said.

At a news conference Sunday, Duke laughed off suggestions that he might again run for president, as he did in 1988 as a Democrat and a Populist. A run for governor of Louisiana is more likely, he said, adding that he will be a force in national GOP policy.

Duke drew 44 percent of the vote in Saturday's election despite opponents' constant campaign focus on his past as a KKK leader with ties to Nazi groups and his sale of Nazi literature even after taking office last year as a state legislator.

Goodman said Duke's unexpectedly high share of Saturday's vote was to a large extent a protest lodged by voters fed up with an entrenched Democrat — three-term incumbent J. Bennett Johnston, who won the election Saturday with 54 percent.

"All Republicans hope yesterday's defeat was the end of Duke's political career," Goodman said.

But Louisiana state Sen. Ben Bagert, a Republican whose candidacy was so badly overshadowed by Duke's that he eventually dropped out of the race, said Duke's strong showing may only be the beginning of the mischief he can make in GOP politics.

Bagert accepted some of the blame for failing to get his message across to voters. But, he said, national party officials must share the blame because they failed to enthusiastically support and finance his candidacy.

"Now, because of their error, timidness, the Republican party has in David Duke, the same destructive force that Jesse Jackson has brought to the Democrats," said Bagert.

Television ads by President Bush weren't aired until late in the campaign because of Bagert's poor finances. He dropped out of the race Thursday, saying his internal polls showed he was drawing just enough late support from Johnston to risk putting Duke in a runoff.

By the time he got out, the party was already abandoning Bagert. On Wednesday, eight Republican senators endorsed Johnston.

Bagert said the GOP "abandoned the battlefield" to Duke.

On Sunday Duke accused Washington Republicans of betraying the party by endorsing Johnston. He again sounded his major campaign themes — an end to race-based affirmative action programs, no new taxes and welfare reform.

"I think it's time that we make sure the Republican party does not continue it's drift to the left," he said.

His remarks were more pointed late Saturday night as he took a shot at the ailing RNC leader.

"I know many of you left the Democratic Party because it's the party of Jesse Jackson," said Duke.

Bennett to push for Alaska marijuana law

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — A fight to change the nation's most liberal state marijuana law is drawing President Bush's drug czar to the far north, where he hopes to persuade Alaska voters to make pot-smoking a crime again.

For 15 years, Alaskans have been able to legally possess small amounts of marijuana. That could change on Nov. 6, when voters consider recriminalizing the herb.

Early polls show strong support for the measure.

The bill is the latest and most ambitious effort to erode the gains of the marijuana-reform movement of the 1970s, when 11 states relaxed pot penalties. It has attracted strong interest and big money from outside the state.

Drug czar William Bennett, has endorsed the measure and plans to be in Alaska Oct. 24 to 26 to campaign for it.

The Drug Enforcement Administration and FBI recently helped sponsor a symposium in Anchorage titled: "Marijuana Myths and Misconceptions."

On the other side, the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws has made defeat of the measure a top priority. By late September, NORML had contributed nearly $16,000 to campaign efforts to defeat the measure, according to the Alaska Public Offices Commission.

"Not defeating this initiative means that we will be facing trouble in dozens of other states in 1992," NORML director Donald B. Fiedler said. "We must preserve the status quo in Alaska."

Under existing law, adults in Alaska can possess less than four ounces of marijuana legally in their homes or other private places. Passage of the initiative would make possession anywhere punishable by up to 90 days in jail and a $1,000 fine.

A statewide survey in August showed voters supported the measure by a nearly 2-to-1 margin, Anchorage pollster Dave Dittman said.

Legislative attempts to restore criminal penalties in Alaska stalled in the Democrat-controlled House. Frustration over lawmakers' resistance prompted a grass-roots effort to take the issue to voters.

Alaskans for the Recriminalization of Marijuana gathered more than 40,000 petition signatures — twice the number needed — to get the measure on the ballot.

Gas. It's A Natural.

When it comes to doing things better for less, nothing works like gas. Naturally. Nothing heats your home, heats your water, cooks your food, or dries your clothes as efficiently. Or as cost-effectively. Or as cleanly.

What's more, no other form of energy helps to protect our environment – or our economy – quite like natural gas. Leading scientists state that the use of natural gas can guard against many of the environmental problems facing us today. And, virtually all of the natural gas we consume in the United States is produced right here in North America.

As for reliability, when's the last time your natural gas went off?

Use natural gas for your household energy. For cleanliness, cost-efficiency and reliability, it's a natural.

Palestinians killed at Jerusalem's Temple Mount

WORLD

JERUSALEM (AP) — In Jerusalem's worst bloodshed since 1967, police fired Monday on stone-throwing Palestinians at the Temple Mount sacred to both Jews and Moslems, and at least 19 Arabs died.

The shooting began after Palestinians hurled a barrage of stones from the mount onto thousands of Jews gathered just below at the Western Wall, or Wailing Wall, where the Jews were celebrating the festival of Sukkot. The wall is Judaism's holiest site.

The Arabs were apparently infuriated by rumors that Jewish extremists planned to march onto the Temple Mount, which is under Moslem control.

The bloodbath touched off riots in the occupied territories that killed three more Palestinians. A Jewish cab driver also was found shot to death.

Police Minister Roni Milo said 19 Arabs were killed in Jerusalem and about 140 wounded. Arab hospital officials at first said 22 were killed, then lowered their count to 18, with 125 wounded — lower than that given by the Israelis.

Milo said 120 Palestinians were arrested.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir expressed regret but insisted Israeli forces were blameless.

"We are greatly sorry about the blood spilled in vain," he said.

The single-day death toll was the highest since the Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation began in December 1987, and the most deaths by violence in Jerusalem since Israeli soldiers captured the holy city's Arab sector in the 1967 Middle East war.

Arab reports said two Palestinians were killed and 62 wounded in later rioting in the occupied Gaza Strip.

A 20-year-old Palestinian was shot to death in the occupied West Bank when he tried to grab a soldier's rifle, Arab and Israeli reports said.

The army ordered curfews in several West Bank towns and refugee camps to contain the violence.

Late Monday, the body of a Jewish driver, shot in the head, was discovered in his taxi near the Israeli Arab village of Abu Ghosh outside of Jerusalem. The national Itim news agency said police suspected it was a Palestinian nationalist killing but were checking other motives as well.

U.S. Secretary of State James A. Baker III said in Washington that Israel needs to "exercise restraint" in handling such disturbances.

The U.N. Security Council convened in New York to condemn the killings. U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar expressed "grave concern" over the incident and said Israeli authorities may have used excessive force.

Iraq's governing Arab Baath Socialist Party threatened retaliation and predicted the "crime" would lead Arabs to "the liberation of Jerusalem and all other holy places" — a reference to Mecca and Medina in Saudi Arabia.

American photographer Mel Rosen watched from a balcony about 300 yards away, and said the Palestinians let fly such a torrent of rocks he first thought flocks of birds had left their nests in the crannies of the Wailing Wall.

Atop the Temple Mount, Moslem cleric Sheik Jamal Alami pointed to pools of blood and told an American reporter: "Your country is giving the Israelis bullets. In 1967, there was no shooting like today. This is a holy mosque, and you tell me, why are the soldiers here?"

A 14-year-old Palestinian boy who gave his name only as Safyan said he and other Moslems ran to protect the holy site after mosque loudspeakers warned that Jews were coming.

"It's very sad," Police Commissioner Yaacov Terner said of the bloodshed on Israel army radio. But he insisted Arabs started the Jerusalem violence.

He said authorities repeatedly assured Moslem leaders no Jewish march would be permitted on the mount. He said caches of stones and flammable material found proved the Arabs had mounted "a planned provocation."

Shamir claimed in a speech Monday in northern Israel that at Temple Mount, "somebody tried to exploit the atmosphere of hysteria and fundamentalist radicalism transmitted from Baghdad and ignite an alien fire in Jerusalem."

Terner said five or six police were hurt by stones. Itim said 22 civilians, most of them worshipers at the wall, also suffered minor injuries.

Police fired tear gas, then rubber bullets and live ammunition. Helicopters flew overhead. As rioting eased, about 50 Jewish zealots arrived carrying Israeli flags and shouting "Kill the Arabs!"

Jews revere the Wailing Wall as the last remnant of the ancient temple destroyed by the Romans in the year 70. Moslems believe the Prophet Mohammed ascended to heaven from the Mount, site of the Dome of the Rock and Al Aqsa mosques.

American doctors win Nobel for medicine

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Two American doctors won the Nobel Prize in medicine Monday for their work in transplanting human organs and bone marrow, revolutionary procedures that have saved thousands of lives over three decades.

Joseph E. Murray, 71, who performed the first successful organ transplant — a kidney — and E. Donnall Thomas, 70, a University of Texas graduate who pioneered bone marrow transplants to cure leukemia, will share the $695,000 prize.

Most Nobel Prizes in medicine have been awarded for basic research, not for clinical treatment.

"I really thought this work was too clinical to ever win the prize," Thomas said from his home in Bellevue, Wash. He is affiliated with the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center in Seattle, one of the world's major bone marrow transplant institutions.

But in the case of transplants, the clinical treatment was a radical advance.

"This was astonishing, to take one organ and move it to another person. It was science fiction 30 years ago," said Dr. Carl-Gustav Groth, a member of the Nobel Assembly at the Karolinska Institute, which awarded the prize.

Thomas

The Nobel Assembly said Murray's and Thomas' discoveries had met the requirement by saving tens of thousands of lives, providing cures for such fatal diseases as leukemia, liver malignancy, coronary artery disease and aplastic anemia.

The doctors did their groundbreaking research separately during the 1950s and 1960s, but they began their careers together at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, where Murray remains affilitated although he stopped performing surgery four years ago.

"He was a resident in medicine and I was a resident in surgery," said Murray, who was in San Francisco on Monday for a medical conference. "This was after World War II.

"We both started working in transplants together, but from different angles. It's marvelous to share it with him."

Murray, a native of Milford, Mass., mastered the problem of organ rejection and in 1954 made the first successful organ transplant, a kidney from one identical twin to another that functioned for seven years.

Thomas was also able to diminish the severe reaction that bone marrow grafts can cause in recipients. He performed the first human bone marrow transplant in 1956, and his procedure now is the standard treatment for leukemia patients.

It also is used to treat a variety of cancers and inherited diseases, and researchers are investigating its potential use in treating AIDS and other diseases.

Anti-tax group reports progress on rollback

■ Citizens to Abolish Taxpayer Abuse reports that some 1,000 signatures have been obtained in an effort to force a rollback election in the Midland County Hospital District tax rate.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

An election to roll back the Midland County Hospital District tax rate was about 1,000 signatures closer to reality Monday night, members of a Midland anti-tax group said.

The group, Citizens to Abolish Taxpayer Abuse, began a petition drive Sept. 24 in an effort to force a rollback election targeting the hospital district. The district recently approved a 19.6 percent tax increase to cover indigent care costs.

About 30 CATA members gathered at Cafe West, 9 Plaza Shopping Center, Monday night to review strategy in their ongoing effort to gather signatures.

"We went over 1,000 tonight," said group member Joe Dawson, a Midland businessman. "I think we've done really well."

To force a rollback election, the group must submit the signatures of 10 percent of Midland County's registered voters to the hospital district by Nov. 27.

There are approximately 47,600 voters on county rolls, and Dawson said the group has set a 5,000-signature goal.

Although he was encouraged by the number of signatures gathered in the first two weeks of the petition drive, Dawson urged group members not to relent.

"It's easy to get started, but it's finishing that counts," he said.

After validating the petitions, the district would have 60 days in which to call a rollback election.

A vote against the current tax rate, 16.6 cents per $100 valuation, would force a tax rollback to an 8 percent increase over 1989's rate of 13.7 cents — a 1.1 cent jump to 14.8 cents per $100 valuation.

Thomas Bruner, MCHD board president, said the tax revenues lost in a rollback would have to be made up in patients' fees.

"The group (CATA) is saying in essence that they would rather have the patients in the hospital pay for indigent care," Bruner said. "I'm thinking about starting a group called Citizens Against Patient Abuse."

Bruner said reducing the tax rate will not reduce the need to pay for indigent care, which he said costs about $6 million a year.

"The group is being misled, I think, by some concept that if they roll back the hospital tax rate, they will make indigent care go away. That is not the case."

He added that MCHD has the "lowest tax rate of any hospital district of comparable size in the state of Texas. They (CATA) don't realize what a bargain they have now."

But Mrs. Walger said the rollback drive is an issue of principal, not mere dollars and sense.

"Our district board is not functioning in the interest of the taxpayer," she said, adding that the hospital district is irresponsible in its disbursement of indigent care money.

She said CATA will not stop at an MCHD tax rollback, but plans in the future to voice opposition to city, county and school tax increases as well.

Urging group members to begin attending as many city council and school board meetings as possible, she predicted elected officials would take notice of CATA's efforts.

"We have all heard the phrase 'you can't beat city hall' and have uttered it ourselves," she said. "There is some truth in it — you can't, I can't, he can't, she can't, but we, all of us together, can and we must."

She said the group eventually will apply to the state comptroller's office to become a non-profit corporation.

INTRODUCING ...

Dr. John W. McAfee Sr., principal of Pease Elementary School, says his mother's dedication in raising her eight children has inspired him to devote time and energy to his three children, his 430 or so students at Pease and the larger community.

School principal shares time with his community, children

By Anntoinette Moore
Associate City Editor

When Dr. John W. McAfee Sr. is overwhelmed by his public and private roles as school principal, United Way volunteer, church choir co-director and single parent, he thinks about his mother.

"My father was hospitalized during most of my years in school, so it was just Mom and eight kids, but Mom made it," said the Midland educator, who recently was honored as a "Man of Distinction" by the Austin Metropolitan Business Resource Center.

"I've always enjoyed trying to give something back to the community," added the Pease Elementary School principal.

"I feel fortunate in that I grew up in a home where I didn't know I was impoverished. My mom sheltered me from that. Out of eight children, I'm the sixth child, yet I'm the first in my family to get a high school diploma, I'm the first to go to college, and I'm the first to graduate from college."

He graduated from Dallas' Bishop College in 1963 and received both his master's and doctoral degrees in education from East Texas State University in Commerce.

"I don't know how my mom raised eight kids," he said, laughing. "My mother was more of a manager with money than I am." During McAfee's youth, his mother worked as a maid and ran a cafe in Marshall, Texas. Later, she worked in a local hat shop.

"She had the get-up-and-go within her to do better, do more," said McAfee, who moved to Midland about eight years ago. "After integration came into play, she was able to move up to the top of the line and manage the store" until she retired.

McAfee's mother always had wanted to be a teacher, but because she lived in rural East Texas and the state school system was segregated, her education ended with the sixth grade.

"She insisted that we study and not concentrate on making 50 cents or a dollar to have money to go to the movies and that sort of thing," McAfee said.

"She told us, 'You study and take care of things at home, then I will provide the money for you, because I want you to get an education, I want you to have a better life.'

"The only thing that we didn't have that some families had was a car," he said. But his was the first black family in their rural area to have electricity. After they moved to Marshall when McAfee was 10, they had television, a refrigerator instead of an ice box, and a gas stove, "so I no longer had to cut wood."

In Marshall, McAfee lived near Bishop College (the predominantly black school did not move to Dallas until 1961), where there always were people, as well as teachers and principals, "who were just an inspiration to me. They went the extra step to ensure that the neighborhood kids got a break.

"I always vowed that if I ever got into a position to do the same thing, I would give something back, try to help someone else like someone helped me," he said.

To help fulfill that vow, McAfee currently

MISD to discuss options at today's board meeting

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

Midland Independent School District board members will be licking their wounds at today's board meeting in the wake of the blow voters dealt their bond issue Saturday.

About 57.6 percent of the 9,911 who voted opposed the issue.

MISD Board President Ken Morrison said he doesn't see trustees calling another bond issue for a while, since its failure means students can't move into new schools by the target date of Sept. 1, 1992, anyway.

Morrison said the board appears to be split between those who'd like to get a bond package together at once and those who don't care to hold an election again.

Though there will be discussion of the district's options at the meeting, Morrison said no action will be taken on any of them because it is not on the agenda.

Superintendent Joe Baressi said MISD staffers think that a future bond should be delayed to allow time to analyze problems with the past bond election.

He believes part of the failure of the $24.5 million bond was due to taxpayers feeling overloaded with tax burdens on local, state and federal levels.

He also credited controversy over the location of the proposed junior high school and the fact that the elementary school, junior high school and alternative school were included in a single package for its defeat.

"We want to ensure that next time we go for it we're generally supported," he said.

He anticipates "taking another shot at it" by May 1991.

Baressi said a second failed bond election will guarantee year-

Opponent accused of exploiting name

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Just because Warren G. Harding Jr. shares a name with the 29th president doesn't mean he's the best candidate for state comptroller, John Sharp told reporters in Midland Monday.

Sharp, the Democratic candidate for comptroller, accused his opponent — Republican Warren G. Harding of Dallas — of cynically exploiting his name to garner votes.

"I think it's important that the voters know that the person who is on the ballot is not President Harding," Sharp said, pointing to photographs of the late president and the comptroller candidate.

"The only qualification that this individual has for (comptroller) is that 15 years ago he was a minor bureaucrat in that office."

Sharp also linked Harding to corruption in the state treasurer's office during the administration of State Treasurer Warren G. Harding Sr., Harding's father. The elder Harding's photograph also was displayed at Monday's news conference.

"An investigator from Gov. (Bill) Clements' office said records in the Treasurer's Office revealed...'a pattern of criminal activity by both the father and the son' and 'collusion' between the treasurer and his son to funnel...business to the younger Harding," Sharp said in a written statement.

The elder Harding was state treasurer for eight years until his indictment in 1982 on two counts of felony official misconduct over the use of state employees in his re-election campaign. He later pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor, but withdrew from the treasurer's race.

Harding, reached at his campaign headquarters in Dallas, described Sharp's allegations as "mudslinging" and denied any wrongdoing.

"I was told by the district attorney's office that I was not a target of their investigation," he said. "We expected this sort of mudslinging because John Sharp is behind. And he is behind by more than he is indicating."

Harding would not cite poll results, but said Sharp's own polls put Harding out in front by a "double-digit" margin.

Sharp, who has spent the past four years on the Texas Railroad Commission, said he was running "dead even" with Harding.

Sharp reiterated his desire to improve the efficiency of state government by requiring extensive audits of state agencies. He said the state stands to earn $50 million a year for every dollar increase in the price of oil, but that oil prices — artificially inflated by the Middle East crisis — could plummet at any time.

Harding, for his part, has promised to streamline the comptroller's office by reducing the number of field offices operated by the agency statewide from 29 to about 12.

County changing courtroom location

By Erin Blair

Midland County Commissioners tried their hands at interior design Monday as they attempted to shuffle departments and floor plans in their courthouse revamping process.

As a result, not even the commissioners' courtroom will be exempt from drastic remodeling. By the end of phase one of architect Walter Pate's courthouse plans, the court will be down in the basement with the county attorney and county judge's offices.

The commissioners took a second look at the proposal after hearing from Michael T. Morgan of the Midland County Bar Association, who was concerned that the law library would be moved out of the courthouse as a result of renovations.

At the Sept. 24 meeting Morgan and County Attorney Mark Dettman said moving the law library would be inconvenient for attorneys and judges, who often consult fine points of the law during court recesses.

During that meeting, the commissioners directed attorneys Woody Leverett and Ted Kerr to meet with Pate on the law library issue.

After talking with County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry, Pate determined that part of the space allocated to her department on the first floor could house the resource center.

His new plans show the library situated in a 1,750 square-foot "L" shaped space on the south and southeast side of the first floor's enclosed veranda.

It will have after-hours access via a card key controlled by the county bar association, said Leverett.

The central jury room, where prospective jurors will wait to be impaneled, will now be located on the southeast veranda.

It lost space to the county clerk's office in the law library compromise, but the room should still be an improvement over jurors loitering in the halls, Pate said.

District Attorney Al Shorre told the commissioners that the space he'd been allotted was insuffic-

GARY OTT

Getting to know myself: The hurt still lingers

EDITOR'S NOTE: On July 31 of this year, Reporter-Telegram City Editor Gary Ott checked into Clearview Hospital for treatment of alcoholism. He has written a series of four columns detailing his experiences. Today's installment focuses on identifying inner feelings and emotions.

Ott

A portion of the morning schedule of activities at Clearview Hospital for Friday, August 17, read as follows:

"10:30 a.m. — Feelings group."

That, in itself, sounded harmless enough. After all, sessions in the program always had titles like that.

But, in this case, it was different. Very different.

To prove my point, allow me to quote verbatim from the personal journal I kept while at Clearview.

It goes like this:

August 17: "I am sitting here alone now. It has been a bizarre day ... and it is only 4:45 p.m. Lord, has it been weird. This morning we had something called 'feelings group.' The counselors announced that we were going to do an experiment. One person would be selected to act out his life — his feelings toward himself, his feelings toward his family, why he feels that way and what events from his past led to those feelings.

"Guess who got selected? Right. Little ol' me.

"It started out easy enough. I described my parents, my sisters and my ex-wife. Others from the group play-acted those roles, which turned out kind of strange since we ran out of women and a black guy ended up playing my youngest sister, who, of course, happens to be quite blond.

"But mostly I just talked about my relationship with those people. As usual, I was cracking one-liners and making light of the situation, a defense I use often when I'm expected to express my true feelings.

"Then I was seated in the middle of the room and the lights were turned out. I was told to focus on 'my feelings' and not on 'my thoughts,' a recurring theme when counselors get around me. 'Use your heart, not your brain,' they keep telling me.

"I tried and, frankly, I think I'm beginning to understand why I'm so screwed up. It keeps going back to those expectations I have for myself and the fact that people have constantly told me what a sin it is to waste my potential. And I took their words to heart. Or, at least I tried to.

"But, as I've noted before, I can't figure out what this great potential is that I'm supposed to possess. So I walk around feeling guilty because I'm not measuring up to some imaginary expectation that I can't even identify.

"No one person is responsible for this unfortunate turn of events. It just happened. People pat me on the back, mention this wonderful, yet elusive,

OTT: Expressing true emotions important in therapy potential, and say, 'Do something positive with it.' I thank them for their kind words and then wonder what the heck the potential is and what I'm supposed to do with it once I find it.

"I expressed those feelings in group today.

" 'How does that make you feel?' one of the counselors asked.

" 'Frustrated as hell,' I replied.

"Looking back through my childhood, it was determined that these feelings of inadequacy probably started as far back as Little League baseball. I always felt like I had to be the best. If I struck out or made an error in the field, I felt like a failure. The game, itself, ceased to be fun. And, I was only 8 years old at the time. If the situation wasn't so pathetic, it might be funny.

"This pressure to succeed continued throughout my life. And, still does.

"But the point is, I had to express these feelings in a dark room with everyone listening.

"It was more difficult than it sounds. In fact, the deeper I delved into my past, the more I hurt. Memories from long ago came back to haunt me. Over and over, feelings of inadequacy surfaced. Eventually, tears began to well up in my eyes, which by now were closed as I attempted to focus on a string of events in my childhood that led, at least in part, to my being in a drug rehabilitation center at the age of 38. The pain cut deep, as though it was ripping at my soul.

"Suddenly I could hear the shuffling of feet around me. The others in the group obviously were gathering around me. Very closely, I might add. I could sense their presence. Because my eyes remained closed, I had to 'feel' them rather than 'see' them. That, I was told later, was part of the therapy. But all the while, I was talking about my past and sharing my most painful memories with a group of people who, less than three weeks before, had been total strangers.

"Then, things got really weird.

"I was instructed to lie down on a mat that had been placed on the floor before me. Then once again, while my eyes were closed, I could feel myself being surrounded by members of the group. This time, though, I stopped talking. Instead, they started putting their hands on me and saying things like, 'You're OK,' 'We love you just the way you are,' 'You don't have to impress us,' and 'Love yourself. You're worth it.'

"My feelings, quite frankly, were mixed. A part of me was very touched by what was happening. These people seemed to genuinely care about me. They wanted me to feel good about myself. And it was working. To a degree, anyway. But the other part of me was saying, 'These people are nuts. Get me out of here. Right now!'

"Believe it or not, things got even stranger.

"I suddenly felt myself being lifted into the air — literally. Within a matter of seconds, I was in a horizontal position four feet above the ground. I was being swayed, ever so slightly from left to right, while the song, 'Desperado,' played in the background. Don't fret, though. It wasn't a magical force doing this lifting. It was the other members of the group.

"It was their way, I was assured, of showing me that I had my own support group, that I didn't need to worry about the expectations other people have for me. People, especially those who really care, will accept me just the way I am.

"Maybe so. But while all of this was happening, I had only one thought: 'If the Rev. Jim Jones suddenly appears in this room with his cyanide Kool-aid, I'm outta here.' "

From time to time, highly charged events like those described above would take place during my stay at Clearview. But mostly, it was more low-key. Granted, we were constantly urged to express our true feelings, but there wasn't all that much crying and gnashing of teeth.

One thing we did do, however, was hug a lot. At first, that bothered me. I'm not a hugging sort of person, particularly when the individual I am expected to throw my arms around is a stranger and of the male gender. Under those circumstances, it would seem that a simple handshake should suffice.

But, no, hugging became mandatory. Even after days of repeated efforts, my hugs remained rather awkward and stilted.

Still, I tried.

In addition, total honesty was encouraged. So it was not uncommon for me to walk up to a stranger, proudly announce, "Hi, I'm Gary and I'm an alcoholic," and then hug that person.

If you see me on the streets of Midland and I do that to you, please slap my face and inform me that I am back in the "real world" where such behavior is totally unacceptable.

Ask those people who have been through Clearview what the most memorable aspect of their treatment was and a huge majority, I feel certain, would respond, "the family session."

And with good reason.

For three days patients and their family members are involved in intense communication with one another, including numerous face-to-face confrontations. The purpose, of course, is for all involved to gain a better understanding of what each person is feeling and how their actions can affect the lives of others.

It often gets quite painful, though laughter is very much a part of the activities, too. The good times, as well as the bad, are remembered and shared.

For me, the session was somewhat peculiar, mainly because the only family members attending were my mother and dad.

Under ideal situations, my group would have included a wife and three children. We would have discussed how my drinking was ripping apart the family. My wife would've talked about her bitterness and the kids would have chimed in about how my drunkenness was destroying their growing up years. "We're afraid of you when you're drinking," they would have said in unison.

Then we would have all cried and promised to make changes. A troubled family would have been reunited.

But that didn't happen.

For starters, I don't have a wife and three children. I don't have any family members with me, in fact. I live alone. And, because my parents reside in another town, my drinking was not having a particularly negative impact on them, either. In fact, they weren't even aware of how serious a problem it had become.

But, now, here we were. Together again. Mom, dad and their 38-year-old alcoholic son.

Two important lessons were learned.

No. 1: No matter how old you are, your parents are still your parents and the little kid inside of you wants to impress them. There is that inherent need for their approval. You want them to be proud of you.

No. 2: Parents love their children no matter how much they screw up. And, that special kind of love comes naturally. A child doesn't have to earn it.

Thus, I found myself in a unique situation. I was feeling guilty for "letting down" my parents, while, at the same time, my parents kept telling me that I hadn't disappointed them because no matter what had happened in the past they still loved me just the way I am.

In a strange sort of way, my alcoholism had brought us closer together.

As mentioned earlier, the counselors were constantly saying to me, "Use your heart, not your brain." This had nothing to do with my intelligence. It merely meant I tended to try to "out-think" the program.

When questions were asked of me, I would give the answers I thought the counselors wanted to hear. And, since I had read numerous articles on the subject of alcoholism, I was pretty good at it.

When one of them would ask me something like, "How has your denial of your alcoholism led to the suppression of anger?" I was fully capable of rattling off a rather impressive response, complete with all of the "correct" terminology and psychological phrases.

This, quite naturally, made me feel smug.

"These counselors don't have anything on me," I often smirked to myself. "I know more about this stuff than they do."

Of course, all I was doing was cheating myself. Alcoholism is a "feelings disease" and the only way to get to the root of the problem is to examine your true emotions. That's why so-called "textbook responses" don't mean much when dealing with a chemical abuse problem. You have to cut loose and express what's really inside of you. The "strong, silent types" don't generally do well in recovery programs. You must be willing to show your hurt.

I couldn't do that, especially at first. I would crack jokes, instead, often staying up late at night thinking up one-liners I would use the following morning.

While my witty words sometimes won me belly laughs from my fellow group members, the "class clown" approach was doing nothing for my recovery.

It was a decision I was eventually going to have to confront — Do I continue laughing my way through the program or do I open my heart and let the true emotions flow?

Only I could answer that question. And time was running out.

Within a matter of days I was going to be leaving the security of Clearview Hospital. The real world was waiting for me.

Four years ago he headed a task force to help identify potential dropouts and develop ways to keep them in school. The program focused on mathematics and language skills, targeting students in fourth through ninth grades because this was the point where "school was no longer a positive experience and the students were just looking for a way out."

McAfee, who has two daughters who graduated from Midland High and a son in the seventh grade at Goddard Junior High School, admitted that it's not easy to find time for all his activities.

He stressed the importance of communication and discipline in raising his family.

"I cook breakfast every day of the year for my son. I did it for the girls when they were younger. I wash and iron his clothes. I try to involve him in most of the things that I do. I take him to games. He's in the church singing group," McAfee said.

"To spend some time with your children, you have to make a sacrifice. Some parents don't make that sacrifice because it's difficult."

McAfee realizes that his schedule allows him more freedom than many parents — especially single ones — may have. His "work period" generally ends at 5 p.m.

"I'm going to be a parent after 5 o'clock. I'm going to support my son in his activities. I'm not going to just go and drop him off and then go back and pick him up," he said.

Because many pre-school age children only interact with other children all day long in day care centers, it's important that parents talk to them, McAfee continued.

Often, children begin school and they "don't speak in complete sentences. It's just 'yes,' or 'no.' They don't articulate well. They don't communicate well."

"You can readily identify kids who have a close relationship with their parents, because they're very communicative," he said.

And there's a lot of activities for parents and children in the Tall City.

"I've enjoyed my experience in Midland. It's an exceptional place to live and raise young children," said the educator, who has lived in Marshall, Dallas, Terrell and Los Angeles.

SCHOOLS: Bond election not expected

(From 1B)

round school by 1993.

"Portable buildings are not the answer," he said. "You still have sanitation problems" of insufficient restrooms, locker rooms and cafeterias at existing buildings.

"The junior highs are already packed; to add classrooms would just increase overcrowding."

Year-round schooling would be phased in gradually, Baressi said, beginning with volunteer students.

"The problem is that year-round school isn't free, either. You have to air condition buildings and pay the staff to work in the summer," he said.

He added that uncertainty over the constitutionality of the state school finance plan is "another cloud in the future."

Dianne Anderson, who opposed the bond issue, thinks the school board is ignoring the obvious solution to the overcrowding problem.

She'd regroup the schools and abolish the cluster system.

"If you got rid of the cluster system at the elementary level and turned the schools back into neighborhood schools, they could return to K through fifth grades.

"The sixth-graders could go to junior high, making it sixth, seventh and eighth, and that would remove one-sixth of the crowding out of the elementaries.

"Then ninth-graders would go to high school and the ninth-grade schools could become junior highs, making five junior highs," Ms. Anderson said.

She said the glut of students in the system will eventually reach high school and demand more classrooms there, too.

Ms. Anderson would like to see Midland High School rebuilt or a third high school created. She said Lee High has enough land to add classrooms.

"Baressi says it would cost 25 percent more if we had year-round schools; how much more does he think it will cost to have all new facilities and principals and staffs and athletic programs?" she asked.

"That's why the bond didn't pass — there were too many obvious questions unanswered."

The school board will meet at 4 p.m. at MISD's administrative offices, 702 N. "N" St.

COUNTY: Locations still being changed

(From 1B)

ient.

"I'll take the room anywhere you want to put me, but this plan wouldn't let me bring my investigators back to the courthouse," Shorre said.

Under Pate's original plan, Shorre's office would've gained 500 square feet by moving into the space vacated by the county attorney and county judge on the second floor.

Pate suggested removing the commissioners' courtroom from the second floor as well, giving the district attorney half the floor to work with. The other half will be the eventual site of the fourth district court.

The courtroom would then join the offices of the county attorney, county judge and two county court-at-law judges and the two county court-at-law courts in the basement where the sheriff and constable's offices once were.

"It makes sense to have the district attorney close to the district courts," said Precinct 2 Commissioner Guy McCrary.

"And it would work out better to have the county commissioners' court on the same floor with the county attorney and the judge," said Precinct 3 Commissioner Louisa Valencia.

The commissioners were unable to find space inside the courthouse for the adult probation office.

George W. Thompson, the department chief, told the court that he would be adding several new probation officers this year and badly needed additional space. Currently adult probation is in a satellite county office on West Illinois.

Pate said his team at Walter Pate & Associates Architects-Planners would begin preparing working drawings detailing space allocations within the departments this week.

He told the commissioners that they could expect to save $60,000 to $70,000 on the total $315,000 cost of the first phase if the county acted as its own general contractor.

In related county premises business, Constable Ron Rice agreed to work with Dettman to reassign parking spaces around the courthouse.

The commissioners also approved:

- Proclaiming this week as Minority Enterprise Development Week, on recommendation of Elvia Hernandez of the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.
- Appointing Don Ewing to the Mental Health and Mental Retardation board to replace Ed Weyman, who has been appointed to the state MHMR board.
- Accepting Road 1136 in southeast Midland County as a county road.
- Authorizing the auditor to advertise for bids on Drug Task Force lease vehicles, two constable's vehicles and two road graders.

VOLUNTEERING

Volunteers do make things happen! The Volunteer Center of Midland will show you how. Here are just a few of the opportunities available:

■ Calling all potential committee members! A local agency needs your help. Positions are available on several working committees. Duties include the formulation and implementation of programs. Guidance and staff expertise is provided. This a wonderful opportunity to get involved and make things happen.

■ A local agency is seeking several very special volunteers to serve as Court Appointed Special Advocates for children. This volunteer opportunity requires confidentiality. This job will involve interviewing parties involved in the case, maintaining written records of the case, preparing reports for court, and possibly appearing in court. If you have good interviewing and communication skills combined with a true concern for children, then this volunteer opportunity could be for you.

■ Be a pen pal to a soldier involved in Operation Desert Shield. Nothing compares to a letter boosting the morale of the soldiers currently stationed in Saudi Arabia. You will be given the name and address of a serviceman buddy to send correspondence.

■ Is your group or organization looking for a holiday project? Several agencies have special needs during the holiday season such as parties for children and senior citizens, toys, caroling, and whatever spreads the cheer of the season.

■ Call Information and Referral Midland if you have a question about local resources and services at 697-HELP.

For more information on how you can volunteer, please call the Volunteer Center of Midland 697-8781.

Midland schools earn cash awards

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Three Midland-Odessa area schools are slated for cash awards from the state while several other campuses will receive citations for excellence under a new program administered by the Governor's Office.

Because of gains in academic performance as measured by test scores, Travis Elementary in Midland will receive $31,924; Noel Magnet School in Odessa will receive $30,082; and Coahoma Junior High School in Coahoma will receive $10,000.

By law, administrators may not use the money for salary supplements or for purposes related to athletics. Principals at winning schools must appoint committees to determine the use of the money.

In all, the governor's office distributed $7.7 million, including five $100,000 awards, to 279 schools in the first year of the Governor's Educational Excellence Awards.

Those receiving cash awards were competing in the category of academic improvement.

Among 374 campuses cited in a separate category for academic excellence were Lee Freshman High School and Henderson Elementary in Midland; Reagan Magnet School in Odessa; and Kentwood Elementary in Big Spring.

Of the 764 campuses that applied to the program, a total of 653 received either an award for improvement or an award for excellence.

Schools will receive their citations in Austin during an Oct. 20 awards ceremony held in the chambers of the House of Representatives.

It's not intentional, of course, but at many pharmacies, you may get the feeling that you are just a number. If that has happened just once or dozens of times, why not make a change to old fashioned service from longtime Midland pharmacist, Bob West .

At Bob West's Medical Center Pharmacy, 2203 W. Tennessee, you can count on quick, dependable service in a friendly atmosphere. Registered pharmacists Bob West and Waller Diggs, along with pharmacy technician Heather Tan are at your service with service you can count on.

"We know our customers well and we are very people oriented. Some of our customers have traded with us for 30 years," said West. "I like to think of our customers as friends."

"We pride ourselves in having quick service where people don't have to wait long," added Diggs.

Medical Center Pharmacy is located just one block north of Midland Memorial Hospital, and convenient to many of Midland's physicians' offices.

In addition to friendly convenient service from West, Diggs and Ms. Tan, Medical Center Pharmacy offers the advantage of computerized records.

"We are probably one of the oldest Midland stores to be computerized," explained West. Printouts for insurance and income tax purposes are available at no charge upon request.

Another Medical Center Pharmacy advantage is that it honors most third party cards and prescription services. PCS, PCS Recap, Medimet, Texas Blue Cross/Blue Shield, IPC and APC are all welcomed. In addition, Visa, MasterCard and Discover may be used if you don't have a third party plan.

"Third party card prescriptions cost the same everywhere, but we offer fast, friendly and appreciative service," commented West.

Medical Center Pharmacy is a full-service pharmacy, with a wall full of general, over-the-counter products, including soap, hand lotion, sunscreen, contact lens solutions, hair spray, cough and cold medications, vitamin and mineral supplements and first aid supplies.

"We are well-equipped to handle any prescription from any physician," stressed West. "We fully counsel for side effects and proper use or application on each product we sell."

And Medical Center Pharmacy is up-to-date on the latest in pharmaceuticals. "We get automatic shipments of all new drugs as soon as they are released," added West.

Medical Center is the franchise dealer in Midland for Hollister ostomy products. It also stocks Spenco products, such as Second Skin.

A selection of gifts are available at the pharmacy, including Scent Chips, potpourri and Hummer and Leaning Tree Cards.

Happy Days Donuts now bakes delicious all occasion cakes

For a fresh approach to cakes for any occasion, call Happy Days Donuts to place your order. Cindy Woolfolk has recently received the Master of Cake Decoration diploma from the Wilton School of Cake Decorating in Chicago.

The Wilton School is one of the largest and best known cake decorating schools in the world.

Along with 18 other students from around the world, Cindy spent two weeks in intensive study learning cake decorating skills. Her graduation project, a three tier wedding cake with gum paste flowers is on display at Happy Days Donuts, 315 N. Midland Drive.

An interesting innovation in cake decorating is the art of making gum paste flowers. These flowers, used on cakes as well as in the place of silk flowers in bouquets, are edible, yet won't spoil. Therefore, they would last indefinitely to remind you of the happy occasion.

In addition to learning cake decorating skills, Cindy mastered the art of pulled sugar, which is similar to pulled taffy. Pulled sugar, which is dried under a heat lamp, looks like a satin ribbon and is quite tasty! Cindy can make delightfully colored and edible pulled sugar wedding cakes, baskets, swans, bows, roses, candy canes and lollypops — whatever you need for a different look for your special event.

Along the wall of Happy Days Donuts is just a small sampling of cake molds which Cindy uses. Also, if you have a picture of a cake you want, Cindy can work from that.

She can custom design anything from torting (fruit-filled cakes) to carrot cakes to Italian creme cakes.

Eddy Willmon, Happy Days owner, and Cindy's father as well, commented, "We are looking forward to expanding into the cake business. We are excited about the future of custom made cakes in Midland."

For an appointment with Cindy, please call 689-8923.

Willmon is also pleased to announce the recent accomplishments of two other Happy Days employees. Tony Marquez and Sara Rodriguez have recently graduated from the Daylight Donuts baking school in Tulsa, Oklahoma. They completed a week-long course in baking where they learned the basics of donut production. These skills include icing, glaze, cake donuts, raised products and muffins.

Both are progressing rapidly, reported Willmon. Marquez has assumed lead baker position and is in charge of night production. Ms. Rodriquez is responsible for icing, making glazes and running the shop in the afternoon.

It's no secret that Midlanders are crazy about Daylight Donuts and Happy Days products such as donuts, Fibrim high fiber supplements and Malsovit health bread.

Happy Days Donuts, located at 315 N. Midland Drive, is open from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 6 a.m. to noon Sunday and Monday. Daylight Donuts is open 24 hours a day at 2910 N. Big Spring in the Kent Kwik.

Kumon offers fun way to teach your child math skills

Kumon (pronounced koo-mon) Mathematex may be one of Midland's well-kept secrets, but most certainly not for long. As word gets out, parents are enrolling their children for this amazing study method that makes almost any child like math.

Long-time Yoakum County, Texas teacher and school administrator Janie Dodson is introducing Midlanders to this unique and highly successful Japanese method of teaching mathematics. Mrs. Dodson oversees Kumon classes on Monday and Wednesday afternoons in her office in the atrium of San Miguel Square, at the corner of Midkiff and Wadley.

The proven benefits of Kumon Mathematex for its pupils include:

- Enhanced concentration
- Improved study habits
- Increased self-confidence
- Strong foundation in the basics
- Sense of achievement

Kumon was developed in 1958 by a Japanese professor, Toru Kumon, whose own son was having trouble learning math. It has grown to the point where, today, more than 1,450,000 Japanese children are learning math and liking it in more than 30,000 Kumon classes which they attend two times each week after their regular school hours.

Kumon is quickly gaining popularity in the United States, particularly since the theory was successfully tested at Sumiton Elementary School in Sumiton, Alabama. The intensive instruction — teaching facts first, followed by the concepts — increased test scores and reduced mathematics anxiety among students.

Kumon Mathematex in Midland works, like this:

On Mondays and Wednesday afternoons between the hours of 3 and 7, students come when they please and leave when they are finished. Some take 30 minutes; some take an hour and a half. They leave when they have made a grade of 100 on the worksheets which are assigned to them for that day.

Students get their own individualized worksheets in this manner: When they enroll in the Kumon class, they are given a diagnostic test to ascertain their level of knowledge in math. Once that is determined, each child gets a file folder containing worksheets to be completed daily.

Usually, these worksheets contain problems which are slightly below their level of knowledge, so that confidence is established immediately. Students do not move to the next level of difficulty until 100 percent mastery is achieved within a certain time frame on each worksheet.

Another thing that makes Kumon so different from all other classes is that students can enroll at any time and leave the classes at any time.

Because of this unique method, most Kumon classes are made up of students of all ages and all levels! You may see five-year-olds doing algebra, two-year-olds learning addition and subtraction, maybe eight-year-olds learning calculus, all in the same room at the same time.

And one thing you will see in all the students is an apparent love of mathematics. That's what makes Kumon popular!

What is the Kumon Institute's educational philosophy? The Kumon Institute's materials are based on the educational philosophy that a child has infinite potential, giving him her the opportunity to develop thorough studies geared toward individual abilites.

The Kumon method starts a child at an appropriate level, regardless of age or school grade, and the child, studying on his or her own, gradually advances from one level to the next. When a child completes a worksheet correctly, he or she moves on to the next level. In the process the child's desire to made progress is ignited.

The key to the Kumon method's success is twofold. First, the method stresses instruction at a level appropriate for each individual, so that all students can enjoy studying and can reach their full learning potential. Second, the method guides students step by step along the shortest route toward a specific educational goal, such as solving algebraic equations.

Second grader Aaron Negron is one of Mrs. Dodson's Kumon students, and his mother Gloria reports that he is benefitting from the program. "He's doing great and he enjoys it. Kumon has helped him tremendously. He has really picked up on math facts because of the repetition — it's a good challenge for him."

Kumon of Midland owner, longtime teacher and administrator Janie Dodson, left, enjoys helping children enjoy math and strengthen their study skills. Two of the students involved in the tutoring program are Bobby Faris, middle, and Matt Summey, right.

Make Kumon a challenge for your child or even yourself, for that matter. Kumon is not limited to children, and Mrs. Dodson has one professional Midland businessperson enrolled. Call 694-7119 for more information on this exciting program.

Hall hooks up with John Andretti

■ Midland's Jim Hall has hired John Andretti, nephew of Mario and cousin of Michael, to drive for the Pennzoil Hall-VDS racing team in 1991.

Associated Press

Auto Racing

NEW YORK — Midlander Jim Hall, the man who brought auto racing the Chaparral cars, ground effects aerodynamics and a number of other innovations, will be back next season, and he'll have John Andretti with him.

Hall, who has been away from the sport since 1982 to concentrate on other business interests, said Monday that Andretti, the nephew of longtime Indy-car star Mario Andretti, will be his driver in 1991 in Indy-car racing.

Hall will join with Count Rudy van der Straten in the Pennzoil Hall-VDS racing team that will be based in Midland. Jim Hall II, a former national go-kart champion, will be the team's general manager, with veteran mechanic Larry Curry as crew chief and Franz Weis building the engines.

Known as a great innovator, Hall said the seven-year layoff from racing could actually be an advantage.

"I see this as an opportunity as much as a problem," Hall said. "When you stand off from something for a while, maybe you see it with a little more clarity. During the intervening period I haven't even attended many races. I'm not coming in here with something in my hip pocket. But everybody wants to bring their own imprint to what they do."

The 27-year-old Andretti, the son of Mario's twin brother Aldo, came up driving on the dirt ovals in midgets, sprint cars and stock cars. He went on to sports cars and, finally, to CART, where he has a career best of two fifth-place finishes in 37 Indy-car starts, both of those coming this season with the Porsche team.

"I consider this a great opportunity for me," Andretti said. "One asset all of these people have is that they are poor losers. They only know how to win races.

"Really," Andretti added, "I have to be the only unknown. They've all won races. I look forward to it. It can only help me become a better driver."

Ranger linemen key to success

■ A mixture of veterans and newcomers, the Greenwood offensive line has been a major factor in the Rangers' 5-0 record.

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

GREENWOOD — The numbers say fullback Joe Kilgore was the star of Greenwood's 28-14 win over Lamesa last Friday.

Kilgore knows better, even though he ran for a season-high 118 yards on 15 carries as the Rangers' primary fullback.

"Our line just blew them off the ball," Kilgore said. "All I had to do was run."

Greenwood's starting offensive line of guards Mike Bradford and Jason Goff, tackles Jim Jones and Damon Dublin, center Hoyt Taggart, and tight end Quincy Carlisle has blown a lot of people off the ball this season. The Rangers' wishbone attack is averaging 329.4 total yards per game, including 282.2 rushing yards.

Is there any wonder that the Rangers are 5-0 going into District 6-3A play?

In addition to the aforementioned six, split end Robert Duran has been a devastating downfield blocker, while Nolan Cox has been a capable backup at center and Jason Swopes has had his moments at tight end. Cox started at center last season and the first three games this season, but has been relieved of most of his offensive duty because of his responsibilities at middle linebacker.

The lineman are a mix of varsity veterans, first-year starters, and one newcomer — Jones, a 205-pound senior who played on the Midland High sophomore team two years ago before playing last season at Lake Travis High School near Austin.

Jones is the team's strongest player, and that says a lot, considering that the 220-pound Bradford and 215-pound Goff are probably two of the stronger linemen in the area.

Jones, who was scheduled to start for Midland High as a junior, has anchored the right side of the line at tackle, replacing graduated standout Jason Gardner. It was Jones and right guard Bradford who set up Kilgore's 60-yard up-the-middle burst in the third quarter by double-teaming Lamesa's defensive tackle.

Bradford and left guard Goff started last season at guard, while Carlisle played mostly defense and left tackle Dublin concentrated on basketball.

Goff is impressed with the way his Rangers have come out of the gate this season.

"I feel like this is the best team Greenwood's ever had," he said.

Offensive line coach Scott Knippa says the key word is "team.

"I think these kids really care about each other and work hard together," Knippa said.

Knippa, in his second year at Greenwood, said the unit has exceeded expectations.

"We thought it (development) would be a slow process because of all the new faces, but they've gone further faster than we've anticipated."

The Rangers travel to Reagan County for their district opener this coming Friday.

NOTES: Bradford took issue with Kilgore's assessment of the latter's big play.

"We just gave him enough to get through," Bradford said. "Kilgore made the run."

The 60-yard burst moved the ball to the Lamesa 26 midway through the third quarter. Four plays later, Shan Cumba bulled over from the 5 to give the Rangers the lead for good.

Cumba had been sharing time at fullback with Kilgore, but has been hampered by a strained knee that past couple of weeks.

The knee didn't keep him from crashing for 11 yards two plays before his TD run, however.

Red bats bust loose

NLCS

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds sure didn't need much time to regain the home-field advantage and break Zane Smith's spell.

The Reds' 6-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates on Monday gave them a 2-1 lead in the best-of-7 National League playoffs and a four-game winning streak at Three Rivers Stadium.

"I don't think either team has much of an advantage at home," Reds manager Lou Piniella said. "Both stadiums have the same dimensions, both have artificial turf. The only difference is the fans."

Even that wasn't much of an advantage for the Pirates in Game 3 as about 10,000 seats — mostly in the upper deck — were empty.

"Maybe 10,000 people were smarter than I was," manager Jim Leyland said. "I thought we were going to win."

Still it was a disappointing for a club that drew 2 million during the regular season to look around and see so many empty seats. It also had to be just a little embarrassing for baseball.

"It was a day game and it's hard for people to get off from work around here," Leyland said. "I think you'll see a little more support tomorrow."

Neither team did much hitting in the first two games, combining for only 10 runs and 23 hits. But the surprise was how easily the Reds got to Smith, who had pitched like Sandy Koufax in the last two months of the season.

Wyche, Tagliabue play cat-and-mouse

Cincinnati Bengal head coach Sam Wyche is the master of the no-huddle offense. He preaches split-second decisions that are designed to keep defenses off balance.

Wyatt

Unfortunately for Wyche, NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue has an unlimited number of timeouts.

Tagliabue called for a stoppage of play after Wyche elected to deny a female reporter an equal share of the Bengal locker room following a Monday night game Oct. 1. The commissioner, knowing the smallest leak in his defense could turn torrential, opted to blitz the good Cincinnati mentor with a whopping $30,000 fine.

Wyche then used an audible to send in the old shower-curtain play after Sunday's game in Los Angeles, where reporters were admitted to the Bengal locker room regardless of gender.

The curtain successfully screened players from the gaping eyes of the media until such time as the athletes could slip into something more comfortable. Wyche followed that by stepping outdoors wrapped in a towel to conduct a pseudo-press conference that drew a host of scribes and one male reporter decked out in a dress and a blonde wig.

Everyone is trying to score points in this game.

It would seem that all this fanfare would more naturally emanate from Los Angeles or The Big Apple, but these days it's Boomer Esiason, not Joe Nameth, that models undergarments on national television.

Cincinnati, a city where the Major League Baseball franchise is owned by a woman and was last managed by a felon, is fast becoming the media darling that both coasts are accustomed to being.

Wyche, hardly one to be left out of the limelight, is presently doing his part to spur that changing of the guard. Of course it all started in the locker room of the Patriots when Boston Herald reporter Lisa Olson said she was sexually harassed by several New England players.

Wyche, a crafty strategist, saw the opening and burst through it before Tagliabue could close his investigation of the incident.

Why? National attention has never been lacking for Wyche, who has been a Super Bowl coach and who grabbed the headlines last year for admittedly running up the score in a 61-7 debacle over the Houston Oilers.

Tagliabue had the situation in hand — it's his job to attend to such things — and no less than the brain trust at Harvard had been dispatched to iron it out.

Maybe the guy just wants an underwear endorsement of his own.

If Wyche was in disagreement with the NFL policy that allows equal access of his locker room to any member of the media, why couldn't he simply pick up the phone and relay his displeasure to the commissioner's office?

At the very least he could insist his players remain clothed until after the usual swarm of media has left the premises.

Reporters work against deadlines and have no time to mill around a club house after a game. Joe or Jane Reporter simply want a quick quote from a talkative player or coach, then it's back to the press box to write an account of the game.

If Wyche had huddled his troops before calling the old woman-ineligible play, someone might have suggested, "Keep your pants on, Sam. Let the commissioner get to the bottom of this."

He may not have accepted that advice. But if he had, Wyche would still have his 30 grand. And a sum like that can purchase a good many designer bathrobes if modesty is what he's truly after.

Refs suspended

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A play that never should have been run cost Missouri a victory and seven Big Eight officials an indefinite suspension.

The Big Eight on Monday ruled that Colorado's 33-31 victory over Missouri will stand even though game officials allowed the Buffaloes' a fifth down that produced the winning touchdown on the game's final play.

"It has been determined that, in accordance with the football playing rules, the allowance of the fifth down to Colorado is not a postgame correctable error," Big Eight commissioner Carl James said in a statement. "The final score in the Colorado-Missouri football game will remain as posted."

Michigan earns top ranking despite loss

Associated Press

An early defeat didn't stop Michigan from an early rise to No. 1.

Losses by last week's top two teams lifted the once-beaten Wolverines to the top of The Associated Press college football poll Monday. It's the earliest a team with a loss has ever been ranked No. 1.

"It's nice, but we've got a long way to go," coach Gary Moeller said. "If we're No. 1 at the end of the year, then we'll get excited."

Michigan, which has won three straight since losing its opener to Notre Dame, replaced the Fighting Irish as the nation's No. 1 team. The Wolverines moved up from No. 3 after Notre Dame lost to Stanford 36-31 and then No. 2 Florida State was beaten by Miami 31-22 Saturday.

Michigan received 34 first-place votes and 1,453 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Undefeated Virginia, which didn't play last week, was second with 14 first-place votes and 1,384 points.

Once-beaten Miami jumped six spots to No. 3 with six first-place votes and 1,324 points. Rounding out the Top 10 are Oklahoma, Tennessee, Auburn, Nebraska, Notre Dame, Florida and Florida State.

The No. 8 ranking is the lowest for Notre Dame in two years.

Eight teams received first-place votes, the most since 1985. Nebraska received two, while Oklahoma, Tennessee, Florida and No. 12 Houston each got one. All of those teams are unbeaten, although Tennessee has two ties and Auburn one.

Michigan's ranking could also be good news for Michigan State, which plays the Wolverines on Saturday at Ann Arbor. The last two times the Wolverines were ranked first, they lost their next game.

Michigan was No. 1 in the 1989 preseason poll, but lost its first game to Notre Dame. After taking over the top spot in 1977, the Wolverines were beaten the following week by Minnesota.

Michigan fullback Jarrod Bunch says the No. 1 ranking will be a factor against Michigan State.

"It's more incentive for us to uphold it and more incentive for them to knock us off," he said.

Prior to this week, no team with a loss had been ranked No. 1 before November. The earliest No. 1 ranking for a once-beaten school had been Nov. 13, 1950, when Ohio State took over the top spot with a 6-1 record.

Ohio State, which was 20th last week, is one of four teams that dropped out of the Top 25 after losing on Saturday.

Pokes celebrate win

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys were celebrating on Monday their 100 percent improvement over last season.

The Cowboys' 14-10 victory over Tampa Bay not only doubled their victory total from coach Jimmy Johnson's NFL debut, but uncovered the heir apparent to the likes of Tony Dorsett and Herschel Walker.

Emmitt Smith, a first-round draft pick from Florida, paid dividends on the $1 million bonus he got from the Cowboys.

"Emmitt made some great runs," said quarterback Troy Aikman. "It's difficult to win just throwing the football. Now with Emmitt we have a balanced offense."

Smith scored the game-winning touchdown in the fourth quarter on a 14-yard run and gained 121 yards on 23 carries. It was the most yards rushing by a Dallas back since Walker gained 134 against Cleveland in 1988.

Smith missed all of training camp and had been slow to round into form.

"I had a feeling Emmitt was about to break loose and he did," Johnson said. "He's a big-time back who is only going to continue to get better."

Dallas only had one 100-yard rushing game last year. It came from Paul Palmer.

Smith said he was happy to have his biggest day as a pro in a game televised in Florida.

"It was interesting because everybody back home had the opportunity to see me play and see what I can do," Smith said. "They want to see how well I can play at this level."

Tampa Bay linebacker Broderick Thomas was impressed.

"I didn't expect anyone to rush over 100 yards against us this season," Thomas said. "I take my hat off to him."

Tampa Bay coach Ray Perkins was flabbergasted by Smith and the Dallas running game.

"I didn't think they were a good running team," Perkins said. "They hurt us primarily on the draw with that tailback."

The Cowboys, who play at Tampa Bay in two weeks, travel to Phoenix on Sunday.

Aikman said the Cowboys should get better now that they have a running game.

"If you look at a team like the New York Giants, they hit high completion passes because they can grind it out with the running game," Aikman said. "The running game helps the passing game."

Oilers mourn narrow defeat

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers accomplished several goals against the San Francisco 49ers, but victory, their No. 1 priority, eluded them because of a few plays, coach Jack Pardee said Monday.

After leading the defending world champions most of the game, Houston allowed Joe Montana to rally the 49ers with 10 fourth quarter points and a 24-21 victory Sunday. Montana completed three touchdown passes, including two for 78 and 46 yards to John Taylor.

"It boiled down to those two plays that Taylor made, giving them the long touchdowns," Pardee said. "I'm not totally convinced the 49ers are as good as they were at the end of last season," Pardee said. "They still have some guys making the plays that are getting them over the hump."

The Oilers held the 49ers to 57 plays instead of their usual 70 plays, Pardee said.

"He (Montana) completed 20 of 28, and they were moving the chains but they weren't really able to control the ball," Pardee said. "We're very close to being a very good team. We just have to make that catch or defend the pass. We've just got to get over the hump."

Pardee saw the Oiler defense putting pressure on Montana, who was sacked twice and threw one interception.

"Our pass rush overall was pretty good," Pardee said. "We had Montana knocked down a number of times as he was throwing. If we'll just continue playing with the same intensity, and making a play, there's no reason we can't end up with a good team."

NFLPA decries league locker room policy

NEW YORK (AP) — The NFL Players Association opposes the league's policy on equal access for media to locker rooms, its executive director said Monday.

The players' union issued a statement by NFLPA executive director Gene Upshaw in which he said: "NFL players should be afforded absolute privacy in their locker rooms."

Rather than granting locker room interviews, Upshaw said, a separate area should be provided so players would not be "required to participate in media interviews unless fully clothed."

Last week, Cincinnati Bengals coach Sam Wych was fined $30,000 for closing his team's locker room to a female reporter. That incident followed one in which Lisa Olson, a reporter for the Boston Herald, accused New England Patriots players of sexually harassing her and humiliating her in the locker room during practice.

"People deserve to be treated with respect and dignity whether they are male or female, pro football players or members of the media," Upshaw said.

In Chicago, some Chicago Bears were wearing more clothes than two of their interviewers during a locker room session after Sunday's game against the Green Bay Packers.

Milwaukee disc jockies Dean and Doug Gilmore of WLUM interviewed the players after stripping down to their athletic supporters and socks.

Denver loses on final play

Associated Press

DENVER (AP) — Bernie Kosar drove the Cleveland Browns to 10 points in the final 3:21, erasing a nine-point deficit, and Cleveland beat Denver 30-29 on Jerry Kuaric's 30-field goal as time expired.

After Denver had taken advantage of Cleveland turnovers to score 10 points earlier in the fourth quarter to erase a 20-19 Browns lead, Kosar rallied Cleveland. He hit a 24-yard pass to Vernon Joines on fourth-and-2 from midfield, then threw his third touchdown pass of the game, a 24-yarder to Brian Brennan with 3:21 to play.

Then, on the final drive which started with 2:04 left, Kosar completed passes of 15 yards to Joines, 20 to Reggie Langhorne and 15 to Brennan on a third-and-8 play to set up the winning field goal.

Kosar completed 24 of 38 passes for 318 yards.

The win broke a three-game losing streak for the Browns (2-3) and achieved a measure of revenge for the team that lost to the Broncos three times in the last four years in the AFC title game. In fact, Cleveland had lost 11 of its last 12 to Denver.

Denver, which had five turnovers in a loss to Buffalo last week, is also 2-3.

Mark Jackson scored on a 16-yard reverse and David Treadwell kicked a 25-yard field goal as Denver took a 29-20 lead.

Until the late rally, it appeared that Denver would win by the margin of a second-quarter safety, achieved when Denver's Simon Fletcher blocked a punt through the Browns' end zone. It was the third score against the Browns on a punt block in two weeks. They gave up two touchdowns on them last week in Kansas City.

Denver's offense was sparked by Bobby Humphrey, the NFL's rushing leader who carried 20 times for 106 yards in his fourth straight 100-yard game.

Fullwood appears to be out with Pack

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Brent Fullwood, Green Bay's No. 1 draft pick in 1987 and a Pro Bowl running back last season, will be released or traded Tuesday, coach Lindy Infante said Monday night.

Fullwood, bothered by injuries throughout his career, sat out the second half of Sunday's 27-13 loss to the Chicago Bears because he had an upset stomach and a sore throat, an illness Infante did not know about until Sunday.

Fullwood had two carries for minus three yards against the Bears.

Fullwood, the fourth pick overall in 1987 after a standout career at Auburn, has been a disappointment for the Packers, even though he made the Pro Bowl as an alternate last season when he rushed for a career-high 821 yards.

"I'm not mad at him at all," Fullwood said Monday night. "He has to do what he has to do. The world turns around every day. I just take it with a grain of salt and go on.

"I got to go on and hope someone picks me up and if not, I just got to go out there in this big old world and find a regular job."

Fullwood, who will turn 27 on Wednesday, held out of training camp for 11 days this summer before signing a two-year contract worth $1.07 million. His base salary this season is $500,000.

He has 124 yards on 44 carries in 1990. Twice in the last two seasons, he's fumbled on the goal line, costing the Packers touchdowns in close games. And in his first two seasons he rushed for only 757 yards while fighting a series of nagging injuries.

"I made a decision, I've been thinking about this for a while, but we've decided to let Brent Fullwood go, make a move for the future and go on with the rest of our lives," Infante said Monday night on his TV show.

"We have a young back in Darrell Thompson who we want to start to look at this year. I know this will open up some eyes.

"It's a tough decision for a coach to have to make. My responsibility is to the team, the franchise and the fans to get the best players on the field and take the direction we need to go. Hopefully Brent will latch on with somebody else. I think we're making a good decision for our football team."

Fullwood led the Southeastern Conference in rushing as a senior at Auburn, gaining 1,391 yards and finishing sixth in the Heisman Trophy balloting.

He has been bothered by hamstring, ankle and leg problems in three years plus with the Packers. He underwent arthroscopic knee surgery Aug. 16 for cartilage repair.

Stuck in a pass-oriented offense, Fullwood never seemed to adjust. He had three catches for 17 yards this season and only 41 for 353 yards in the previous three. Neither did Fullwood impress the Packers two years ago when he couldn't complete his mandatory training runs on the first day of camp.

Infante's announcement, made hours after his weekly Monday news conference, came on the same day he decided to rescind the suspension of running back Herman Fontenot. Fontenot missed Sunday's game against Chicago because he was suspended for missing practices and meetings.

Cincinnati's Chris Sabo dives for a RBI double by Pittsburgh's Carmelo Martinez Monday, as third base umpire Jerry Davis makes the call.

Weiss ruled out of ALCS

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Just when everything seemed to be going Oakland's way in the American League playoffs, the Athletics got a bad break Monday: shortstop Walt Weiss will likely miss the rest of postseason play with an injured knee.

Weiss, hurt on a hard slide by Boston's Ellis Burks while trying to turn a double play in Game 2 Sunday night, sprained a ligament in his left knee and is definitely out for the rest of the playoffs.

Weiss said doctors told him it was "doubtful" he would be able to return for the World Series, if the Athletics, who lead the best-of-7 series with Boston 2-0, advance that far. Injured players cannot be replaced on the roster during the playoffs, but may be substituted for on the World Series roster.

"It's frustrating, to come this far and then miss out," Weiss said. "But it comes with the territory, especially for a shortstop."

Weiss was 0-for-7 in the two games and made Oakland's only error of the series. Still, he is considered one of the Athletics' key players.

Mike Gallego, who started the first two games at second base, will shift to shortstop. Willie Randolph will start at second.

Weiss' injury is the only thing that has gone wrong for the Athletics in the postseason. Then again, the defending World Series champions expected it to go that way.

And they let it be known right away.

A day before the playoffs started, some Boston pitchers went to a batting cage buried beneath the Fenway Park bleachers to take a few swings.

They wanted to brush up on their hitting — or, in some cases, try it for the first time — so they'd be ready to bunt or whatever in the World Series.

On their way, they walked past a group of Oakland pitchers. The Athletics didn't say much, but their stares did: Don't bother, boys.

In actions and in words, these Athletics seldom fail to get their message across.

Fast forward to Game 1. Oakland trailed 1-0 in the seventh inning, but had a runner on first base, pinch hitter Jamie Quirk at the plate and Rickey Henderson on deck.

Henderson hears everything the crowd yells at him, and often talks back. It's how he relaxes, the way he gets ready to make things happen.

So when a couple of guys in the third-base box seats began razzing him, Henderson stopped adjusting his neon-green batting gloves and turned around.

"It's just a matter of time," he said, smiling.

Quirk singled, Henderson hit a tying sacrifice fly and Oakland was on its way. By the ninth, it was 7-1 when Henderson walked to the plate with the bases loaded and two outs.

Wait, one last piece of business before leaving the artificial turf square that serves as the on-deck area at Fenway. He looked back at the same seats, some of them now empty.

"It's time," he said, and then hit a two-run single.

On to the aftermath of Game 2, a 4-1 victory Sunday night that put the World Series champions in a familiar position — on track for another sweep. Both teams are talking about fun, in different ways.

"This is a winning team," Willie McGee said in the bustling Oakland clubhouse. "I've played on winning teams from the Little League on, and there's something about them where they're all pulling together. It's just fun to play on a team like that."

Across the way, in the quiet Red Sox locker room, reliever Larry Andersen presents another perspective.

"Let's go out and have fun," he said. "If we get swept, everybody will say, 'See, I told you so.' If we win, then it's a bonus."

Not hard to tell which team is having more fun, is it?

The Red Sox hope for something better Tuesday when they send 17-game winner Mike Boddicker against struggling Mike Moore (13-15) in Game 3.

Boston, outscored 13-2 and outhit 26-11, might shake up its lineup as well. Mike Marshall, 1-for-2 in a pair of pinch hitting appearances, may start at first place in place of Carlos Quintana, who is 0-for-7.

"I'm still thinking about it," Boston manager Joe Morgan said.

Athletics manager Tony La Russa is also considering a chance. Dave Henderson, Oakland's Mr. October, may get his first start.

Henderson is a .314 career postseason hitter with seven homers and 19 RBIs in 30 games. The Athletics didn't even need him in center field — McGee, the National League batting champion wasn't a bad substitute — to beat Boston twice.

It's hard to blame Boston for feeling things might not improve.

The Red Sox went into the series as heavy underdogs and Morgan said "we ought to be." Still, they talked about pulling a "1988," the year Los Angeles upset Oakland in the World Series.

The Dodgers, though, had Orel Hershiser. The Red Sox don't have anyone like him, at least not anyone healthy enough to pitch more than six innings.

All of Boston knew it, the Red Sox and their rooters alike.

The fans were tight, tense. They came to see the Red Sox, but behold the behemoths from the Bay. And as each game progressed, it became a matter of when, not if, the Athletics would break loose.

Surprisingly, the Athletics never did. True, they got 13 hits in each game, but 23 were singles and the other three were doubles.

The Red Sox, outhomered by Oakland 164-106 during the regular season, hit the only home run. That came from Wade Boggs, his first in 76 career at-bats in the postseason.

NLCS: Smith no superman against Cincinnati batters

(From 1C)

ing acquired from Montreal on Aug. 8, Smith gave up nine earned runs in 75 innings. In Game 3, the Reds got five runs off Smith in five innings.

The power came from unlikely sources, too.

Former Pirate Billy Hatcher hit a two-run homer in the second inning and Mariano Duncan snapped a 2-2 tie with a three-run homer in the fifth and drove in another run in the ninth with his third hit of the game to make it 6-3.

"I knew I wasn't going to start for Pittsburgh so I asked them to trade me," Hatcher said. "They were very nice to me and now everything has worked out for the both of us."

Game 4 is scheduled for 8:27 p.m. Tuesday night as first-game starters Jose Rijo of the Reds and Bob Walk of the Pirates go at it again.

Hatcher opened the fifth with a double and moved to third on winning pitcher Danny Jackson's sacrifice. Barry Larkin, in a 6-for-27 slump, reached on an infield single with Hatcher holding at third.

Duncan then hit a hanging curve over the left-field fence. The Reds second baseman was 0-for-8 in the playoffs

Duncan, Hatcher provide unexpected pop

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mariano Duncan and Billy Hatcher could be considered a pair of nickel-and-dime bookends for $3 million hitter Eric Davis.

On Monday, they turned into priceless producers for the Cincinnati Reds.

Duncan and Hatcher combined for two homers, six hits and five RBIs in a 6-3 victory over Pittsburgh in Game 3 of the NL playoffs. Hatcher hit a two-run homer and Duncan a three-run homer off starter Zane Smith for all the offense the Reds needed.

The Reds have taken a 2-1 lead in the best-of-7 playoffs without a big contribution from Davis, just 1-for-11 (.091) and without a homer. Instead, they've relied on their deep bench and daily auditions for the role of hero — the same way they won the NL West title without a big year from Davis.

"Look at what we've got — Hatcher, Duncan, (Glenn) Braggs. Eric's not having a great series so far, but it hasn't mattered," first baseman Todd Benzinger said.

It didn't matter Monday because of a most unexpected power display.

Duncan and Hatcher combined for just 15 homers this season — a good two months for Davis. Duncan had a career-high 10, but just four after the All-Star break, and Hatcher hadn't hit one since Aug. 31.

How can their two homers Monday be explained? Not very easily.

"I know I'm not a home-run hitter. I just wanted to hit the ball hard and find a hole somewhere," Duncan said. "I really don't know. I'm a ground-ball hitter and I was just trying to get a run in. I really can't explain it."

Neither can Hatcher, who had never hit a homer at Three Rivers Stadium in 149 career at-bats. There was only a light wind, which didn't affect fly balls much.

HALL: Midlander notes changes in auto racing

(From 1C)

ral won the 1980 Indianapolis 500 and the season title with Johnny Rutherford at the wheel, said, "We think John (Andretti) is poised in his career at this point. He hasn't really had a car that could run at the front, and we think that's what he needs.

"We picked him as our driver because we think he's got a lot of potential, he's ready to go and I think he's very competitive."

The team will have the dominating Chevrolet Indy V8 engines and will use 1991 Lola chassis. Al Unser Jr. drove a Lola-Chevrolet to the PPG Cup title this season.

The elder Hall said one reason he is coming back to Indy-car racing is to share the experience with his son.

"I asked him if he was interested in doing this and he was very enthusiastic about it," Hall said. "He already understands quite a bit about racing and CART, but he's got more to learn.

"He'll be in charge of the day-to-day operation of the business and I hope he's going to feel the challenge and get really involved in it."

Crude higher

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices moved up almost $1 per barrel on the futures market Monday as traders decided a lack of news from the Middle East made war seem more likely than peace.

Light sweet crude traded as high as $39.40 per barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange before settling at $38.95, up 96 cents from Friday, on contracts for November delivery.

The Permian Corp. and Phillips Petroleum reported that their posted prices jumped $1.00 to $37.75.

Later contract months were all up by anywhere from 63 cents to 90 cents a barrel. Volume was fairly light because of the Columbus Day holiday.

Natural gas was off .5 cent to $1.93 per 1,000 cubic feet for November contracts.

Dollar declines

NEW YORK (AP) — The mighty British pound took center stage again in foreign exchange Monday, while the dollar weakened against all major currencies amid continued economic jitters.

Gold prices rose after declining overseas.

On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold bullion for current delivery settled at $394.90 a troy ounce, up $1.30 from late Friday.

The pound jumped to $1.9745 from $1.9455 late Friday in London, and to $1.9760 from $1.9525 in New York. In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell to a 1½-year low against the Japanese yen, closing at 130.05 Japanese yen, down from 133.72 yen Friday.

Dollar rates in New York: 1.53225 German marks, 1.2800 Swiss francs, 5.1300 French francs, 1,151.50 Italian lire and 1.15135 Canadian dollars.

Parallel soars

Parallel Petroleum Corp. announced that third-quarter net earnings and net cash flow surpassed those of the first two quarters combined.

For the three months ended September 30, 1990, revenues more than tripled to $725,000 from $237,000 in the year-earlier period. Net earnings increased nearly ten-fold to $343,000 or 3 cents per share, from $37,000 in the same period a year ago.

Larry C. Oldham, executive vice president, attributed the improved results for the third quarter primarily to increased oil and gas production and higher sales prices.

Midlander to head NARO next year

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

Brunson

FORT WORTH — Grier Brunson, a Midland rancher and professional oil and gas lease manager, was voted chairman-elect of the National Association of Royalty Owners annual meeting here Saturday.

Brunson succeeds Mary Badgett, a Lubbock oil and gas CPA, in the fall of 1991. He has served as chairman of NARO-Texas for the past year, and was elected to the executive committee of the 5,000-member organization in 1987.

The Midlander was honored at the Fort Worth convention as one of two outstanding NARO members, for his role in promoting "fair play" for Texas' 800,000 royalty owners.

At the meeting, Brunson helped draft a resolution that was passed unamiously by the 400 delegates, before it was sent to President Bush. The resolution asked that the White House and President Bush immediately, publicly and unconditionally commit to veto any punitive legislation or device that would further diminish oil and gas production in the lower 48 states.

"Crude oil imports, rather than domestic production are the villains in the current price crisis, yet royalty owners and small producers are being targeted for more punishment," said Mary Badgett, referring to recent attempts to revive a windfall profits tax.

Brunson told delegates that "a glut of misinformation" was distorting public opinion on energy matters and called for a nationwide "truth squad" to help overcome the situtation.

At the convention NARO cited several news organizations, including the Midland Reporter-Telegram, for excellence in energy reporting. Others honored were: the Houston Post, Daily Oklahoman, KRLD radio of Dallas, Fort Worth Star Telegram, Duncan (Oklahoma) Banner, Wall Street Journal, New York Times, Lubbock Avalanche Journal, Oklahoma City Record and U.S. News & World Report.

In addressing the role of energy independence, Mary Badgett called for royalty owners to promote energy independence by re-investing part of their royalty income with hard-strapped producers in secondary and enhanced oil recovery projects.

Continental orders new Boeing jets

By Wendy Benjaminson

HOUSTON (AP) — Continental Airlines has ordered 25 new Boeing 757 jets, with an option for 25 more, in a $1.2 billion deal, airline officials said Monday.

"We're looking at the long-term needs of the airline," Continental spokesman David Messing said. "We know we have higher fuel prices, and some expect a recession, but we want to add capacity for when the economy returns to strength."

The 757, a twin-engine aircraft that seats up to 190 passengers, will replace older aircraft when delivery begins in May 1993.

Messing also said the order would help the airline save money if fuel prices remain high because the 757s are more fuel-efficient than other models.

Harris

"This order is a significant component of a well-reasoned fleet plan we have developed for the '90s and beyond," said Continental Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Hollis L. Harris.

"The 757 is especially well-suited for service on our high-density, medium- to long-distance domestic routes," Harris said. "We feel this order will make a substantial contribution to our other plans for improving the quality of our service product."

The firm order will be largely financed by the Boeing Co. and the engine manufacturer, Continental said in a prepared statement.

Continental spokesman Ned Walker said the company would not release "any specifics involving the financing arrangements other than to say it will include significant participation by the aircraft and engine manufacturers."

Continental said it had not yet chosen between Rolls-Royce or Pratt & Whitney to be the engine manufacturer.

Continental also has an order with Seattle-based Boeing for 100 737s, some of those on option, and with the French firm Airbus Industrie for 40 long-range A330s.

Credit market analysts believe budget impasse will be resolved

■ Credit market analysts are confident the budget impasse will be resolved, saying the financial price of an extended stalemate is too great even for politicians.

By Kenneth N. Gilpin
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Beyond the political theater over the federal budget lies one stark deadline for the credit markets: the U.S. government will be in default on its debt obligations if a budget accord is not reached by Thursday.

To a certain extent, market participants have become anesthetized on Washington's ways; this is, after all, the fourth time in the last decade that the government has marched to the brink of insolvency.

Analysts expressed confidence that the current crisis would be resolved, despite the deep political differences that divide the parties on the budget issue. The financial price of a stalemate that extends past Thursday morning, when interest payments on Treasury bills are due, seems too great for even politicians to ignore.

"Shutting down the government for a short period is acceptable," said Louis v.B. Crandall, chief economist at R.H. Wrightson & Associates, an economic consulting firm. "A default is not. They have to get something done by Thursday morning."

"One way or another we will have a budget package, and a cut in the deficit," said Paul L. Kasriel, a vice president and monetary economist at Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

To Kasriel and other analysts, approval of a package of the dimensions of the $40 billion in spending cuts and tax increases for the current fiscal year that was rejected late last week seemed more likely than the $85 billion to $100 billion in spending cuts that would occur if the Gramm-Rudman budget legislation were enforced.

The failed compromise resulted in a rally in the financial markets last week, but analysts said that across-the-board cuts, commonly referred to in Washington as a "sequester," would probably generate an explosive rally. "Sequester

Xerox pins hopes on new machine

■ Xerox hopes its new DocuTech machine will open up new markets.

By Bart Ziegler

NEW YORK (AP) — Xerox Corp. hopes it will revolutionize offices by hooking desktop computers to a new copying machine that will replace offset printing presses.

Xerox says the device will put the power of high-quality printing and binding of many-page documents within reach of anyone with a computer. It also will allow users to "scan in" paper documents, or transform them into computer code, so they can be stored and altered electronically.

College professors, for example, could make up their class outline on their personal computer, then push a button and have bound copies of the outline spew out of the new machine at the campus bookstore. They could revise the outline months later and print more copies.

Among potential corporate users, Xerox says, are companies that need to produce many types of high-quality documents or specifications, such as insurance firms, defense contractors and technology concerns.

"This is a huge market for Xerox," predicted Paul Allaire, president and chief executive of the Stamford, Conn.-based company. "We have torn down the walls that separate paper documents from electronic documents."

AP Laserphoto

William Valentine, chief engineer and designer for Xerox's DocuTech Production Publisher, and Christine Jackson, systems integration engineer, demonstrate the new product in New York last week.

The 14½-foot-long machine, called the DocuTech, is part of Xerox's new marketing strategy under which it calls itself "the document company."

Xerox said DocuTech will allow companies to turn out offset-quality copies 25 percent cheaper than offset printing presses and in one-fifth the time. The DocuTech can print 135 pages a minute and scan in 23 pages in the same time, and perform both functions at once.

Xerox says DocuTech contains the processing power of a large mainframe computer to perform its advanced functions.

JANE BRYANT QUINN

Everyone must contribute to deficit solution

By Jane Bryant Quinn

NEW YORK–In the 1980s, we cut income taxes, ran record deficits, borrowed the difference and pretended there was no tomorrow. Now that the bills are falling due, the voters are still kidding themselves that, by some miracle of the loaves and fishes, the deficit will be fed without any contribution from us.

Quinn

That ain't gonna happen. But any acceptable package will have to include at least the following:

■ Higher taxes on the well-to-do. If politics preclude higher income-tax rates, the only alternative is to wipe out more deductions. This approach took root a couple of years ago, when Congress capped the size of the interest deduction on home-mortgage loans.

In the budget agreement that failed today (Oct. 5), tax deductions would have been cut for taxpayers earning more than $100,000. Expect an even tighter squeeze in the future. "Cutting deductions counters the argument that the tax code has gotten too regressive, because it sticks it to higher income people," says William Goldberg, of the accounting firm, Peat Marwick.

As a way of raising taxes, eliminating deductions has a special virtue. There's no way around it. If tax rates were raised, more higher-income people would cut their tax liability by switching to tax-exempt municipal bonds. But what could they do if, say, the interest deductions were dropped on their vacation homes? If they wanted their second house they'd have to pay for it, loan and all, with no help from the government.

■ A tax on gasoline. Adjusted for inflation and greater fuel efficiency in automobiles, the price you pay per mile of driving is lower today than it was before the oil embargo of 1973. It would still be cheaper, even after a 12-cent gasoline tax. The higher tax would also save energy and reduce our dependence on the Middle East–a condition devoutly to be wished.

■ The elderly have to be part of any budget solution, along with all the rest of us. More than 28 percent of the federal budget is now made up of Medicare and Social Security. There is no hope, ever, of rationalizing federal finances without a contribution from people 65 and up.

The package so roundly rejected today (Oct. 5) concentrated the contribution in the Medicare program. It should perhaps have spread the burden by including the retirement-income program, too. At present, only part of your Social Security income is subject to income taxes. For fairness sake, it should all be taxed, just like any other form of income. That, too, would add to the progressivity of the tax system, because higher-income retirees would then pay more.

But even on the Medicare side, today's retirees are receiving far more in benefits than they paid into the program. For Part A, which covers hospital bills, a 65-year-old has paid around $7,500 says Gail Wilensky, head of the agency that runs Medicare and Medicaid. But that person will receive about $40,000 in benefits, with all the other taxpayers making up the difference. For Part B–the doctor bills–you get about $4 in benefits for every $1 contributed.

■ An understanding that "shutting down the government" will damage all of us, not only the "bureaucrats" in Washington.

First, those "bureaucrats" are the people who inspect your meat for safety, run your national parks, sign you up for Social Security, reimburse your Medicare claims and attend to hundreds of other services that citizens expect. Most of them are caring people, struggling to do a good job under appalling circumstances. It's a wonder we attract any capable people into these jobs at all. But if large numbers of government workers are furloughed, it will be your loss, too.

Take the Medicare program, the idea of paying more for which has so angered the elderly. If the automatic Gramm-Rudman budget cuts take effect, your Medicare checks will be docked automatically by 2 percent. That's Medicare's share of the across-the-board budget cuts.

And there would be long delays before you would receive those checks at all. Many of the people who process your claims would be on furlough and looking for work.

Jane Bryant Quinn's column, syndicated by Washington Post Writers Group appears on the Reporter-Telegram business pages each Tuesday and Friday.

ANALYSIS

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 6.19 points to 2,516.83 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 7 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 787 up, 558 down and 509 unchanged.

The House passed a new budget plan overnight, raising an alternative to the proposal that was rejected in Congress last week.

Analysts said investors were hopeful that an agreement would be reached soon on a budget aimed at narrowing the gap between the government's revenues and spending.

Brokers also said traders' spirits got a lift from gains in several foreign stock markets, from Tokyo to London.

The Dow Jones industrials jumped about 30 points at the opening, but then began gradually settling back. Activity was muted by the absence of many market participants who were taking a Columbus Day holiday.

UAL fell 10¼ to 92¼ on reports that a union group seeking to buy the company couldn't get bank financing for a bid in the range of $165 a share to $170 a share.

Travelers Corp. tumbled 2¾ to 14¾ on top of a 4⅝-point drop Friday, when the company estimated a $500 million third-quarter loss and cut its dividend by one-third.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .72 to 171.42. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .04 at 306.52.

Volume on the Big Board came to 69.92 million shares with two hours to go.

Slow sales briefly shut Texas GM plant

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — General Motors Corp. has announced that it will shut down its Arlington assembly plant for two weeks beginning Oct. 15 because of slow sales of the two car models built there.

GM announced last week that sales of the Cadillac Brougham and Chevrolet Caprice dropped 10.6 percent in the 1990 model year and that Caprice experienced a 25 percent sales plunge in September.

The Caprice also is produced in Willow Run, Mich., where operations had been scheduled to resume Monday after a two-week shutdown. But the company announced last week it would keep the plant shuttered for two more weeks and then operate it only one shift for three weeks.

At Willow Run, which employs 4,300 hourly workers, the move to one-shift production will prevent the layoff of an entire shift for an extended time. The company said its two shifts will be rotated every other week.

Mike Seiler, shop chairman at UAW Local 276, which represents the 3,400 Arlington workers, said GM informed the local's leadership Friday night of the shutdown.

Art Hester, manager of the Arlington plant, said although the market has been soft, he had hoped a shutdown of his facility could be avoided.

The plant has been scheduled to begin building prototypes of the Buick Roadmaster, a completely new car that is scheduled to be introduced next spring as a 1992 vehicle. The Roadmaster production should not be affected by the Arlington plant shutdown, Hester said.

Hester said it was unclear whether Arlington's workers will face an extension after the two-week closure or whether GM has plans to place the plant on one shift.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Money market account & reserve requirements

By Bill Doyle

Q. I am told that I receive interest on only 88 percent of my money market deposit account. The reason given is that the other 12 percent must go into the Federal Reserve Fund and a depositor receives no interest on that amount.

Is this true?

A. Not exactly. OK, that is a hedging short answer, but this is a complicated subject.

Doyle

It's true that every depository institution — bank, savings and loan association and credit union — in this nation is required by law to set aside a percentage of its deposits. The money to meet this "reserve requirement" can be kept in the institution's vault or at its district Federal Reserve Bank and does not earn interest.

Reserve requirements vary, depending on the type of account and size of the depository institution. The highest such requirement is on "transaction accounts," including money market deposit accounts, on which checks can be written. When a bank, S&L or CU holds more than $40.4 million in transaction accounts, the reserve requirement is 12 percent.

Unless your bank, S&L or CU is small, it most likely has enough transaction accounts to meet that highest reserve requirement and cannot invest 12 percent of the money in your account.

However, there is no law or regulation preventing your depository institution from paying you interest on your entire money market deposit account. That decision is up to each bank, S&L and CU. Some pay higher rates on 88 percent of an account. Others pay lower rates on 100 percent.

Let's say you have $1,000 you want to put into a money market deposit account. Bank A might pay 8 percent simple interest on 88 percent of the account. That's $70.40 annual interest. Bank B might pay 7.04 percent simple interest on 100 percent of the account. That's also $7.40.

When shopping around for the best deal, the depositor should look for the effective annual yield on his or her money. In this example, it's 7.04 percent at both banks.

Q. What is the purpose behind reserve requirements at banks, S&Ls and CUs.

A. It's twofold. First off, it makes cash available, just in case there is "a run on the banks."

And it is one of the three basic monetary tools the Federal Reserve uses to heat up or cool off the U.S. economy. The other two are the discount rate, at which Federal Reserve Banks lend money to depository institutions, and "open market operations." All three feed money into and take money out of the economy, but the third is the most important, and is in virtually constant use.

In its open market operations, the Fed buys U.S. Treasury securities from banks and sells Treasuries to banks.

Q. Some "thrifts" — S&Ls and savings banks — are prone to what I call misleading advertising. They offer six- or nine-month certificates of deposit with a stated rate of 8.2 percent and claim this results in an annual rate of 8.35 percent.

There is no way in the world an investor can realize the 8.35 percent annual figure, because the CD will never attain the age of one year. Am I correct?

A. Yes, indeed, as far as a particular CD with a maturity of less than 12 months is concerned. Money invested for shorter periods does not earn a full year's interest.

However, if you read those ads carefully, you should find words explaining that the higher interest rate mentioned can be obtained only if, upon its maturity, the CD is renewed at the stated interest rate. Without such an explanation, the ads are worse than misleading. They are downright fraudulent.

The kicker is it's impossible to even guess what interest rate will be available when the CD matures. It might be the same rate. It might be higher or lower. Many observers cite this as a rap against such ads.

Thrifts and banks have gone to the mat with regulatory authorities on this very subject and, to date, have been permitted to run those ads would be better for the bond market, but it would be worse for the economy," Kasriel said. "It's a bigger package, and it is all on the spending side."

Congress moved toward a new proposal Sunday for about $40 billion in savings, but traders of government bonds will not return to the market until Tuesday, after the Columbus Day holiday.

Analysts agreed that the Federal Reserve Board, widely seen as ready to lower short-term interest rates to shore up a badly sagging economy, would delay making any move until after a budget package was approved. Moreover, the Fed's response, when it comes, is likely to be tailored to the nature of the fiscal program that emerges.

"If the budget reduction action takes the form of a very severe sequester, that would produce an even greater reaction from the Fed," Crandall said.

On a purely economic basis, the contents of September's employment report released Friday suggest that the Fed needs to do something soon. Excluding census workers, non-farm payroll employment fell by 59,000 last month, a number that rounded out a very bleak job-creation picture for the third quarter.

In the last three months, payroll employment increased by only 70,000 jobs. During the same period, the number of people working part-time rose by 350,000, with 330,000 in September alone.

"The situation is horrible," said Joseph Carson, a Chemical Bank economist. After including the latest employment figures with other reports, he estimated that the economy did not grow at all during the third quarter, and might have even contracted slightly.

"I don't see how anyone could read the employment report as anything other than a recession report," said Alan Sinai, chief economist for Boston Co. "Under normal circumstances, it would call for a Fed easing."

The Fed would probably be cautious on doing very much, Sinai and others said, because the inflation outlook remained bleak. Fresh evidence of rapidly rising prices is almost certain to appear Friday, when producer price figures for September are to be released.

Homeowner's tool kit covers 'the basics'

Associated Press

Do-it-yourselfers may already have a workshop full of trusted tools, gadgets and woodworking equipment. But new homeowners or occasional home maintenance persons may lack the right tools to do a job quickly and correctly.

Home Products Guide recommends these makings of a basic kit of hand tools that will provide the equipment for most household projects.

■ Measuring tape. A 20- to 25-foot flexible steel tape can measure most room dimensions and follow curved surfaces that straight or folding rules can't. A locking feature lets one person measure long distances alone.

■ Lead pencil. A wide, flat carpenter's pencil won't roll away or break easily. If it does break, sharpen it with a penknife.

■ Level and square. To check level and plumb, get a practical 2-foot-long carpenter's level with top-reading vials. A torpedo level (typically about 9 inches long) will work better in close quarters. A combination square checks right and 45-degree angles and can be used as a depth gauge. Some also contain one or two spirit levels and a scratch awl for marking.

■ Chalk line. Use this or a weighted plumb bob to determine and mark vertical lines on walls.

■ Compass. Use it to scribe circles or transfer measurements from one object to another.

■ Utility knife. Use this on almost every project to score and cut materials such as wallpaper, flooring, roofing, laminate and drywall.

■ HANDSAWS. In sawing, the more teeth per inch, the finer the cut. For only one saw, a 26-inch crosscut style is lightweight and easy to handle when sawing wood across the grain. Teflon-coated blades reduce binding and residue buildup. For finer angle cuts, such as for molding or picture frames, buy a backsaw or dovetail saw, both used with a slotted miter box. Use a narrow-blade keyhole saw to cut in tight areas or along curves. A hacksaw will cut metal or plastic easily.

■ Planes. A block plane is the simplest, smallest plane, ideal for smoothing rough saw cuts or the end grain of boards, or shaving door edges to fit. Use a jack plane (one of several bench planes) about 14 inches long to smooth, trim and shape wood along the grain.

■ Bevel-edge chisels in various widths cut wood by chipping it away. Wooden-handle chisels should be struck with a wooden mallet, not a metal hammer.

■ Hammer. The standard is a 16-ounce model with a forged steel head for driving nails and a curved claw for pulling them out.

■ Mallet. Tap finished wood in place, bend sheet metal and seat laminate or inlays with this soft-face hammer. Heads are commonly made of wood, rubber, plastic or rawhide.

■ Nail set. Use this to countersink finishing nails below the surface.

■ PUSH DRILL. Push its handle down and this ratchet-style tool rotates, drilling small holes in soft wood.

■ Screwdriver. Two types and several sizes are necessary. A standard or slotted screwdriver has a flat blade; a Phillips screwdriver has a pointed or cross head. Use long-shank models for most situations, a stubby (about 1 ¼ inches long) model in tight spots. Magnetized tips help guide screws to holes and retrieve screws and nuts that drop. Multibit screwdrivers, particularly those that store tips in the handle, are easy to carry.

■ Wrenches. Adjustable wrenches, locking or nonlocking in design, have an open end that adjusts by a screw gear to tighten or loosen nuts and bolts. Box wrenches have enclosed heads that create more leverage by completely enclosing a nut. Combination wrenches have one end of each type. A socket set with ratchet handles makes tightening or loosening nuts faster and easier and gives snug grip on all sizes of nuts, even worn ones.

■ Pliers. Adjustable or slip-joint pliers are hinged to adjust to a narrow or wide opening. Their curved, toothed jaws help grip small objects. Long-nose (or needle-nose) pliers are handy for electrical work because they grip and bend wire and can get into tight places. Tongue-and-groove or channel-type pliers have slots or channels that position their parallel jaws to hold objects of varying widths. Locking pliers have a vise-like grip that leaves both hands free to work. Wire strippers cut away insulation without damaging electrical wire.

■ Clamps. Use C-clamps to hold pieces together while glue dries. The 6-inch size is practical. Because they can hold large pieces of lumber, pipe and T-bar clamps are better for framing.

AT WIT'S END

It's a fact of life — time marches on

EDITOR'S NOTE: Erma Bombeck is on vacation. She left a few of her favorite columns behind.

By Erma Bombeck

Bombeck

My mother told me the other day (with a straight face) that an 83-year-old woman at a Weight Watchers meeting slowly approached the instructor afterward and said, "Tell me again what I'm not supposed to eat."

That is the most depressing thing I've heard all year.

When does it stop? Isn't there ever a time when we can accept the principle of gravity and get on with our lives? How many years do we have to choose between an olive and three days of serious bloating? How long can a woman be expected to live by the old adage: The shortest distance to water-pill thinness is a straight line to the bathroom?

Two women were talking in Aisle 4 of the supermarket a couple of days ago. I overheard one say, "Isn't it a shame Liz Taylor is putting it back on?" One of the women had three chins and the other couldn't see her shoes for the overhang.

I wanted to say, "I heard the horse she rode in 'National Velvet' has gone to pot, too!" My God, when is the public going to give this woman permission to be 57 years old and in charge of her own life?

Who cares if Oprah had a hamburger or if the grease dripped off her elbows? Or if she eats both ears off a 6-foot-tall solid chocolate bunny? Fans want their idols to stop the clock. They don't want to see Barbara Walters wear glasses, Raquel Welch become a grandmother or Angie Dickinson with gray hair.

I don't know the logic, but it probably has something to do with the public's own mortality. They're the same age and could look that good if they had the money.

They don't make those same kinds of demands of politicians, authors, artists, musicians or corporate executives.

At a luncheon recently, I quietly observed four women at the next table. Between all the lifts, tucks and nips, there was enough skin and fat left over from the four of them to make a fifth person. All of them sat around with a surprised look on their faces. If the stock market crashed, not one of them could have blinked an eye, let alone express emotion.

It occurs to me there should be some kind of correlation between your mind and your body. What does it profit a 78-year-old woman to sit around the pool in a bikini if she cannot feed herself? Or to have your face lifted and not remember who took it?

There's a compulsory age for everything in this country. You are told when to receive Social Security, to retire, to reach adult status, to drink alcohol, vote and enter the first grade.

Is it too much to ask, "When am I old enough to pig out?" without having to fall on your knees and confess, "Bless me, Jean Nidetch, for I have sinned"?

New vegetable is taste-testers' favorite

By Linda Anderson

Anderson

It's not very often you find something totally new in the produce department, but now the "broccoflower" has been introduced. This new vegetable is supposed to be the offspring of broccoli and cauliflower, and said to combine the best of both of those vegetables.

OK, I know that one of my young taste-testers likes broccoli but not cauliflower, and the other doesn't eat anything green (with the exception of seedless grapes and green Kool-aid), but I couldn't resist buying a head of broccoflower to check it out for taste, price and advertising accuracy. I like both broccoli and cauliflower, and I figured if neither one of them would touch it, I'd have it all for myself.

Broccoflower comes in heads, like cauliflower, instead of stalks, like broccoli. In fact, it looks a lot like cauliflower, but the buds are more defined (like broccoli) and the color is a pale green (almost a lime green).

We bought a head of broccoflower for $1.49 a pound, which is a little steep, but after all this was scientific research, right? The heads are a little less compact than cauliflower, so they didn't weigh as much.

About the only advertising claim I could find was that the vegetable is supposed to be a cross between broccoli and cauliflower. At least, that's what it looks like.

But the taste-test was the all-important thing here — I thought the vegetable tasted like slightly sweet, tender cauliflower (its flavor is much more mild than either cauliflower or broccoli — kind of like the best of both), but if my picky eaters liked broccoflower, probably anyone would (OK, nearly anyone).

First I convinced them to try the veggie in its raw state. "Hm," said the older one. "That's pretty good."

"No!" mumbled the younger one (with her hand in front of her mouth).

Then, I had them try it semi-steamed. "That's pretty good," repeated the older one. "I want some cheese on mine."

The younger one took a microscopic bit on the end of her tongue. At least that was progress.

Finally, we melted Velveeta (the family cook's friend) on the vegetable, and they both — surprise of surprises — loved it and asked for seconds. In fact, we've bought two more heads of broccoflower since we did the taste test. They like it — just broccoflower with cheese melted on top, nothing else — for supper.

Who am I to quibble with such good taste?

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Aim TV for best picture

Associated Press

Just having an antenna on the roof doesn't guarantee a television set will get the best reception.

The antenna has to be pointing in the right direction.

The current issue of Video Magazine gives consumers tips on aiming TV antennas. First of all, an antenna should not be pointed at the station but at the station's broadcast tower, since this is where the signal comes from.

Station and tower are rarely close to each other. Most stations are in or near downtown areas, while the towers are perched on nearby hills or mountains. The higher elevation of the transmitter helps it beam the signal to more homes. This greater area of coverage means the station can charge more for its advertising time.

To find out where the broadcast tower is, call the station. If the operator doesn't know, ask to be connected with the public relations department.

Next, use an area map to locate both the broadcast tower and your home. A simple protractor can be used to determine the general direction the antenna should be aimed.

Sometimes, a sharper picture can be obtained by aiming the antenna a few degrees to the right or left of the exact coordinates. This allows the antenna to grab a broader piece of the signal than if it were pointed directly at the tower.

But at this point, it's solely a matter of trial and error. One person moves the antenna while another monitors reception. What you see is what you get.

Finally, aiming an antenna is much easier if it's mounted on a remote-controlled rotor. Simply turn the knob and watch the TV set as the direction changes to determine where reception is best. Rotating antennas are great if you live in an area where the broadcast towers are located all over the compass. In New York City, where most stations transmit from the roof of the World Trade Center, a rotating antenna is a waste of money.

DEAR ABBY

Wife ready to wash that man right out of her hair

By Abigail Van Buren

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Once again you have changed the life of one of your readers. You recently ran a letter from a woman whose husband refused to bathe. You told her that if he didn't clean up his act, she didn't have to sleep with him — or even live with him. Well, I didn't write that letter, but I have had the same problem for 19 years.

I have begged my husband to bathe. Ralph (not his real name) is a professional man. He plays golf, sweats, works at his profession, smokes two packs of cigarettes a day, drinks beer at night, then at midnight he pours on the cologne, jumps into bed and expects me to respond! I doubt if he bathes once a month. I pretended for years, but five years ago, I stopped pretending. I moved out of our bedroom, and now I'm filing for divorce.

I truly believe this man is ill, physically and mentally. My father offered to pay for a complete physical examination, but Ralph refused. He's overweight and out of shape, and hasn't been to a doctor in years.

The children refuse to get into a car with him unless all the windows are down. He has a very successful practice, and the community will be shocked and will probably say, "Poor Ralph." But I can live with that, because God knows how hard I tried. — LEAVING AT LAST

DEAR LEAVING: Couples who really care about each other try to please each other — and it should go without saying that if one spouse thinks the other needs a bath, the offending party should cooperate.

It's inconceivable that a man who smells so bad his wife hasn't slept with him for five years can have a "successful practice" that must bring him within smelling distance of the community.

Before finalizing the divorce, give counseling a chance. If that fails, to use your words — God knows you tried.

DEAR ABBY: The summer has ended and again we want to thank you for running the poem "Our Place at the Lake." We clipped it from your column several years ago, had it framed, and it's hanging on the wall of our summer cottage. Everyone who sees it has enjoyed it, and many have copied it.

Did you write that poem, Abby? I say you did. My wife says you didn't. Who's right? We have a steak dinner riding on this. Thank you for years of enjoyment. — BIG FANS IN SPENCER, IOWA

DEAR FANS: You owe your wife a steak dinner. And for those who haven't seen that poem, here it is, crediting its author, Sylvia Lewis Kinney (now Bundy):

OUR PLACE AT THE LAKE

June is past, so is July,
August is ended — likewise I.
The pattering feet of summer and sun
Are over, complete, exhausted, done!
I've fed the young as well as the old,
I've cooled the warm, I've warmed the cold.
The wounded and weeping I have consoled,
The tender and touchy I have cajoled.
I have steeled the scared, I have scared the bold,
I have bit my tongue till it was controlled.
I've broiled the steak, I have casseroled,
And the grocer thinks I am made of gold.
(The other bills I have pigeonholed.)
And frankly, friends, I am ready to fold!

Next time I live I'll make the most
Of being the guest, not the host.

Group to send gifts to troops in gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) — An organization that sent $3 million worth of gift packages to servicemen in Vietnam is cranking up to ship Christmas packages to soldiers in the Persian Gulf.

Roger Chapin, president of Help Hospitalized Veterans, said his goal is to raise enough money to send 250,000 packages, enough for every American serving in Operation Desert Shield.

Chapin said the packages will have a retail value of at least $15 and will contain nuts, cookies, dates, raisins, hard candies and other treats.

Each package will include a Christmas card from the donor, along with a return card for the recipient to send.

Chapin said the cost to the donor for one package would be $15. Two can be sponsored for $25, four for $50, six for $75 and eight for $100.

People wishing to donate may call 1-800-755-GIFT (or 1-800-755-4438) from Oct. 14 to Nov. 15, or may send a check or money order to "G.I. Christmas Gift Pac" at P.O. Box 91560, Washington, D.C. 20090.

"This will be the ideal vehicle for Americans to demonstrate their care and appreciation as well as their solidarity and support to our troops in the Persian Gulf," Chapin said.

Help Hospitalized Veterans is an offshoot of Vietnam Gift Pac, which Chapin, a former San Diego real estate developer, founded in 1987 after a chance meeting with a Navy corpsman wounded in Vietnam.

The organization raised money to package and ship gift packages, each containing $9.12 worth of 28 personal items, including medicated foot powder, instant lemonade to flavor foul-tasting water and first aid cream for jungle sores.

Chapin, an Army veteran, founded Help Hospitalized Veterans in 1970. The non-profit organization provides hospitalized veterans with arts and crafts kits.

In a related development, the Postal Service urged Americans mailing Christmas gifts to service personnel in the gulf region to mail early.

The Postal Service said that to ensure timely delivery to the Middle East, air parcels should be mailed by Nov. 16, letters and cards by Nov. 26, parcel airlift mail by Nov. 10 and space-available mail by Nov. 3.

Marines undergo new kind of training

Copley News Service

WITH THE MARINES, Saudi Arabia — For the men of the Camp Pendleton, Calif.-based "Striking three-nine," deployment to Saudi Arabia has meant training for a kind of war Marines never have fought.

The Third Battalion, Ninth Marines are quick to point out that they are exactly where they think Marines are supposed to be: at the forefront of the U.S. forces mobilized for Operation Desert Shield.

"The Camp Pendleton Marines are the leading force, and we're the leading force of all," said First Sgt. Ernest Matkin at the battalion's camp in northeastern Saudi Arabia.

Matkin and Lt. Col. Larry Wright, the battalion commander, said the unit is closer to Iraqi-occupied Kuwait than any other American fighting unit.

In training, which includes a likely primary Iraqi invasion route, the Marines' defense is nothing like the solid, fixed battle line normally associated with defensive positions.

The vastness of the desert requires a mobile, mechanized style of fighting in which the infantry, normally the Marines' primary weapon, becomes a supporting force for the tanks, aircraft and artillery, which will do the main fighting, Major Michael Brebel said.

"Air and artillery and armor are going to be the main duelers," Brebel said. "The infantry will be used to breach" enemy "obstacles, stop their infantry if dismounted" and clean up after armor punches through, he said.

The Marines, who previously have never participated in this mechanized form of maneuver warfare, have been training for this style of fighting since they arrived in Saudi Arabia Aug. 20, Brebel said.

"It's all mechanized, combined arms training," he said.

The infantry battalion has been reinforced with a company of M-60 tanks, a Light Armored Infantry company with LAV-25 armored vehicles, a company of amphibious tractors — which double as troop carriers on land — and artillery.

And it has been able to get Marine attack helicopters and fighter-bombers to practice close air support missions almost daily.

6 siblings members of military; 3 have reunion in Saudi Arabia

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Navy Yeoman 1st Class Patrice Davis says a military career might not be for everybody. But her family is the sort recruiters dream about.

Of the eight children in the Elmore family of Charleston, S.C., six are in U.S. military service, and three are assigned to Saudi Arabia.

On Saturday, Patrice, the oldest at 28, held an emotional reunion with her sister, Army Sgt. 1st Class Darnetha Elmore, 25, a member of an intelligence unit, and her brother, Army Spec. Loris Elmore, 21, a paratrooper.

It was their first meeting since all three became part of the 170,000 Americans deployed under Operation Desert Shield following Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

There were grins and hugs as the trio met at a hotel in Dhahran where Patrice, known to friends as "Mo," works in the Joint Information Bureau operated by the Saudi Information Ministry and the U.S. military command.

Then they went off to Patrice's room to talk family and call their mother, Sandra, back in Charleston.

Patrice, normally based in Alexandria, Va., said she volunteered for duty in Saudi Arabia because "aside from the ones on ships," many Navy people don't get the chance to travel. She said she checked with her husband and two days later was on her way.

Loris, a member of the 82nd Airborne Division, said that when members of his unit learned he had two sisters in Saudi Arabia, "they said, 'Well, you don't get much mail, so they're mailing your family over here.'"

The three agreed that being together in the potential war zone was worrisome.

"I think about it but I don't dwell on it," said Patrice.

Darnetha, describing herself as "a sort of upbeat person," said of her brothers and sisters that she didn't mind being in Saudi Arabia "as long as I can see them and know they're OK. I try not to think about the bad stuff."

Loris said it helps to know his sisters "can handle it if they ever get into a situation.

"I still worry a lot, but I know they're going to be coming home on their own two feet," he said.

Patrice said she enlisted in the Navy while still in high school and left for the service 13 days after graduation. "I was being a rebel," she recalled. "My father wanted me to go to college. I just wanted to do my own thing."

Her example led the others to follow suit, although only one brother, Lee Anthony, 27, opted for the Navy. He is assigned to a ship based at Charleston.

Also in the military are brothers Tracy, 22, an Army specialist based at Flint Hills Farm, Va., and Donnie, 20, a specialist serving with an Army Signal Corps unit in South Korea.

Two other sisters in Charleston are Michelle, 24, a patient care assistant, and Sherita, 14, who lives with their mother.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be re-filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!
Often asked questions:
Is it worthwhile for adults also?
Yes! Our current carrier force is already 65% adult and 35% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
•ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
•MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
•COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
•YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
•SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.
How much money can I make as a carrier?
Depending on the size of the route(s) from $200 to $600 monthly! Some motor routes make even more. Although no motor routes are expected to be available, depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!
How long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!
When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 AM Monday - Friday and 7 AM on Saturday and Sunday
Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
RESERVE YOUR ROUTE NOW!
