Know sumpin!... there is a Rattlesnake Club in Muleshoe! Rattlesnakes too... if you don't believe it, journey out to where they are kept east and south of the city in an old barracks and that his... rattle and strike will put the finishing touches to the conviction!

A small bit of advice... might be very wise to take along the veteran of the show for your visit who is Ronald Simpson, president of the local Rattlesnake Club, who travels among the serpents as though they were his best friends. He actually turns his back to some 20, just as though they were not there, but he uses proper precaution in picking up the snakes, caution in milking them and getting 'rid' of them, once he has them in his hands.

Memberships of the Muleshoe Club covers a wide area... some of the members live in Arkansas and come here for meetings and special occasions.

The captured snakes are housed in sand-floored cages in an old barracks on the Walter Rieker farm. Long-range plans are to build a building for a reptile show - place and some of the money is being raised by selling the venom from the rattlers and from membership fees.

Simpson became interested in snakes some eight years ago at the age of 10. His interest came about quite by accident as he was chasing a lizard into a hole and out came the snake, which he caught with a stick by raking it into a tin can. Since that time, he has searched out the rattlers, caged them and continued to add to the collection.

Others became interested and the membership now total about

26. The most rattlers caught in one day is 36 and the most in the one hole was 26.

Simpson and others attend the Okeene Rattlesnake hunt and the Roundup at Sweetwater and have hunts in the local area quite often.

Feeding the snakes in captivity is not really a problem, Simpson said. They eat many things.

Michael Bennett, 17, has been hunting rattlers some five years. He almost had the catch of the year in the bag when he spied an albino rattler in the sand south of town. But, before he could capture it, it slithered into a hole in the sand bank. All digging... serious, furious digging, too, took place but to no avail. So somewhere out there is an Albino rattler.

Simpson demonstrated how to 'get rid' of the snakes once they are in hand. They are quick in striking motion and a sudden downward flick of the wrist in the proper method used in putting them down.

Ask if he had been bitten during his eight years of handling the poisonous snakes, he said "Yes, once. That was just after I had milked a rattler and was putting it down and it struck me on the thumb. The result was no worse than a bee sting as very little venom remained to be injected by the fang. My hand was slightly swollen for a few days.

Two of the most 'violent' of the caged snakes were two Paria ratters, not long in captivity. They rattle, hiss and strike at the least noise. They didn't take too kindly to the flash of the Journal camera either. (We now have cameras snakes have been striking at.)

Simpson and Bennett stay busy in their spare time keeping records on the membership and hunting additional snakes as well as compiling additional information about the life of serpents... for instance the normal span of life of each type of snake.

The club members interest is not confined to snakes alone. In the bedroom of the Simpson

Entertainment Planned For Juniors, Seniors

The Parent League have exciting entertainment planned for the Junior and Seniors following their annual banquet.

The 'fabulous' Bowman Brothers, Lubbock, will be bringing their music and songs to Muleshoe for the Juniors and Seniors' enjoyment on May 20. This Combo will be "raved" about for months, a spokesman said.

Celebration Funds Needed

Funds are lacking for the annual July 4 celebration. The campaign which began here last week now stands at the $480, figure with approximately $190, pledged to add to this.

A fabulous fireworks display again this year, however, expanded plan is in the mill for much more in comparison to previous years.

Needed funds for the program planned for the entertainment of the public is $1,500 - which leaves the amount needed standing at the $1,000 mark.

This annual celebration has, in the past, brought several thousand people to Muleshoe for the day and should bring the attendance up from the usual 5 to 6 thousand as in the past to the 10,000 mark this year if entertainment which is on the agenda can be brought in.

To do this, money must be available for this worthwhile cause.

Guest speaker for the evening will be Speaker of the House Ben Barnes.

The celebration committee chairman, Harvey Bass said plans are in the making for

Cancer's Warning Signals Act As Radar For Body

If every American knew and acted promptly on Cancer's Warning Signals thousands of lives could be saved and untold suffering prevented each year from cancer, according to the American Cancer Society.

Years of experience have developed evidence that these Warning Signals are part of the body's early warning system — a radar that signals the presence of disease. If any Signal appears, and persists for more than two weeks, it should be brought to the attention of a doctor even if there is no pain. He can determine what it means. Chances are it is not cancer. Or, it may be a precancerous condition which can be easily removed and cancer prevented.

Cancer's Warning Signals Act As Radar For Body

However, if the Signal should be a symptom of cancer, the patient has a much better chance of survival and cure if he heeds the Warning Signal than if he ignores it.

MOST CURABLE

This is based on the fact that cancer is among the most curable of the major killing diseases — if it is found early, and treated promptly and properly.

However, the patient's responsibility for his own health does not end with the Warning Signals. Cancer is often a "silent disease" and does not always give an early warning of its presence. Thus, a patient has a better chance of avoiding the disease by not only knowing the Warning Signals, but by having an annual physical checkup.

Mrs. Delbert Watson Among Capitol Visitors

Mrs. Delbert Watson, Muleshoe, was among 235 farm housewives and rural community leaders who took part in a National Farmers' Union Ladies Legislative Fly-In to Washington.

Women attending were from Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Colorado, and Texas and spent four action-packed days in the Nations Capitol.

"While the main purpose of the trip was to register their views with the members of Congress and administration officials, the schedule did provide a White House tour, a visit to Mount Vernon and other planned sight-seeing trips," Mrs. Watson told the Journal.

"This fifth 'Fly-In' of the year and the largest ever conducted in the three years since Farmers Union, originated this jet-age type of lobbying in which people speak for themselves on pressing issues."

Highlights of the four-day schedule included a Senatorial breakfast on Monday which included an appearance by Miss Betty Furness, a new Presidential advisor on Consumer Affairs, a House breakfast on Wednesday, a session with Secretary and Mrs. Orville Freeman.

man and the opportunity to visit the House and Senate.

Mrs. Watson said, "Most of the people have to view the House and Senate from the galleries, but we were allowed down on the floors where we saw the desks of Senators Mike Mansfield, Dirksen, Ralph Yarborough and others."

"At the House breakfast, Congressmen were present from Texas, Indiana, Minnesota and South Dakota, among them Congressmen George Mahon of Texas, chairman of the influential House Appropriations Committee.

Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman today told a group that the condition of American agriculture is "fundamentally good," but he expressed deep concern over the farm price slump of the past 7 months.

The farm wives are in Washington to bring their views before Congress and other government officials. Their fly-in was sponsored by the National Farmers Union.

Freeman congratulated the group for their interest in government farm and food policy and urged farm women throughout the nation to become equally involved in efforts to strengthen the farm economy.

"I know that disappointment over the recent drop in farm prices," he said, "is doubly keen because of the remarkable progress in farm income in 1966. Gross farm income and net per farm income set all-time records last year, and all of us hoped the upward spiral would continue without interruption."

Freeman said he believed that the current price slump was only temporary, and that prices

Obscene Calls Made Can Be Traced; Penalty Stiff

It appears to be the season for nuisance and obscene telephone calls," said G. F. Kehoe, district manager for General Telephone Co. "Several recent calls have been brought to my attention."

Kehoe indicated that such calls can be traced when the situation warrants it, and pointed out that State laws provide stiff penalties for convicted offenders.

"The most effective way to deal with calls of this nature is to hang up," Kehoe said. "Treat them just as in a face-to-face encounter, where you would avoid engaging in a personal conversation with a stranger. This will normally put a stop to this kind of harassment."

If you receive persistent, annoying calls, call the telephone company business office, and we will be happy to assist you," he said.

many cancers can be found in their early stages even if the patient has noticed no symptoms. For example, the Pap test can detect cancer of the uterus before the symptom of bleeding. A "procto" examination of the rectum and lower bowel can find cancers when they are still very early. Thus, the best insurance against cancer is — see your doctor regularly, and learn Cancer's Warning Signs.

home are glass cages filled with different types of snakes and the unique Collard Lizard and Iguanas.

The Collard Lizards are something to see... swift as a breeze they travel across the country on two hind feet, creating the illusion of a flying hop. The distance they can cover in a brief second is amazing. The tops of one of the cages of bull snakes is taped down. Chamber of Commerce manager Bob Janca made the tour of the reptile sites with Simpson, Bennett and the Journal reporter and noticing the tape, Janca asked "Why is the top of this cage taped down?"

In a non-chalant manner, Simpson replied "Oh, they get to moving around in there and sometime push the top open and get out into the house and we have to go to the trouble of hunting them."

In most people's case... it wouldn't be the trouble of hunting them... it would be the hurry of finding them. But, the club is educational and venom is important to the medical profession.

The group has plans of forming a Junior Rattlesnake Club to train the younger set how to identify the poisonous type snake, how to hunt and handle them. Also membership is open to the adult club.

Officers of the club may be contacted for membership. They are Ronald Simpson, president; Carl Anders, vice-president; Michael Bennett secretary and Clovis Winningham, treasurer.

The Club offers their services to anyone who has rattlesnake infested land anywhere in the area.

would again climb later this year. Farm prices on April 15 were 9.6 percent lower than they were in August of 1966 and 7.2 percent lower than they were a year ago.

The Secretary, however, pointed out that price levels of those basic commodities that come under farm programs have remained relatively stable.

Excellent wheat harvests and feed grain crops in a number of other nations have taken the strong edge off the export demand for these basic commodities, he said, but despite this, wheat prices are still 16 cents a bushel higher than a year ago, and corn prices are 5 cents a bushel higher.

"Variables beyond our control," he said, "can be expected to produce temporary price slumps in the basic commodities from time to time. But over the long run, the New Farm Programs of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965 will prove their price stabilizing effectiveness."

He warned that diminishing rural strength in the Congress posed a constant threat that farm programs could be abolished, and called for unified farmer support of those programs. He reported that a poll of hands taken at a series of recent Midwest farm meetings had addressed indicated that the overwhelming majority of farmers were opposed to farm program repeal.

The Secretary then turned to the matter of those perishable commodities not covered by farm programs. Much of the farm price decline in recent months has occurred in these commodities, he said.

"Hog production and marketing are running about 25 percent above a year ago," he said, "and hog prices are down 23 percent. Beef production is up 4 percent and grain-fattened cattle about 8 percent... and lamb prices are down 8 1/2 percent. Lamb and mutton production is down a fifth, and egg production is up 9 percent. Orange production is up 34 percent, and orange prices are down 60 percent."

The challenge here, he said, is for farmers to adopt "self help methods to balance supply with demand in these commodities."

ties. The government can be of only limited help when there are no programs.

"In this New Era of American agriculture," he said, "marketing has become equally as important as production. Whatever farmers can do in their cooperatives on their organizations to strengthen their position at the marketing bargaining table will serve to strengthen prices."

Commenting on his recent Midwest trip, the Secretary noted that "greater bargaining power for farmers" was frequently heard demand. "This is nothing new to you," he said, "Farmers Union leaders were saying this 20 years ago. But now I'm sure that this is an idea whose time has come."

Freeman said the Department of Agriculture is strongly supporting legislation now in hearings in the Senate that would assure farmers the right to organize and that the Department was also studying new legislation and amendments to existing legislation that would extend to farmers some of the bargaining rights now enjoyed by organized labor and other segments of the economy. He described these measures as a potential "National Agricultural Relations Act."

In conclusion, he said: "Despite the recent price setbacks, I'm heartened by the overall progress we've made under the New Farm programs. I believe we can continue that progress if we give those programs a full, fair test... if farm cooperatives and marketing... and if we as the youngsters say — we all keep our cool."

Three Muleshoe students are candidates for degrees at West Texas State University's spring graduation May 21, as announced by Dr. Walter H. Jamper, academic vice-president.

They are James Brown, Robert Garlington, and Delores Goodwin.

The convocation will be at 4:30 p.m. in the WTSU physical education building, and speaker will be Rabbi Levi A. Alan of the Temple Emanuel of Dallas.

Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dee Brown, Rt. 3, is an agricultural major and a candidate for the Bachelor of Science degree.

An art major, Robert Garlington is a candidate for the Bachelor of Science degree. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Garlington, 206 W. 10th. Daughter of Mrs. P.O. Goodwin, 811 W. Halsell, Miss Goodwin is an elementary education major and a candidate for the Bachelor of Science degree.

H. E. Reeder, Jr., was a medical patient. He has gone home. Mr. and Mrs. Sam Damron were congratulated on the birth of a baby daughter, born May 12, 1952, named Debra Louise. Muleshoe high school had graduating, 51 boys and girls in the class of 1952. Jacques Bonwell was the valedictorian of the class and Emily Jarigan was salutatorian.

John Thomas Crow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Crow, is a candidate for the Bachelor of Science Administration degree at commencement exercises to be conducted at the University of Texas May 31.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat Bobo and W. G. Case attended the annual convention of the Texas Bankers Association, held in Galveston over the weekend. Mr. Bobo fished while the bankers conferred. All made Galveston by train.

First 1952 crop of alfalfa is being harvested in the Muleshoe country this week. The National Alfalfa Dehydrating & Milling Co., local mill, began the season by cutting hay on the farm of Allen Harris, northeast of town.

Otis Neel and H. M. Skinner, two new subscribers to the Journal from Bula, California, reported Monday they have all their cotton planted. Plenty of moisture was reported in their neighborhood.

Delma McCarty purchased a new 1937 Ford V-8 sedan from the Muleshoe Motor Co. Saturday of last week.

Ask any boy and he will tell you... IT'S A WONDERFUL FEELING

When winter is past and most of the spring rains have come and gone, what a joy it is for a boy to go barefoot and feel the warm moist earth oozing up between his toes and the hot sun on his back... It's a wonderful feeling — remember?

If it has been some time since you were in the warm company of like-minded Christians and basked in the warmth and love of God's glory and grace as manifested in His Church, attend this coming Sunday. It's a wonderful feeling to sense that you are in tune with God, your fellow man, and the universe.

"I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the House of the Lord." Psalm 122:1.

Veterans Q's and A's

Q -- What insurance coverage is available to men now in service?

A -- Every man now in service is automatically covered with $10,000 SGLI at a cost of $2.00 per month which is deducted from his pay. He can, upon written request to the military, reduce this to $5,000 coverage, or refuse coverage.

Q -- Why did I not receive my pension check on March 1, 1967?

A -- Your payment was suspended on February 1, 1967, because you failed to return your income questionnaire. Payment of pension is based on a veteran's income from other sources and the number of dependents. This annual report is required in order to ascertain the correct amount of payment, if any, due.

Q -- Is any allowance paid for funeral expenses for a person who has had military service?

A -- An allowance of $250 is paid toward the burial expense of any person who had other than dishonorable wartime military service, or who had a service-incurred disability resulting from any military service. This expense is not payable if funeral expenses are met from sources other than members of the immediate family, i. e., if they buy fraternal organization burial insurance, etc. An additional allowance for transportation of the body is allowed if the eligible veteran died in a VA hospital.

Foreign Radio Women Travel America

By JOY MILLER
AP Women's Editor

NEW YORK (AP)—Family life in the United States is not at all the way it is portrayed in the television series she has seen abroad, the lady broadcaster from Lebanon said.

With relief in her voice, Mrs. Edvick Jureidini Shayboub continued: "I felt that life as reflected in the TV series was not real and I wanted to study family life here to learn what it is really like."

"Abroad we have the idea that American women are bossy, for example. But I have not found it so, so far."

By the time she ends her 70-day tour of American cities in Atlanta May 3 at the annual convention of the American Women in Radio and Television (AWRT), she hopes to have a complete impression of just how American families live.

Mrs. Shayboub, a small, dark-haired woman of 44, is one of three women broadcasters from other countries making the tour under the auspices of the AWRT's Educational Foundation. It's the fifth year for the program.

Others making the tour are Felicity Muganwa from Uganda and Mrs. Goh Thean Chye from Malaysia.

Felicity Muganwa, a part 29-year-old senior program assistant in Kampala, Uganda, speaks English; French; Runyoro, her mother language; Luganda, the major language of Uganda and "fair swahili." She is one of 13 children and daughter of a retired judge.

"American women are very hard-working and warm-hearted," observed Miss Muganwa. Commenting on women in Uganda, she said:

"Twenty years ago women were slaves. Now they're given equal chances in government and at home. Almost all the women are working outside the home in offices or at selling or trade. Men accept it, although quite a few still feel they shouldn't, but even wives of cabinet ministers go into offices."

She has always wanted to do what she's doing now—"there are more men in broadcasting," she said with a grin—and she's supremely happy.

The two women agreed that there's no discrimination in their countries against women in the profession, but in Lebanon, said Mrs. Shayboub, there's a certain resentment.

Mrs. Shayboub, widow of an engineer, has two grown children: a son who is an architect and a daughter who is working for a master's degree in psychology.

She translates books into Arabic, has written prize-winning books of poetry and is now working for her Ph.D. in Arabic Literature. Her primary aim send you a tax deduction job, however, is directing a statement evaluating the merchandise program for women on a note with your articles. File in Lebanon, she said, men are this statement so you'll have it still the boss, "We like to keep handy next year."

In Fashion

One of the attractive styles this season is the elasticized neckline which enables the wearer to show her shoulders should she choose. Crepes and cottons, as well as other fabrics, fashion these soft shoulder dresses.

A striking garment of black and white is being shown in some of the shops. It has an elongated blouse of black silk over a full short skirt of white cotton.

Long ear bobs are quite the thing this spring. They may be rings, bangles or balls of gold, silver or jewels.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond R. Jones

Methodist Chapel Scene Of Vows

The lovely new chapel of First Methodist Church of Odessa was the setting for March 25 wedding vows of Miss Julie Ann McAdams of Odessa, formerly of Muleshoe and Raymond R. Jones of Wink. The double-ring ceremony was solemnized at 2 p.m. by Dr. Orbin Turner, before an altar exquisitely adorned with a basket arrangement of white gladioli and jade foliage, flanked by two candelabra set with tall white candles and entwined by foliage and large white satin bows.

Traditional wedding music was presented by organist Mrs. Ashley Lawson. She accompanied Mrs. Nojem Libson as she sang "The Twelfth of Never," "Because" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. McAdams, 1920 North Golden, Odessa, formerly of Muleshoe. Mrs. Lodie Jenkins of Wink is the bridegroom's mother.

Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride was lovely in a street-length gown of white crepe and lace. Her empress lace bodice fashioned with portrait neckline and long tapering sleeves, dropped at back into a unique lace cape, accented by self band and bow. The dress was designed and made by the bride. Her veil of silk illusion, edged with lace motifs, covered a dainty lace pillbox headpiece, touched by velvet flowers and seed pearls. The bride carried an elegant cascade of white roses, feathered carnations lily of the valley tied with white satin streamers and love knots upon a white lace-covered Bible, given the bride by the grandmother McAdams on her fourth birthday.

Miss Jan McCall attended the bride as maid of honor. Bridesmatron was Mrs. Everett McAdams of Clint, the bride's sister-in-law. Miss Suzanne McBurnett served as bridesmaid. Street-length A Line styled with long tapered sleeves of ice blue crepe were chosen for them. Their headpieces were matching bandeaus, sprinkled with tiny blue beads and caught to brief silk illusion veiling. Attendants wore brief white gloves and carried cascades of ice-blue carnations showered with blue streamers. The bridegroom chose Philip Binge, Odessa, as his best man. Groomsman was Chuck Minica.

If you're planning A WEDDING

Behind every beautiful, well-run wedding stands an efficient, and often unsung, heroine—the mother of the bride. These days, it seems that she has more than ever to do, and her roles from the time the engagement is announced until the day is over are many and varied.

She is a shopping consultant in the early stages of the wedding plans. Many a bride-to-be relies upon her mother's experience and taste for help in choosing the wedding gown and the trousseau.

She is chief arrangement maker. While most brides play an active part in making wedding and reception arrangements, it is actually the mother's responsibility to see that everything is done as it should be, and in time. This means checking and double-checking with caterer, florist, musicians, photographer—all those professional helpers who are available nowadays to make a wedding run smoothly.

She is a party giver extraordinaire. Whether it's a large party to announce the engagement or a small luncheon for the wedding party, pre-wedding entertaining is an important part of the festivities. Since it is up to the bride's mother to welcome the groom's family into her circle, she may decide to give a very special dinner for the groom's parents.

She is a gift coordinator. It is the bride's mother who will be asked what the bride wants as wedding gifts, and she is in a position to suggest tactfully the right things to the right people.

As gift coordinator, Mother is responsible for any display of wedding gifts, including attractive arrangement of the gift and proper labeling as to donor.

She is official hostess. At the wedding itself, it is the bride's mother who sees that guests are seated according to any pre-arranged plan, and at the reception she is responsible for every aspect of party-giving -- from the way the table looks to the way the food tastes. As at any party, as hostess first, and does her best to see that everyone has a good time.

She is a "clamer-downer" without peer. No matter how endless her own duties seem, she places her guests' welfare first, and keeps a cool head amidst her daughter's excitement. But weddings, after all, are fun, and it's a rare mother who doesn't thoroughly enjoy playing every one of her many roles.

There are two chemical types of bleaches for home use. These are chlorine or oxygen.

Chlorine bleaches are available as liquids and powders. Oxygen bleaches come in powder form.

Chlorine bleaches shouldn't be used on fabrics containing silk, wool, or spandex fibers, or on fabrics with a chlorine-retentive or resin finish. Fabrics with these finishes are usually marked "Do Not Use Chlorine Bleach" on the label. The chlorine bleach could yellow rather than bleach these fabrics, and could cause serious fabric damage.

Liquid chlorine bleaches are fast acting and should be mixed thoroughly with the wash water before clothes are added.

Never use more than one tablespoon of liquid chlorine bleach to one gallon wash water. Never add bleach to rinse water.

Dry chlorine bleach is slower in action than liquid bleach. It doesn't need to be mixed with water before adding to the washing solution.

The whitening effect of fluorescent whiteners present in laundry detergents is reduced by chlorine bleaches. To get maximum effectiveness from both whiteners and bleach, agitate the clothes with the detergent solution for about four minutes before adding the bleach. Oxygen bleaches are safe for all fibers, natural and man-made, and for resin-finish cottons. They are less likely to cause damage to fabric if improperly used than are chlorine bleaches.

Adventure on Smuggler's Island
by Patti Murray

Peering tensely through the glass, Dennis tried to see into the murky, gray-green haze. There was nothing to be seen, nothing at all. He could discern no deeper shadows, no shapes or outlines, no motion of any kind.

As he was about to turn away, a point of light cut through the dimness. The yellowish beam wavered briefly and then winked out. But suddenly it was there again, steadier, stronger this time. Dennis waited. The light blinked off. He wondered, "Could it be another boat? Certainly not in this fog."

Suddenly, Dennis heard someone call him. It was John Montardo.

"Hey Dennis, the girls are really scared. I told them not to worry though."

"Great," said Dennis. "I can't wait to get back to the mainland so I can have a quiet nervous breakdown."

"Gee Captain. You can't chicken out on us now. You're the only one who can steer this crazy tub."

"Cut it out, John. Go tell the girls that we should reach an island pretty soon. There are some around here."

"Oh, Gordy," laughed John. "We're gonna get shipwrecked!"

"Let's hope not," said Dennis.

"A fine picnic this turned out to be," thought Dennis. Was it just that morning that he had asked his dad to lend him the Happy Holiday, their yacht to take Beverly, Marcia, and John for an all-day picnic on Coral Island? Well, anyway his father had consented so off they went--and here they were. A sudden fog had rolled in and placed the Happy Holiday in a mass of dark, churning water.

Suddenly, the yacht bumped a small beach.

"Land, ho!" shouted Dennis.

John and the girls came on the run.

"Don't just stand there, mates," said John. "Let's go ashore!"

Cautiously he and John raised up and peered into the room. They saw two men seated at a table. The table was covered with a faded tablecloth that touched the dirt floor of the cottage. A small, pet-bellied stove stood in one corner and in it a fire was burning. There was a cupboard on the wall by the stove that completed the furnishings.

One of the men got up and opened the door.

"Get out of the door, Ollie," snapped the other man. "Do you want someone to see you?"

"Jake, there ain't no one out there and anyway, I'm hot."

"Come over here," said Jake. "We've got to go over this list of stations again before we burn it."

"You know, Jake," said Ollie. "Sometimes I wonder if being a diamond smuggler pays off. I mean all that running around from station to station and putting those diamonds inside the alarm clocks."

Dennis poked John and led the way back to the girls.

"Looks like we've got a couple of diamond smugglers on our hands!" said Dennis.

The girls looked scared. "Now this is my plan," said Dennis. "I'll go back to the yacht and head for the mainland. John, you try to get that list of stations before they burn it. I'll get back as soon as possible with help. The fog has lifted so it shouldn't take me too long. Girls, do you want to come with me or stay here?"

"We'll stay here," replied Beverly firmly.

"Okay," said Dennis. "See you soon."

Then he was gone.

Suddenly the men came out. Ollie carried a bucket. They headed for the back of the cottage.

Quickly John went into the cottage. On the floor by the stove, there was a crumpled piece of paper. The list! Probably one of the men had attempted to throw the paper into the fire and had missed with-out noticing it.

Suddenly, he heard the men coming back. John looked around for a place to hide. Quickly he darted under the table. The tablecloth was long a sound. Finally, they came out in a clearing. A small cottage was there.

"Well, what do we do now?" asked Beverly.

"I don't know," said Dennis. "Maybe John and I had better sneak up to the window and peek inside, John, you go first!"

"Oh no, Dennis ole buddy, I'll give you the privilege of going first!"

Dennis gulped.

"Well, okay. Here goes!" He crept slowly, quietly up to the open window with John right behind. Distinct voices came from inside.

Cautiously he and John raised up and peered into the room. They saw two men seated at a table. The table was covered with a faded tablecloth that touched the dirt floor of the cottage. A small, pet-bellied stove stood in one corner and in it a fire was burning. There was a cupboard on the wall by the stove that completed the furnishings.

Suddenly, he heard the men coming back. John looked around for a place to hide. Quickly he darted under the table. The tablecloth was long enough so that it would hide him. Luck was with him tonight!

The men came in carrying a bucket of water. They set the bucket down and came over to the table. John held his breath. They got their chairs and drew them over to the stove. Ollie sat down and cracked nuts while Jake talked about different things. John let out his breath slowly.

Meanwhile the girls were frantic.

"What can we do?" asked Marcia.

"Just wait and hope they don't discover John," replied Beverly.

Suddenly they heard a sound in the bushes. Dennis popped out followed by five men from the coastguard.

Dennis asked, "Where's John?"

"He went after the list and the men came back too soon so he had to hide under the table," whispered Marcia.

One of the men said, "Do you know if they have a gun?"

"Not that I saw," replied Dennis.

"Good. We'll surprise them. You kids get back."

The men sneaked up to the door and then flung it open. They rushed in and grabbed the two men, John crawled out from under the table.

"Watch it, sir!" he said. They have a gun.

Dennis, Beverly and Marcia came dashing into the cottage. Two very surprised men looked around.

How could this possibly happen to us?" croaked Ollie.

"Oh, shut up," snapped Jake. The men were led away by four of the coast guards.

Suddenly a man rushed in. "Dad," cried Dennis. "I thought you'd never get here. You missed the excitement! He explained to the others. "I called Dad and told him to come to us here!"

John reached in his pocket and pulled out the crumpled list. "here, sir," he said. "This is a list of the different stations."

"Thank you, Son." Now we can catch the whole smuggling outfit."

"I would like to know what this is all about," said Beverly.

"Well," said the man, "I'll tell you with all the trimmings. They took care of this station and were responsible for getting the diamonds safely to the next station. The diamonds are carefully concealed inside some alarm clocks. When the diamonds reach the last station, a man posing as a traveling clock salesman takes them in to Canada. They are still inside the clocks and only when they reach their destination are they removed."

"But if Jake and Ollie had the clocks, where are they?" asked Marcia.

"I'll bet I know," said Mr. Dirksen. He opened the cupboard and inside were two black briefcases, each containing one dozen alarm clocks.

The man took the briefcases and said, "You will get a reward for aiding in the capture of these men. Now you'd better go home and get some sleep. We will want to ask you some questions in the morning."

They all left the cottage together and walked to the beach. The man from the coast guard got in his boat and left. Then Mr. Dirksen, Dennis, Beverly, John, and Marcia boarded the Happy Holiday and started home. It had been an exciting day.

As they were leaving the island, Marcia looked at it and said softly, "Smuggler's Island--What an exciting place!"

"You bet!" chorused the others.
