Ask Us

Q—I recently heard on the news that the Fed lowered interest rates. What is the "Fed?"

A—The "Fed" or the Federal Reserve, is the central bank of the United States. While the Federal Reserve doesn't actually set interest rates, it controls the supply of money in the economy by establishing monetary policies. In turn, this influences the overall direction of interest rates.

In Brief

Rockets fired

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Muslim rebels today fired rockets at a plane bringing interim President Sibghatullah Mojaddidi back from a visit to Pakistan, officials said. Mojaddidi escaped unharmed but the co-pilot of the plane was struck by shrapnel.

Tehran television said the plane was 65 feet over the Kabul airport runway when it was hit by a surface-to-air missile. The front of the plane was destroyed, according to the report, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus.

Airport officials said three rockets were fired as Mojaddidi's Boeing 727 plane landed late this afternoon. It said two rockets missed but one exploded on the runway in front of the jet, sending shrapnel through the cockpit and injuring the co-pilot.

Doctors said the injury was not believed to be life-threatening.

The plane was bringing Mojaddidi and his entourage back from a three-day official visit to Pakistan.

Lottery sales brisk, local outlets say

1,700 sold at one store by 11 a.m.

Lottery fever gripped Scurry County on the first day of ticket sales, with most retailers reporting brisk sales since early this morning.

"We sold around 500 tickets between 6 and 8 this morning," said Clydine Hinkle, manager of the Town and Country Convenience Store. By 11 a.m., sales had reached 1,700 tickets at the store, which claimed at least 113 winners with a prize payout of approximately $355.

An exact number of winners from any one store can't be accurately calculated since purchasers can redeem winning tickets at any of the outlets throughout the state.

West-T-Go convenience store reported over 1,400 tickets sold since 6 a.m., with at least 115 winners, including one $50 winner and several "entry" tickets for the weekly giveaway.

"We opened at 9 a.m. this morning and have already sold around $500 tickets," said David Lyle of Snyder Lanes, who estimated he paid out around $100 in prize money within the first two hours.

The lottery has not been as exciting for some local retailers, however. Furr's reported its tickets have not yet arrived, while Rip Griffin's and Skinnys on 37th Street did not have their machines working.

The Skinny's location on Coliseum Drive reported it was not able to sell tickets until 9:45 this morning due to computer problems, but had sold approximately 500 since sales began.

On average, retailers said the tickets are being purchased about 10 at a time, with one report that a customer purchased 100 tickets.

Other estimated sales reports as of 11 a.m. included Allsup's, 850; Circle-In Grocery, 700; Allsup's in Hermleigh, 400; D&J Country Corner at Lake Thomas, 200; Best Upholstery, 200; and Handi-Mart, 180.

Lawrence IGA reported that sales were good this morning, but was unsure of the number sold.

Cogdell tables request to raise pay for nurses

Cogdell Memorial Hospital board of managers tabled a request for an increase in base salaries for aides, RNs and LVNs during its May meeting Thursday.

The board also heard a financial and statstical report for April, and adjourned to a Foundation meeting, where it approved a $300 expense.

Lana Chambers, director of nursing for Cogdell, asked the board to consider an increase in nursing salaries. She pointed out that the hospital has lost a number of nurses over the last six months. Many, she said, took positions at area hospitals for higher pay.

Other nurses are moonlighting at other facilities for more wages.

"I feel like we're going to have to do something, and I feel like we're going to have to do something soon," said Chambers.

Her proposal included a increase of $4.25 to $4.50 as a base rate for certified nurse aides, a base rate change of $11 to $12 for first-year RNs, and a rate change of $7 to $7.35 for LVNs. There are other increases as nurses become more experienced.

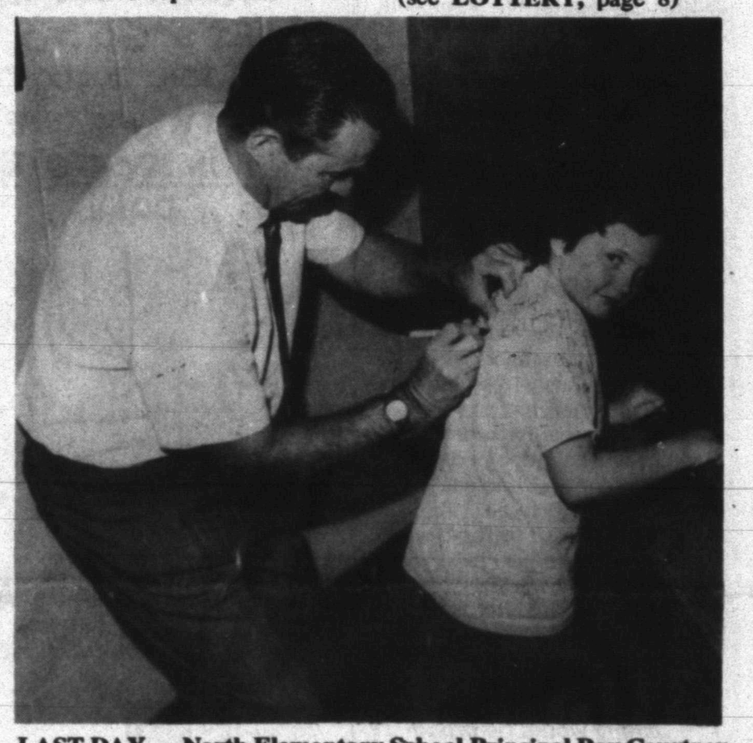

She also asked for an additional 75 cents an hour for RNs covering the emergency room. LVNs would receive an additional 40 cents an hour.

She also recommended overtime for RNs for hours over 84 in a pay period and cash recruitment bonuses of $350 for GNs, $500 for RNs and $750 for nurse managers.

Chambers also said that nurses would concede all merit raises suspended for one year, a cost savings of $80,031 to the hospital.

The decision to table the raises centered around how Cogdell's pay scale matches up with similar

The feller on Deep Creek says, "It's too bad that ignorance isn't painful to the one afflicted with it."

Keeping tabs on our neighbors:

Some four or five years ago, we clipped an article out of the East Side church bulletin. It was entitled, "I like teenagers." Since most grads are still teens, it seems timely.

"I like the fresh way they look at life. I like their confidence, their courage and their optimism. I like they way they walk, limber and friendly.

"A teenager is the great American middleman—too young to be old, too old to be young. They are a fresh breeze in a stale world. They challenge barriers, and they rush old ramparts.

"They are not afraid to stick a pin in the old ballons of yesterday. Teenagers have bright faces, eager smiles and alert eyes. They are energy in motion.

Teenagers are the doctors of tomorrow, the mothers and fathers, the teachers, the bosses, the senators, the presidents. Teenagers make things happen.

"Alexander Hamilton in the American Revolution was a teenager. Mozart was a famous musician at 13. Napoleon was an officer in the army at 16. Josiah reformed Israel as a teenager.

Longfellow was a full-fledged college professor at 19. Alexander the Great was a general of the army that conquered the world at 16, and Andrew Johnson fought against the British when he was 14.

The same spirit fills many teenagers today. When it comes to young people, most adults forget to remember...I like teens. It would be a sorry, stagnant, boring, standstill world without them."

O.G. Nieman, in the Hereford Brand, says the formula for a successful commencement speech is as easy as 1-2-3.

Tell a printable joke. Be brief. Sit down.

Bob Hope did it the best a few years ago when he told a graduating class in California:

"Young ladies and gentlemen. I am told you are going out in the world today.

"Don't."

He then sat down.

Travel agents say...

Enjoy cheap air fare while you can

NEW YORK (AP) — Travelers better enjoy cheap air fares while they can, because the latest fare war may help kill some wounded airlines, giving survivors the power to raise prices, an industry official says.

"While this bargain basement summer ticket sale is attractive to consumers on face value, its long-term impact could hurt travelers," said Philip Davidoff, president of the American Society of Travel Agents.

"This promotion will be extremely costly to the industry," Davidoff said in a statement Thursday. "It could easily push weaker airlines over the edge at great cost to consumers."

Three sickly carriers, Trans World Airlines, America West Airlines and Continental Airlines, are now flying under Chapter 11 protection in bankruptcy court. Three others, Pan American World Airways, Eastern Airlines and Midway Airlines, died in Chapter 11 last year.

Some observers believe that once the weaklings are gone, the stronger carriers could start gouging their customers.

Others in the industry dispute this view, saying three or more carriers are enough to keep the market competitive, assuming they continue to compete on routes between most cities.

However the airline consolidation plays out, the struggling airline industry, which has lost about $6 billion over the past two years, seems certain to feel the pinch from this fare war.

Although travelers in search of new bargain fares are tying up airline reservations phones, analysts and many industry executives doubt the fare war will bring in enough new passengers to offset losses the carriers will suffer from the cheaper tickets.

"All prospects for a profitable summer are now doomed," said Julius Maldutis, airline analyst at Salomon Brothers Inc.

Increased phone traffic doesn't necessarily translate into more business for the airlines.

"Most of the activity is people who are on the books already who are now trying to find a cheaper way, get a refund or reissue their tickets," said Al Kolakowski, senior vice president of sales at Delta Air Lines.

"I don't think it's a money-maker," Kolakowski said of the latest fare cut.

Northwest Airlines, which started the fare battle Tuesday night by allowing an adult and child to fly together for the price of one ticket, disputed suggestions that the sale will be a bust.

The discount fare was expanded Wednesday when American Airlines responded to Northwest by chopping the price of its cheapest tickets in half for travel in the lower 48 states.

"I think it's a pretty safe deduction to think those people are being brought in off the sidelines," Northwest spokesman Jon Austin said.

American's senior vice president for marketing, Michael W. Gunn, dismissed some of the gloomier predictions about the impact of the sale.

"It could be anywhere from a slight negative to neutral," Gunn said. The sale might even make a small amount of money if more traffic is stimulated than American expects, Gunn said.

Yeltsin's announcement could complicate summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Boris Yeltsin's announcement he will not seek a second term as Russia's president in 1996 makes him somewhat a lame duck. And it will complicate the summit meeting here in mid-June and foreign policy planning over the next four years.

Of course, it could be a ploy by Yeltsin to take some of the heat off as the largest of the former Soviet republics struggles to adjust to a painful conversion to free-market economics. "Prices are going to go up even more," Yeltsin admitted to exasperated shoppers in a food store the other day.

And then again, Yeltsin may consider the problems so stressful or overwhelming that he genuinely has decided that once around the track is enough and that younger leaders should be encouraged to step forward.

In any event, here in Washington, where plans for the mid-June summit are proceeding, the announcement must be factored in. Immediately after signing an amended START missile-reduction treaty Saturday in Lisbon, Portugal, Secretary of State James A. Baker III resumed negotiations with Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev on even deeper reductions.

Baker said they made progress. Kozyrev stretched out his hands, only inches apart, to show reporters the two sides were that close. However close they may be in devising a smaller mix of missiles, bombers and submarines, Yeltsin's announcement is an added incentive to get the job done.

The START treaty took more than nine years to negotiate. The protocol signed Saturday to make Ukraine, Kazakhstan and Belarus signatories took nearly six months more. Even though both the United States and Russia are committed to deeper cuts, the devil often turns up in the details, stretching out the work beyond anyone's expectations.

Planning assistance for Russia's conversion to a market economy also is a long-term proposition, and in making those plans it's easier to deal with a leadership that is likely to remain in power for a long time.

Yeltsin's announcement might encourage both sides to cram more into the next four years than initially planned.

Russia retains considerable nuclear firepower under Yeltsin, and even if there is a second round of cuts Russia will remain a nuclear force.

Having Yeltsin's Russia as not only a friend but an ally makes those missiles less worrisome. In fact, in global politics, a nuclear ally gives added weight to U.S. positions, in dealing with China, for instance.

Nor has there been any question about Yeltsin's determination to uproot communism in Russia and to adopt democratic ways.

That his successor would continue down those paths is not a foregone conclusion.

Husband's Fate Is Sealed By Another Woman's Kiss

DEAR ABBY: During our four years of marriage, there have been a number of occasions when I've questioned my husband's fidelity. For example:

My "Mel" was in the hospital for a few days undergoing minor surgery when his secretary forwarded his office mail to the house. I went through it to see if anything needed immediate attention — perhaps a bill to pay. One envelope looked like a business letter, so I opened it. It was from a very attractive businesswoman we had both met at a convention recently. She said she is looking forward to seeing Mel in Tokyo soon! (Mel travels to Japan on business, and evidently she travels, too.) She enclosed her business card on which there was a bright red lipstick "kiss"! I was shocked, and now I'm suspicious.

Mel says I'm being stupid — that many businesswomen put their lip imprints on their business cards. Is this true, or could there be something "personal" going on here?

MEL'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: I hate to judge your husband guilty on circumstantial evidence, but yes, I would say there could be something personal going on.

When a woman puts her lip print on her business card, the message is not very subtle, and the business could also be pleasure.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I have started to see a woman who is in her middle 60s, but she thinks I believe that she is 10 years younger. Also, she has had some facial improvements, which she thinks no one knows about. She denies getting Social Security, which I know she gets. She is truly a lovely lady, very attractive, lively, loves to dance and play cards. She is very active socially and has many friends.

I do not mind about the age deception, nor the facial improvements. As a matter of fact, I believe every woman deserves a lot of credit for doing everything she can in order to look her best, but I would respect her more if she broke down and told me the truth. It would make no difference to me. In fact, it would clear the air.

I would never volunteer that I know all of the above. Even if she were to tell me, I would bite my tongue off before I'd say, "So, what else is new?"

NO NAME, INITIALS OR CITY

DEAR NO NAME: I hope you realize that your letter will probably initiate an epidemic of unsolicited true confessions.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: How would you define "immediate family"? Are in-laws considered immediate family?

This may be a dumb question, but if my wife's sister is my sister-in-law, is her husband my brother-in-law? And, would he be considered "immediate family"? I need an answer to this question to settle an argument.

FRANCIS BASAK IN CLARENCE, PA.

DEAR FRANCIS: According to Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, the husband of your wife's sister is your brother-in-law.

The Los Angeles Family History Center defines "immediate family" as: one's grandparents, parents, brothers, sisters, spouse, children and grandchildren.

"In-laws" are extended family — as are aunts, uncles and cousins.

EPA will require sludge testing before permit ok'd

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Public opposition to plans to spread New York City sludge in West Texas has prompted federal regulators to ask the company to follow federal guidelines when it tests the waste for contaminants.

Phil Charles, a spokesman for the Environmental Protection Agency, said officials will meet with MERCO Joint Venture to come up with what he called a sample analysis plan.

MERCO will start spreading sludge in July but won't have a federal permit requring it to follow federal testing guidelines for several months. But Chares said the EPA will ask MERCO to start following federal guidelines as soon as it starts spreading sludge.

MERCO has registered with the state to spread the sludge, but the EPA has asked it to apply for a National Pollutant Discharge Elimination system permit.

More workers commute to their jobs alone

WASHINGTON (AP) — Russ Hogya is one of the 84.2 million Americans who drove themselves to work — alone — in 1990, shunning such alternatives as mass transit and carpooling.

And he had plenty of company. Census Bureau figures released Thursday said 73.2 percent of all workers, despite much cajoling to do otherwise, decided not to let someone else do the driving that year.

In 1980, 64.4 percent of all workers commuted alone.

Hogya, an assistant manager for Bell Atlantic Network Services Inc., had a simple defense: It would take him two extra hours each day to get to work and back on public transportation, traveling from one Maryland suburb of Washington to another.

"I would have to take the bus to the subway, go into D.C. to come back out of D.C., and then I'd have to catch another bus — to go about 12 miles," Hogya said. If he drives, he can park free.

The Census figures showed that only 13.4 percent of workers carpooled in 1990, down from 19.7 percent a decade earlier, and that mass transit was used by only 5.3 percent of workers, down from 6.4 percent.

"The '80s were not kind years to public transit," said Chip Bishop of the American Public Transit Association.

Government officials, as well as advocates of ride-sharing options, blamed the decrease in mass transit and carpooling on changes in commuting patterns as companies moved to the suburbs, along with decreases in gasoline prices and an increase in two-career couples or single parents with children.

Cuts in federal subsidies were cited by mass transit advocates.

Mark Wright of the Association for Commuter Transportation said the Census findings were not unexpected, because many people face the same roadblocks as Hogya.

"Most metro mass transit systems were designed with sort of a suburb-to-central-city pattern of commute," Wright said. Suburb-to-suburb service generally "doesn't exist at the levels commuters would find convenient."

The Census Bureau said 84.2 million people drove themselves to work in 1990, an increase of 22 million over a decade earlier. The mean travel time lengthened 42 seconds, to 22.4 minutes, said the bureau, which based the data on responses to the long-form Census questionnaire mailed to about 17.7 million households in 1990.

"We hope this serves as the famous wake-up call we've been hearing about in terms of our choice of transportation," said Federal Transit Administrator Brian W. Clymer.

The increase in commuting time may sound insignificant, but it translates to "21/2 million new hours of single-occupancy commuting every day that we didn't have 10 years ago," Clymer said.

While Clymer said the actual number of rides on public transit systems remained essentially static over the decade, the Census reported that the number of workers grew by 19.1 percent.

The movement of companies to the suburbs had an impact on carpooling, Wright said.

"It's easier to match people up for carpools if they're going predictable places at predictable times," Wright said. As people move further away to find affordable housing while their workplaces move to the suburbs, "they may find it more difficult to carpool."

Texas' tuberculosis case rate jumps

AUSTIN (AP) — The American Lung Association of Texas says it's alarmed by a jump in the Texas tuberculosis rate to fourth in the United States in 1991, compared with seventh the previous year.

"We're clearly going in the wrong direction," said Dr. Jeffrey Starke, association board member and chairman of a state Department of Health advisory committee on tuberculosis.

The state had 2,525 tuberculosis cases in 1991, up from 2,242 in 1990, the association said. That gives Texas a rate of 14.6 per 100,000 population last year, up from 13.2 in 1990, according to figures from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control.

States with higher rates were New York, Hawaii and California.

Seven areas in Texas areas were listed among the 40 worst in the United States.

The national TB rate last year was 10.4 people per 100,000, with 26,283 cases.

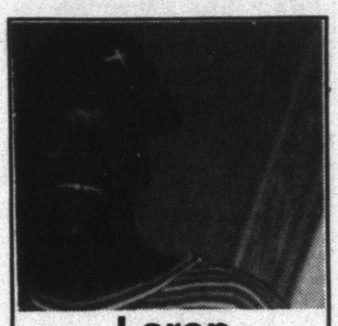

Tuberculosis, a contagious lung disease spread through the air, has begun a comeback after dropping sharply in the second half of this century. Among those it hits are people weakened by the AIDS virus.

60th reunion set Saturday

Help yourself by discovery

By Phillip Alder

Yesterday we looked at a hand in which a defender had to make an unusual play to avoid sacrificing a trick in a suit. In today's deal, a defender has to break another of the canons of bridge: third hand high. This time, though, it isn't to avoid losing a trick in the suit. It is to determine the layout of the suit so that he knows how to defend.

North's three-spade response was a limit raise, showing about 11 points and at least four trumps.

West led the heart three: seven, king, ace. Declarer finessed the spade queen. After East had won with the king, the spotlight was on him. He thought along these lines: "We must win three more tricks. It looks as if we have a heart trick, so we will need either two diamonds or one trick in each minor. Let me just get our heart trick by cashing the jack. Then I can switch to a diamond."

However, as you can see, this plan didn't work out too well. Declarer won with the heart queen, drew trumps and cashed the clubs, discarding a diamond loser.

True, East was a little unlucky. But he had a chance to find out who held the heart queen. Since West would not have underled the heart ace, East should have made the discovery play of the heart jack at trick one.

When South wins with the queen, East knows that he must switch to diamonds at trick three. And he selects the jack (or nine) to stop declarer from ducking the first round to West. The defenders collect three diamond tricks to go with the spade king: one down instead of letting the game make.

The Giants, making a run at the second-half league title, used 14 hits, including a triple and a single from Jason Williams, a double and a single each from Alex Best and Wes Martin and a two bagger apiece by Justin Englert, Martin Villareal and Mark Fields, to down the Braves.

J.J. Vasquez, Craig Bowen, Bryson Jenkins, Philip Riddle and Michael Fletcher each rapped a single.

The Braves were led by Michael Finnel's two triples, a double by Arthur Garza, and two singles each from Shay Franks and Cody Wright.

Chris McLeod, Craig Forbes, Tommy Hull and Nathan Hines each lifted a base hit.

White Sox 9, Cardinals 2

The White Sox scored five runs in the bottom of the first inning and coasted to an 8-9 Year-Old League win Thursday, behind Kyle McClennan's triple and single, a pair of doubles and a base hit from Stephen Ortegon and Paddy Vantine's two-sacker.

In addition, Britt Sharrock and James Villareal each ripped three hits, Miguel Infante and Shawn Childs knocked two singles apiece and Matthew Grimmett and Josh Arnold both laced a single.

The Cardinals were paced by R.J. Hernandez with two hits. Belting a single each were Adam Lucero, Dustin Wood, Brooks Nunley, Chris Hill and Zack Burns.

Portland advances to NBA Finals...

Trail Blazers end Utah's run

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Portland Trail Blazers advanced to the NBA Finals the hardest way possible — by stealing a rare victory at the league's toughest arena.

"We didn't want to have to go back to Portland (for Game 7) because we knew they could beat us there," coach Rick Adelman said after the Trail Blazers won the Western Conference series 4-2 with a 105-97 victory over Utah Thursday night.

"I don't think anyone thought we could win here with the record they have," Adelman said. "We believed that we could and it was just a tremendous win for us."

The victory marked Portland's third conference title and second trip to the NBA Championships since 1977, when the Trail Blazers won it all. Portland also made the league finals in 1990, bowing to Detroit.

The loss ended Utah's first-ever conference final appearance. For the Jazz, who finished the regular season an NBA-best 37-4 record in the Delta Center, it was the first loss in nine playoff games at home.

Adelman said tough defense down the stretch helped Portland pull away from a 77-all tie after three quarters and finally crack Utah's aura of invincibility at home.

"We went into the fourth quarter knowing it would have to be our best quarter of the year," Adelman said.

It may have been. The Blazers used a smothering defense to hold Utah offensive mainstay Karl Malone — who led Utah with 23 points and 19 rebounds — to just two points in the final 12 minutes. The Jazz, who had shot nearly 53 percent in the first half, could manage just 22.7 percent in the fourth quarter to Portland's 47.4 percent.

"We did a great job of not letting them get easy opportunities and getting defensive rebounds for ourselves and getting out on the break," said Terry Porter, who along with Clyde Drexler and Jerome Kersey shared Trail Blazers' scoring honors with 18 points.

Jazz All-Star John Stockton, who missed the second half of Game 5 after being accidentally poked in the left eye by Drexler, finished with 18 points and 12 assists. Tyrone Corbin had 22 points for Utah.

"This is a tough business. John played very well. There are no excuses," Utah coach Jerry Sloan said. "Portland is a tough team."

If there were doubts about Stockton's recovery from the eye injury, they were erased in the first two minutes of the game. He hit consecutive driving layups and a free throw, then passed to Malone and Blue Edwards for inside baskets, keying a game-opening 9-0 run.

"We jumped out to a nice lead and we hoped to extend it, but they are an experienced team and were back by the end of the quarter," Stockton lamented. "They came back and beat us on our home floor, fair and square."

The Trail Blazers indeed rallied, riding Buck Williams' eight points to a 16-6 spurt that closed them to 27-24.

With Portland trailing 33-30, Drexler opened the second quarter with a slicing drive to the basket that cut Utah's lead to a single point.

The two teams then exchanged runs, with Utah building a 48-38 lead with 5:29 left in the half with a 15-6 spurt featuring two baskets each by Edwards and Jeff Malone. Portland countered with a 13-6 run, with Kersey and Kevin Duckworth each hitting a pair of field goals, closing the Blazers to 54-51 at the 2:16 mark.

Witt's 3-hitter beats ChiSox

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — It's been pitching and not hitting that has helped the Texas Rangers keep alive a winning streak that vaulted them into first place in the American League West.

The Rangers got another quality start from Bobby Witt Thursday night as Witt threw three-hit ball over eight innings to outduel Jack McDowell in Texas' 4-2 decision over the Chicago White Sox, moving the Rangers atop the division for the first time since April 12.

Rangers starters are 6-0 with a 2.14 ERA in their last 13 games and have worked six or more innings in eight straight and 17 of their last 18. Witt, 5-4, struck out seven and walked two.

"It was an outstanding performance by Bobby Witt," Rangers manager Bobby Valentine said. "He was very aggressive and kept the ball down. He's been a pleasure to watch and he's throwing all of his different pitches for strikes. There's nothing more that you can ask."

Witt established a season-low for hits, lasted as least eight innings for his third consecutive start and lowered his ERA to 3.29.

Witt got all the run support he needed when the Rangers scored four times in the fourth, capped by Ivan Rodriguez's two-run single and Jeff Huson's RBI double.

"It's a lot easier when you go out there and throw strikes and the team is playing well behind you," Witt said. "Right now the team is playing real well and hopefully we'll continue to do so."

Still, the Rangers weren't celebrating. They also took first place last year on May 28 but finished the season third.

"I'd glad we're there," said Valentine, "but it doesn't mean a thing."

The Rangers completed a three-game sweep of the White Sox, winning their sixth straight and 10th in their last 11 games under wet, cold conditions.

Texas, which hopped a half-game ahead of the idle Oakland A's, has been involved in one- or two-run games in 12 of its last 14 starts. The Rangers have won nine of those games.

Jeff Russell pitched a perfect ninth for his 13th save.

McDowell, 7-3, had won his first seven starts but has dropped his last three, yielding 15 runs over that span. McDowell gave up only 17 runs in his 7-0 start. McDowell pitched his third complete game of the season Thursday while losing to the Rangers for the first time in his career.

Lamesa edges Boswell in semis

The Lamesa Golden Tornadoes will battle Big Spring for the Region 1-4A baseball championship, as a result of the Tors' 4-3 semi-final victory over Saginaw Boswell Thursday in Abilene.

A time or site for the Big Spring-Lamesa tilt has not been scheduled.

Big Spring knocked off Burkburnett, 11-1, on Wednesday to earn a berth in the regional title game.

Lamesa needed eight innings to take the Thursday win, scoring Steve Morales on a single by Jimmy Rodriguez with none gone in the eighth with the game winner.

Right-hander Wesley Diaz earned the win, going the distance, walking eight, stiking out 12 and limiting Boswell to just four hits.

Lamesa is now 23-6.

No. 2 Graf survives third-round upsets

PARIS (AP) — Second-seeded Steffi Graf easily advanced to the fourth round of the French Open today as sixth-seeded Mary Joe Fernandez and eighth-seeded Manuela Maleeva-Fragniere fell in stunning upsets.

The suprise winners, Sabine Hack of Germany and Manon Bollegraf of the Netherlands, had never before survived the third round of a Grand Slam event.

Hack, ranked 42nd in the world, beat Fernandez, 7-6 (7-1), 6-2. It was the latest in a series of Grand Slam disappointments for the 20-year-old American, who has never won one of the major titles and reached only one final.

The 28-year-old Bollegraf, ranked 57th, beat Maleeva-Fragniere, a Bulgarian-born Swiss, 7-5, 6-2.

Graf, who won the tournament in 1987 and 1988 and has yet to lose more than three games in a set in her first three matches, routed Amanda Coetzer 6-2, 6-1. She was quicker and steadier than the 20-year-old South African in their 59-minute match.

Two-time defending champion Monica Seles plays her third-round match Saturday against American Lori McNeil.

Rain fell Thursday, for the third time in four days, delaying completion of eight men's and two women's second-round matches.

Second-seeded Stefan Edberg led Argentina's Gabriel Markus 4-6, 7-6 (7-1), 7-5, 3-1 when play was stopped because of darkness and 10th-seeded Ivan Lendl was deadlocked with Brazil's Jaime Oncins 6-3, 6-3, 3-6, 2-6, 5-5.

California is home to bitter GOP fight over abortion issue

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate boasts of his endorsement from an abortion rights group. Another is so opposed to abortion he shows graphic videotape of the procedure in a campaign commercial.

In the GOP primary for a U.S. House seat, Maureen Reagan, Ronald Reagan's daughter, is campaigning for abortion rights. A former speechwriter for her father charges she is a Reagan in name only.

The Republican Party's national split over abortion has proved especially sharp this year in California's primary races.

In Salt Lake City on Tuesday, Republicans supporting abortion rights urged a party platform panel to drop the plank against abortion, saying it hurts GOP candidates and violates the principle of minimal government intrusion.

But GOP officials have said they doubt any changes will be made in the platform. President Bush opposes abortion in most cases.

Anita Mangels, of the National Abortion Rights Action League's political action committee, said California is a microcosm of the national dispute within the GOP between abortion-rights supporters and "the minority in the party that has a stranglehold" on it.

The league has taken an active role in California politics, giving support to U.S. Rep. Tom Campbell over former TV commentator Bruce Herschensohn, who opposes abortion rights. The two Republicans are running for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by retiring Democrat Alan Cranston.

Campbell's TV ads describe him as an abortion-rights supporter, and he announced the NARAL backing in a news release.

"The future of the Republican Party is with candidates whose mistrust of government interference carries over to this very personal decision," he said.

Herschensohn's campaign manager, Nicholas Thimmesch, said the NARAL backing demonstrates that Campbell is out of touch with the party.

"It shows Campbell's very strong support from liberal organizations such as NARAL and highlights the differences — Bruce being a mainstream Republican versus Campbell being a liberal, almost Democrat," Thimmesch said.

In the GOP primary for California's other open U.S. Senate seat, long-shot candidate Bill Allen has run a TV commercial showing close-up video of a forceps removing a fetus in a second-trimester abortion.

TV stations expressed concern about the commercial but aired it anyway because of regulations barring them from turning down ads from candidates for federal office.

Allen is far behind John Seymour, who was appointed to the Senate seat by Pete Wilson when Wilson left the Senate in midterm to become governor. Seymour, a former abortion foe, switched to supporting abortion rights in 1989.

Mangels said the NARAL has also spent "something in the six figures" on behalf of abortion-rights House candidate Judy Ryan, who is trying to unseat Rep. Bob Dornan, an abortion foe in Orange County.

And Ms. Reagan, in her own congressional contest, says on the stump that abortion is a "very serious and moral decision between a woman and her God" and that the decision shouldn't be left in the hands of "bureaucrats."

Such views prompted a stinging letter to voters from Rep. Dana Rohrabacher, a former Ronald Reagan speechwriter who backs one of Ms. Reagan's opponents.

"There is nothing in her background to indicate that she has the skills, experience or commitment to carry on President Reagan's legacy," he wrote.

"In fact, on several key issues, Maureen opposes the fundamental principles for which her father stood."

Police make four arrests

Snyder police made four arrests Thursday and early this morning.

Police arrested a 35-year-old woman from Municipal Court at 9:15 p.m. and transported her to the county jail to lay out a fine for no seat belt.

At 10:28 p.m., police arrested a 34-year-old man from the 250 Club for public intoxication after a woman reported that he had assaulted her.

Police also made two arrests in the 1700 block of 13th Street at 12:48 a.m. today. Arrested were a 17-year-old man for driving while intoxicated and Class B theft and another 17-year-old man for public intoxication and Class B theft.

Police recovered two sets of barricades owned by the city after stopping the vehicle.

An offense report for Class A theft was filed about 6:07 p.m. Thursday after a man notified police that someone had stolen a jacket out of his car.

Police also took reports for three stolen bicycles in the 3600 block of 40th Street between 7:53 and 8:36 a.m. Thursday.

An offense report for theft was also submitted after a man complained someone had taken his toolbox from the 300 block of 23rd Street.

At 2:32 p.m., police worked a minor accident in the 2500 block of College Avenue. Involved were a 1973 Chevrolet driven by Donald Lawler of Rt. 1 and a 1983 Ford driven by James Patterson of 206 32nd.

Police worked another accident at 1:12 p.m. in the 1900 block of 25th Street. Involved were a parked and unoccupied 1991 Chevrolet Blazer owned by Williams Oilfield Disposal Systems of 1909 25th St. and a 1979 Caterpiller forklift driven by Mark Glasscock of Hermleigh.

Deputies note theft report

Sheriff's deputies took reports of a theft and a missing bull Thursday.

Chad Fox of Rt. 3 told deputies that someone had taken a radar detector, valued at $127.50, from his vehicle Wednesday night.

C.W. Addison also informed deputies that a Limousine bull has been missing from his place four miles south of Union for the past three or four days.

Law was not followed when Perot signatures were verified

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas billionaire Ross Perot will be on the ballot in the November general election although the Texas secretary of state's office did not follow state law in validating signatures on his petitions, an office spokesman says.

Secretary of State John Hannah announced Wednesday that Perot supporters had submitted more than the 54,275 signatures needed to qualify him as an independent candidate for president for the Nov. 3 election.

The Texas Election Code allows the use of a random sample of signatures to determine whether they are valid, but it requires that the sample include at least 25 percent of the names on petitions.

The secretary of state selected a random sample of 115 signatures from the 228,219 signatures submitted by Perot supporters to certify their validity, an office spokesman said Thursday.

Spokesman Mark Bell said that the agency had not met the requirement to sample at least 25 percent of the signatures on petitions. But he said there is no law that his office certify presidential petition signatures in the first place.

"We do it as a matter of policy," Bell said. "We are not required to verify signatures."

State law requires that a candidate submit a sufficient number of valid signatures and specifies that the secretary of state must certify whether a presidential candidate is eligible.

Bush announces $1 billion plan to aid those hit by cuts

PHOENIX (AP) — President Bush is seeking expanded GI education benefits for displaced servicemen and a broadened early retirement plan for civilian defense employees in a $1.1 billion step-up of the government effort to ease the impact of military spending cuts.

Those were among 17 new or expanded programs the White House outlined Thursday for the transition from defense spending to civilian jobs and projects during the next five years.

Bush said the administration already has committed more than $7.1 billion to that purpose for the next two years. The additional funds will be offset by reductions elsewhere in the federal budget.

"I am committed to ensuring that the vast talents of former defense personnel can be put to productive use in private life," Bush told veterans at an American Legion post in Phoenix, first stop on a three-day trip concentrated on California.

The announcement also came just ahead of Tuesday's primary in California, where defense is big business and military cuts a major economic problem. Between now and 1997, defense cuts are expected to cost the state 59,000 military personnel, 21,000 civilian government employees and 174,000 jobs in defense contracting industries.

With Democrats in Congress pushing defense adjustment proposals, and White House challenger Bill Clinton advocating his own plan, Bush weighed in with a catalog of administration programs and proposals he said will manage the post-Cold War shift rationally and fairly.

At the same time, Bush rejected the deeper defense budget cuts some Democrats advocate, saying his 25 percent, five-year reduction is as far as the nation should go.

He said at Annapolis on Wednesday that while old threats are receding, new ones can erupt without warning. Repeating that warning in Phoenix, Bush said "there is no substitute for America's strength and sense of purpose."

Biggest items on the list of transition aid programs Bush announced were:

—The GI bill expansion, which would give departing veterans with more than six years service an opportunity to get education and training benefits, at a five-year cost estimated at $216 million.

—A $250 million plan in which the Department of Energy will finance efforts to transfer defense technologies to civilian companies.

—Early retirement for civilian Defense Department employees in selected occupations and areas, with a pricetag of $459 million.

The list also includes job training, programs to promote careers in education for former military, civilian and defense contractor employees, and efforts to use defense resources for community needs.

Bush's proposal requires congressional approval.

Senate Democrats, complaining that Bush has done virtually nothing to address the transition, unveiled their own swords-to-plowshares plan last week. It would cost $1.2 billion in 1993 alone, but sponsors said it could be accomplished without cutting other domestic programs.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, also has developed a plan to divert $1 billion from next year's Pentagon budget to assist workers and communities hurt by the defense cutbacks.

Clinton said in San Diego 10 days ago that the government should put together a national inventory to match defense workers' skills with domestic needs.

By the end of this fiscal year, there will be nearly 300,000 fewer men and women in uniform.

People to be held responsible for stray dogs, cats they feed

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin residents who feed stray cats and dogs or let them remain on their property will be considered owners of the pets and can be held legally responsible for them, the Austin City Council has decided.

"It's the first step towards trying to make owners more responsible for their animals," Sally Barto, executive director-designee of the Travis County Humane Society, said Thursday. "If you're going to feed them, you might as well do the rest."

The rest includes inoculating and registering animals, which is required by law, and spaying or neutering pets to help stem the pet population problem officials say exists in Travis County.

"There's more to caring for a pet than just feeding it, and if you're not prepared to deal with six or eight new ones all of the sudden, then you ought to take the responsibility to get that animal spayed or neutered," said Council member Max Nofziger, who co-sponsored the amendments with Council member Bob Larson.

The new ordinance would also require owners of unspayed female cats will be to keep their animals, when they are in heat, inside or on a leash and supervised outside. That law already applies to dog owners.

The council also created a local animal advisory commission to advise the City Council on animal-related issues, as is required by state law.

Austin's animal control department officials said the new laws will give them added ammunition to cite people who give animals food and shelter but do not take the full responsibilities of ownership.

"It will allow animal control to force persons to take ownership of an animal they are caring for," said Charlie Beaman, animal control program supervisor.

Animal control officers will rely on witnesses and unsuspecting "owners," he said.

If an individual tells an animal control officer that he feeds a stray animal, but does not own it, that person will be issued a citation and informed that they do in fact own the animal.

"It's not the best tool, but it's a tool in the arsenal now," said Beaman.

Most people feed strays out of the kindness of their hearts and don't realize they are helping to perpetuate pet population problems, Humane Society officials say.

"Part of the problem is that people feel they are doing the cat justice," said Barto. "But if you don't have the cat spayed or neutered or inoculated, then you're not doing anyone a favor."

Grand jury asks for continued probe of Midland Co. sheriff

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — The dismissal of two indictments against a former Department of Public Safety drug investigator in connection with a 1989 reverse sting shows prosecutors are backpeddling, defense attorneys say.

State prosecutors have dropped two indictments against former DPS investigator Ronald Tucker with plans to re-indict Tucker in Dallas.

A separate indictment against Tucker for aggravated perjury remains intact in Ward County.

Tucker's attorney, Ted Painter of Monahans, says the state attorney general's office is "backing off the case because the state has no case."

Meanwhile, a Midland County grand jury has asked the state to continue investigating Midland Sheriff Gary Painter's role in reverse drug sting operations.

The Midland County grand jury, which was impaneled for a six-month term last September by 142nd Texas District Court Judge Pat Baskin, was forced to disband this week.

The grand jury requested and was granted a 90-day extension in February, but state law allows only one extension.

"Our grand jury believes that it was unable to complete its investigation of circumstances, facts, records, results and effects of 'reverse stings' in which Midland County personnel and resources were involved," Frank Kell Cahoon, grand jury foreman, said in a letter Wednesday to Assistant Texas Attorney General Shane Phelps.

Phelps has led an ongoing grand jury probe into Gary Painter's role in reverse stings, in which law officers pose as drug dealers.

"They ran out of time," Phelps said. "An investigation of this nature requires a lot of work. The grand jury was just frustrated that they didn't get to finish the work that they started. We are going to do everything we can to honor the wishes of the grand jury."

The state is looking into allegations that Gary Painter misused nearly seven tons of confiscated marijuana as bait to seize about $6 million in cash and assets from drug dealers in reverse stings in 1989 and 1990.

Gary Painter has said the grand jury investigation is frivolous and denies any wrongdoing.

Phelps also headed the investigation of a Ward County grand jury which handed down two indictments against Tucker for misapplication of fiduciary property and theft in a reverse sting in August 1989.

But on Wednesday, Phelps said "some of the facts in the case suggested that it may be in the best interest of the state to try the case in Dallas."

Phelps' motion to dismiss the Ward County indictments against Tucker was granted by visiting Judge Larry Fuller in the 143rd District Court in Monahans.

Tucker, posing as a West Texas drug lord, sold 500 pounds of marijuana to an alleged drug dealer in exchange for $275,000 while working undercover for former Ward County District Attorney Hal Upchurch, Phelps has said.

Tucker took the money in a Sherman hotel, then gave $68,750 of it to a confidential informant before appropriate forfeiture documents were filed in court, Phelps said.

hospitals. Information supplied at the meeting indicated that nursing salaries at Cogdell are lower than most surrounding facilities. Board members requested that more information be obtained as to what benefits these hospitals are offering, however.

At present, Cogdell offers medical and retirement benefits.

Board member Bill Wilson III suggested that the hospital may want to consider offering cash in lieu of benefits.

"I feel like it's time we have to do something now," said CEO Tim Lancaster. "If we don't, we're going to have to pay a higher price when we replace them (nurses)."

Members of the board appeared in agreement that nursing wages at Cogdell should be increased. However, they said they wanted to study the figures more closely.

Lancaster said he and Chambers will compile more information and call a special meeting to address the issue in early June.

In other business, the board reviewed April finances, which indicated a net loss in income of $2,794 to the hospital. The hospital cash balance stands at $1,356,387.

Statistical information for April included an average daily census of 10.3, a long term average daily census of 32.4, and admissions at 74. There were 56 surgeries, 11 newborns and 648 visits to the emergency room.

Lancaster updated the board on progress being made by the Foundation Advisory Committee. During a Foundation meeting, he also requested funds amounting to $300 to help renovate a patient room.

Present for the meeting were board members Wilson, Ted Crenwelge, Jim Palmer, Doug Foster and G.A. Parks Jr. Brenda Hedges was absent.

Authority approves low-level radioactive site in W. Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Despite strong opposition, state officials have designated a West Texas site for a low-level radioactive waste dump.

On a 4-1 vote Thursday, the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority chose a Hudspeth County location and approved purchasing a ranch for $909,000 to be home to the facility.

The final price tag for the project is about $50 million. Officials said they hope to have it operating by Jan. 1, 1996.

The dump site, located about seven miles east of Sierra Blanca, and 90 miles southeast of El Paso, would be the first of its kind in Texas, and the fourth in the United States. Other radioactive dumps are located in South Carolina, Nevada and Washington.

The authority plans to buy the 16,000-acre Faskin Ranch for the project. Only 80 acres will be used for the actual dump which will take in radioactive waste from nuclear power plants, hospitals and medical research.

The most contaminated waste it will hold would be radioactive for up to 500 years, according to Susan Odom, a spokeswoman for the authority. Ninety-nine percent of the waste would be radioactive for 100 years, she said.

By next year, Texas is expected to generate 52,000 cubic feet of radioactive waste. The dump could also take up to 20 percent of its annual load from other states.

At an April public hearing in Sierra Blanca, and Thursday's hearing in Austin, most speakers were against the project.

Former gang members testify

AUSTIN (AP) — Former gang members have suggested religious outreach programs, recreational activities and showing that "somebody cares" as ways to keep others from following in their footsteps.

A House subcommittee studying youth gangs and guns took testimony Thursday from the four former members of Dallas gangs.

The young men served in Texas Youth Commission facilities after being convicted of crimes as teen-agers, and now are working to improve their lives, officials said.

James Virden, 18 and back in Dallas for a year and a half, said he committed aggravated robbery after falling in with a gang of Jamaican drug runners who came from New York. He now works for the city.

"I was lonely. I didn't have a father figure to look up to. My mom was struggling .... I took it upon myself to raise myself," said Virden about becoming involved in the gang. He currently lives with his mother and stepfather, who he said has made a big difference in his life.

Gang members provide "a big brother figure" to younger teen-agers, he said, and the drug business offers "a lot of money — tax-free." He said while guns are common among teen-agers in his neighborhood, many carry them for protection.

"When I was like 12, I had actually seen four or five people killed, and then I felt like it was time for me to have a weapon," Virden said.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Others might be as demanding of you today as you will be of yourself. Don't attempt assignments that are beyond your capabilities; you could fall short.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today could turn out to be a bummer where your social life is concerned — if you show up at functions you feel obligated to attend, instead of going to events just to have fun.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A few caustic remarks could be all it takes today to put your household in turmoil. You're not the only one waiting for the chip to be knocked off a shoulder.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Try to avoid involvements today with a strong-willed individual who always tries to do your thinking for you. This person could be even more obnoxious than usual today.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Instead of taking on new financial obligations today, try to figure out ways to reduce or eliminate your present ones. Improvement is possible.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Look out for your interests today, but be very careful you're not too self-serving. People whose support you presently need might feel threatened and back off.

Loan approved

AUSTIN (AP) — Refugio County is getting a $16,402 loan from the governor's energy office for new energy-efficient equipment, Gov. Ann Richards says.

The county will use the loan, announced Thursday, to relamp the lighting systems in its courthouse and library, and to install programmable thermostats and solar window film in the courthouse and county museum.

New election ordered for 29th District

HOUSTON (AP) — City Councilman Ben Reyes will get a third chance to become the 29th Congressional District representative after a judge threw out the results of a Democratic Party runoff in which hundreds of voters admitted they crossed party lines to vote for his Anglo challenger.

State District Judge John Delaney on Thursday ordered a new election for a date to be set.

Reyes challenged his 180-vote loss to state Sen. Gene Green, D-Houston, in the April 14 runoff. He claimed at least 430 of the 31,000 runoff ballots cast were illegal crossover votes cast by people who first voted in the Republican primary March 10.

"I thought it was appropriate," Reyes said Thursday. "I think the people at Susman and Godfrey did a fair job of showing that over 450 people voted on a crossover vote. I'm looking forward to an election that isn't tainted."

But Green said he will appeal the ruling.

"I don't think the judge's decision was based on evidence that he heard. I think all the evidence that he heard showed that I won the election," Green said.

The 29th Congressional District, Harris County's first open seat in 21 years, was carved according to 1990 census results last year to allow another Hispanic to be elected from Texas. The largely blue-collar district includes about 55.4 percent Hispanic voters, 33.4 percent Anglo voters and 10 percent black voters.

Five candidates in the original March 10 primaries were Hispanic. Green was the only Anglo candidate. Clark Kent Ervin, who is black, won the Republican primary outright, but Reyes and Green were slated for the Democratic Party runoff.

Reyes said political analysts initially said the high number of Hispanic candidates would disintegrate their voting strength and that Anglos were more likely cast ballots in the election. But when he lost by only 180 ballots, Reyes said he had to question the outcome.

"I think in the beginning we were ready to accept the outcome. We thought the cards were stacked against us and we ought to leave it alone," Reyes said. "But we were really concerned with the system."

Reyes said as he heard of crossover voting and notified election and party officials, few seemed to care.

"We had to weigh the thousands of voters who were voting for maybe the first time (against a decision not to, challenge the vote). A lot of those voters were new voters from Central and South America that were used to tainted elections. So we could not leave it alone, letting them think it was the same in the United States," he said.

More than 300 crossover voters testified during the 11-day trial, after Harris County prosecutors agreed that the testimony couldn't be used against them in crossover charges. At least 200 said they voted for Green, while more than 70 said they voted for Reyes.

Under state law, voting in the first-round primary of one party and then the runoff of the other party is a Class C misdemeanor, punishable by a fine up to $200.

Many of those who testified showed voting cards that clearly marked the bearer had voted in the Republican Party's primary and were marked a second time showing they had voted in the Democratic Party's runoff.

Reyes blamed election judges for allowing the voting.

State law gives judges the power to void a disputed election if its true outcome can't be determined.

But Green said both sides agreed he had won by some 35 to 45 votes.

"I'm amazed and shocked that the judge would call a new election when the results were ascertainable," he said. "We had shown many more votes than were needed to win."

"I'm not scared of a new election," Green said. "It's just that the voters made the decision on April 14, and hopefully we won't have to have the cost of another election."

The Republican contender also was upset by the judge's ruling.

"For the voters of the 29th District, this is an unmitigated tragedy," Ervin said. "To go back and vote for either Green or Reyes for a third time and waste taxpayers' money."

Harris County Clerk Anita Rodeheaver estimated a new runoff election would cost about $200,000 to set up the polling places for 345 precincts and provide election judges.

But Ervin said the more money both candidates spend in another runoff against one another means they will have less money to spend in a November race against him.

Panel beseiged by requests

AUSTIN (AP) — A flood of questions over what is acceptable conduct between legislators and lobbyists has poured into the Texas Ethics Commission.

The queries range from whether a lawmaker can go hunting with a lobbyist, to whether an elected official can accept a car as a prize if he or she fires a hole-in-one at a golf tournament.

Suzy Woodford, executive director of Common Cause of Texas, said Thursday that some of the questions were unnecessary and wondered if they some of these questions were posed by opponents of the 1991 ethics law to "whip up hysteria."

"People that have integrity and are ethical don't have to ask these nitpicking questions," she said. "They know what passes the smell test."

Those identities of those requesting advisory opinions are kept secret, but the requests themselves are published, and will be taken up by the Ethics Commission next week.

Access to transportation, hunting, and sporting events seem to be uppermost in the minds of those asking the commission for guidance.

One questioner asks if representatives of federal, state and local governments can participate in a tour of a local business and then play in a golf tournament sponsored by a non-profit organization.

At the golf tournament, players would receive door prizes. A car would be awarded to anyone making a hole-in-one. The requester has also asked if the event could be considered a fact-finding trip.

"What I read into that is that those same special interests who used to pay the $2,000 filing fee for legislators to play golf with celebrities, want to know if they can continue to do the same type of thing," said Ms. Woodford.

"It's just a continuation of chumminess between public officials and special interest groups," she said.

Another question asks what is acceptable on the all-important legislative hunting trips, and poses several examples. In one, the legislator pays his own transportation, but an organization provides a private hunting lease, lodging and breakfast. In another, the hunt takes place in Mexico, and the lobbyist provides transportation, food, lodging and a place to hunt.

Tom Smith, director of Public Citizen's Texas office, said the questions show that lobbyists are looking for loopholes.

Churches set Spring Bazaar

The Joint Women's Group of Grace Lutheran and St. John's Episcopal Churches of Snyder will have its fourth annual Spring Bazaar from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, June 6, at Grace Lutheran Church, 5500 College Avenue (WTC road, south of Cogdell Memorial Hospital.)

Different activities are planned by the Women's, Men's and Youth Groups.

The Men's Group will sell barbecued sandwiches, grilled sausage, potato salad and baked goods.

The Youth Group will sell beverages.

The Women's Group will feature a rummage sale, craft room and drawings. Some of the craft items will include wooden heart wreaths, long-spinning tops, lawn decorations and soft sculpture. The drawings will include a full-size quilt, lap quilt and $50 Savings Bond.

The tickets for the drawings are available from members of the congregation or at the bazaar. The drawings will take place at 5 p.m. and winners do not need to be present.

All proceeds from the Spring Bazaar will be used by the churches for various activities.

The Joint Women's Group meets every Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. at Grace Lutheran Church for crafting, fellowship and Bible study. All women are invited to attend.

Sunday services at Grace Lutheran are at 8:30 a.m. and St. John's begins at 10:45 a.m.

Dr. Gott
Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm presently in an institution and without funds to see a physician. Therefore, I must rely on your kindness to receive information regarding my condition. I was in good health prior to reeeiving Bactrim in 1987. One month later I was very ill, had internal bleeding and lost 65 pounds in approximately 90 days. I did recover from the bleeding but have suffered from lung damage and high anxiety with spells of dimming vision, weakness and insomnia. Do I have Stevens-Johnson syndrome, as I've been led to believe?

DEAR READER: Stevens-Johnson syndrome is a rare form of erythema multiforme, an acute unpredictable hemorrhagic rash. In the standard form, the rash appears on the extremities and face; in Stevens-Johnson syndrome, the lesions appear in the mouth, throat, eyes and between the buttocks.

Although no cause can be found in more than 50 percent of patients with erythema multiforme, various vaccines, drugs and infections have been implicated in many cases. The affliction is believed to be a hypersensitivity reaction, a monster allergy.

Mild/moderate degrees of Stevens-Johnson syndrome are treated with supportive care: removal of suspected offending agents, use of compresses and pain medication. Severe degrees require intravenous therapy, antibiotics and/or cortisone.

You could have had Stevens-Johnson syndrome, as a reaction to the antibiotic Bactrim. However, internal bleeding would be unusual in the syndrome, and your continuing symptoms ("dimming vision, weakness and insomnia") would be most unlikely. Stevens-Johnson syndrome is acute; once it has healed, symptoms disappear.

I wonder if you could be experiencing problems from a persisting infection (for which you were prescribed Bactrim) or from some other ailment that should be identified. I suggest you ask the authorities in your "institution" to provide you with medical attention. If you've been told of lung damage, you certainly need a diagnosis.

I suspect that many of your current ailments are related to your anxiety; this can be treated with counseling and anti-anxiety medicine, such as Ativan.

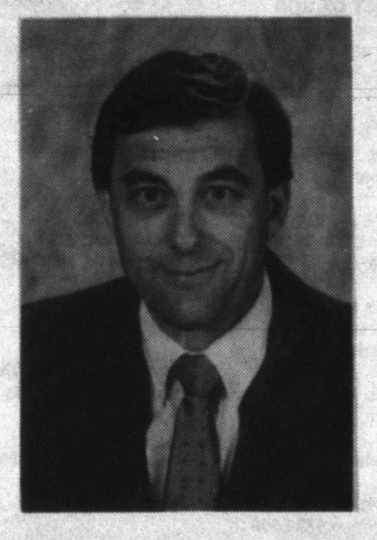

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Consumer Tips on Medicines." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

Facts About The BIBLE

BY JOHN LEHTI

IN THIS MODERN DAY AND AGE, WE HAVE BECOME USED TO LARGE SIZES—HUGE FOOTBALL PLAYERS, TOWERING BASKETBALL STARS, ETC. BUT WE STILL HAVE A LONG WAY TO GO IF WE WANT TO TOP WHAT THE BIBLE TERMS AS GIANT: THESE TWO SEVEN-FOOT BASKETBALL PLAYERS AND AN AVERAGE-SIZE FIVE-FOOT, TEN-INCH COACH PALE IN COMPARISON NEXT TO THE BIBLE'S GOLIATH.

WE LEARN IN I SAMUEL 17:4-7, THAT GOLIATH STOOD SIX CUBITS AND A SPAN. THE CUBIT BEING APPROXIMATELY TWENTY INCHES, A SPAN NINE INCHES, PUTS GOLIATH'S HEIGHT AT TEN AND A HALF FEET—A HALF FOOT HIGHER THAN THE BASKET WHICH HANGS TEN FEET ABOVE THE BASKETBALL COURT!

GOLIATH'S COAT OF MAIL, THE BIBLE TELLS US, WEIGHED FIVE THOUSAND BRASS SHEKELS—WELL OVER A HUNDRED POUNDS. THE IRON SPEARHEAD WEIGHED MORE THAN FIFTY POUNDS AND THE STAFF OF THE SPEAR WAS AS THICK AS A WEAVER'S BEAM, WHICH IS A LITTLE THICKER THAN AN AVERAGE MAN'S WRIST—A FEARSOME FOE IN EVERY RESPECT!

HOWEVER, THE SPRY AND AGILE YOUNG LAD, DAVID—WHO, NOT BEING FULL-GROWN, COULD HARDLY HAVE STOOD MORE THAN FIVE FEET AT THE TIME (JUST HALF GOLIATH'S HEIGHT) TAUGHT GOLIATH AND THE WORLD A BIG LESSON—THAT NO MATTER HOW FORMIDABLE THE ADVERSARY, ONE CAN OVERCOME IF HE IS FILLED WITH COURAGE AND A FIRM BELIEF IN THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF HIS CAUSE!

NEXT WEEK: A BIBLICAL EFFICENCY EXPERT—IN NO UNCERTAIN TERMS!
