Bandit Holds Up Show In Fashion

HOUSTON, Feb. 23. (AP)—As a crowd in the Queen theatre watched a screen drama, a bandit, in movie fashion, stuck a gun on Norval Murray, assistant manager of the playhouse, forced him to hand over a bag containing $535 adn then made his escape through tonight's "white light" throngs.

So quietly was the robbery staged, milling people on Houston's busiest corner did not realize what was happening and patrons of the theatre continued to watch a romance unfold its flickering way without interruption

Witnesses Brand Dewhurst's Story As Entirely False

Defense Gets In Inning For Congressman-Elect Saturday; Character Witnesses Are Presented

Argument Heated

Interesting Data Revealed In Testimony Given Out By Defense; Attorneys Clash Over Portions Of Hearing

(By Associated Press)

AUSTIN, Feb. 23.—The defense got its inning today in the trial of Congressman-elect Augustus J. McCloskey of San Antonio on one of five indictments charging election frauds.

It immediately sent to the stand a succession of witnesses to deny in toto the testimony yesterday of Dave Dewhurst, state's star witness, who testified that on his suggestion McCloskey and the former Bexar county judge's secretary connived to steal the Nov. 6 election from Harry M. Wurzbach of Seguin.

First came Ernest J. Altgelt, named by Dewhurst as present when the plot was hatched and also at least one who urged it.

Didn't Know Dewhurst

At the time, November 8, he did not even know Dewhurst, Altgert testified. He did not at any time suggest holding the ballot boxes for a possible McCloskey contest; never relayed to Dewhurst the information that "Nolte and Creager" had urged that the election be taken from Wurzbach by any means, and never in any manner suggested that the election returns be altered, he declared.

Lane Taylor, a San Antonio realtor, also mentioned as present, added his denial of everything Dewhurst testified.

Then came Charles R. Guinn, San Antonio, lawyer, to testify that at some time between Dec. 1 and 17 last, Dewhurst related to him that McCloskey had nothing to do

Second Prosecutor Here Is Certainty

Measure Calling For Assistant District Attorney Passes Both Houses; Man Fills Long-Felt Need

Employment of an assistant state's prosecutor, to work under District Attorney Durwood H. Bradley in the 99th and 72nd Judicial district court loomed as a certainty yesterday when it was announced that the bill providing for such an official had been passed by both the house and the senate in the state legislature.

Mr. Bradley was advised by Sen. Pink L. Parrish, Lubbock, and Representative Carl Routree, Lamesa, of the favorable action of the two bides. All that stands between the courts and the assistant prosecutor now is the signature of Gov. Dan Moody.

Long Needed Here.

Addition of another state's prosecutor in the courts here and in this section has long been a sore need. The heavy increase of population has been accompanied by additional business in the criminal courts and has logged the dockets of both the 72nd and 99th district court. The work, according to officials, has been more than one man can attend to efficiently.

District Attorney Bradley heads prosecution in both courts, operating in Lubbock, Hockley, Crosby and Cochran counties.

Dallas Child Is Kidnaped; Returns

DALLAS, Feb. 23. (AP)—Dallas officers today are working on a kidnaping theory in seeking the abductors of James Koonce, 8, who returned to his parents home late yesterday with his legs cut and his body bruised.

He told his parents that while playing near his home yesterday morning two older boys told him they would show him a robins nest in the woods near the river. When they reached the woods, they bound him to a tree with wiries and beat him, he said.

It was thought the abductors planned to ask ransom but failed to go through with their plan.

Lubbock Holds To Fifth In Building Permits In Texas

Past Week's Total Of $95,750 Sends Year's Figure Nearer Million Mark; 7th For Week In State

For the week ending Saturday, record of building activities in the principal cities of Texas shows Lubbock holding seventh place. For the year this city is in fifth place, exceeded only by such cities as Houston, San Antonio, Fort Worth and Dallas.

Lubbock's total for last week was $95,750, which brings the year's record to $717,100. Saturday saw three permits issued for $16,500, as listed W. A. Hardeman, 2003 Main street, eight room brick veneer duplex, $7,500. Tom Jackson, contractor, Gaylord Hankins, 1825 Avenue Y, five room brick and tile residence, $4,000, G. L. Phillips, contractor. R. I. Westerfield, 2517 Twentieth street, five room frame and brick veneer residence, $5,000. G. L. Phillips contractor.

Houston Continues With Record Pace Of Permits

DALLAS, Feb. 23. (AP)—For another week Houston has remained in the lead of Texas cities in building permits. Since the first of the year Houston's construction program has totalled more than three and one-half millions.

Following are the standings of principal cities.

Hoover To Change Party Patronage

Brookhart Declares Nation To See Revision Of Federal Patronage Under New President

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—A revision in the method of handling federal patronage during the Hoover administration was predicted today by Senator Brookhart, republican, Iowa, after a conference with the president-elect.

The Iowan, chairman of a senate committee investigating patronage in Southern states, called on Mr. Hoover, to acquaint him with work accomplished by the committee and disclosures it had made.

"I am convinced," Brookhart said, "that the Daugherty and Fall scheme of patronage is over forever I am convinced that the Hoover adminstration will be honest in this respect as it will be in all others."

Brookhart spent more than an hour with the president-elect, In speaking of the committee's work the senator said he did not want to prejudge the situation before the investigation was completed and all evidence sifted. He added, however that he thought that the situation in the three states, Mississippi, Georgia and South Carolina, would require a shake-up which he was confident would take place in the next administration.

Lone Eagle Tries To Steal Away But Is Discovered

(By Associated Press)

EAGLE PASS, Feb. 23.—A flier the world loves to call its own sped out into the night under starry skies, bound for Old Mexico to visit his sweetheart.

Suspicions which Colonel Charles A Lindbergh left behind when he took off from Abilene, Texas, this afternoon after declining to write his destination in the airport registry were verified when the famous flier came to earth at Eagle Pass, on the Texas-Mexico border tonight and announced that he was en route to Mexico City. He landed at 7:30

EXPECTED LINDBERGH

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 23. (AP)—Officials at the Metropolitan Airport, Van Nuys, Calif., near here, said this afternoon they expected Col. Charles A. Lindbergh to land there tonight by way of Flagstaff, Ariz. Their information was contained in a telegram from the flier, they said. Los Angeles is the western terminus of Col. Lindbergh's inspection flight over trans-continental air transport routes, of which he is a director.

P. M., and said he would take off at daybreak tomorrow for the Mexican capital.

Preserves Stony Silence

When asked if he intended to marry his financee, Miss Anne Morrow, while on this trip, the "Lone Eagle" preserved a stony silence.

The first definite grounds for suspecting Lindbergh was to lay aside his role of route inspector for his company, National Air Transport, Inc., for that of a Lochinvar of the air, were discovered at Abilene this afternoon when, after failing to record his destination, the flier headed his plane southward instead of in a westerly direction. Airport officials at Van Nuys, Cal., previously had announced receipt of a telegram from the aviator which stated he proposed to land there tonight.

Mystery In His Adventures

But those following "Lindy's" flight were wary, for there always is mystery in a Lindbergh adventure. Despite the fact that nothing was known of Lindbergh's plans, more than a hundred persons were on hand for his landing in the remote city of Eagle Pass.

Since the time Colonel Lindbergh left the East on flights westward several days ago, ostensibly to inspect depots of his company, the public had little difficulty in conjuring forth the picture of "Lindy" skimming through the air, into Latin skies, bound for the home of his sweetheart in the Mexican capital.

Even a thing so factual as a telegram from the aviator telling California aviation officials that he

While in this city he will be located at the courthouse.

Kidnapers Take Engineers' Lives As Ransom Denied

Band Of Thirty Men Take Men From Their Quarters In Mining Camp At Bustos Mines In Mexico

Padron Leads Body

Former Miner Said To Have Been Leader Of Group In Ctivities; Authorities Are Asked To Investigate

(By Associated Press)

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 23. — News dispatches from Guanajuato tonight said that J. M. Underwood and C. C. Aisthorpe, American mining engineers, were killed last night while federal troops were battling with their kidnapers.

The band of 25 or 30 men which took the two Americans from their quarters at the Bustos mines Thursday night were said by the correspondent of El Universal to have been overtaken by military police Friday evening. A battle followed in which five of the bandits were killed as well as an alleged Catholic priest named Lozano, said to have accompanied them.

Stabbed to Death.

The military police commander, Major Araujo, was quoted as reporting that in pursuit of the bandits after their dispersal the troops came on the bodies of the engineers near where the conflict took place. Their bodies bore wounds indicating that they had been stabbel to death.

The bandits leader was said to be a former miner named Padron, who on several other occasions has extorted money from American mining companies in that region by similar tactics. The kidnapers destroyed telephone instruments in the raided mining camp, 20 miles from Guanajuato.

The bandits demanded a ransom of $7,500.

Although first newspaper dispatches telling of the kidnaping of the Americans were received more than 24 hours ago the United States embassy tonight was without official confirmation of either the kidnaping or the killings. Mexican authorities were asked today to inves-

Demos Still Wage Fight For Funds

All-Day Wrangle Over Increase Of Deficiency Bill Results In No Vote; To Come Up Monday

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—After an all-day wrangle over prohibition in which republicans clung stubbornly to the budget recommendations and beat back every attempt of democrats to increase the $2,727,000 for enforcement, the house quit tonight without a final vote on the second deficiency bill.

Democrats indicated that when the $191,000,000 measure comes up on Monday a motion would be made to recommit the bill to the house appropriations committee to incorporate the $24,000,000 prohibition amendment that led to the death, in conference, of the first deficiency bill.

While the democrats were beaten on every attempt to raise the amount for enforcement today, they talked so often and so long that they defeated the plan of administration leaders to complete action on the measure before adjournment tonight.

HAVANA, Feb. 23. (AP)—George Haldeman today linked Canada and Cuba by a single unbroken airplane flight. In taking off from the Walkersville airport near Windsor, Ontario, at 3:49 a. m. the wheels of his plane were deep in the snow. He set them down less than 13 hours later on the tropical soil of Cuba.

Haldeman was accompanied by James F. Hayden, a mechanic. His charted course of 1404 miles was flown in 12 hours and 56 minutes.

Haldeman, pilot for Ruth Elder in her unsuccessful attempt to cross the Atlantic, showed no fatigue flight.

Cabinet Guesses Are Rampant In Nation's Capital

Assured Selections And Indefinite Ones Are Talked; Information About Any One Man Lacking

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—President-elect Hoover's week of conferences here has given the volunteer cabinet-builders little satisfaction although it has served to increase the confidence of some that their guesses as to some of the cabinet posts have been correct.

Without guaranteeing to have any puncture-proof information, some of the best situated of Mr. Hoover's friends here are putting the following in the class of assured selections.

Secretary of State:—Henry L. Stimson, of New York.

Secretary of the Treasury:—Andrew W. Mellon, of Pennsylvania.

Secretary of the Navy:—Charles Francis Adams, of Massachusetts.

Secretary of the Interior:—Ray Lyman Wilbur of California.

In the same indefinite way, many politicians are convinced that advantage for three other cabinet places lies thus:

Attorney General:—Silas Strawn, of Illinois.

Secretary of Labor:—W. N. Doak of Virginia.

Much speculation, turning on varied rumors, continues to surround the remaining two places, the secretaryship of war and the secretaryship of commerce.

Harmony Expected

Lines Expected to be Drawn Closer In Intervening Days Between Sessions; Two More Likelihood

By R. W. BARRY
Associated Press Staff Writer

AUSTIN, Feb. 23.—(AP)—It could be said by Governor Moody and his friends who believe in his suggested solutions of pending problems, awaiting action of the Texas legislature, that this session has been a total loss.

Of course, neither the Governor, nor his friends, are saying any such thing, although some of the executive's partisans are thinking as much, they will tell you, at the same time admonishing you not to "quote them."

Issues Not Attended To

It is a fact, however, that nothing has been done, and is not likely to be done this regular session, about concentrating the penitentiary system, regulating public utilities, submitting the proposed highway bond issue, shortening the ballot by providing for the appointment of all public officials—save the governor, Lieutenant Governor, and attorney general—consolidating departments, and the many other things suggested by the Governor when he convened the legislature.

With but 11 working days left, the most optimistic have surrendered hopes of disposing of any of these matters. Many bills have been passed and most, if not all of these, are important but almost the entire program of "big things" must be shunted over to the called session.

"Torch Murderer" Is Active Again

New Jersey Police Start On Second Search For Brutal Killer; Woman Is Found Burning In Road

(By Associated Press)

CRANFORD, N. J., Feb. 23.—The discovery of an unidentified woman shot, beaten to death and then saturated with gasoline and set afire in the snow beside a lonely road today started New Jersey police on their second hunt in a year for a "torch murderer."

Their only clues were dental bridge work in the dead woman's upperjaw some jewelry, clothing and a fleeting glimpse of an automobile which the driver of a bakery truck obtained as he sped by.

A blue automobile was the sole clue police had early in their investigation of the similarly strange death of Miss Margaret Brown, a New York governess. She was found not far from here a year and three days ago, in an isolated wood in an adjoining county.

Message Direct From Antarctic Given To Radio Listeners Of World For First Time In History

(By Associated Press)

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 24. (Sunday)—For the first time in the history of radio broadcasting, a message direct from the antarctic was given to the radio audience of the world early today.

After establishing two-way radio communication with the Byrd antarctic expedition, radio station KDKA here picked up a message in code, sent by Commander Richard E. Byrd, rebroadcast the original signals and then radiocast an English translation of the wireless' "too-ta-too-too-ta-too."

The rebroadcast followed a special program put on the air by KDKA, each week for the Byrd expedition and for the people of the far north.

Commander Byrd, in his message, addressed to George Wendt, Canadian Westinghouse company, Montreal, Canada, said "we have been having 24 hours of daylight since arrival, but in a few days now the sun will sink below the horizon, and in another two months total darkness will set in.

"This is going to be the most trying period of our stay down here. We are all looking forward in anticipation to the continuance of your weekly broadcasts with all hands grouped around the loudspeaker listening to the voice of KDKA. You can't imagine how much this is going to help us over the rough spots of the long winter night.

"Best wishes, to all our friends at home."

Dairying Campaign Becomes Plains-Wide In Scope

Diversification Is Being Boosted In Most All Counties

Floydada Region Emphasizes Dairying; Series Of Short Courses Come Early In March

Cotton as the supreme ruler of the Plains farmer is tottering on its throne.

Not only in Lubbock county but in all of this section come reports of campaigns for more dairy cows—for a diversification program centered about a well balanced herd.

Just at this time, with the annual Panhandle-Plains dairy show about five weeks away, the campaign has especial significance.

A series of farm short courses is to be held over the South Plains starting in March. The Lubbock county course is to take place on March 6. The courses will be twofold in purpose; one to select choice dairy specimens for entry in the Plainview show, and the other to boost organization of a dairy testing station somewhere in this territory.

Dairying Greatest Factor In Program

FLOYDADA, Feb. 23.—Believing that the development of the dairy industry in Floyd county is the greatest single factor in a balanced farm program, the Floydada Chamber of Commerce has placed the advancement and encouragement of this industry at the head of its program of work for the year 1929 and will take advantage of the Panhandle-Plains dairy show to encourage the breeding of superior dairy animals. Every possible effort to secure the largest delegation at the show from any town represented will be made at Floydada and present plans call for the distribution of catalogues, securing members of the association and an organized delegation attending the show.

Floydada has two representatives as officials of the Panhandle-Plains Dairy Show. O. L. Stansell, vice-president of the organization and one of the best known dairy breeders in this section, has been active in building up and encouraging the development of the dairy industry in this county. Stansell is also a director in the Texas Jersey club and his herd of Jerseys will be remembered by those who attended the 1928 show as the outstanding winners of the event. Stansell won more ribbons at the Plainview show than any one exhibitor. He will show this year again and is of the opinion that other good herds from this county will be present. Ed Bishop, a member of the publicity committee, is the other Floydada representative.

Plan Short Course.

Along with its years program for increased dairy production the Floydada Chamber expects to conduct a dairy short course under the supervision of O. T. Williams, instructor of the Floydada high school vocational agricultural class. Although plans for this course are not yet complete the speakers for the short course will include members of the Texas Technological College, county agents, vocational agricultural instructors and prominent dairy breeders of the Panhandle. The course will probably be held every Saturday afternoon for a period of twelve meetings. Special attendance prizes will be given by Floydada merchants and every effort to secure information that will tend to develop the industry will be made.

A supply of the catalogues of the Panhandle-Plains Show will be kept at the Floydada Chamber of Commerce office and distributed to interested farmers. The Floydada Chamber of Commerce office and distributed to interested farmers. The Floydada municipal band will probably lead the delegation that attends the show from this place.

Littlefield Course To Be Held March First

LITTLEFIELD, Feb. 23.—The short course for dairymen, under the direction of the A. and M. extension service, will be held in Littlefield. The program for the course includes a number of subjects of vital importance to the dairyman. These subjects will be handled by specialists and will be of much value to those interested in dairying, and dairy products.

Tatooing Machine Purchased At Spur

SPUR, Feb. 23.—The Spur Chamber of Commerce has secured from the American Jersey Cattle club a tattooing machine, and every effort will be made to get the farmers who have dairy cattle that is subject to registration, to make use of the outfit. With an average of four milk cows per farm in Dickens county, and some 25 registered bulls, there is no reason why the farmers should not take advantage of their opportunity to grow into one of the most paying enterprises that is possible for any one to get into—that is, dairy farming. That have a good strain of milk cows is the farmers of this trade territory not a bit of guess work, as the sweet cream plant at Spur is showing a continuous increase in daily receipts of sweet cream.

MAY LOSE $252,000

PORT ARTHUR, Feb. 23. (AP)—Because the government condemned a bridge leading to the pleasure pier, a pleasure resort in Sabine Lake here the city stands a chance to lose $252,000. A suit for this amount has been filed by the lessee of the resort.

The spinning and weaving of cotton is one of the most important and largest of the manufacturing industries in Portugal.

Demonstration Work Began In Texas

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to the Avalanche-Journal

HOUSTON, Tex., Feb. 23.—Agricultural extension work celebrated its 25th birthday here from Feb 5 to 7, when agricultural leaders from all parts of the United States met to pay reverence to the memory of Dr. Seaman A. Knapp, who, 25 years ago, put into operation the farm demonstration system of teaching improved methods of farming.

The first demonstration took place upon the farm of Walter C. Potter, near Terrell, Tex., and its purpose was to teach the farmer better methods of protecting his cotton crop against the boll weevil. Almost the entire work was done by Porter and his negro assistant.

A few months after its inception, the United States department of agriculture took it over and, aided by funds from the general education board of New York city, the farm demonstration plan extended over the entire south. In 1914 it became national in scope with the passage of the Smith-Lever act by congress.

Canning Becomes Rage

Home demonstration agent work first came into being in Aiken county, South Carolina, when a teacher, Miss Marie Cromer, inspired by the work of Dr. Knapp, organized the first girls' tomato club. Canning became the rage, and by the 1912 nearly every southern state had home demonstration agents whose work has since developed into a comprehensive program of home making covering the needs of the entire nation.

Among the prominent guests to attend the birthday celebration were Dr. Bradford Knapp, son of the founder of the demonstration system, who at present is president of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, and W. D. Bentley, assistant director of the extension division at the Oklahoma Agricultural and Mining college, who is rounding out 25 years of service to agriculture in Oklahoma.

Silver fox raisers operate 3000 ranches in the United States, says the U. S. Biological Survey. Capital invested in this enterprise runs close to $30,000,000. Good management, scientific feeding and raising, together with hard work bring favorable results.

Motor truck transportation, says W. A. Sherman of the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics, is opening up new markets for the farmer and offering new opportunities for competing with long rail hauls from distant commercial producing areas. Speed in distribution makes the motor truck valuable to the farmer and trucker.

Agricultural co-operative organizations are fast finding favor with southern farmers. A report by J. E. Wells, Jr., of the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics, shows that "the need for permanent farmer organizations with flexible set-ups is becoming more widely appreciated and is being adopted by the most successful associations." Cotton growers, especially, are taking advantage of this co-operative system.

Plenty Moisture In The Soil Now

Though there has been but little precipitation during the winter months there is an abundance of moisture in the ground for land preparation at this time.

Dry winds, such as may be expected during the month of March and April, might easily sap up this moisture, however, provided no additional rain or snow is received.

PURLOIN FENCE

Whole Apparatus Is Taken Away To Mexico

ROMA, Feb. 23 (AP)—One weekend Lino Perez had a fence around the house on his Refugio ranch. The next week-end he didn't.

When Perez made his weekly inspection trip he found the barbed wire fence, posts and all, had been removed from three sides of the house.

Cattle Supply Is Lighter Saturday

FORT WORTH, Feb. 23. (AP)—The cattle supply was even lighter than the usual light Saturday's receipts. They considered of mixed lots that sold at steady prices. Hogs sold steady to strong with the best rail butchers up to 10.50, which is the high point here for several weeks. Sheep sold steady.

No steers included in the receipts and heavy bulls sold around 8.00 or steady. A few cows went to the scales at 4.75 to 8.50. This showed no change from yesterday's levels.

Slaughter yearlings limited to package lots that sold at 8.50 to 10.75.

One load of calves and a few package lots sold steady with the load selling at 11.00 or fully steady.

Of the 700 hogs listed for the day, about half of them on direct billing to a local packer. The top in the rail section reached 10.50 and the best truck butchers sold at 10.10 values steady to strong. Some medium to good butchers in the carlot division sold at 10.00, while the bulk of the 180-240 pound truck butchers sold at 9.75 to 10.10. Packing sows sold at 8.25 to 9.00.

Steady prices were paid for the sheep that sold on today's market. Some wooled fat lambs sold at 15.50 with the feeders at 14.00. Some shorn fat wethers sold at 10.00 with yearlings at 13.25.

KNEW JESSE JAMES

Arkansas Man Fitted Boots On Famed Outlaw

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Feb. 23 (AP)—The recent death of Dr. John Feathers, 85, chiropodist, Fayetteville, marked the passing of a man who for years fitted boots to the feet of Jesse James.

"Some days Jesse would sit in my little shop in Monett and talk about the world in general," Dr. Feathers recalled not long ago. "He talked boldly of some of his exploits. Then, the next day perhaps, we would hear of a bank robbery many miles away. A few days later he would drift back into town and into my place. But no one dared touch him."

Dr. Feathers referred to Jesse as "a brave and honorable gentleman whom I knew and loved for 16 years during the time he was wanted by the law."

"The Jameses were fine people and leaders in community life and business. What Jesse was, he was because of the war. He was bold and daring but he never was a bad man."

One Crop Method Of Farming Loses Favor In Crosby

"How Many Are You Milking" Is Bankers' Query To Farmers Of Ralls And Vicinity At Present

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

RALLS, Feb. 23—The "one crop" method of farming is gradually losing its hold in Crosby county. The cotton farmer, merchants and bankers are becoming "dairy minded", bankers are now asking such questions as, "how many cows are you milking", instead of how many acres of cotton are you planting this year. The change will necessarily be slow but is surely coming.

Just recently, a carload of dairy cows were shipped in to Ralls and sold to farmers in the Ralls trade area. These cows were distributed in number of one to four to farmers who have placed them on rations of home grown feeds. In this way the farmer will have a daily income instead of a seasonal pay day. Also it will prove that home grown feeds are most profitable when marketed through dairy cows or other livestock, rather than in the bulk or raw stage.

The dairy educational campaign is being fostered by the Ralls Chamber of Commerce for the good of the entire county. It is not directed alone at the farmer but to the merchant and banker as well for all will benefit by it. The banks of Ralls are behind the movement and are cooperating in every way. Just now a move is on foot to organize "bull circles" in each of the surrounding communities. A group of farmers from each community are planning a trip next week to Plainview for the purpose of investigation of the methods used in Hale county.

Farm Women Hold Conference Here

County Council Of Four-H Clubs Is Conducted At Courthouse Yesterday Afternoon

Club women and 4-H club members from all over Lubbock county gathered here yesterday afternoon for sessions of the County Council of Four-H clubs. Miss Louise Baird, home demonstration agent, presided over the sessions.

Scores were taken on four of the yards entered into the better yards contest. Women whose yards were scored included Mrs. J. L. Coleman, Woodrow; Mrs. Earl Lovelace, Woodrow; Mrs. Earl Davis, Acuff; and Mrs. R. O. Moore, Acuff.

Special entertainment was furnished by members of the New Hope club.

TRAPS RODENTS

Severe Weather Brings Halt Museum Curator

CANADIAN, Feb. 23 (AP)—Halted, for a few weeks, by severe cold weather in his search for fossil remains of animals that were supposed to have roamed the hills along the Canadian river 8,000,000 years ago, R. A. Stirton, curator of the museum of palaeontology at the University of California, is busying himself trapping various kinds of rodents.

Unlike the fossils which are to be exhibited at the university museum, the rodents will be used in a special study of this form of life by scientists at Berkeley, Calif. Large numbers of the rodents have been collected. The pelts are kept intact and the skin stuffed.

Mastadon bones and rhinoceros heads were uncovered here last fall and shipped to the university by C. L. Camp, who started the palaeontology research work along the Canadian river. These fossils are being made ready at the University of California for exhibition in the museum there.

Texas Has Mines

Two Million Yearly Taken Out

TERLINGUA, Feb. 23 (AP)—Down in the Big Bend, against the Chisos mountains, where two millions of dollars are invested in quicksilver production, every day is payday for the laborer. There is no weekly payroll, and each evening finds the laborer with pay for his day's struggle with the cinnibar ore, which produces the mercury.

The laborers are native Indians, and about 250 men are employed in the four mines in the district, 90 miles from Alpine.

Since the price of the metal has been stimulated by its use in radios, production has been increased until this portion of Texas is second only to California. The national production is about 7,000 to 10,000 flasks annually, and consumption exceeds 35,000 flasks. Each flask weighing 76 pounds, brings $125.

E. A. Waldron, one of the operators here, believes that the Terlingua mines some day will produce millions of dollars worth of quicksilver, and has about 2,000 acres in claims.

Market Advances Fifty Cents A Bale In Saturday Trade

New Orleans Exchange Is Active Although Gotham Cotton Mart Is Closed For Day

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 23. (AP)—Despite the short Saturday session and the fact that New York remained closed the cotton market here was quite active today and prices advanced practically 50 cents a bale from the previous close. Strong Liverpool cables and reports stopping of March notices were the main supporting influences and March contracts after reacting from 19.30 to 19.20 rallied and closed at 19.27, or 7 points net higher. The general market closed steady at net advances of 7 to 8 points.

Liverpool cables were 7 to 11 points higher than due and were reflected in opening gains of 9 to 11 points here. March sold at 19.30, May 19.49 and July 19.58. Some selling followed reports that notices for delivery of 15,000 bales of March cotton had been issued and on the subsequent drop March traded to 19.20, or 10 points under the highs and parallel with the previous close. May eased off only 6 points to 19.43.

A good demand developed at the 23 point difference in prices between the months, probably induced by reports o fthe prompt stoppage of the notices. May contracts rallied to a new high at 19.50 or 10 points above the previous close.

The market ruled steady during the final trading due to shorts covering and final prices were within a few points of the best with May at 19.48 and July 19.57.

Receipts, 6,952; for year, 8,292,980; last year, 7,112,977. Exports, 19,381; for year, 5,962,344; last year, 4,965,942. Stocks, 2,086,334; last year, 2,160,743. Stock on shipboard 147,754; last year, 112,336, Spot sales, 11,958; last year, 13,138.

MID-WESTERN LIVESTOCK

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 23. (AP)—(U. S. D. A.)—Livestock trade during the week under review around the 11-market circuit was featured by a sharp reaction on cattle with trade the most active in several weeks. Continued light receipts and an improved tone in the dressed beef market were the strengthening factors. Killing classes at most points are closing unevenly higher with maximum gains of 50 to 75c.

A decidedly weak undertone developed at Chicago late in the week on fed steers and yearlings and most of the early advance was erased. Stocker and feeder trade was slightly more active but the inclement weather continues to reduce country purchases. Stockers ruled steady to slightly higher while moderate to sharp upturns were effected on feeders. Aggregate receipts were around 148,300, a decrease of 2,000 from last week and 24,000 short of the same period a year ago.

Hogs soared to new high price levels for the year and current values at most centers rest at the week's high points. A general advance of 50 to 75; was obtained with a late top of 10.95 at both St. Louis and Chicago. Total offerings were around 568,200 against 706,694 last week and 803,757 a year ago.

After opening at weak to lower prices fat lambs rallied and the week's early loss was more than recovered at most markets. Chicago closed with a net advance of 35 to 50c while firm to slightly higher prices were in order at other centers. Fat ewes were unevenly steady to 25c lower. The supply approximated 254,150 a decrease of 36,000 from last week and 25,000 less than the same a year ago.

Wall Street Is Closed Saturday

NEW YORK, Feb. 23. (AP)—The entire machinery of the stock market rested today. The Saturday closing two weeks ago, and those of last spring, were for the purpose of catching up with back business, and commission house and investment bankers offices hummed with activity as usual, but today, not only was the stock exchange closed, but members offices were closed also, and it was a holiday for clerks as well as floor traders.

The banks were open for the usual Saturday half day, but as all securities markets, and all of the commodity markets with the exception of wheat, followed the stock exchange's example in taking a three-day holiday from Washington's birthday to Monday, Wall Street wore a Sunday aspect. Many of the shops and restaurants of the financial district had decided that business would not warrant staying open.

SEEK PAVED ROAD

Want Connection From San Angelo-Sweetwater

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SAN ANGELO, Feb. 23.—A paved connection with the Bankhead highway either through Sweetwater or Colorado City seemed virtually assured following the meeting of the highway commission in Austin this week, when representatives of Coke county filed application for designation on two different routes.

Representatives from Bronte and Blackwell in the eastern half of Coke county filed application for state designation on a road leading from Bronte parallel to the Orient tracks to San Angelo and stated that voters were ready to pass a bond issue for work if Tom Green county would meet that road at the county lines. Leading from Bronte north Nolan county has already paved its road.

Trees To Break Tedious Expanse Of Wide Open Spaces Are Selected And Tested At Experiment Farm

Hundreds Of Different Varieties Used In Effort To Find Type Best Suited For This Country

Cultivation of trees and shrubbery and experimentation on countless types with the end of selecting by a "survival of the fittest" method the varieties best adapted to the peculiar climatic conditions of the Plains has long been a major objective of experiment station located east of the city.

From tests conducted with probably 300 varieties of trees, experiment station workers have found that the Chinese Elm, a tree imported from the country from which it derives its name, is perhaps best suited for the Plains country.

Transformation of the vast open spaces of the South Plains country—which even yet sometimes sweep on for leagues unmarked by a tree or shrub, into a land where shade trees with their promise of beauty rest and comfort are not such a rarity is the ultimate goal of the experiments.

Raised From Seedlings.

Trees usually are received as seedlings and propagated on the farm. There is a nursery enclosed between rows of pines, elms and mulberry trees. Here, protected from the icy winds of winter and the sand-saturated blasts of the spring, the seedlings are nurtured and cared for carefully until they are large enough for transplanting. Once transplanted they are usually left alone.

"There's no use recommending trees to farmers if they must be cared for like a flower bed" is the reason., as Supt. Don L. Jones of the farm puts it.

During all of the years in which trees have formed a topic for experimentation at the farm, the Chinese elm has proven the best from every standpoint. The black walnut is another type of tree that has demonstrated its value, the mulberry flourishes with little extra care, the sycamore grows easily and there are dozens of other types of trees which will grow rapidly in this country.

Trees are sadly lacking in this Plains country, and their value is felt all the more, perhaps, because of their rarity. They furnish shade and beautify any home's premises. Not only that but, properly arrayed they serve as very effective windbreaks. The home protected by a hedge of trees need not worry about the blizzards of the winter nor the sandstorms of the spring.

Shrubbery and hedges likewise are grown and experimented with at the farm. Ornamental grass, the best of which has been found to be the Pampas, flourishes there in demonstrations.

There are dozens of varieties of evergreens being tried out at the farm. Pine, spruce, fir juniper, cedar and others are included. Pines grow easily at the farm.

The first internal combustion engines were designed about the year 1680 and were made to operate on gun powder.

POULTRY PAYS

Littlefield Woman Tells Of Profits Made

LITTLEFIELD, Feb. 23.—As concrete evidence of the fitness of this section of the South Plains for poultry raising, Mrs. Farry Gainous, living about six miles east of Littlefield, reports the following facts: Out of 500 baby chicks of a thorough bred stock hatched last spring she raised 398. She sold 175 roosters of the flock for $64.80. There were 178 pullets, which produced $411.23 worth of eggs, beginning to lay in October. Mrs. Gainous spent $130.00 for feed. The egg production from these fowls will be very much greater this year than last, under ordinary conditions. Of course some of the chickens, as well as a large bulk of the eggs, were used for table purposes.

Better Market On Eggs Is Objective

Series Of Programs Will Be Staged In Women's Clubs Throughout County Starting In March

A campaign for better poultry and for better egg markets is to be launched by Miss Louise Baird through the county network of home demonstration clubs during the month of March, it was announced yesterday.

A series of programs, rotating among the various clubs throughout the county, will bring out salient points in connection with egg production and egg marketing.

"The Value of Canning," "Horse Sense in Marketing" and "Eggs in Fancy Packs" are included in the topics to be discussed during the drive.

During January and February, stress has been laid by the county demonstration agent almost entirely upon the better living room and the better yards contests. Programs conducted at the clubs during that time have had to do with these two phases of the work.

There are fourteen living rooms and twenty yards entered into the two contests at this time yards according to Miss Baird.

SEEK NEW CLUBS

Applications Are Filed With Coleman Agent

COLEMAN, Feb. 23.—Applications for three new women's clubs in Coleman county have been filed with Miss Gertrude Brent, home demonstration agent. The clubs will be in the White chapel and Rae communities. At White Chapel a girls' club will also be organized.

Campaign Against Prairie Dog Will Start March First

Drive Under Guidance Of County Agent Will Open Friday Of This Week At Posey Community

Beginning with Friday of this week the local county agent will supervise a concerted campaign directed toward the extermination of prairie dogs in this county.

Prairie dogs, generally looked upon as harmless, do great damage to all kinds of crops. Their number is becoming of alarming pretensions in some parts of the county, especially in the extreme western and in the extreme eastern and in the southern portion of the county.

The entire county will be covered in an orderly canvass, starting at Posey this week. Large quantities of grain in which the poison has been placed will be distributed at the prairie dog "towns."

A re-check will be made at all the places worked in order to exterminate animals missed in the first drive.

PRUNING CAMPAIGN

Tree Beautification Plan Is Tried At Big Spring

BIG SPRING, Feb. 23—The county and home demonstration agents conducted fruit tree pruning and poultry culling demonstrations on J. H. Bruton's place several miles south of Big Spring, in the Elbow community today with twenty-four enthusiastic farmers, farm women, boys and girls participating in the demonstrations. A half dozen fruit trees were pruned, demonstrating proper methods in pruning for desired shape of tree, size, color and quantity of fruit. One hundred and fifty hens were culled demonstrating proper methods of culling hens for egg production, all parties present taking part in the demonstration.

CULLING SHOWN

Poultry Demonstration Held At Coleman

COLEMAN, Feb. 23.—To encourage the improvement of poultry flocks in Coleman county, Miss Gertrude Brent, home demonstration agent, and Elmo V. Cook, vocational agricultural manager of the Coleman Chamber of Commerce, held a poultry culling demonstration at the home of J. D. Kuykendall, eight miles northwest of this city, Tuesday.

The Kuykendall flock consisted of 90 Bluff Orphingtons and 35 Anconas, the agricultural workers explained to a group of residents of the community, including the agriculture class of White Chapel school, different types of chickens best suited for egg production.

Jack rabbits have been known to run at the rate of 35 miles an hour.

The municipality of Matanzas, Cuba, has passed an ordinance which imposes a tax of $150 annually on commercial travelers, vendors and commission merchants.

Deluge Of Requests For Terracing

A deluge of requests for terracing work has been received by the county agent here and his assistant, John Patterson of Idalou.

Since inauguration of the terracing campaign two weeks ago vast tracts of land have been applied this process, which is intended as both a soil and water conservation measure.

Home Accidents Lead In Texas

Accidents occur more frequently in "Home, Sweet Home" than in the industries and at the factories, according to the weekly survey as given by the Texas Council of Safety.

During the past week 23 were injured and 10 killed in home accidents and seven were injured and four killed in industrial mishaps.

The automobile continued as the best aide to the Grim Reaper, claiming 16 lives and injuring 161 during the week. Seven were killed and 23 were injured in railway grade accidents. Nine died from burns, the cold weather of the week probably being responsible. Forty-five were hurt and four were killed in falls. One was killed in an interurban accident, one in a trolley mishap and one from accidents due to other vehicles. One person was drowned, one met death from explosives, and four died from all other causes.

No one was killed or injured in airplane accidents during the week.

There have been 1,340 injuries and 249 deaths from accidents in Texas since January 1, this year, the number comparing to 193 deaths and 784 injuries for a corresponding period of 1928.

How Co-Operation Has Built Lubbock

Chamber Of Commerce Has Been Vehicle By Which Working Citizens Have Erected A Great City

By AL HILL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

"Co-operation of Community," which is synonymous with "Chamber of Commerce," particularly with reference to the achievements of the city of Lubbock, in building a municipality from about a thousand inhabitants in 1909 to one of approximately 20,000 in 20 years, is linked solidly with the thoughts and dreams and activities of a growing group of progressive citizens.

You have been told, in the past three articles of this series, about some of the things which these men have secured for Lubbock. What was done during the 20 years from 1909 to 1929, has been accomplished by their wise planning and fighting to carry out their plans. The first railroad, the next one, the wholesale houses, better schools, more churches, paved streets, electric lights, improved water supply, natural gas, more railroads, additional highways, better city ordinances, Texas Technological college, the federal court, each and every one named came to Lubbock, at least partially, as the result of "Co-operation of Community."

C .of C. a Vehicle

The men who served the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce in the various capacities of officials and directors have been the working unit representative of the entire citizenship. Had not the remainder of the citizenship backed them up always, these things could never have been accomplished. Exactly as the chamber of commerce is merely a vehicle in which we travel the road of progress, can it be said that the offficers and directors are merely the delegated number who carry out the orders of advancement.

As a matter of record these men should be acclaimed, if in no other way, at least by naming them. Therefore, we are listing the chamber of commerce directors from the year 1913, to date. No record was available of an earlier date than 1913.

The Working List

How They Did It

Now that you are acquainted, next week will witness an effort at informing you of how these men have accomplished their works. They did not just meet in executive sessions and wish for bigger things to come to Lubbock. They met to learn what was needed and wanted. Then they got busy and went after them.

Some of these problems, how they were solved, the organization's plan of campaign over a number of years, will be interesting.

GEORGE WASHINGTON PARTY

Mesdames S. A. Peavy, P. A. Minor and K. L. Scudder, were hostesses to one of the loveliest parties of the season Thursday, at the home of Mrs. P. A. Minor on West Garza street, when they entertained with a bridge luncheon. The table appointments and place cards were in red, white and blue, honoring George Washington's birthday.

The center piece of each table carried out the patriotic theme also. The cardboard White House made by little Miss Chrystelle Scudder was indeed a piece of art. A cracked dinner gong represented the Liberty Bell on one table, while George Washington himself in all his armor and dignity stood on another. Martha, Betsy Ross and Priscilla in their ruffles and curls graced other tables as did an old spinning wheel, an old-fashioned rock fireplace, and several cherry trees with real cherries hanging on them, other decorations were red tulips in cut glass bowls. A lovely two-course luncheon was served in old-fashioned blue china with plate favors of red sweetpeas at one o'clock, after which the guests found their places to play on the back of a small George Washington tally card. At four-thirty tea and small round bread and butter sandwiches were server, after which the guests departed thanking the hostesses for a very enjoyable afternoon.

The guest list included the following: Mesdames R. A. Baldwin, J. H. Brewer, K. Brown, E. B. Caraway, Z. Fogerson, Geo. Hurd, A. Gillies, J. A. Klassner, Geo. Marriott, H. W. Ragsdale, D. Tudor, D. Ragsdale, H. Austin, C. Taylor, F. Schmiidt, C. L. Pock, P. W. Savage, H. Hawkins, D. I. Skelton, R. Betchtel, T. Blair, A. Nunn, A. L. Brannon, I. M. Brewer, R. Cobb, G. Everline, Harry Green, J. R. McAtee, J. F. Lokey, J. M. McGennis, J. K. Rogers, W. H. Smith, K. C. Scott, H. W. Wall, A. Ferrill, F. England, L. C. Odom, F. C. Rector, A. L. Robertson, S. E. Staggs, W. M. Wolfskill, A. R. Riggs, Tom McCall, D. L. Badgsley, J. N. McReynolds, J. Shepard, Mrs. J. B. Moss of Amarillo and Miss Josephine McHugh.

WEST WARD P. T. A. TO HAVE CARNIVAL

The Parent-Teachers organization of the West Ward school is planning a carnival and negro minstrel to be held at the West Ward school Friday evening, March 1, the proceeds to go toward improving the playgrounds, and putting out trees and grass.

CELEBRATE SILVER WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Florence celebrated their silver wedding anniversary Tuesday evening, February 18, at their home in South Slaton. A number of their friends were invited to help celebrate this twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage. There was much merriment when each man was asked to tell the circumstances of his own wedding and his feeling about the proceedings. And each woman was asked to tell why she said "yes". Miss Lois Stallings played and sang several numbers. And there was several interesting contests, after which a lovely two-course luncheon was served. Mr. and Mrs. Florence received several lovely gifts. The guest list included Messrs. and Mesdames C. V. Young, B. G. Holloway, T. E. Roderick, M. Calthorpe, George Marriott, J. B. Stallings, Frank Young, C. F. Anderson, Paul Owens and C. L. Sone, Mrs. Mollie Hill, and Mrs. J. R. McAtee and Misses Lois Stallings, Pauline Lokey, Lucille Calthorpe and Claudia Anderson.

HOUSE BURNS

The apartment house belonging to Mrs. A. Jordan on South 11th street was considerably damaged by fire Thursday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Phillips occupied one apartment and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lewis the other. Their furniture was practically ruined from the smoke and water. Each family's household goods was partially insured. This makes the third time the house on this lost has burned.

WIN ONE CLASS SOCIAL

The Win One Sunday school class of the Methodist church was entertained in the home of Mrs. J. R. Mrs. E. V. Woolever as joint hostess. After the business meeting, a social hour was delightfully enjoyed. Little Miss Rebecca Wilson and Mary Lee Thompson entertained with readings.

Delicious refreshments were served to the following members: Mesdames F. A. Drewry, Pierce Youngblood, J. L. Sweet, R. Rhodes, R. M. Nash, Joe Tate, J. T. Pinkston, R. W. Scott, Birkes, Billingsly, G. R. Evans, J. T. Merrill, C. T. Lokey, Joe Walker, Elbert Wilson and three guests, Mesdames N. R. Northcutt, F. A. Henderson of Plainview, and A. Teel.

PHILATHEA CLASS SOCIAL

The members of the Philathea class of the Baptist Sunday school were delightfully entertained at the parsonage on West Lubbock street Wednesday afternoon. The members took advantage of this affair to shower their teacher, Mrs. B. A. Toliver with miscellaneous gifts in token of their love and friendship. Mrs. Toliver left Thursday for her new home in Abilene. After a short business session a lovely refreshment course was passed.

The hostesses were Mesdames L. B. Wooten, L. A. Wilson, A. R. Riggs and B. G. Holloway. Those present were: O. Z. Ball, S. Meadors, E. M. Burns, G. Green, J. A. Elliott, J. T. Lokey, G. Bounds, Clopton, C. B. Jordan, E. Thornton, B. F. Carpenter, O. L. Lovelady, E. M. Lott, F .A. Henderson, N. R. Northcutt, L. A. Wilson, H. Jarmon, A. Dennis, D. Jerron, L. B. Hagerman, C. Hastings, O. M. Ramsey, R. D. Griffin, H. C. Burrus, L. R. Gregory, H. L. Henderson, L. D. Peebles, D. W. Liles, Joe Teague, jr., J. W. Schmidt, R. W. Collier, B. A. Toliver and Rev. Holloway.

WASHINGTON'S ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED

On Thursday evening, February 21, the members of the Slaton odge No. 1094 A. F. & A. M., together with their families, celebrated the hundred and ninety-seventh anniversary of George Washington, known as the "Father of Our Country", and one of the greatest and most active Masons of all times. Worshipful Master Roy Cobb acted as toastmaster throughout the evening. The following program was rendered: America was sung by the entire congregation, followed with a prayer by E. Barton. Piano selectio, Miss Jeanette Ramsey; address, Washington as a Mason, W. H. Smith; vocal solo, Just Beyond, Mrs. Lillian Butler; address, Merle Nelson; violin selection, Miss Frances Guffin. After the program refreshments were served in the dining hall by the Masons.

LOCAL SANTA FE MEN ON TRIP

The G. R. M. Apprentice Club of Slaton will be well represented in Fort Madison, Iowa, this week, at the 6th annual Apprentice Club meeting held there, according to J. A. McGinnis, Santa Fe roundhouse foreman here. He stated that the club is sending their crack basketball team besides several other representatives. # Garden Officials Decide To Allow Broadcast Of Approaching Battle

Rumors Of Decision To Permit Radio Listeners To Enjoy Fight And Deal For N. Y. Giants Purchase Leak Out

New Attitude Of Fighters Evidently Keeps Carey From Confirming Reports; Demand Broadcast

BY EDWARD J. NEIL
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 23. (AP) Cooling breezes and an overcast sky the answer to a gladiator's prayer in the Southland, injected new life into the drills of Jack Sharkey and Young Stribling today, and probably kept doughty Bill Carey, new guiding hand of Madison Square Garden corporation, from giving in entirely to the harassing disclosures of the day.

Now that the battle of the Everglades is just around the corner, with the fighters in perfect trim, the arena built and the lighting system installed for the fracas Wednesday night, the even trend was broken by unofficial announcement that the Garden corporation is arranging for purchase of the New York Giants ball club in the National League and disclosure of a controversy over broadcasting of the coming heavyweight struggle. Carey feels, however, that publicity may spoil the Giant deal.

While Garden officials were willing to say unofficially that the deal for purchase, for $4,000,000, of 75 per cent of the stock in the ball club, owned by Charles A. Stoneham, Francis X. McQuade and John McGraw, had been all but completed, word that the Sharkey-Stribling bout will be broadcast by the National Broadcasting association will not be made known officially until Monday. Carey announced when the match first was made that there would be no broadcasting.

Since then pressure has been brought on Garden officials from all parts of the country to allow the fracas to be put on the air. As soon as the advance sale passed $275,000, guaranteeing a profit, Carey finally agreed tentatively today to permit the broadcast. The final message that swayed the argument was a letter from a crippled war veteran who wrote Carey he was bedridden and had bought a radio for the sole purpose of hearing the description of the match over the air.

Cooler weather brought both battlers to their workouts full of fight. Sharkey was impressive in the two rounds he boxed with John Grosso, New York heavyweight, while Stribling gave the finest display of his training period in two rounds workouts with Paul Cavalier, of Paterson, N. J., and Marty Burke, lanky read head from New Orleans.

Concerning the Garden's proposed Giant buy, it was learned tonight that another deal, in the event that all three of the principal stockholders fail to accept the first proposition, involves the purchase of 51 per cent of the club from Stoneham for $2,000,000.

A meeting of the board of directors of the Garden corporation has been called for March 5, when all members of the board will have returned to New York, it was said here. Plans for purchase of the club contains the clause that McGraw shall remain as manager of the team.

Weak Hurling May Keep Waco Cubs Out Of Flag Race

Manager Del Pratt Optimistic Over Outlook For Club But Real Strength Is Uncertain

By JINX TUCKER
Waco News-Tribune and Times-Herald Sports Editor
Written for The Associated Press

WACO, Feb. 23. (AP)—Manager Derrill Pratt is optimistic regarding the chances of the Waco Cubs in the Texas League this year. But at this season, when the cold winds swoop down and do nothing toward telling what the scorching days will bring, Pratt is always optimistic. It is going to take more than his cheerful optimism, however, to give Waco a class A pitching staff from the talent he has called for duty next month. The training season is to begin here March 11.

There is quantity in the way of hurling talent, but unless previous records mean nothing, the quality is not there. Waco does not have a pitcher who can be called a star. Waco does not have more than one hurler who can be referred to as reliable. That one is Earl Caldwell and you have to stretch your imagination a bit to call him consistent. Still, he hurled well enough to be given a chance with the Phillies at the fag end of the season. Lefty Dumovitch, fresh from Terre Haute, is expected to be the club's leading southpaw. He won 14 and lost 9 in the Three-I circuit last year. Jake Freeze may be back with the club, but the chances are he will remain at Houston. Lefty Stein, last year with San Antonio, will be with the Cubs this year. He is an in-and-outer, but should replace Charles Barnabe without loss of strength. Blake, Pollan, Gallivan and McClung are the most promising of the youngsters to be given trials.

Waco is fairly well fortified behind the bat, where it has been weak ever since it has been in class A baseball. It has usually had one star catcher, but never two capable men. For the last two years Earl Wolgamot has done practically all of the catching. He has been traded to Terre Haute, and his duties probably will be divided between Leubbe and Jack Heath. Leubbe comes to Waco from the Asheville team of the South Atlantic League with a great record. Waco obtained the services of this star for a couple of rookies: Escallier, who was given a trial by Dallas last season, and Governet, a pitcher, who was with Corsicana. Heath finished the season with the Cubs, and Pratt is enthusiastic about this boy. There will be a couple of rookie catchers around, but they hardly will have a chance to make the riffle.

Jimmy Battle, Ryan or Del Pratt will play first, and the prospects are not so bright there. Battle has not had enough experience at the place. Ryan has not had enough experience in professional baseball. Pratt has had too much experience, so Waco is likely to miss the services of the brilliant Art Shires. Tony Piet may be the second baseman. He had a golden opportunity to come through, but there are several other infielders who must be placed. Marty Karow will not report until June, so he hardly can be considered, but Joe Mellano and Dutch Ussatt have signed contracts. The former is a third baseman, the latter a shortstop. Either can be converted into a second baseman, but perhaps not the kind that Waco wants. Wayne Windle shortstop is expected to settle his grievance with the local club owners and sign his contract, while Felix Vigare's signed contract was sent in some time ago.

Sanquinet Back

Bob Sanquinet is almost certain to be one of the outfielders. He has always been a great class B star, and has had several Texas League trials. He still is young, but is about ready. Rye, purchased from the Piedmont League, is expected to be Waco's outstanding outfielder, while George Blackerby is expected back to fill the right field berth. That leaves Waco with Harry Brown, Paul Johnson and Tommy Thorpe, as well as several outfielders not so well known, to battle for the utility outfield job. Harry Brown can be used in the infield in an emergency, so he is favored for the place. Johnson is a holdout.

While Manager Pratt hopes to add box strength before the opening of the season, he feels that his team is well fortified at other positions, and is ready to go.

Mustangs Defeat Baylor, 31 to 24

WACO, Feb. 23. (AP)—Getting away to an early lead through the phenomenal goal shooting of Alba Brown, the S. M. U. Mustangs defeated Baylor university at basketball tonight 31 to 24. The Bears were far off form, looping only one field goal in the first half, which closed with the Ponies leading, 18 to 6.

The S. M. U. boys could not be called Dead Eye Dicks as a result of their shooting performance tonight but Brown could. He could hit the loop from any position on the floor He looped six field goals in the first half and two more in the second half to lead the parade with a total of 16 points for the evening.

BILLIES BEST EAGLES

Daniel Baker Goes Into Lead In T.I.A.A.

BROWNWOOD, Feb. 23. (AP)—Daniel Baker college went into the lead in the T. I. A. A. basketball race by defeating the North Texas Teachers from Denton, 30 to 26, here tonight. The Billies won a thrilling one-point victory over the Teachers the previous night.

The Billies held a 10 to 8 lead at the half but this lead was overcome by the Eagles.

DENTON WINS TITLE

Sunset Goes Down Before Denton Youths In Ten

DENTON, Feb. 23. (AP)—Denton high school won the district 10 interscholastic league basketball title by defeating Sunset of Dallas, 30 to 19, in the finals today. Denton and Sulphur Springs will meet here next Saturday for the bi-district championship.

SAINTS DOWN KANGAROOS

AUSTIN, Feb. 23.—(AP)—St. Edward's defeated the Austin College cagers here tonight in a fast contest, 49-30. The Saints took the lead early and were never headed by the slow defense of the visitors.

START SPRING WORK

Razorbacks Begin Practice On Grid Work Monday

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Feb. 23. (AP)—Spring football practise for the University of Arkansas Razorbacks will start Monday, it was announced today. Thirty candidates are expected by Coaches F. A. Schmidt and Fred C. Thomsen. Garland (Bevo) Beavers is the only member of the 1928 team not expected to report.

Membership in British building societies practically doubled between 1920 and 1928, while total assets almost trebled.

Well, It Seems Just About Time For Spring And This!

It has been a long time since newspaper readers have been offered something like this, but here's the first of the season—a sure sign that spring is just around he corner! The first training workout of the season was held recently by members of the Los Angeles Pacific Coast League club, and here ar some pitchers and catchers getting the kinks out of arms that have been idle during the winter months.

Pa, Ma, And All Predict Victory For Young Stribling

Texas Aggies Are Facing Next Year With New Chiefs

Farmers Will Have Seven Coaches And Assistants Working On Varsity And Freshman Squads

COLLEGE STATION, Feb. 23.—Through the acquisition of John B. Reid, head coach at the North Texas State Teachers College, Denton, since 1924, and J. G. (Klepto) Holmes, guard on the 1927 championship Texas Aggie grid team, the Texas Aggie coaching staff for 1929-30 has undergone a slight reorganization and has been increased one man in number.

The addition of Reid and Holmes will fill coaching roles made vacant by the resignation of Charles F. (Chuck) Bassett, who came to A. and M. in 1927 as head basketball coach and football line coach. As announced by Matty Bell, who will become head athletic mentor at A. and M. next September, Reid will be head basketball coach and general assistant in football while Holmes will be Bell's right hand man in football, his work to be largely with the line with especial attention to guards and tackles. Reid's work in football will be largely with the ends.

On the signing of Bell as Dana X. Bible's successor at A. and M. the positions of basketball coach and football line coach were divorced, Bassett was tendered the opportunity of remaining as head basketball coach by the A. and M. athletic council but declined the offer, announcing that while his interest in basketball was great, his major interest as a coach was in football, and his desire was to give his attention largely to that sport. The situation at A. and M. under the new coaching head not affording him that opportunity, he announced his resignation from the staff. He has not yet disclosed his plans for the future.

As the new line-up stands, the Aggies will have seven coaches and assistants working with the varsity and freshmen football squads next season as compared to six for the past season. Bell, head coach, will be assisted with the varsity by Holmes and Reid, as mentioned. Roswell Higginbotham, freshman coach, will be assisted by Frank Anderson, track coach; S. J. (Red) Petty and another athlete to be selected from the student body who will give part time service. Petty will assist in the coming spring training.

Giants Set Record For Time of Game

SAN ANTONIO, Feb. 23. (AP) — Playing a 11-inning game of baseball in one hour and 27 minutes, the New York Giants set a record on Bear Field today when Ray Schalk's gray (first team) pulled up from a 6 to 1 lead held by Joe Genewich's whites to tie the score, 6-all in the ninth when Jack Cummings brought in Schalk with a sacrifice fly to center after Schalk had smacked the ball for a three-bagger.

Gray Ogden, Slower, Fitzsimmons, Henry and Schalk, Hogan; Whites, Johnston, Kellyn Chaplin and Witry.

Rice Freshman To Face State Champ

COUNTRY CLUB, HOUSTON, Feb. 23. (AP) — Reuben Albaugh of San Antonio, 20-year-old Rice Institute freshman, outstayed George Dawson of Chicago, Seventh rank-amateur in the United States, to defeat him 1 up on the 39th hole of their semi-final match in the Houston Country club invitation tournament here today.

His victory placed him in the finals tomorrow against O. S. Carlton of Houston, defending champion who downed his old foe and fellow townsman Jack Speer, state amatur champin, 2 up on the 36th hole today.

The first railway locomotives weighed only four or five tons.

Clarke Griffith says he wouldn't trade Goose Goslin for the Babe, on even terms. Do you suppose Griff would consider it if the colonel threw in Gehrig, a couple of pitchers, a Yankee farm and a bat boy?

• • •

We wouldn't blame the Babe if he thought there was a conspiracy aaginst his getting a raise in wages this year. First Ed Barrow picked his greatest players of all time, in which aggregation he placed the Bam fourth. Now comes this crushing blow from the peerless trader, Clarke Griffith.

• • •

Maybe Griff would trade Goslin for Ruth even up if he could trade Babe to St. Louis for a couple of old straw hats.

• • •

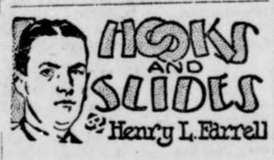

Babe is 35, of course, and in a few more years the gray will creep into his hair and his eyes and legs will be going away. But he was 34 boys and girls, during that last world series when several swell pitchers made Santa Clauses out of themselves.

A center on a western basketball team is 6 feet 9 inches tall. College coaches in that section are gradually being converted to the idea that the center tap-off in basketball is all the bunk.

Burke Beats Dempsey

Martin Burke, a good fighter in his day and still too smart for a lot of the young skithers, has turned promoter in New Orleans, his home town, and he got the jump on the Dempsey fellow in their new line by putting over his first show with a bang.

Martin's first venture may not have been an artistic success but it made dough and that's what promoters are in the business for. He had Willie Stribling and one of the Smiths in there and it was kind of a bust but Dempsey's thing in Miami Beach may be worse from a pure mechanical standpoint.

Burke, because of his high standing with the home folks and his fine repute in the racket, has succeeded in getting the use of the New Orleans ball park for outdoor shows and the cards he has in mind, and probably can get, may put New Orleans in there with Detroit, Boston and Chicago as the new fight centers of real importance.

Razorbacks Take Conference Flag For Fourth Year

Ozark Basketeers Trample Farmers To Cinch Southwest Conference Title; Porkers Formidable

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Feb. 23. (AP)—Arkansas university cinched its fourth straight southwest conference basketball title by defeating the Texas Aggies, 38 to 29, in the final game here tonight. The Razorbacks finished their schedule with 11 victories and one defeat.

Longhorns Down Frogs, 42 to 29

AUSTIN, Feb. 23. (AP)—Texas university tonight won a listless basketball game from Texas Christian U., 42 to 29. The Texas team, certain of second place in the conference, had little difficulty in vanishing the slower, but larger Frogs.

Brock scored 17 points while Rose was making 14. McDonald of the Frogs came in close for point honors, scoring 16.

The game was one of the roughest ever seen in Austin.

Following several weeks of individual trianing, the official training season for the Tech thinly clads will start tomorrow as Coach Victor Payne turns his attention to the Matador track and field aspirants. With the closing of the basketball season, a number of the Tech cagers will join the track squad in the first workout under the direction of Payne.

With an extensive array of cinder path candidates, the Matador mentor will devote the first few days to light preliminary training until the comparative strength of the various aspirants has been determined. Development of weight pushers will be the main problem confronting Coach Payne. Several experienced shot and discus men, however, are expected out Monday.

A. C. C. WINS 36 TO 22

SAN MARCOS, Feb. 23. (AP)—The Abilene Christian college Wildcats vanquished the Southwestern Bobcats 36 to 22 in the last of a two-game basketball series here tonight.

Family Of Georgia Heavy Confident Of Victory

By HENRY L. FARRELL
NEA Service Sports Editor

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 23.—There seems to be only one thing certain in the minds of Pa Stribling, Ma Stribling and their son, Willie, as the date approaches for the boy's fight here with Jack Sharkey.

They are going to win the fight, they tell you. And they give the most reasonable arguments in their very nice polished way.

It seems, they insist, that young Bill was predestined and preordained to be the heavyweight champion of the world. His career was made out for him by a sort of providence and now all that remains between him and the goal is the Sharkey man and perhaps that Dempsey person who is helping to promote the fight.

"Money isn't the thing with us in this fight," Pa Stribling said and the boy nodded assent.

It is hard to get the boy to talk about himself. He operates on the theory that his father is much better qualified to talk. He can use bigger words, the boy says, and his conversational gear runs at many more miles an hour.

"As I was saying," Pa went on, "money isn't everything to us in this fight. We are not poor people and we are not great big millionaires, but I think we proved that this wasn't a money fight with us. We wanted more out of it than money.

"We talked with Tex Rickard. He gave us our price and we agreed and there were no papers signed and, when those things happened as they did, we talked again to Mr. Carey and we said that our understanding with Rickard could be written on and we would do business again with the corporation.

"And we did. We are in there fighting for a percentage of the gate and I don't know what our end will be and I have not been near the box office to see. We are not interested in the money angle. What we want to do is to get in shape and we are doing that.

"The experts who have been peering at Sharkey and Stribling in their workouts think that Stribling is too fine. He has been fighting a lot here and there all over the country and the weather has been very hot here. Sharkey claims that the weather advantages should be for Stribling.

"'What's he squawking about the weather for,' Sharkey asks. 'He is a guy from the south, ain't he? He ought to go big on this hot stuff.'"

The boy and his father, however, do not think they are losing too much weight.

"I know what I ought to weigh," the boy says. "I've always been kind of skinny. They used to call me the stripling a long while ago.

"I don't need a lot of work to get in shape. All I need is the exercise I think I will need a lot of wind to catch that fellow.

"He runs plenty, they tell me, and I'll have him running. Just about two rounds is all I'll have to go in this fight and I am not excited about that referee business. Anybody can count 10 and that's all I'll need in there—a counter."

• • •

Stribling says that he has a battle plan mapped out and that it is not a complicated plan.

"I'm just going to hit him in the middle," the boy said, and Pa and Ma nodded.

"That fellow Sharkey doesn't like to be hit in the body. We all know that, and you newspapermen know it."

It was observed by the experts in several of Stribling's workouts, with his rather inferior sparing partners, that he was winging punches into them rather close to the belt line. Pa was asked if the boy was training on foul punches and he denied it, of course.

"He is developing a new punch to the body," Pa said. "He uses this new punch with a downward twist of the wrist instead of bringing it up and with those great big pillows on his hands they look like low punches, but they are not. Ask the sparring partners."

And the sparring partners say they are not low.

Since Dempsey dropped Sharkey with the hook to the body everyone seems to think that Sharkey is a mark for body punishment.

No fighter, of course, likes to be hit in the stomach, but the name has been written for Sharkey that he can't stand up under body punishment.

It is reported around here that Promoter Dempsey thinks that Stribling is to be the winner and that he has even sent some words of advice to the boy. Give it to the guy in the belly, he is reported to have told him, and if he didn't tell him he has been telling every other person.

Mustangs Take Championship Game From Slaton Togers To Win Silver Trophy Awarded By League Officials

Lynn County Aggregation Wins Right To Meet Perryton In Bi-district Engagement; Slaton Crew Shows Results Of Strenuous Tournament

The rangy Wilson High school basketeers swept through the District Two tournament undefeated to capture the championsrip of the section after one of the hardest fought meets ever staged in Lubbock. Displaying unbeatable basketball, the Lynn County sharpshooters smothered Slaton in the final game of the tournament, 27 to 9, to win the silver trophy awarded by the Interscholastic League. By virtue of their triumph, the Mustangs will meet Perryton, the champions of District One, for bi-district honors.

Lockney, Seagraves, Post and Slaton were the victims of the onslaught staged by the husky Wilson aggregation. Fighting desperately to the end, the Lubbock county titlists went down in the last contest after bowling over all previous opposition, including the powerful Ralls Jackrabbits. Slaton had won over Ralls, Petersburg and Lamesa to enter the finals with the Lynn county team.

Tigers Show Strain.

Entering the deciding game of the meet with only a brief half-hour's rest after their win over Lamesa, the Bengals failed to show the aggressiveness that had carried them through the preliminaries and semi-finals. Coach Wright's long range sharpshooters who had been dealing misery to the opposition since the opening of the tournament were unable to function against the taller Wilson cagers. The close guarding of the winners held them to thre field goals in the entire game.

From the outset it was evident that Wilson held the upper hand over the plucky Slaton basket loopers. The Mustangs piled up a 10-2 lead by the end of the first quarter, but neither team was able to count during the second stanza. Stubborn defense on both sides held the score down and the half ended, 10-2.

The Tigers, sensing defeat, managed to break through for their three field goals in the closing frames, but Wilson continued to pass over and around the smaller Slaton men. Crews and Coleman were doing most of the damage for the winners. The strain of "You Can't Beat Wilson High," coming from the Wilson delegation seemed to have its psychological effect.

Crews with 11 points carried off scoring honors in the championship tilt. His nearest rival was Monroe with 4.

Semi-Fnials Hot.

The semi-finals furnished two of the bitterest contests of the tournament. Wilson and Post tangled up in a merry battle in the opening game Saturday night, displaying two teams that were just as evenly matched as it seemed possible. The Mustangs pulled away in the final period to cop the contest, 30 to 18.

Wilson cagers took the lead early, but was unable to put many points between themselves and Post. The half ended with the Mustangs leading, 14 to 11. Their ability to hold down Wall, the lanky Post center, was a factor in their victory. Wall had been leading the Antelopes in scoring with his follow-up tips through the loop. His height advantage proved their main hope.

An air-tight Wilson defense held the Post sharpshooters at bay in the last half, while Crews, Monroe and Company were counting 14 more. Crews led both teams in scoring with 13 points. Wall of Post was next with 6.

After a slow start, Slaton "got hot" in the final game of the semi-finals to trample the Lamesa aggregation by a 26 to 15 score. For a time, it looked like the Lubbock county entry had gone its limit, but as the game wore on, Coach Wright's long range artists swung into action and could not be stopped.

Thurman Looks Good.

Thurman was the whole show for Lamesa during the entire game, scoring 12 of the 15 points counted by the Dawson quintet. His ability to dribble through for close shots kept Lamesa on the heels of the Tigers until the final stanza when Brashfield and his mates began to rain baskets through the loop.

Scott of Slaton scored 14 points for scoring honors. His side court shots were consistent point winners. Defensive play of D. Cannon of Slaton and the floor performance of Ranson, Lamesa forward, was outstanding. Cannon proved to be the mainspring of the Tigers' attack, advancing the ball through the defense of the opposition of almost every play. His cool, deliberate passing and accurate shots marked him as a valuable package from the start of the tournament.

Saturday morning's games found the winners of the first round fighting to stay in the running. After the smoke of battle had cleared away, three more counties had been eliminated and three teams nearer to the title. Post, Wilson and Slaton, the victors, won their way to the semi-finals by defeating Dickens, Seagraves and Petersburg in the order named.

The Garza county basketeers were forced to extend themselves to the limit to outscore Dickens in the opening contest Saturday morning. After trailing Dickens throughout the game, the Post cagers spurted ahead in the last period to carry off a 30 to 27 victory. Harkey was the outstanding star of this contest, scoring 12 points and leading

Tech Basketball Season Finished; Average Of .600

Matadors Win 12 Out Of Twenty Games In Strenuous Season; Canyon Is Tech Jinx

Closing a hectic basketball season with various ups and downs, the Tech Matadors returned from their final series of the season with the Canyon Buffaloes Thursday night with 12 of the 20 games on their 1929 schedule recorded on the win side of the ledger. A survey of the strenuous season just past reveals the crimson cagers met some of the outstanding basketball aggregation of the state and made an exceptional showing, all things being considered.

Beginning the season with a barn full of green basketball candidates, Coach Payne developed a fast-stepping outfit before the season closed. Sickness, injuries and scholastic difficulties drove home telling blows to the Matadors' hopes. Disappointments and real surprises came in for their share of attention as the season waned. Veterans who were counted on to be the backbone of the team failed to come through and many new recruits came to the front with brilliant flashes of basketball.

Buffs Were Hard.

Running true to form, the West Texas Teachers proved to be the stumbling block on the Tech schedule. Meeting in two series, in Canyon and in Lubbock, the Buffaloes downed the locals in four straight games. Coach Burton's aggregation failed to cop the T. I. A. A. bunting but was one of the strongest teams in the state.

Opening the season with practice games with Wayland college and Spur All-Stars, the Matadors took the aspects of a winning basketball combination. Wayland went down on two occasions before Coach Payne's sharpshooters and Spur likewise succumbed in a single fracas.

The first conference team to visit the Matador stronghold was the Wildcat quintet of A. C. C. Tech forwards ran wild in the opening engagement to trample Dalton Hill's pupils, 42 to 30, but the tables were turned on the following night, the Christians winning, 46 to 27.

Invade Abilene.

On January 21, Coach Payne led the Matadors into his home town, Abilene, for a five-day series. Two games with A. C. C. and McMurry and one with Simmons resulted in three wins and two defeats for the Paynemen.

Returning from the Abilene invasion, the crimson crew began a home stand on February 1 that lasted through the 13th. Five of the eight games were recorded as wins; Canyon took two and the Daniel Baker Hill Billies the other. The two-game series with the Goats were the fastest seen in Lubbock during the entire season. Tech took the first by one point and lost the second by the same margin. Next came McMurry and Sul Ross and likewise four straight wins for the Matadors.

The season's record:
Jan. 4—Tech 46; Wayland 24.
Jan. 5—Tech 44; Spur 19.
Jan. 11—Tech 42; A. C. C. 30.
Jan. 12—Tech 27; A. C. C. 46.
Jan. 21— Tech 37; A. C. C. 23.
Jan. 22—Tech 32; A. C. C. 33.
Jan. 23—Tech 24; Simmons 35.
Jan. 24—Tech 22; McMurry 20.
Jan. 25—Tech 28; McMurry 11.
Feb. 1—Tech 47; Daniel Baker 46.
Feb. 5—Tech 14; Canyon 32.
Feb. 6—Tech 24; Canyon 33.
Feb. 8—Tech 35; McMurry 22.
Feb. 9—Tech 41; McMurry 25.
Feb. 12—Tech 52; Sul Ross 13.
Feb. 13—Tech 38; Sul Ross 13.
Feb. 20—Tech 26; Canyon 48.
Feb. 21—Tech 22; Canyon 51.
Total points—Tech 616; Opponents 550.

Eight Members Of Championship 1928 Team Remain To Carry On With Army Of Rookies And A Smattering Of Vets

Prime Triumph Of Off-Season Was Reestablishment Of Friendly Relations Of Manager and President

BY KERN TIPPS,
Chronicle Sports Editor
Written for the Associated Press

HOUSTON, Feb. 22.—Whether or nor the Houston Buffaloes will ever be the same after the ravages worked by sale, recall and trade under direction of Dr. Fred N. Ankenman is open to question, but you have the doctor's word for it that the Buffs, with a new pitching arm grafted here and a keen batting eye added there, will be anything but impotent when the Texas League race gets under way April 17.

Of the 22 players on the roster of the 1928 Texas League and Dixie series winner at the close of the season, a mere eight live to tell the tale to the army of rookies and a smattering of veterans that will report for spring training here March 1 and 5.

Snyder Back

Perhaps the prime triumph of the off season was the restablishment of friendly relations between President Ankenman and Manager Frank Snyder, involving the return of Snyder as Buff manager for 1929. Running a close second, however, are deals circulated to give Houston the proper proportion of veteran and raw material that will strive to carry on a singularly brief tradition, surrounding Houston's first league championship in a decade and a half.

In conforming with the league's new five rookie rule, Houston does not aim to concede anything in the matter of player strength, for the Buffs managed throughout the season last year with four rookies. The addition of a fifth isn't expected to revolutionize prospects.

Recruits Plentiful

Granting that there is safetly in numbers, Ankenman has attached the services of some 17 raw recruits to be paraded before Snyder in spring training. If Houston finds two that are worth hanging on to it will be a successful experiment. Held over from last year are Jim Lindsey, a pitcher, catchers Carl Littlejohn and Dick Whitworth; catchers Snyder and Abbott; infielders Eddie Hock, Lou Benson and Joel Hunt, and outfielder Raymond Powell. Benson never saw league service with the Buffs last year, although he still is on the active roll. Hunt, former Texas Aggie backfield star, was out with the Laurel, Cotton States League club last year but came in toward the close of the season.

With this sextette as the home guard, the Buffs have set about to rebuild and thus far have made a good job of it, having as strong a "paper" team as they had at this time last year.

Dick Burrus, former Boston Braves first baseman, who went to Indianapolis when the Braves signed George Sisler, came to Houston along with Catcher Paul Florence in the offseason in return for first baseman Pete Monahan, who previously had been acquired by Houston from Rochester in part payment for centerfielder George Watkins.

Jordan Promising

Further infield power has been added with acquisition of Ira Smith third baseman and short stop and Jimmy Jordan, second baseman in outright purchase from Rochester. The former was with the International League club all last season and went well. Jordan played the major part of the season with the Dayton, Central League club, leading that circuit in batting, home runs, runs scored and total bases, and playing a bang up fielding game.

Harold Funk, sturdy young catcher of the Waynesboro, Class D, Blue Ridge League, was also added to the Buff roster. As a matter of detail Ankenman picked up right handed pitcher Saldavor Gilatto, from the Terre Haute, Three Eye League club and pitcher Floyd Rose, of the Topeka, Western Association outfit.

More recent developments add justification to Houston's hopes for another pennant contender this year. The Buffs got lefthanded pitcher Art Reinhart from the Cardinals, then acquired righthander Leo Moon from Indianapolis. Ken Penner, Buff righthander for four years has been sold to Indianapolis.

Having thus attended to the details, in part, at least of a pretty well depleted infield and pitching staff, Houston again carried its case before the St. Louis Cardinals and came off with outfielders Howard Williamson and Pepper Martin. Martin was with the Buffs, in 1927, but went back to the Cards last season. Williamson is a former Texas University star who seasoned at Syracuse and St. Louis.

Pitcher Jake Freeze has been bought conditionally from the Waco Cubs with the agreement that if he fails to make good with the Buffs within 30 days he be returned to Waco. Manager Snyder has faith in the Waco righthander. Vic Keen, who was sent to Houston with Monahan, by Rochester, has been sold his outright release.

McALLEN WINS DISTRICT 27

McALLEN, Feb. 23. (AP)—McAllen high school won the district 27 interscholastic league basketball championship here today, defeating Brownsville, 39 to 23.

New Golf Course To Open In Month

Grady Higginbotham's Nine Hole Course To Be One Of Best In Section; Club House Unique

Offering to the golf enthusiasts of the South Plains one of the finest and most up-to-date golf courses in this section of the state, Grady Higginbotham yesterday announced that the first nine holes of his 18-hole course, about one and a half miles north of the city on the Plainview highway, would be open to the public within the next 30 days.

With routing completed for all of the 18 holes, work is expected to begin in the near future on the sand greens. If the course mets with the desired success it is planned to later put in grass greens.

The clubhouse, compact and complete, is virtually completed and ready for occupancy. The house is connected with a windmill and will contain a shower, locker rooms for both golf clubs and clothes, and a shop. In addition to handling a full line of golf equipment, Mr. Higginbotham will maintain a rent service for clubs, and will keep sets of clubs in first class condition at the clubhouse for a nominal monthly payment.

More than a score of workmen are engaged in putting the course in shape. A dam is being built across the small stream which runs across the course. When completed the damn will raise the height of the water about two feet, creating several water hazards. Several small bridges are being constructed across the stream.

The course will contain a number of difficult and interesting holes, and "Hig" promises that anyone who plays the course will be qualified to play on any other in the country. Future plans for the course depend upon the reception the public affords the first nine holes, Higginbotham says.

Higginbotham is well known throughout this section not only as a player and a professional but because of his ability to lay off a golf course as well. With the completion of this course, he hopes to create a new interest of the game in Lubbock and nearby towns.

Rockne Asks For Two-Game Series With Local Nine

Plans For Contests Tentative For April 29, 30 Or May 1 and 2; Answer Is Expected Soon

Prospect for a two-game baseball series between Texas Tech and Notre Dame flared up late yesterday when E. Y. Freeland, Tech athletic director, received a message from Knute Rockne stating that his baseball team would consider a series here April 29 and 30, or May 1 and 2.

The famous Notre Dame mentor will include Texas in his tour of the South this season, meeting Texas university, A. and M. and other outstanding teams.

Although the plans for the series are only tentative, Tech officials believe that Lubbock fans will be given the opportunity to see the well-known coach and his team in action. Mr. Freeland informed Rockne in a return message concerning the dates and guarantee on the series. An answer is expected within the next few days.

Kentucky Derby To Be "Most Open" In History Of Racing

(By Associated Press)

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 23.—Kentucky turf experts after studying the list of 159 colts, fillies, and geldings nominated for the 55th renewal of the Kentucky derby tonight believed that the race at Churchill Downs May 18 may be "one of the most open derbies in history."

The list, made public today by Colonel Matt J. Winn, president of the American Turf association and executive director of Churchill Downs, contained the names of most of the outstanding money-winners in the two year old class of 1928, but one name was conspicuously absent.

The Three D's stables of Fort Worth, Texas, owned by W. T. Waggoner and sons nominated nine three year olds for the race, the largest number of any owner. E. R. Bradley nominated four.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23. (AP)—Paavo Nurmi of Finland failed to appear for his scheduled start in the two mile steeple chase event at the national indoor track and field championships at Madison Square Garden tonight and was immediately disqualified for further competition in this country by the A. A. U. registration committee.

Word was received at 9 o'clock from Nurmi that he would not be able to compete. No reason was given. The committee met at once and took the drastic action which will keep the seven times Olympic champion from doing his stuff on American tracks until he explains his withdrawal to the A. A. U.'s satisfaction.

Duncan Accounts Still Fall Short Of Her Own Life

For Once, Genuine 'True Story' Is The Best

ONE of the minor "inside" literary debates of the moment happens to concern the person most eminently fitted to finish the story of Isadora Duncan.

This was begun by the inspired Isadora herself in that amazing autobiography, "My Life," as frank appealing a human document as this survey has encountered. Her strange death interrupted the possibility of anything further from her own pen.

Now, within a few days of each other, have appeared two books relating the last chapters of her life. Naturally the authors would like the public to believe that each is best qualified to carry on the tale to its finish—or at least the publishers would.

On one hand there is Mary Desti, who authored the volume "The Untold Story" (Liverright). Mary Desti was Isadora's closest friend for 20 years or more; a companion and confidante as well as friend. It is told that Mary Desti once discussed the possibility of memoirs and suggested doing them, whereupon Isadora replied: "Mary, I believe you will write them. Well, you have my permission." And that is that.

Then there is Irma Duncan, one of her adopted daughters and favorite pupil, who collaborated with Allan Ross MacDougall on "Isadora Duncan's Russian Days" (Covici-Fried).

Without seeking to play the role of referee, it seems to us a toss-up. The books do not conflict, though sometimes they touch upon similar ground. On such occasions as they do, there seems to be a different of opinion. Anecdotes contrast, but persons involved often differ. Both are interesting for they deal with an incredibly fascinating personality.

Yet, somehow, they are estranged from the Isadora Duncan of her own autobiography. Isadora was, as the world knows, a delightful and colorful rebel who has become an almost legendary figure—almost a goddess. But one felt the goddess more in her own book than in that of her friends and admirers.

Mary Desti approaches her almost in a hushed voice and while there are perfectly frank tales of her belated marriage to the tippling young Russian poet, Essennin; and while the disappointments met by Isadora when she opened her temple of terpsichore in Soviet Russia are well related; while her shattered dreams of release from commercialism are all here, still and all, we feel that even a biography can go to the Boswell once too often. There seemed quite a dull crash when one recalls the candor and abandon of her own confessions.

Shantung Riots Bring On Other Revolt Gestures

Existence Of Movements Against Existing Regime Acknowledged by Spokesman For Party

(By Associated Press)

SHANGHAI, Feb. 23.—The Shantung disorders, eventuating into hard fighting near Chefoo, have brought on other campaigns against the nationalist regime at Nanking. Existence of the movements was acknowledged by a spokesman for the Kuomingtang party here today.

He told Chinese newspapermen that communists in Central China were spreading propaganda in the nationalist armies urging armed uprising. He said they also were using widespread anti-Japanese sentiment to stir up general dissatisfaction and that last week nationalists authorities at Hankow had arrested there the leaders of an extensive communist plot.

Chairman Reported Ousted

Word also came here that General Lu Ti-Ping, chairman of the provincial government of Hunan with headquarters at Chang Sha, had been ousted by three subordinates, one of whom, General Ho Chien, had assumed the post. It was said that the coup d'etat was executed with the connivance of Hankow authorities believed seeking means to embarrass the Nanking government or possibly planning an active revolt with support of the Canton government.

However, these alarming possibilities were discounted by reports from British and American naval officers at Hankow who said the Chang Sha trouble was purely local and was not expected to develop into anything of nation wide concern.

General Lu was accused by his subordinates of misappropriating provincial funds, refusing to pay the troops of the men who ousted him neglecting to suppress banditry, imposing exorbitant taxes, and in general, mismanaging affairs of the province. Lu attempted to resist the ousting but he lost a sharp fight between troops of the opposing factions and had to flee from Changsha.

Helps Hope Chest

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The curiosity of Miss Fannie Axelrod, 21, when she saw a woman in an automobile with her fiance has added $50 to her hope chest. Magistrate Healy ordered Sussman Bailin to pay her that amount in lieu of a fine when both were arrested for speeding. Bailin said he was taking the woman home at the request of a friend and speeded to avoid the embarrassing meeting. The couple left court arm in arm.

O'Henry Cottage Now Shrine

A little house (above) on a side street in Austin, Texas, is pointed out to visitors as the place where O. Henry (inset) wrote his first successful short story, 'An Afternoon Miracle.'

Visitors Drawn To Texas Home Of Great Writer

AUSTIN, Feb. 23 (AP).—On a side street in this capital city is a little house, barely a shack now, to which visitors are led.

It is the home where lived William Sydney Porter, who, writing under the name of O. Henry, became one of this country's most beloved literary men. His first successful short story, "An Afternoon Miracle," was written there.

To this unpretentious house he took his bride, the pretty Athol Estes, shortly after their marriage in Austin, July 5, 1887.

Their married life was brief, however. She died in 1897. Her mother, Mrs. P. G. Roach, died here January of this year. The Roach home was across the street from the house where the young couple started housekeeping.

Porter came to Austin in March, 1884, from the R. W. Hall ranch in La Salle county, where he had spent two years. He clerked at a durg store a short time and afterward kept books for a firm of land agents.

When R. W. Hall became Texas land commissioner in 1887, Porter became a draftsman in the office and remained there until Hall's retirement in 1891, when he became a teller at the First National bank.

While in the bank Porter bought the Iconoclast, changed its name to the Rolling Stone and ran it as a humorous weekly. He left the bank in 1894 to devote all his time to the paper, but it failed soon afterward.

Out of work for months, excepting a short period of employment on the San Antonio Express, he went to Houston in October, 1895, as reporter for the Post.

In 1896 he was indicted on charges bezzlement during his employment at the First National bank, and he left for Austin to stand trial. On the way he changed his mind and leaving the train, fled first to New Orleans and then to Central America.

He returned to Austin when he learned his wife was near death. He was tried in federal court and sentenced to five years' imprisonment in 1898. He served in a penitentiary all the time except 18 months allowed for good behavior. Many of O'Henry's friends always believed him innocent.

O. Henry died June 5, 1910. His only child, Margaret Worth Porter, was born in Austin in 1889 and spent her earliest years in the house where her father started to write. She died in California two years ago.

Operation Record

Although he is only 18 years of age, Ralph Snodgrass, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., has undergone 47 operations within the last six years as the result of a great toe infection. But one year behind his class, despite his continued absence from the school room, he plans to become a doctor.

Turns Of A Bookworm

EVER alert for problems to write about, novelists are discovering more and more material in the life of the negroes, south and north.

No fewer than four negro novels have been published in February, three of them almost simultaneously. Another appeared last fall, and two more may be expected in the spring. The writers have found dark loam fertile.

Julia Peterkin and DuBose Heyward added to their stories of the southern negro in "Scarlet Sister Mary" and "Mamba's Daughters," the former about a Magdalen of the cotton fields, the latter about a negress who helped her daughter's child escape the old environment and achieve operatic success in the north.

Now comes Roark Bradford, another white southerner, with "This Side of Jordan," in which is shown the effect of education and agricultural progress on a Louisiana plantation where ignorance and superstition long prevailed.

His heroine is Didge, a tempestuous girl proud that she, like her Aunt Crip, is a pagan and a witch. Didge and her people on the banks of the Bayou Rouge are primitive in their loves and hates, half "sinners," half "Christians." One of them, Young Jack, is sent away to school so that he can take charge of the labor when tractors and horses are put to work on fields cultivated for years by "hands."

Jack brings back "civilized" ideas and an educated brown skinned girl he intends to make his wife. But mulattos are unwanted among the bayou folks—one woman had to leave because her child was too light—and John is won back to his people by Didge. Together they enter a new life when the Mississippi flood completes the breaking up of the old plantation.

THE COLOR LINE

The difference of color between mulattos and pure blooded negroes is only incidental to Bradford's story, but it forms the main theme of "The Blacker the Berry" and "Plum Bun," both by negro novelists who live in New York. Wallace Thurman wrote the former and Jessie Redmon Fauset the latter.

Thurman took his title from an old folk-saying: "The blacker the berry the sweeter the juice." Emma Lou, the central character, however, found the saying did not apply to her own life. The coal black daughter of northern parents, she felt deeply the slights of the lighter "blue-veins." An exaggerated color consciousness, amounting to an inferiority complex, resulted. To overcome it, she flees to New York, after having acquired an education. But there she finds more unhappiness; in Harlem, too, light complexions are preferred.

Interstate Commerce Commission Hears Plans For Revision Of Rates On Cotton Seed Products

FORT WORTH, Feb. 23.—The interstate commerce commission hearing on proposed revision of rates on cotton seed and cotton seed products was adjourned today by examiners Monney and Esch, at the conclusion of testimony by D. H. Taylor of Quanah.

The hearing opened Monday with members of the Texas railroad commission sitting jointly with the I. C. C. examiners. Chief Rate Clerk Hudnall represented the Texas commission at the closing of the hearing.

The case, in progress about three years, will be closed at hearings in Chicago, and New York in March.

Hurlwood Boys Burned In Silo

Wadlow and Rufus Ashcraft Start Fire in 35-Foot Silo And Escape Death With Serious Injuries

Seriously burned and perhaps marked for life, Wadlow and Rufus Ashcraft, 14 and 12 years of age, respectively, of the Hurlwood community, are suffering from burns received the latter part of the week as a result of their boyhood play.

Entering a 35-foot silo on the Clarence Simms farm near Hurlwod, the youths piled up trash in the bottom of the silo and started a fire. The blaze spread rapidly, enveloping them before they had a chance to escape. Their faces and hands were badly seared.

As the silo turned into a blazing pit of fire, the youths escaped probable death by climbing a ladder out of the structure. Medical aid was rendered by a local physician and the youths were reported improved yesterday.

ABERNATHY NEWS

BY MRS. W. A. RICHTER

CHEESE FACTORY ASSURED

F. W. and B. F. Struve have completed plans for erecting and operating a modern cheese plant, to be located in the east part of town. They have visited plants in different parts of this state and New Mexico and feel that it is an ideal location for a factory of this kind. This feel assured that this will enable the farmers to get a better price for their whole milk and will bring more and better milk cows into the country.

They expect to use 10,000 pounds of milk daily. The plant will be built so that its capacity can be increased as the country develops.

An expert cheese factory man will arrive here in the next few days to assist in the erection of the building and placing of the machinery.

Recorded In Your Book of Judgment

Every woman mentally rates every store with which she does business. The character of their merchandise, the alertness of the store to be the first with the newest and smartest, and the fairness of prices, are all factors that are very influential in determining the extent of her patronage.

The courtesy of the sales people and their ability to be of real assistance, the dependability of the delivery service, make their impressions too.

The policy of the store to make selections as complete as possible, to treat your visit with courteous consideration whether you make a purchase or not, are all very important.

Our store and merchandise is so highly rated that many persons—those who have never traded here—believe that we are a high priced store.

Our price tags tell an entirely different story. Not only are prices low, but they give you more quality per dollar.

"Abie's Irish Rose" Heads Film Card

Famous Play Now Made Into Talkie By Film Company

Singing, Dialogue, Sound Effects In Cinema

ANNE Nichols' record-breaking stage success, "Abie's Irish Rose," which kept capacity audiences going into nightly convulsions of laughter for some sixe years at the Republic Theater in New York city, and which during that period likewise had crowds in cities over the land a-titter, comes to the Palace starting Sunday and running for four days.

"Abie's Irish Rose" is coming to Lubbock as a talking movie before it has visited any other city in the state, according to the Palace management.

Scenario rights to the film were bought for a record price from the author. Paralleling the initial cost of the production, its producers spared no expense to make of it the very best "talkie" it was possible to produce.

Interspersed throughout the comedy are songs, dialogue and sound effects.

The film will afford a thorough test for the new Palace talking pictures equipment.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday the Palace will present "State Street Sadie", featuring Conrad Nagel and Myrna Loy.

The film is notable, for one thing, in that it is the first Vitaphone Talking Picture to be presented at the Palace since the new apparatus was installed.

It will be the first opportunity for Lubbock fans to hear, as well as see Conrad Nagel. And Nagel has always been a popular performer here.

Chester Conklin, one of the screen's funny men, is the feature performer for the week at the Lyric. Conklin comes in "Taxi Thirteen."

The program for the week also includes Lincoln Steadman in "The Warning Signal," Owen Moore and Sena Owens in "His Last Haul," and Tom Tyley in "Terror Mountain."

Western pictures headline the card at the Rex. Bad Man's Money," a 5-reel Western photoplay, is featured on Friday and Saturday with an installment of the serial, "The Mystery Rider." Al Wilson in "The Sky Skidder," and Virginia Brown Faire in 'Hazardous Valley," are other outstanding attractions booked for the week.

Eleven kids, a nagging wife, a bucking taxi, license number 13 on his antiquated hack, the liabilities: Scotch thrift and Dutch luck his assets. Angus MacTavish, a Don Juan of the traficf jams, (portrayed by Chester Conklin) plunges into a series of uproarious and howling adventures in "Taxi 13" at the Lyric.

"Taxi 13" is said to afford the walrus-moustached star one of those fast moving, laugh provoking ribtickling vehicles for which he is famous. There is also a not of pathos and a touch of sentiment in the role of Andy Smith which is said to be decidedly suited to the volatile temperament of the star whost most recent success, "The Big Noise," has been making a genuine noise in the motion picture palaces of the nation.

Four New Beauties Of The Silver Screen

Quartet Of New Beauties Chosen By Pathe Films

One Of Hollywood's Newcomers Was Former Clerk

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Feb. 23 — A quartet of beauty!

That's the way Pathe executives refer to the four flaming damsels given long-term contracts during the past month.

After a considerable period of near-inactivity on the Pathe lot, it looks like things are due for a considerable boom there. Four likely looking actresses are not signed unless they can be used.

Having no personal prejudices but a natural aptitude for brunets (which proves I'm no gentleman), the writer would point to 21-year-old Dorothy Appleby as the most beautiful of the beauty quartet. Dorothy is a perfect example of why cautious mothrs warn their sons to wear dark glasses! She was a success on the legitimate stage.

Valentino Found Her

Miss Appleby is the first of her family to take up acting as a career. The girl was just 16 when Rudolph Valentino made a tour of the United States to select the leading beauty of each state. He named Dorothy "Miss Maine."

Another protege of the New York stage, June Nash, appears destined for success in Hollywood, particularly if the talkies continue to hold out June faced a movie camera for the first time when she was four years old. Four years later she made her debut behind the footlights, playing a child role in "Daddies." Other stage roles followed in rapid succession.

A few months ago June decided to take another fling at the movies where she had met with good fortune as a child. Her first job was the leading feminine role in "Companionate Marriage." A short time ago she tried to secure a role in "Strange Cargo," a 100 per cent talkie. Failing to get an appointment with Benjamin Glazer, she called him on the phone. The director was so impressed by her voice that he asked her to come to his office imediately. The visit resulted in her securing the role she desired and also a contract.

Dorothy Ward got her first lucky break because Phyllis Haver happened to go into a ten-cent store where she was working about a year ago. Phyllis thought she looked like a good bet and took her to the studio. Cecil B. DeMille gave her a small part in "The Goddess Girl." Following that the girl struggled along playing extra parts and small bits, but getting nowhere. But now she has a long-term contract, largely because of her fine voice and pretty face.

Marilyn Morgan had never been back stage in a theater or inside of a motion picture studio until a few weeks ago when she was given a voice and screen test at Pathe. Miss Morgan, a native of Trinidad, West Indies, was introduced to William Sistrom, general manager of the Pathe studio, by a mutual friend. Sistrom was impressed by her charm and ordered a test made of her. The test was a success and her contract followed. She will be cast in a picture within the next few weeks.

That's the "quartet of beauty." It will be interesting to see what they accomplish.

County Schools Observe Holiday

Washington's Birthday Friday was celebrated at a number of Lubbock county rural schools by joint Arbor and Washington's birthday.

New Hope, County Line, Grovesville, Acuff and others planted trees about their school yards in connection with the day's celebrations. Programs were given at Grovesville and Carlisle.

With approximately fifty persons present, a parent teachers association was organized at Carlisle Friday. An entertainment program was featured by talks by Miss Mae Murfee, county school superintendent; Mrs. Alvin Wheelock, council member of the parent teachers association, and Prof. Witt of the local schools, who aided in the organization of the association there.

'Broadway Melody' Approaches Near To Perfect "Talkie"

Production Set New Mark For Sound Photoplays

BY DAN THOMAS
NEA Service Writer

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Feb. 23—A steady downpour of rain . . . luxurious limousines . . . ermine wraps stovepipe hats . . and derbies . . . policemen in slickers and boots . . . dazzling lights weaving to and fro across the low-hanging clouds . . . scores of "psychopathic patients" huddling close together in vain efforts to keep as dry as possible while trying to catch occasional glimpses of celluloid celebrities as they enter Grauman's Chines theater for the world premier of "Broadway Melody" . . . wonder what it is that lures people out on such a night just to see a few movie stars . . . most of them went home happy despite their drenching . . . but they didn't see anything . . . . the real treat came to us fortunate one who had seats inside . . . boy, what a picture that "Broadway Melody" is!

Many people deserve a lot of credit for the success of this all-talking film. And it is a huge success—in "squawkie" producers to shoot at. Prior to "Broadway Melody" Warner Brothers held the laurels for talking pictures on the strength of their two Al Jolson films. But those pictures were hits because of Jolson and his songs. In "Broadway Melody" Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has a really entertaining film not dependent upon one or two personalities.

Highest acting honors go to Bessie Love, who portrays the role of "Hank," one of two dancing sisters. Bessie, who was about "washed up" in the picture racket, is again sitting on top of the pinacle—her award for a flawless performance, including her talking.

Anita Page, who has been a "shooting star" during her short career of less than a year, supplied the touch of beauty to the production. And Anita can do that. I doubt if there is a more beautiful girl in Hollywood. In addition she did a mighty fine piece of acting and her voice was a pleasant surprise, far beyond expectations.

Charles King, who was imported from the New York stage to play the role of a song-and-dance man who had just crashed into the "big time," does some good work. His songs and dances are fine. But his performance as a whole falls short of those of Anita and Bessie.

An outstanding feature is high quality of both photograph and sound. So far either one or the other has suffered in the majority of talking films. Douglas Shearer worked day and night for weeks to get the best results from the dialogue and sound, and the results show it.

Bessie Love Star Of Best Talking Film Up To Date

Former Favorite Of Stage Figures In Comeback

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—In the more critical circles, the point of debate remains Eugene O'Neill and his latest opus, "Dynamo."

But in mid-Broadway, where they talk in terms of "box office receipts," the conversation centers on the vast success of a talking picture, "Broadway Melody"—and particularly are they discussing Bessie Love. For Bessie Love is the first of the fine talking picture actresses. At the moment she tops the list. There are few better bits of character playing to be found on the Broadway stage at the moment, and the big street knows it. Bessie Love has "come back."

And therein lies a tale.

Most of the picture fans already know that Bessie had taken the long slide that so many film celebrities have experienced. One of the best bets of ten years ago, or so—in the days when the old Triangle company was alive—her recession began with the death of Triangle. During the past few years you would see her in "bits." But the general opinion was that she was through.

Hal the cinema remained silent, this might well have been the case. And that would have been too bad.

* * *

The raid upon "My Girl Friday" became the only enlivening event of a very dull play week. It really wasn't worth the time and trouble taken in raiding it.

"All the King's Horsemen" is a better title than a play. It concerns a Babbitt of the advertising business who goes about spouting Slogans.

"Fioretta" was Earl Carroll's contribution to sufferers from eye trouble. Perhaps the most elaborate production in New York, it nevertheless grows wearisome. It does prove Carroll to be a producer of no mean ability, but the songs and comedy are weak, leaving nothing but the spectacle.

"The Whispering Gallery," a British mystery thriller which has had great success in London, provides creeps only for those who are unaccustomed to black stages and revolver. To the uninitiate in mystery play patterns, it would be good entertainment; otherwise the formula is too familiar.

TO JUDGE LATIN CONTEST

Mrs. William Dingus, instructor in the Latin department, has been asked to judge essays in a state-wide Latin tournament which will be held in March. The Classical Teachers' League of Texas will conduct the contest which is an annual affair.

The contests will be conducted in various parts of the state and Mrs. Dingus is to go to Canyon.

CONTINUE BEAUTIFYING CAMPUS

Work on the driveways of the campus and the beautification of the grounds which has been carried on all during the winter months has taken on greater interest with the approach of spring. The plot of grass in front of the administration building has been burned off and presents a dismal aspect.

ATTENDS MEET SATURDAY

J. F. McDonald, head of the department of extension at Tech, attended the Commission on Correspondence and Extension Work in Fort Worth yesterday. An all-day session was conducted to plan a study of the extension source of twenty colleges of the state which are doing some type of extension instruction.

This session was held as a result of charges of inefficiency and low standards in extension work made by one of the speakers in an association of colleges meeting last December. The commission is to make a study of the situation and report to the next meeting of this association in April.

Registrar E. L. Dohoney and his assistants have sent out the termly call for the returning of grade books. Winter term reports are due in the office on March 18 and will be issued shortly afterwards. Failure to hand in the books will entail the payment of one dollar before grades are given out.

REGISTRATION CLIMBS

Car Total In County Nears 8,000 Mark

Up to late Saturday Lubbock county had registered a total of 7,932 passenger automobiles and 680 motor trucks, for 1929. In addition to these there have been 2,240 automobile transfers issued.

While payment of this year's auto licenses have slacked up somewhat since February 1, there are still a number of cars being driven wtih 1928 license plates, as is revealed in the fact that Justice of the Peace G. R. Scott yesterday fined two drivers $9.15 each for such violation.

Two Movies To Be Shown At College

Two motion pictures, heralded as both educational and entertaining, will be shown to the public free Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock at the Engineering auditorium of Tech college.

The first picture will be "Romance of Rayon," a graphic and authoritative depiction of all the facts concerning rayon silk, and the other will be a three-real picture "Cotton Industry" picturing the ginning and marketing of cotton, processes in the manufacture of yarn, hose, towels and other cloth.

These films are sponsored by the Tech Textile Engineering department, and the public is invited to attend.

"VOICE FROM DEAD"

Deceased Actor Will Be Heard On Vitaphone

Like "a voice from the dead," William Russell, movie star who died last week at Hollywood, will be heard in a vitaphone talking picture act at the Palace the latter part of this week.

Quarter Million Asked With Suit

Appointment Of Receiver And Recovery Of Taxes Sought From Primtex Refning Company, Dallas

(By Associated Press)

AUSTIN, Feb. 23.—Appointment of a receiver and recovery of $224,000 claimed due to taxes and penalties is asked in a suit against the Primtex Refining company of Dallas, filed on behalf of the state in district court here today. The action was brought by R. M. Tilley, assistant attorney general, at the instance of S. H. Terrell, comptroller.

An injunction also is asked to restrain the defendants from "removing, secreting, destroying, changing and mutilating their records."

It is alleged that the company's assets are less than $35,000, that liabilities are at least $50,000, and that it is "insolvent, or if not insolvent, is in immediate danger of insolvency."

Legislation For Widespread Rail Mergers Favored

Recommendations Come In Week When Some of Big Systes Have Suggested Plans Of Own

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—Legislation to facilitate widespread railroad consolidation was reported favorably to the senate today at the end of a week during which some of the country's most important rail interests have advanced specific plans in the same field to the interstate commerce commission.

Senator Fess, republican, Ohio, acting for the majority of the senate interstate commerce committee presented a consolidation bill with an explanation of its purpose and the statute modifications it contemplates.

Though the text of the measure made no reference to the individual consolidations pending, its terms have intimate association with the enterprises now launched which look to creation of giant rail mergers, some of them planned on a scale looking to the fusion of 15 or 20 sizable transporatation systems in one management unit.

The latest and perhaps the largest of these propositions were submitted to the interstate commerce commission only three days ago, one by the Baltimore and Ohio system which asked approval for the acquisition of nearly 8,000 miles of additional line. The other consolidation proposal was submitted by the Van Swearingen interests of Cleveland, who asked the right to build out of rail properties they now control and others they hope to buy a new eastern trunk line with 14,000 miles of track.

Northwest Merger Planned

Though these projects affect only the northeastern quarter of the country, there is awaiting the commission's final word the provisionally completed merger of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern systems, in the northwest, whose joint control of the Burlington system, reaching southward to the Mexican gulf, would put 25,000 miles of road in a single merger.

Fess's report explained that the bill was designed to facilitate such unification of rail systems by merger, financial control, or corporate consolidation as might be deemed in the public interest by the interstate commerce commission. The bill repeats the sanction of former statutes even for the consolidation of "parallel and competing railroads", which was once forbidden by anti-trust legislation.

The measure also proposes methods of satisfying minority stockholders opposing consolidations, and it also would direct the interstate commerce commission to make plans for a general railroad merger. The bill further would extend provisions for tax exemption in security operations undertaken to bring about approved mergers, and generally would seek to facilitate the process advocated.

In a nine years little consolidation has gone through.

The program of L. F. Loree, for merging the Kansas City Southern, Missouri-Kansas-Texas, and St. Louis Southwestern, met with flat rejection from the commission, as did the proposal of the Norfolk and Western to lease the Virginian system.

Infant Croons In Reformatory Crib While Mother Faces Murder Charges

The nursery at Marysville reformatory, and, inset, Baby Mazure, its newest occupant, and Superintendent Louise M. Mittendrof

By BONITA WITZ
Staff Writer for Central Press and The Avalanche-Journal

MARYSVILLE, O., Feb. 23.—A wail from one corner of the big, cheerful nursery. A gurgle from one crib—a snatch of baby laughter from another. Sounds of life, infant life. And that's the welcome accorded Baby Mazure, just two weeks old, on her arrival at the Marysville reformatory for women.

Babies in a reformatory! In 1929!

While Baby Mazue kicks contentedly in her crib, her mother fights desperately for life in the reformatory hospital.

Just the day before her baby was born Mrs. Julia Mazure was sentenced at Lorain, O., to serve six months for her third violation of the prohibition law. Worry over the probable fate of her seven other children and her invalid husband aggravated her condition and she failed to convalesce rapidly. Then, when her baby was 12 days old, officers bundled her and the child into an automobile and drove to Marysville, 139 miles away, that there might be no delay in the expiation of Mrs. Mazure's crime.

Demand Investigation

Examination at the reformatory showed that she would probably have to undergo an operation as the result of the exposure suffered during the ride, and Superintendent Louise M. Mittendorf, of Marysville, has demanded that an investigation be made of the mother's removal from a Lorain hospital to the reformatory when she was physically unable to make the trip.

Baby Mazure has six companions in the nursery, as healthy a lot of babies as you would find in any nursery in the country.

The state of Ohio reasons that babies of tender age ought not be separated from their mothers, even if those mothers are serving sentences, and children born to women already in the reformatory should not immediately be taken from them. The babies are kept at Marysville until they are two years old, and, if their mothers have not become eligible for parole by that time, and no relatives claim them, they are placed in homes by the state board of charities.

"The tragic part of this," says Superintendent Louise Mittendorf, "is that the reformatory is the best home some of these youngsters ever will know."

Babies and bars is a strange combination, yet these mothers are glad of the opportunity to have their children with them. Each evening, from five to six o'clock, they are allowed to sit with their babies, sing to them and tell them stories, just as more fortunate mothers do.

Daughter of a "Lifer"

Most of the infants have mothers who are serving short terms, but one little blue-eyed girl, a few days younger than Baby Mazure, is the daughter of a "lifer," who must spend the rest of her days in Marysville because she killed her husband.

While the babies coo and gurgle in their tiny cribs, their mothers are learning to cook and bake, to do laundry work, to make toys and ornaments, to sew and quilt so that they will at least be able to make intelligent use of their leisure, when they are released, which, according to Mrs. Mittendorf, is the reason most of them are in the institution—their inability to keep out of trouble in their spare moments.

Few persons are admitted to the white-curtained nursery, so the advent of a photographer and a reporter put the usually quiet room into an uproar. Seven pairs of lungs screamed lustily and Baby Mazure, who "never cries," wailed even louder than the rest, protesting against the invasion.

In the hospital Mrs. Mazure cannot hear the wails from the nursery as she lies on her bed, struggling for life and eagerly awaiting the day when she can join the six other mothers who croon to their babies from five to six.

Grand Jury Brings In 33 Indictments

Lubbock County Group Does Much Work During Sessions Of Past 3 Weeks; Arrests Are Made

Recessing late Friday until March 18, the Lubbock county grand jury had reported a total of 33 bills of felony indictments, four of them being returned Friday. Of the last four, three were for violation of prohibition laws and one for disposition of mortgaged property. The greater percentage of the 33 indictments were for pro law violations.

A number of arrests have already been made, the indictments in a great many instances following arrests by the sheriff's department, and some by the city police force jointly with the sheriff's force. Following are named some of those charged and arrested:

L. C. Williamson, arrested Thursday, for pro law violation, made bond of $1,000. Sam Dawson, billed for swindling, is in the county jail, with $1,000 bond set. Mrs. Mary L. Kerr, pro law violation, is being held under failure to make $750 bond. B. K. Bruce, negro, charged with driving a car while intoxicated, is held with $1,000 bond set. Joe Martinez, Mexican, billed for theft of over $50, held and has $100 bond unmade. B. J. Manning, pro law violation, in jail with $1,000 bail not yet made. J. D. Wynne, another pro law violation case, $1,000 bond unmade. Johnnie Wilburn, negro, stealing an automobile, $1,000 bond set and in jail. J. C. Barnard, pro law charge, who was out on bond was rearrested and has another bond of $1,000. T. J. Wren, pro law charge, also out on another bond, rearrested and held in lieu of making $1,000 bond. T. J. Wren, and W. M. Kerr, both pro law charges, rearrested and facing $1,000 bond.

Pharr To Sit In 72nd Criminal Trials This Week

Eleven criminal cases are docketed for trial before Judge Homer L. Pharr, in th Seventy-Second district court here next week. Nine of the cases are the outgrowth of charges for violating prohibition laws, the other being for theft of cattle. They are listed as follows:

State of Texas versus Slim Rutledge, O. H. Gholson, E. L. Croslin, S. F. Gentry, Jim Henderson, Richard Moore, Mrs. Mary L. Kerr, Velma Martin and August Frost, violations of the prohibition laws, and against Charles O. Mitchell, driving a car while intoxicated, and D. V. Tatum, theft of cattle.

Damage Suits Are Before Mullican

Next week's session of the Ninety-Ninth district court will be occupied at its opening with setting of the docket for the remaining six weeks of the present term, six of which have just passed.

During the past week and a half Judge Clark M. Mullican, of the court, was principally occupied with the trial of four damage suits, which were jury trials. Each of these cases were the outgrowth of automobile accidents. The last one of these was completed late Friday, it being styled Truman Wall versus M. B. Cross.

Damages of $10,000 were asked by Wall, in his petition claiming that Cross' automobile turned directly in front of his motorcycle, at the corner of Eighteenth Street and Avenue F, and collided with him, knocking him down and running over him. He received a broken leg as a result of this accident. The jury awarded him $1,000 damages.

NEW GASSER COMES IN

Volume In Mitchell Well Is Estimated At 10 Million

SAN ANGELO, Feb. 23 (AP)—Blowing gas estimated at 10,000,000 cubic feet from 606 feet in sand, Simms Oil company's No. 1 Ellwood in Mitchell county today ranked as one of the largest producers of sweet, wet gas yet drilled in West Texas wildcat territory. The derrick and all wooden equipment of the well destroyed when gas was struck February 9. The well is in the southwest quarter of section 29, block 18, S. P. Railway Co. survey.

New Plane Built by Levine Is Suitable For Use On Either Land or Water; Is Given Test

The "Triad" above represents a new departure in aircraft construction with a detachable float and removable landing gear rendering it suitable for use on land or water. This ship was developed by the Columbia Air Lines, Inc., of which Charles A. Levine, trans-Atlantic air traveler, is president. The float is not attached in this picture.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Feb. 23.—(AP)—A new type of "triple purpose" airplane has been built and is being given its test flights here. The ship, equipped with detachable float and landing gear, is from the factories of Columbia Air Lines, Inc., of which Charles A. Levine, trans-Atlantic air traveler, is president.

The new plane is an amphibian, and in its construction have been embodied several unusual features which are declared by its builders to promite the safety and flexibility of the ship.

The heavy landing gear with which the plane is normally equipped may be lifted above the level of the float by means of hydraulic hoists from within the pilot's compartment or may be removed entirely. The float when attached is equipped with a water rudder and bumper and is considered seaworthy.

The "Triad" as the plane has been christened, is interesting chiefly because of its interchangeable landing gear and its efficiency when flown with both attached.

The "Triad" is built for 300 horsepower "Whirlwind" motor installation, but in its test flights has been equipped with J5-225 horsepower motor, so no speed nor climbing tests have been made. The gasoline capacity is 64 gallons, which gives the ship a cruising range of about 550 miles.

With a wing span of 49 feet, the Columbia 'Triad" seats comfortably five passengers and two pilots. Appointments in the passenger cabin are as complete as in modern automobiles. The pilot's cabin is separated by a small door and provided with two comfortable seats. The usual control stick is supplanted by an overhead wheel which may be adjusted before either seat.

The landing gear hoist is controlled by a lever between the seats, and an indirect lighted instrument board is in full view of either seat. Both cabins are enclosed in unbreakable glass divided into individual windows for each seat, which may be raised or lowered by the usual cranks.

The "Triad" is said by test pilots to handle easily as land or sea plane and to function as well as an amphibian.

"This type of plane appears to be the ideal for the future," Mr. Levine says. "The best features of amphibian planes of this country and Europe have been incorporated with designs of our engineers."

LONDON, Feb. 23. — A man walking in Leicester Square saw what he thought was a human figure, lying nude in a passage. Police were rushed to the scene but found that the lady was of the wax variety, and used as a clothing model. Madam Wax had been bedecked with furs valued at $1,000, which thieves had stripped from her and fled.

Rural Carriers Hold Meet Here

W. J. Klattenhoff of Slaton was elected president of the Rural Carriers' association in a convention of the group here Friday. George H. Williams, Lubbock, was selected as vice-president and M. L. Garrett, Littlefield, was named secretary-treasurer. The men succeed H. J. Kendrick, J. R. Potts, of Lubbock, and Foster Carroll, Slaton, in the respective offices.

Approximately 15 rural carriers of the South Plains were present at the convention which was featured by a talk by Postmaster John L. Vaughan who advocated an organization for the Plains territory of all workers in the various branches of the postal department.

The group will be together next in a district convention at Brownfield, May 30.

Among those present at the meeting here Friday were: Littleton and Settle, of Abernathy; Garrtt of Littlfield; Tennison, Anton; Jones and Carpenter, Brownfield; Carroll and Klattenhoff, Slaton; Thomas, Ralls; and Kendrick, Potts, DeShazo, McCrummen and Williams of Lubbock.

Carriers holding membership in the organization are from Lubbock, Garza, Terry, Lamb and Crosby counties.

Bandit's Captor Ends In Jail

But Babies' Pennies Bail Him Out When Story Gets Into The Gotham Newspapers

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—Give a moment to the story of a taxi driver who disarmed a holdup man, picked up the thug's gun and later learned that the letter of the law can spell j-a-i-l even for an honest citizen.

Go back about three weeks and see Oliver Deardorff of Brooklyn jubilant over the taxi-piloting job he'd just landed after three months of searching for work. Mrs. Deardorff and the two youngsters are jubilant, also, for it's no fun trying to live in New York with all the money going out and none coming in.

Well, the taxi business was going pretty well. It was good last night and early this morning, too, after the season's heaviest fall of snow. But then Oliver Deardorff got his bad break.

He was cruising through the Bronx looking for fares when a man hailed him. Deardorff stopped and the man poked a revolver into his face.

"Oh no you don't," said Deardorff, striking the thug's wrist a blow that sent the weapon to the pavement. The bandit fled and the chauffeur picked up the gun. He looked around for a policeman but none was in sight, so he put the revolver on the seat and stepped on the gas.

Took Him to Jail

A few hours later he spied Patrolman George Zeigers to whom he told his story. The tale didn't sound just right to the officers apparently, for he arrested Deardorff and took him to the station on a charge of possessing firearms without a permit.

In court this morning Deardorff again told his story. This time to Magistrate Rayfield.

"You admit having the gun in your possession?" quered the magistrate.

"Sure, your honor," said Deardorff. "I had it, but was trying to get rid of it by giving it to the policeman."

"Well," asserted Mr. Rayfield, "you never should have been arrested, but you were, and you are charged with illegal possession of a firearm. Under the law I cannot dispose of the case. I must hold you for the court of special sessions and I shall fix your bail at $500."

"I don't think I can get bail, your honor," faltered the crestfallen chauffeur. "I can't afford a bond fee. I don't know how my family will get along unless I get out and hustle. It was just trying to do the right thing."

"I realize that," replied Magistrate Rayfield. "But by the terms of the law I have no other course than to hold you."

Goes to Jail

And so Deardorff went to jail.

In the tiny flat he calls a home a baby lay in a crib beside a wood stove and the other child played in the back yard while Mrs. Deardorff searched for someone who would bail out her husband.

Chapter Two

Malcolm R. Lovell of the Park Lane hotel, was reading the story to Malcolm, jr., aged eight, tonight. The little chap's sympathies were aroused, and he asked that he be allowed to draw his savings out of the bank and bail him out. Lovell investigated. He went to interview the driver. Convinced, he said, that the man's story was correct and that he was suffering because of a legal technicality, Mr. Lovell put up $500 cash bail and Deardorff was released.

Meanwhile Malcolm, jr., without letting his father know, had paid a visit to his home savings bank before starting for the lockup. When Deardorff was released and, in tears, was thanking Mr. Lovell, the youngster slipped some money in the driver's pocket.

It was $20 in bills and small change.

Red Cross Work Is Taxed In Lubbock, Records Reveal

Twenty-Seven Families Are Cared For By Funds And Other Aid; Half-Wit Is Sent Back To Mother

"The Greatest Mother in the World" is on the job, exactly as every great mother in the world—toiling daily in matters of mercy.

While the great majority of us are about our daily routine, hale and hearty and happy, the Red Cross is at work alleviating suffering and helping the needy.

At this very moment the Lubbock Red Cross chapter is taking care of 27 different families in the city; providing food and shelter and clothing and medicine. Among these 27 families there is one, composed of a woman and 10 children. The father and one son are in jail. The Red Cross discovered this mother of 10 had no fuel in their home, no groceries and the baby ill. In all there are five cases of five families dependent upon the Red Cross for support, because of the fathers or brothers or wives and mothers running amuck of the law.

Dozens of Demands Daily

On top of this drain upon the meager resources of the local Red Cross chapter, dozens of demands are daily made for succor by transients. Only this week the organization, with the assistance of $12.50 paid by the Kiwanis club child welfare paid out $50 for a railroad ticket to send a half-wit youth back to his home in California.

The youth, about 17, by name of Lester White, was kept by the city police for more than a week while an effort was made to provide funds to send him home. The city did not have any fund available for such. Neither did the county. If the charge of insanity had been filed against him, it would than have been encumbent upon the county to adjudge him insane and sentence to a state asylum for the feeble-minded.

Mother Wires Here

But, the mother of the boy, Mrs. Viola White, of Anaheim, Cal. when the Red Cross had wired that city's chief of police, wired an answer that she did not want her boy sent to an insane asylum. Said she:

"Am unable to get officials of county to aid me furnish transportation for son to come here and am unable to pay transportation myself Desire to have him here where I can care for him myself. Don't want him kept away from me."

Therefore, with no other avenue of help available at the time Lubbock's Red Cross saw to it that the boy be sent to his mother. Naturally, the feeling exists that the city of Anaheim, Cal., the youth's home town, should have provided transportation. But they did not.

"By doing this," explained Miss Vera Murfee, secretary of the Red Cross chapter, "we are spending about $50 that is sorely needed here in Lubbock to take care of our many home cases. It means that we will not have any more money to spend here this month, but it must be done. There's no one else to do it except the Red Cross."

Report Is Given

Lest we forget, here is given a report of the work of the Lubbock Red Cross chapter for the month of January. In every case the need of money is apparent:

Home service cases assisted, 30. A man very ill with pneumonia was sent to hospital. A widow with three small children was assisted. An aged couple with sickness in family assisted. A widow with four children assisted and employment secured for her. An old lady helped and light work found for her. A widow with two-months-old baby aided. Assisted family of children of widow so that children might remain in school. Assisted in getting small boy operated on. Helped stranded man with groceries for family until work was secured for him. Secured permanent home for aged lady in another city.

Visited family who had been given hospitalization in Florida by Red Cross at time of terrible flood disaster, found man working and very thankful for assistance rendered. Furnished old couple with groceries. Assisted widow with one child. Assisted transient in getting work. Assisted widow with four children, employment secured for the mother. Assisted widow and effort being made to find employment for her. Assisted crippled widow with groceries. Furnished groceries to woman with six children. Old and sick Mexican assisted with groceries Widow furnished coal. Clothing furnished small children. Checked up on imposter in Abilene who claimed papers here. Aid given sick man in reaching friends. Assistance given widow with 7 year old child. Helped mother of two small children. Orphan child fitted out so could stay in school. Found help for 12 families where sickness existed. Garments given away, 100. Employment secured for needy, 15.

Ex-service cases: Number of cases assisted 20. A desperately sick man assisted with request for hospitalization, request granted, transporation furnished but man died. Assistance furthered rendered relatives in making application for compensation, funeral expenses, secured and papers sent to relatives in Indiana. Application made for compensation for widow of deceased ex-service man. Application for compensation filed for sick veteran. Assisted in getting transportation wired for sick man in Houston to kins-people.

PERRYTON WINS DISTRICT ONE

CANYON, Feb. 23. (AP)—Perryton defeated McLean 37 to 32, to win the Interscholastic league cage tite in District 1 here today.

His Dad's Worth $100,000,000 But He Works In Greasy Overalls; Son Wants To Learn Business

By NEA Service.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 23.—A pink cheeked, boyish youngstr of 21 recently took a job at a filling station here, and in a short time had the customers and his fellow employes talking about him because he never would accept a tip.

He was a willing worker. He was always courteous and cheerful and he didn't mind getting oil and grease on his clothing and in his hair, but no customer could force him to accept any extra money for his services after changing the motor oil or greasing the chassis.

So they started looking into the matter—and they found that the obliging young man in overalls was Donald Stewart, son of Col. Robert W. Stewart of Standard Oil of Indiana. The elder Stewart is worth, at a guess, about $100,000,000, and perhaps that explains why the young man won't take tips.

Why Work, Anyway?

It doesn't explain why he is working in a filling station, however, when he might be living a life of pleasant ease like other rich men's sons. So an interviewer went forth to question him and find out. After all, a filling station job means hard work, long hours and plenty of dirt and grease; why should the potential heir to $100,000,000 take it on voluntarily?

That question was easily answered. Donald Stewart aims to learn the oil business—as it applies to marketing the finished product. To do this he has to start at the bottom and that, in the oil business, means the very bottom—underneath some travel-stained car, draining the sludgy oil.

This wasn't suggested to him by his father.

"I just knew it was expected of me," he says. "It never occurred to me to try anything else."

It was remarked that plenty of rich men's sons get a nice, ornamental, highly-paid job in their father's offices, doing little real work and getting plenty of time to play. Donald Stewart grinned and shook his head.

"That," he said, "wouldn't be my father's idea at all. Not at all."

Learning from the Bottom Up.

So young Stewart, youngest of his father's three sons, is learning the oil business. He has put in five months in the filling station. Now he's ready to go out on the road as a salesman. He knew that he could not be a good salesman unless he knew something first-hand about the filling station end of the business. So he put on overalls and went to it.

The filling station didn't start it, however. A year ago last summer he spent his vacation in Venezuela, where he got an acquaintance with the production end by studying prospectors, drillers, geologists and shipping men in the big fields of the Lago Oil and Transport Co.—of which an elder brother is president. Then he returned to the University of Chicago to complete his education.

All of this left him time for a hobby. When he left the university he went to a flying school to study aviation. One of his instructors was Bert Acosta, who flew Byrd's ship across the Atlantic. Donald Stewart learned every phase of flying and now has a pilot's license, although he has no intention of doing any commercial flying.

Sees Big Future for Aviation.

"Aviation is growing so fast I think every young man should know how to fly," he said. "Aviation is going to be a big factor in the oil business, so I wanted to know all about it."

His filling station experience has not been the only phase of the distributing trade that he has tackled, either. For a time he drove an oil truck. He also worked in a refinery, standing in the laboratory with the chemists and learning how crude oil is turned into gasoline, paraffin, transmission grease and the like.

And now he's ready to start, selling.

"The training he's had so far," said J. D. Sheehy, one of his instructors, "is exactly the same training that every other salesman gets. It's simply the background for their selling work, the knowledge they've got to have to sell their line intelligently. Donald hasn't had a single 'break' because of his family, and if he makes good on his territory when he gets it, it will be due simply to the fact that he's got the stuff in him."

Youth Objects to Praise.

Young Stewart, who was present, objcted to this remark.

"Say, lay off," he protested. "This is no success story. For all I know I may be the biggest washout they ever had when I get out to sell on my own hook. And I don't want to look silly after a lot of advance publicity."

But Sheehy only winked.

"He's a hard worker," he said.

Busy as he is, Donald Stewart finds time for recreation. He likes to dance and sail a boat and play golf, and he works in a little of each of those diversions whenever he is able.

He likes to drive an auto, too, but he isn't doing that now.

"Can't afford to," he explained.

He added, however, that if he prospers as a salesman he plans to buy a flivver soon.

"No, thanks. I never accept tips," said the polite young attendant as he changed the oil and greased cars at a New Orleans filling station. And there's reason enough for Donald Stewart, above, is the son of Colonel Robert W. Stewart, Standard Oil millionaire. The sketches give a glimpse of young Stewart's career as he seeks to learn the oil business from the bottom up.

Better Watch Date

City May Cut Off Your Water

Quite a number of consumers of city lights and city water are making figurative attempts at how and when the city of Lubbock can ever collect for their part of these commodities used last month and billed on February 20.

Some claim it will be impossible for the city ever to collect according to the wording on the statements rendered since the 20th. Wording on all bills sent out from the city hall on February 20 read as follows:

"Gross bill due after February 30."

The error is easily explainable when it is understood that in making out the bills the city gives 10 days in which to pay and get a small discount, after that 10 day perior, then the gross bill is due.

Technically, say some, as there will never be any such date as February 30, the gross bill would therefore never become due.

Appointment Of Cooke Sheriff Is Upheld By Court

FORT WORTH, Feb. 23.—(AP)—A decision concerning the office of sheriff in Cooke county, handed down today by the second court of Cipil Appeals here, holds a county commissioners' court is without right to fill unexpired terms of office beyond its current term.

The decision was made in the case of Jonathan Dobkins vs. Ate Reece.

Dobkins was appointed sheriff to succeed Jake Wright, sheriff who died Dec. 12. The commissioners' court appointing him went out in January, and a new court went in. This new court appointed Reece to be sheriff. Reece had been a deputy under both Wright and Dobkins.

Dobkins brought injunction proceedings to keep Reece from taking office, but the temporary injunction was dissolved and Reece declared to have the job. Dobkins appealed, but Reece's appointment was upheld by the Appellate court.

FREDERICKSBURG GETS TITLE

KERRVILLE, Feb. 23. (AP)—Fredericksburg defeated Medina 34 to 32 in the final game for the basketball title of district 19 here tonight and will play Main Avenue high school of San Antonio for the bi-district title.

The steel frame work of buildings and bridges is now being constructed without a single rivet in its make-up—electric arc welding does the job.

Extensive Work In Experimenting Pickers On Here

John Deere Implement Company Spending Much Time In Demonstrations Near Lubbock

Extensive experiment work that has been conducted just east of Lubbock since early in November by the John Deere Implement Company of Moline, Ill., looking toward the perfecting of cotton harvesting machinery is just about complete and within a week and a half the last official of the company will have departed for home along with all the equipment that has been used in the experiments.

During the four month period that the company has been conducting the experiments here, the president of the company and the best engineers of the company have visited Lubbock to make a personal check up on the machinery and the results that are being obtained.

Moving Pictures Taken

During the last week, M. C. McCray and Harold White, two of the outstanding machinery engineers of the Deere company and ranking with the best in the nation were here to look at the machines and watch them work. McCray with the tractor works at Waterloo, Iowa, designed and perfected the Deere tractors. He took moving pictures of the machines here to be used in correcting any defaults that may exist between now and the time the machines go into production. White is another outstanding engineer, being connected with the Deere & Mansur company at Moline.

V. F. Bozeman, general manager of the wagon works of the Deere company at Moline has been here in charge of the experiment work since the equipment was first shipped here. Bozeman left Friday for Moline. He stated recently that the company had appropriated a sum of $25,000 for the expense of the experiments here at Lubbock this year. Bozeman is the man that first offered the idea upon which the Deere machines that are being experimented with here and has helped in perfecting the machines. He is president of the Moline Rotary club and has attended the local club regularly while in Lubbock.

Wyman Visits Here

Just before Christmas, Lubbock was honored by a visit here by Charles Deere Wyman, of Moline, president of the John Deere company. Wyman came to Lubbock to look over the machinery and to watch the experiments. He is a grand son of John Deere, the inventor of the steel plow, and has recently succeeded Mr. Butterworth as president of the Deere company. Butterworth is at present president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and now a director of the Deere company since Wyman succeeded him as president of the company.

Bruce Morse and Chas. Cauley are the only representatives of the Deere company that are left here. Morse was the first to arrive, coming here October 29, 1928, and he expects to be the last to leave.

The experiments here are being conducted by the Wagon Works of the John Deere company, Morse stated Saturday.

Due to the decline of demand for wagons with trucks taking the place of the older vehicle, the Wagon works has taken over quite a bit of the experimental work of the company, including the experimental work of the cotton stripper, the cotton harvester, stalk cutter, rotary hoe, and rod weeder.

Other Officials Visit Here

Other ranking officials of the John Deere company who have visited Lubbock in connection with the machinery tests here include Frank T. Cort, of Moline, who helped design and perfect the two row tractor machine that is being tested here, and Frank D. Cootrell, designer and builder of the horse drawn machine also being tested.

Three machines are being tested in the experiments here. The two row tractor machine with cleaner, the horse drawn machine with cleaner and the stripper.

The cotton harvesting machine is expected to do for the cotton producing industry just what the wheat harvesting combine did for the wheat growers, putting a bigger profit in the pocket of each producer by the elimination of harvesting costs. It is conservatively estimated that the cotton harvester will save about $20 per bale in harvesting costs. The John Deere officials are confident that they will have a machine perfected next fall that will be ready to go in the fields to harvest the fleecy staple.

Lubbock is one of the few towns in the nation that was picked by the Deere company to make their test. Some machinery was tested near Olton, also on the South Plains, these two places being the only Texas points where tests were made this year. Other tests were made in other Southern states.

FIGHTIN' IRISH

CORK, Irish Free State, Feb. 23. —When De Valera ordered his little army of Irish followers to lay down their arms five years ago, everyone of them did—except Cornelius Healy, "One-Eyed Gunner of the Sarostat," as he was known, marched all over the country, carrying a machine gun on his shoulder, and started his own little war whenever he got the chance. Free State police, however, have decided that Healy will be safer if boarded by the state for the rest of his life. He was caught one night at his home—and the war is ended.

HOUSTON TEAM WINS

HOUSTON, Feb. 23. (AP)—The San Jacinto High school Bears, Houston city champions, won the championship of District 22 here tonight, swamping Gulf high of Matagorda county, 56 to 16.

Dreaming Of Treasure Island, Wealthy Man Sets Sail For It; Takes Along Crew Of Eighteen Men

Staff Correspondent for Central Press and Avalanche-Journal

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 23.—The age of romance is not dead. If evidence of this statement is needed, witness the voyage of the good ship Peary, bound from Boston to a "dream island" somewhere in the Pacific.

The purpose of the voyage is to locate the island, then proceed to "raise" it, or at least to raise a sort of cofferdam around it, so that the sunken paradise may be reduced to dry land by the use of pumps. Then the dreamer of the dream hopes to set foot on the magic island.

The dreamer, and the backer of the expedition, is Matthew F. Bramley, a poor boy who rose to a position of great wealth as a paving contractor in Cleveland. He has with him a select group of passengers, friends selected to share with him the thrill of the romantic voyage.

Bramley said he first saw the island in a deep dream, which was different from other dreams in that he appreciated the whereabouts of his unreal adventure. The island, he said, seemed to be a few feet under the surface of the Pacific, and something enchanting about it, he said, drew him into further investigation.

He went to San Pedro, Cal., the location in the dream, and chartered an airplane. Flying over the ocean, he said, he sighted the dream island, where it should have been according to his vision. He determined to charter a vessel and make a scientific study.

Forthwith, he went east, to buy the sturdy Peary, and have her outfitted for the voyage. He assembled a crew of 18 men.

Dressed in the natty uniform of a rear commodore of the Cleveland Yacht Club, and with the club ensign crackling from the masthead, Bramley set sail from Boston with the enthusiasm of a boy.

So before long he may have his "dream island," after about as romantic an exploit as this commercialistic age has offered.

Mayfield Blocks Neff Nomination

Former Texas Governor Says Texas Senator Is Sole Obstacle In Way Of Approval Of Nomination

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—Former Governor Pat M. Neff of Texas said toady his re-nomination to the railroad board of mediation wuld be "overwhelmingly confirmed" if voters could be reached.

"This, perhaps, is not the time to go into details as to why the senate has not confirmed my appointment," he said, "except to say that it appears at this time that Senator Mayfield has succeeded in blocking further proceedings.

"Senator Mayfield, joined by two other senators representing those objecting to my handling of the railroad strike in Texas in 1922, who have fought my confirmation from the beginning, and delayed it in every way possible, are now studiously following a technical, filibustering program which will prevent the senate from reaching a vote.

"It seems strange," Neff added, "that the only appointment of national scope, ranking in law and in fact with that of a cabinet officer, ever given to a Texas democrat by a republican president, should be annuled by a democratic senator from Texas whose only grievance is that I did not actively support him in his candidacy for re-election."

Mercury Rises

Fabled Fence Is Replaced Here

The fabled barbed wire fence which once was supposed to have been all that separated the Panhandle from the North Pole, has apparently been replaced by a barrier of more substantial construction.

Be that as it may, temperatures as recorded at the exeprriment station near here show that year by year the mean annual temperature has been on the uptrend here.

Coldest weather ever recorded by the experiment station was during the blizzard of 1918 when the mercury disappeared. No one has ever satisfactorily explained where it went but an official low mark of ten degrees below zero was recorded here.

Last year the lowest temperature was two degrees above, this winter the lowest has been one degree above. Average temperature this winter, however, has been a shade higher than the mean for 1928.

Highest ever recorded here was 108 degrees. This figure was equalled last summer on one of the sweltering days of June.

Lubbock's Need For Solution To Boy Problem Is Pointed Out By Officials Saturday; Juvenile Court Not Needed

Renewed agitation, during the past week, for some sort of something to be done about Lubbock's problem of keeping boys occupied with useful things and out of meanness, has brought up more or less differences of opinions, although all parties talking on the question are agreed that the boys need more attention.

The question was given prominence at last Wednesday's meeting of the Rotary club, when K. N. Clapp, acting Boy Scout executive, spoke to Rotarians on boy problems, while speaking of the financial drive to be made for the Boy Scout movement.

Boys Need Direction

"I talked about the employment of a juvenile officer by the county and city, and not of the establishment of a juvenile court, as quotations in the papers credited me with saying," Mr. Clapp explained yesterday. "As I see conditions there are a great many boys in this city that need looking after. Do you know that there are 150 boys in Lubbock that will take anything that's not bolted down? We have sent a few of them to the reform school, but that is only as a last resort."

Mr. Clapp further stated that the aim should be a prevention of petty crimes, which lead to worse infractions of the laws, by the youth of Lubbock, and that a juvenile officer should be employed who understands boys and has had a great deal of experience in dealing with them. The suggestion was made several months ago that the county pay $125 a month and the city $75, to make up $200 a month for employing such an officer.

Need Recreation Grounds

"We need some organized effort to furnish recreation grounds for the boys and things for them to do to keep them out of meanness, but there is no need of a juvenile court, and I question any need for a probation officer," said County Judge Robert H. Bean. "There has been no juvenile case in the county since January 1, and there are not more than 10 cases a year on the average."

Judge Bean showed where the county juvenile docket for 1928 had 16 cases on it. Of these nine resulted in boys being declared delinquent and 11 boys were sent to the State Training School for Boys, at Gatesville. Three cases never came to trial and the others were released on probation to their parents. In 1927 there were only 8 juvenile cases docketed. Of these only one boy was sent to the state reform school, after being declared delinquent.

"There is not a place in this city where boys can go to play," continued Judge Bean. "If they get out on a vacant lot, some one nearby will undoubtedly run them away. Even with this condition existing, I would be opposed to appropriating $125 a month to employ a special officer to look after juveniles. From the records available, there is certainly no need for such an officer."

Don't Need Juvenile Officer

County Attorney Vaughn E. Wilson is of the belief that if any special officer be employed by the city or county it should be a recreational officer. "We do not need a juvenile officer. There is not an average of one case a month. The great need is some place where boys can meet and play ball and other games. A recreational officer, with playgrounds established in different parts of the city, could organize teams and contests and make things generally interesting for sectional and intersectional contests."

Chief of Police John Lemond is of the opinion that no juvenile officer is necessary to cope with Lubbock's boy problems. "We have not had any trouble with boys at all for a good while, now," he said. "And what we have our regular officers, as well as the county officers, can just as well attend to as any juvenile officer could. A special officer would not have any more authority than we have. Anyway it's not needed."

CHAMPION WANDERER

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 23.—There's at least one boy in Missouri who is living up to the "show me" reputation of the commonwealth. He's Albert Lamb, 8, reported missing from his home here 60 times in four years. On a recent occasion his mother offered him a dime if he would remain near home one entire day. Albert collected the cash at 5 p. m. and promptly disappeared.

REDUCTION IS ASKED

Landreth Asks For Revision Of Winkler Production

FORT WORTH, Feb. 23. (AP)—Recommendation that the 175,000 barrel per day production of Winkler county be cut to 125,000 barrels is made to Winkler county producers in a letter by E. A. Landreth, Fort Worth independent operator. Landreth is chairman of the operators and approved by the Texas Railroad Commission to handle Winkler proration.

He urges that this action be taken by March 1, instead of waiting until March 15, the next date for revision of prorated production allowances. Early action is recommended on the ground that further pinching is needed urgently to conserve the producing life of the field.

Prune Proposal For Withdrawal Of Marine Army

Senate Administration Forces Rally Against Surprise Amendment Inserted Yesterday

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—Senate administration forces rallied today and eliminated from the navy department appropriation bill the surprise amendment added yesterday providing for withdrawal of American marines from Nicaragua.

President Coolidge was reported to have sent word to the capitol that he considered the senate's decision of last night a reflection on his foreign policy, but the White House attitude failed to switch Chairman Borah of the foreign relations committee.

Borah voted again today for immediate withdrawal of the marines and his action was regarded as marking a break with the administration in view of the position taken on this question by the President and Secretary Kellogg.

After ditching the Nicaraguan amendment, sponsors of the navy department supply bill carried it to an immediate vote and it was adopted without a roll call, thus killing fears of a filibuster against the provision in the measure of $12,370,000 for starting the cruiser program.

The addition of cruiser funds must be approved by the house.

27 REAL ESTATE

We wonder if you would be interested in the best purchase of raw land on the Plains. If you will take the pains to go to Morton, then about two miles this side, on the north side of the highway, and lying broadside with it, you will see what you yourself will say is the best looking quarter section of land you ever saw. Big statement, you say? Yes it is, but every word true.

No soil any richer, notable any more level, no sand, no grubs, two miles from fine school, court house and gin, an ideal location for a home.

We are authorized to sell this land for $25 per acre, and when we say that do not get it confused with blow sand lands at $20 and $15, and that are not worth one-half this land.

Its special value is due to the high quality of its soil, its beauty, its location close to Morton, the ease and certainty of getting a bountiful supply of the finest water. As a matter of fact if this land should sell for its value it would not be one cent less than $35.00 per acre. Let us tell you more about it.

Chilean Exhibits Pictures In City

Motion Pictures Of Scenes And Activities In South America Shown In Denman Home

While on a visit here the past few days with relatives and friends Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Reece, of Coya, Chile, which is located near Santiago, and in South America, exhibited several reels of moving pictures which Mr. Reece made during the past few months.

Mr. Reece is an electrical engineer, employed by the Braden Copper company, operators of a number of mines in Chile, and before coming here had the opportunity of taking moving pictures of the maneuvers of the Peruvian fleet, off the west coast of South America, and of the United States Atlantic and Pacific fleets, in the Panama Canal vicinity..

Pictures of the Peruvian fleet included three battleships and two submarines, which is all of that nation's naval vessels. Pictures taken near Panama, of the United States fleets included more than 240 vessels, and manned by more than 46,000 men.

The interesting exhibition of moving pictures was given at the home of J. M. Denman, 2120 Fifteenth street. The Reeces were visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Denman and family and with Dr. and Mrs. Y. J. Aiken. Present at the picture show were, Mr. and Mrs. I. C. Dunbar, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin F. Moorde, Mrs. Osie Moore, of Floydada, and the Denman and Aiken families.

Mr. and Mrs. Reece left here yesterday for Colorado, Texas, where they will visit with his parents, after which his business will take them to California and New York before they will return to South America.

As they gathered around the murdered man, an eerie sound came from the window. Satan, the black pigeon, was trying to get in the room.

Insignificant as the incident appeared at the time, it was nevertheless the most important clew to the murder of Harry Borden. For the black pigeon gave the police a new angle to work on.

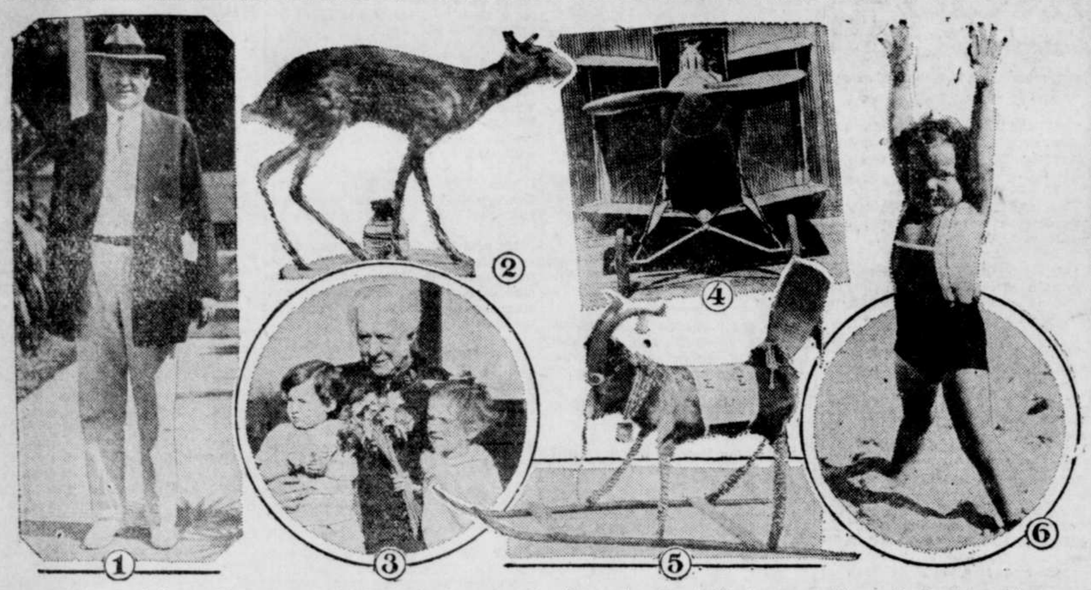

If you are looking for a good old-fashioned thrill, by all means read "The Black Pigeon," Anne Austin's great mystery serial. Follow every installment. See if you can work out the solution to this baffling mystery.

Glimpses About The World Through The Camera's Eye

From all parts of the world, cameramen for Avalanche-Journal and NEA Service send interesting photographs—wherever there are pictures to be taken ther is an NEA cameraman to take them. In this varied assortment are: (1) President-elect Herber Hoover in Florida. (2) A strange species of the deer family, found in Africa, and sent by Fred H. Pope, missionary, to Mishawaka, Ind., to be mounted. (3) General Bramwell Booth, commander of the Salvation Army, with his grandchildren. General Booth has been the center of a battle to remove him authority. The picture was taken in England where the fight was waged. (4) A new sports plane developed by Major Mario de Barnardi, Italian speed king. It has a cruising speed of 95 miles an hour and when the wings are folded it ca; be stored in an ordinary garage. (5) Here is a sled "hobby hourse" for children at Murren, Switzerland—or possibly it should be called a "hobby goat." (6) Betty Ordway, daughter of the Lucius Ordways of Chicago and New York, is one of the thousands of children enjoying the sunshine during the winter at Palm Beach, Florida, and other Florida resorts. (7) Queen Elizabeth of Belgium is shown skating at Murren, Switzerland. Her escort is Captain Duff Taylor. (8) Arab golf caddies dress like this. This picture was taken on a golf course in Algiers. (9) It looks like Charlie Chaplin but it's just one of the visitors to Murren, Switzerland, in the costume that took first prize in a carnival celebration. (10) Europe's prettiest princess, Ileana of Roumania, is shown on skis at Predeal, Roumania.

Chicago Moves To Strike Away The Leeches Known As Racketeers And To Purge City Of "Reign Of Terror"

Grand Jury Investigation Of One Form Of Levying Tribute On Trade Marks Opening Movement

BY ALLEN DALRYMPLE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

CHICAGO, Feb. 23 (AP)—Chicago has started a move to strike from the throat of American business the leeches known as racketeers, and to rid itself of a reign of terror.

A grand jury investigation into the heavy tribute levied on one class of victims, glazier contractors, was heralded as the opening of a big drive to stop the pirateering on trade that costs Chicago alone about $136,000,000 yearly.

Sends Prices Skyward

The high cost of racketeering, which takes many different forms, is not due entirely to the hundreds of bombs exploded here in the last few years nor to the property damage at the hands of marauders. Fees paid organizations employers are forced to join, dues extracted from workers, and sums expended for protection against depredation drive the retail price of goods skyward.

Every city in the country of 5,000 population or over is subject to this form of extortion, according to G. L. Hostetter, executive secretary of the Chicago Employers' Association which long has fought racketeering. It was Mr. Hostesster who coined the term "racketeer."

Prosecutors evidence shows that glazier contractors were forced into a glass dealers' association at an annual cost of $500,000 a year. The methods often used in such coercion are to threaten an employer with a strike and he usually finds it is cheaper to acquiesce to the demands than to fight.

In this instance of the glass dealers, prosecutors found that one George H. Meyers, business agent of the Glazing Workers' Union, Local No. 27, appeared as business manager of the Illinois Glass Dealers' association.

148 Bombs In Year

The racketeering game, recreation for hoodlums, was responsible for the explosion of 148 bombs from October 11, 1927, to December 30, 1928. This year the missives have been thrown at an average rate of one every other day.

The employes are driven into so-called "unions" of a particularly fragile mushroom variety which shrivel under the light of publicity. Thirty-five of them were put out of existence last year by this means.

The second type is known as "the collusive agreement racket", and is maintained by a triple alliance—the unscrupulous business man, the crooked leader of organized labor, and the unprincipaled politician, Mr. Hostetter explained.

Ninety-four such organizations are in operation here, the Chicago Employers' association has found.

In the meantime, with the grand jury under way and the Employers' association in the thick of the fight, the "racketeer court", established to speed prosecutions of such law violations, awaits business.

Bandit Killers

Reports were that the Americans were to be buried this afternoon in Guanajuato.

PASEDENA, Cal., Feb. 23. (AP)—Mrs. F. M. Underwood, mother of J. M. Underwood, one of the two engineers of the Guanajuato Reduction and Mining company, slain by Mexican bandits, received a telegram today from Guanajuato, Mexico, saying her son's body had been recovered and would be buried there.

Underwood, 36, was a graduate of the local high school and of Oregon State college. He had been in Mexico 18 months. He is survived by his mother, and two brothers, Charles and Paul Underwood, of this city, which was Underwood's home.

Eaker Flight

San Salvador nor at San Jose, Costa Rica, but will swing low in a salute as he passes over those cities. His plane is black, white and red to make it easily distinguishable.

Arrival To Be Watched

Should the plane be overdue at any of the refueling points, immediate search will be started by the crews of army observation planes to be stationed at Tampico, Minatitlan and David. United States marine corps aviators will be on the lookout at Managua, Nicaragua, and aviators of the Guatemalan air corps will stand watch at Guatemala City.

For the all day flight Captain Eaker will take along only three chicken sandwiches and a quart of orange juice. Liberal allowance has been made in the time for his stops for fuel at this time might be cut down greatly by quick fillings.

Lubbock Business Men Accompany Reed's Inspection

With the arrival here early Monday morning of A. L. Reed, of Dallas, traffic expert employed by the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce to aid in presenting the Santa Fe railway company's application for a permit to extend their rail line from Seagraves to Lovington, N .M., a committee of business men will leave for several days of inspection along the proposed extension route.

B. Sherrod, chairman of the chamber of commerce railroad committee, Charles H. Read, Neil H. Wright, S. E. Cone, W. K. Dickinson, sr., R. J. Murray, A. B. Davis, and probably some others, will make the tour for the chamber of commerce, while J. D. Tinsley, agricultural agent for the Santa Fe and other officials of that company, will accompany them.

Legislature

legislature in many respects. It is odd in that at least half of its membership is composed of persons not in the 40th legislature.

With an interim of a few weeks between adjournment of this session and the convening of the special session, it is the general belief that lines will be drawn closely in the new session and that more semblance of leadership will accrue to administration benefit.

The house probably will consider the Young-Turner-Loy penitentiary concentration bill on final passage Monday or Tuesday, but Dewey Young of Wellington, one of the authors, concedes that even should it pass, there can be little hope of this legislature finally agreeing on it or any substitute which the senate might put up.

Lee Satterwhite of Amarillo, former speaker of the house, and long interested in penitentiary reformation, is of the same opinion. He has been here watching progress of the legislation. He has contended for giving the legislature the right to place its stamp of approval upon any plan the prison board, or any commission designated to concentrate the system might formulate.

He saw the senate last night adopt his idea partially at least, when it accepted an amendment by Senator Pollard providing for submission by the secretary of state to members of the legislature, through registered mail, any plan for concentration agreed on, with the proviso that if 10 members of the senate and 45 members of the house shall protest, the Governor call a special session of the legislature to consider the matter and either accept or reject the plans and recommendations.

The amendment, acceptable to Governor Moody, who favors the Holbrook bill to which it was attached, was described by Satterwhite, Young and others in favor of concentrating the system on property already owned by the state, as "cumbersome." They said it would be more business-like to put the matter up directly to the legislature in special session without going through the registered mail poll.

Regulations of public utilities was relegated to oblivion, as far as this session is concerned, when the senate yesterday laid all bills pertaining to the subject on the table, with the understanding they would not be called off.

The state-wide bond issue plan of building highways is pending in both houses, but proponents believe it is "too late" to accomplish anything in this direction until the special session.

Legislation fixing the tax on gasoline and establishing licenses and weight fees for motor vehicles, bills bearing on which were held in committee until a few days ago, also must wait.

There will be enough unfinished business for two special sessions, and the general belief is that the Governor will keep the legislators here for sixty days when he calls them back. The second special session would follow on the heels of the first called session.

McCloskey Trial

with illegally altering the returns, a statement Guinn asserted was repeated as recently as ten days ago.

"Dave, did Judge McCloskey have anything to do with changing those returns?" he said he asked Dewhurst.

"Not a thing in the world," he said Dewhurst replied.

Guinn Sticks to Guns

Upon cross-examination Henry H. Brooks, 23 year old Travis county district attorney sought to prove that there had been a play on words and that Dewhurst had evaded a statement that Judge McCloskey had not had anything to do with the matter, but Guinn stuck to his guns.

The defense's first day then rushed to its climax with the presentation of John H. Cunningham of San Antonio, closely associated with Judge McCloskey in the congressional race but not, he said, the McCloskey campaign manager.

The testimony of Cunningham, an attorney, grey haired and partly bald, was marked by a clash with the young Travis district attorney and also by testimony that Eugene Nolte of Seguin, chairman of the republican state committee, and R. B. Creager of Brownsville, republican national committeeman, had opposed the re-election of Wurzbach, Texas' only republican congressman since the civil war.

It also revealed that the McCloskey forces were advised by Dewhurst:

"You gentlemen don't need to worry about this election; the commissioner's court has never canvassed. In every election I know anything about the commissioner's court always finds discrepancies and corrects them."

The occasion was the appearance in the commissioners' court, Cunningham testified, of himself and several friends who immediately prior to that had been informed in his office by Altgelt and Taylor that something should be done lest Wurzbach workers "steal the election" from McCloskey.

The monologue occurred just as Wurzbach himself was espied by one of a large group in the commissioner's court, elicited no response from the Cunningham party, was in ear shot of Wurzbach and was not regarded at the time as prophetic or as smattering of illegal intentions, ran the testimony.

It was then that young Brooks fired a couple of questions at the witness which brought back a heated rejoinder in which the prosecutor was rebuked for casting aspersions and insinuations on an older man who was a reputable member of the bar.

Brooks asked if Cunningham had not blushed when Dewhurst named him as one present when the election theft plot was hatched.

"I don't know," replied the witness. "It was a lie big enough to make anybody blush."

Had not Cunningham admitted to another the truth of Dewhurst's testimony and did he not at the moment find himself testifying as he was in order to save his own skin., was the next question.

Cunningham leaned so far forward in the witness chair that one foot was on the floor two steps below as he raged at Brooks.

The district attorney replied that he was trying to do his duty.

The remainder of the defense's initial effort was the presentation of a series of prominent Texans who testified that McCloskey's reputation was good.

Wilson Mustangs, backed by a good-sized delegation from Lynn county ,tangled up with a great defensive team when they met Seagraves. Both teams displayed stubborn guarding and it was not until the final stanza that the winners broke away to cop the contest 22 to 14.

Taking the floor with a decided advantage in height over the Gaines county cagers, the Mustangs were met by a hustlin gaggregation that held them on even terms through most of the games. Leading 7 to 6 at the half, the smaller Seagraves boys were forced to give way to the overhead game of the winners. Crews, rangy Wilson forward, was high point man with 6 points to his credit.

The onrushing Slaton Tigers found easy picking when they met the Petersburg, Hale county, five in the final Saturday morning contest. Coach Wright allowed his regulars to pile up a substantial lead and sent in the second stringers who finished the game with a 28 to 15 win.

Led by D. Cannon, the Bengals plainly outclassed the Petersburg aggregation. Brashfield, Tiger center, led the winners in scoring with 12 points.

Lubbock And Its Population

Estimates Made Agree On 40,000 In The Next Five Years

HOW large will Lubbock grow to be within five years?

In 1934, how many people will be living here?

Mayor Harley D. Woods: "Figuring conservatively, I would say, approximately 40,000."

Hubert L. Allen, president of the Chamber of Commerce: "If I were speaking optimistically, I might say, 50,000. There will be, undoubtedly, taking into consideration our past years of rapid growth and the acceleration of accumulative momentum obtaining thereby, a population for Lubbock, five years hence, of about 40,000."

B. Sherrod, former president of the Chamber of Commerce, expects 38,000.

Duncan Says 30,000

M. H. Duncan, superintendent of Lubbock schools, figures there will be 30,000, basing his prophecy on actual school attendance of 4,250 out of a total enrollment of 4,881, as of February 1. Last year's scholastic census gave the city 4,120.

"Around 30,000" is the declaration of C. E. Maedgen, president of the Lubbock National Bank, while Charles F. O'Neall, realtor expects anywhere between 30,000 and 35,000 inhabitants.

Every one of these men base their predictions upon indications of concrete data available to all who might desire to secure it. In the opinion of some, these prophecies are below the Lubbock of five years from now. In the opinion of others, it is stretching things.

Study Is Worth While

An investigation of the past record of this city's growth reveals the fact that while Lubbock went rather rapidly from 4,051 inhabitants in 1920 to anywhere from 17,500 to 22,281 to date, there are other indications as astounding. For instance, in 1920 our postal receipts were $32,243. For 1928 these were 100,414. Bank resources jumped from $3,557,136 in 1924 to $5,685,456 in 1928, with present capital and surplus of the three Lubbock banks at around $500,000.

No records of building permits are available for 1920. Last year they totalled $3,197,644, with almost three quarters of a million issued since January 1.

Other Figures Jump

Assessed valuation of Lubbock property in 1920 was $3,957,980. In 1928 this stood at $19,153,230. Public improvements constructed nine years ago was $110,000, while last year there were 3,048,000 recorded.

Telephone connections were 670 in 1920, with the number increasing to 3,043 for 1928. The number of real estate transfers for 1920 were 1,569, being almost trebled in eight years, as 1928 recorded 3,120.

Deposits in local banks in 1920 totalled $2,423,707, climbing to $5,153,710 in 1928.

At this time there are 3,166 gas meters, 4,664 light meters and 3,860 water meters. Basing an estimate of present population on light meters, we can claim for Lubbock 22,281, although the Chamber of Commerce is laying claim to only 17,500 people now.

Increase Is Steady

"With the increase of light meters taken as a basis of figuring," states W. H. Rodgers, city secretary, "which is on the average of about 700 per year, in five more years we will have an increase of 3,500 meters. Multiplied by five, this gives us 17,500 more inhabitants. Added to 22,281, this figures 39,780. It is not at all far-fetched to anticipate such a growth. The city's past record gives ample grounds for this expectation."

The thing that has made Lubbock grow so rapidly during the past decade has been a solid background of the opening up of new land to agriculture. As every portion of the South Plains became settled with producers—not boomers—this city grew in proportion. Taking this one element of expected growth, alone, as indicative, with the known results coming upon the heels of the advertising campaign in national farm publications, for new farmers to open up still more new land, this expansion throughout the area will undoubtedly continue at as great a pace as in the past 10 year period.

Plenty of Room to Grow

There exist a grand total of about 9,000,000 acres in the South Plains area. Of this there are only something more than 2,000,000 now in cultivation. Practically all of the nine million acres are tillable—and the two million now cultivated can become more productive, with more intensive farming.

On top of all this, there are optimists here who look forward to an early grand scale development of potential oil fields within a radius of 75 miles of Lubbock. Anyone well can imagine what just one oil discovery in this territory would do in the way of bringing in more folks to Lubbock.

Signs of the times are to be found in the coming of the 12-story $700,000 Hilton hotel, the addition of five stories to the Lubbock hotel, the moving of office headquarters of the West Texas Gas company from Amarillo to this city, and the many rumors of more big buildings to be started.

Big-money real estate deals are known to be in the process of transaction. Two down-town business buildings are reported to be changing hands. One is of $99,000 and the other of $100,000.

Rumors Are Many

Talk of one or more, 10 or 12 story office buildings is to be heard. One of these says a new bank and office building, with the magic of Jesse Jones connected with it. A visiting lawyer, of Dallas, who is known to have financial connections of considerable consequence, recently stated he could and would finance the erection of a 12-story office building, if owners of suitable property would put such holdings into the deal as part of the transaction.

Where there's fire, there's smoke.

January Of This Year Goes Ahead Of January 1928

Texas Stands 9th In Union And Lubbock Is 5th Over State Of Texas; Largest Cities Only Rivals

With a total of $261,728, Lubbock held fifth place among Texas cities in building permits for the month of January, 1929, figures of the national survey, maintained by S. W. Straus and company, New York, given out yesterday, show. Houston, San Antonio, Dallas and Fort Worth, in order named, were the only cities to top Lubbock in the Texas figures.

The Hub of the Plains, the figures show, is more than keeping up with the terrific building pace it began in January of 1928 and figures for the first month of this year exceed those of January a year ago by $26,773, the Straus report shows.

Texas Statistics Are Given

| City | Jan. '29 | Jan. '28 |
|---|---|---|
| Abilene | 127,325 | 79,150 |
| Amarillo | 114,742 | 307,675 |
| Beaumont | 237,739 | 204,428 |
| Brownsville | 45,981 | 59,470 |
| Corpus Christi | 213,630 | 389,820 |
| Corsicana | 45,050 | 26,375 |
| Dallas | 880,453 | 619,389 |
| El Paso | 149,142 | 101,236 |
| Fort Worth | 611,110 | 1,099,278 |
| Galveston | 165,590 | 165,352 |
| Houston | 2,002,870 | 2,342,717 |
| Lubbock | 261,728 | 234,955 |
| Marshall | 53,964 | 33,036 |
| Paris | 3,700 | 61,825 |
| Port Arthur | 64,399 | 59,994 |
| San Angelo | 99,930 | 398,548 |
| San Antonio | 1,058,053 | 1,137,371 |
| Sherman | 14,765 | 142,708 |
| Tyler | 85,763 | 24,605 |
| Waco | 128,278 | 232,632 |
| Wichita Falls | 147,153 | 224,126 |
| State Totals | 6,511,365 | 7,944,690 |

As can be seen by comparison of the Texas building totals of this year and last year, Lubbock is more than keeping pace with the state as a whole by topping its 1928 figures while the state at large was losing.

Texas Is 9th

Texas stands in 9th place among the state of the union for the month of January, 1929, as the following table shows:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | New York | $92,889,942 |
| 2. | California | 22,234,233 |
| 3. | Pennsylvania | 21,302,978 |
| 4. | Illinois | 16,434,817 |
| 5. | Michigan | 8,718,253 |

Snyder Will Get New Poultry Firm Facts On Farming

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SNYDER, Feb. 23.—Snyder is to have a second poultry and killing plant this fall, according to announcement from the Scurry County Chamber of Commerce. The new plant is to be built here next to the Citizens Ice Company, with a cold storage tie-up with that company and will come whether or not the recently announced $60,000 plant is to be built by The Western Produce company, with main offices at Abilene.

The addition to Snyder was made owing to the company having bought poultry here the past fall and the remarkable quality and quantity hastened the move here. The statement was made that the quality of Scurry county birds were fully equal to the supply at Lubbock, and was second only to that city in quantity.

Poultry has made wonderful strides in Scurry county with a fine market for distribution being provided at Snyder. Six carloads of turkeys went out of this market alone during the holidays and does not include the many carloads of chickens that have left this market all during the season.

Snyder Airport To Be Complete

** *** *** *** **

Attractive Stucco Main Building Planned For New Scurry County Capital Landing Field

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SNYDER, Feb. 23—Work on Snyder's 200 acre airport will start as soon as the weather clears and a water line now under course of construction is brought to the property line.

Plans of D. P. Yoder, responsible for the landing field and airport here, call for erection of a group of buildings that will house a central filling station, restaurant, auto and airplane accessories and will be built of stucco exterior, trimmed in green and white with interior of sheet rock and floors of cement.

A main depot is to be built to the right of the main buildings for a public shower and rest rooms for tourists who have their own sleeping equipment. To the rear and arranged in a circle, the first of ten cabin inns will be erected with every convenience known to a modern hotel. A large park in connection with the camp is to be provided.

Work on the airport itself will start at the same time as building operations which will not be later than March 1, and the first addition calls for a landing strip 3,000 feet in length that will have sufficient clearance at the start to handle the largest airplanes that might drop off here.

As quickly as the strip is completed, the new field which has been designated as "Yoder Field" will be officially dedicated by the Snyder Lions club and plans car-Snyder airport to an A-1 designation.

New Highway Engineer Looks Ahead And Forecasts Greatest Expansion Ever Seen In West Texas' History

Joe Caldwell, State Roads Head In Plains Division, Believes Section To Be Scene Of Big Activity

"Highway development in this scetion is just beginning, and the near future should see the greatest program of improvement ever witnessed in West Texas."

This is the opinion of Joe Caldwell, new state highway engineer of Division No. 5 of the Texas State Highway Department, which includes twenty-one counties around Lubbock, an area larger than many entire states.

Mr. Caldwell arrived here February 7, replacing George A. Field, former highway engineer of this district, who resigned to enter the private road construction field. Stopping in Lubbock for the first time, Mr. Caldwell declares that he was impressed by he vast development of this city and the surrounding country. " I had no idea," he said, "of what had been done here."

Has Toured District

Since his arrival from Austin, Mr. Caldwell has been making tours over the district, acquainting himself with the territory for which he is to serve as highway engineer. He announces that there will be no change in policy as carried on by Mr. Field.

Although giant strides have been made during the past few years in the highway development of this division, Mr. Caldwell states that the surface has only been scratched. He lists a vast amount of construction now under way in the district.

Concerning the highway west from Lubbock through Levelland, Mr. Caldwell states that the route from here to the New Mexico state line has been given a tentative designation, and that the state is ready to maintain the road from Lubbock to Levelland as soon as certain necessary requirements have been met. The state will take over the maintainence of the highway as soon as the proper location is made and when the highway is put into proper concision. He reports that several meetings have been held in the interest of the highway although little work has been completed toward meeting the requirements.

"Tenative designation of the highway from Idalou to Silverton, through Becton, Petersburg, and Lockney, has been given by the state department," he said.

Mr. Caldwell reports that highway construction work of this division is now centered in Hale county, where a county-wide highway project is being carried out. The grade between Abernathy and Hale Center, and from Plainview to the Swisher county line is virtually complete, and construction has started on the stretch of road from Hale Center to Plainview.

In Motley county, the contract has been awarded for the road from Matador west to the Floyd county line and from Matador on Highway No. 28. A survey has been made on the highway from Matador south to the county line, although the contract has not been let.

The grade on Highway No. 28 in Cottle county from Paducah to the Motley county line has been completed and construction has begun on the highway from Paducah east to the county line.

A project between Dickens and Spur in Dickens county is to be started by the highway department in the near future. The bridge over the Double Mounatin Salt Fork east of Clairemont in Kent county is expected to be completed soon.

Texas-Exes Will Get Together On Saturday, Mar. 2

Annual Powow Of One Time Students Of University Will Be Held At Hotel Lubbock This Week

In connection with similar celebrations throughout this and other states, Texas Exes of Lubbock and surrounding territory will meet at the Hotel Lubbock next Saturday night for a fellowship banquet, according to an announcement made yesterday by Dean William Miller of the engineering department of Tech College, who is president of the local organization of former University of Texas students.

A list has been compiled of all known exes of T. U. and invitations sent to them. All who were missed by this list, exes who live in other towns, and wives and husbands of all former Texas students are invited to attend the celebration. The banquet proper will begin at 8 o'clock, although a thirty minute reception and get-together will precede.

It is planned to bring Dr. Bantel of the Engineering Department of the University here as the principal speaker. Persons wishing to attend are requested to phone in reservations to Mrs. E. L. Klett or some officer of the local organization. Other than the president, the officers include: Mrs. Richaard L. Douglas, vice-president; Miss Tyler Lee Knight, secretary; and Mrs. William Dingus, reporter.

Each Group Staunchly Defends Its Operations; Quality Of Cotton On Plains Must Be Raised, Is Belief

Brokers Resent Purchasing By Ginners, Who Retort That They Are Forced To Buy In Self Defense

Cotton brokers and ginners each have their side to the questions of cotton refining, marketing and choice of staple, the Avalanche-Journal discovered yesterday in a survey which covers the cotton business in this area for the past season which was undeniably dull.

Additional profits of from $10 to 15 a bale for the cotton producer as well as an enlivened activity for the spot cotton brokers of this section by the planting of a better grade of cotton seed is promised by the local cotton men as the only solution for the dullness of the past season.

A number of local spot cotton brokers, interviewed recently by a representative of the Avalanche Journal, were unanimous of the opinion that the past season has been a dull one. Reasons for this dullness were varied and indefinite.

Demand Is Slight

"The demand for cotton has been exceedingly slight this season and the cotton brokerage business everywhere has been poor," one Lubbock cotton man stated.

Lack of activity in this section is blamed partially on the poor staple of the cotton that is produced. Although the grade of the cotton this season has been somewhat brighter than last year, the staple is too short for the cotton to demand a good price. This, brokers state, is due to the poor grade of cottnseed planted.

Better Price in Sight

Most of the shippers will not buy the low quality of snap cotton and the few that do handle this grade have not created a great demand for the product during the past season. With the planting of good cottonseed, it is estimated that the grade of cotton produced here would command a much handsomer price.

"South Plains cotton has earned a bad reputation during the past few years due to its short staple," another local broker stated. "This is due to the cottonseed known as 'Half and Half' that is planted in this section. Formerly a good staple was produced here, but it has decreased until shippers will hardly buy this cotton.

Ginning Prices Hit

"The best solution for this," he continued, "will be for the gin men to stop buying cotton. There is an undercurrent of feeling at the present time that too much is charged for ginning. Should this feeling result in a reduction of ginning prices, it probably will take the gin men out of the cotton market and cause

Teas, Bridge Parties, Luncheons Fill Week-End With Functions In City

Large Functions Given By Berean Class, Music Club

Affairs Crowd Week-End In Lubbock With Activity; Country Club Is Scene Of Music Club Affair

Two teas, luncheons, bridge parties and numerous other affairs filled the week-end here with activity in society circles. The holiday on Friday added to the number of functions as special events celebrated Washington's birthday anniversary.

A seated tea given yesterday afternoon at the Country Club by the Lubbock Music Club was one of the most elaborate affairs in a week-end of functions and about 200 called at an annual silver Colonial tea given on Friday afternoon in the home of Mrs. James E. Watson at 1901 29th street by the Berean class of the First Christian church.

Mesdames T. J. Foster and Hubert L. Allen entertained on Friday and Saturday afternoons with 10-table bridge parties, the D. A. R. had a special program on Friday afternoon, regular club meetings were conducted.

Officers in the Music club and the entertainment committee, which is composed of Mrs. A. W. McKee, Mrs. Lawrence Bacon and Mrs. Ross A. McWhorter, made up the house party for the tea yesterday afternoon.

Use Spring Flowers

Spring flowers and hangings were arranged in rooms of the Country Club for this occasion and refreshments were dispensed from the dining room which was decorated for this occasion.

A cluster of red tulips formed a center piece on the table which was laid with a lace cloth over green. Sandwiches had red and green centers and mints in the two colors were on the plates. Hot coffee was served from a silver service.

Printed programs were given the guests as they arrived and about 125 were in attendance.

Mrs. R. D. Moxley is president of the Music Club. Other officers included in the house party were Mesdames David S. Martin, Will Tucker, Ed O'Sullivan, T. A. White, R. F. Cook, A. W. Evans, Miss Mary Dunn and Mrs. E. L. Robertson.

Musical Program

A program given during the afternoon was as follows:

"Hayfields and Butterflies", (Del Riego), "Little Irish Girl" (Lohr), Mrs. Richard L. Douglas; "Violin Trio in C Major" (Haydn), Misses Beulah Dunn, Margaret Stone and Mrs. Kenneth Knickerbocker; "Keep a Smilin'" (Lytton-Cox), Mrs. T. A. White; "Etude, Opus 10, No. 5" (Chopin), Mrs. E. F. George; "The Lass with the Delicate Air" (Arne) and "In Time of Roses" (Richards) Mrs. G. E. McCelvey; "Adagio from Sonata in G Minor" (Tartini), Mrs. Kenneth Knickerbocker; double trio "Minuet in G" (Beethoven-Branscombe), Mrs. T. J. Beck, Miss Phyllis Burleson, Mesdames R. L. Douglas, G. M. Shaw, George N. Atkinson and H. E. Blocker.

Members of the Berean Class were in picturesque Colonila costume for the tea on Friday afternoon and a Colonial program was given during the afternoon.

Mesdames L. E. Grimes and Fred Childress greeted callers at the door and Mrs. Watson stood at the head of a receiving line which was composed of Mesdames Walter P. Jennings, Leland Mast, C. C. Lindsey, J. F. Abel, Charles E. Smith, C. O. Marquart, N. L. Benson, Felix Kelley, Leroy T. Patton and Ance English.

These In Line

Mrs. K. M. Renner and Mrs. R. L. Howell assisted in receiving in the living room and Mrs. Hattie O'Hair and Allie Kaufman were in the hall. Assisting in the dining room were Mesdames J. H. McKinney, W. R. Blake, J. O. Ballinger, Harry Meyers and Tom Garrard.

During the first hour, Mrs. W. T. Milam and Mrs. James R. Robinson poured tea and Mesdames A. T. Biggers and Arthur L. Brown presided at the table during the last hour.

Several selections were sung by a Colonial quartet, composed of Mesdames Ed O'Sullivan, T. A. White,

Year's Program Broad In Episcopal Society; Active Membership Limited

Financial Budget Of Small Auxiliary Is $900

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the ...th article in a series concerning the church women's auxiliaries of Lubbock. Others will appear in consecutive Sunday issues of the Avalanche-Journal.

BY BLANCHE E. BEAN

Although every woman baptised into St. Paul's-On-The-Plains Episcopal church is considered a member of the Auxiliary, there were only 18 active members during 1928 and this group shouldered a large part of the congregational activities along with financing a budget of $900.

The membership is expected to be larger during 1929, as the congregation is larger, according to the president, Mrs. Wallace W. Rix.

This auxiliary has five fields of service: the parish, community, state, nation and world, and it is in the parish, or local church and the community that much of the women's work is done.

Entertain Convention.

Tech college students were entertained last year by these women in conjunction with other church women of the city; a carpet was bought for the church floor when the building was remodeled and moved; the entertainment of a recent convocation of the district of North Texas, which was attended by almost 100 people, was entirely financed by the women here, charity and missionary work was done here and abroad and every church cause received contributions from the women.

"Although some of these activities are distinctly those of the Auxiliary, one cannot be so definite concerning the women's work because we sponsor every thing done in the church," Mrs. Rix explained.

Budget Proposed.

A budget of $800 has been proposed in the society for this year and some of the items in this list include $100 to be spent in local social service work, $36 for the Technological college Y. W. C. A., $250 for the church building.

Missionary boxes are packed annually and sent to missions in the United States.

The fostering of education is one of the principal aims of women in this society and their fields include the Technological college here and the West Texas State Teachers college at Canyon. A community center has been proposed for campus of each institution to be sponsored by the Episcopal church.

Paul Barrier has been in Slaton for a week opening a store there.

The Woman's Day

By Allene Sumner

Allene Sumner

Leaders of the Doukhobor colony in British Columbia, a group which refuses to send its children to public schools, and indulges in various other iconoclasms, were jailed the other day. The last straw to authorities wasn't the school defiance, but the insistence on colony members of dancing naked in the snow. Shocked provincial police reported finding more than 100 naked men dancing in foot-deep snow in a blizzard.

• • •

PERSONAL AFFAIR

Is it shocking to remark that, after all, nude dancing in the snow seems to be more a matter of personal endurance than one of public concern? Somewhat in the same class as those who dare to take a cold shower in the morning, and those who do not? Nudity and its acceptance or rejection is largely a matter of provincial morals—a geographic thing of taste, rather than a really moral one. We quite accept near-nude aesthetic dancing from an Isadora Duncan which we deny to organized cults dancing madly in the hills.

• • •

NEXT HUNDRED YEARS

We have come a long ways since our mothers wore ankle-length dresses to the bathing beach, and, like it or not, it is just as sure that we will come so much farther in the next 50 years that anyone who wishes to dance nude in the snow will do so. We will have learned that the sight of nudity has little to do with morality, and is no evidence of a decadent era upon us.

• • •

LITTLE RED SCHOOLHOUSES

The 175,000 "one-room schools in rich America," which have been counted up by the General Federation of Women's clubs, are seized upon by them as "a challenge to the organized womanhood of the land." The Federation wants to enroll the 6,000,000 farm women of America so that one-room schools and other ills may be abolished.

It's rather difficult to get fearfully perturbed about these 175,000 "one-room schools," for some of the results of our supposed educatinally perfect city schols make us occasionally doubt that the old-fashioned "one-room" school quite sans the frills of modern education could have much worse results.

"Rose Dream" To Be Presented Here On Friday Evening

Children In Hunt School To Appear In Pageant Friday Evening In Auditorium Of High School

An operetta, "A Rose Dream," is to be given by children in the Geo. M. Hunt ward school next Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the high school auditorium, according to an announcement made by the school principal, Miss Nell Parmley.

Mary Ruth Hudstedler has the role of Little Rose, a child who wanders away from home, is lost and falls asleep, after which she is found by the fairies and taken on a visit to Fairyland.

The plot of the operetta centers around this visit. The Fairy Queen —a part played by Ferelline Tucker — designates Hop-o'-My Thumb, an elf part which is played by Jack Giles, to guide Little Rose through the Land of the Lost and later to Fairyland. Little Rose, the mortal child, sees much to delight her in this kingdom. The roses serve as her bodyguard, while entertainment is furnished by the fairies and elves.

Others having leading roles in the play are the following: The Rosebud, Mildred Smith; the Giant, Forgot, Douglas Blocker; the Twins, Can and Can't, . D. Phillips Jr. and Maxine Holton; the Door Fairy, Meda Craig Twitty.

A list of others appearing in the operetta includes: Fairies, Marie Thompson, Ada Munroe Williams, Emma Evelyn Stanton, Annette Wulfman, Willie B. ### TO SEND DELEGATE

Local Club Woman Is To Attend Meeting

A committee was appointed in the City Federation of Women's clubs Friday afternoon to arrange for a delegate from Lubbock to attend the annual spring meeting of the Seventh District of Texas Federation of Women's clubs in Snyder, March 25, 26 and 27.

Mrs. R. I. Tubbs presided at the Friday meeting in the absence of the president, Mrs. J. F. Hankins. The meeting was at the First Baptist church.

Miss Margaret Everheart, who teaches in the Littlefield schools, spent the week-end as the guest of her mother, Mrs. J. M. Everheart, 1510 Avenue W.

Luncheons Served Here On Saturday Bride Is Honored

Mrs. W. R. Spencer Hostess To A Number Of Friends; Pan Hellenic Club Meets For Luncheon

Three luncheons were given yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock, one of these being a compliment to Mrs. Lorenz Ellis, a bride. Misses Alma Spikes and Faye George were hostesses at this affair, which was given in the home of the former's sister, Mrs. Earl Hunt, at 708 1-2 Avenue R.

Mrs. W. R. Spencer was charming hostess to a number of her friends with a luncheon in her home at 2121 16th street and Pan-Hellenic club members gathered at Hotel Lubbock for a monthly luncheon with Alpha Delta Pis as hostesses.

The affair given for Mrs. Ellis, who is the former Miss Ophelia Steele, was one of a series of post-nuptial events in her honor. Another has been announced for Wednesday of this week. Mesdames A. V. Weaver, Charles F. O'Neall and R. M. Chitwood will entertain with a bridge tea in the O'Neall home.

Pastel Color Scheme

Places at the luncheon given by Misses Spikes and George were marked by small decorated hat boxes filled with nuts and tagged with the names of guests. Pastel colors were repeated throughout the appointments and a three course luncheon was served.

The guests attending included Mrs. Ellis, Mrs. L. L. Thompson, Misses Geraldine Smith, D'Aunn Sammons, Mildred Street, Frances Small, Frances Wilson, Anna Belle Collins, Kate Boyd, Lucille Moxley, Mrs. Earl Hunt and Mrs. Lee Quillen.

The St. Patrick theme was favored by Mrs. Spencer in appointments for her luncheon, which was served at small tables, and shamrock favors were given. She was assisted by her niece, Miss Martha Spencer, in serving the three-course meal. Spring flowers harmonized with the motif.

These Were Guests

Guests included Mesdames T. B. Duggan, Eliza Anderson, A. V. Weaver, Jed A. Rix, Sam Denman, F. R. Friend, Eastin Wolffarth, Fred Snyder, J. C. Street, H. T. Kimbro, Edgar Lewis, O. L. Slaton, R. M. Chitwood, Paul W. Horn, R. L. Douglas, James Pryor of Amarillo, Frank Maddox, Claude Hurlbut, C. M. Ballenger, Edgar Lewis, Misses Delia Wilkinson, Margaret Weeks, Mabel Erwin and Frances Whatley.

Hostesses for the Pan Hellenic luncheon were Mrs. J. W. Murcheson, Mrs. Jim Kilpatrick, Mrs. M. B. Hilburn, Misses Tyler Lee Knight and Blanche Bacon, all of whom are Alpha Delta Pis.

Spring flowers formed centerprices for tables at which the luncheon was served. Those who attended were Mrs. W. M. Craig, Mrs. George Dupree, Miss Mary Lou Bayless, Mrs. E. L. Banks, Mrs. Carl Roberds, Miss Evelyn Knipp, Mrs. Alex McDonald, Mrs. G. H. Ater, Mrs. S. E. Cone, Miss Ruth Horn, Mrs. Charles H. Mahoney, Mrs. J. P. Newman, Miss Mamie Twyford and the hostesses.

Western Hospitalities Change In Form During Score Of Years Here

As is traditional with western hospitality, Lubbock was as gay 20 years ago for the few people living here as it is for the hundreds of society folk of the city today, but entertaining was of a different type, according to some of the women who have been participating in the outstanding socialities during that period.

At that time there was some of the life that is proverbially associated with the west in fiction. Virtually every citizen of the town was a rancher or had been a rancher, there was little settlement on the Plains except the scattered ranch homes, and these were scenes of some of the gayest affairs.

Bridges and teas were unheard of in Lubbock 15 or 20 years ago, although they are some of the most popular forms of entertainment today, and forty-two was played only occasionally. Dinners, although "hired help" was an almost unheard of luxury, were popular, dances and musicals were given and needle clubs flourished.

Cliques In Early Day.

Cliques were beginning to form in a town of only a few hundred even though practically every one in the community went to some of the affairs. There were few homes in the city which would accommodate large crowds and these were centers of activity during much of the year.

Of course during the earlier days, picnics, dances, home talent plays and other affairs were attended by everyone in the community and surrounding territory and, coming less frequently, these occasions were red letter days of the year.

Women who have lived here for a period of years recall a period when it was particularly smart to do things and the town was rather vaguely divided into the group which sang and the group which painted.

Professor Baer Is Here.

It was about this time that a tenor Professor Philip Edward Baer, came to Lubbock and started a class which was attended by practically everyone of means and "We all sang," laughed one of the women this week, "whether we had voices or not. And, surprising as it may seem, many who had never before thought of singing really developed pleasing voices."

During this time musicals were at their height of popularity.

At about the same time, china painting was a fad and many buffets in Lubbock are yet filled with beautiful dishes decorated during that period.

Every hostess was her own cook and there was much pride among the women of that day in their culinary abilities. Sumptuous meals were prepared and served, pre-holiday periods were filled with the making of dozens of different varieties of confections.

Ranch house parties were unequalled for enjoyment, particularly for the younger set, and horseback riding and dancing were favorite diversions on these occasions.

Boles Ranch Popular.

Later, when ranches were divided into farms and the ranch people moved into town, these house parties became less frequent until they are rarely given today for local people.

The George Boles ranch, which is now located in the Yellowhouse canyon southwest of Lubbock, is yet the scene of many dances, attended by the same people who danced together years ago. These crowds are drawn from Lorenzo, Tahoka and other surrounding towns.

Bridge parties were first given about 10 or 12 years ago, but forty-two was the principal party diversion until more recently and this game is still popular.

From the beginning when every one socially inclined attended every affair given in the city and when every child played at the birthday party of every other child in town, there have sprung up hundreds of clubs and cliques in the Lubbock of today. While no distinct barrier separates the various groups, there are crowds of more or less definite boundaries centering about the colleges, the high school, the young matron, older women and many other groups.

List Of Entrants For Festival Are Listed Last Week

Music Students From Towns On Plains Will Compete With Local Pupils In Spring Contests

Lists of entrants in the annual contests of the spring Music Festival, which is sponsored by the South Plains Music Teachers association, have been received by the president, Miss Margaret Huff of this city. This includes about 500 contestants from Lubbock, Slaton, Tahoka, Southland, Lamesa, Floydada and Idalou.

Ages in the contest range from 5 to 19 years and a few adults are included.

The Music Festival is to be conducted in Lubbock on March 14, 15 and 16, and elimination contests will be on March 9, according to Miss Huff.

Many Pianists.

The largest classification represtented in the contest is piano with 149 solo entrants. 124 entered in ensemble groups. Sixteen are entered in the violin solo group with 18 in ensembles, in addition to those playing in orchestras. Eighteen have entered in the vocal solo division and 12 will sing in ensembles, in addition to those who have enrolled in the choruses. Twelve will compete with band instruments, while one junior and one senior band will play. Fifteen are entered in theory contests, six choruses have entered, four quartets, one junior orchestra and one senior orchestra.

Chairmen of division in the contests include the following: Piano solo and ensemble, Miss Huff; Scales, Miss Mary Dunn; violin, Miss Beulah Dunn; voice, Mrs. Lillian Butler of Slaton; bands, J. W. Crowley; theory, Mrs. John L. Ratliff.

Silvio Scionti of New York and Chicago is to be the artist-judge of the Festival and he will appear in piano recital here on the evening of March 14.

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton

©1928 by NEA Service, Inc.

One of the most demoralizing things to children is the parent who changes his mind. Not the parent who acknowledges that he is wrong (long life to him) but the one who says one thing one day and another thing the next.

Often the parent with this penchant for changeableness is not the weak-kneed individual one might think. He gives orders in a firm tone that brooks no delay.

Did you ever know anyone like that? The last generation was pretty good at it.

This type of mind-changing parent is disappearing very fast. New ideas in child training have resulted in parent training, and the parent today who changes his mind is usually one who has thought things over and found a better way.

But the millenium has not come. There are still with us a number of parents who have the unfortunate habit of back-firing commands.

When a parent is inconsistent the children will be inconsistent; they lose respect for authority to begin with and not knowing what is expected of them they are likely to take the law into their own hands and do as they please.

Children of changeable parents ar almost invariably insubordinate. Observe the family where you suspect this sort of condition exists. Watch the children rush in and ask permission to do something they were allowed to do the day before. For no good reason on earth they meet with a prompt refusal.

If it is the habit of the house to give out its indulgences temperamentally, I think you will see those children calmly doing the thing they were forbidden to do, on their own responsibility, that is, if they haven't long ago abandoned the habit of asking.

The Morning Avalanche Menu for the Day

BY SISTER MARY

BREAKFAST — Baked bananas, cereal, cream, country sausage, buckwheat cakes, syrup, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON — Spinach ring with creamed oysters, brown bread and butter sandwiches, prune tapioca pudding, cocoanut cookies, milk, tea.

Cocoanut Cookies.

Two eggs, 1 cup sugar, 4 tablespoons shortening, 1-2 cup sour cream, 1-2 teaspoon soda, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 cup grated cocoanut, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla, few gratings nutmeg, 2 1-2 cups flour (about.)

Beat eggs until light, gradually beating in sugar. Add cocoanut, softened shortening, salt, vanilla, nutmeg and half the cream. Mix thoroughly and sift in as much flour as mixture will absorb easily. Add remaining flour to make a stiff dough and work until perfectly smooth. Shape into a roll and chill several hours or over night. Cut in slices about 1-4 inch thick and bake 12 minutes in a moderate oven.

Changed And Novel Gowns Loom On Paris Horizon

In line, feeling and fabric the new gowns and frocks show great style change, says Patou. Left to right: Tulle and point d'esprit in the new charteuse shade unite to fashion a stunning evening gown of great length with touches of the plain tulle in the skirt and a scarf of tulle. A shoulder ornament of crystals is suspended from one side. Crepe de chine appliques in black, green and yellow give individuality to a black satin frock for daytime. There is newness also in the cut and femininity of this frock. Violet tulle in a wide mesh makes a flattering evening gown. It is trimmed with a belt of bordeaux red on which is embroidered a motif in red and white. The shoulder posy is made of velvet in the same red.

BY JEAN PATOU
For NEA Service

PARIS, Feb. 23.—To realize the change in fashions since last year, we must analyze both day-time and evening clothes.

Compare the silhouettes of the day and evening dresses—you will see that the line of demarcation now is accentuated. The dresses to be worn during the day have gained little in length. Those to be worn at night reach practically to the ground, almost entirely concealing the wearer's legs as far down as the ankle.

Skirts are still short where my sports clothes are concerned. The sweater, which seemed to have acquired an almost static position in this type of ensemble, plays a secondary role this season. Vulgarization is the cause of its abandonment.

Washable Sports Suits.

It was necessary, however, to seek a new material in order to face the default of the sweater. I finally hit upon that fine washable woolen fabric which is used in England for men's shirtings and pajamas. There are one or two sports suits made up in this new material. It seems to me that these suits correspond to a new formula besides possessing that additional advantage over the sweater—the possibility of being laundered.

I have used wool jersey in a small number of dresses. In every instance the material is plain and of a heavy quality, bearing the appearance of a good woven wool fabric.

English cloths still figure largely in my one-piece tailored frocks and suits.

It is difficult to compare the technique of the latest afternoon dresses with those of last year. At that time I drew your attention to the overthrow of the traditions of preceding years. This year I bring to your notice a very marked evolution in the form of a decidedly dressier silhouette, one replete with all the old-time traditions of Haute Couture.

The reappearance of the "dressy" tailored suit strikes a new note but these are more fanciful in style than ever before.

I have also made the discovery of a new material for evening dresses. This is a tulle so prepared as to permit of almost tailored evening gowns. It is soft and devoid of the harshness of ordinary tulle.

Four colors dominate in my collection. As a matter of fact there are only two, as three of them are but graded shades of one color. Nasturtium red is the new color, which I have called "Patou's Light—Medium and Eccentric Capucine." This is a tint we had not seen for a long time. Black is the other color.

Makes Use of Fur.

Although my present collection is a summer one, I have made quite an extensive use of fur on evening cloaks and on some beach coats. For day wear there is fox dyed "Patou's light capucine" and lynx. The very latest newcomer is black monkey fur.

My spring collection will, I hope, prove even more feminine than its predecessor. There is ample evidence of this in the cut and us of trimmings in afternoon gowns, tailored suits and dresses.

For evening wear, on the contrary, a rather severe, tailored effect is apparent. Also a constant research for absolute simplicity.

In conclusion I would say to posses good taste but to risk nothing is not a difficult proposition.

In my opinion, so far as a luxurious industry like ours is concerned, the sole aim should be to combine daring without disrespect for any of the laws of harmony and measure.

MERRY MIX-UP MEETS

Fortnightly Club To Meet Next Week

A party which was to have been given Tuesday evening for members of the Fortnightly Club, has been postponed one week because of the play at the Technological college on that evening, according to an announcement made by the hostesses, Misses Ruth Budd and Hazel Armstrong.

Miss Alma Girand is visiting in Dallas for several days.

LA NOVIA MEETS

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Nislar Hosts On Friday

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Nislar entertained La Novia Bridge club Friday evening in their home at 2111 13th Street and bridge was played during the evening.

Club members attending were Mr. and Mrs. Claxton Draper, Mr. and Mrs. Marlin Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Griffith. Guests were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Frnka, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Quinlan and Miss Genevieve Murray.

Mrs. Smith and Mr. Griffith made high scores among club players and Mr. and Mrs. Frnka were high among the guests. There were table cuts for small potted plants. Unusually delicious refreshments were passed by the hostess.

SADDLE SLEEVES

The new sleeve for afternoon frocks is the saddle sleeve that joins the blouse in raglan style, and fits more or less closely until the elbow and then flares to width and originality to the wrist.

An acquamarine blue crepe de chine evening gown has a wide scintillating silver banding outlining one side of the neck, running zigzag down one side of both front and back of the gown's entire length and cutting an irregular line around the long skirt's hem. The other side is entirely plain.

Mr. and Mrs. Bays Bryant are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Griffith during the week-end.

Growth Of PTA In Lubbock Outlined Through 18 Years

Mrs. F. O. Bennett Tells Of Organization And Work Of Council In Lubbock Recently

On answkering a group of questions regarding the P. T. A. work in Lubbock, Mrs. F. O. Bennett, pioneer P.-T. A. worker in this city and Oklahoma, herein tells how the spirit of co-operation has been fostered through the members.

"The progress of the schools has been inspired more in the last few years by the P.-T. A. than by any other means," declared Mrs. Bennett who spoke freely and informally on the subject. Further stating that "Since the organization of the Lubbock P.-T. A. council in February, 1926, there has been a great deal of progress made in each of the associations, over which the council is head. Mrs. E. H. Smith of this city was the first president, and the council organization came into life in the home of Mrs. Garland Woodward, who now resides in Big Spring. The four schools represented in the total charter membership of 185 were: Junior High P.-T. A. with Mrs. Smith as president; Central Ward P.-T. A., Mrs. C. E. Maedgen, president; K. Carter P.-T. A., Mrs. Woodward, president; George M. Hunt P.-T. A., Mrs. J. F. Hankins, president.

Council Organized.

The council was composed of the president of each local P.-T. A., together with her secretary and the principal of the school and district officers. Other council officers aside from Mrs. Smith who served the first year, were: Mrs. C. E. Maedgen, first vice-president; Carroll Thompson, principal of the Junior high school, was secretary-treasurer.

When asked what she considered was the most important achievement of the council, Mrs. Bennett replied, "I feel the greatest achievement of the organization is the cooperation it has inspired between the parents and teachers, and the people in general have come to recognize it as a mighty power for good. No town or community of any importance would be without its organization for long. I consider that the P.-T. A. work is the most worthwhile club work we can do as it comes closest to the parent-teacher heart.

"Besides maintaining their interest in every phase of the local work, which covers everything that is for the general betterment of the school the council and individual P.-T. A.'s send delegates every year to the district and state conventions. There each join in the exchange of helpful ideas and bring back to the council and the individual club the best workable plans which may be used to further the program of the local associations."

Beautification Program.

The council's plans for '29 under the leadership of Mrs. J. N. Michie, president, has for one of its main objectives the beautification of all school grounds in the city.

Later affiliated P.-T. A.'s which at this time swell Lubbock's growing council membership to approximately 390 members are as follows: High School P.-T. A. with Mrs. E. W. Camp, president for 1928-29; Dupre P.-T. A., Mrs. W. T. Milam, president; Sanders P.-T. A., Mrs. Cecil C. Ragland, president. Other presidents now serving are: Junior high, Mrs. C. Y. Partain; Central Ward, Mrs. R. T. Campbell; George Hunt, Mrs. T. A. White; K. Carter, Mrs. W. B. Price.

Executives making up the official council have been changed to include besides the president of each affiliated P.-T. A., the school principal and the district officers, two elected delegates from each association represented.

The first organization of any kind to function in Lubbock as a copartner of the schools, was the others' club organized in the Central ward school in 1910. It functioned rather intermittently, according to Mrs. W. L. Baugh, until 1920 when the first P.-T. A. was organized in the George M. Hunt school. The present paid up membership of 190 members have grown from an organization of six 18 years ago.

Will Tucker and Marvin McLarty. They were accompanied at the piano by Mrs. W. C. Wood.

A pantomine, "Maggie" was given with Mrs. James Eubanks and Mrs. Paul Barrier in principal roles and sixteen children in costume appeared in a "Minuet." Priscilla Watson and Jean Shelley Jennings were in a number, "Colonial Lovers" and a pantomine of the famous painting, "A Tribute to George Washington's Mother", was given with Jean Shelley Jennings having the role of Washington and Mrs. R. W. Crowder, jr., appearing as his mother. Louraine Richards represented the Girl Scout in this scene.

Completing the program were Mrs. C. C. Lindsey, who sang, and Mrs. Wanda Banker, who read.

Monthly Social

A monthly social meeting of the Berean class was conducted in the evening in the Watson home and hostesses were Mesdames Grimes, Wade Hardy, A. C. Jackson, A. M. Johnson, George Kuykendall, C. C. Lindsey, Forrest Lindsey, Allie Kaufman, Felix Kelley and Miss Cora Johnson.

The pantomine, "Maggie", was repeated and other diversions contributed to a festive evening. Talks were made by Sam J. McFarland and Rev. Walter P. Jennings. Cherry Pie and coffee were served and there was an attendance of about sixty-five.

Episcopal

plans have been effected to raise money for the society in the past, a new plan has been introduced for 1929 and each woman will be asked to pledge a specific amount toward the budget, Mrs. Rix said.

Each one will be asked to make this money in some way, although this is not to be a requirement, she said. If this plan is effective, the other money-making schemes will be discarded in order that the society women may have more time to devote to actual study and culture and worthy activities.

Assist Church.

The Episcopal women have had an annual Christmas bazaar, food sales have been conducted, pledges made and paid and other means used to finance the work of the society.

When the church was moved to its present location on Avenue Q, the society contributed $500 to the improvement and renovation of the building. Formerly a choir director was paid by the women but this plan has been discarded.

In addition to Mrs. Rix the officers include Mrs. Bob Penny as secretary and Mrs. T. W. Thomas, treasurer, with a group of committee chairmen.

Miss Ruth Rix, who is educational secretary in the society, attended the triennial convention of the Episcopal church in Washington, D. C., last year, representing the local society and church.

Study During Lent.

Along with other things in the society, the women follow certain study courses outlined by the church headquarters. During lent a book, "The New Africa," is being studied under the direction of Mrs. Mary W. Doak. This volume deals with missionary work in Africa and is studied in churches other than the Episcopal. A study is outlined for advent and at other periods during the year.

An outstanding thing in the church this year, which has the sponsorship of the Women's Auxiliary, is a summer encampment which is to be conducted here for 10 days during the latter part of June. This is to be a district affair, various courses of study will be offered and there will be recreational features.

Miss Ruth Culwell, 1813 15th street, is ill at her home.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

MME. RUBINSTEIN

Here are two links for your chain of beauty—the all-important links of diet and health. Consider them well! Good health first. For there can be no lasting beauty without it. And health is just a general term for the state of well being which we all take for granted when we have it. Usually it is only when sickness comes along that most people take time to consider health seriously. If you would be beautiful and healthy, in earnest, you must think about health day by day by day, observing carefully a few simple rules to preserve it.

To check up on your physical condition have a medical examination at least once a year by a competent physician. Thus you can know whether your important inner organs—lungs, heart, kidneys, etc., are all in good working order, and whether there is any source of poisons existing within the system, such as infected tonsils, decayed teeth, etc.

If an examination says all is well and sound the next thing is simply to stay that way.

One point to consider in health—this link in beauty's chain—is diet. For you are what you eat. The food you take in, plus the water you drink and the air you breathe, makes your tissues and cells, all of them, what they are. Eating correctly means a better body and greater beauty, just as simple as that.

Diets, of course, must vary to suit the needs of different people. Hard-working men and women need to eat more than the lazy ones. Growing children do, too. And people who wish to reduce or build up should have diets especially arranged for them by their doctors. But there are general rules for healthy diet that apply to nearly everyone.

One is "do not overeat." Even thin people should not stuff themselves too generously. Bodies burdened with food can neither assimilate needed nourishment nor throw off the extra poisons that the food generates. Overating defeats the purpose of eating, entirely, especially when the system is tired. Better for the thin person or the hungry one to eat often and lightly and assimilate what she does eat, well.

And eat regularly. Try to eat your meals at approximately the same time each day. The body gets used to routine and dislikes to be disturbed by irregularity.

And now what kind of food shall you eat? Strange as it may seem, you have to worry less about this than about the other considerations of diet. For normally people like a balanced diet, and for the normal person the balanced diet is best. Of course the balance should be a consideration whenever meals are being planned.

Roughly, you should eat from 10 to 15 per cent in proteins, 25 to 30 per cent in fats, and the rest in carbohydrates, 60 to 65 per cent.

Proteins are in meats, fish, eggs, cheese and nuts. Fats are in butter, cream, milk, oils and chocolates. Carbohydrates in sugar, starch and vegetable fiber. Two other important classes of food materials are the mineral salts and the vitamines. These exist, especially, in the rough outer coatings of grains and vegetables and in fruits and in milk.

If it seems too difficult to figure out the percentage of each type of food for your diet, remember this. Eat proteins sparingly, substitute the other proteins for meat frequently. Eat plenty of fruits and vegetables especially the nice, fresh, green ones. Avoid white bread and substitute for it dark breads of all kinds and corn or bran muffins. And drink plenty of milk. It is a complete food.

Detroit Girl Brings Plane Into San Angelo

SAN ANGELO, Feb. 23—The first woman pilot to stop at the San Angelo airport, Miss Mary Van Mach of Detroit, landed at the flying field here Thursday afternoon and after spending several hours chatting with attendants left for Dallas on the return trip to her home.

With Miss Van Mach was Ray Baumgardner, a licensed transport pilot, employed by the aviatrix to assist her in cross country work. Mr. Baumgardner's home is in Fort Stockton where the party visited two weeks ago enroute to Phoenix, Arizona. The western trip was made through Abilene, Sweetwater and Big Spring with stops at Fort Stockton and El Paso.

Life In Tech's Home Management House Teaches Co-Eds About Home Operation

State Provides Fine Practice House And Girls Benefit

By MARGARET TURNER
Texas Tech Correspondent

On Monday and Tuesday we wash and iron.

On Wednesday we always bake—"

This Mother Goose rhyme could be applied to girls who live in the home management house on the Tech campus and while they may not wash and iron on the days mentioned still clothes are seen gayly fluttering in the breeze on most any week day.

A Spanish type of architecture is employed in the building carrying out the scheme of the campus. The living room has two French doors which open onto a spacious porch.

"There's An Ash-Tray, Too."

On entering the front door one is admitted through the long hallway to the large living room. A number of windows allow a flood of light to make the room more homelike. Geraniums from all of the window casements. In one corner of the room is placed a chaise lounge upholstered in green and block-printed by girls of the home economics' school. On the walls hang prints from France and Belgium and pictures which are the works of Velasquez and Holbein. A brass ash-tray attributes to the fact that the girls have dates as they would in their own homes.

Miss Mayme Twyford, who is the instructor living in the house with the students as a member of the family unit, has her office just off from the living room and next to this room is the girl's office. Here is a file containing menus for the week. The entire cost of food, and household expenses is daily recorded, and the cook is enabled to see if she keeps a well balanced schedule in her preparation of the meals.

Hostesses Work.

Thus, one girl is hostess and her duties include those of serving at the table, returning thanks, cleaning the downstairs rooms with the exception of the dining room and kitchen, and inviting guests for dinner.

The assistant housekeeper also cleans the downstairs rooms, cares for the table linen, and prepares the laundry for washing.

The cook plans the meals, purchases the food, cooks meals, and reads and discusses the daily paper.

The girl acting as waitress has as her duties to keep the dining room clean and in order at all times, setting of the table, serving the meals, cleaning the silverware, and caring for the glassware.

The general helper assists with the cooking if she is needed, prepares water, bread, butter, and relishes, cleans the kitchen, washes dishes at night, and cares for the dish cloths and towels.

Four Girls There Now.

There are four girls living at the home now although six may live there according to plans. These girls, Bonnie Lee Cook, Blanche Brown, Marian Sanson, and Ouida Middleton are all seniors in the school of home economics. When they first came to live in the home they drew lots for their duties and since have retained them by rotation. They will stay at the home for one term.

According to Miss Twyford the main aims of the practice house are to teach an appreciation and regard for home life. It provides a place for application of all class room work, and teaches the girls to eliminate drudgery and unnecessary waste of time and energy in doing housework.

"The practice house has an excellent opportunity to assist local families to new housing standards and to inform them of the use of labor-saving devices," said Miss Twyford. "We are glad to assist in any way posible to acquaint the patrons of the college or town in new household operation and care." One of the greatest labor saving devices of the kitchen is the electric dish washer. Next to the kitchen is the laundry which is quite modern with stationary tubs and an indoor dryer. The day that the writer paid her visit two girls were merrily washing away. The household linens, and heavier pieces are done by a laundress who come to the home once a week, but the girls prefer to wash their own clothes.

Many Features Employed.

The home is equipped with three built-in ironing boards and two irons. Brooms, electric sweepers, and mops hang in a neat array in a cleaning closet.

The butler's pantry has a sink, a china closet and doors which open to the refrigerator. This is not electric but the ice is placed in the box from outside and its doors open to the kitchen and butler's pantry. English china is used and a drawer of the buffette in the dining room contains a set of silverware. The Berkey and Gay dining suite carries out the Spanish lines of the house. Curtains at the window are of theatrical gauze and are a lovely shade of orange.

There are five bedrooms upstairs and two baths. The guest room is in lavender, while others are rose, green, and blue ones. These rooms are much as other college girls rooms, the possible exception being that they are presentable at all hours. Waste baskets contained extra papers and the dresser drawers were closed. The beds were neatly made and clothes hung side by side in the closets which were light and roomy.

Rugs Different

Rugs differ, some being fiber, and others old-fashioned rag rugs. Some of the furniture has been brought from the second hand stores and revarnished and upholstered and made to look like new. Miss Twyford proudly displayed a chair in her room which cost fifty cents. It was gayly upholstered in blue and old rose and a little door stop was of the same material.

The complete furnishings cost $2,500 while construction of the house was $25,000. An inventory gives a list of every thing with its purchase price. Several gifts have been made and among these are the electric washer, gas range, and phonograph.

Visitors are welcomed to be shown the house every day exxcept Saturday and Sunday from 4 until 6 o'clock and are personally conducted through the home by one of the girls.

Parties Given In Cities Of Plains

Bride And Bride-Elect Are Honored In Levelland On Saturday; Large Parties Are Given

Large bridge and forty-two parties featured society in towns of the South Plains during last week.

Fourteen tables of forty-two were in play Tuesday evening in Plainview when Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Jackson and Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Underwood entertained three forty-two clubs. The affair was in the Jackson home.

A delightful affair given in O'Donnell last week as a musical tea sponsored by Circle 2 of the Methodist W. M. S. A patriotic program was given and house party members were in Colonial costume.

Celebrate Anniversaries

Mr. and Mrs. Andy Caldwell of Slaton celebrated their 22nd wedding anniversary last Sunday at their home in Slaton and a number of guests attended a dinner served on that day. Another anniversary celebration in Slaton was on Monday evening when Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Florence celebrated their twenty-fifth with an enjoyable affair in their home. A wedding ceremony was performed for the couple by Rev. B. G. Holloway, after which toasts were proposed to the couple by their guests.

The Civic club of Levelland entertained on Saturday afternoon honoring Miss Jeanette Miller of that city who is to be married to T. W. Meador, of Post. The affair was in the home of Mrs. Elmer Birdwell.

Tea was served from a beautifully appointed table and a shower of gifts was presented to the bride-elect.

Bride Honored

A bride of Levelland, Mrs. Edgar Brasch, was honored in the evening at an affair given in the home of Mrs. M. E. Starnes with Mrs. H. E. Lewis and Misses May, Nugent and Starnes as hostesses.

Mesdames J. A. Buck and Sep Smith entertained with one of the largest affairs of the week in Crosbyton when they were hostesses with a bridge party in the Smith home. Eight tables were in play.

Cotton

a greater incentive for planting pure seed."

It is stated by the cotton brokers that gin men, with no knowledge of the grade and staple of cotton, will buy the product, paying the same price for all grades. Such a practice has killed the profit from using a better grade of seed, they say.

Ginners Have Their Side

Lubbock ginmen who buy cotton in addition to the ginning activities declare that they are not in the cotton buying business because they want to be but because they have been forced in by both the farmer and the cotton broker. They are unanimous in that they do not wish to buy cotton, but they state they must do it as an accomodation to the farmer, whom they say was dissatisfied with the methods used by the broker previously in purchasing cotton.

Denying that the buying of cotton by gin men is responsible for the lack of incentive for planting good seed, one local ginner said that the condition of buying cotton had been unchanged by the entrance of ginners into the purchasing field. "The spot cotton brokers would set an average type for a community and buy all cotton on this level basis," it was said. "The broker is sore at the ginner for buying cotton and the ginner is sore at the broker for forcing him to buy it."

Solution Is Offered

For a whole community to go in and plant one good grade of seed, thereby developing a set standard for that section, is offered by the ginmen as the only solution for the short staple reputation cotton produced in this county has developed. Only a few scattered farmers planting good seed will not alter the situation, they will tell you.

Ginmen deny that the ginning rate is too high. "Farmers have always thought the ginning rate was too high," one ginner said yesterday, "but the expenditure of putting in a gin has made the rate necessarily high. Whereby it formerly cost a few thousand to establish a gin, it now takes thirty-five or forty thousand dollars."

One ginman explained that a bill was now in the house which would make ginning a public utility with a set rate as in the case in Oklahoma. Oklahoma's ginning rate is cheaper than the one in this state.

Erma Bennett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank O. Bennett, is spending the week-end in Slaton as the guest of Alva Jo Blundell.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Morgan are visiting relatives in Dallas and Sulphur Springs for two weeks.

MISS KING WEDS

Daughter Of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. King Marries

Announcements have been sent out telling of the marriage of Miss Julia King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. King, 2316 14th street, at 3:30 o'clock Friday afternoon at a Methodist church in Colorado Springs, Colo. They are at home in Denver where Mr. Pannell is a student in the Colorado Medical school.

The bride is a graduate of Clarendon college and of the West Texas State Teachers college at Canyon, having a bachelor of arts degree from the latter institution.

She has studied in the University of Colorado at Boulder for two summers and has taught English and Spanish in the Logan, N. M., high school for three years, resigning recently in order that she might marry. She has frequently visited her parents here.

Mr. Pannell is a graduate of the University of Colorado.

FORTY-TWO PLAYED

Mr. And Mrs. L. B. Lynch Hosts On Friday

Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Lynch entertained Friday evening with a seven-table forty-two party in their home at 1309 13th street. Refreshments were served following the games to Messrs. and Mesdames. Clarence McGee, P. H. Moore, O. C. Moore, Alvin Dunlap, J. C. Harris, George Raybon, Lex Reese, W. B. Kelly, Jim Dennis, Stanton Rhea, Misses Glenna Dillard, Juanita Meredith, Eva Gay Ellison, Antha Ellison, Messrs. Charles Thomas, Weldon Harris, F. G. Brown and Sterling.

Seventy-Five Are Guests At Affair

Mrs. George M. Boles Given Surprise Dance On Friday Celebrating Her Birthday; Dance At Ranch

As a surprise for Mrs. George M. Boles on her birthday, about seventy-five of her friends gathered at the Boles ranch in Yellowhouse Canyon Friday evening, bringing cakes, pies and coffee which were served after an evening of dancing

The spacious living room of the home was cleared and the square dance and other old-fashioned steps were danced with Fred Spikes and Mr. Boles calling. Music was furnished by a string orchestra.

Among the guests, who attended from Crosby and Garza counties, as well as Lubbock, were J. D. Canary, cattleman of Denver, Colo., Mrs. Howard Wheelock of Amarillo, Mrs. Elmer Conley, of Hillsboro, and Mrs. Gibson of Roswell, N. M.,

Mrs. Boles, who has long been known for her hospitalities, was presented with a linen table cloth and napkins by the guests.

It is a little thing to speak a phrase of common comfort, which by daily use has almost lost its sense; yet on the ear of him who thought to die unmourned it will fall like choicest music.—Talfourd.

"I'VE NEVER SEEN ANYTHING IN MY LIFE TO EQUAL IT"

Lubbock Man Says His Wife Has Gained Wonderfully On Orgatone

Another wonderful endorsement for Orgatone that will be read with interest was given recently by Mr. T. H. Martin, residing at 1394 Ave. H Lubbock, Texas. In an interesting interview with the Orgatone representative at Bowen's Drug Store, Mr. Martin said:

"Orgatone is nothing short of a wonder. Why, I've never seen anything in my life to equal it. It has not only gotten my wife over serious troubles, but she is actually gaining in strength since she began taking it. She commenced to go down hill as far as health was concerned five years ago. She was nervous and had no appetite to speak of. Was constipated most of the time, and I was alarmed about her.

"She had the very best treatment and I bought every kind of medicine anyone would suggest, but nothing did her any good. Then I saw Orgatone so highly advertised by our Texas people who had taken it, so I bought her a bottle and my wife began taking it. Well, it proved to be exactly what she needed. In a few days she began to talk of feeling better and I could tell she was improving. As I said before she has gained wonderfully in health, eats anything she wants, sleeps like a baby every night and has the strength and color she used to have before she got sick. I am glad for every body to know what I think of Orgatone."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called patent or secret remedy but a new scientific treatment containing no alcohol or other false stimulating drugs and is sold in Lubbock exclusively by the Bowen's Drug Store under the personal direction of the special Orgatone representative. Adv.

A PRICELESS PRIVILEGE

PRAYER is a means of communication between man and God. No better definition of prayer has been written than that which says, "prayer is an offering up of our desires unto God, for things agreeable unto his will, in the name of Christ, with confession of our sins, and thankful acknowledgement of his mercies." Jesus illustrated the meaning of prayer by praying himself in the presence of his disciples, and by giving them what is commonly known as the Lord's prayer but which in fact is a model that is repeated daily by countless thousands of believers. The Lord's own prayer is chronicled in John 17, and is likewise familiar to all those who study God's word and seek guidance and strength from it. In the first place, we pray only to God. A prayer to Jesus, or the Holy Spirit, is contrary to the teachings of Jesus and the revelation of the Bible. God is the Father, and to him we take our petitions because he is the Father. The function of Jesus Christ is not to hear and answer prayer, but to be an advocate before the Father for those who call upon God in the name of the Son. The Holy Spirit likewise has his own peculiar function, which is to execute the divine will of God and not to hear and answer prayer although the Spirit is employed by God in answering prayer. The Bible clearly teaches that we may offer up all our desires to God in prayer, the only provision being that we be in the right attitude toward God. A prayer that expresses rebellion against God's will surely is ineffectual; but the prayer that expresses humble submission to the will of the Father will be answered, as God sees fit to answer it. To pray effectually one must come before God as earthly children come before earthly parents; assured of his unfailing love, recognizing his infinite wisdom, and depending upon him to give what is best even though it may not be what we in our sin and weakness may believe that we ought to have. Moreover, we must pray in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ; because it is only through Christ that we are permitted to approach the throne of God's grace. He is necessary to our salvation and necessary to our contact with God through the medium of prayer. He taught his disciples to pray, pleading his righteousness and not their own, and giving assurance that whatsoever they might ask in his name would be given them. Finally, a prayer that is offered in the right spirit will be not merely a petition begging God for something, but will be overflowing with gratitude to God for what he has already given. Prayer itself is a gift of God; and if we are to pray with a hope of obtaining God's mercy, there must be a recognition of the inestimable privilege one claims when he approaches the throne of grace through the medium of a direct petition to the Father.

THE PENALTY OF SEDITION

ECONOMIC warfare has been proclaimed by President Emilio Portes Gil of Mexico against the fomenters of sedition in his country and against those accomplices who aid in organized movements antagonistic to the present Mexican Government. He will attempt to strike an effective blow by confiscating the lands and other properties of the offenders and handing them over to peasants and workers. Pledges are offered that seizures will be made "with complete rectitude, in order to avoid the possibility of fraud or satisfaction of personal enmities." It is declared that there will not be a single instance in which influence, convenience or friendship will nullify strict enforcement of seizure sentences.

The manifesto is directed against those organized clericals who are charged directly by the Chief Executive with having instigated disturbances and a seditious atmosphere, which are not the result or the sequence of recent religious prosecutions by the Government. It is pointed out that in accord with the policy of the preceding Administration, resrictive measures have been gradually diminished. The suspension of church services, decreed in 1926, was upon order of church officials themselves as a protest against Mexico's laws regulating religious activities. Hence the Government refuses to regard recent disturbances as spontaneous or disinterested demonstrations.

Evidently, President Gil regards the situation as one which cannot be met by ordinary means. Even the arrest and punishment of those acting under an undue measure of zeal when thought is inflamed by passion too often fires others to the point where all proper perspective is lost. In such an extremity it may be the wise course to penalize those organizations which can be shown to have encouraged and abetted the actual offenders by confiscating their properties and thus measurably disarming them. The remedy is heroic and drastic, but apparently the condition to be met is critical in the extreme.

President Gil finds himself face to face with a national emergency which tests his courage and his statesmanship. His fearlessness in meeting the challenge and his determination to impose the penalties which he has prescribed will combine to make less precarious than now the administrative task which he has undertaken.

The Federal Council of Churches has issued a letter to the pastors of the country, urging that Sunday, March 3, which is Inauguration Sunday, be made a time for urging total abstinence and voluntary observance of Federal and State laws for the suppression of the liquor traffic. Three grounds for the appeal are stated: First, loyalty to the flag and its institutions; second, to stem the tide of lawlessness; third, because of the power of sobriety in a people. The Federal Council is of the opinion that if the churches united behind a great public program of this character, the bootlegger would be out of business. We believe that Mr. Hoover may be counted upon to issue a Presidential message to the nation that will lift this whole matter above partisan politics and personal liberty and place it upon the high plane of patriotism.

On the Firing Line at the Nation's Capital

CABINET PERSONNEL AN AMAZING MYSTERY

By Charles P. Stewart
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—If President-elect Hoover can keep his cabinet personnel as much of a mystery as he has kept it up to date, until after he actually has been inaugurated, he really is a wonder.

President Coolidge's secrecy concerning the position he would take, in the event of an attempt to draft him for a renomination, was considered remarkable. After all, however, it was not so extraordinary. Mr. Coolidge had to consult nobody else as to his own intentions. Besides, it is possible that he himself did not know just what he would do if his party named him again by an overwhelming majority.

Mr. Hoover, on the other hand, in the matter of his cabinet selections, has had to consult hundreds of folk; and by this time he must have his mind made up pretty definitely — upon most of his portfolios, at any rate.

• • •

TO have refrained from telling anyone in plain terms, "I am going to appoint So-and-So," need not necessarily have been any very surprising performance on the president-elect's part.

He may easily enough have avoided even one binding promise.

Nevertheless, shrewd politicians are marvelously good guessers. And so many of them have seen him! —and so many of them must have discussed the cabinet question with him! — concentrating, each one his every faculty, upon his vis-a-vis' slightest quiver or shade of expression!—and such ample opportunity has been allowed them, to get together and exchange impressions!—that it is perfectly amazing they have not yet framed up a tolerably reliable slate, among them.

• • •

THIS assuredly has not happened. Otherwise, the tentative list would have "leaked" long ago—probably vaguely at first, and subject, for awhile, to corrections here and there—but at the present late date, pretty accurate.

To think of such a piece of information as reaching any politician's ear, without being shouted from the housetops shortly thereafter, would be enough to over-strain the strongest imagination.

• • •

Andrew W. Mellon, Henry L. Stimson and Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur.

Secretary Mellon undoubtedly is sure enough to remain at the head of the treasury department, for a year or two, to be worth betting on—to give odds on, indeed.

Stimson and Wilbur are favorites, above several score of other supposed possibilities, only because of Stimson's resignation form the governor generalship of the Philippines, and the leave of absence obtained by Wilbur from the presidency of Stanford university.

However, even assuming that they are to become cabinet members, the theory that Stimson is to get the state and Wilbur the interior portfolio is pure surmise.

Maybe Col. W. J. Donovan would be a judicious long shot for attorney general.

• • •

ALL the rest?—the merest lottery! And going to stay so, they say, until Mr. Hoover lays his full batch of appointments before the senate, in a bunch, after he already is president.

It will be a palpitating moment when that happens.

Diet and Health

*** *** ***

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.
Medical Adviser for Central Press and The Avalanche-Journal.

AVERAGE PERSON CAN LOSE TWO POUNDS EVERY WEEK WITH REGULATION OF DIET

Potatoes

MRS. B. wants to reduce, but she does not know how to count calories. She is starving for potatoes!

You will have to learn to count calories, Mrs. B. —it is very simple—because it is only by doing so that you will know how much energy foods you are taking. It's interesting, too—makes a game at which you can always be a winner.

All textbooks on dietetics list the caloric values of foods in 100 calorie portions, so it is not at all hard to remember them. You chiefly have to remember the values of the foods you like best, anyway. The following foods, for instance, are 100 calories each:

Bread, one slice from a large loaf, one-half inch thick; one level tablespoonfull of butter; sugar, six level teaspoons or three full cubes; a big apple, or orange, or pear, a medium-sized banana; potatoes, one medium (5 ounces); watery vegetables, such as spinach and cabbage, are about one pound to the 100 C.

The average person can reduce about two pounds a week on 1,000 C. daily, and you will find that 1,200 C., correctly selected, is considerable.

You can have potatoes if you want to, Mrs. B. In fact, they are not so fattening as bread, weight for weight, for about one and one-half ounces of bread is 100 C., as compared to 5 ounces of the potatoes. Potatoes have the further advantage that they leave an alkaline reaction after assimilation, and their protein is of higher biologic value. I, too, am very fond of them and occasionally I will take a big baked potato, which averages 300 to 400 C., and eat it simply with a little salt, and 100 C. of butter or gravy, as the chief part of my meal—Gosh!

One of he freak diets for reducing is the baked potato and milk diet. It is all right for a few days. A mediumsized potato, three times a day, with three glasses of milk (milk is 160 calories per glass) averages 780 calories per day. But no freak diet is advisable for long, for you won't get all the elements you need, and furthermore, one who is inclined to overweight must have a diet that can be continued for the rest of his life, in larger proportions.

Our pamphlet on reducing and gaining gives the foundation diet which you should have every day, and it also gives a sufficient list of foods and their caloric values to tide you over until you can get a textbook on the subject.

Dark Circles Under the Eyes

K.—I don't know the mechanics of dark circles under the eyes, but they are prone to appear in any run-down conditions, after great fatigue, especially after lack of sleep, or sleep in an unventilated room, etc. The hygienic program needs investigation.

• • •

Mrs. D.—Your husband's physical condition no doubt can cause his nervousness and irritability, and he won't get over his physical disabilities until he lives more rationally—has more sleep, a better diet, etc. His gastric ulcer may recur from his bad habits; perhaps it has already.

You must be patient with him, but get him to see his physician. Call him in when you know your husband is going to be home, if he won't go himself.

Waiting At The Church

SO THINK WE

We think the fellows that just keep on guessing the same thing, over and over again, will after a while hit the spot. For some years some fellows have been predicting that there would be a long hard winter, and now it looks like they are going to hit it, although a few days of the most beautiful weather comes along now and then, and makes us think that possibly old King Winter is about to give up the fight, and balmy spring is about to slip in on us.

—o—

We think that there is nothing so powerful as truth, though it seems some time that it places a fellow almost on the hopeless list.

—o—

We think those fellows who have the gall to argue in favor of slavery, should have it tried on them, and they would in all probability change their minds. We just wish they were married to some women that we know of.

—o—

We think that possibly the reason that luncheon clubs were thought of, some one has said that "dinners lubricate business."

—o—

We think of the League of Nations expects to hold the attention of the large audience that they are supposed to have when they put on that program over the radio in the near future, will discard all of this stuff about world economics, politics they will have to put on a real jazz program.

—o—

We think that one reason Edison has remained so popular is that he can answer his questions with yes or no, while others might take five hundred or a thousand words to make a tentative promise that they will give the information at some near future date.

—o—

We think that financial drives are never very popular, but it seems that they are very necessary, and will always be put on, at regular intervals.

—o—

We think that if the Edinburgh scientist is correct that the day will come when men will live forever, maybe some of them will be able to live long enough to make the last installment on the automobile.

—o—

We think if the statement that was made in a divorce suit recently in a Kansas court, that a husband slapped his wife while she slept, men must be getting bolder every day.

—o—

We think possibly the reason that that English channel swimmer broke her engagement with a soldier because she was afraid her marriage might interfere with her career, had been observing that all married women did not get along so swimmingly.

—o—

We think Arthur Brisbane is extravagant with his figures. Recently he made the statement that the income of American wage earners is sixty billion dollars annually. These figures are staggering, and lead us to make a string of figures to see just what part of this large figure we did not get, and we find that they read something like this, $59,999,995,200.

—o—

We think that possibly when Colonel Lindbergh gets married he will be up in the air more than he ever has been.

—o—

We think that automobiles are something that nearly every American is given credit for.

—o—

We think that if the presumption was taken out of some people there would not be enough left of them to make a decent sized coat hanger out of.

• • •

We think when you do not feel like saying a good word about your neighbor, or a kind word to your friend, you possibly should not say anything.

The Way Of The World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

ABIT

"The wheel follows the foot of the man who drags the cart." Until you let go, the wheel is relentlessly in your track. So with habit. But our wont is to regard habit with fear. Boys and girls are brought up to be afraid of habit. We take a negative attitude toward it. We are constanly warning young people against the acquirement of habits. There is a constructive side to the business. Habit is meant to be the servant and not the master of man. Habit, properly trained, can be made to do much of our routine work, leaving our minds free for more interesting and adventurous things.

FOR PUBLIC SPEAKERS

Every man needs, as part of his regular furnishings, two pieces of equipment: a self-starter and a Maxim silencer. With initiative, which is the self-starter, and the ability to function powerfully without noise, which is the Maxim silencer, you are able to do heavy work in the world.

NO DOLES HERE

Let's have no beggar class in America. Let's have no dole system. England spends millions each year in handing out small amounts on all sorts of pension accounts. When the laws were passed providing doles for the aged and the unemployed and many others, it looked like splendid generosity on the part of the government. But human nature doesn't grow and getter by such methods. It was found that many of the unemployed no longer sought work and no longer wanted it, because they were content to live in squalor on the dole of the government. In America let us have good institutions for the sick, the maimed, the defective, but let us not encourage men or women to let thmselves be carried when they can walk.

Your Income Tax

YOUR INCOME TAX
No. 18

Increase in the value of property accruing before March 1, 1913, is not taxable, even though it was realized after that date. The reason is that the constitutional amendment authorizing Congress to tax incomes of individuals became effecitve as of March 1, 1913. The revenue act of 1928 contains provisions for determining the gain or loss on the sale or other disposition of property acquired by purchase before March 1, 1913. The basis provided is the cost of such property or the fair market value as of March 1, 1913, whichever is greater. For example, a taxpayer bought in 1910 property for which he paid $10,000. The value on March 1, 1913, was $12,000. He sold it in 1928 for $14,000. The March 1, 1913, value being greater than the cost of the property, the taxable gain is figured on that basis and amounts to $2,000.

A taxpayer bought in 1910 property for which he paid $5,000. Its value on March 1, 1913, was $5,500, and in 1928 he sold it for $4,000. In this example the taxpayer bases his loss on the March 1, 1913, value, which was greater than the cost, and the deductible loss is $1,500.

Today's Poem

CHLORIS IN THE SNOW

I saw fair Chloris walk alone,
When feathered rain came swiftly down,
As Jove descending from his Tower
To court her in a silver shower;
The wanton snow flew to her breast,
Like pretty birds into their nest.
But, overcome with whiteness there,
For grief it thawed into a tear;
Thence falling on her garment's hem,
To deck her, froze into a gem.
—Unkown.

Souvenir Trade Awaits Assault By Tourists At Hoover Inaugural; No Visitor Likely To Escape Purchase

Take Your Pocketbook Witr You As You Go To Nation Headquarters, Advice Of Rodney Dutcher

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23. — Of course there's no sense in coming to Washington if you can't prove it afterward. That's why the mantlepieces, sofas and parlor tables of the nation are covered with collections of miscellaneous junk which would long ago have been thrown out were it not for the magic inscription, "Washington, D. C."

Years ago your correspondent used to marvel at the souvenirs brought home by graduating high school classes from Washington, most of all at the little Uncle Sam hats, Washington monuments and other obects constructed of actual paper money mashed into mush after it had outworn its usefulness. The Bureau of Engraving and Printing, by the way, still sells this pulp at $15 a ton.

Twenty or more shops on Pennsylvania avenue are bulging with an infinite variety of Washington souvenirs today, in anticipation of 150,000 or 200,000 visitors expected here for the Hoover inauguration. These are the shops whence come those strange things proudly displayed by the returned tourist.

• • •

A great number of the Washington souvenirs are made abroad—in Japan, Germany, Italy and Austria. Despite tariff walls, foreign novelty manufacturers can sell them cheaper, apparently, than ours. Those tin brass trays, used to receive ashes, calling cards, pins or collar button—or even use as ornaments—all profusely decorated with scenes of the Capitol and other Washington sights, are made in Japan. These trays are always among the best sellers on the avenue, as are the tiny Washington monuments of marble, with thermometer attached and selling at 25, 50 and 75 cents, according to size, which are made in Austria.

Don't forget your pocketbook, for you can buy almost anything bearing "Washington, D. C." or a representation of the Capitol, and sometimes both. The souvenir shops are waiting eagerly.

Lawrence Miller, one of the shop owners, says that he has just received a thousand vari-colored compacts for the ladies, on which the Capitol is almost life-size. These are very popular all along the avenue, but your correspondent does not guarantee the quality of the rouge. To the boys, Mr. Miller and other shopkeepers hope to dispose of many handsome souvenir knives, with miniature phtos of Hoover and Curtis on one side and of the capitol on the other.

Photos always sell well, of course. There's a nice colored postcard of the entire Hoover family, plain photos of Hoover and Curtis, handsomely painted framed photos of cherry blossoms and other Washington scenery and a colored calendar with pictures of the Statue of Liberty, Hoover, Curtis, the Spirit of St. Louis, Lindbergh, Washington, Jefferson, the dirigible Los Angeles, Lincoln, Wilson, Babe Ruth, the Capitol, Roosevelt, Jack Dempsey, Commander Rosentahl and the New York skyline.

There are poems of rare sentiment, indelibly burned into leather and addressed to mother, sister, father, uncle or what have you, and pillow covers of burnt leather with the Capitol and the absolutely essential "Washington, D. C." Also burnt leather whisk-broom holders, tie racks, cigaret cases and what not. Pillow covers also come in fringed felt, inscribed "Dear Mother, Washington, D. C." and on painted surfaces which manage to get in Capitol, White House, Monumental Mount Vernon, Lincoln Memorial and a few more shrines.

Probably there will also be a demand for a combination pipe, cigar holder and cigaret holder displayed by most of the shops. When you look through a tiny hole in one end of this contraption you see a partly dressed young woman. As a bargain this compares favorably with the one cent pieces which are put in tin frames and sold at a dime apiece. Or, the deck of playing cards, each of which depicts a Washington scene.

• • •

The country probably soon will be flooded with the "Key to Washington," a magnificient brass object 10 inches long, carrying a thermometer and decorated with the likeness of Hoover and the White House. Only a dollar!

If none of these appeals to the inauguration visitor possibly he will like (all of these bear the name of the city and generally show the Capitol) the salt and pepper shakers, vases, nail files, rings, bar pins, miniature Capitols designed for jewel boxes, ink wells, dime banks and clocks, watch knives, envelope knives, whistles, rosary beads, pin cushions, wallets, china ware, manicure sets, pipes, crumb trays, handkerchief cases, purses, kippy kits to brush the clothes and shine the shoes, pencil cases, banners, manicure sets, perfume squirters, magnetic scissors (they find the needle) canlesticks, napkin rings, match boxes or statuettes.

"This will be the biggest crowd ever in Washington," says Mr. Miller.

"Don't ask me why they buy this stuff. When I came here first time I bought $15 worth first day. I wasn't the only sucker."

TWICE TOLD TALES

Friday's Sessions Of Oklahoma Impeachment Drab

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 23. (AP)—Twice told tales characterized today's session of the impeachment trial of Governor Henry S. Johnston, with witnesses passing before the senate court to repeat testimony they had given to the house investigating committee.

Nearly all testimony dealt with activities of the governor's subordinates, in an apparent effort to build up the house prosecutors' contention that Johnston is incompetent.

Carbon Eliminated In New Chryslers

Announcement by Chrysler of a "Decarbonizer" a device employing a new fluid, "Carbosolve," to free the accumulation of excessive carbon deposits, causing carbon 'ping," in engines and to assure the continued satisfaction of "clean engine" performance, is being hailed as a real boon by motorists throughout the country.

"Thanks to the careful scientific design of Chrysler engines," said Carl Breer, Chrysler Executive Engineer, in connection with the announcement, "particularly with respect to the manifolding, shap of combustion chambers, location of valves, piston ring structure, and other factors which contribute to the most efficient transformation of gasoline into power, Chrysler owners have always experienced a remarkable degree of freedom from carbon formation and its attendant annoyances.

"The fact remains that no matter how well an automobile engine is built, it is still subject to losses in performance capacity that may arise from carbon formation due to impurities in the fuel used, and other foreign matter that finds its way into the engine in spite of protective devices."

Poiret Buys New Oldsmobile Six

The beauty of an American designed and manufactured automobile has received the official seal of approval from one of the leading style experts of the world. M. Paul Poiret, famous Parisian designer and stylist, during a recent visit to this country viewed ,admired and purchased an Oldsmobile de luxe landau for his personal use.

Arrangements were made for the Oldsmobile de luxe landau to be delivered by the General Motors export company to M. Poiret when he arrived in France on the S. S. Paris, which sailed from New York last week.

The entire transaction was started and consummated within the first few minutes following the opening of the General Motors special exhibit held concurrently with the Chicago Automobile Show. M. Poiret had just arrived in Chicago while on a lecture tour of the United States when he chanced into the General Motors display. An Oldsmobile de luxe landau in the lobby at once attracted his attention. Admiration turned to desire of ownership and soon he signed an order for the car, the first order taken at the special exhibit.

New Commission Knows Problems Of The Amateurs

Two Men Familiar With The Problems Of The Home Set User Are Placed On Federal Control Body

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23. — Two men familiar with the problem of the amateurs and of commercial broadcasting stations have been named to the federal radio commission.

Prof. C. M. Jansky Jr., of Minnesota and Arthur Batcheller of Massachusetts have had theoretical and practiacl experience in the short wave band where the amateurs operate and both have taught radio principles and practice for years. Professor Jansky is a director of the American Radio Relay league, while Batcheller, as federal radio supervisor in New York and New England, has been in close touch with the "hams" for years.

The two new engineer members of the commission take up their duties at a time when the development of television, synchronization, frequency accuracy and other technical problems are becoming more and more important in the regulation of broadcasting. Radio administration, says Dr. J. H. Dellinger, chief engineer for the commission, must be founded on intimate knowledge of the engineering facts inherent in the problems that arise.

If it were not for the limitations imposed by the nature of radio waves, radio legislation would be easy or even perhaps unnecessary, he says.

Wave length allocation and regulation of station operation, two of the principal responsibilities of the commission entail engineering knowledge, owing to the limited number of channels and the width of channels necessary to prevent destructive interference.

Jansky, as director of operation of the University of Minnesota station, had opportunity to obtain first hand information of the technical difficulties that beset the average broadcaster. Batcheller, as a federal radio inspector, has been in contact daily with the varied problems of radio stations of all types.

OLD STUFF TO KFI

The recent international broadcast from the British Isles recalls a similar incident tin 1924, when KFI, Los Angeles, relayed a program through KGO Oakland, and WGY, Schenectedy. The program went across the ocean from a short wave station, was picked up by 2LO, London, and sent out over the British broadcasting chain.

Speaker For Busy Phones

Business men with both hands busy at the desk will thank H. O. Rugh of Chicago for this invention. He has designed a loud speaker for the telephone. When the bell rings, a press of the toe on a foot button lifts the receiver and permits the voice of the caller to come through the loud speaker. The voice is amplified by the radio apparatus to the left.

ON THE AIR

When not sending out harmonious chords over the air, members of the National Male Four at KSTP, St Paul, occupy themselves thusly: Earl Stockdale, first tenor, issues marriage licenses at the county court house; Norman Barlindhaugh, second tenor, sells cemetery lots; Joe Williams, baritone, operates a box lunch establishment, and Nels Swenson, bass, is deputy clerk in the district court.

* * *

Agatha Turley, Irish soprano soloist of the ABC network, is right from the "auld sod." Her vocal instructions was received at the school of Vincent O'Brien at Dublin, tutor of John McCormack. She is the holder of the cup and medal given at the Irish Feis to the outstanding voice of the country. She has been a member of the Royal Carl Rose Opera Company of London and previous to that she was the principal soprano for Ireland's largest broadcasting station.

* * *

Studebaker hour, NBC system, Sundays at 10:15 eastern time.

Wickwrie hour, NBC system, Wednesdays at 10:30 eastern time.

Edison hour, NBC system, Mondays at 8:30 eastern time.

Morning devotions, KOIL, Council Bluffs, at 7 central time.

* * *

Bert Butterworth and his "Royal Order of Optimistic Do-Nuts" have been on the air every Friday night for five years at KNX, Hollywood. Eddie Albright and his Town Crier's Ten o'Clock Family have appeared over the same station every morning for the past four years.

John Rhys Thomas, lyric tenor, is back in New York, and heard from WOR. Besides being a famous tenor, Thomas held the heavyweight boxing championship of the navy during the war and was a former friend and sparring partner of Jack Dempsey.

Elizabeth A. Fellows, reported to have operated New York's first cafeteria, conducts WABC's Menu club on Saturday mornings.

* * *

"Nicknames" are more or less appropriate. Theodore Baer, member of the NBC orchestra on the Pacific coast, carries "Teddy Bear" around as his moniker.

* * *

WOR, the Newark, N. J., station, tells us that Emil Velazco, the organist who compiles and executes the "Witching Hour," has his pet peculiarity. It's chocolate peanut bars. It is said that the competion of every one of his organ productions sees the destruction of several of these bars.

Fifteen Nations Request Alaskan Radio Channels

Service So Often Vital In Rescues Within The Far North May Be Placed On Commercial Basis

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23. (AP)—The advisability of extending wireless service between the United States and Alaska, where radio has often played a dramatic role in the rescue of the injured and stormbound, will be considered in the near future by the federal radio commission.

More than a dozen applications for point to point communication channels between this country and Alaska are on file, and it is planned to hold a general hearing soon for applicants and representatives of the army and navy which maintain radio networks in that territory. These nets are message feeders for the government owned cable from Seward to Seattle and serve hundreds of canneries.

It has been the policy of the commission not to grant facilities for wireless service in competition with the government cable. The war department recently notified the commission that the Washington-Alaska Military Cable and Telegraph system provides facilities "capable of handling all traffic effectively." It was recommended that no licenses be granted to commercial concerns to operate radio channels between Alaska and the United States "unless and until an arrangement can be made to take over the existing system from the government under conditions that will guarantee a service satisfactory to the government and to the people of Alaska."

Some of the commercial company applicants contend, however, that the government cable is an unsatisfactory means of communication and that occasionally messages are delayed for several days. They maintain that the canneries which operate only in certain seasons are not adequately served by the cable.

Musical Ghost Hides Inside

BELLMORE, L. I., Feb. 23.—The mystery is solved. Bellmore once more rests at ease. The ghost that for months past harrassed this village has been driven back to the seclusion of his grave.

But while the old boy was on his nightly rampages, he caused no little consternation in the neighborhood, and was the reason why Mrs. Lou Greenmayer's nice house was without a tenant.

This was a musical ghost. Every night he would stage solos, operas, symphonies, talks and other acts until Mrs. Greenmayer, good lady that she was, decided to stop such scandalous goings on.

She tried staying at the house to locate the ghost. The first day there she was serenaded with Beethoven, and received valuable hints on cookery and diets for babies from the phantom visitor.

In desperation, she called in two radio experts from the NBC transmitting plant nearby, Charles Ellsworth, radio operator, and J. J. Belounqy, chief engineer. Months of investigation by these two experts failed to locate anything valuable other than that the ghost started his phantom galloping when station WEAF came on the air and stopped when the station did.

News of the "haunt" meanwhile had circulated all over town and finally reached the ears of Clifford Himoe, former radio operator with the Rawson-MacMillan Arctic expedition, and now attached to the NBC plant at Bellmore. With two "Watsons," Arthur Gaimmateo and George H. Ellis, Himoe decided to play Sherlock.

Not without qualms and quakings, they moved into Mrs. Greenmayer's house for a short stay. But even the presence of radio engineer's didn't stop the phantom from performing, and he did so with such loud noises that the three were unable to sleep.

Next morning they began a tour of examination. Every possible nook and cranny was investigated. The only clew found was that the loudest noise came from beneath the dining room floor.

It fell to Himoe's lot to search the cellar. And there he found the ghost!

He concluded that an old water system, the pumps and pipes of which were encrusted with a green corrosion, formed the heart of a natural radio set. An electrical conduit which carried the lighting wires for the house hung loosely and touched one of the corroded pipes. On lifting the conduit, the "ghost music" stopped.

Himoe explains that the conduit acted as the antenna, the water pipes as the ground wire and the corrosion on the pipe as a crystal rectifier. The water served as a condenser and the dining room floor, actuated by the vibrations in the pipe, as the loud speaker.

Rebroadcast Of London Programs Is Newest Scheme

Vast Possibilities Are Seen Through Medium Of Internatonal Hook-up Now Being Attempted

BY ISRAEL KLEIN
Science Editor, NEA Service

The mysteries and wonders of radio grow even greater with the progress of this science.

The latest concern the broadcasting of programs from London over the United States. Some of us might have become too blase, from the daily experience of listening to extensive network programs, to consider the significance of the recent London broadcast. But a little thought over the matter and a review of the steps taken to make this relay possible might wake us up to the proper realization of its meaning.

Years ago, before chain broadcasting came into being the one item that was popularly believed to prevent the consummation of this idea was time. The three hours difference between the Atlantic and the Pacific coasts occasioned some thought among radio enthusiasts.

A dinner program originating in New York would strike the coast at 3 in the afternoon. More serious than this, the actual time for broadcasting a program so that it would greet the ears of most radio fans the same evening was narrowed down to not more than two hours—those between 9 and 11 eastern time or 6 to 8 Pacific time. Before 9, eastern time, broadcasting is ineffectual in the west, and after 11 it is not so good in the east.

Room for Few Sponsors

This limited time could not accommodate all radio advertisers seeking to broaden their fan audience to include the entire country. So some of them have had to be satisfied with duplication of their eastern "hours" on the coast. The Eveready Hour appearing on the NBC network over the east and middle west at 9 o'clock eastern time on Tuesdays, for instance, strikes the coast on the same relay at 6:30 Pacific time. But the Voice of Firestone, broadcast in the east on Tuesdays at 8 eastern time, not so good an hour for coast fans, has to be repeated there at 9 Pacific time.

Before the Pacific network was linked permanently with the two eastern chains of the NBC system, the Eveready Hour and others as well had to repeat their programs similarly. In fact, they had to build quite different programs because of the difference in talent available.

This difference in time now appears to be one of the major difficulties in the relay of London programs to the United States or of New York programs to England. Here the difference is five hours from one side of the Atlantic to the other, and eight hours if we consider the Pacific coast. Thus the London program with which the NBC surprised American fans the other day originated in England at 9:45 in the evening, Greenwich or London time.

This meant that it was received here at 4:45 in the afternoon, an hour when most of us were thinking of leaving for home rather than listening in. The Pacific coast was out of this picture altogether, for the program would have reached there at 1:45, when even housewives are too busy with their marketing or their bridge to listen in.

If a similar stunt were tried from this side of the ocean, the same situation would be reversed. Either the American audience would have to be limited in order to reach the major part of the British audience, or vice versa. Time simply can't be beat.

Humorous possibilities of such international broadcasting arise from this difference in time. Imagine a Londoner listening to some one in San Francisco eight hours before he actually goes on the air! And imagine, if you please, a Tokio program being received in America the day before it is actually broadcast! That's due to the difference set up by the international date line running down the Pacific.

With television in practice we'd even see things before they happened, due to our time differences. It is an involved situation out of which rises the difficulty of scheduling program for England and America which would at the same time reach the majority of listeners in both countries. This is hardly possible, except perhaps on Sundays and holidays when we're at home.

Engineering Not So Bad

Although engineers have been working for some time over the technical details of relaying a program overseas, none of their problems equals that of the time difficulty involved in this stunt—looking at the matter from the popular point of view. Fading, static, antenna difficulties, power, wavelength and other such questions still troubling the engineers will all be solved eventually. But the difference in time will remain, and that is what will interest the radio sponsor and his audience.

The one will rack his brains, if international broadcasting ever becomes commercialized as are the network systems in this country, to find a way of reaching the greatest audience here and abroad within the more limited time he has at his disposal. The other may have to change his working and sleeping hours, if he would care to enjoy the programs from Europe as well as those in this country.

Colorful events like the pageants and ceremonies held on Lord Mayor's Day or the opening of Parliament, are good subjects for broadcasting. But they occur mostly by day and, if relayed to America, would necessitate our staying home from work in order to listen to their description. Some of us might be in a position to do that without fear of losing our jobs, but most of us couldn't.

So the time difficulty remains a serious drawback to intercontinental broadcasting.

Feathered Songster Radio Star

GREENSBORO, N. C., Feb. 23 (AP)—Pete, who used to be just a canary bird, is now a star radio performer.

The singing of the little feathered songster has become a regular feature of programs of Station WNRC, Greensboro. He has among his radio listeners a hundred or more canaries fo whom he serves as an invisible choir leader.

When Wayne Nelson, director of Station WNRC started broadcasting Pete's voice, he received many calls telling how the notes of the bird excited other canaries that hapened to be near the receivers.

Mysterious Call Letters Mystify Listeners In Vermont; Students Had Rigged Homemade Set

(By Associated Press)

NORTHFIELD, Vt. Feb 23.—A glow of pleased surprise that changed to bewilderment was the reaction of residents of Northfield recently when they brought in an unknown local station on their radio sets.

"This is radio station NU at Northfield, Vt." came the announcement.

Then followed "news broadcasts" purporting to describe gory fistic clashes between distinguished professors in Norwich university. The program was rounded out with comedy sketches, music of a sort, and phonograph records.

Word finally leaked out that two students had acquired a microphone and, with some simple radio equipment had taken to the air with alleged bouts between faculty members and other material.

Would Fine Static Makers

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 23 (AP).Rep. L. C. Golterman would clear Missouri's air for the state's radio listeners.

Violation of Golterman's proposal would be a misdemeanor. It provides fines from $25 to $500 for convictions.

DIFFICULT IN CHINA

Despite handicaps, radio is progressing rapidly in China. According to H. C. Connette, NBC continuity writer, who has lived in the orient, the music, plays and announcements have to suit three races—Chinese, English and French. There are 20 minutes of announcing to four minutes of program.

Declared exports of merchandise from Shanghai to the United States during 1928 aggregated $14,132,430, compared with $14,736.965 in 1927.

SPUR PLANT READY

Set Poles For New Electric Service There

SPUR, Feb. 23—The city of Spur is rapidly getting the poles set for the municipal light plant, and is now unloading three engines that will be used in the plant. With the city producing its own power for pumping, and the new wells completed, much attention will be given to the beautifying of the lawns, and the town will be made more attractive to its citizenship, as well as the tourist.

THE BLACK PIGEON

by ANNE AUSTIN

CHAPTER I

A black pigeon, its iridescent breast gleaming in the sunshine of the January morning, circled warily above the open window, then fluttered to the white stone ledge. The tiny head jerked back and forth, a brilliant black diamond of an eye cocked suspiciously, as the little feet pattered just out of reach of the white hand extended invitingly, palm upward.

"Satan, you old humbug!" the girl laughed softly. "Don't Ritz me! I'm sure I don't look so different this morning that you don't know me! Is it because I have no crumbs to give you greedy?"

The black pigeon stood still on his little red sealing-wax feet and studied the girl, his graceful head cocked consideringly. Then, as if reassured, the gleaming black wings spread to the cold sunshine, and a second later those tiny red claws were tightly gripping Ruth Lester's forefinger.

As if they had been waiting for a signal from their leader, the black pigeon which Ruth had named Satan, a flock of pigeons whose home was the roof of the seven-story Starbridge building, came swooping down upon the broad ledge of the window outside the private office of "Handsome Harry" Borden, to pay court to the suddenly revealed beauty of Borden's private secretary.

Ruth, with an exultant laugh, spread her arms wide, leaning far out of the window. In a moment she was a living pigeon perch. On her little white hands, along her arms, on her small arms, on her small shoulders, even on her small shoulders, even on her golden head. Brown pigeons, splotched white; blue-gray pigeons, with enchanting breasts of bronze and gold and purple; black-and white pigeons; white pigeons—no, only one pigeon that was pure white and only one—Satan—that was inky black.

An exclamation made the girl raise her eyes, but did not startle her for she had been expecting it. Directly across the narrow airshaft that separated two wings of the Starbridge Building, a broad window exactly like the one from which Ruth leaned, framed a young man's head and torso. The January sun, which was really quite cold, seemed to the girl to gather all its shivery rays and concentrate them, for borrowed warmth, upon the coppery-brown head of Jack Hayward.

Ruth leaned further out of the window, impetuously, her arms reaching toward the man who looked like a sun-god to her, the man to whom she had just become engaged. Jealously, the pigeons took wing and fluttered indignantly away—all but the black pigeon, which clung stubbornly to her finger, his black eye flashing from the girl to the man.

* * *

"Oh, beautiful!" Jack called softly. "Little snow princess with the sun in her golden hair! You're too beautiful! Go put on your big yellow spectacles and slick back your hair. I'm jealous even of Satan, and he's jealous of me! Look! I believe he'd like to peck my eyes out!"

Ruth laughed, then very gently, so as not to frighten "Satan" away, she reached into the pocket of her sweater. In a moment she was holding the struggling pigeon against her breast, as her quick, deft little fingers wrapped a slip of paper with a typed message—"I love you"—about one of the tiny red legs, securing it with a bit of the black silk thread which she kept in the office for darning runs in the sober stockings she had always worn to work until today—today!

"If you have any bread crumbs, Mr. Hayward," she laughed, "you may be able to learn something to your advantage." And she let the black pigeon flutter away.

Then, because she heard the door of the outer office, where she was supposed to be opening the morning mail, she drew in her head, bringing a glittering, imprisoned mass of hair into the soberly but richly furnished room where "Handsome Harry" Borden conducted a business which had need of every artificial aid to make it appear respectable.

For Henry . Borden was one of those financial vultures that prey upon the cupidity of men and the credulity of women who have hard-earned savings or pathetic little legacies to invest. His favorite boast to the sleek-haired, collegiate-looking young stock salesman who worked for him was that he was "always within the law," but Ruth, in growing disgust, had come to hope that the law would not always be so obligingly elastic.

But now—now! — there was no need to worry about Harry Borden's crookedness or about his offensive private life, or about anything in the world. For since exactly 12 o'clock last night she had been engaged to be married to John Carrington Hayward, who was listed on the building board of the Starbridge Building as "Insurance Broker." Broker! The dear, delightful boyishness of that title, Ruth thought tenderly. Broker!—when Jack hardly made enough selling life insurance to pay the rent on his suite of two small offices! But she loved the courage with which he stubbornly kept them, the boyish cocksureness of future success which made him plunge now on "front."

* * *

Ruth smiled, a dimple which she did not have to repress any longer tugging at the corner of her adorable little mouth. Then she stepped through the door that divided Borden's private office from the big outer office which served as a reception room and as an office for Borden's secretary and messenger boy.

Benny Smith, 17, and just beginning to be very girl-conscious, was sprawled in Ruth's little narrow-backed swivel chair, pawing the pile of mail on her desk. His sandy hair was still wet from its morning brush, his big ears very red from the scrubbing to which they were not yet accustomed. He had told her recently, in a burst of confidence, that he was using freckle cream on his speckled cheeks and neck. The dear! He'd be asking some girl to marry him soon, just as Jack Hayward had asked her last night . . .

"Nothing from your girl this morning, Benny," Ruth called out, in the meek, repressed little voice which had been so necessary a part of the disguise she had temporarily discarded.

"Girl? Who said I had a girl?" Benny sputtered, whirling about in the little swivel chair. Then he saw Ruth and his prominent eyes glared until Ruth, coloring and laughing, was afraid they would pop from his head.

"Gee gosh!" he exploded at last. "All right! I bite! Who are you?"

"Don't be silly, Benny! It's just Ruth Lester, of course—"

"Jul-yus Caesar!" Benny breathed. "It's just Ruth Lester, of course," he mimicked her precise, repressed little voice. "Gosh! What have you went and done to yourself, Ruth? Be yourself! I ain't feelin' so strong this mornin'—"

Ruth laughed. "That's what I'm doing at last, Benny! I'm being myself! Do you like Ruth Lester herself?"

Benny rose slowly from Ruth's chair, then lifted a crooked elbow as if to ward her off. "Gosh, woman! Turn them lamps off me! You'll blind me! Where's your specs? And say, what have you done to your hair?"

Ruth's little white hands, which she had never been able to disguise, fluttered to her golden curls, fluffed them. "Nothing—but turn it loose!" she laughed. "It's really too long to be worn as a bob—"

"But gosh! You didn't have to slick it back till your head looked like a yellow onion, and screw it into a little knob on your neck," the office boy protested, curiously angry with her. "I used to think your hair'd pull your eyebrows out by the roots. Say! Maybe that was what give you that scared rabbit look—your hair skinned back like that, pulling at your eyebrows, and them big yellow-glass specs of yours, covering half of your face. Gee!" he marveled again. "But, listen! What did you do to your face? It looks different, too, not pale and sickly—"

* * *

Ruth opened the top drawer of her desk and took out a box of powder, which she showed him triumphantly. See! Rachel-tinted powder, very heavy. See how yellowish it is? Plenty of that slapped on and my milk-maid complexion was successfully hidden. But—I've got to get to work, Benny! Be a good infant and get me some water for my sponge, and sharpen a bunch of pencils, won't you?"

"Listen, Greta Nissen!" Benny sputtered. "You ain't going to shut up and not slip me the low-down on why you dont it, are you?"

"Greta Nissen?" Ruth raised her eyebrows and gave him the full, enchanting beauty of her limpid blue eyes.

"My error!" Benny backed away, again with that crooked-elbow gesture of warding her off. "Greta Nissen or no other movie star can't hold a candle to you.

"I heard that red-headed riot across the hall say that Ruth Lester wouldn't be a bad-looking girl is someone'd slip her a little info, about how to dress and make up that sickly little face of hers. Boy howdy, but I hope I'm on deck when she lamps the wow you turned out to be! Gee!"

"Scatter, Benny!" Ruth commanded, her cheeks very pink, her blue eyes brimming with tender mirth. "Remember, this is Saturday. I've something else to do than listen to you sputter 'Gee!' and 'Gosh!' down my neck. No, I'm not going to tell you why I did it! Take these pencils and put a long point on each of them, please."

Her competent hands began to open the big stack of mail. Only one letter marked "Personal" this morning—another of those big square, orchid-tinted envelopes with the distinctive, angular handwriting in violet ink. The handwriting of a woman of culture and strong character, Ruth had decided long since. The pencil sharpener had been grinding furiously, but now the sound dragged, stopped altogether. "Say, Ruth! I guess I ain't so dumb! I know why you made up to look like a slavey in specs and long dresses."

"Clever boy!" Ruth laughed.

"You done it so's you could keep your job!" Benny deduced triumphantly. "You knew that the minute "Handsome Harry" lamped you he'd fall for you like a ton of bricks. Bet that's the reason, too, that you've worked so many places since you got out of business college—ain't it?"

* * *

"Benny, you've been meddling in my desk again!"

"Aw, I ain't either! I just happened to see a bunch of letters of recommendation clipped together and I glanced over 'em," Benny protested. "Say, they had me goin' sure! I couldn't figger out why a whizz of a steno like you should work two or three weeks in a job and then blow, and why the guys you worked for give you such swell recommendations if they didn't want to keep you."

"Shut up, Benny, and get to work!" Ruth scolded.

"Yes, sir, 'at's the ticket, sure's you're born!' Benny applauded his own powers of deduction. "Gosh! I can just imagine! Married man hires you—and who wouldn't? I'm asking you! Wifey blows in, lamps new secretary. Wham! 'Either she goes or I go!' wifey lays the law down. 'Nen—'I'm awful sorry, Miss Lester, but—er — necessary to retrench, do without a secretary for a while. Of course, best of recommendations—' All 'at stuff! Am I right, fair frail?" Benny concluded, with an impudence he had never been interested enough to show her before.

Ruth's golden head nodded slowly. Yes, Benny was right. No boy of 17 could know how terribly accurate his slangy version of her past as a business girl was.

"Do shut up, Benny! If you don't let me do my work I'll spank you."

"Huh!" Benny snorted. I'd make two of you. Bet you don't weigh more'n 90 pounds. Gosh! You even look littler in that cute little short skirt. Them sad rags you wore made you look two inches taller, and just plain skinny. And you ain't skinny at all, you're just—just right!' But I ain't surprised that you've held this job for four months. Men don't go round falling in love with girls that look like washouts in spectacles."

"One man did, Benny!"

The pencil sharpener, which had begun to grind again, stopped with a jerk. "Hey! Spell that out, will you? You ain't gone and got engaged, have you? Or—is it 'Handsome Harry' Borden?" And the boy's freckled face turned a sudden dull crimson. "Guess I mighta knowed that 'Handsome Harry' wasn't missing nothin'—Gosh!" The last word was a wail of adolescent misery.

"Don't be absurd, Benny!" Ruth cried, in what she thought was a sharp voice. Then she rose, drawn to her feet by the boyish agony in Benny's face, and went to him. She tilted his quivering chin with a forefinger and smiled shyly into his eyes. "It isn't Mr. Borden, Benny. It's—can you keep a secret, Benny? I'm engaged to Mr. Hayward. It just happened last night and oh, Benny, I'm so happy I don't think I can bear it!"

The boy did a surprising thing then. He seized the finger which had tilted up his chin and pressed it hard against his lips, while a blush ran in crimson waves from his throat to his brow.

"Won't you say you're glad, Benny?" Ruth coaxed tenderly.

"Oh, sure!" the boy mumbled. "Sure I'm glad! Why not? He's a great guy—best-looking man in the Starbridge building, Gee! What a swell pair you two will make!" He gulped back his tears manfully. "But say, Ruth, you'd better douse the glim before 'Handsome Harry' surges in. I'm tellin' you—"

"Talk English for a change, Benny!" Ruth laughed. "'Douse the glim'—?"

"Put on them yellow specs of yours and slick back your hair like you been wearin' it," the boy urged, with a curious sort of desperation. "Honest, Ruth—"

"Mr. Borden's affections are so thoroughly engaged at present that I don't think we need worry," Ruth laughed. 'But to please you, Benny, I'll revert to the 'Lillian Gish-in-spectacles' role."

* * *

She was reaching into the top drawer of her desk for the big, yellow-lensed, horn-rimmed spectacles which made her blue eyes look a sickly, pale green, when the telephone rang.

"Main 3500," she announced. Then, after a pause during which she raised her eyebrows significantly as she glanced over her shoulder toward Benny, "No, Mr. Borden is not in—I don't know. I'm sorry — What name shall I say? Oh, thank you!"

She hung up the receiver and shrugged. "The woman with the lovely contralto voice. I wonder who she is. I put Mr. Borden on the line once when she called, and he told me to remember her voice and never do it again. Some old flame I suppose."

She pushed back the telephone and was reaching for the disguising spectacles, when the outer door opened and Henry P. Borden stepped into the room.

Ruth whirled toward her desk in her swivel chair, so that not just yet should he see the transformation with which she had chosen to celebrate her engagement. She had not meant him to see, had intended to have the golden curls pulled into a tight knot, exposing her ears and elevating her golden-brown eyebrows, had intended to peer up at him as usual through the disfiguring yellow lenses.

"Morning, Miss Lester. Anything important?"

Borden was striding toward the door that led into his private office, not vouchsafing a look at that pallid little secretary whose only appeal to him was that she was an incomparable secretary.

Henry P. Borden, known along the city's White Way as "Handsome Harry" Borden, deserved both the adjective and the slight sneer with which it was accompanied. For handsome he undoubtedly was, in a bold, striking, black-and-white way. If he had chosen the movies instead of dubious finance as a career he would inevitably have been cast as the "heavy," but invariably as a drawing-roow, silk-hat type of villain.

He was tall and large, but not at all fat. Sleek, thick black hair, into which 40 years of self-indulgence and at least 20 years of fast living had not introduced a single strand of white. Bold, wide black eyes, which had a trick of staring at a woman until her heart fluttered and her cheeks went either pale or crimson. A stubby black mustache, which Borden was too wise to wear small. Extraordinarily white skin, for a man, despite the thick growth of beard which he shaved close twice a day. Rather thick but well-shaped red lips, always slightly moist, as if he had just run an anticipating tongue over them.

* * *

"Nothing very important Mr. Borden," Ruth answered, without turning her head. Oh, if he would only go on into his office and close the door!

"Only one," she answered, in her meek, timid little voice. "The woman with the beautiful contralto voice. I asked her if she would leave her name, but she said no." She rose, gathered up the mail, the orchid-tinted letter topping the stack, and faced her employer.

"That voice may sound beautiful to you, but believe me, I'd rather listen to a riveting machine—Hullo! what have you done to yourself?"

As Benny Smith had done, Harry Borden took her in, from the top of her curl-crowned head to the toes of her enchanting little pumps.

Ruth pursed her mouth, and looked as much as possible like the mouse-like little creature he had become accustomed to and had ignored. "It—it's the clothes, Mr. Borden. I—I saved some of my salary, and— But please, Mr. Borden, there's a letter from Hendrickson in Chicago. He's sold 10,000 shares of that Nu-gas stock, in spite of what the chemist reported—"

The potential lover vanished and the shady financier took his place. "Hendrickson's a fool, but a good stock salesman. Wire him to—"

They passed on into Borden's private office, and as her employer gave her instructions regarding Hendrickson, Ruth laid the stack of opened letters, topped with the orchid-tinted "Personal" envelope, upon the immaculate green blotter of the flat-topped brown walnut desk. Before she reached her chair on the opposite side of the desk Borden flipped the orchid letter aside, with a muttered oath, then stuck it, unopened, in the breast pocket of his vest.

"I wonder if he ever answers one of them, and why she keeps on writing him if he doesn't," Ruth reflected, then looked up from her notebook to find her employer's eyes regarding her quizzically, calculatingly.

"Little Miss Cinderella in person!" he checkled. "Funny what a permanent wave and a box of rouge will do for a girl."

"Yes, Mr. Borden," Ruth answered in her meek, timid vocie—the one last scrap of disguise, except for the yellowish spectacles, which was left to her. What luck that he thought her curls had come out of a machine, her complexion out of a box! "There's an urgent letter from Nathan in Los Angeles. He's demanding a large commission on Bakersfield Oil, since the new field is failing. What shall I write him?"

* * *

Borden consented to be lured into dictation.

"Write me out a check for 500 cash," the promoter said at last, flinging his personal check book across the desk to her. "And go to the bank yourself, won't you? Then stop at the station and get me a drawing-room and two round trip tickets for Winter Haven — train leaving at 2:15 this afternoon. Wire the Hotel Winter Haven for a suite — best in the house. Reserve the rooms in the name of Mr. and Mrs. H. P.—let's see — what other surname begins with a B?"

"Benton?" Ruth suggested, in a small, innocent voice.

"All right. But make a note of it on the ticket envelope for me, please. Guess who Mrs. Benton will be, Cinderalla?"

"I—I think I'd better not know, don't you, Mr. Borden?" Ruth answered in her timid, ghostlike little voice. "Here's the check. Will you sign it please, and I'll go to the bank right away, before it's jammed."

"Little prunes-and-prisms!" Borden chuckled, grasping the small hand which extended the check. "You know—I believe you've been stringing me! I don't think you're half the timid little rabbit you've been pretending to be."

He drew hard on her hand, so that Ruth's small body was strained against the desk. "Come on! Let's see how you really look! Take off those big spectacles and let me see your eyes—"

"Please, Mr. Borden!" Ruth gasped. "I—I can't see without them. My eyes are very weak. They—they blink without my glasses," she lied desperately.

* * *

It was Benny who ended the scene a stormy-faced sullen Benny who jerked open the door as if he had been listening at the keyhole.

"What the devil—?" Borden began furiously.

Benny swung the door shut and slouched against it, sullenly defiant. "There's a guy out here wantin' to see you. Says him and his wife's been jipped outa their life savings."

Borden stared at the boy as if he thought Benny had suddenly grown crazy. Then the dark blood of anger stained his peculiarly white skin. "Get out of her, or I'll shake your teeth down your throat! And get rid of that man, whoever he is. You know I never see a person of that sort. Wait! You'd better handle him yourself, Miss Lester. Here! Don't forget the check! Five hundred, in tens and twenties. Here's a fifty to get the drawing-room and tickets. I want to have at least 500 in ready cash, and this fifty is too big a bill anyway."

The promoter had drawn a handsome brown leather wallet from his pocket, and as he extracted the $50 bill, Ruth caught a glimpse of another yellow-backed bank note, but did not see its denomination.

Later, a harsh-voiced, flinty-eyed man would be demanding of Ruth Lester a minutely detailed recital of every event of that fatal Saturday morning, expecting prodigious feats of memory of her. Then, everything would be of importance, for murder would have made it so. But now nothing seemed important to Ruth Lester but that she was free to leave Harry Borden's private office, free to close the door upon his staring, bold black eyes.

Not even the old man who was tremulously reiterating his story of terrible and crushing financial loss through one of Harry Borden's fake stock schemes seemed important to her then. She eased him out of the office as gently as possible, her ears deaf to his muttered threats against Henry P. Borden.

As she put on her fur coat to go to the bank and to the station, her heart was singing again. It was half-past 10 o'clock. In less than three hours she would join Jack Hayward at the elevator, go to lunch with him to celebrate the engagement which had taken place last night.

By this time Jack had captured the black pigeon, had robbed "Satan" of the little love message she had wrapped about the tiny red leg. She smiled at the absurd irony of it. The pigeon which Jack had insisted should be called "Handsome Harry," because after all, "Satan" and "Handsome Harry" were synonymous, had been forced into the role of lovers' messenger. "If "Handsome Harry" knew that!

Men With Savings Accounts Are Never Park Bench Warmers

It is the man who does not save; who squanders his money as he makes it that warms the park benches and eventually becomes a criminal or public charge in his old age. Such conditions are pitiful, yet they deserve no pity because they did not take advantage of the opportunities they had to save money for the future.

The best and most dependable friend any man can have is a growing savings account. It protects him against that inevitable rainy day and gives him confidence in the future and in himself. A little saved every week will build up protection against the unexpected events of the future. Start today.

Tatum Sees Much Building Activity

Added Life Is Given City In New Mexico As Music Of Construction Sounds Throughout Section

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

TATUM, N. M., Feb. 23.—With two buildings under construction and plans at hand for several more, a building boom is evident here.

Work was begun recently on the 36x36 stucco building being erected by Frank Wycoff to join his building on the corner occupied by Cafe. It will have concrete floors. The front will have 20 feet of glass and is equipped with double doors. The building has already been leased to Blue Browning.

Mr. Wycoff states that he is going to give the building occupied by the cafe a treatment of stucco and will replace the roof.

Another building being erected on the north side of Broadway is rapidly nearing completion. It is a two story stucco and will be occupied by a dining hall with living quarters above.

M. R. Anderson is building a house on his place north east of Tatum.

J. S. Bidwell is erecting a new house northwest of the city.

O. M. Daniel announces his intention to replace his two buildings immediately east of the post office with concrete structures after the first of April.

Another business building is being planned while some parties have been in quest of a lot for the purpose of establishing a lumber yard.

Some of the buildings are new and will be used for new businesses but others are replacing shack buildings erected during the days when four walls were a house.

Why Lubbock Needs A New High School

BY MARY LEIDIGH
High School Winner.

One morning, as I, a high school student, was walking down the street, I met Mr. Taxpayer. There was a great crease in his forehead, and he looked extremely agitated and worried.

"Good morning," I called cherrily. "Why all the gloom on this beautiful day?"

"Why, indeed! Two things have been bothering me lately. One is my pocketbook; the other is my conscience."

A silence followed. Then Mr. Taxpayer said:

'Say, you go to high school, don't you?"

"Sure. I'm a Junior," I replied. "Is there something I can do for you?"

"Does Lubbock really need a new high school?" He asked the question very abruptly.

"Do we? I'll say we do! Why—"

"Tell me why, won't you please? You see I have no children in high school, and I've already paid my taxes."

So She Explains.

"Mr. Taxpayer, it's like this. We need a new high school for several reasons. To begin with, the attendance of the high school, at present 1,100 pupils, is about twice the number that the building was intended to accommodate. Another reason is the Junior high has been crowded out by the Senior high. All except two rooms on the ground floor of the Junior high are used by Senior high students.

"Also classes in several of the grade school buildings are working on half-day sessions. You can see that this is a great disadvantage. A very important reason is that the manual training, business and home economics classes, especially, do not have adequate equipment, nor room enough, to be properly instructed. For instance, in my clothing class, Mr. Taxpayer, there are six sewing machines for 27 girls to use."

"Hum. An average of four girls to a machine."

"Yes, sir. And that's too many.

"Three other very important needs are a gym,' and auditorium, and a social room. There should be a gym for both boys and girls, with a capable teacher for both. At the present time, the girls have no athletics at all. The auditorium, which should have adequate dressing rooms and stage space, should seat at least 2,500. Perhaps you do not know what I mean by a social room It should be a room where the different school organizatins could have parties, and where English classes could give their oral compositions. At the present time, a student must open his house to have a party for 40 or 50 students. That is a physical impossibility."

Would Help P.-T. A.

"Yes, and the Parent-Teachers association could meet there, too, couldn't they?"

"Of course. I hadn't thought of that. But if Lubbock does not build a high school, the standard for this district will be lowered. Then, too, if the teaching of the subects is not kept up to a certain degree, the credits of affiliation for that subject will be removed by the state. You can see what this would mean to Lubbock educationally. The high school will probably operate on half day sessions next year, if more room is not supplied immediately."

"But why not grade schools?"

"I'll get to that in a minute. The high school was finished in 1922. The two study halls, and Dupre and Sanders were built in 1926. The scholastic enrollment of the city schools has increased 500 pupils in the last year, which is about the capacity of Dupre. Although two buildings were built in 1926, it is now necessary to erect another building. If a high school is built, it should accommodate not less than 1,500. Even if a high school is built, if the rate at which Lubbock has been growing for the last four years continues, we shall have to have at least one or two new school buildings every two years. You can see that, can't you? It's perfectly good logic."

"Oh, sure. But—"

"'Why not build grade schools?' To begin with, all that the grade schools would do would be to increase the room. That is, care for the overflow."

"Isn't that what you want done?"

Affiliation Threatened.

"Yes, to some extent. But the main idea is that, unless something is done immediately, the affiliation of the high school will be taken away. Do you see?"

"Oh yes, but my children don't go to high school."

"But some day they will."

"Yes, but I've paid my taxes, and I had a hard time doing it."

"No doubt. 'Most every one does. But that isn't the point. Your children are the brightest children in town, according to you, aren't they? And you want them to have the best of everything, don't you?"

"Of course I do. Say, let me tell you what Jack—"

"Well, if grade schools were built you would have to vote as many bonds as for a high school, and eventually you would have to pay just as many taxes."

"Yes," grudgingly.

"And eventually your children wouldn't get half as much good from the grade schools as they would from a high school.

"Besides, Lubbock today has a population of over 22,000, as compared with 4,000 in 1920. Lubbock is a city. And as a city it should have educational advantages that suit a city. Also Lubbock for its size does not have one-fourth as much invested in schools as other cities its size in Texas.

"Perhaps you know the saying, 'The high school was built in the country, and the college was built on a ranch.' Anyone can tell that this is not true today. The people that built the high school could not foresee the future importance of Lubbock as an educational center. But does this mean that the progressive citizens of Lubbock today should retard the educational advance of our city? It does not."

"Hum. Well, I begin to see your side of the question. Thanks very much."

"Yes, sir. Glad to help you out."

BY ANNA MARY BAUCOM
Junior High Winner.

Since the Texas Technological college was built here five years ago, the population of Lubbock has rapidly increased from 4,051 to 20,000 in only eight years.

In selecting a location for a home people naturally first think of the religious and educational advantages the town has to offer. Lubbock can well boast of her magnifient church buildings, 15 in number, representing almost every creed. Some of these buildings can measure up with those of a much larger city than Lubbock in buildings and in modern equipment. In addition to the 15 churches Lubbock may get be proud of her business houses, big department stores, factories and commodious hotels. She is fittingly called "The Gateway to the West."

Interest On Schools.

The Plains are also very interesting, but the chief interest is centered on the schools. This is a new country but it is settling very rapidly. There are over 4,360 pupils in our schools, with over 145 teachers.

The altitude of Lubbock is 3,250 feet, making it a very healthy city as it is of even and pleasant temperature during the months and not reaching an extremely cold temperature during the winter, the average being 40 degrees Fahrenheit. Because of what Lubbock has to offer in a business, social, religious and educational way and on account of her wonderful climate, each year people are coming by the hundreds to make their homes here. In a few short years she has outgrown herself in many ways, but more especially has she outgrown her school buildings, which were built to satisfy the little Lubbock of four or five years ago. At the present time every ward school in the city is crowded and the first grades are on half-day sessions. This is not best, even for the first grades.

Short Sessions Likely.

If, by next year, some arrangements have not been made for a new building or some way provided and carried out, by which to remedy this crowded condition, Junior high and high school will also be forced to adopt half-day sessions.

Half-day sessions are not only inconvenient and harmful to the pupils by giving them half a day to loaf on the streets and idle away their time, but they are expensive as well. We can see that to put such a method into operation would double the teaching staff and increase the janitor work as well as fuel bills. It would be a far better business policy to apply this fund on a new, modern, fully equipped building.

Junior high students should have domestic science and manual training, but under such conditions as exist, she can have neither. No room should have more than 39 students, but in some rooms we have more than 44.

Juniors Would Move.

A new high school building will relieve this crowded condition even to the first grade. Junior high may use the present high school building, with additional advantages of its auditorium and gymnasium which she so badly needs. The sixth and seventh grades from the wards can be put in Junior high, thus relieving the congestion of the ward schools.

It means much to a boy or girl on entering college if he or she has attended a school whose standing is recognized. Lubbock has 37 1-2 credits and pupils graduating from our school may enter any college or university without taking examinations. We are proud of this standing which our schools have. The department of education in Austin, however, has said that Lubbock must take immediate steps to relieve the crowded conditions and provide better equipment—the remedy for this is a new high school.

We have a man at the head of our schools who is very progressive. We pay him a salary to study conditions and make our schools the very best. He now recommends that Lubbock build a new high school. He knows what we need and must have in order to hold our affiliation and high standing. Lubbock cannot afford to fall in carrying out his recommendation.

Will Be a Monument.

A new high school will stand as a monument to school life and activity and will meet the demand of our rapidly growing city. Let us not only consider how a new building will benefit, the present pupils but also the pupils to come. We must, therefore, all work together and provide for the future as well as for the present. After giving this problem due consideration, the only solution must be a new high school.

The prize winners for the best themes on "Why Lubbock Needs a New High School," have been announced as Mary Leidigh and Anna Mary Baucom. Each received a sum of a $5.00 which was contributed by a Lubbock business man who withheld his name. Their essays appear on adjoining columns.

Girls Increasing
Graduates At High School Show It

That the female sex is gaining ground is evident even in our high school as shown by the fact that there are almost twice as many girls as boys in this year's graduating class.

An investigation of the class roll revealed that 10 boys and 8 girls graduated at mid-term, that 65 boys and 127 girls will graduate in May, and that 15 boys and 18 girls will complete their high school work in summer school.

Printers To Soon Start On Annual

H. C. Garrard, editor of the Senior Yearbook, announces that all material of the 1929 Westerner will be sent to the printer on or soon after March 15.

It will be impossible to buy an annual after the above date so all prospective buyers are urged to make their purchases at the present.

Date Is Decided For Senior Play

The time for the senior play, "Come Out of the Kitchen," has been set for March 29. At the present a few changes are being made in the cast of characters and a list of them will be published later. Mrs. W. P. Clements has charge of the play this year.

High School Band Is Away On Jaunt

The regular band members and leader will leave Friday at noon for Lovington and other points in New Mexico. They will play concerts on the way there and back at towns in which they stop. After they finish playing at Lovington they will leave for home, arriving here Sunday afternoon.

JUST ANOTHER ONE

Authorization has been granted by the Federal Radio Commission for the construction of a 5,000-watt radio station at Convington, Ky. The station will operate on 1480 kilocycles and share time with WHT, Chicago, WORD, Batavia, Ill., and WJAZ, Mount Prospect, Ill.

Only two per cent of all the Indians in America have incomes exceeding $500 a year.

GIANT CONTROL BOARD

The control board used for dramatic production of the British Broadcasting company is said to be one of the largest in operation. Seven independent studios can be linked up simultaneously through the use of this board.

Banquet Commemorating Second Anniversary Is Held By Rotary Group Of That Place

LITTLEFIELD, Feb. 23. — On Thursday night of last week the Littlefield Rotary club observed its second anniversary with a banquet and program. Forty-one members and visitors were seated at the banquet table, and were Mr. and Mrs. R. E. McCaskill, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Hilliard, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Bills, Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Sadler, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Rumback, Mr. and Mrs. T. Wade Potters, Mr. and Mrs. John Arnett, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Harris, Dr. and Mrs. M. V. Cobb, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. Don D. Thaxton, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Weaver, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Teal, Max McClure, Ross Mayhew, Pryor Hammons, C. E. Willis, C. C. Clements, Rev. Geo. E. Turrentine and Rev. Chas Dvorak. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hopping, Mrs. Chas Smith of Harrisburg, Ill., house gest of Mr. and Mrs. Mon D. Thaxton, and Mrs. V. V. Wright.

President R. E. McCaskill was toastmaster for the occasion. This being also the 24th anniversary of Rotary International, J. S. Hilliard, secretary of the club here, gave an outline of the history of Rotary, first as a business men's club and later when it became an international organization. The purposes and aims of Rotary were briefly set out by Mr. Hilliard, with some of the work Rotary is doing in this immediate community, one item of which was the presenting to the school of 30 shade trees to be set out around the primary buildings. Plans were discussed for taking part in the Boy Scout movement, and the regular meeting of Rotary to be held on next Thursday was set aside for Boys day, at which time each Rotarian expects to bring to lunch one boy of the youngest age limit for boy scouts, hoping thus to interest a number of boys of that age in the work.

Pastors Discuss Plan Of Revival

Committees Are Working On Proposal That Churches Join In Evangelistic Campaign In City

Plans for a city-wide revival have been discussed by the Lubbock Ministerial Alliance, an organization of all regular pastors both active and inactive in the city, and committees are investigating the possibilities of such a meeting.

According to the Rev. H. L. Munger, pastor of the First Methodist church, who is president of the alliance, nothing definite has been outlined in the 1929 program of the organization.

The Rev. O. N. Baucom, pastor of the Cumberland Presbyterian church is secretary of the organization. The Rev. Mr. Baucom states that a meeting of the local alliance will be held in the near future at which time the proposed city-wide revival will be discussed. If it is decided to hold the revival, committees will be selected to name the date, place and leader.

Strolling 'Round New York

WITH GILBERT SWAN
New York Correspondent for NEA Service and The Lubbock Avalanche - Journal

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—The shoeshining concession in those lower Manhattan skyscrapers devoted to Wall Street affairs is something more than a job, or even a profession. It's an opportunity.

Sitting, for instance, in a certain office at 71 Broadway, where tickers and tape flows and stock order clerks hop about, you can listen to Enrico as he slaps a generous blob of shoe polish upon your left boot.

Thus listening to Enrico you hear an echo of all the vices in that vast belt. You hear what happened to Standard Oil of New Jersey and how many points were gained by General Motors; you hear prognostications on the future of Wright Aero and finally learn that Enrico carries five shares of Blister Coffee on margin, nine shares of Wingless Airplane and three shares of Ether Radio.

For as Enrico shines shoes up and down the building, his ear is at the keyhole and frequently beyond it. Growing confidential and expansive, Enrico will open up with a lingo that sounds very much like George Beban used to sound when he was giving his Italian imitations. Enrico has a large and almost cherubic head, made to look even more beaming by an absence of hair just above the forehead. His presence in the building has been a matter of years.

And there is one such in each of the great skyscrapers which range around the money belt of America.

From Enrico you will learn that times have been very good for bootblacks of the Wall Street district. You'll hear that when that famous bull market was getting more and more bullish, men became more and more careless about taking their change.

Whether a dollar, a five or a 10 were tossed at him, Enrico's efforts at making change were greeted with "Aw, never mind the change," he would hear as he went about. And he would hear them speak of deals that were pending. With such easy money Enrico found he could buy six to 10 shares of stock on margin. And if the stock went up three or four points—well, $12 to $25 profit. To a young man who began life, and may end it, blacking boots, $25 a day is something to write back to Italy about.

But Enrico is wise. He is wise in the old way of Europe. He does not quit his job as bootblack with his first $100 windfall. Nor does he squander it, nor plunge it back. Enrico is contented with $25 and lets his original capital ride, putting the rest in a little house he is buying in the outskirts of New York.

And lower Manhattan has hundreds such, whose humble efforts show far fatter results than do the white-collared clerks whose boots they black and who toss $1 bills, forgetting change.

* * *

Luke died the other day. And if that be news or no news, it is important to Greenwich Village, where Luke has been a character of prominence for some years. The rest of Luke's name was O'Conner, and his claim to fame began, strangely enough, with the hiring of a scrubman. Luke was running a bar. It was a bar well known to some Villagers, but Luke's was a name known only to a few customers.

Then one day Luke hired a scrubman to clean out cuspidors and do odd jobs. Because of this Luke was famous 10 years later. For this man was John Mansefield, one of the greatest living poets, who had come to Manhattan and needed work. In late years Luke has been deluged by reporters, writers and such, seeking reminiscences of Masefeld's barroom days.

Miseries Of Flood Abetted With New Cold Wave

LONDON, Feb. 23.—Miseries of floods which followed severe cold in Southeastern Europe as a consequence of a rapid rise in temperature have now been intensified by return of Arctic conditions.

In Thrace, where at least a million acres are submerged, the intense cold has recurred. Such also, is the case in Jugosalvia, Czechoslovakia and Hungary. Belgrade, center of the stricken area, reported a temperature of 17 belowe zero, Fahrenheit.

Heavy snowfalls were reported over wide areas, reaching far into Greece. Lack of food and coal, owing to disruption of railroad services caused great distress, particularly among the poor.

The Jugoslavian government is doing its best to maintain railroad service but there is insufficient coal available to heat trains with the result that where service does exist trains are unoccupied. People fear they will share the fate of several who during the previous cold wave were frozen to death in coaches.

A French blue blouse has a half-inch banding of chartreuse running across its back and front yoke, around the bottom and top of the cuffs and from the neckline down the shoulder seams and straight down the outside of the sleeves to top of the cuff.

SPORTS CANARY

A little pale blue sports frock has a pert canary embroidered on one shoulder. Little figures of children are popular this year too.

THE RECORD-BREAKING NEW NASH "400" from 9th to 4th place in just 6 months!

IN DOLLARS AND CENTS VOLUME, ACCORDING TO OFFICIAL FIGURES (Ford Excluded)

ON July 1, 1928, Nash stood ninth in dollars and cents volume of sales, exclusive of Ford, according to the official figures for the year ending at that date.

On January 1, 1929, just six months later, according to the same official figures, Nash stood fourth.

In this very brief period the new Nash "400" has completely changed the automobile picture of America.

With unmistakable enthusiasm, motorists everywhere have placed their stamp of approval upon this new Nash—making it, by a tremendous margin, the outstanding motor success of modern automobile history.

Why? Because Nash gives them the Twin-Ignition motor . . . gives them cars equipped with the Bijur centralized chassis lubrication system . . . with hydraulic shock absorbers . . . with bumpers front and rear . . . spare tire lock . . . cars completely, luxuriously equipped . . . at no extra cost.

IN THE SPOTLIGHT OF PUBLIC FAVOR

With New Lower Prices

Again the spotlight of public favor singled out Oldsmobile at the great national automobile shows—

—not because of any radical changes in the 1929 Oldsmobile, but for a more vital and fundamental reason—

Already representative of the most progressive engineering, Oldsmobile's big high-compression engine now develops 62 horsepower. Piston-pins are now pressure-lubricated—an engineering feature heretofore characteristic of high-priced cars.

Already distinctive in appearance, its smartness has been enhanced by new headlamps on chromium-plated mountings—by a new cadet-type visor—and by new, sparkling color combinations.

And even greater luxury is revealed inside the car—by deeper, softer seat-cushions—by new, more costly upholsteries—and by the wonderful new Fisher adjustable front seat that may be instantly regulated to suit the driver's convenience.

NEW LOWER PRICE
TWO DOOR SEDAN
$875

New Chevrolet Is Shown To Nation

10,000 Dealers Assist In Big National Demonstration Week Program As Public Tests Out New Six

Ten thousand Chevrolet dealers in every part of the country, assisted by more than 20,000 salesmen, participated last week in National Demonstration Week, the result being that hundreds of thousands of persons experienced without obligation their first rides in the new Chevrolet six.

Although it was the first time the company had undertaken a project of this sort, sales executives, basing their opinion on the enthusiastic reports of dealers and salesmen, have already judged it as overwhelmingly successful.

Began Simultaneous.

Demonstration week began simultaneously last Monday in every city, town and hamlet of the country in which a Chevrolet dealer is located. Dealers arranged special mechanical displays in their salesrooms. In all cases the demonstration rides led over routes, chosen to bring out every performance feature of the nex six.

In metropolitan centers the remarkable acceleration of the new car was demonstrated. Its unusual speed was displayed on the highways. Rough roads were traversed to prove the car's riding ease. In like fashion its ability to climb hills, the thorough and quiet cleavage of its four wheel brakes and its economy of operation were emphasized. In short, none of the many sensational performance features of the new car were overlooked in these comprehensive demonstrations.

Success Due To Cars.

The success of the undertaking was due in a large degree to the care with which the dealer organization had prepared for the event. All of the salesmen were carefully rehearsed beforehand as to their duties. The public was impressed with the fact that there were no obligations incident to the free demonstration ride.

HOT DOGS!

For over half an hour a small boy had been persistently whistling outside the butcher's shop. Finally, the butcher could stand it no longer. He rushed out into thestreet.

"Stop making that confounded noise, you little wretch!" he shouted.

"I've lost me dog," said the boy.

"Well, do you think I've got your dog, then?

'I dunno,' muttered the boy. 'But ever time I whistle those sausages of yours move."—Answers.

There is no word for kiss in the Japanese language.

ON AUTO ROW

Automobile sales have been slowed up considerably during the past week in Lubbock, according to local dealers. Inclement weather is thought to be the main cause for the temporary let-up in activity. The coming of spring and the usual buying time of the year is expected to revive the output of new cars as well as the used machines on hand.

Show Postponed.

Postponement of the automobile show, which had been announced for February 23 through March 1, has been accepted by the majority of Lubbock auto dealers as the most desirable policy. Setting the date one month later, those in charge of the venture believe more favorable weather can be expected late in March than during the latter part of this month. Since interested automobile buyers are expected here from all sections of the South Plains the latter date will undoubtedly make it possible for hundreds to be here that would have been unable to make the trip this month.

Plans To Be Laid.

Further plans for the show will be worked out at a meeting of local dealers Thursday night at a local cafeteria. Since several prominent automobile dealers of Lubbock were not present at the first meeting held February 14, another vote will likely be taken to consider the question of whether the show will be held in the Up Town Dance Palace as originally planned or whether an outdoor exhibition will be held. G. P. Kuykendall has been elected president of the local automobile dealers' association and C. E. Gough is secretary.

Indoor Show Pleases.

A careful investigation reveals the fact that the maority of dealers here favor an indoor attraction rather than one staged on the streets. Believing that a show held indoors would draw the real prospective automobile buyers and would give the new models a far more attractive background, those in favor of the original plan are anxious that a new vote be taken in order that all members of the association be given a voice.

Will Be Fine Show.

If present plans of those in charge of the show are worked out, Lubbock is to have the greatest automobile show in the history of the South Plains. It will not only be a unusual attraction for motorists and prospective motorists, but a wonderful investment on the part of auto dealers and distributors in this section.

New Salesman Here.

J. E. Paige, formerly of the Packard sales staff in Dallas, has joined the sales force of the Gough Motor company, Studebaker distributors in West Texas. Mr. Paige is an experienced car salesman and takes his new position here with high optimism.

Hubert Jones, manager of the Post-Tex Cotton Mills of Post was in Lubbock on business with the Gough Motor company during the past week. Mr. Jones is a textile expert, receiving his training in New England where he lived before coming to West Texas.

Morton J. Smith of the Lubbock otel is driving a new Studebaker President Eight.

Can't Get Cars.

Continued difficulty in getting new cars delivered is reported by Kuykendall Chevrolet company. The New Chevrolet Six is meeting enthusiastic sales in every section of the country and as a result dealers throughout the country are unable to supply the demand for the "Six in the price range of a Four." This condition should be relieved in a short while, however, the local Chevrolet dealer said. General Motors are manufacturing these new cars as fast as possible and will likely catch up on orders within the next month.

MAKES RECORD

Graham-Paige Sales Volume Top $80,000,000

A new high record for sales volume attained by a new make of automobile in its first year was created by the Graham-Paige Motors Corporation in producing cars to a total retail value of more than $80,000,000 in 1928, according to an announcement from the company received by the Graham-Paige representative here.

The second year of Graham-Paige finds the company well on its way to creating new records with its line of new sixes and eights, as indicated by the figures for January, when 5,670 cars were built, nearly four times the total for January last year. In fact, Graham-Paige is already a full month ahead of 1928, as the first month's output this year exceeded the total for the first two months of the preceding year.

Fifty Field Men Added By Oakland

Increased Production And Sales Program Calls For Additional Travelers; To Hold Convention

PONTIAC, Mich., Feb. 3.—In line with the increased production and sales program for 1929 announced recently by the Oakland Motor Car company, a convention of two weeks' duration for traveling field representatives of the company is now under way at the factory here.

Of a hundred general travelers in attendance, 50 are new men who will augment the present field force in the selling campaign that promises to make 1929 the greatest year in Oakland-Pontiac history.

Every District Represented.

Every one of the 25 Oakland district offices in the United States has one or more of its traveling representatives here at the convention which began on February 11th and extends to February 23.

W. H. Loudon of the factory sales department, who has charge of the convention stated that the object was to give every traveler a close insight into factory methods and operations that he may work more intelligently in the field toward improved public service.

Executive heads of every major department of the home office are to address the travelers on the functions and workings of their offices, while A. R. Glancy, president and general manager, also is scheduled to talk to the men.

Dodge Offers All Year Performance

The old fashioned man who rolled the family touring car into the barn and up on trestles at the first snow flake now has a son who buys his car in winter and drives it every day, because it is not only economical but practical.

Breaking in a new car in winter is now easy, quick and satisfactory, and the practice of deferring delivery until spring is rapidly disappearing, according to W. W. Royalty, local Dodge dealer, in pointing out that the design of the modern car insures dependable year-around performance.

"Motorists who used to think that snowbound roads took much out of a new car are now finding winter driving offers certain advantages," said Mr. Royalty. "There is no attempt to overspeed, and the engine is not subjected to the strain of fast driving before it has had an opportunity to stand high speeds. This results in longer life, smoother operation and lower upkeep."

Fete 77th Year Of Studebakers

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Feb. 23.—Seven thousand Studebaker dealers all over the world today celebrate the 77th anniversary of the Studebaker Corporation which was established here Feb. 16, 1852, by Henry and Clem Studebaker.

The little shop and the $68 capital which represented the first Studebaker venture has grown into one of the largest manufacturing corporations in America, backed by actual net assets of more than $105,000,000 and employing 21,000 people. Dealers in every country in the world sell the products of great modern factories in South Bend, Detroit and Walkersville, Ontario.

Studebaker's automotive experidates back to 1899. The Studebaker Brothers Manufacturing company was then one of the largest vehicle builders in the world. The first experiments were with electrics. In 1904 the superiority of the gasoline engine led to the manufacture of the first Studebaker automobile—a 16 h. p. machine with the motor under the front seat.

One-Third Imports Are Hudson-Essex

More than one-third of all the American automobiles imported to England were Essex Super Sixes, and Hudson-Essex cars combined led all other American cars imported into Europe, according to the official figures for 1928, published by the Automotive Trade Commissioner in Paris.

"That we were able to establish such a record is a tribute to the ability of the American manufacturer to meet European standards of excellence and offer price advantages that could only be obtained by large production methods and the purchasing advantages which huge resources bring about," said J. S. Draper, export trade manager for Hudson.

Mr. Draper, who for years advocated that the man sent abroad to represent American industry should be fully equipped to embrace the customs of the countries they were sent to and respect their traditions, feels that a great deal of the credit for America's rise in the export trade should be given to our representatives abroad.

The year 1928 was the second largest in the history of foreign financing in the United States.

SAFETY CAMPAIGN

Hupp Motor Company Plans Safe Motoring Step

The Hupp Motor Car Corporation is starting a campaign to align every Hupp driver in the country on the side of safe motoring. This is an affirmative step to back up the announced position of DuBoise Young, president of the Hupp Motor Car Corporation, that automobile manufacturers should do their full share toward improving motoring conditions in the United States.

In order to present to every Hupp owner and driver a concrete program of safe driving, Hupmobile asked Philip D. Hoyt, First Deputy Police Commissioner of New York who has become one of the foremost traffic authorities of the country, to draft a set of driving rules, based upon an analysis of existing conditions, and particularly on a study of the causes of accidents during his experience in the police department.

Commissioner Hoyt has devised 10 rules, and these are being put before every present Hupp owner and driver with the request that he study them and agree to abide by them to the end that the Hupp family may be one of the foremost groups contributing to the safety of American highways.

It costs a thousand dollars more to equal CHRYSLER Performance in any other car

New Chrysler "65" 4-Door Sedan $1145

CHRYSLER engineers from the outset disregarded all other performance standards and all other design. They set themselves to establish definitely the most modern principles and fundamentals of engineering and to apply them in a brand new way.

The same processes which based the new Chrysler style on the canons of classic beauty worked step by step to provide performance unlike any other in the industry—founded on a new and fresh interpretation of the basic principles of engineering design.

It is because of this Chrysler plan and the achievement of this plan, that an entirely new motor car performance has been brought into being.

The extraordinary acceleration, smooth speed, ease of handling and control, compactness, comfort, durability and long life, together with the unusual safety and stamina which characterize Chrysler, have all been combined in a car whose qualities can only be approached by other cars costing hundreds, yes, even a thousand dollars more.

It is no wonder that Chrysler engineers, working with that singleness of idea and surety of approach to every problem, should create a product built as none was ever built before and better than any other.
