Soviet Plane Missing Off Nova Scotia

HALIFAX, N.S. (UPI) —Fog and low clouds hampered aircraft criss-crossing throughout the night over iceberg-pocked seas for a giant Soviet cargo plane with 23 or 24 persons aboard that disappeared on a mercy flight to earthquake-ravaged Peru.

Several emergency search planes from three nations searched Sunday without success for the Aeroflot four-engine turboprop Antonov-22, largest plane in the Soviet cargo fleet, which vanished Saturday after refueling at Keflavik, Iceland.

The plane, which last reported its position one hour out of Keflavik, had been scheduled to stop again for refueling at Halifax but never arrived. An Aeroflot spokesman in Montreal said the plane carried 23 or 24 persons.

The plane was part of a Soviet air fleet ferrying emergency medical clothing and other supplies to Peru. So far, eight planeloads of supplies have flown to Lima since the airlift began last Tuesday.

The plane's flight plan would have taken it over Gander, Newfoundland, to Halifax. Search efforts have been concentrated along this route. The plane's last reported position would have put it about 288 miles southwest of Iceland over the Labrador Sea between Greenland and Newfoundland.

Rescue planes have flown north and south of the proposed flight route without sighting the huge aircraft. Another Soviet plane which left Keflavik 55 minutes after the missing aircraft said there had been no sight of the A-22 during its flight. Radio calls were sent to all ocean vessels and fishing boats in the area but none reported spotting the missing plane. There was no formal sea search.

Capt. Harry Andrews of the Canadian armed forces Rescue Coordination Center said Sunday U.S., Canadian and Danish planes searching with radar "have picked up nothing but regular ships and icebergs."

"Their biggest problem is fog," he said. "When something is picked up on radar, they have to go down to 400 feet to see what it is." The fog lifting from the sea reaches 700 feet in places, he said.

Board To Check Building Progress

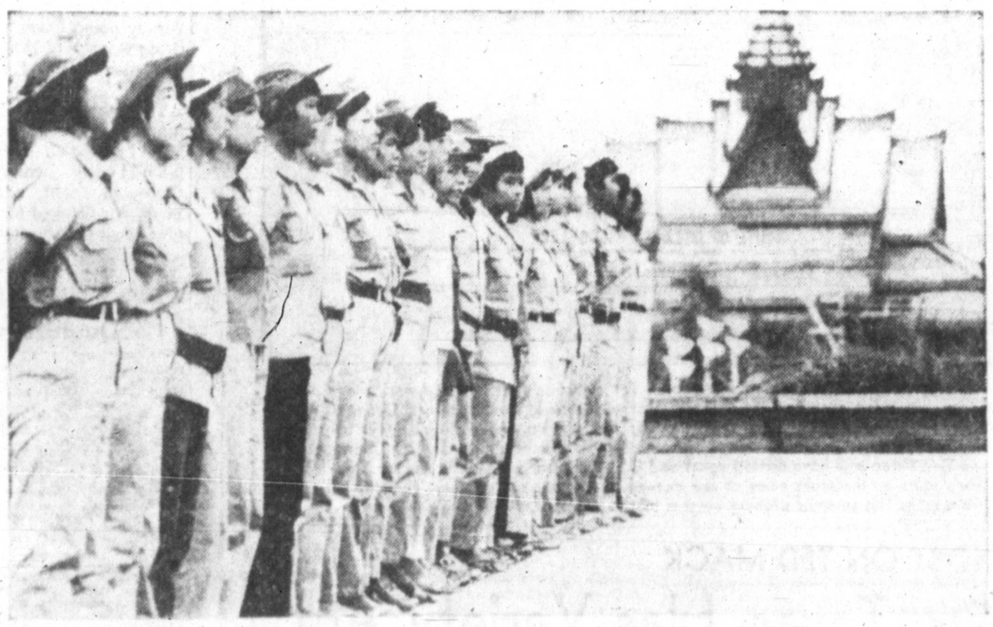

Pampa school board will meet at 7:30 p.m. today at Carver Center to review building program progress, consider personnel changes, and bids on band instruments and typewriters.

On the board's July session agenda other items are consideration of mutual participation with the city on an emergency warning system for the city, and discussion of the cafeteria and laundry programs.

The board will also discuss transportation of bus students, a designate an official radio station and approve any payment requests on building projects.

LONDON (UPI) —Residents living near the Plashet Park Zoo have signed petitions asking that the amorous peacocks at the zoo be moved to a larger park. They claim they can't get to sleep because of the birds' mating cries every night.

TROSPER vs CATES

Conflicting Dates Set In Hearing On Vote-Counting Irregularities

By BEN KECK
News Staff Writer

Pre-trial hearing dates have been set in the 31st and 84th District Courts for Phil Cates of Lefors, the Democratic candidate for state representative from the 79th Legislative District.

The dates, however, are in conflict because Cates has been ordered to appear in court both in Pampa and Perryton at 10 a.m. next Monday.

District clerk for the 31st District, Helen Sprinkle, said Judge Grainger McIlhany ordered the appearance today. Judge Max Boyer of Perryton had ordered the appearance Friday.

Neither McIlhany nor Boyer could be reached for comment on how the conflict would be settled.

The hearings are the result of a petition filed Friday in district court in the seven counties of the 79th Legislative District by Ray Trosper, Cates' opponent in a runoff election held June 6.

Cates had been declared the unofficial winner of the runoff, but the State Democratic Executive Committee in Austin reversed that decision after finding irregularities in the voting.

After Trosper had been declared the winner, Cates demanded a recount and the state committee again reversed itself.

Trosper charged in the petition that certain irregularities occurred in counting the votes. The charges specified that some ballots were improperly marked, but were counted for Cates.

Trosper said he can show at least 16 instances where improperly marked ballots were cast for his opponent.

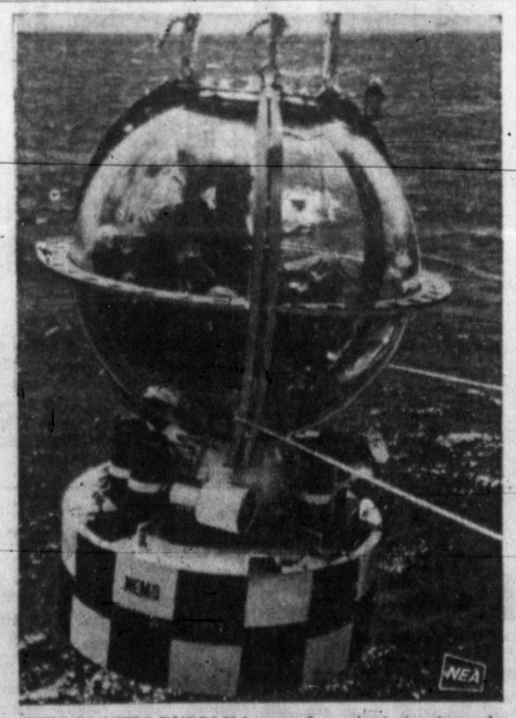

Whatever the court outcome, the Democratic nominee will face Republican Bill Nix of Canadian in the November general election.

Nix said he sympathized with both Cates and Trosper and said he would like to see the uncertainty of the race cleared up because, "I would like to know who my opponent is."

Although Democratic and Republican executive committees throughout the district would make no official comment on the pending court case, some of Cates supporters in Gray County, where he received most of his support, said Trosper was leaning toward Nix's political camp in Canadian.

The feeling among the Cates supporters is that Nix's followers know they can beat Trosper but have no chance against Cates.

Nix, although he would not comment on his chances of beating either Cates or Trosper, said there was no truth to the rumor that Trosper has connection with his political camp.

Communists Take Cambodian Outpost

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Communist troops overran a Cambodian outpost southwest of Phnom Penh and renewed the battle for the mountain resort at Kirirom in fighting reported today from each side of the highway linking the capital with Kompong Som, the nation's only deepwater port.

The tempo of fighting increased in both Cambodia and South Vietnam during the weekend. Two 100-pound rockets slammed into Saigon Sunday night, one landing on the presidential palace grounds and the second hitting an apartment building. No one was reported hurt.

A Cambodian military spokesman said guerrillas captured the outpost at Saang, 30 miles southwest of Phnom Penh, when most of its defenders were off on an operation Sunday. The government troops were reported mounting a counerattack this morning.

Fighting at Kirirom, 56 miles west-southwest of Phnom Penh, flared anew Sunday around the Chalet d'Etat, the former mountain retreat of ousted Prince Norodom Sihanouk. The spokesmen said it was still in progress at last report.

Government casualties in Kirirom were put as one soldier dead and two wounded, with two guerrillas reported slain and several others carried away either dead or wounded.

South Vietnamese troops operating in Eastern Cambodia reported killing 69 Viet Cong or North Vietnamese in three clashes Sunday while losing six dead and 23 wounded.

Demos To Seek New Medical Aid Legislation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Democratic lawmakers plan to introduce legislation this week calling for creation of a national health service corps that would use government doctors to care for the nation's poor.

If approved, it would be the first time government doctors in the Public Health Service (PHS) have been called on to provide health care for the poor as a population group. At present, commissioned PHS officers provide health services only to specific groups such as Indians, Alaskan natives and federal prisoners.

The proposal would extend that care "to those urban and rural areas of the United States where poverty conditions exist and the health facilities are inadequate to meet the needs of the persons living in such areas."

The plan will be introduced by Sens. Warren G. Magnuson and Henry M. Jackson, both Washington Democrats, and Rep. Paul G. Rogers, D-Fla., with cosponsorship promised by Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis. an aide to Magnson told UPI.

The bill could spark a major health debate on whether the government should provide direct medical services to the poor.

Says Nixon Left 'Southern Strategy'

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Many Republican leaders in the South, according to Sen. Strom Thurmond, now believe President Nixon has abandoned his "Southern strategy."

Republican state chairmen from the South came to that conclusion last week when they met in Washington. Thurmond made it official Friday when he took the Senate floor to attack Nixon's school desegregation policies, and to warn the President he might not be re-elected if he continued to pursue them.

Thurmond indicated the state leaders decided the President was no longer trying to curry Southern favor with "equal treatment" for their part of the country in school desegregation matters. "They all agree with me," the South Carolina Republican said.

Thurmond told UPI after his news-making Senate speech that his goal was to gain a stronger voice for conservatism among the President's White House advisors.

At the peak of his oratory Friday, Thurmond said, "I am warning the Nixon administration—I am warning the Nixon administration today —that the people of the South and the people of the nation will not support such unreasonable policies."

What triggered Thurmond's open warning —he had already voted against many Nixon policies he considered too liberal —was a twin development. The administration is sending 100 Justice Department lawyers into the South to watch for fulfillment of school desegregation pledges this fall. And the administration is threatening the tax exempt status of the new, segregated private schools springing up in the South to avoid integration.

Thurmond said these moves might be expected of a Democratic administration, but from a Republican one it amounted to a breach of faith. The President, he said, had personally promised better treatment.

Vacationers Flee From Burning Ship

SANTA CRUZ DE TENERIFE, Canary Islands (UPI) — Vacationers and crew members in bathrobes and pajamas fled through corridors reverberating with the clang of a fire alarm. It was hours until dawn aboard the cruise liner Fulvia 140 miles off the Canary Islands.

Far below, an auxiliary engine had exploded and flames swept in the engine room.

The 270 crew members and 447 passengers, including at least 13 Americans, abandoned ship so calmly Sunday the only injury was to an elderly woman who broke a leg climbing into lifeboat.

The passengers, most of them Italians, spent six hours bobbing in lifeboats before they were picked up by the French packet ship Ancerville and brought to Santa Cruz de Tenerife, arriving at 4 p.m. Sunday. They were lodged in hotels overnight.

Special charter planes were taking them today to Milan, Italy. The crew was to be flown to Genoa, the ship's destination. The Fulvia was burned out, virtually destroyed.

"Everything went calmly. No one panicked," said Donald Koepp, 43, a businessman from Fullerton, Calif., describing the ordeal.

The fire broke out at 3 a.m. and the Ancerville and other rescue ships began arriving about 9:30 a.m. By noon, the flames had broken through the walls of the engine room, forcing what was left of the crew on the ship to take to lifeboats. The Fulvia listed to one side as a tug towed it toward port.

Moisture Offers Respite From Heat

Clouds that began forming in the western skies late Sunday afternoon produced .30 of an inch of rain for Pampa during the night, and light drizzle was continuing to fall at mid-morning.

A welcome relief from the heat, the moisture will have little effect on the crops in the area unless there is more to come.

County agriculture agent Foster Whaley said at least ½ inch of rain would have to fall before the moisture would soak into the soil enough to do any good.

Whaley said if the rain should stop and the sun were to come out, the moisture received would dry up, being of no benefit at all.

Temperatures, forecast Saturday to be in the mid-90s today, had reached only the lower 60 mark at mid-morning.

Clouds continued to cover the Panhandle area, although there were some signs of breaking.

500-Pound Bombs Roll On Wildorado Road

WILDORADO, Tex. (UPI) — A truck carrying 500 pound bombs to San Francisco ran off an interstate highway Sunday, struck a nunoccupied car, jackknifed and spilled the 72 bombs on the highway and a railroad track.

The bombs did not carry fuses and did not explode. It took 17½ hours to load the bombs into another truck.

Six hours earlier and 15 miles away a similar truck carrying 39,000 pounds of the same kind of bombs overturned on the same highway near the Texas-Oklahoma border. They did not explode either.

The accident at Wildorado occurred at 6:20 a.m. The bombs were loaded on another truck by 11:45 p.m. The Texas Department of Public Safety said the accident occurred when the truck "traveling west ran off the road and struck an unoccupied car with Arkansas license plats."

"The driver lost control, crossed a ditch, a service road, and ran up on the railroad track. The trailer jackknifed and spilled the bombs but remained upright."

The driver of the truck was hospitalized in fair condition in Amarillo, Tex., 30 miles east of Wildorado.

A spokesman for the Oklahoma Highway Department said the first crash occurred near Sayre, Okla., at midnight Saturday. The Oklahoma authorities said the driver of the truck failed to make a curve on a two-lane section of the road and the truck overturned spilling the bombs on the highway.

The bombs were loaded on another truck by an ordinance crew from Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma City at 9 a.m.

Both trucks were leased to the Navy and were carrying bombs from Crane, Ind., to Port Chicago in San Francisco.

Robbery Appeared To Be Staged Fake

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) —The whole thing looked like a staged fake at first — a putup job for the tourists.

"Then they shoved a gun in my face," said Glen Falcon of Boulder, Okla.

The one man wearing the ski mask and carrying the gun and the other, his face also covered, running up and down collecting valuables took most of the fun out of the ride on the world's longest miniature train.

The bandits made off with $441 in cash, $130 in cameras and two pair of sunglasses from the train's 35 passengers.

"We just don't have much yet," detective Melvin Wondra said Sunday. "We're working on the suspects but they wore masks and we're unable to do too much with it.

"The next best bet we have is that they apparently got quite a bit of jewelry and cameras and they will eventually try to start hocking that," Wondra said. "When that happens perhaps we can trace it."

Most of the persons riding the train Saturday were tourists. Those from San Antonio remembered past holdups staged by the owners of the train.

The two men jumped out of the bushes on the back leg of the track and ordered engineer Walter Lucas, 24, to stop. Lucas said one bandit waved a .22 pistol and the other carried a large white laundry bag. They moved down the train ordering passengers to throw their money and other valuables into the sack.

Lucas pulled out a miniature walki-talki when the bandits got near the end of the train. But the bandits saw him talking to the park manager and ran back to the front of the train and shoved the gun in his face.

"What could I do?" Lucas said. "If they are gonna shoot you, they are gonna shoot you."

The bandits didn't shoot him. Instead they turned and fled into the bushes carrying their almost full laundry sack.

Five Escape Security At Rusk State Hospital

RUSK, Tex. (UPI)—Five men held in the maximum security unit of the Rusk State Hospital broke out of a locked building, cut through one fence, scaled another and escaped Sunday.

Four of the five were being held for pretrial examinations and one of them, Wesley Leon Colbert, 56, of Houston, was directly connected with a trial due to start today.

Court is charged in Houston with shooting and killing Tony Clodfelter, a used car salesman. Clodfelter's wife, Mary T. Clodfelter, was charged with promising Colbert $20,000 to kill her husband and was scheduled to start trial today.

Richard Haynes, Mrs. Clodfelter's attorney, said Colbert's escape forced him to reassess the trial.

"I'm going downtown and get my office bunch together and try to evaluate the situation and assess the impact that Colbert's little junket out into the free world will have on whether or not we wish to start the trial," Haynes said.

The other four escapees were Albert J. Cagle, 34, of Wilbarger County; Perfecto Calballero, 18, of Bexar County; Charles Mayberry, 22, of San Antonio; and Herman H. Thomas, 32, of Midland County.

Officials at the hospital said Colbert, Mayberry, Calballero and Thomas were being held for examinations on murder charges. Cagle was being held for pretrial examination on car theft charges.

The duty supervisor said the men used a hacksaw blade or some other kind of cutting tool to break out of the building. They used bolt cutters to cut through one fence and they climbed over the second barrier.

They made it to the hospital's parking lot where they took a station wagon and drove away. They were armed with a .22 pistol and knives.

OOPS! There were faces as red as the uniforms when the Queen's Guards, renowned for their military precision, made this wavy line at a London ceremony before Queen Elizabeth II.

Miss Texas Has Variety Act With Crab And Singing Dog

FORT WORTH (UPI) —When 21-year-old Phyllis George was named Miss Texas 1970 Saturday night millions of Texans knew they could expect to see her on television this fall as a contestant in the Miss America pageant. Had she lost, they might have seen her sooner than expected.

"If I hadn't won Miss Texas," she said Sunday, "I would have gone on the Ted Mack Amateur Hour."

Her talent?

A variety menagerie act combining her pet hermit crab "MC" and her singing dog.

The brown haired, brown eyed North Texas State University coed, who won the title as the Dallas entry, credited MC as the one good luck charm which brought her success.

"It was a gift from one of my sorority sisters," she told newsmen Sunday, "and it cost her $4."

It is alive?

"Why of course it's alive." Could we see it?

Enter "MC" (short for Moon Children).

Although a speech major, the new Miss Texas was rather well versed on the habits and homing of hermit crabs.

"He (or she, it was difficult to tell) is camera shy," Miss George explained. "He hasn't pinched me yet, though."

She reached in MC's wire cage, picked him up and delicately displayed to the enjoyment of the group the proper method for holding a hermit crab.

She explained how hermit crabs need protection and therefore live in empty shells they find.

"It's fixing to touch me... May I put it down?"

The entire room burst into laughter and granted a reluctant permission for "Phil" to return MC to his cage.

What about the dog?

"I was watching the Johnny Carson show one night and he had this man on with a dog who howled when the man sang," she said. "And the dog was a mutt.

"Well, I have a dog that can howl when I sing too, but it's a cute dog."

You have a singing dog?

"We have a strange family."

The subject was changed to the ideas and ideals of the new Miss Texas.

What would you look for in a man if you were looking for a man?

She paused... a long thoughtful pause. "If I was looking for a man, I would want a gentleman, one who would treat me like a lady."

The tone of her voice indicated she had found such a man and was not in the market for another.

"There is a boy I've been dating," she explained. "He knows I'll be a lot busier this year. I think he will be real understanding. He'd better."

Twelve hours earlier, as newsmen quizzed her after she was crowned Miss Texas, she had said "It's a mans' world."

But it was all her world Saturday night. The winner of preliminary swimsuit and talent competition had charmed a crowd of 3,000 with more performances that made her the favorite.

The four runnersups, Bellinda Myrick, Miss West Texas (1st), Janice Bain, Miss Denton (2nd), Mae Beth Cormany, Miss Wichita Falls, (3rd) and Ethyle Lynn Peacock, Miss Waco (4th) were equally happy with the final decision.

"I'm just tickled pink for Phyllis," said Miss Myrick, who will represent the state as Miss George's number one alternate.

"I'm looking forward to representing Texas in Atlantic City," she added. "I want to show people that Texas has the culture of all great states and that not everybody wears cowboy boots."

Dallas Jumper Gets Top Skydiving Prize

After a windy delay Saturday, the Girlstown USA Parachute Meet finally finished at Perry Lefors field Sunday, with Dennis Clark of Dallas taking the top prize of $500 and a division prize of $100 plus a trophy.

Clark competed in Class C, the category for the most experienced jumpers.

Winner of the Class B accuracy jumps, for which he was awarded $100 and a trophy was Wayne Mosley of Amarillo.

The Class A (novice) accuracy competition was won by Craig Ranson of Dallas. Ranson was also awarded $100 and a trophy.

The meet was held to raise funds for Girlstown, USA, at Whiteface. John Norris, publicity chairman for Girlstown, said although the meet was delayed for more than nine hours Saturday, it made a come-back and was a success.

"We know we've made enough to offset our expenses," Norris said, "but we won't have exact figures on how much was netted for Girlstown for about two weeks."

Norris said advance tickets numbered about 24,000 in the Tri-State area and it would take two weeks to tally the sales from all sales points.

Sunday's crowd of several hundred persons was reported considerably higher than Saturday, when most of the spectators had left the air field before competition finally began.

Delays were caused by high winds which officials said could threaten the safety of the parachutists.

Pampa police have reported light activity over the weekend.

Under invesitagtion by officers is the theft of an eight-track stereo tape player from an auto belonging to Norman Stone, 1840 Grape.

Stone told officers the player, valued at $200, was taken from the car while it was parked at his home Saturday night. The vehicle was unlocked, officers said.

In other activity, officers are investigating a case of vandalism in which eight windows were broken from a greenhouse at 609 N. Russell.

Police said Bessie Harper, of that address, told them several boys had been throwing rocks at the greenhouse.

Damages were estimated at $40.

The meeting, according to John Gattis and Dick Klein, committee co-chairmen, will be held at Coronado Inn.

The 21 contestants in the beauty pageant also were scheduled to have publicity photographs taken between 2 and 4 o'clock this afternoon.

High-rise or Split-level?

Apartments are still a bargain in many metropolitan areas, at least in terms of the rate at which rents have been increasing. In a comparative study of rents and home-ownership costs during the last 10 years, Property Research Corp. has determined that home-ownership costs in eight major cities increased between 27 and 44 per cent from 1960 to 1969, while rents rose less than 22 per cent in seven of the eight cities. Chart shows comparative increases in Chicago, New York and San Francisco, where median monthly rates for 1969 were $161, $148 and $154, respectively.

Royal Visit Over—Talk Isn't

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The visit to Washington by British royalty is over but the talk isn't.

The score by the American press on the three-day visit of Prince Charles and Princess Anne of Britain which ended Sunday with their return to London appeared to be: Charles passed, Anne failed.

The British press graded the American press and declared its coverage was done by "harpies" and "vicious witches."

Charles impressed Americans with his grace and style, good manners, wry sense of humor and sartorial splendor. In sharp contrast, those who covered the visit of the royal pair saw Anne as sullen, bored and rarely smiling. They didn't see the funloving princess they had expected.

But fond farewells were exchanged on the White House lawn Saturday night after Charles and Anne had watched a baseball game. Charles had talked privately for an hour and 20 minutes with President Nixon and Anne had offered a couple of surprises.

Anne made a surprise visit by limousine to the scene of the 1968 racial violence in the nation's capital, where she photographed some of the burned out buildings still remaining. She also criticized the bald eagle as "rather a bad choice" for the U.S. national emblem.

As their BOAC commercial jet left Dulles International Airport for the overnight flight to London, a British Embassy aide sighed in relief: "It's been a rat race, but I believe they enjoyed themselves."

Earnings Up, But Some Still Not Certain

NEW YORK (UPI)—Corporate earnings reports for the second quarter of this year have been better, generally, than expected. But some analysts believe some rough news may yet be approaching.

The corporate earning report news may yet be approaching, report the Gross National Product had stabilized last week spurred a boost on Wall Street.

The Dow Jones industrial average of 30 selected stocks rose 11.64 points Friday to 735.08. For the week, the average gained a whopping 34.98 points. The UPI market indicator of all stocks climbed 1.65 per cent and the New York Stock Exchange common share price rose 57 cents.

Though observers were pleased with the early corporate reports, analysts such as Monte Gordon of Bache & Co. said it was the usual tendency of companies with the best story to tell to be among the first to report. Many analysts are not convinced the expected overall decline in quarterly earnings would not materialize.

The United Auto Workers (UAW) began negotiations with Detroit's big three automakers last week. Analysts are watching developments closely, though they are not expected to affect the market for some time.

Sheriff's Deputies Investigate Theft

Sheriff's deputies today were investigating the theft of several company checks from Burton Plastics, West of the city on Price Road.

Deputies said someone entered the building through an unlocked door sometime over the weekend and prowled the offices as if looking for money.

A desk drawer was pried open and the blank checks were taken.

THE GAUCHO RIDES HIGH in fashion for Fall '70. Here, a designer interprets this silhouette in his brilliant red gabardine gaucho costume, the skirt cleverly cut to look like the traditional gaucho pants. Reiterating this mood is the short cropped jacket, double-breasted and wide revered to show off a scarf-tied bodice beneath and revealing a wide belt, completely nailhead studded, that was inspired by an authentic antique "charro" belt.

Photographer Makes World Her Subject

NEW YORK (NEA) — On weekdays, Kathy Edwards works at Columbia Baby's Hospital, developing and printing photographic plates for an electron microscope.

On weekends, Kathy indulges her hobby — photography.

There was a time when picture-taking meant snapping photos of mom, dad and the kids. Mostly it was done on holidays. Today, photography is used as a means of communication.

"I try to capture the spirit of flowers, of landscapes and of people," said Kathy, a 25-year-old brownette who started her picture-taking career after attending a photography course three years ago.

"I like to photograph 'my world'," she said, "which is really a mixture of two worlds: One is flowers and landscapes; the other is living, thinking beings. People are becoming more and more attractive as subjects. They have more to.

Photography is a middle-- communicate.

"What I get out of them is a sense of spirit that appeals to me. I photograph only people I like."

ground hobby. It's more creative than stamp collecting but less creative than art.

"But within the limitations of photography," Kathy says, "I try to be as creative as I can.

"What makes a photograph great is composition. And what's needed for composition is to SEE what's there.

"When I first started taking pictures, I would notice only what was there from the results — from looking at an actual photograph. But now I've gotten to the stage where I know exactly what I'm photographing when I'm doing it. And that's the key to good photography — to be in control of things."

Children are one of Kathy's favorite subjects.

"I like the benevolence I see in a child. I try to photograph him at his best, at his most serious, at his happiest.

"What's really rewarding is when other people see the same things I do in a photograph — then I know I'm communicating what I wanted to.

"I showed some friends photographs of their children and they said, 'That's him. You've really captured what he's like.' "

On a windy Sunday in New York's Central Park, Kathy snapped pictures for several hours. Mostly, they were of landscapes and animals.

"People candids are difficult," Kathy explained, "because it's wrong to photograph people without asking their permission — it's their bodies I want to photograph, and I want to ask them first. Sometimes, that will spoil the spontaneity of a shot.

"One time, I was in a children's play yard and I really wanted to snap a few candids, but I didn't because I didn't have permission."

Animal photographs, however, are fair game — if the photographer can get them to stand still long enough to get a good shot.

Kathy waited patiently for a raccoon to squint uncertainly into her lens, for a sheep to peer out through a fence and for a buffalo to show his face. The waiting paid off.

"Each time I take a photograph," said Kathy, "I say to myself, 'Oh, that's going to be terrific.' "

Very often, it is.

Wispy Stole Keeps Chill Off Evening

By JUDY LOVE

Often it's the little things that count. Knit a stole and you'll know that's true. A wispy little wrap like a Summer stole will very likely attract more attention and compliments than a coat that takes twice the time and many times the yarn to knit.

Stoles, after all, have a light, frothy look that is nearly impossible to duplicate in any other knitted garment. And since they fold flat, stoles are perfect travelers. You won't ever have to wait for wrinkles to be shed. So why wait at all? Start right now to knit one or both of the stoles I'm showing today.

The multicolored stole gets its gaiety from rows of looped fringe in five shades set against a solid background, all in Mohair No. 1 yarn. Let your imagination soar and choose a series of contrasting colors or five tones of a single shade from light to dark. This stole is extra long — approximately 88 inches by 12 inches wide, so it's perfect with dresses of any length.

The other stole measures 66 by 18 inches. Its airy look is formed by an open-work pattern in mohair and ribbon. Select just one color for a wrap-around to wear with boldly patterned dresses as well as solids.

A leaflet of knitting instructions for both stoles is available for 50 cents. Write to Stitchin' Time, in care of this newspaper, Radio City Station, Box 503, New York City, N.Y. 10020. Be sure to ask for leaflet S194 and include your name, address and zip code.

stitches is an uncommon direction but it is easy enough to accomplish. Depending on the extent a stitch is to be lengthened, just wind the yarn one or more times around the right needle.

Then, when you work the next row, the loops you've made should be dropped. The stitches can be slipped for a number of rows over the horizontal yarns, and then they can be knitted after two or three rows.

—JUDY LOVE

Knit Knacks

DEAR JUDY — I have just reached a section in a set of knitting instructions calling for lengthening stitches. This is entirely new to me. Can you explain how to do it?

Summer's all wrapped up for knitters. These wispy stoles, photographed at the Sandy Lane Hotel in sunny Barbados, are wonderful vacation travelers.

CHICAGO (UPI)—The scariest thing at the Brookfield Zoo may be a plastic dinosaur.

The Atlantic-Richfield Co. gave its collection of Sinclair Oil dinosaurs away last week and the zoo got a 32-foot-long fiberglass model of a duckbilled dinosaur.

"Zoo officials said they would place the dinosaur "where hidden discovery by the visitors will be sudden and unexpected."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a boy and also a junior in high school. I became friends with a girl who is a senior. She is married and her husband is in the service. We are not serious or anything like that, we are just good friends. The day school let out for vacation, this girl went to be with her husband, but before she left, she gave me a picture of herself, and a very nice I.D. bracelet, which she asked me to wear. I was honored.

When I got home my parents were all upset. My mother wanted me to send the picture back, and the bracelet, too. I am not worried about what my parents or anybody else thinks.

She is a very nice girl, Abby, and I would like to marry someone like her someday, but not her, and not now.

I would greatly value your advice on this touchy and personal subject.

SINCERELY

DEAR SINCERELY: I think you are fascinated by the "friendship" of this senior-type older woman. You may consider her "just a friend," but I suspect you're more than "just a friend" in her view. She's married, and as such she's out of bounds. Your parents are right.

DEAR ABBY: At the age of 21, and should have been old enough to know better, I was trapped into marrying a girl I didn't love. She had a baby five months after we were married and I am about 90 per cent sure this baby is not mine, but there is no way I can prove it.

She was not a very good wife and we didn't get along at all, so we were separated for 13 months, then she had another baby. There is no way this child could be mine, but since I am her legal husband I must support it. She was a bum when I married her and she hasn't changed. I know I'll never live with her, but it's to her advantage to stay legally married to me, so she fights divorce. What should I do?

WESTPORT

DEAR WESTPORT: You need some expert legal advice. It will cost you something, but it'll be worth it.

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps the idea of having a "Mamma Doll" that delivers does not appeal to some mothers of small children, but neither should the concept of lying appeal to them. I was never told that the stork delivered me, and no child of mine will ever be told such nonsense either.

I'm now a sophomore in college and I saw kittens born, calves born and cattle mating — all before I was seven years old, and I didn't go out and "try sex" at the first opportunity.

The child who has been brought up in a home where everything concerning sex is considered taboo and hush-hush is more apt to go out and experiment than the child who has grown up in a home where there is an open and healthy attitude about sex, and has all his questions answered honestly. The child who knows the facts of life will never be in trouble. He will know all about sex, and the consequences.

PAM

in RHODE ISLAND

DEAR ABBY: All mothers know that toys which do only one thing are good for only one day. Take the electric train. How dull it is. But a set of blocks can be a house, a garage, a car, a fort or a plane. An empty box can be anything from a spaceship to a doll house.

A toy, to be educational, should stretch the imagination, therefore a doll that has a baby will soon become as dull as an electric train. Most little girls want to cuddle a baby doll and be "mommies" — not obstetricians.

Your Horoscope

JEANE DIXON

TUESDAY, JULY 21

Your birthday Tuesday: A year of normal personal and spiritual development begins. Outdated property should be examined for possible discard or conversion to more useful forms. You drift away from relationships where the other people are not changing in compatible directions. This is no lasting problem, as nature fills vacuums with better options. Tuesday's natives act most often on impulse or inspiration, attracting general interest.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are rushed enough to make errors that are hard to straighten out. Your own temptation is toward over enthusiasm. Put in a sound day's work, and relax early.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your intuition must make some choices; which direction to go, what to do first. Act rather than talk. The evening brings good cheer.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Conflict between home and work continues with a minor decision having to be made without notice. A moment of reflection makes all the difference.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Mixed reactions to you are common Tuesday. Pay little heed to what people say, and more to what they do. Your imagination searches the bizarre and the extreme, where there are a few creative ideas.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your expansiveness on material things leaves you vulnerable to another appeal hard to resist. Decide according to what is important to you—and stick with your decision.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It is likely you are out of step with your friends and neighbors. Instead of being demanding, look to see what can be done to bridge the differences.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Where you lack agreement, wait; but go ahead promptly on everything you are sure about. Your energy and initiative are admired, eventually rewarded.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can ask minor favors with good chance of success. See that your creative efforts achieve notice. There should be something to celebrate in the evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your earnings and prospects improve now. Do something on all your projects. Make additional plans in the evening, as several contingencies are likely soon.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Expect little from friends and relatives, but remain tactful. There may be some nice surprises Tuesday. You are on your way into more pleasant times.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your status is up for improvement Tuesday if you use initiative and tact. Your tendency to drift into administrative attitudes may hinder you somewhat.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): It should be a routine day; nothing much to watch for beyond your temptation to speak without thinking. Romantic interests come suddenly alive.

Some Medicines Demand Controlled Environment

The atmosphere around us has become a very popular topic and air pollution, ecology, etc., have thus become very familiar terms. In a pharmacy, we have always been especially concerned with the close control of the environment because so many of the medicines we stock are susceptible to atmospheric changes.

Just as changes in heat, light, cold, humidity, most definitely effect our normal way of living, so too can they effect the life cycle or potency of a great many drugs. As a pharmacist, we must know how to best protect every medicine so that when it reaches the patient, it is ready to perform as the doctor intends.

Hollywood In Review

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —Bill Melendez is a native of Mexico who transfers the delightful "Peanuts" characters from Charles Schulz's comic strip to celluloid frames for motion pictures and television.

To accomplish this Melendez must believe in Charlie Brown, Linus, Schroeder, Lucy, Snoopy and the rest as if they were real people. He does.

"A Boy Named Charlie Brown" is currently playing theaters in nine cities and soon will be seen in more. Melendez and a crew of 45 artists are already at work on a second feature cartoon, "Snoopy Come Home."

Wearing a crewcut and a full mustache, Melendez is an engaging man possessed of enormous respect and admiration for Schulz.

"Sparky—that's Schulz's nickname—oversees everything we do down here," Melendez said. "He doesn't want us to get away from the basic personalities and philosophies of the Peanuts characters.

"I find myself analyzing the characters all the time. And I feel I know them very well.

"Charlie Brown is my favorite. He isn't the wishy-washy guy he lets on to be. He's interested in other people and their problems."

Though Charlie may be close to Melendez's heart, it is Snoopy who occupies much of his time. Melendez is the voice of Snoopy in the television and movie adventures of the charming little gang.

"Snoopy is an abstract dog," Melendez said.

"We couldn't have a voice for him in the literal sense. So I got a tape recorder and made noises into it—yawns, barks and a little cussing—and then I sped up the tape.

"The result is an unreal quality. In the strip you can read his thoughts, but that's not suitable for him."

Melendez says he and others who work on Peanuts projects often suggest ideas for Schulz to use in the cartoon strip. The cartoonist praises them, but never incorporates the ideas in his strip.

"He has too much pride and integrity to do it any other way," said Melendez, who produces and directs the animated versions of Schulz's troupe.

A onetime Disney employe, Melendez said it takes as much as a year and a half to complete a cartoon efature. complete a cartoon feature.

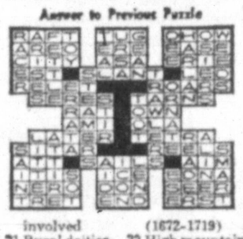

"That's fast," he said. "At Disney it sometimes took four years because they would fiddle around with the story line, or drop a project for a while and then return to it.

"Cartooning is the last industry where everything is done by hand." There are no mechanics to it. We photograph each frame of film individually. You can't afford to pay much attention to detail or you'll go broke.

"Peanuts is a success because it reflects Schulz's integrity in demonstrating human relations in humorous terms. The strip satisfies adult logic, appeals to kids—and it's amusing to everybody."

Martin Accused Of Campaigning With Tax Money

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (UPI) — Edward M. Yturri, Republican candidate for attorney general, Saturday accused the incumbent Democratic office-holder of printing campaign literature at state expense.

Yturri said a lengthy pamphlet about Attorney General Crawford Martin has been for use in Martin's re-election campaign.

"It can't avoid looking like dirty pool when Mr. Martin waits until the last few months of a re-election campaign to have the state print pamphlets calling Martin a 'grass roots Texan,' and 'the people's lawyer,'" Yturri said in a statement released by his Corpus Christi office.

"This is an outright attempt to abuse the power of his office and to use the tax dollars of all citizens for his political advantage," the GOP contender said.

Yturri said the booklet contains a biographical sketch of Martin and the job he has done as attorney general.

"The lengthy booklet goes on to explain the function of the attorney general's office—something which no previous attorney general of Texas ever deemed necessary," Yturri said.

"The people of Texas would be better served if Martin spent less of the people's money on campaign literature and concerned himself with providing fair law enforcement to all the citizens of Texas," said Yturri, a Corpus Christi lawyer.

Scientist Killed At Arctic Station

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A civilian scientist has been shot and killed under unknown conditions while working on a Navy research ice station floating in the Arctic Ocean, the Defense Department said Friday.

A Pentagon spokesman said Bennie Lightsy of Louisville, Ky.,—who acted as ice station leader in addition to his research duties—was fatally wounded Thursday but word of the shooting was not received until the ice station made radio contact with the Alaskan mainland Friday morning.

Lightsy was an employe of the Environmental Sciences Service Administration (ESSA).

"Circumstances surrounding the incident are unclear, since the only person apparently present at the time of the incident is in a state of shock and is heavily sedated," a Defense Department spokesman said.

He declined to name the other man involved because "we don't have complete information . . . (and) because of possible legal consideration."

The spokesman said radio contact with the ice station was "sporadic" because of atmospheric conditions. He said the only way to reach the station was by air and, at this time, no flights are scheduled until September.

The ice station, also known as T-3 and Fletcher's Ice Island, is home for 19 civilian scientists and support personnel studying the Arctic environment. Research has been conducted there since World War II.

It is about three miles wide, one mile across and floats in circles off the Alaskan coast. Its present location is about 950 miles northeast of Barrow, Alaska, and about 310 miles from Ellsmere Island, Canada.

Circus Vet Walks Over Georgia Gorge

TALLULAH FALLS Ga. (UPI)—Karl Wallenda, chewing a piece of candy, walked briskly across a high wire suspended 700 feet above jagged rocks and trees in Tallulah Gorge Saturday—pausing once to stand on his head to the amazement of thousands of spectators.

Wallenda's walk took only 17 minutes—he started at 3:10 p.m.—and when he stepped safely onto a catwalk on the far side, a crowd estimated at 25,000 cheered "unbelievable," and "fantastic."

About 250 feet out onto the taut cable, Wallenda placed a 45-pound balancing pole down on the wire, steadied himself with his hands, and stood on his head, gazing down at the jagged bottom of the deep gorge.

Wallenda wore a gold shirt, maroon trousers with a gold stripe, and brown moccasin-type shoes. He walked briskly, seemingly without effort.

The walk had been expected to take him about 40 minutes.

Gov. Lester Maddox decided at the last minute to attend the walk and told Wallenda he had prayed for his safety.

Wallenda was put on a stretcher after the walk and was to be taken for an examination by physicians. But his wife ran up to the stretcher as it approached a ceremonial platform and urged Wallenda to "Get up and walk. Get up and walk."

Wallenda got up and walked to the platform where Maddox presented him a plaque in commemoration of the feat.

On the eve of the walk, Wallenda said when it was over, all he wanted was a giant martini. Someone handed him a large glass filled with liquid and ice cubes after the walk.

Wallenda grinned broadly, took the glass and drank deeply, then grimaced and said "Phooey. This is ice water."

'ACHIEVEMENTS OVERLOOKED'

Doctor Says Migrant Health Problem Often Overdramatized

EDINBURG, Tex. (UPI)—The director of four migrant health programs and three county health departments in the Lower Rio Grande Valley of Texas says he is concerned a survey of migrant health conditions may overdramatize problems and underemphasize progress.

"There are many problems to be solved in the migrant health field but there have been many achievements as well and I fear they could be overlooked," said Dr. John Copenhaver.

Copenhaver heads migrant health projects in Hidalgo, Cameron, Willacy and Starr counties—home for some 85,000 migrant agricultural workers—mostly Mexican-American — when they are not traveling the country.

The doctor said he personally believed the health conditions in the ghettoes of some major metropolitan areas were often worse than those found in the "coolnias" — unincorporated rural settlements populated by migrants.

"I don't think conditions down here are any way comparable to the ghettoes of the cities," said Coepnhaver.

Full testimony of a survey of migrant health conditions taken by a team of doctors working under auspices of the field foundation will be made public at a two-day hearing of the Senate subcommittee on migratory labor starting Monday. Subcommittee Chairman Sen. Walter Mondale, D-Minn., said he was "shocked and outraged" by the preliminary reports.

The doctors said they found a shocking picture of health among migrants" in Texas. They said they found a "high incidence" of parasitic diseases among children in Texas migrant camps.

Copenhaver said it was no secret the migrants—with a very mobile population, little education and often suspicious of outside interference even when well-intentioned—had unusually difficult health problems.

He said he could not pass judgment on the field foundation's findings until he read the full report.

He cautioned the report might overdramatize. He said he heard one doctor with the survey say they found 28 previously undetected cases of infectious TB. But Copenhaver said further investigation showed only two or three of those were actually infectious and all but two were known to the health department.

He said he believed the survey lasted three days and examined 1,000 persons.

"In spite of the emphasis placed on education during this period the need for improvement is evidenced by continuing low immunization rates, high birthrates, evidences of vitamin deficiences, improper diets and other deficiences for which a remedy is easily available without cost," he wrote in a year-end report on migrant programs ending May 31.

"Repeated surveys directed at determining why migrants do not take advantage of these services indicate that fear, superstition and, reluctance to change an established custom are frequently involved."

Few colonias have running water or sewage facilities although nearly all have electricity. Some communities are forming rural water systems but many still reject suggestions to boil or chlorinate their water.

While many are eligible for low-cost government housing, he noted, they apparently fear possible foreclosure on a mortgage and would rather not chance it.

TWO-CENT SLUGS

HEXTABLE, England (UPI) —Officials at a research farm have offered local children two cents for each slug they bring in alive. Colin Hargrave, one of the researchers, said there is a shortage of slugs because of recent dry weather. He offered to provide wooden spatulas to anyone squeamish about picking up the slugs.

Send the whole team to the showers!

And have enough hot water left to do the uniforms.
A GAS WATER HEATER does it all, and does it better, because with gas there's always plenty of hot water when you need it . . . at the cost you want.
Here are seven reasons why a gas water heater is best:
1. Fast recovery keeps your gas water heater way ahead of every demand.
2. The thermostat on your gas water heater automatically maintains a constant temperature, even when you use large amounts of hot water.
3. Gas is efficient. Gas burners start up instantly, deliver more heat to the water. And gas is clean too.
4. Nothing is more dependable than gas.
5. Automatic gas water heaters cost less to buy and install.
6. Gas burners last longer and give years of trouble-free use. That's another saving.
7. Gas costs so little to operate that you can afford to use all the hot water you want.
So, if it's hot water you need, and plenty of it, you need an automatic gas water heater. Call your plumber or gas appliance dealer soon.

Tigers Take 5th Straight Victory To Move Within 3 Of Baltimore

By VITO STELLINO
UPI Sports Writer

The surging Detroit Tigers swept a doubleheader from the Kansas City Royals, 2-0 and 6-4, Sunday for their fifth straight victory and 16th in their last 21st to move within three games of the Baltimore Orioles in the Eastern Division. The Orioles lost the second game to Chicago White Sox, 7-3, after winning the first, 8-2.

Tiger Manager Mayo Smith beamed after the sweep. "We've got a good chance to catch the Orioles. Our pitching has come around and it's impossible to play as well as the Orioles did last year two years in a row."

Baltimore was behind, 4-0, when Manager Earl Weaver was ejected for protesting a called ball by Umpire Lou DiMuro and Chicago stayed in charge as Duane Josephson collected four straight hits and drove in two runs. In the first game, Jim Palmer pitched a seven-hitter and drove in two of Baltimore's five runs with a single and an infield out. Solo homers by Merv Rettenmund, Ellie Hendricks and Brooks Robinson provided the other runs.

The pitching of reliever Tom Timmerman, called up from Toledo earlier this year, continued to be the main reason for the Tiger surge. He saved both games of the doubleheader against the Royals, retiring the final three batters in the first game and pitching two innings of the second game.

Highlights Eighth Inning

Don Wert's two-run double highlighted a six-run eighth inning in the second game for Detroit, while Joe Niekro and Timmerman pitched a three-hitter in the opener.

In other games, California beat New York twice, 5-2 and 3-1, Cleveland topped Minnesota, 3-1, Boston beat Oakland, 9-4, and Washington edged Milwaukee, 4-3.

In the National League, Pittsburgh beat Cincinnati, 7-3, St. Louis nipped Atlanta, 3-1, Chicago topped Houston, 7-1, San Francisco beat New York, 5-3, but lost the second game, 7-6, in 10 innings, Philadelphia topped Los Angeles twice, 9-4 and 4-2, and San Diego beat Montreal, 6-5, then lost the second game by the identical 6-5, margin.

California's sweep moved the Angels to within 3½ games of Minnesota in the Western Division, while New York's two losses dropped the Yanks 6½ games behind the Orioles in the East.

Keys Four-Run Rally

Alex Johnson's two-run double, a liner off the glove of Bobby Murcer in center field, keyed the Angels' four-run raly in the sixth inning of the opener. In the second game, Ken McMullen drove in all three runs with a two-run homer and a single.

Rankin Captures Jaycee Tourney With 209 Total

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio (UPI) —Judy Rankin had it pegged right when she said it would take a 70 or below on the final round to win the $20,000 LPGA Jaycee Open.

Her five-under-par 68 Sunday gave her a 54-hole total 209 for the championship and the $3,000 first prize.

Mrs. Rankin's torrid closing round over the 6,400-yard Northwood Hills Country Club course included an eagle and a birdie on putts of 30 and six feet.

Mrs. Rankin said she was happy to win, but disliked beating Miss Holbert on the way. "Because of me she started to play out there (in the tour)," explained Judy.

The victory was Mrs. Rankin's second this year.

In third place with Miss Carner were Jo Ann Prentice and Jan Ferraris. Tied for sixth with 216s were Kathy Whitworth, Carole Skala and Betsy Rawls.

Further down the list with 219s were Marilyn Smith, Shirley Englehorn and Pam Austin.

Southern Stars Win Tournament

The Southern All-Stars won the Youth League All-Star Baseball Tournament Saturday with a 4-2 victory over the North.

South reached the finals with an 8-2 conquest of West Thursday.

North nipped East, 6-5, Thursday and crushed West, 10-5, Friday.

Team no. 7 defeated no. 8 Friday to win the Farm League City Tournament, 17-9.

In other recent action, Carmichael-Whatley won the Youth League championship.

Rozelle Seeks Bargaining Talks

NEW YORK (UPI) —With no settlement of the pro football contract dispute in site, Commissioner Pete Rozelle has made the next move by inviting representatives of both the owners and players to the bargaining table today.

Rozelle, thus far, has officially stayed out of the dispute, claiming it's a mattec between the owners and the players. The commissioner has labored unofficially behind the scenes to bring about some kind of settlement, but to no avail.

The impasse in negotiations over a new contract is seriously threatening the annual College All-Star game set for July 31 in Chicago. The All-Stars, except for a one-day strike to show their support of the players, have been practicing for over a week but their opponents, the Kansas City Chiefs, have been unable to hold any workout because of the owners' lockout of all veterans until the dispute is settled.

Rozelle admitted he did not know if the owners or players would accept his invitation to meet today. Many owners were expected to be here today in preparation for the meeting Tuesday which they had scheduled to review their position and comment on the actions of their negotiating committee.

The players are attempting to get what they think is their share of the projected $10 to $13 million-a-year increase in the new television contracts Rozelle has signed for the teams. Both sides have different versions of what that share is since the owners claim the players want $11 million over what they've been offered over a four year period while the players say the figure is only $7.8 million over the owners' current offer.

If no further progress in the talks is made by Wednesday, the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service is scheduled to call representatives of both parties to Washington for a negotiating session. The players have asked the federal body to intervene.

Casper Triumphs

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—Billy Casper has a message for a lady motorist who couldn't get her car started while he was trying to make a shot Sunday in the $150,000 Philadelphia golf Classic.

He got started even if she didn't, and as a result is $30,000 richer today by virtue of his three-stroke victory over little-known pro Terry Wilcox in the 72-hole tourney at the Whitemarsh Valley Country Club.

Casper, this year's Masters champion, had trouble getting in gear on the front nine. He recovered on the back nine to card a four-under-par 68 and a 14-under-par total of 274 to win going away from Wilcox, his playing partner, who finished with a 69 to a 277.

Richard Crawford, who started the day tied with Wilcox two strokes back of Casper, had a one-under-par 71 to tie with Frank Beard and Bunky Henry at 279.

Bob Murphy, the 1968 Classic Champion, was at 280 after a final-round 68 while Bruce Devlin, Jerry Heard, Charles Coody and Deane Beman were at 281.

Gene Littler, Dave Marr and Miller Barber finished with a 282 while five other players were at 283. Dave Hill, the defending champion, was among six at 284.

Casper's 14-under-par for the 72-hole tourney was a record for the eight-year-old Classic and enabled him to pass Jack Nicklaus and take over second place on the all-time money list with $1,085,372.

Casper also became the tour's only three-time winner this year, having won the Los Angeles Open prior to a playoff victory over Littler in the Masters.

Casper said he was bothered somewhat on the front nine by photographers and then on the seventh hole, which is located near some houses and a road, a woman was trying to get her car started. "Every time I started to laugh later. "Three times I started to swing, she was trying to start her car." Casper said with a started to swing and three times she tried to start the car." He didn't know whether she ever did get it started.

ALTHOUGH Spiro Agnew attracts attention on golf courses because his errant shots have been known to hit people in the head, Dave Hill (right) hasn't been able to attract much attention despite $156,423 in winnings last year. Then—like Agnew?—he became a critic.

Not Easy To Be No .2; Ask Agnew, Dave Hill

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK (NEA) — It is not easy to be No. 2 and unnoticed. Ask Avis. Ask Agnew. Ask Dave Hill.

All have been in secondary positions, and all have done some crowing to let the sun shine on them a little, too.

Avis has been so persistent that it hurts. And the vice-president has been making such a commotion that a phrase has crept into the language, "No news is Agnew." And until the recent U.S. Open, the fame of last year's second-lending money winner on the golf tour was not worth a hill of beans.

When you rounded up a photo layout of unknown golfers, you pick a Gibby Gilbert and a DeWitt Weaver and a Ron Cerrudo and a Dave Hill. In fact, outside of Palmer Nicklaus Player Casper Trevino Snead, the only other household golfing words in America are Hogan and Hagen and Bobby Jones.

Hill's comments lately, bitingly funny, have caused him to be fined and, possibly more important, headlined.

After playing the second round of the Open, he criticized the Hazeltine golf course and the course architect. He said the course lacked "eighty acres of corn and some cows." And Robert Trent Jones, the architect, was noted thusly: "The man who designed the course had the blueprints upside down."

Hill was fined $150 by golf commissioner Joe Dey for these "rude" remarks. The following week, in the Cleveland Open, Hill was more tactful about the course, but equally critical.

Before, Hill was nationally anonymous. This despite having been on the tour for some 10 years and, last year, having won three tournaments and $156,423, second only to Frank Beard. (Beard, himself, was not exactly the successor to Bobby Jones in newspaper headlines until he wrote a book, "Pro," the diary of the 1969 tour which turned out to be somewhat controversial.)

Hill complained before the Open; "The only time you (reporters) see me is when I'm leading. It bugs me. I can play better than most.

"A couple of times I've been a playing partner of Billy Casper — the Masters champion — and we haven't attracted enough spectators to put in a Greybound bus.

"When a golf tournament comes to a town, you headline that Palmer won't be there. Or Nicklaus won't be there. You don't write about who will be there."

And on the last day of the Open, before he teed off next to last, since he was second (second, again) to the leader, Tony Jacklin, he said, "There won't be much traffic going home tonight because Nicklaus and Palmer went off early."

But it wasn't altogether true. His remarks had attracted a large gallery. And they might from hereon. He was booed and mooed, and he was taunted with "cornfield" comments and someone else rang a cowbell.

Hill laughed and said later,

"I had more fun out there than anybody. Aren't you supposed to have fun?"

Like many who are No. 2, though, Hill at other times tried to assume an air of "What, me worry?" and so he would contradict himself. "I avoid people. I'm not that friendly," he said. "And I'd rather play alone, with no one following me around. My business is simply to bead down a golf ball. And that I can do."

Now, Hill has received national notoriety despite being No. 2. His sarcasm bought what $156,423 could not.

The Pampa News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

The News believes each and every person would get more satisfaction in the long run if he were permitted to spend what he earns on a volunteer basis rather than having part of it distributed involuntarily.

Memorize Or Fail

In an interview in U.S. News and World Report, Los Angeles psychiatrist William Glasser calls the alarming rise in youthful delinquency, violence and drug use not a moral crisis but a failure crisis.

"These young people we are hearing so much about—the ones who run away, shoot heroin, engage in violence and sexual promiscuity are failing in important areas of their lives," says Glasser.

One of those important areas is classroom achievement, he says, and one of the reasons for failure here is that so much of our educational system is a process of rote learning of facts which have no relevance, or are given no relevance, to a child's own experience and interests and needs.

Bright kids, or those with solid backgrounds at home, can survive this process. They can memorize the thousands of things that have to be memorized, even though they think it is ridiculous.

But for over 50 per cent of children, who have trouble memorizing facts and spouting them out again at the teacher's request, school is failure. If they are not lucky enough to have a strong feeling of intrinsic self-worth gained at home, they are going to give up—often as early as grade school.

For once, an expert is not calling for more money for education. The "schools without failure" of which Glasser speaks would actually save much of the money we now spend on failures.

He cites a school for delinquent girls in Ventura, Calif., which has operational costs of $7,000 a year for each girl. By contrast, a good public school system may spend only $1,000 a year per child and a poor system as little as $400.

In what may strike many as heresy, Glasser would abolish memorization tasks entirely for all important examinations.

To say that a child understands the American Constitution because he has memorized the Preamble and a few other parts is silly," he says, "unless he also knows what the Constitution means."

There is much to be said for memorization, of course. The more basic facts and knowledge tools, such as the multiplication table or the spelling of commonly used words, which a student has at his "memory-tips," the easier it is for him to progress into really solid learning.

At an education exhibition in Los Angeles recently, a group of high school students held a mock funeral for "Old Man Education." On their placards, "lectern" was spelled "Lecturn," "separate" was spelled "Seperate," and "outdated" was "out-dated." High school students should know how to spell these words.

Yet this is what dictionaries are for, and no student should be penalized because he can't spell like a whiz or rattle off the answer to "9x6." The important thing is to know how to use a dictionary or mathematical table or slide rule in the solving of problems.

We have a long way to go, however, before "Old Man Education" is finally buried and "schools without failure" become a reality.

Despite all our advances in modernizing education, a lot of it is still an obsolete matter of teaching kids to "dance to the tune of a hickory stick."

Trouble Of The Railroads

As a nation we have been absorbed in recent years with the exciting frontiers of travel and the survival of small businesses faced with critical economic times.

The bankruptcy of the Penn Central Railroad reminds us that basics of transportation and the welfare of large corporations also must be of national concern.

Problems of the railroads have not been unexpected totally. Most of the railroads have been in financial trouble at least since World War II. The problem was dramatized a few decades ago with the startling news that a hog could travel across the U.S. of America without changing trains, but a human could not. Each of the recent presidents has sincerely tried to get some movement toward solution of the problem. In short, much time has been wasted and the Penn Central issue shows that we have little time to squander.

Roots of the rail problem are not difficult to see. They lie in the morass of government restrictions and outright subsidies for waste.

Featherbedding by labor—use of employes for which there is no need—has become synonymous with trains. Management of the railroads often has been inadequate. Most passenger trains are uncomfortable, inconvenient and depressing. Personal services are costly and inefficiently rendered. Finally, the increasing competition of truck and aircraft transportation has intensified every one of the railroad's problems.

Despite this, the fact remains that rails are one of the most efficient and economical methods of moving people and goods — if they're operated properly.

Also, the need for efficient trains will become even greater as population increases, and as the battle to control pollution of our environment becomes more intense.

This has been the experience of most other major nations in the world. The Soviet Union and Communist China actually measure their progress toward modernization in miles of rail lines added. Japan would become immobilized without trains. Britain, Austria and West Germany find them popular, even among tourists. Yet the California Zephyr is discontinued, even as the Flying Scotsman gains patrons.

The tremors after the bankruptcy of the Penn Central Railroad will give rise to talk of further restrictions, government intervention, subsidies and artificial controls over the business of the nation's basic transportation.

These should be resisted. This is in a large measure the problem rather than the answer.

The real answer is to find a way to move railroads toward genuine strength in a free and competitive economy.

H. L. Hunt Writes

WRITE A BEST-SELLER

There is no subject for a book, article or speech as timely today as the subject of fighting crime. Each and every instance of reducing crime would be a boon to humanity and a major achievement toward preserving our Republic USA.

Whoever will write a book on the subject may open a best-seller. Any article or speech aimed at informing the public about crime and arousing the majority from their apathy will make a definite contribution to society.

Anyone contemplating writing a book or article could get the help of eight or 10 friends or acquaintances who would watch for helpful magazine and newspaper accounts relating incidents which could contribute two, three or more paragraphs to a 192-page book on crime which would prove to be both profitable and beneficial to mankind and Republic USA.

LIFE LINE publications and other good sources can provide invaluable assistance for any writer or speaker on the subjects of crime and communism. Up to now there has been no prospect of slowing down the crime wave. The public is becoming aroused to the dangers of crime and will eagerly welcome suggestions of ways to stop the escalation of crime.

Criminals must not be allowed to destroy the fabric of our personal enterprise, individual initiative, profit-motive system and leave Republic USA ripe and ready to fall into communist or anarchist hands.

With Some Reservation

By INJUN WOODY

One of my brothers-in-law is a Chickasaw (Injun, that is). He went to see that self-proclaimed upholder of the despondent and downtrodden, Sen. Harris of Oklahoma.

"About this here payment for our land," says Chicky, "when do you think they are going to pay it?"

"We know the government owes it to you," says Harris.

"Well, then," goes on Chicky, "when are you going to pay it?"

"You know, the legislation process is slow and ardous, and it takes a long time. It must go through the court of claims and the house and the senate and appropriations committees, and the court of appeals, and....."

"But it has already been through all those. When are you going to appropriate the money and pay it?" says Chicky.

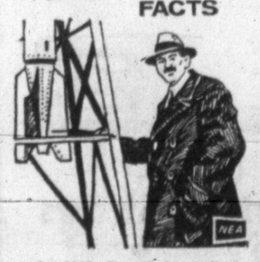

Harris says, "Just getting the appropriation is not enough. We have to check the individual tribal rolls, and listen to the lobbyists and appropriate the money. It takes a long time."

Chicky says, "It has been a long time, alright. In fact, it has been 100 years. That would seem time enough to me. I would like to ask you a question — how long did it take to appropriate 100 million dollars to send to Peru?"

"About a week. But....."

"I know," says Chicky, "we have to get the money to that General Velasco quick so he can rebuild the country and get on with his revolution."

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

In 1909, Dr. Robert Goddard envisioned multiple rockets, manned and unmanned probes to the planets with return to earth, a manned moon station and use of ion and solar propulsion. The World Almanac notes that Goddard demonstrated the practicality of rockets March 16, 1926, at Auburn, Mass., by launching the first liquid fuel rocket 184 feet in 2.5 seconds.

The Lady Is Blind?

STRAIGHT TALK:

Is It True That As Church Goes, So Goes The Nation?

By TOM ANDERSON

"Comes the revolution" and the fighting in the streets is for keeps, don't forget who is mainly responsible: not the students. The chief culprits, in case you want to go "hunting," are the preachers and teachers.

Ultra-leftist professor Harvey Cox of the Harvard Divinity School, a leader of the "Theology of Revolution," brags that a "few thousand" hard core revolutionaries are moving into key posts in churches, seminaries, and interreligious groups.

The Chicago Tribune reported that the Interreligious Foundation for Community Organization (IFCO) had "donated thousands of dolalrs to black militant groups throughout the nation." The Tribune article stated that a police investigation revealed that of $855,831 disbursed by IFCO during the past 2½ years, 83 percent went to groups involved in militant or disruptive activities.

According to the Tribune, $64,341 in IFCO funds went to the Los Angeles Black Congress, which has taken part in high school demonstrations, walkouts, and other disruptions. $44,000 went to the United Community Organizations in Cincinnati, Ohio, which is similar to the Black Congress. $20,000 went to the Garfield Organization in Chicago. Several officers in the Garfield Organization were charged with conspiracy to commit burglary, arson and looting during the rioting there in 1968.

The Chicago Tribune identified the church groups which support IFCO as: "American Baptist Home Missions Society; Board of Homeland Ministries of the (United) Church of Christ; Board of Missions of the Methodist Church; American Missions of the Methodist Church; Board of National Missions of the United Presbyterian Church; Executive Council of the Episcopal Church; General Board of Social Concerns of the Methodist Church; American Jewish Committee; Catholic Committee for Urban Ministry; National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice; and Foundation for Voluntary Service."

This is not the first time "mission" funds have been used for revolutionary activity under direction of the National Council of Churches. The "Delta Ministry" project, which whipped up racial tensions in the Mississippi Delta, was sponsored and largely financed by the Division of Home Missions of the Ncc, according to the minutes from the General Board of the NCC meeting February 25-28, 1964.

The Associated Press has reported: "A study committee of the National Council of Churches has reported that violence is an acceptable tool for use by victims of injustice."

Does this mean that it is acceptable, for instance, to tar and feather members of Congress who voted for the "civil rights," bill, and for our present tax laws?

On July 12, 1964, the Reverend Eugene J. Boyle, Chaplain of the Catholic Interracial Council in San Francisco, challenged Catholics to support civil rights demonstrations and to engage in civil disobedience.

As Dan Smoot has reported: "In the early 1960's when Martin Luther King, Jr. was preaching and violently demonstrating civil disobedience throughout the South, men of the cloth from all over the nation — Catholic, Protestant, Jew — flocked to the spectacle of ordained ministers marching through southern cities chanting "to hell with the law."

On Jan. 9, 1967, it was announced that Roman Catholic and Protestant clergymen in New York had invited Saul D. Alinsky to help organize slum dwellers for rent strikes, picketing, sit-ins and political agitation. Churches have hired Alinsky (with church funds totaling hundreds of thousands of dollars) to organize mob violence in numerous cities. Some of the worst Negro insurrections have occurred where Alinsky has worked — Detroit, Rochester, Chicago, for example. Alinsky, a self-styled professional radical from Chicago, teaches class warfare in undisguised Marxism language.

A top official of the United Church of Christ has proclaimed: "Revolution is our business!"

As the church goes, so goes the nation.

Question Box

(We invite questions on economics and the proper function of government which will not injure anyone.)

QUESTION: — Why is it when a new president or other high official is elected, he fires all the old help and hires new people? Does that mean the old help was no good, or is he paying off his election help?

ANSWER: — There are few positions which are not blanketed under civil service, either in the national or state government. Usually, the persons replaced are at Cabinet level, and they are close advisers to the newly elected executive. It is only natural that an executive should want to have people who are of the same or similar philosophy in positions of responsibility to carry out his administrative decisions.

Actually, nearly every new president or governor complains that his administration is hamstrung by having middle and lower level officials and employes who disagree with the administration policy and who do not carry out the decisions.

The Doctor Says

By DR. W. G. BRANDSTADT

Blood Test Best Means Of Detecting Syphilis

(First of Two Related Columns)

Q—What are the symptoms of syphilis?

A — In men, a hard painless chancre, usually on the penis, occurs from 10 to 90 days after the exposure. This is the primary lesion. In women, it usually occurs deep in the vagina and, since it is painless, the diagnosis in the primary stage is rarely made.

About six weeks after appearance of the chancre in untreated cases, there is an eruption that may be similar to that of measles. It is accompanied by painless superficial erosions of the mucous lining of the mouth and in women the vagina. This is the secondary stage.

In many victims, these two stages are not diagnosed and no treatment is given. There is a latent period of 10 to 20 years during which the causative germ lies dormant in the tissues. After that the late manifestations, which may involve any part of the body except the teeth, occur. These are so varied and so likely to simulate other diseases that the diagnosis may be missed again unless a blood test is made.

Q— Twenty years ago I had syphilis. I was treated and told that I was cured but my blood test is still positive. My doctor says it will always be positive. Is this true? Should I have more treatment?

A—In most cases, prompt adequate treatment will cause the blood test to return to negative but in a few cases, the test remains positive in spite of the fact that the victim is cured. If you have no reason to suspect that you have been reinfected, no further treatment is needed.

Q—Is it possible to get a veneral disease from heavy petting?

A—In the secondary stage of syphilis the disease may be transmitted by kissing.

Q—Could a person get both syphilis and gonorrhea from the same exposure? If so, will the same drug cure both?

A — Gonorrhea often masks the early symptoms of syphilis acquired through the same exposure. Prompt treatment with penicillin usually cures both diseases.

Q —Since there is no blood test for gonorrhea, how is it detected?

A —The diagnosis is usually made by examining a smear of the discharge under the microscope and identifying the gonococcus.

Inside Washington

Rep. Wyman Assails Attacker Of Defenseless Agnew

ROBERT ALLEN

WASHINGTON — For some unexplained reason it wasn't reported, but Senator J. William Fulbright was scathingly tongue-lashed on the floor of the Hosue of Representatives.

The unusual castigation was administered by Representative Louis Wyman, R-N.H., one of the most outspoken members of Congress.

Under congressional rules, members are barred from speaking disparagingly about one another. Wyman skilfully didn't violate that tradition. He kept within the bounds of parliamentary propriety. But while doing so, the scrappy New Englander pulled no punches.

Fulbright was excoriated with unsparing harshness and bluntness.

Inferentially, his intelligence and responsibility were caustically questioned.

Following is a sample of Wyman's blast:

"When the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee calls the Vice President of the United States an 'upstart' and talks of suggested 'McCarthyism,' all can see the depths of the infection of intellectual myopia that prevails in the legislative branch."

Fulbright's furiously contemptuous and slurring attack on Vice President Agnew was the cause of Wyman's wrath. He was particluarly indignant because he felt Fulbright had taken an unfair advantage of Agnew by assailing him on the Senate floor where he is barred from speaking.

So Wyman, while nominally observing congressional decorum, denounced the dovish chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee with unconcealed harshness and scorn.

WHAT HE SAID — "The President's strongly anti-Communist stands," said Wyman, "and his firm commitment to a position of U.S. strength in the conduct of foreign affairs backed by a continuing military defense capability, have invited attack from intellectuals of liberal persuasion of whom the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee fancies himself a spokesman.

"To call the Vice President a McCarthyite upstart, because of his efforts to reconstitute our people's rightful pride in America's goal of helping smaller nations remain free from the terror and slavery of Communist aggression and to stand firm at home against the violence-prone in our society, is to evidence a myopia that apparently has become a serious malady in high places.

"God save the United States should the myopic permissiveness of such men ever control U.S. foreign policy. It has had far too much influence upon it to date. America must stay strong, be of good faith and in common faith adhere to the principles of which the Vice President so ably speaks."

As secretary of the late Senate Republican Leader Styles Bridges, N.H., Wyman is well acquainted with Fulbright from first-hand experience. The Arkansan has long been no "hero" to Wyman.

The latter, a former state attorney general, one-time counsel of the Senate Committee on Campaign Expenditures, and former chairman of the American Bar Association Standing Committee on Jurisprudence and Law Reform, Considers Fulbright "highly overrated."

Surprisingly, Fulbright was sharply rebuked by the militantly liberal and strongly dovish Washington Post for his intemperate remarks about Agnew.

One of the paper's "pets," Fulbright is usually given admiringly favorable consideration and display. But in a forceful editorial, the Post reproved him as talking unworthy nonsense and dangerous absurdities. Said the unexpected condemnation:

"We would suggest that Senator Fulbright be careful about his analogy because it is quite impossible to liken Mr. Agnew to Dr. Goebbels without suggesting a lot of other things we can't really believe a man of Senator Fulbright's scholarship and sophistication really means to suggest.

"It disturbs me — and a lot of other people — when it (McCarthyism) appears in any form..... (such as) Senator Fulbright's absurd and malicious implications of an analogy between this Administration and Hitler's Germany."

VIEWPOINT

Idealism Befits President

By ROBERT WISCHMEYER
NEA Staff Writer

The terms one hears and reads most often in descriptions of President Nixon are "practical," "pragmatic" and "political." Rarely is "idealistic" used when this unglamorous man is discussed.

But some remarks he made to 14,0000 Jaycees at their St. Louis convention indicate that idealism, while not predominant, is nevertheless a part of his make-up.

Nixon dwelled first on the theme of "what is good for America," recognizing that Jaycees are active-businessman types who do not generally emphasize the negative aspects of our society. So he struck a responsive chord with his audience and it gave him some of the warmest applause he has received since becoming President.

Nixon then took considerable speaking time on three areas of concern to his administration: race relations, crime and respect for law, and the generation gap.

Regarding race relations, the President commented: "Here government can pass laws. Government can enforce laws. But as government passes the law, there needs to be added an extra element that can come only from the hearts and minds of the people of the United States of America, because there is one thing that government cannot provide: the healing power of mutual respect for the individual dignity of every person in this country."

Some of the President's critics feel that he has moved black and white Americans farther apart since he took office.

But in St. Louis, he urged the predominantly white Jaycees to "go back to your communities, and rather than have America torn apart, let's bring Americans together."

Regarding crime and public order, Nixon said that the missing ingredient today is respect for the law, not the laws themselves nor the enforcement of them. And he added:

"If we ask people to respect the laws, we must have laws (which deserve respect) and those who enforce the laws (must be those) who deserve respect. That means that in every community in this nation — and it is primarily a local problem rather than a national problem — we need to provide those programs and the enforcement and the personnel that will deserve the respect."

Finally, the President first charged the Jaycees (all under 35) with the responstbility to do all they can not to make the generation gap bigger and "not to set up a hostile confrontation, but to give to young people the understanding of our system that they need." And in a final exhortation that might seem surprising because Nixon has at times appeared to be insensitive to some of the younger generation's dissatisfaction with foreign and domestic policies, he added:

"But let me leave you with one fundamental truth, and I believe this deeply, and unless we understand this we will fail to bridge this generation gap: Young Americans today, particularly those in college and high school years, are not going to be satisfied simply by the absence of war and having good jobs. Young Americans think in idealistic and spiritual terms and that is to their credit . . Let us tell young Americans all Americans, that we should love America. But let us not love her because she is rich and not because she is strong but because America is a good country and we are going to make her better."

Corny-sounding comments, maybe, and from a man who has not lit youthful fires across the nation. But the kind that is good for country and the President.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Psychologists tell us that human beings are motivated by two basic drives or instincts: 1) The sexual urge and 2) The desire to win a prize in some sort of contest.

Advertising agencies have long taken advantage of the latter compulsion. Next to sex, the contest is the oldest and most widely used product promotion gimmick in the Western world.

The federal government, however, has been slow to recognize its potential. When a problem arises, the federal government still does what it has always done. It appoints a commission to study the situation and write a report.

A recent survey showed that President Nixon has appointed more than 40 study commissions. Apparently, nobody in the administration has given any thought to seeking solutions to National problems through national contests.

Offer a Prize

But if Nixon would take just 25 per cent of what it costs to finance a commission study and offer it as a prize for the best solution to a problem, I feel certain he would get better results.

The current railroad situation might be a good place to try the contest method. Recent reports indicate that a number of railroads are in dire financial straits and might follow the Penn Central into bankruptcy unless something is done.

You may be sure that the government will soon appoint a railroad study commission, if it hasn't done so already. If typical, the commission will take about 17 months to complete its study at a cost of about $2 million.

How much faster, cheaper and probably more effective it would be simply to offer $500,000 in prizes in the following contest:

Complete Sentence

"Complete this sentence in 5,000 words or less: "In order to save the railroads, the U.S. government should..."

"Mail entries to Railroad Contest, 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., Washington, D.C. Entries must be postmarked no later than midnight, July 31. All entries become property of U.S. government. Decision of judges is final."

Being a normal, red-blooded, compulsive contest entrant myself, I can hardly wait to send in my entry:

"In order to save the railroads, the U.S. government should classify trains as a type of waterfowl and place them under the protection of the Fish and Wildlife Service."

On second thought, withdraw that entry. It sounds too much like a commission report.
