Experts expect Fed to lower discount rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board, which has tried without much success to revive a sluggish economy this year by cutting interest rates, is about to make a fourth attempt by reducing a key bank lending rate, in the view of many economists.

These analysts see a wide variety of interest rates, including the prime rate and mortgage rates, dropping by one-half percentage point or more based on the expected move by the central bank.

These predictions were coming as policy-makers at the Fed gathered for a closed-door meeting today of the Federal Open Market Committee, the body that sets monetary policy for the bank.

Some analysts said the central bank could announce as early as this week a decision to reduce its discount rate — the fee charged by the Fed to lend money to U.S. banks — from 6 percent to 5.5 percent.

Other analysts said the cut will come, but not until mid-September after the Fed makes another effort to get Japan and West Germany to go along with a coordinated effort to reduce rates in all three countries.

On July 10, two days after the last Federal Open Market Committee meeting, the Fed for the third time this year reduced its discount rate by one-half percentage point in a move to revive a sluggish economy.

The weakness has come primarily from troubles in the trade sector where American manufacturers have been losing the battle against foreign competition and U.S. farmers have seen their traditional export markets dry up.

In addition, thousands of jobs have been lost this year in the oil and gas industry as companies cut back sharply on drilling because of the slump in energy prices.

"The dominant position on the board is that there is still room for further interest rate declines based on a very weak economy," said David Jones, economist with Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a government securities dealer.

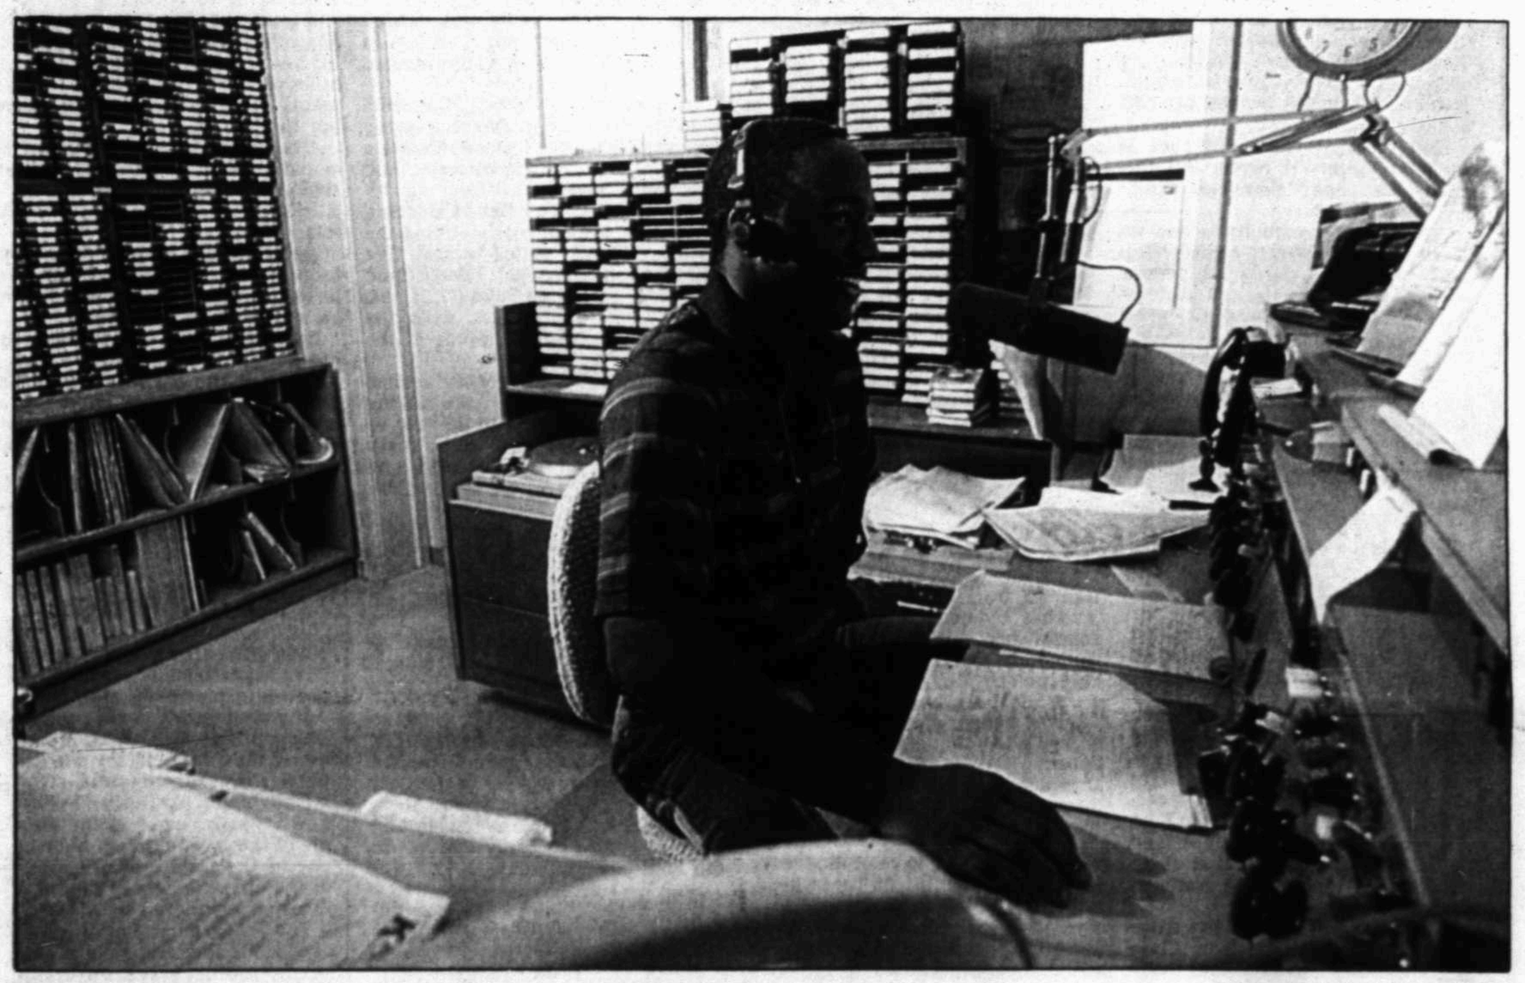

While many analysts are predicting rates will come down, they are not so certain that the hoped-for economic rebound will occur.

"A cut in the discount rate is better than nothing, but the problem is that the cut will basically help segments of the economy that are doing well while having little impact on segments in trouble," said David Wyss, financial economist with Data Resources Inc. of Lexington, Mass.

While the administration is predicting that economic growth will double in the last half of the year to a rate of 4 percent growth in the gross national product, many private forecasters see little if any pickup from the 2.4 percent growth rate turned in during the first six months of 1986.

Still, analysts believe the Fed's efforts will send various interest rates down farther. They predicted the prime rate, the benchmark business lending rate, would fall by one-half percentage point to 7.5 percent, and mortgage rates will dip below 10 percent.

Corey Ellis, 16, West Texas' youngest disc jockey, keeps continuous country hits coming on KNFM radio station.

MHS senior West Texas' youngest DJ

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

The young man leaned back in his chair, took his headphones off and relaxed by looking out at the New York City skyline while the next three songs played on the radio.

He sat and reflected back to the days before he'd become the most listened-to disc jockey in America.

How far he'd come from those early weekend mornings when he'd putter around a radio station while his DJ step-father did his show.

Or from the days when he — at just 16 years — landed his first job as a DJ — working a lonely weekend graveyard shift at KNFM in Midland...

Then the alarm goes off. It's time for Corey Ellis, soon-to-be senior at Midland's Lee High School, to quit dreaming, wake up and go to school. But Ellis hopes — one day that won't be a dream.

Ellis, the youngest DJ in West Texas, began in radio at 15, back in 1985 when he served KWES' Tony Brock and Susan Wise as a "production assistant."

Ellis said this didn't amount to much more than a position as an unpaid gopher, though he adds he was lucky to have that opportunity.

KWES DJ Steve Driscoll later agreed to let Ellis have a slot during his time spot so that he could get some "on-air" experience.

"Two a.m. came around and I was sitting in the booth and all of a sudden Driscoll walks out of the room. I was petrified.

I cleared my throat and announced the next song and sat there — freaking out — for the next 60 minutes," Ellis said.

Until then, Ellis said he had only done "pretend" radio shows.

"When I worked for Tony and Susan, I would go in the back of the station and practice diction and pronunciation by making recordings of my voice. I'd practice on making transitions from all the intoductions into songs.

"But I still am not over being scared while I'm really on the air," Ellis said.

Other DJs chipped in and soon Ellis was going on air for an hour here and there, he said.

Soviets: Rejection of moratorium 'disappointing'

MOSCOW (AP) — The United States' swift rejection of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's call to join the extended Soviet moratorium on nuclear weapons testing is disappointing, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said today.

Gorbachev on Monday announced the extension of the Soviet Union's unilateral year-old testing halt until Jan. 1, and called on the United States to reconsider its refusal to join it.

But White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters in Santa Barbara, Calif., where President Reagan is vacationing, that a moratorium "is not in the security interests of the United States, our friends or our allies."

He said the Soviets were not giving up much by extending the moratorium because "they are dealing from a position of advantage (regarding tests)."

At a Moscow news conference, Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov disputed the U.S. contention.

He cited what he said were figures from a Swedish-based monitoring organization showing the United States has conducted 798 nuclear weapons tests compared with 565 tests by the Soviets.

Asked about Speakes' comment, Gerasimov said, "It is very disappointing. You can't say it any other way than that."

Gorbachev on Monday did not threaten to resume testing when the moratorium expires unless Washington joins it, as he did during three previous announcements that the Soviets would observe a test ban.

He called on Reagan to sign a test ban treaty at a superpower summit this year, but did not explicitly commit himself to such a meeting.

Reagan and Gorbachev agreed at their first meeting in Geneva last year to hold a second summit in the United States in 1986. Moscow has declined to set a date, insisting on progress toward an arms control accord as a condition.

Asked about progress toward scheduling a summit, Gerasimov said only that there had been a series of consultations between U.S. and Soviet experts on arms control and other issues, and noted that Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze and Secretary of State George Shultz are scheduled to meet next month in Washington to discuss a second summit.

The test freeze extension was front-page news in the Soviet Union's state-run media today.

All national newspapers carried the full text of Gorbachev's address on their front pages, and Radio Moscow opened its morning broadcasts with a summary of his announcement.

The official news agency Tass said the extension of the ban was drawing support from disarmament advocates and foreign Communist Party leaders, as well as "public figures" from India to Italy.

The Soviets' unilateral test ban first went into effect on Aug. 6, 1985, the 40th anniversary of the U.S. atomic bombing of Hiroshima, Japan.

The U.S. government, which opposes a test ban on grounds that verification problems exist and that national security requires continued weapons testing, conducted 18 nuclear blasts during the year-long Soviet moratorium.

In his speech, Gorbachev ridiculed what he said was a misguided idea among some Americans that nuclear and space weapons talks in Geneva were resumed because of Kremlin fears of the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative, a project researching a space-based defense system.

Lawmakers expect White will expand session's agenda

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

Gov. Mark White and Bill Clements accuse each other of lacking credibility on taxes — 2A

AUSTIN — Gov. Mark White will expand the scope of the special session Tuesday to include revenue-raising measures, key senators predicted Monday.

Ann Arnold, the governor's spokeswoman, said she could not detail the wording of the new "call," which is what lawmakers can deal with in the session. The governor has control over the agenda of a special session.

White advocates a temporary sales-tax increase, and several senators said the governor will try to like a state-run lottery cannot be included in the seesion.

No senators or top aides to the governor could give the specifics of White's new call.

Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, said the Senate State Affairs Committee will take up the lottery bill again Wednesday after White expands the call. Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches, postponed the bill in committee last week when he successfully argued that a lottery cannot be debated until the governor calls for revenue-raising measures.

"I anticipate he (White) will open the call to revenue proposals" by Wednesday at the latest, Uribe said.

Sen. Ray Farabee, Senate State Affairs Committee chairman, said he "had heard through the grapevine" that the governor would expand the session to revenue-raising on Tuesday. "That's what we've heard," he said.

"If it (revenue raising) isn't added, it would further postpone the lottery bill," Farabee said. "It's clearly not in the call now."

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said he "would certanly assume" White would issue a proclamation allowing for revenue measures Tuesday or Wednesday.

Meanwhile, senators will receive the House-approved budget-cutting bill on Tuesday. Sen. Grant Jones, Senate Finance Committee chairman, said he and other key senators will decide whether to work with the House bill or start from scratch and devise their own cuts.

"I certainly don't feel compelled to use the House bill as a guideline," Jones said. The Senate, however, might decide to use the House bill as a starting point in its deliberations, he said.

The House cut nearly $700 million Friday from the the second half of the state's two-year budget, and Farabee said those cuts are close to what the Senate wants.

"I'd think we'd use the House bill and go through and mark it up," Farabee said. "It's a good framework. Of course, there'll be some differences in some areas."

Farabee and other Senate leaders want cuts coupled with a tax increase to bridge the estimated $3.5 billion budget shortfall. And the House bill includes almost $300 million in higher education cuts, which the Senate will try to restore.

Jones and Farabee agreed that besides new taxes, higher education cuts would be the largest disagreement between the two chambers.

Suit alleges Israeli agents tried to steal spy camera plans

Associated Press

The U.S. Justice Department and Customs Service are investigating charges that Israeli agents tried to steal plans for a sophisticated airborne spy camera system from a defense plant, according to reports published today.

The allegation is contained in a lawsuit filed in New York by Recon Optical Inc. of Barrington, Ill., the Chicago Tribune and The New York Times reported in today's editions.

ABC News also broadcast a brief report Monday on the investigation.

Recon was building the reconnaissance system for the Israeli government under a $40 million contract financed by the U.S. Defense Department as part of its foreign military sales program, the Tribune reported.

A spokesman for Israel said Recon invented the story as part of a contract dispute between both parties and denied that the Israelis were looking for secrets. U.S. officials said they had no evidence of any Israeli violation of federal law, the Times reported.

The plan was discovered May 27 when Recon security officers stopped three Israeli air force officers as they were leaving the plant and confiscated 50,000 pages of technical drawings and handwritten notes, the Tribune reported.

The Israelis had been allowed inside to monitor progress since the work began in 1984. Recon ordered them to leave the plant in May after the company ended its dispute with Israel by terminating the contract, the Tribune said, citing court documents.

The papers were discovered as the officials were leaving the plant, the newspaper reported.

The reconnaissance system would have been more powerful than the current one, which can provide a detailed picture of someone on the street from a jet flying at near the speed of sound more than 100 miles away, the Tribune reported.

Recon claimed in its lawsuit that Israel had planned to steal the technology and provide it to an Israeli company, which would then manufacture the systems.

Recon's president, Larry Larson, said in a sworn statement that the technology was the "heart and soul" of the company and that he suspected Israel had already obtained some of the secrets, the Tribune reported.

Death toll from protests in Pakistan reaches 26

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Police firing tear gas charged demonstrators in Karachi, Dadu and other parts of southern Pakistan today, and the death toll from anti-government protests reached 26.

Police and paramilitary units used tear gas and baton charges to break up an opposition march in Dadu, Sind province, witnesses said.

Scattered fighting persisted in parts of Karachi and elsewhere in Sind province. Bands of protesters pelted police patrols with stones before fleeing up side streets as officers fired tear gas.

Army units were called out to assist police in several areas of Sind province.

The Movement for the Restoration of Democracy is waging a campaign to oust President Gen. Mohammad Zia ul-Haq and force elections, and opposition leaders vowed to stage more street rallies today.

At least 16 people were reported killed and dozens injured in clashes between riot police and opposition supporters across Pakistan on Monday.

Ten people were reported killed in clashes Thursday through Sunday.

Local reporters and other witnesses today said two police officers, two protesters and a government activist were killed Monday night at Tando Khan in Sind province during a protest march when police and protesters fired on each other.

Those killed Monday included an opposition supporter who died in Dadu when police opened fire on a crowd, the government reported. Opposition officials said a second person also was killed there, but their claims could not immediately be verified.

The death reported most recently was that of a protester killed Monday when police opened fire on a crowd in Moro Chonk. A local magistrate announced the death today.

Salman Taseer, a spokesman for the Movement for the Restoration of Democracy, said the government was resorting to force because it had lost all popular support. "They have lost the political battle and they are now resorting to violence and brutality," he said.

Opposition crowds have battled police, attacked government buildings, set fire to banks and other businesses, disrupted road and rail traffic and held protest marches and meetings across Pakistan.

Riot police have broken up the protests with tear gas and baton charges and repeatedly fired on stone-throwing protesters with rifles and shotguns.

Top opposition leader Benazir Bhutto remained under detention today in a jail near Karachi.

Railway officials in Karachi, the country's largest city, said no trains had gotten through on Monday because of disturbances, and the government ordered all schools and universities in the city and Sind province to close until Sept. 2.

An estimated 10,000 people, some of them shouting "Shoot us! Shoot us!" marched in Lahore on Monday, but the procession broke up peacefully after a roadblock manned by hundreds of police halted it in the heart of the city.

The civilian government Zia appointed late last year issued a statement Monday saying two policemen were killed and a third wounded while trying to move about 200 protesters from a road near the town of Khesana Mori. Two demonstrators also were reported killed.

Riot police used shotguns and tear gas to disperse a march by about 3,000 protesters in Karachi.

Hospital officials confirmed a man was killed when police opened fire with rifles in east Karachi. Police said the first shots came from the crowd. Two other deaths by police gunfire were reported in Karachi and a man was shot dead in a clash with police near Hyderabad.

Witnesses said police fired on rock-throwing protesters in the southern town of Askrand, killing one man and wounding another. Witnesses in Tando Adam said six protesters were wounded in an exchange of gunfire with police.

Zia has been out of the country since before the trouble began, on a Moslem pilgrimage to Mecca in Saudi Arabia.

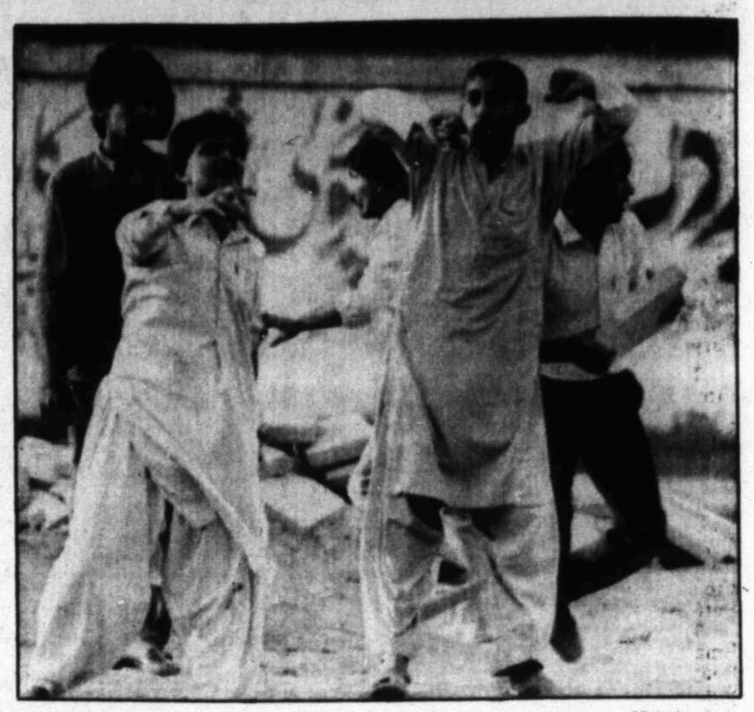

The protests began Wednesday as authorities rounded up hundreds of activists and banned anti-government rallies. Miss Bhutto was arrested the following day, which was Pakistan's independence day, and demonstrations were again held despite the ban.

Many opposition supporters contend U.S. support has kept Zia in power ince 1977, when he overthrew Miss Bhutto's father, Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

Bhutto was found guilty of conspiring to kill a political opponent and hanged in 1979.

Zia and his appointed prime minister, Mohammad Khan Junejo, have rejected opposition demands that elections be held before those scheduled for 1990.

Zia lifted martial law Dec. 30. Although Junejo leads a civilian government, the general is president of this Moslem nation and commander of its army.

White, Clements attack other's credibility

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White and his opponent, former Gov. Bill Clements, are accusing each other of lacking credibility on taxes.

White says Clements has softened his pledge against new taxes and therefore broken another promise; Clements says that by supporting taxes nearly every year of his administration, White has broken his 1982 no-tax promise.

"Bill Clements says this race is about credibility. I agree. Bill Clements has none," Democrat White said Monday.

"The test of credibility is one we gladly welcome. We are confident an overwhelming majority of Texans believe Bill Clements and distrust Mark White," said Clements' press secretary, Reggie Bashur.

White, who is seeking re-election against the Republican in November, referred to a new interview in which Clements said it would be "nonsense" to completely rule out new taxes when the state budget deficit keeps growing.

"After absolutely and emphatically stating he would veto 'any and all tax or fee increases,' he has flip-flopped again," the Democratic governor said.

But Clements countered Monday that "they're trying to get me to say that I'm going to condone tax increases in the next legislative session — and I'm not. I'm absolutely convinced that...we can take the corrective actions in the legislative session, starting in January, that will make a tax increase totally unnecessary."

With state Comptroller Bob Bullock estimating the state's deficit at $3.5 billion, White this month called a special legislative session to balance the budget. White urged lawmakers to approve a temporary sales tax increase, boosting the rate from 4⅛ percent to 5¼ percent for one year.

Clements has attacked White's plan. Even Monday, he issued a statement saying "White's answer is always raise a tax."

Since the first of the year, Clements repeatedly has vowed opposition to any new taxes.

On June 1, Clements said: "There are no ifs, ands, or buts, I am not in favor of, and I will veto any increase in taxes or new taxes."

As recently as July 31, Clements said: "I want to make one thing abundantly clear. I am opposed to any kind of new tax or increased tax. We don't need it."

But Monday, The Dallas Morning News quoted Clements as saying the growing budget deficit means, "We have a changing target. I don't think anybody, including myself, at this point really understands what the problem is or the magnitude of the problem.

"I'm against taxes, totally against taxes. But when you start talking about what I'm going to do four or five or six years from now, that's nonsense," Clements told the newspaper.

Bashur said Clements' response in the interview involved projections that the 1987 Legislature could face a deficit of $5 billion.

White said Clements owes voters an explanation for his switch, and he likened the new position on his no-taxes pledge to the "secret plan" Clements once said he had for balancing the budget.

"He said he had a secret plan he would reveal if I called a special session of the Legislature. OK. A deal's a deal. Where's the plan?" White said.

"Bill Clements has an aptitude for losing things. He lost his secret plan, he lost his no-tax pledge and he's lost his credibility," White said.

But Bashur said it is White who needs to answer questions.

"Mark White has increased taxes, on average, $1,466 per Texas household. On the issue of taxes, Mark White has a hotline to Walter Mondale," Bashur said.

Charley heads back out to sea

Associated Press

Tropical Storm Charley headed into the North Atlantic today after its brief encounter with the East Coast as a hurricane that killed five people.

At 6 a.m. EDT, the storm was centered near latitude 40.5 north, longitude 68.0 west, or about 115 miles east southeast of Nantucket Island, Mass. It was moving away from land to the northeast at 15-20 mph and was expected to continue that direction through tonight, the National Weather Service said.

After being downgraded to a tropical storm Monday afternoon, Charley continued to weaken and move away from land. By Monday night, its highest sustained winds were 50 mph, down from the gusts of 104 mph reported Sunday night when it was a hurricane.

The weather service had discontinued all hurricane warnings and watches by noon Monday, and all coastal gale warnings were discontinued by evening. Gale warnings contined in the offshore waters south of Massachusetts.

Three people died aboard a twin-engine plane that crashed into Chesapeake Bay on Sunday while attempting to land in a storm associated with Charley, said Baltimore County police.

A Manteo, N.C., woman died after her car went out of control in headlight-deep water on an Outer Banks causeway and plunged into a canal, and a Virginia man died after his car struck a storm-downed tree, police said.

Thousands of people in North Carolina, Maryland and Delaware jammed highways Sunday to seek higher ground. The storm also knocked out power to thousands of people in New Jersey, Virgina and North Carolina.

The only major storm damage reported was in Norfolk, Va., where 250 feet of the landmark Harrison's Pier was washed out.

Charley, the second hurricane of the Atlantic season, began Tuesday as a low pressure system in the Gulf of Mexico that dumped up to 2 inches of rain on northern Florida and Georgia before drifting near South Carolina late Thursday.

It developed into a tropical storm Friday about 140 miles east-southeast of Charleston, S.C., then spent much of Saturday off the South Carolina coast before drifting first northeastward, then northward.

Hurricane Bonnie formed in the Gulf of Mexico in late June and hit Texas, killing at least three people and destroying dozens of homes.

Car bomb kills 10 in Tehran

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — A car laden with 50 pounds of TNT exploded in one of the main squares of Iran's capital today, killing 10 people and wounding scores, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said.

The blast, in Tehran's Ferdowsi Square, came in the middle of the morning rush hour in one of the most crowded areas of the city, the agency said in a dispatch monitored in Nicosia.

The 8:20 a.m. explosion damaged a bus, four automobiles and seven motorcycles, injuring their passengers, IRNA said. The car-bomb blast also shattered windows in nearby buildings.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the attack.

DJ

The position at KNFM, Midland's No. 1 country station, came up about a month and a half ago, Ellis said.

"I made a tape of one of my broadcasts I'd done and called KNFM Program Director Jim Mantel and said, 'You don't know me, but I'd like to get a start in radio.' "

"Basically, I just asked him if he would give me a break. And then a day or so later, Mantel called me back and said I could have the midnight to 6 a.m. slot on Friday and Saturday nights."

Ellis, a native Midlander, said he became interested in radio because his step-father, whom he said he looks up to with great respect, was a DJ at KRIG in Midland.

"I would walk around behind him while he was at the radio station and I knew then I would like it.

"At first, I think I just liked it because of the showmanship aspect of it. You know, like, 'Hey — I am a DJ on the radio, a public figure, and lots of people listen to me.'

"But since I've been at KNFM, I've realized it is a business and has to be treated that way," Ellis said.

Pretty heavy thoughts from a 16-year-old who, by society's standards, should be worrying about cars, girls and football. But Ellis said he disagrees.

"I think it's pretty funny that kids don't worry about their futures much.

"I don't really concentrate on how much fun I'm having today. I look down the road to tomorrow," Ellis said.

And Ellis thinks one day he'll make it to the big time; Mantel agrees.

"All he needs to do is polish the mechanical end of it.

"Ellis is an extremely funny guy. If he can perfect the art of delivery, I think he'll go far.

"It's hard to sit in a booth all alone and be funny for two or three hours," Mantel said.

But Ellis, gifted with an uncanny sense of ad-lib rambling, feels he won't have a problem making it, but not because "he's great."

"I'll make it because I started earlier than the rest of them."

Asher Naim, a spokesman for the Israeli embassy in Washington, denied that Israel was loooking for secrets. He told the Times that the situation was nothing more than "an argument between a supplier and an orderer."

A U.S. Justice Department official told the Times, "The Israelis had the proper licenses and went through the proper channels in their contract." The investigation was undertaken because of the sensitive nature of Israeli-American relations on security issues, officials told the Times.

Recon, a subsidiary of California-based Bourns Inc., became the winning bidder in 1984 on a $40 million contract to develop the reconnaissance system for Israel, the Tribune reported.

But engineers soon discovered that meeting the Israeli specifications and making requested changes in the system would drive the cost up, perhaps as high as $100 million, the newspaper reported.

The projected price increase led to the dispute between Recon and the Israeli procurement mission in New York.

RATES

The latest survey of rates by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said fixed-rate mortgages averaged 10.4 percent last week, continuing a downward trend. Wyss predicted mortgage rates would drop to 9.75 percent, while Jones said they could fall to 9.5 percent.

One reason for the widespread belief that the Fed is ready to go even farther to reduce interest rates is the changing makeup of the board. The Senate last week approved President Reagan's nomination of Robert Heller as the newest member of the seven-member board.

Heller is expected to side with three other Reagan appointees who at times have been outspoken in their belief that the central bank needed to worry less about inflation and do more to stimulate the economy.

Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson-Lehman Brothers, said the decision for a further reduction in interest rates will be made more difficult for the Fed because of concern that the nation's money supply has been growing well above targets this year.

"It will be hard for the Federal Reserve to ignore the monetary (growth) rates totally," he said.

The central bank strives to allow the nation's money supply to grow at a sufficient rate to support steady economic growth while guarding against too rapid a rise which could rekindle inflation.

He vowed the Soviet Union would "answer any challenge of the United States, including the notorious SDI. In this, too, it would be wrong to hope to intimidate us or prompt us to needless expenditures. If need be, we shall promptly come up with the answer, and it will not be what the United States expects."

Gorbachev painted the Soviet Union as a tireless champion of disarmament, listing recent arms control proposals made by the Kremlin.

"On the other hand," he said, "we are faced with the refusal to stop nuclear testing, with a stubborn resistance to peace initiatives, ostentatious disregard of the demands of the public."

Gorbachev said questions were asked "in the letters and pronouncements of Soviet people" as to whether the risk was too great in preserving the moratorium, but added that the Soviet government wanted to show it is committed to arms control.

Education goal: Bonding slow-learners, average students

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Closing the educational gap between slow-learners and average students is one of the long-range goals of the State Board of Education, lawmakers learned Monday.

The board gave a preview of its long-range plan for public education to the Legislative Education Board. The state board plans to formally adopt the plan in November and present it to the Legislature in January.

The board wants to see "distinct improvements" in closing the "achievement gap" between average students and disadvantaged students, most of whom are minorities, within five years, said William McBride, a member of the education board.

"Before the turn of the next century, minority children will make up the majority of our public school population," McBride said. "We all know that these are the children who do less well in education. That's not because the child's ethnicity affects his ability to learn, but because the child's economic status does..

"And unfortunately, in this state and in our nation minority children are most likely to live in poverty. We're obligated...to eliminate the gap that exists between the disadvantaged and advantaged students."

McBride called on the public school system to identify and develop special programs that can help slow-learners learn.

"(And) we must maintain a commitment to funding these programs adequately," he said.

Other goals in the plan include offering a well-balanced curriculum to every student; attracting and retaining qualified teachers; managing the educational system "productively, efficiently and with accountability"; and making sure education be "financed equitably for all students."

Education Commissioner William Kirby told the joint House-Senate legislative board that starting this year, individual school districts will be responsible for showing teachers the correct way to file paperwork.

"This is the last time the commissioner is going to take the blame for paperwork," Kirby said.

The "lack of communication" that mostly is causing the paperwork jam-up will be partly alleviated by a document sent to school districts that gives "explicit examples" on how to do paperwork, he said.

The board's long-range plans also include refocusing vocational education from training students for specific jobs to giving them more broad skills for "new and emerging occupations," McBride said.

"The current structure has not been meeting the needs of the students or the Texas economy," he said.

The state's public education system needs to improve its system for gathering, cataloging and distributing information, McBride said.

Also, educators must be careful not to set unrealistic standards on minimal skills tests so as not to increase an already high dropout rate, said Jon Brumley, chairman of the board of education.

Weapons found in wing prompt lockdown

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Several weapons found in a wing at the Wynne Unit prompted a lockdown, while two others called in response to outbreaks of violence remained in effect, prison officials say.

The wing of 178 closed-custody inmates was locked down at noon Monday after officials found the weapons this weekend, Texas Department of Corrections spokesman David Nunnelee said. During a lockdown, inmates are restricted to their cells.

Racial tension also had erupted in the wing, primarily between blacks and Hispanic inmates, he said.

"Basically, we have an incident of inmates verbally assaulting each other," he said. "There have been no physical assaults."

Officials expected to lift the lockdown order sometime today after searching cells, Nunnelee said.

Meanwhile, authorities continued lockdowns at two other units after one inmate was stabbed and three others were assaulted over the weekend, Nunnelee said. He did not know when either lockdown would be lifted.

At the 1,720-prisoner Darrington Unit at Rosharon, three assailants stabbed two inmates while they were in a shower area Sunday morning, TDC spokesman Charles Brown said.

The lockdown was partially lifted Sunday, but 290 remained locked in their cells Monday, Nunnelee said.

Pedro Garza, 22, who was serving 10 years for possession of heroin in Bexar County, died Sunday from multiple stab wounds he suffered while showering, prison officials said.

And Louis Ramirez, 28, serving 14 years for burglary of a building from Bexar County, remained in critical condition Monday at the prison hospital in Galveston, Nunnelee said.

After the stabbing, a 23-year-old inmate identified by TDC officials as one of the assailants was stabbed in a day room by two other inmates carrying broom handles.

The inmate, who is serving 15 years for aggravated assault and robbery in Burnett County, received superficial wounds and was treated and released from the unit's infirmary, officials said.

Another stabbing was reported Saturday at the Beto I Unit in Tennessee Colony, which prompted authorities to lock down one wing of 196 inmates, Brown said.

John Thomas, 24, serving 10 years for robbery and burglary in Bexar County, was in stable condition Monday, officials said.

The weekend violence left the Texas prison system with its second homicide of the year and a total of 63 assaults, compared to 27 homicides and 218 assaults in 1985, Brown said.

Cuts could compound problems of disabled

By PAT YADON

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Proponents of higher funding for social programs rallied at the Capitol Monday, saying House-supported cuts could compound problems of the disabled and put people in the streets.

"Children, the elderly and disabled have been very poorly cared for in the past and now we're talking about taking services away," said Charlotte Flynn, an Austin Gray Panthers member.

Ms. Flynn and representatives of other groups, such as the Austin Resource Center for Independent Living and the Coalition of Texans with Disabilities, also spoke during a meeting of the Senate's Health and Human Resources Committee.

The groups testified concerning the potential impact of budget cuts proposed by the House and urged senators not to balance the budget at the expense of those who need state services the most.

Cuts recommended by the House include $88 million from the Department of Human Services, $5.6 million from the Texas Rehabilitation Commission and $14.1 million from the Department of Health.

Individuals told the committee of their own struggles and the help they had received from state-supported agencies.

"Because of the help I have received, I can live in my own apartment," Sen. Hector Uribe read from Austin resident Tim Baker's statement. "It would cost the state a huge amount of money to keep me in a nursing home."

The Texas Rehabilitation Commission, a branch of the Department of Human Services, helped Baker pay for equipment that enables him to feed himself, talk on the telephone, turn on lights and steer his electric wheelchair with his chin.

Aid that helps the disabled to live independently and to find jobs saves the state money in the long run, said Pat Pound of the Austin Resource Center for Independent Living. For every $1 spent on rehabilitation services, the state gets back $12-13 in taxes and money saved on institutionalized care, Pound said.

Several people mentioned during the hearing that Texas already ranks among the bottom 10 states in providing human services. The state ranks 47th in mental health spending, 49th in services for the elderly and 45th in payments to Aid for Families with Dependent Children.

Before the hearing, about 150 people gathered on the steps of the Capitol for a '60s-style rally, chanting "More revenue, no cuts," and singing "He's Got the Whole World in His Hands," changing the lyrics to words that reflected their views on the proposed budget cuts.

STATE IN BRIEF

Sheriff's deputy was in right place at right time

DEL VALLE (AP) — A Travis County sheriff's deputy didn't have far to go Monday to catch a gunman who tried to hold up a convenience store.

Sgt. Tom Blackwell simply hung up the telephone he was using outside the store, drew his gun and apprehended the bandit as the man fled the store.

Blackwell said he was telephoning his lieutenant about 3:10 a.m. when he saw three men run out, one waving a gun and yelling, "Robbery, robbery."

"I said, 'Hold on, lieutenant. I've got an aggravated robbery here,' " Blackwell said.

Blackwell said a 34-year-old suspect surrendered without incident.

The clerk said the gunman had been inside the store about 10 minutes and had threatened him several times with a .22-caliber pistol.

Then the security guard entered and said good morning to the robber. The startled bandit turned his back on the clerk, who grabbed the pistol. When the robber ran from the store, the two employees gave chase.

Runoff election scheduled

AUSTIN (AP) — A special runoff election will be held Sept. 13 for the Texas Senate seat vacated by Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texarkana, Secretary of State Myra McDaniel said Monday.

Ed Hargett, a Republican from Linden, received the most votes in the Aug. 9 special election. However, he failed to get 51 percent of the total, Ms. McDaniel noted.

Harget, who got 22,735 votes in the Aug. 9 balloting, will face in the runoff Richard Anderson, a Democrat from Marshall, who received 18,231 votes.

The 1st District is made up of Bowie, Delta, Camp, Cass, Franklin, Gregg, Harrison, Hopkins, Lamar, Marion, Panola, Upshur, Red River and Titus counties.

Howard, a veteran lawmaker and senator since 1979, resigned his seat to become a lobbyist.

Balloon to attract buyers

AUSTIN (AP) — In an unconventional bid to sell his house, Austin resident Neal Geiger inflated a 35-foot-tall balloon on his front lawn.

"It's a little bit of overkill, maybe going too far, but I think the market needs it right now," said Geiger, whose home in northwest Austin has been for sale since November.

"The instant we unfolded the balloon, people started slowing down. Three people stopped and looked at the house. I'm real happy about it," he said.

Rail line sale completed

AUSTIN (AP) — The sale of some Southern Pacific Railroad line to the city of Austin for possible future mass transit use has been completed, Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle, D-Texas, announced Monday.

"I honestly beleieve this is the most important development in the city's transportation future since the name was changed from Waterloo to Austin," Pickle said.

The purchase will give the city the option of using the line for a light rail system or bus lanes in the future, Pickle noted.

Animal adoptees arrive

LIBERTY HILL (AP) — A burro and her baby went to their new home on a goat ranch over the weekend, the first adoptees from the Texas Wild Horse and Burro Center south of Liberty Hill.

The center is one of three permanent, year-round adoption centers in the nation licensed by the Bureau of Land Management for placing wild horses and burros removed from public lands for herd thinning.

The center is owned by Dee Dee and Rick King, whose Tex-King Co. was awarded a three-year contract by the Bureau of Land Managment.

Israeli, Soviet talks may be cut short

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Western and Israeli diplomats say the Soviets may have abruptly cut short their first formal talks with Israel since 1967 as a bid toward appeasing the Arab world.

The talks, however, were viewed by Israeli officials as a step toward normalizing relations, even though the Kremlin representatives ended the Monday meeting in Helsinki after a single 90-minute session.

The Soviet delegates to the session said they had authority only to listen to Israeli views and present their own, Israeli officials said.

The talks could bear fruit within two months if both countries agree on a plan to allow a Soviet delegation to visit Tel Aviv in October and an Israeli delegation to go to Moscow later, Israeli Foreign Ministry spokesman Ehud Gol said.

Such an exchange visit would likely be the most visible result of the discussions held at the Government Compound in the Finnish capital's historic district.

The Israelis said both sides agreed to report to their governments before resuming contacts through diplomatic channels.

The Soviet Embassy in Helsinki declined comment on the session and newspapers, television and radio in the Soviet Union made no mention of it.

Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, speaking Monday in Jerusalem, praised the talks as "a good opportunity to present our hopes" and said Israel was not disappointed with the outcome.

"In 90 minutes we explained all our positions," he said.

Before the meeting, Israeli officials including Prime Minister Shimon Peres expressed cautious hopes that the talks could lead to a renewal of the relations the Soviets severed after the 1967 Middle East war.

Following the session, Israeli officials acknowledged that re-establishing ties would take longer than they hoped.

"This is the beginning of a long haul. How long it will take, and what route it will follow, I don't know," said one official close to the talks who insisted on anonymity. "This is a first move, but a tiny one."

Israeli officials nonetheless praised the Soviets for agreeing to a public meeting.

"Certainly it is a step in Soviet-Israeli relations," Gol said. "We haven't had such a meeting in 19 years and today we had such a meeting...It may lead to normalization."

Western and Israeli diplomats said the Soviets may have decided to cut short the meeting to send a message to Arab friends who complained about it.

Several newspapers in the Persian Gulf region lashed out at the Soviets on Monday. The pro-government newspaper Al-Jezira in moderate Saudi Arabia criticized the Soviets for holding the talks without, it said, "any consideration for the Arab reaction."

"The Soviets made a gesture to the Israelis in agreeing to the talks. Then they made a gesture to the Arabs in keeping the talks short," said one diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Another official said the Soviets may have limited the talks because of Israel's insistence on "making the issue of Soviet Jews their top priority."

The Israeli delegation was under government orders to raise the issue of Soviet restrictions on Jewish emigration, despite the Soviets' repeated refusal to discuss the issue in Helsinki.

Israel says 400,000 of the Soviet Union's 2.5 million Jews wish to leave, while the Soviets dispute the figures and say the issue of Soviet Jewry is an internal matter.

Said Shamir, "It is inconceivable that an improvement of relations between Isreal and Soviet Russia can come about without an essential and substantial change in the...attitude toward the situation of Soviet Jewry."

The Soviets say they want to visit Israel to talk about Russian Orthodox Church and other Soviet property holdings in Israel, Soviet citizens living in Israel, and the functioning of a section in the Finnish Embassy in Tel Aviv that represents Soviet interests.

Lugar wants to learn how U.S. can aid Philippines

BACOLOD, Philippines (AP) — Sen. Richard Lugar flew to impoverished Negros island today to visit a sugar plantation, a child feeding center and a malnutrition ward, saying he wanted to find out how the United States could be of help.

Lugar, R-Ind., met with President Corazon Aquino on Monday and described her afterward as a "strong leader."

The chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee came to Negros after morning talks in Manila with Vice President Salvador H. Laurel, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Armed Forces Chief Gen. Fidel V. Ramos.

It was Lugar's first visit to the Philippines since February when he led a team of U.S. observers who reported they witnessed fraud in the Philippine presidential election.

The fraud triggered a revolt that ousted then-President Ferdinand E. Marcos and forced him to flee into foreign exile. He now lives in Hawaii.

"We just want to find out a number of things and ways we can be helpful," Lugar said on arrival at Bacolod, where he began a five-hour visit to one of the Philippines' poorer regions.

Negros, 300 miles southeast of Manila, is a sugar-growing island where hundreds of thousands of plantation workers have been thrown out of work by the collapse of world sugar prices.

The island is one of the areas where communist guerrillas are active. Mrs. Aquino's government has begun peace talks with rebel leaders to end the 17-year insurgency.

From Bacolod, Lugar rode on a van with provincial Gov. Daniel Lacson to a sugar cane plantation in Talisay, five miles outside the capital. The plantation is owned by the governor's family.

The senator was to return to Bacolod later to visit a feeding center, a malnutrition ward, and a lantern-making center started by the government to help jobless Filipinos.

Lugar said Monday in Manila that he expects "an outpouring of emotions" for Mrs. Aquino when she visits the United States Sept. 15-23.

Lugar said he gave Mrs. Aquino a letter from Reagan which he said "strongly supports this democracy in the Philippines."

Asked by reporters if he discussed with Mrs. Aquino rumors that Marcos might try to sneak back into the country while she is abroad, Lugar said the topic did not come up.

"I think that each one of us has great confidence that democracy will continue very strong in the Philippines while a great leader is in the United States."

Lugar said Mrs. Aquino had changed since he last saw her as a presidential candidate. Asked to describe the change, he said, "President Aquino is always confident of what she's doing. She's a strong leader."

Meanwhile, Marcos, in a taped telephone interview with supporters which was broadcast Monday on the private Manila radio station DZME, said he could return "any time if the Americans will help, if they will allow me."

Angola leader wants meeting with Reagan to end tensions with U.S.

LUANDA, Angola (NYT) — The president of Angola called Monday for a meeting with president Reagan to ease tensions between Angola and the United States, and bring peace to southern Africa.

The Angolan leader, Jose Eduardo dos Santos, also said he wanted the two countries to establish diplomatic relations.

Angola is recognized by every major nation except the United States and South Africa, both of whom provide military support for the rebels fighting to overthrow the Marxist government.

"We invite President Reagan to come to see the Angolan people and the problems we are facing," dos Santos said.

He made the remarks to foreign journalists after meeting with the Rev. Jesse Jackson, the civil rights leader, who Monday ended a three-day visit to Angola as part of a tour of southern Africa.

The Angolan leader's comments were seen by political experts here as aimed at trying to ease the Reagan administration's strong support for the rebels, the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, headed by Jonas Savimbi.

Earlier this year, the administration was reported to have begun shipping advanced weapons to the insurgents. In a speech last month, Reagan called the Angolan government a "client regime" of the Soviet Union and the rebels a "black liberation movement" seeking the same right to representations that black South Africans were seeking.

The Angolan government and others say the outside aid to the rebels could drag the 11-year-old war, which has helped to strangle this country's economy, on indefinitely.

Jackson gave reporters copies of what were labeled "draft points of agreement" between himself and dos Santos. Among the points was a call for the United States to reverse its policy of "destabilization" in Angola.

Other points included the establishment of an economic attache in Washington to expand trade links and moves to encourage new talks between the United States and South Africa on the independence of South-West Africa and the withdrawal of an estimated 30,000 Cuban soldiers based in Angola to protect the government from the rebel forces.

Dos Santos said he wanted Reagan to "understand us better and to know the real problems of southern Africa in general and the problems of Angola in particular."

The statue of Greyfriars Bobby, the Skye terrier that watched over its master's grave for 14 years, is back in its spot in central Edinburgh, Scotland, after being knocked down by a car.

Statue of famous Scottish dog to be moved to safer spot

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — Greyfriars Bobby, the most famous dog in Scotland, is moving from his stand at the corner of Candlemaker Row and George IV Bridge to a safer place.

The statue of the little Skye terrier was knocked down by a car in November and suffered a crack in its plinth but was put back up.

"But we're moving him to a safer position up the road 10 to 20 yards," said Martin Hannan, an spokesman for Edinburgh's City Hall. "The council has already bought the land there to do it."

To move the statue any further would put it out of context, for Greyfriars churchyard, where Bobby's master is buried, lies just across the road.

Greyfriars Bobby belonged to John Gray, a countryman who joined the police force in the early 1850s and took the little dog with him on his beat in the slums of Edinburgh Old Town.

Gray died of tuberculosis in 1858 and was buried in the churchyard, his dog following the coffin. Bobby, then in the care of Gray's son, went back to the churchyard the same night, squirmed under the gate and lay down in the dark at his master's grave.

For the next 14 years he never left it, except for short walks to Traill's Eating House for a meal from the owner and tidbits from customers who got to know of his devotion.

Police officers looked out for him by the light of their lanterns. The city's Lord Provost (mayor) had an engraved collar made for the dog, with a license for the state dog tax attached. The collar is in the city's Huntly House Museum.

The dog died in Traill's home in 1872 and legend has it that Traill secretly buried him in an empty part of Greyfriars churchyard, consecrated ground forbidden to animals. True or not, the dog has his own memorial there, which was unveiled in 1981: "Let his loyalty and devotion be a lesson to us all. Erected by the Dog Aid Society of Scotland."

Another memorial reads: "John Gray, died 1858. 'Auld Jack,' Master of 'Greyfriars Bobby,' and even in his ashes most beloved. Erected by American Lovers of Bobby."

The church stands across the road opposite Bobby's lifesize bronze statue, modeled by William Brodie, a member of the Royal Scottish Academy.

Two Hollywood films, by MGM and Walt Disney, were made about Bobby and the story is so moving and popular here that every guidebook to the Scottish capital mentions it.

Students benefit from 'Hatchet Job' on high school

By TINA SUSMAN

FALLBROOK, Calif. (AP) — Publishing an underground newspaper for high school students seemed like the thing to do to wake up this sleepy town, so Daniel Gluesenkamp did just that.

Sneaking onto campus early one morning in the fall of 1984, he dropped the finished product on benches, posted it on bulletin boards — anywhere it would be seen — and waited for the jaws to drop.

As quickly as "The Hatchet Job" appeared, Gluesenkamp disappeared, suspended from Fallbrook High School for five days by officials who found his newspaper obscene and libelous. The next day, Philip Tiso, a Hatchet Job writer, was ordered suspended two days.

Now, Gluesenkamp and Tiso have graduated from Fallbrook and are at the University of California at Santa Cruz with $5,000 each, money won in their legal battle with the Fallbrook Union High School District.

"Things turned out better than I expected," said Gluesenkamp. "I was surprised they gave us a settlement we'd accept. All the way along, they were saying things like 'We'll forget if you'll forget.' But we wanted an apology. They're not sorry, but they apologized."

In an out-of-court settlement reached in February, the school district agreed to pay Tiso and Gluesenkamp $22,000, to clear the suspensions from their records, apologize, and sponsor a one-day workshop on freedom of speech.

Tiso and Gluesenkamp in return agreed to drop claims against the district totaling $9.6 million and their lawsuit, which alleged their constitutional right of free speech had been violated.

The American Civil Liberties Union, which represented the two, received $6,000 for legal fees. The students donated another $6,000 to the ACLU.

Before The Hatchet Job, this San Diego County town of 15,000 residents was best known as home of Tom Metzger, former state leader of the Ku Klux Klan.

The Hatchet Job brought Fallbrook a different brand of notoriety.

"I felt there wasn't any place where students could say their feelings, other than on the homecoming game and things like that," Gluesenkamp said. "But partly, I just thought it would be something fun to do."

The first Hatchet Job included a movie and a book review, a comic strip criticizing U.S. involvement in Central America, and an opinion poll of teachers with ratings ranging from "cruelty" to "would like to have as a parent."

But it was a two-paragraph piece and a photo caption that raised the ire of Principal Hank Woessner.

The caption ran under a photograph of then-Secretary of Education Terrell Bell, school board president Wayne Miller and U.S. Rep. Ron Packard, R-Calif., and said they were completing a drug transaction.

The piece, aimed at student apathy, consisted of a series of words and phrases strung together and included references to sex, drugs, rock and roll music, and politics.

As with all Hatchet Job articles, the piece was written under a pseudonym, in this case 'Ol Pappy Smeer. It didn't take Woessner long to figure out who was involved. He traced a post office box to Gluesenkamp and soon after discovered that Tiso had written the think piece and picture caption.

Although more than a dozen students participated, only Gluesenkamp and Tiso were disciplined.

That's because none of the others were involved in wrongdoing, Woessner said.

Tiso and Gluesenkamp appealed to the school board to clear the suspensions from their records. After two refusals, attorney Rob DeKoven stepped in.

"It was probably the worst, most aggrevious case involving violation of student's First Amendment rights by a school district," said DeKoven, who's in private practice and volunteers his services to the ACLU.

The students filed a claim against the school district on Christmas Eve in 1984. The district then filed suit against them, asking the court to declare that the district hadn't violated the students' rights and seeking court costs. That prompted a countersuit by the students, DeKoven said.

Efforts to reach an out-of-court settlement failed.

Grandmother whiles away time with monsters

FLORESVILLE, Texas (AP) — Here resides the Lagoon Monster, scaly green with outstretched arms, and a two-headed dragon with red bulbous eyes.

A squarish gray elephant raises its tusks and flares its ears. A dog-faced primate rides behind.

Call it art. Call it oddity. It is the private menagerie of an 82-year-old woman otherwise known as Little Grandmother who has been crafting such unlikely creatures from concrete for three decades, and planting them in her front yard.

"Other people say, 'Grandmother, why don't you make an angel or a big bird?' They say, don't make ugly animals," says Beatrice Ximenes. "It's because I like the strange ones. I could do it, make a bird, but I don't want to."

To any rubberneck who has motored through Floresville, a small farming community southeast of San Antonio, the front-yard gallery is no secret. Any local resident can direct a visitor to Grandmother's house.

But the roadside curiosities are much more than that. This spring several of her sculptures were shown in a San Antonio art show. And next month she will enjoy a broader coming out when selected works go on exhibit at the Laguna Gloria Art Museum in Austin.

"A major piece will be 'The Monster That Came Out of the Water.' He's just fantastic and we're also going to have a wonderful rhino she did; it's orange with yellow ribs and real teeth. Cows' teeth, I think," said Kay Turner, a fan and a director of Texas Folklife Resources, a non-profit group co-sponsoring the show.

ALSO INCLUDED will be some of Ms. Ximenes' more conventional works, such as a cactus, one of her chairs and one of her capillas, a traditional Hispanic yard shrine.

Ms. Turner regards the artist as a secret too well-kept.

"It's not crazed behavior. It's a very developed tradition really and she is an eminent practitioner of that particular art form. It's not something that she invented. It has a very strong base in San Antonio," Ms. Turner said.

Ms. Ximenes said she learned the art from her husband, Pedro, who died 30 years ago. He was a master of creating tables, chairs, barbecue pits, shrines and giant baskets of cement formed over molded wire.

One of the distinguishing features of the works is that they often resemble pine boughs and logs, with bark patterns, knots and whorls all intricately formed and painted.

The art form, according to Ms. Turner, has roots in Mexico City and in the San Antonio area goes back to a man named Dionisio Rodriguez, who practiced during the early part of the century.

One of his better-known works is a long bridge in Brackenridge Park made to resemble intertwined tree limbs.

"He used a process which he developed but was based on a Mexican tradition of making concrete furniture. There are concrete bus stops in San Antonio and gas station pump covers made to look like trees," she said.

WHAT'S remarkable about Ms. Ximenes' work is that her cement sculptures are the first to depict animals, Ms. Turner said.

All the attention is well and good with Ms. Ximenes, a short plump woman known to all as Grandmother. She is getting used to the modest renown. She has already purchased a new blouse — appropriately covered with an abstract pattern of lions and other wild beasts — for the Austin show.

"I just thought of it as Grandmother doing another one of her animals. She never expected anyone to buy it but now people are coming around," she said.

And although a few residents describe the front-yard gallery as an eyesore, many residents fondly recall growing up with the bizarre zoo.

"It's been out there since I can remember and I was born and raised here," said Aurora Bonilla, 36, a billing clerk for the city who says she frequently drives by the house to see what else Grandmother has put out.

One of Ms. Ximenes' 40 grandchildren says it's a talent uniquely her own.

"Whoever else does it, it won't be like her's. Grandmother's like, what's-his-name, Picasso," said Beatrice Ximenes.

"She does tigers but they don't come out like they should. It's just her style."

Not fit for a dog

The phrase "dog days of summer" usually refers to periods of hot, sticky weather typically occurring between mid July and the end of August. The weather occurrences are notoriously noted for extremely hot temperatures, lack of rain or cooling winds, and, often, high humidity.

While it may be commonly suspected that the phrase derives from the weather during such times not being "fit for a dog," origination actually dates back to the ancient Greeks who named the dog days for the period when the dog star, Sirius, rose with the sun.

So much for history. There's something to be said for applying timeliness to phrases in relatively common usage. Can it not be argued that Texas is in an extended period of the "dog days?" Consider the following:

■ Legislators in Austin are now looking at ways to resolve the state's budget crisis and, almost certainly, will consider a plan that will involve some type of tax increase. That fact is enough to cause most taxpayers, however agreeable that a hike may be necessary, to reach for the antacid tablets, realizing the "dog days" have definitely arrived.

■ No relief is in sight for the oil industry, hard-hit by sagging oil prices and an abundance of oil on the world market. What does that mean? People residing in the areas of the state and nation dependent on oil for their livelihood will continue to suffer indefinitely.

■ Unemployment is still ravaging Texas cities and dealing misery to people from all walks of life who have been caught either by the oil slowdown or some other facet of the state economy's problems. Those individuals who have lost jobs know intimately and painfully what the term "dog days" implies.

All the evidence, in either context, points to this period as the dog days of summer — hot temperatures, not much wind, plenty of other aggravating problems.

But there's hope. The ancient Greeks noted that the "dog days" should end in this hemisphere by Sept. 1. It's already Aug. 19th.

Another View: On foreign policy

Consider the issues that occupied Congress last week just before members rushed off on vacation:

— The Senate voted to impose stringent economic measures against South Africa, including a ban on new investments, and approved $100 million in aid for the Nicaraguan rebels.

— The House voted to extend a moratorium on testing anti-satellite weapons and to delay production of binary chemical weapons.

— The House voted to require adherence to the 1979 Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty, and to chop President Reagan's pet Star Wars budget by more than $2 billion.

What do all these issues have in common? The answer, obvious, is also startling in light of Congress' historic role: Every one concerns foreign policy and national security. A generation ago, Congress deferred to the diplomats. Now Congress has become its own State Department, and Pentagon, with implications for American government that this Congress will do much to explore.

To observers from de Tocqueville to Walter Lippmann, legislatures and mass opinion are unsuited for a serious role in foreign affairs. Congress, thick with committees, personalities and agendas, is clumsy at the task. As Sen. J. William Fulbright observed, it is dominated by "a distressing tendency to adhere to the dictates of public opinion, or at least to its vocal and organized segments."

To others, it is just that tendency that compels congressional participation in foreign policy. Averell Harriman told a Senate committee: "No foreign policy will stick unless the American people are behind it. And unless Congress understands it the American people aren't going to understand it." The idea that Congress could not long permit a foreign policy without public support has its clearest expression over Vietnam, generating one assertion of congressional control after another — over war-making, arms sales, human rights, covert action overseas.

By the time President Reagan came to office, Congress had become more cooperative. The public has shown differences with his handling of Nicaragua, South Africa and arms control. But as long as he maintained popularity on other issues and did not flout public opinion on these, Congress has been inclined to give him room. Until now. As the president's posture on, for instance, South Africa, offends ever more of the public, Congress seems ever readier to act.

That's partly so for partisan reasons. A Democratic House naturally contends with a Republican president and Senate. But on issues like South Africa, even the Republican Senate disputes with the Republican president.

The result is a great deal of action, though perhaps more action than change. Congress has taken a genuine lead on South Africa, but it has given President Reagan his head on Nicaragua, despite the continued lack of public support. The many military issues are mostly affected around the edges; even with the cuts, Congress is allowing Star Wars to proceed at a robust rate.

What last week does demonstrate, however, is that congressional dissatisfaction with Reagan foreign policy is rising because it seems to be rising in the public. The first requirement of any foreign policy, Henry Kissinger has observed, is domestic support. If the president's policies can't hold that support, the modern Congress is ready to push its own.

FAA withholding airport safety funds

WASHINGTON — Incredible as it may seem, Federal Aviation Administration bureaucrats are willing to withhold money needed to make air travel safer in order to force airport managers to bow down to the FAA's standards on permissible aircraft noise levels.

Jack Anderson

The FAA apparently intends to make a test case out of San Francisco International Airport, which had the effrontery to set noise standards stricter than those of the federal agency. Determined to bend the airport's management to its will, the FAA has threatened to withhold $8 million in federal funds earmarked for such safety improvements at San Francisco International as improved runway lighting.

Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., in a letter to FAA administrator Donald Engen, seen by our associate Lucette Lagnado, accused the agency of trying to "blackmail" the airport into relaxing its noise standards. The airport is on San Francisco Bay, just across the Bayshore Freeway from Lantos' San Mateo County constituents. His district, just south of San Francisco proper, includes some of the poshest suburbs in California. Barbecue grills and backyard swimming pools are in use virtually the year around, and the roar of big jets landing and taking off at the airport is not a welcome intrusion on the residents' gracious life style.

So under community pressure, San Francisco International set noise-level standards below the FAA's nationwide minimum.

This ruled out the Boeing 707, and led Burlington Northern Air Freight, which relies on that model, to complain to the FAA that the airport was discriminating against it. The FAA not only agreed, but decided to use its power of the purse to make the airport management knuckle under. The money it threatened to withhold was to be used for improved safety at the airport.

This bureaucratic presumptuousness — in an administration whose policy is to get the federal government off the backs of local communities — infuriated Lantos. In his confidential letter to Engen, he wrote:

"I wish to re-emphasize my deeply held view that it is bad public policy to attempt to blackmail the San Francisco International Airport with the threat of withholding funds because of its appropriate attempt to mitigate the horrendous problem of aircraft noise — a nightmare for tens of thousands of citizens who live nearby.

"The airport continues to be under the threat that badly needed funds — to which the airport is entitled and which are for the safety of the millions of travelers who use the facility — will be withheld unless the airport surrenders to the unacceptable demand that aircraft which do not meet noise standards be allowed to land."

What exacerbated Lantos' outrage was the fact that while the air freight company's complaint was being reviewed by the FAA, the agency's chief legal counsel, E. Tazewell Ellett — the man who will ultimately rule on the issue — was making public statements describing the airport's refusal to let Burlington Northern's 707s land as "flagrant discrimination." In a speech to the Dallas-Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce, Ellett said that "we intend to stop that discrimination."

Lantos suggested that he and Engen meet to discuss the situation. Engen replied that he would be pleased to meet with the congressman — but that he would not discuss the subject Lantos wanted to bring up.

Footnote: A spokesman for Burlington Northern characterized his company as a "victim" caught in a fight between the airport and the FAA. He pointed out that the company's 707s met the FAA's noise standards and those of other airports — just not San Francisco.

GROCERY GROSS-OUT: The Coast Guard's Seventh District headquarters in Miami appears to be the last of the big tippers. On April 18, 1984, Pantry Pride billed the district $129.32 for assorted groceries. The Coast Guard sent a check for $129,320.85, which Pantry Pride deposited. A month later, the vendor caught the error and notified the Coast Guard — which took 20 months to collect the $129,191.53 overpayment. On July 8, 1985, Beaver Street Foods billed the district $824.02 for groceries and got a check for $496,276. The Coast Guard clerk apparently used the invoice number as the amount to be paid. This time the check was returned uncashed.

HAIR TODAY, GONE TOMORROW: Attorney General Edwin Meese strode into the barbershop the other day and found his balding counselor, Kenneth Cribb, in the barber's chair. "Do you have to pay full price for a haircut?" asked Meese mockingly. Cribb retorted: "In my case, it's a finder's fee."

EVANS & NOVAK

Reagan needs new 'marker' in Nicaragua

WASHINGTON — Now that they have finally won funding from Congress, Nicaraguan contras face devastation by new Soviet aircraft unless President Reagan moves quickly to remedy a three-year-old blunder by his administration.

Rowland Evans

When the State Department in 1983 "laid down a marker" to the Soviets against sending "advanced combat" jets to Nicaragua's Sandinista regime, it failed to include the L39: a Czech-made, two-seat jet trainer capable of carrying guns and bombs. Intelligence considers it 50-50 that the Kremlin will utilize the loophole and send Managua the jet to devastate the contras in their crucial buildup just beginning.

Robert Novak

That poses a tough decision for Reagan in his campaign to kill communism in Central America. He could confront the L39 militarily by either dispatching U.S. warplanes or giving F-5s to the Honduran air force — war-broadening acts with unfortunate consequences. Or, preferably, he can immediately present a new condition to Mikhail Gorbachev: no L39s in Nicaragua.

With or without Soviet introduction of L39s, long-delayed congressional passage of $100 million is no panacea for Nicaragua's democratic resistance. Officers must be properly trained, internal bickering must cease, the U.S. support structure must be organized and strategic questions — whether to concentrate on rural or urban areas — answered.

On top of this heavy burden, U.S. policymakers are haunted by the State Department's 1983 blooper. The "marker" laid down to Moscow by then Assistant Secretary Langhorne A. Motley drew the line on "advanced" jet aircraft at the MiG-21. Motley told the Soviets the U.S. would take immediate countermeasures if they gave the MiG-21 or any better plane to the Sandinistas.

Administration officials say the warning worked. The Soviets indeed have sent the dreaded "flying tank" MI-24 helicopter to Nicaragua and, more recently, the MI-8 — the most sophisticated counterinsurgency helicopter in Moscow's arsenal. But no fixed-wing MiG is in Nicaragua today.

The unplugged L39 hole remains a major mistake. The jet's utility for quick, in-and-out attack missions against contra bases along the border in Honduras could be devastating in breaking lines of communication and destroying supplies.

Unlike the comparatively slow attack helicopters, the L39 is nearly impregnable to any anti-aircraft weapons the contras have or are likely to get. Thus, during the critical buildup period for the contras, introduction of this combat-capable aircraft could counteract Reagan's belated victory in Congress.

Last May at a U.S.-Soviet "meeting of experts" in Moscow, the Americans had another chance to inform the Kremlin that the L39 would be no more permissable in Nicaragua than the MiG-21. The matter did come up, and the Russians were warned about the L39. But the message was so equivocal it left room for doubt about the U.S. response among Soviet officials who will decide whether to send the planes.

A possible reason for failing to spell out the inclusion of the L39 as an unacceptable Soviet escalation, according to administration insiders, is that Moscow then might attempt to link its aid to the Sandinistas to U.S. aid for anti-communist insurgencies in Angola and Afghanistan. But Reagan is in commanding position today to ignore all attempts to fine-tune U.S. pursuit of the Reagan Doctrine.

On Capitol Hill, his hard-fisted policy of barring Sandinista consolidation in the heart of the Americas has won the day. That is represented by House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, the most zealous enemy of the contras, privately criticizing Sandinista President Daniel Ortega for persecution of Church and press.

With this newly-strengthened political position, the president could lay down a new "marker" on the L39 in a way Gorbachev would understand. Otherwise, he may face grim military choices in neutralizing the L39: escalate the war by using U.S. air power to pulverize the Punta Huerte airstrip near Managua, or pull Honduras into the conflict by sending F-5 aircraft to its fledgling air force.

Introduction of American air power would play into the hands of critics who predict eventual use of U.S. ground troops. Giving Honduras F-5s would anger other Central American states on grounds of upsetting the regional balance of power.

So, the president is being urged to make clear to the general secretary that the L39 hole must be plugged. To do otherwise, means slow, steady progress by the contras in the gruelling struggle ahead could be hobbled before it starts.

CHARLEY REESE

Government 'by the people' doesn't exist

What we have done in the United States is create a political system which will surely kill self-government. It has already injured self-government to a greater extent than most people realize.

Charley Reese

We have allowed politicians to construct a system which allows only people able and willing to raise large sums of money to be elected. People will give large sums of money only to people who: (1) stand a chance of winning; and (2) they can be sure won't hurt them financially if they get in office.

It is also important to note that in our country today both wealth and power are largely institutional, not individual. To raise large sums, you need to get it from institutions — corporate or organizational.

The press is an accessory to the system. We deem people with no money as not viable candidates so we don't waste time even covering their candidacies. Since communication is also controlled by institutions, the non-monied candidate is not only shut out of contention but his voice is often muffled.

The result is what you see — a government largely controlled by and concerned about the welfare of large institutions. There is more concern for banks than for bank customers, for insurance companies than for insurance buyers, for developments than for people living in developments, for bureaucracies than for the people allegedly served by the bureaucracies, and for organizations than for the people allegedly represented by them.

Nor should anyone delude himself or herself that Ronald Reagan is an exception. His rhetoric notwithstanding, Reagan has yet to defy the large financial interests which backed his candidacy. He has doggedly pursued the transnational program — free trade and support for international banking.

The classic example of this is Poland. When the Soviet surrogates crushed Solidarity, Reagan had a choice. He could have acted consistent with his anti-communist rhetoric and forced the Polish government into bankruptcy. Instead, he supported the bankers — and dumped Solidarity in the process. It was more important to Reagan not to inconvenience the bankers than to cause discomfort to a communist government.

The Soviet gas pipeline is another example. This trans-Soviet pipeline was built with Western technology and money. It brings natural gas to Western Europe. If you believe the malarkey about the need to protect the Persian Gulf — on the alleged grounds that our Western allies are dependent on it for energy and therefore it must not fall into communist hands — then certainly it makes no sense to help our allies become dependent on communist-supplied energy.

But what did Reagan do? He gave into the financial interests. Soviet gas is marketed in the West by American and European banks and megacorporations. The truth is these same corporations concocted the myth of the strategic importance of the Persian Gulf. What is important to them is that they continue to market Persian Gulf oil.

So you see there is a direct relationship between policy and politics. Those who want to shape the policy for their own self interests also want to shape the political process to guarantee that only candidates amenable to them will be successful.

It seems to me we plain folks have two problems we must confront and solve: How do we re-capture the political process so candidates are not, in effect, screened out by money? How do we manage institutions, both government and private, which have grown so large as to become almost sovereign in themselves? General Motors and Exxon, for example, each have annual revenues which exceed the gross national product of a number of nations.

You can't have government by the people unless the people control the government.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Man sentenced to life for possession of marijuana

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — An Australian has been sentenced to life imprisonment by an Indonesian court after being convicted of possessing 26.7 pounds of marijuana, the official Antara news agency reported today.

Presiding Judge Ign Sudiarsa of the Gianyar District Court on the island of Bali handed down the verdict Monday after finding Russel Kenneth Duparcq, 33, guilty of drug possession, Antara said.

Duparcq, a horse trainer from Sydney, told the court he would appeal, the news agency said.

He was picked up by police at his hotel room at Ubud on Bali in September and charged with possessing the marijuana.

Indian to have bar mitzvah

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Littlesun Bordeaux arrived in Israel on Monday for his bar mitzvah celebration, replete in a porcupine-quill, Indian headdress, beaded kilt and fur leggings.

Littlesun Bordeaux is a member of the Teton Sioux tribe, and his mother says he is a descendant of Sioux chief Crazy Horse, who routed Gen. Custer at the Little Big Horn in 1876.

His mother, Armalona Greenfield, is Jewish and, according to Jewish law, a child's religion is passed from his mother. He attends Temple Beth Shalom in Spokane, Wash.

Littlesun and Mrs. Greenfield were flown to Israel as guests of the state airline El Al. They are to meet President Chaim Herzog and Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek during the next week.

Littlesun has been studying Hebrew for eight months in preparation for the ceremony Thursday at Jerusalem's Western Wall, the only remnant of the Biblical Temple.

Hail devastates vineyards

GENEVA (AP) — The worst hailstorm in years hit the Lake Geneva and Lake Lucerne regions, devastating vineyards and shattering roof shingles, police reported.

Hailstones, some as large as ping-pong balls, dented thousands of cars and broke skylights and windows in downtown Geneva on Monday, police said.

As the storm moved east along Lake Geneva, it pummeled vineyards and other cultivated land.

Hothouses were damaged and roof shingles shattered near Lucerne, in central Switzerland.

A spokesman for the Swiss Hail Insurance Company said the damage was certain to total millions of Swiss francs. He said it was the worst hailstorm recorded since 1975.

Gorbachev on vacation

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev has left Moscow for a summer holiday, the official Tass news agency reported today, but gave no details.

Gorbachev's departure from Moscow followed his televised speech Monday night in which he extended the Kremlin's moratorium on nuclear tests until the end of the year.

Tass did not say where the 55-year-old leader would spend his holiday, or how long he would be away from the Soviet capital.

The news agency traditionally announces when the Communist Party's general secretary goes on summer holiday. Such vacations usually last about one month.

Opposition: Government can't keep peace

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — An opposition spokeswoman was quoted today as saying the government's announcement that it has 8,501 people in emergency detention indicates its inability to maintain order by normal means.

Helen Suzman of the Progressive Federal Party was quoted in the Business Day newspaper as saying the number of people in custody two months after the latest emergency declaration is more than the number held under the previous state of emergency, which lasted eight months.

She did not say how many people were detained in the earlier emergency, which ended in March.

The government announced for the first time Monday how many detainees it was holding and reported their names to Parliament, as required under the Public Safety Act that was used as the basis for President P.W. Botha's June 12 emergency declaration.

The detentions were reported on the first day of Parliament's special session, which opened in Cape Town.

"It is a terrifying indictment of the government's inability to maintain law and order through normal due process of the rule of law," Mrs. Suzman was quoting as saying of the announcement.

"And it indicates in no uncertain terms the massive tide of resistance against the apartheid regime. If South Africa is ever to regain respectability in the eyes of the outside world, the emergency must be lifted and all detainees released," she was quoted as saying.

Regulations in force under the emergency prohibit journalists from revealing the names of detainees unless they are announced officially, reporting on actions of security forces without permission or quoting "subversive statements."

The government imposed the state of emergency in an effort to stop racial unrest related to apartheid.

By law and custom, apartheid establishes a racially segregated society in which South Africa's 24-million black majority has no vote in national affairs.

The five-million white minority controls the economy and maintains separate districts, schools and health services.

Also on Monday, Louis Nel, the deputy information minister, did not respond when asked by reporters whether legal action was planned against Desmond Tutu, the black Anglican bishop of Johannesburg, who has called during trips abroad for economic sanctions against South Africa.

A Cabinet minister said last week that Tutu's statements bordered on treason.

Later that day, the Bureau for Information sent news agencies an English-language translation of an editorial on the subject from Monday's editions of the Afrikaans-language newspaper, Beeld.

"In terms of the emergency measures the encouragement of sanctions or disinvestment constitutes a violation subject to a maximum fine of 20,000 rand ($7,820) or 10 years' imprisonment," it said. "According to reports, Bishop Tutu has pleaded for sanctions in Red China of all places. Should this prove true, it could become an important test of the state's desire to maintain its own law. There cannot be one law for Tutu as an internationally known figure and another for lesser people."

In another development, the government Bureau for Information said it has organized a project called "Operation Optimism" in which 46 performers of all races are to record a song about peace, progress and prosperity.

There are no plans yet to produce a record for public sale, said the bureau's Johan Eiselen, but the song will be recorded in seven languages and broadcast on government-controlled radio and television beginning in September.

Johannesburg pop music producer Felani Gumbi wrote the lyrics to the three-minute song, which has yet to be named.

OLDER AMERICANS EXPLORE SECOND CAREER WITH H&R BLOCK TAX COURSE

Thousands of older Americans take the first step towards a second career with the H&R Block Income Tax Course and earn money as income tax preparers.

H&R Block, the largest income tax preparation firm for over 30 years, is offering a basic income tax course starting September 8th and 9th with morning, afternoon, and evening classes available.

The course is ideal training for mature individuals who want to continue working after retirement or who are retired and want to go back to work. Classes are held over a 13 week period. An experienced Block instructor will guide students through various phases of income tax preparation. Classwork will include discussion, prasctice problems and actual experience preparing individual tax returns. New tax wil be explained.

Graduates of the course will leave with a practical skill they can put immediately to use. It's a challenging way to earn extra money and continue to be a productive member of the work force. Plus, there is always a need for people with tax knowledge.

Qualified course graduates may be offered interviews for positions with Block. Many of Block's employees find the flexible hours a plus. However, Block is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H&R Block.

One low course fee includes all textbooks, supplies and tax forms necessary for completion of the course. Certificates and 7.5 continuing education units will be awarded upon successful completion of the course. The course also meets the continuing education requirements of the Texas State Board of Public Accountancy.

Registration forms and a brochure for the income tax course may be obtained by contacting the H&R Block office 1101 N. Midkiff, 561-8689. Courses are being offered in 3 area locations.

Warm weather in area forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Very warm temperatures are forecast for Wednesday for the Midland area by forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. To accompany the high that should reach into the upper 90s, the NWS is calling for sunny skies and little wind to bring relief from the heat.

Fair skies, light and variable winds, and a low in the upper 60s are called for in the NWS forecast for tonight.

Monday's high of 98 was only four degrees short of the record high temperature set for that date in 1970. This morning's low was eight degrees above the record low of 60 set for this date in 1950.

STATE

A weak pressure field was dominant over Texas today, triggering thunderstorms along the middle and upper coastal plains.

Most of Texas was under clear skies, however, with light and variable winds across the state.

Early morning temperatures ranged from the 60s to the 80s, with overnight temperatures ranging from 61 at Marfa to 83 at Austin.

The National Weather Service said skies should be mostly sunny to partly cloudy through Wednesday, with hot temperatures in West and Central Texas. But isolated afternoon and evening thunderstorms could occur in Central Texas, East Texas, Far West Texas and the Panhandle.

NATION

Tropical storm Charley sent rain into New England today as it aimed out toward the north Atlantic, and heavy thunderstorms drenched sections of the Plains.

Heavy rain prompted flood watches in northern Connecticut and western Massachusetts.

Showers and thunderstorms extended from the Virginia coast across the eastern portion of the Carolinas and across southern Florida early today as well as through northeastern New England.

Elsewhere, thunderstorms packing heavy rain and hail rumbled across eastern Kansas and southeast Nebraska.

Showers were scattered from northwest New Mexico across northern Arizona and southern Utah into east central Nevada.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms along the southern Atlantic Coast and across southeastern New England; and rain and thunderstorms scattered across the central Missouri Valley and from southern Idaho into Arizona.

'Dogs, Rebs start training

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

A hot sun over cloudless skies and the barking voices of Midland High's Doug McCutchen and Midland Lee's Earl Miller greeted Tall City football players Monday.

It's seems to be a long way from the cries that go with championship football in District 4-5A, but there has to be a starting place. Monday was that first step.

It didn't look like a championship day at either MHS or Lee. There was a lot of sweat and a lot of gritted teeth. Championships don't come easy.

MHS opened with McCutchen's famed mile run — as promised. And as promised, there was some pain associated with the experience.

On the MHS varsity, 10 of the 52 players reporting Monday failed to run prescribed times ordered by McCutchen — six minutes for backs and 6:30 for linemen.

But McCutchen, who is starting his third season at MHS, liked what he saw.

"I feel like the team as a whole reported in good shape and that's a positive start," said McCutchen. "Even some of the kids who didn't run the times we wanted, looked as if they had been running this summer."

The surprise came when tight end Charles Loggie beat scat backs and track stars Anthony Adkison and Tyrone Oliver in the mile run.

WHILE LEE had no first day test for its athletes like the mile run, the Rebels ran enough sprints and went through enough agility drills to look just as weary as their cross town brethren when the first workout had passed.

"We're just glad the first one is over," said Miller, who is in his first year at the Lee helm. "I don't know how well it all went, but everyone showed up and that's a pretty good start in itself.

"We had some kids who reported who were not in very good shape, but the majority looked like they had been working. We're going to help those out who aren't in shape," Miller wryly added.

Miller has only 23 seniors on this year's roster and that's an area of concern.

"That's something that's going to force us to do a good coaching job this year," noted Miller. "We've got to compensate for that lack of leadership and experience. But I will say that even though our seniors aren't big in numbers or talent, this group seems to have a grasp for what we are trying to do. They have as much football knowledge as any group we've ever had."

Both teams went through two workouts in shorts Monday and that will continue through the week. The teams will don full pads Friday when a new pain experience is on tap.

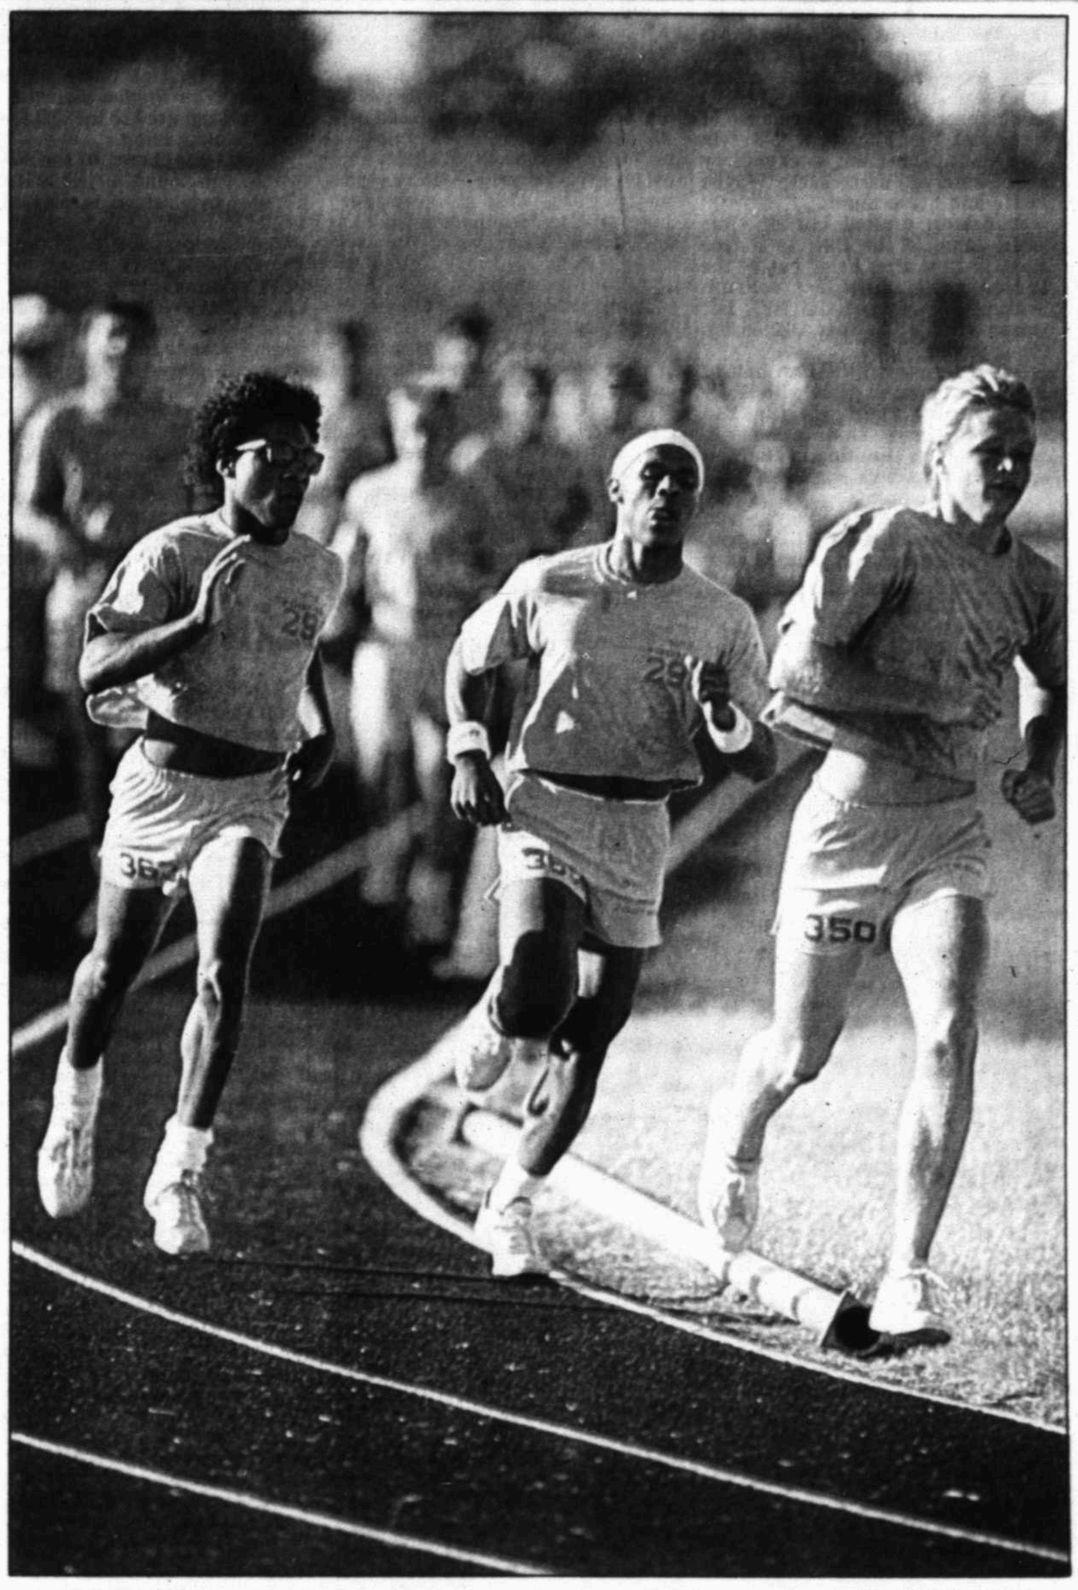

"We want to get our kids into the offense and defense this week. This is the learning week," said McCutchen. "Repetition and conditioning is very important at this stage."

MILLER COUNTERED, "We've got to do a good job of teaching and conditioning this week. Next week, we'll be getting back to the fundamentals of hitting. This week is a review week. It's a time when you reinforce what you did in spring training."

Lee assistant coach Van Tom Whatley said, "I think the kids retained a lot of what we did in spring training. I thought that was the good thing about the first day."

MHS assistant Randy Quisenberry insisted, "The hard part is over for the coaches. When you get everyone fitted and equipment issued, the rest is easy."

Now if the coaches can just convey that message to the players.

Bartkowski guides Rams past 49ers

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Rams' preseason search for an effective quarterback turned up a candidate Monday night.

Steve Bartkowski, showing he can still throw like he did in his prime with the Atlanta Falcons, passed for two touchdowns in the Rams' 31-17 exhibition victory over the San Francisco 49ers.

Charles White also rushed for two touchdowns for the Rams, but it was Bartkowski who caught the coach's eye.

"I was pleased with the way Bartkowski played," Rams Coach John Robinson said. "We did feel good that he played poised and threw the ball effectively."

San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh was not as concerned with the outcome of the game as he was with evaluating his personnel.

"The game was an opportunity to see some players," Walsh said. "Looking at the films is critical in these types of games."

Bartkowski, starting in place of an injured Dieter Brock, led the Rams to a 17-7 halftime lead by completing 11 of 15 passes for 147 yards.

"Our game plan was pretty basic," Bartkowski said. "There are more weapons here than I've ever been around before. The greatest thing are those guys up front.

"Our offense finally got into a rhythm and we were able to execute ... We're definitely going in the right direction."

"We threw a lot today, we threw a lot on first down," Robinson said. "We want a guy who understands what's going on. We want a guy at quarterback who runs the team."

White scored on a 10-yard run in the third quarter and a 3-yard run early in the final quarter to help the Rams keep the game out of reach.

On the Rams' first possession, Bartkowski gave them a 7-0 lead with a 22-yard scoring pass to Ron Brown.

Bartkowski's second touchdown pass was a 26-yard strike to Bobby Duckworth in the second quarter.

The 13-year veteran was signed as a free agent during the off-season.

White's second score gave the Rams a 31-17 lead with 9:26 to play.

The 49ers had cut the Rams' lead to 24-17 in the second half on a 2-yard touchdown run by reserve quarterback Mike Moroski and a field goal by Ray Wersching.

Moroski replaced 49er starter Jeff Kemp at halftime. Kemp started in place of an injured Joe Montana and completed 15 of 27 passes for 157 yards and one interception.

Rookie Tony Cherry scored the 49ers' first touchdown on a 3-yard run with 6:23 elapsed in the second quarter. Mike Lansford booted a 50-yard field goal for the Rams with 1:13 left in the first quarter.

Wersching, who missed two field goal trys in the first half, booted a 38-yard field late in the third quarter.

McCutchen adds two coaches to MHS staff

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland High head football coach Doug McCutchen has added two new coaches to his staff for the 1986 season.

They are Monty Stumbaugh, who has been promoted from Midland Freshmen School to become coach of MHS' sophomore team, and Jim Raughton, who comes from Haskell to become the assistant sophomore team coach in football and the junior varsity basketball coach under Jack Stephenson. Stumbaugh will also coach track under MHS' Johnny Williams.

Stumbaugh, who has coached at both Alamo Junior High and MHS Freshmen since 1981, replaces Ron Hubby who resigned last spring to become head football coach and athletic director at Junction. Hubby was at MHS for only one year.

Raughton, who comes to MHS with a dynomite 95-23 record as head basketball coach at Haskell, replaces Rick Sample, who has elected to become athletic chairman at San Jacinto Junior High.

Raughton grew up in McCutchen's home stomping grounds of Bronte, graduated from Angelo State in 1979 and started his coaching career in Roscoe in 1980. Raughton moved to Haskell in 1980 and was an assistant coach there for two years before becoming head basketball coach in 1982.

RAUGHTON WON three district championships while at Haskell in basketball and was in the playoffs all four years he was head coach.

"We played Morton too many times in the playoffs. They beat us three of the four years," said Raughton.

Stumbaugh graduated from Lubbock Monterey in 1975 and from Texas Tech in 1979. He earned his masters degree from Sul Ross this summer along with Lee head track coach Eddie Wolski.

Jim Raughton — Monty Stumbaugh

"I'm really pleased with the new job. I've been working to get to the high school level and I think it helps morale all around when someone within the system gets promoted," said Stumbaugh.

Lee promoted Lee Freshmen coach Jesse Benavidez to the Rebel varsity last spring in another coaching move within the system.

Sample has assumed his duties at San Jacinto, but said Monday that the decision to move was a hard one to make.

"I requested the move. I think it will be a challenging job. It's something I thought about a long time. I know I'm going to miss some of the kids, especially when basketball starts. I'm not planning on coaching basketball at San Jacinto this year, but I don't know how long I can keep my hand out of it," said Sample, who replaces the retiring Hartwell Martin as the SJ athletic chairman.

MARTIN ANNOUNCED his retirement at the end of the school year after being in the Midland system for more than 30 years.

Raughton will join Stephenson in basketball as soon as the football season ends.

"I turned down some other jobs, but I wanted in a bigger system," said Raughton. "Coach Stephenson is a good basketball coach and I really wanted to work with him. I'm looking forward to that."

Raughton and wife, Sherrie, have a boy, Lisle, eight months.

Stumbaugh and wife, Sara, a teacher at Bowie Elementary, have two children, Justin, 6; and Jake, 3.

Angels use 20 hits, 5 DPs to smash Gators

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland's Angels lashed out 20 hits and came up with five timely double plays on the way to a third straight win over the Beaumont Golden Gators in Texas League action at Angels Stadium Monday night.

Unlike the suspenseful one-run extra inning win the previous night, the Angels took an 11-4 decision this time, but it was not without its suspense.

Doug Banning came out of the bullpen in the ninth, after submariner Julian Gonzalez had loaded the bases on two walks and a hit batsman with none out, and walked away from it unmarked. Unfortunately it wasn't a save situation, but the performance was worth one.

Banning got cleanup hitter Scott Parsons on a bouncer back to the box, fired home and catcher Steve Liddle went to third for the double play. "It was a smart play by Liddle, throwing to third," said Manager Joe Maddon. "He saw the man going to third wasn't running that fast."

After a walk, Banning got Randy Byars on another rap back to the box and threw home for the game-ending force.

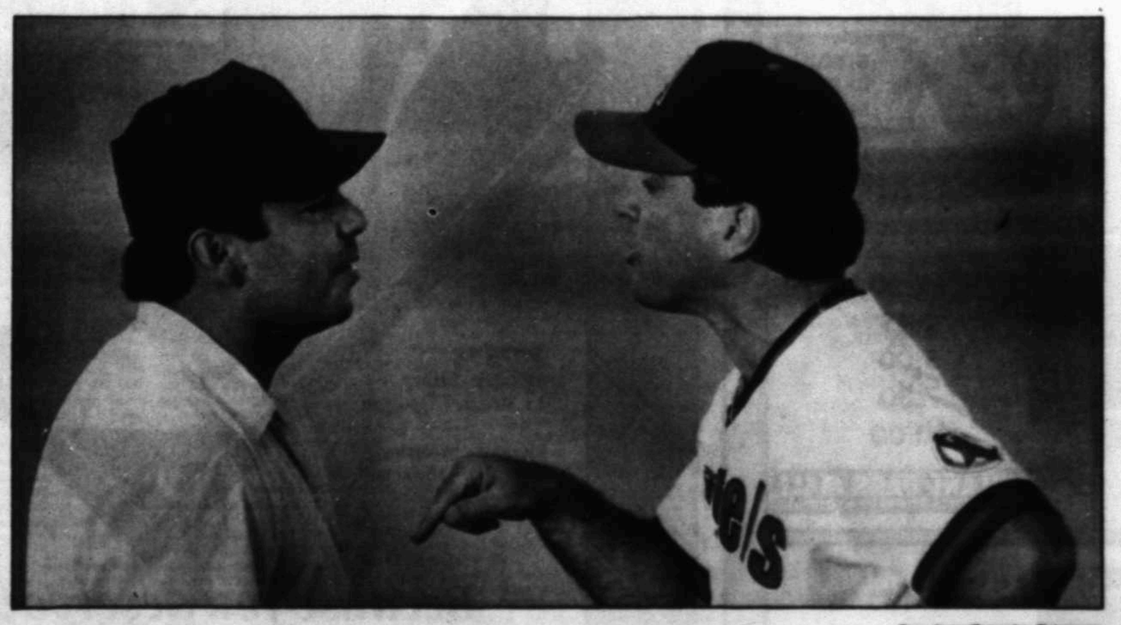

Starter Bryan Price, 2-1, got the win, going 6⅔ innings before showing signs of weariness.

ALTHOUGH MIDLAND came up with five DPs, none were exactly routine. Even third baseman John Hotchkiss' around the horn DP in the sixth..."That ball was hard hit and he made a helluva a play," said Maddon.

Also there were a couple of snappy 4-3 and one 1-3 twin killings.

James Randall, Kevin King, Dante Bichette and Jeff Schaefer led the attack on four Gator pitchers with three hits each. And Pat Keedy furnished most of the muscle with a double and his 10th homer of the season, not a bad total considering he didn't join the club until 10 days into the second half and then wallowed in a dreadful slump for another two weeks.

Four Beaumont errors helped make things easy for Midland. And Midland's defense rendered seven walks relatively harmless.

Ron Jaap/Reporter-Telegram

Midland manager Joe Maddon argues with umpire Keith Meastas following a questionable call at third where Angel Pete Coachman was called out.

Price looked as though he might have trouble surviving the first, giving up a three walks and a double, but no runs, thanks to catcher Liddle who gunned down leadoff batter Joey Cora trying to swipe second. But it wasn't until the seventh that Price was finally chased.

"He had thrown only 100 pitches, but they got a couple bat handle hits, and then a hit batsman and Cora's two-run single. Actually, Steve Garcia hit the hardest ball of the inning, a one-hop liner right at second baseman Pete Coachman who turned it into a double play."

AFTER JERALD Clark got his third hit, "I wanted to get Julian (Gonzalez) in there for the righthanded hitters. He has been throwing well lately."

He got out of the seventh and eighth, but Gonzalez issued two walks and hit Clark with a pitch to open the ninth and had to be lifted. "He was trying to guide the ball and that's when he gets in trouble. When he's aggressive, he can throw that fast ball by the hitters," Maddon analyzed.

The Angels had removed any lingering doubt with three in the eighth when King and Dave Montanari singled, Bichette doubled home one run, Liddle singled home another and Schaefer's hit to left made it 11-4.

QBs Kelly, Long sign; Team rosters nearing 60 limit

Associated Press

Quarterback Jim Kelly, carrying the tag of savior, signed a multi-million-dollar contract with the Buffalo Bills, rookie quarterback Chuck Long ended a holdout by signing with Detroit on a busy Monday in NFL camps.

Dozens of players were cut Monday by NFL clubs, which are required to reduce their rosters to 60 players by Tuesday.

The Buffalo Bills said they had reached a deal with Kelly, the former Houston Gamblers-New Jersey Generals quarterback, for between $7.5 million and $8 million, making him the highest paid pro football player at about $1.5 million a year.

San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana had been the highest paid player at about $1.3 million a year.

Long, from Iowa, ended his 27-day holdout by signing a four-year contract with the Lions worth approximately $1.75 million.

Long signed Monday morning at the Pontiac Silverdome and then joined his teammates for an afternoon workout at Oakland University.

IN A move related to Kelly's signing, the Bills cut quarterback Art Schlichter. Denver axed 11-year NFL wide receiver Butch Johnson and San Diego, apparently impressed by the four-touchdown performance of free-agent Tom Flick in a 45-38 win over Philadelphia last weekend, released reserve quarterbacks Wayne Peace and Steve Smith.

Schlichter, drafted out of Ohio State, came to the Bills as a free agent in June after being cut by the Indianapolis Colts last season. Schlichter re-entered the NFL last season after a one-year suspension for gambling.

Schlichter played the first half of Buffalo's preseason game with Houston Saturday night. He fumbled once and threw an interception, both turnovers resulting in Houston scores as the Oilers won 23-20.

Saints

New Orleans cut nine players and signed a fair of ex-USFL players, guard Pat Saindon and running back Mel Gray.

Falcons

Twelve players were cut, including six-year starting linebacker Al Richardson and third-year linebacker Jeff Jackson, and five others went on injured reserve. Atlanta also signed USFL wide receivers Joey Jones of the Birmingham Stallions and Aubrey Matthews of the Jacksonville Bulls.

Bills

Twelve others joined Schlichter on the cut list, four were placed on injured reserve and veteran linebacker Lucius Sanford was placed on the physically unable to perform list.

Patriots

Quarterback Steve Calabria and defensive back Tony Woolfolk were among four free agents cut.

Meanwhile, safety Vencie Glenn of Indiana State faced the possibility of being the first second-round pick since 1965 not to be with the Patriots in his rookie season.

Coach Raymond Berry said that, barring injury, the defensive backs he planned to keep were the seven who were on the team last season.

Steelers

Former Houston Gamblers defensive end Van Hughes signed a contract and reported to the team's summer training camp.

Hughes was chosen by the Steelers in the fifth round of the 1984 draft but decided instead to play in the USFL.

The Steelers also hold rights to quarterback Cliff Stoudt of the USFL's Birmingham Stallions. But Coach Chuck Noll has said he doesn't want Stoudt, and Stoudt has said he doesn't want to return to Pittsburgh, where he played after quarterback Terry Bradshaw retired.

The Steelers are reported negotiating with the St. Louis Cardinals for rights to Stoudt.

Chiefs

Thirteen players were waived including the first draft choice to be cut, 10th-round pick Ike Readon, a nose tackle out of the Hampton Institute.

Three others were placed on injured reserve and three-year Chief's veteran offensive tackle John Alt was sidelined as "physically unable to perform" with a lower back injury.

Seahawks

Cornerback Keith Simpson, the Seattle Seahawks' 1978 first-round draft choice, and veteran fullback Dan Doornink were among 14 players released as Seattle reduced its roster to 72.

Packers

Wide receiver Phillip Epps ended a 26-day holdout by signing a pair of one-year contracts, and Green Bay trimmed its roster by 14 players.

The cuts included veteran linebacker George Cumby, defensive back Ronnie Burgess, former Pittsburgh Steelers punter Craig Colquitt and former Chicago Bears kicker Bob Thomas.

Cardinals

St. Louis cut 11 players, including former first-round draft pick Clyde Duncan, and picked up one by trading an undisclosed conditional draft selection for Tampa Bay linebacker Rick DiBernardo.

Chargers

Linebacker Gary Plummer, a three-year USFL veteran, was signed, making him the third San Diego signing from the rival league since it canceled its fall season.

Bears

Third-year wide receiver Brad Anderson and sixth-round draft pick Jeff Powell, a running back from Tennessee, were among 12 players cut.

Colts

Indianapolis released 10 players and placed six others on injured reserve. The team may not have to release anyone else on Tuesday to get down to the 60-man limit, Coach Rod Dowhower said.

Redskins

Veteran kicker Mark Moseley, the seventh-leading scorer in NFL history, was virtually assured of a spot on this year's roster when challenger Jim Asmus was among seven players waived. The cuts placed the Redskins roster at 83 players, including seven former USFL players.

Dallas' dream backfield may be just a dream

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Is there a dream backfield in the future of the Dallas Cowboys? The talent is available and apparently willing, but such a development appears unlikely, at least right now.

In Tony Dorsett, the Cowboys have the sixth-leading rusher in National Football League history. Barring injury, the 32-year-old Dorsett probably has several productive seasons in his future.

And in recent signee Herschel Walker, the Cowboys have a potential superstar, a 24-year-old blend of speed and power who gained more than 6,000 yards in three USFL seasons.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry was asked about the possibility of Dorsett and Walker playing in the same backfield following Monday's practice sessions, the first in full pads for Walker since he signed a five-year contract last week.

"Anything's a possibility," Landry said. "I don't have any plans of anything. Herschel's learning the plays at tailback, that's the easiest way to learn the offense. He's the No. 3 tailback right now."

While Dorsett indicated he'd welcome the possibility of playing with Walker, he said he didn't expect it.

"I don't know what they're going to do," Dorsett said. "From what I'm seeing, they've got two guys at the same position.

"I don't see it (the two playing at the same time). He's capable of blocking. I'm capable of blocking. If they choose to do something like that, I think it could work. Coach Landry makes those decisions."

Both Landry and Dorsett confirmed that they had met briefly before Monday afternoon's practice, but neither would discuss what went on. "It's our business," Dorsett said.

WALKER OFFICIALLY began his career with the Cowboys Monday morning on a nearly empty practice field, dressed in shorts and T-shirt and taking handoffs and pitchouts from a third-string quarterback.

The 1982 Heisman Trophy winner at Georgia, whose contract with the Cowboys is reportedly worth a total of $5 million, began his workout after the rest of the Cowboys finished a 45-minute morning practice.

Walker worked out under some studying eyes. Watching were offensive coordinator Paul Hackett, running back coach Al Lavan — and Dorsett.

"He's a great guy and a great athlete," Dorsett said of Walker. "He'll probably make the adjustment pretty quick. We've chatted just briefly. Herschel's a nice guy, just like I am."

But Dorsett didn't hide his continuing anger about Walker's contract. Reportedly, Dorsett will make less than $500,000 this year, his 10th in the NFL.

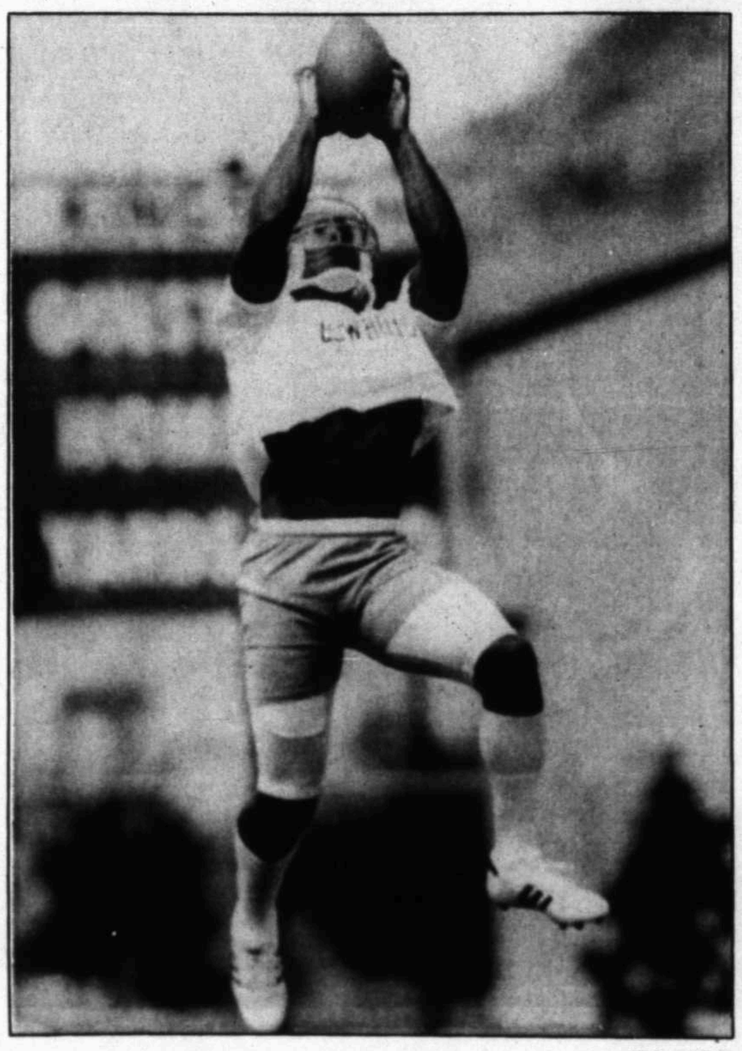

"It's not Herschel Walker. It's management," he said. "Some guys will let it blow by and some won't. Nobody's upset with Herschel. If you want unity, you treat people as equals."

Walker, who left the New Jersey Generals after the USFL decided to scrap its 1986 season after receiving just $3 in damages from its antitrust suit against the NFL, downplayed the friction.

"I understand Tony and respect him a great deal," Walker said. "That's the way things are. We're friends. He's one of the best running backs in the NFL."

Walker said he's been greeted warmly by his new teammates.

"People aren't upset," he said. "I've been treated very nice. The players have helped me out a lot. They want to win. I really don't feel any pressure. You put pressure on yourself. My job is to play football. I'm feeling pretty good."

Cowboys cut former Rebel star

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys cut veteran tight end Junior Miller, a former Midland Lee Rebel who was trying to make a career comeback, and wide receiver Kenny Duckett, a team spokesman said Monday.

"Right now I'm gonna just go back to Lincoln (Neb.) and sit down and talk to my wife and see if we want to go ahead and continue my career in football," Miller said. "If not, I'm going to have to do what I was doing at first and that was share the word with other people."

Miller was the Atlanta Falcons' No. 1 draft choice in 1980. During his rookie year, he made 46 catches for 574 yards and nine touchdowns. But in 1983, he made only 16 catches for 125 yards and scored no touchdowns.

In 1984, Miller began asking to be traded and refused to report to training camp. A month later he was traded to the New Orleans Saints, where he played out his option year.

Miller has said by drinking a case of beer a night, he drank himself out of football.

But in 1985, Miller quit drinking and became a born-again Christian. He sat out the season working a construction job in Lincoln for $3 an hour. He signed with the Cowboys in May.

Oilers send 10 players packing

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Veteran right guard John Schuhmacher, who started all 16 games for the Houston Oilers last season, and free agent kicker Joe Cooper were among 10 players cut by the Houston Oilers Monday.

Schuhmacher was expected to battle former No. 1 draft pick Dean Steinkuhler for a starting positon last year but Steinkuhler missed the entire season with a knee injury.

Mike Kelley, a third round selection in 1985, had moved ahead of Schuhmacher to the starting position this season.

Cooper, a late cut with the Oilers last season, was waived without kicking in either of Houston's first two preseason games.

Indians promote Swindell

Swindell, 21, was the second player picked overall in the major league June draft. Swindell came from the University of Texas, where he starred for three seasons.

At Waterloo, Swindell started three games, posting a 2-1 record with a 1.00 earned run average in 18 innings.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Wednesday, August 20, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You will find more opportunities for intellectual pursuits. Emotions will be mixed until you settle a partnership dispute. Do not let it get out-of-hand or into court. Spend more time planning and let others take over some of the details. Be alert, especially in November and April, for possible money gains.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: 23rd U.S. President Benjamin Harrison, architect Eliel Saarinen, Connie Chung of "NBC News at Sunrise," Twins slugger Tom Brunansky, San Diego all-star third baseman Graig Nettles, ballerina Carla Fracci, Seattle pitcher Mark Langston and singer Isaac Hayes.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Traveling excites you. Shop for hard-to-find items. Consider your options with care. An excellent day for making joint deals. Consult a lawyer if you question a contract's wording.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Travel proves to be a valuable tool in advancing career or business. Romance keeps you on the run. If you feel hesitant about making a permanent commitment, wait! A letter brings good news.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Financial outlook brightens. You meet new challenges at work with tremendous success. Revealing a secret could upset an ongoing relationship. Show how loyal you can be.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your ability to bluff is the secret of your success. Your personal interests are advanced by a stranger's actions. Pay close attention to small details. A change will bring great relief.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Some athletic activity is featured today. Be open to partner's suggestions regarding travel. A stay-at-home vacation could be an attractive option if you are short on cash.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Daydreaming is fine so long as you do not lose sight of reality. Develop a latent talent. A hobby could turn into a real gold mine. Your faith in a loved one is restored.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not let caution prevent you from advancing original ideas. Family plans could take precedence over personal desires. Casual gatherings hold appeal for evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): New clues surface in your search for truth. Tact works better than fault-finding, especially with a sensitive soul. Attractive member of opposite sex offers invaluable advice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Social event could interfere with business plan but the happiness it brings is worth the sacrifice. Romantic partner shows new understanding and sympathy. Curtail unnecessary spending.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 29): Make a commitment that will cement a valuable relationship for all time. Do not worry so much about tomorrow. You have a guardian angel to protect you. Your enthusiasm motivates others.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Others can be expected to turn to you for the encouragement they need to go forward. Contact a vocational counselor to help you sort out career thoughts. Look at overall picture carefully.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do what comes naturally and relationship with partner will improve. Reach an understanding with all members of your household about spending. New opportunities are around corner.

Quick tricks are a means of measuring the power of a hand. However, they may prove to be an optical illusion, for the shoals of distribution can wreck a seemingly impregnable contract. No more vivid example of this exists than the classic "Mississippi Heart Hand."

In the days of whist on the river boats, doubling and redoubling could continue indefinitely. This hand was probably dealt by cardships to their victims, who would soak them for as much as they thought the traffic would bear. Reportedly, Charles M. Schwab lost at least $10,000 on this hand—a considerable fortune in those times.

Actually, the hand is quite a bit older than that. A version of it was given by Hoyle as far back as 1747. Even in those days, it seems, a sucker was born every minute. The modern version dates back to Thomas Matthews in 1804.

Not surprisingly, South feels that he can make all the tricks at a heart contract. After he ruffs the ace of diamonds opening lead, he leads a trump and learns that West started with more trumps than he. No matter what he does, declarer finds that he can make no more than six tricks. West simply ruffs any plain-suit lead and continues to force South with diamonds.

The hand is ingeniously constructed for bridge. Despite their plethora of quick tricks, North-South cannot make any game. The best they can do is nine tricks at a spade contract or 10 in clubs.

Golda Meir's son applies to be cellist with small U.S. orchestra

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — Menachem Meir, a member of the Israeli Philharmonic and son of the late Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir, wants to become the Bismarck-Mandan Symphony Orchestra's principal cellist, a spokeswoman says.

The 62-year-old Meir, who studied with Pablo Casals, made his desire know during a telephone call last week from Tel Aviv, Israel, said Nancy Swenson, the orchestra's executive director.

"This is the first time we've had a person of this stature apply for our orchestra," Mrs. Swenson said. The position last year paid between $11,000 and $15,000 for the 64-member ensemble's eight-month season, she said.

Mrs. Swenson said when she talked with Meir she noted his credentials were above those required for a small orchestra.

He still expressed interest in the full-time position and sent a resume and audition tape, she said.

She said she did not know why Meir wanted to leave Israel, but she understood he had relatives in the United States.

"He is looking for a position in this country," Mrs. Swenson said. "It did sound like his family wanted to move here."

LONDON (AP) — The newly married Duke and Duchess of York will be making their first official trip abroad in October when they visit the Netherlands.

Prince Andrew and the former Sarah Ferguson, who were married July 23 in Westminster Abbey, are to attend the formal completion of the Eastern Scheldt flood barrier on Oct. 4, Buckingham Palace said Monday.

Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands will close the final sluice in the $4 billion chain of dams, flood barriers and dikes across low-lying Zeeland province, one of the world's largest flood prevention projects.

SEA GIRT, N.J. (AP) — Now that the Joyce quintuplets have turned 3 years old, their father says the 2s weren't really so terrible, even though it's hard to get sleep.

Megan, Lauren, Ryan, Christopher and Kevin Joyce were born Aug. 18, 1983, the first children for Jenifer and Jerry Joyce.

They family celebrated their third birthday on Sunday at a party attended by about 30 children and 20 adults.

"Their energy level is incredible," said Mrs. Joyce, 30. "They're going on all the time. It's constant motion; they don't stop."

Her 34-year-old husband added that the "terrible 2s weren't all that terrible." "But," he added, "they don't nap like they used to...They peak at different hours."

ARDMORE, Okla. (AP) — A bodyguard of country music singer Johnny Paycheck is free on bond after being arrested for an alleged weapons violation at the performer's concert here.

Richard E. Long, 34, of Nashville, Tenn., was arrested Friday night at Hardy Murphy Coliseum after police found an automatic pistol in his trousers, assistant Police Chief David Willingham said.

Misdemeanor charges of carrying a concealed weapon were filed Monday, said assistant distict attorney Maria Malowney.

He was freed on $215 bond pending an Aug. 27 court appearance, she said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Judds, a mother and daughter who have sung professionally for only three years, and former rodeo performer Reba McEntire lead the finalists for the annual Country Music Association awards.

The Judds, daughter Wynonna and mother Naomi, and Ms. McEntire are nominees for five honors apiece in the 20th annual awards, including entertainer of the year, and for single, album and music video of the year, the CMA said Monday.

The Judds are cited for their "Grandpa (Tell Me 'Bout the Good Old Days)" from their album "Rockin' With the Rhythm."

Ms. McEntire, who gave up rodeo work about seven years ago to concentrate on her singing, is nominated for "Whoever's in New England."

In addition, the Judds are nominated for vocal group of the year and Ms. McEntire is nominated for top female vocalist.

Other finalists for entertainer of the year, the top award, are Willie Nelson, Ricky Skaggs — whose son Andrew was shot Sunday in Virginia by a truck driver — and Texan George Strait.

Strait and ex-catfish cook Randy Travis are finalists for four awards each.

They lead the finalists for top male vocalist, joined by veterans George Jones and Hank Williams Jr. and actor-singer Gary Morris of the television series "The Colbys."

Other finalists for No. 1 female vocalist are Rosanne Cash, Janie Frickie, Emmylou Harris and Anne Murray.

The Judds learned the news as they were leaving California for Nashville after a six-city tour.

"They gave us the news right here in the airport and we don't think we'll need the plane to fly home," they said at Los Angeles International Airport.

Ms. McEntire, of Stringtown, Okla., has been voted female vocalist of the year for two straight years.

"Needless to say, I'm thrilled," she said from her ranch in Oklahoma. "I appreciate the confidence my peers have placed in me, and if I'm lucky enough to win in any category, I'll continue to work real hard to live up to that trust."

Winners will be announced Oct. 13 in a live CBS-TV show from the Grand Ole Opry House.

The voting is done by the 7,500 singers, musicians, songwriters and others who belong to the CMA.

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The new commander of the Strategic Air Command says he never expected the Air Force to be his life's work, and entered reserve officers' training to avoid the draft during the Korean War.

"As a boy, I wasn't interested in making model airplanes," Gen. John T. Chain told the Sunday World-Herald. "I never wanted to fly."

The Korean War was on when Chain entered Denison University, a small liberal arts college in Granville, Ohio.

"I went through ROTC basically to stay out of the draft," Chain said. "If Denison had had Navy ROTC, I might have wound up being a sailor."

Scott notches first win against Pirates in 3-0 style

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Houston Astros pitcher Mike Scott may not be as famous as Dwight Gooden or Fernando Valenzuela, but there's little doubt he's become one of the National League's premier pitchers.

Scott pitched a four-hitter and struck out 10, beating Pittsburgh for the first time in nine career decisions Monday night as the Houston Astros downed the Pirates 3-0.

"He's the most dominant pitcher in the league right now," said Houston Manager Hal Lanier. "He leads the league in strikeouts and earned run average and if we'd given him a little more support early in the year, he'd probably lead in wins."

"Right now I think I'd rather face Valenzuela or Gooden before him, the way he's throwing," Pittsburgh third baseman Jim Morrison said.

Scott, 13-8, raised his major league-leading strikeout total to 233. He pitched his fourth shutout of the season and lowered his earned run average to 2.23, best in the majors.

"The funny thing is I think he's thrown better against us this year," Pittsburgh Manager Jim Leyland said. "I'm not taking anything away from what he tonight, either. It's hard to say who's the best pitcher in the league but it's pretty hard to argue with the stats he has this year."

Scott entered the game with a career 0-8 mark and 5.73 ERA against Pittsburgh.

"These guys have been tough on me," Scott said. "I've pitched a couple of good games where I haven't had much luck and they've beat me up a few times, too."

The Astros won for the eighth time in 11 games. Houston increased its National League West lead to 6½ games over idle San Francisco.

Jose Cruz hit a two-run homer in the fifth inning against Bob Walk, 5-7. Cruz's fifth home run of the season followed a two-out single by Kevin Bass.

"Jose's really come on and picked up the whole ball club," Lanier said. "He's been getting the hits in key situations and he's back to being the hitter he's been his whole career."

The Astros scored a run in the third when Scott singled, advanced to third on a walk and an infield out and scored on Denny Walling's infield hit.

Pittsburgh's most serious threat came in the seventh when Sid Bream singled and continued to second on center fielder Billy Hatcher's error. Bream advanced to third on a groundout, and was stranded when Scott retired the next two batters.

"We tried to make some things happen when we got the chances," Leyland said. "We just didn't get too many chances."

Baseball Roundup

Mets 5, Dodgers 4

LOS ANGELES — Darryl Strawberry ended an 0-for-24 slump with a two-run homer and RBI single and Keith Hernandez also homered, pacing the New York Mets past the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Bob Ojeda, 13-4, won for the seventh time in his last nine decisions. He left after the Dodgers' four-run fifth inning. Three relievers finished, with Roger McDowell getting three outs and his 13th save.

Strawberry gave the Mets a 1-0 lead in the first inning with a two-out single that scored Wally Backman. He climaxed a three-run fifth inning with a two-run homer, his 17th of the season, for a 5-0 lead against Orel Hershiser, 12-9.

Hernandez, who made it 2-0 in the third inning with his 11th homer, preceded Strawberry's homer with an RBI single after Backman's one-out double.

Reds 6, Padres 5

CINCINNATI — Buddy Bell hit a three-run homer and John Denny and John Franco survived a five-run rally by San Diego in the ninth inning, leading the Cincinnati Reds to a victory over the San Diego Padres.

Denny, 11-10, had allowed only three hits entering the ninth, but Tony Gwynn's two-run homer and Terry Kennedy's two-out, RBI double pulled San Diego within 6-3. Franco gave up Kevin McReynolds' pinch-hit, two-run double before striking out Garry Templeton for his 20th save.

Denny singled home the Reds' second run in the fifth inning off Dave LaPoint, 0-1, making his first start since being traded to the Padres from Detroit on July 9.

Bell homered in the seventh off Gene Walter. It was Bell's 14th homer of the season and his fifth in the five-game series with the Padres, extending his hitting streak to 16 games. Bo Diaz also homered for the Reds.

Red Sox 3, Twins 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Rich Gedman's two-run homer broke a ninth-inning tie and Tom Seaver pitched three-hit ball for 8⅔ innings, giving the Boston Red Sox a victory over the Minnesota Twins.

The triumph increased Boston's lead in the American League East to 5½ games over the idle New York Yankees.

Gedman's 12th homer of the season, off the upper deck facade in right field, decided a pitching duel between Seaver and Frank Viola, 13-9. Viola gave up a one-out single to Tony Armas before Gedman connected on a 3-1 pitch.

Seaver, 7-10, struck out seven and walked four in his 311th career victory. Seave left the game after a two-out double in the ninth by Randy Bush, and Bob Stanley struck out pinch-hitter Tom Brunansky for his 15th save.

Indians 10, Brewers 4

CLEVELAND — Tony Bernazard homered and drove in three runs and former Midland Cub Mel Hall hit a two-run triple in a four-run third inning as the Cleveland Indians defeated the Milwaukee Brewers for their fourth straight victory.

Tom Candiotti, 12-9, tied for the American League lead with his 11th complete game, scattering 10 hits. He won for the ninth time in his last 12 decisions.

Bernazard led off the bottom of the first inning with his 12th home run and singled in the first two runs in the third. Hall drove in his third run of the game with a fifth-inning groundout.

The Indians, now 62-57, have not been five games over .500 this late in the season since 1968.

Cleveland's first six runs were off Chris Bosio, 0-2, who was making his second major-league start.

Mackey wins first title, doubles career earnings

LPGA MasterCard

ELMSFORD, N.Y. (AP) — Cindy Mackey headed to Atlantic City, already feeling the happiest and luckiest she has been since joining the LPGA Tour four years ago.

Mackey, a 25-year-old graduate of the University of Georgia, won her first title Monday in the storm-delayed, $200,000 MasterCard Tournament by shooting a 2-under-par 70. That gave her a 72-hole total of 276, 12 under par.

The victory was worth $30,000 for Mackey, who entered the tournament with earnings of $26,581 this year. Her next stop is the $225,000 Atlantic City Classic, a 54-hole event that begins Friday.

"I'm so happy to finally get my first one," Mackey, the 1982 Canadian Amateur winner, said. "Now I know what it takes to win. It was a lot of fun this week, but it was also a challenge. I learned some of my weaknesses and what I have to do to overcome them."

Mackey, who graduated magna cum laude in psychology in 1983, called Sunday's postponement after nine holes a "blessing in disguise."

Mackey, the Georgia amateur champion in 1977 and 1982, began Sunday with a four-shot lead over Colleen Walker, but Walker cut the deficit to two strokes before the rain began.

"I didn't feel that way yesterday," Mackey said. "I was shooting well and I wanted to finish. Looking at it now, the delay probably took Colleen's momentum away. She had cut my lead in half and things were going her way."

Mackey, in addition to her final-round of 70, posted scores of 71, 70 and a career-low of 65, making her the only player to shoot four sub-par rounds.

Walker, who turned 30 on Saturday, was left with no cause for celebration Monday.

Walker finished with a 70 and a total of 281, which appeared to give her a comfortable margin for second place, worth $18,500.

But at the post-tournament news conference, it was revealed that Walker, a Florida State graduate who has been on tour for five years, signed an illegal scorecard — marking down a par 5 on the 16th hole, rather than the bogey she actually shot. She promptly left the news conference without comment and reported the error to tournament officials, who disqualified her.

Motion to move case from Lubbock granted

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A lawsuit against the Midland County Sheriff's Department alleging false arrest and imprisonment has been moved from Lubbock to 242nd state District Court here.

The plaintiff, Joe Monillas Garcia, 43, of Lubbock, filed suit in 1984 in federal and state district court in Lubbock against former Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith and deputy Tim Rogers.

The federal suit alleged Garcia was denied rights guaranteed under the Constitution when he was mistakenly arrested in 1983 by Lubbock police following a teletype sent by the Midland sheriff's office. Garcia asked for $100,000 in damages.

Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman, who represented the county before a jury in March of this year, said the jury found in Midland County's favor, but awarded Garcia $9,000.

Federal District Judge Halbert Woodward overturned the award.

Garcia has not asked for a specific amount of damages in the suit filed in state court.

Dettman said he has filed a motion for summary judgment in Judge Pat Baskin's court. A hearing on the motion is scheduled for Oct. 6.

In his motion, Dettman said since the jury in Lubbock federal court decided in the county's favor, and that decision should be binding in state court as well.

"The basis of the summary judgment motion in the federal jury has already determined Dallas Smith and Tim Rogers acted in good faith and within the scope of their authority, and are entitled to immunity under Texas law," Dettman said.

Lubbock attorney John Simpson said he could not comment on Dettman's motion, but did say he would file a written response for his client.

The case arose from a hot check for about $1,350 that was written by a "Joe Garcia" to McCoys Lumber Co., in Midland.

The check was returned from a Big Spring bank marked "insufficient funds" and then "account closed."

At the time the check was written, a clerk at the store obtained the man's drivers license number with date of birth and physical description.

The Midland County Grand Jury returned an indictment against "Joe Garcia" for theft, and afterward Rogers sent out a teletype with Garcia's description.

The teletype was picked up by Lubbock authorities, and Lubbock police went to Garcia's home in August 1983.

He was arrested and jailed. Garcia's name, date of birth (Feb. 19, 1943), height, weight, and color of hair and eyes matched those of the indicted man, yet the drivers license number did not match.

Despite that, Garcia was arrested and held in Lubbock County Jail for 12 hours before he was released on bond.

Dettman said he has put in "about 500 hours" on the Garcia case.

He said he had filed a motion to move the case to Midland County in October, 1984, but said State District Judge John R. McFall did not rule on the motion until Aug. 1, when he granted the request.

Reasons for increases in illegitimate births varied, officials say

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The number of illegitimate births continues to be high in Midland County, but the reasons for the increase are varied, according to several area health officials.

In 1984 there were 205 illegitimate births or about 9 percent out of a total 2,285 babies born in Midland County.

That figure rose to 11.5 percent in 1985 when 278 illegitimate births were recorded out of 2,416 babies born.

So far this year, 156 or 11.3 percent illegitimate births have been reported out of 1,375 babies born up until Wednesday, the County Clerk's office reports.

Dana Frazee, director of the Permian Basin's Planned Parenthood, says the rise of illegitimate births is caused by the lack of knowledge teens have in preventing pregnancies.

"I think teens need more sex education in the schools. I just don't think they're getting the information on how to prevent pregnancy like they need to."

Among the Permian Basin's 17 counties, Ector County is the only school district that provides sex education in the classroom, Ms. Frazee said.

"If the teenagers get sexual education they will prevent unplanned pregnancies. They'll know how to. I don't think they know how."

A change in attitudes may be one reason more unwed mothers are giving birth, said the Rev. Ellis Brust with the St. Nicholas Episcopal Church and member of the Permian Basin Adolescent Pregnancy Coalition.

"It seems to me there are a number of contributing factors. One is the attitude of carrying a child to birth is much more acceptable.

"Keeping a child is more acceptable and the support systems are becoming more available to young families," Brust said.

City Health Officer, Dr. James Humphreys, agrees that the attitude toward illegitimate births is changing.

"The stigma is decreasing. There is a change in social morals. Not too many years have gone by, that if an unwed mother was about to have a baby she went to a cloister to have a baby and gave it up for adoption.

"There was a strong stigma against an unwed mother rearing a child. Now it's fairly common."

The Rev. Frank Johnson of Kelview Heights Baptist Church also said changing attitudes contribute to the rise in illegitimacy rates.

"I think there on the rise everywhere because of the public's acceptance of people living together," Johnson said.

NBC producing fresher version of battle at Alamo

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Remember the Alamo?

If you don't, NBC-TV wants to help. The television network is producing yet another version of the famous battle that led to Texas's independence from Mexico.

Texas lost the battle when an estimated 4,000 to 5,000 Mexican troops led by Gen. Lopez de Santa Anna stormed the mission on March 6, 1836. After more than a week and a half of holding off the Mexicans, 187 Texans died fighting to the last man.

However, using "Remember the Alamo" as a battle cry, other Texans killed, wounded or took prisoner virtually the entire Mexican army seven weeks later, striking by surprise while Santa Anna took his afternoon siesta.

Now, the battle of the Alamo will be fought again, only this time for NBC-TV's new season.

The producer and stars of the movie came to the real Alamo, in downtown San Antonio, on Monday to kick off the project.

Actors James Arness and Alec Baldwin and producer Stockton Briggle were honored as mayors for a day before taking a short tour through the hallowed mission.

Today, the cast and crew were in Brackettville, Texas — 125 miles west of San Antonio — for the first of 32 days of production.

Briggle is familiar with Brackettville. He appeared as an extra there when John Wayne made the film "The Alamo" in 1959.

Now, Briggle is spearheading the new three-hour movie "The Alamo: 13 Days to Glory," based on the book by his late friend, Lon Tinkle.

Arness, the star of television's "Gunsmoke" for 20 years, said, "I only do things now that capture my interest, and believe me, this caught mine. If I could line up four or five things this good, I'd work more often."

The budget for the movie will be $5.2 million. Brian Keith ("Hardcastle and McCormack") is cast as Davy Crockett, and Lorne Greene will portray Sam Houston.

The person to portray Santa Anna is expected to be decided on later this week.

"We had hoped to cast Ricardo Montalbon, but the scheduling didn't work out," Briggle said. "Surprisingly, some Latin actors did not want the part because of Santa Anna's reputation for ruthlessness."

Baldwin ("Knots Landing") is excited about his part as Col. William Barret Travis.

"I really see him as a pivotal character in the story, and a very complex man," Baldwin said. "Reading about him and the others, I got very intrigued about why they did what they did."

One of the more enduring legends of the Alamo is that Col. Travis drew a line with his sword and asked all who would die with him to cross the line. All crossed the line except for one man, who fled from the Alamo instead.

Everyone connected with the movie predicts this will be the most accurate potrayal ever made of the historic battle.

"We took liberties with a couple of scenes, making up dialogue that might have occurred," Briggle said. "Otherwise, this is as authentic as we can make it."

The producer specifically asked his cast not to watch other Alamo movies, for fear they would pick up some inaccurate stereotypes about their characters.

Grand Jury drug probe in Odessa somewhat expected

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Ector County District Attorney Eric Augesen Monday said he is not surprised the current grand jury plans to explore drug trafficking problems in Odessa and the county.

"Given the makeup of the grand jury," he said, "I'm not the least bit surprised."

Several of the grand jurors have been involved in alcohol and drug abuse programs and they have heard Odessa referred to as a "drug hub," Augesen said.

Augesen, Sheriff Bob Brookshire, Police Chief Alan Stewart, District Judge Joe Connally and County Judge Jan Fisher late last week received letters from grand jury foreman Jim Richards asking them to attend the Aug. 26 jury session to discuss the drug situation.

But Augesen said he expected the grand jurors to delay the meeting since they found out Judge Fisher and all county commissioners are scheduled to be in Austin Aug. 25 for the start of the Tana Perry vs. Ector County trial, which is expected to last more than one day.

Ms. Perry, formerly employed in the county's data processing department, claims she was fired from her job after she reported, what she perceived to be, wrongdoing in the department on the part of former manager Mike Holden.

Augesen said the grand jury decided to look at drug trafficking problems after viewing a locally produced television series that suggested Odessa is known as a distribution hub for drugs brought in from Mexico.

Police: Two stolen vehicles taken from local auto dealer recovered

From Staff Reports

Two stolen vehicles were recovered Monday after they were apparently driven off by burglars who ransacked a local automobile dealership, according to Midland Police Department reports.

The burglary occurred at Tommy's Auto Sales, 1600 Rankin Hwy. Reports said a 1965 Chevrolet half-ton pickup truck and a 1974 Lincoln Continental were stolen sometime between 3 p.m. Sunday and 9:30 a.m. Monday, following the burglary of the business.

Tommie Johnson told police a refrigerator valued at $300, a set of golf clubs valued at $200, a 13-inch television set valued at $150, a golf bag valued at $50 and a radio valued at $50 were stolen from the business.

Police Roundup

Reports said someone entered through a window and ransacked the business before the vehicles were taken. Both vehicles were later recovered, but reports did not indicate the circumstances of the recovery.

A burglary of a business was also reported at General Service and Supply, 309 S. Terrell St. An employee, P.J. Martinez, told police an AM-FM stereo radio with twin speakers valued at $150 was stolen sometime between 3 p.m. Sunday and 7:50 a.m. Monday. Reports said a front plate glass window was broken to gain entry.

In other reports, several firearms valued at more than $1,100 were reported stolen from a vehicle. Reports said a .270 caliber bolt action rifle with scope, a 12-gauge shotgun, and a .22 caliber revolver were taken from the vehicle.

Fifty dollars cash was reported stolen from Rasure Oil Co., 953 Advance Place. Reports said the money was taken after someone apparently broke out a window at the business to gain entry.

GARY OTT

Kids' games seemed a lot more fun in my day

Someone in the sports department casually mentioned the other day that there were probably over 5,000 Midland kids participating in organized sports here.

That, they said, was in addition to the high school teams.

Not being one who keeps up with such things, I had no way to dispute his claim.

Still, it intrigued me.

"Five thousand kids? That seems a little high," I suggested.

"Not really," the sports man replied. "You've got to remember that includes soccer, Little League baseball, the kid football leagues, swimming, softball and even YMCA leagues. It adds up in a hurry."

Things have certainly changed from when I was young. Back then, we had Little League baseball and that was it.

Soccer was an unknown. Football was something you started playing in the seventh grade. Softball was for girls. And, while we had a city-owned swimming pool, it was used primarily for oggling our female classmates.

There was a YMCA facility, as well, but the only piece of equipment it had was a trampoline and a person can only jump up and down so long before getting terribly bored.

I come from a small town, but even in the larger cities there weren't nearly as many organized teams 20 years ago as there are now.

The reason for the increase is obvious.

It keeps kids off the street. The theory being, if a young person is busy playing games he is less likely to have free time for getting into trouble.

This, of course, is admirable. And, to a degree, it probably works.

Still, as I think back on my youth, I'm not so sure we didn't have more fun.

We played games, too, but the big difference was they weren't organized. There were no coaches, no spectators, no referees.

We just got a bunch of guys from the neighborhood together, chose up teams and played until the sun went down. The next day we did the same thing.

It was great fun. Usually a couple of fights would break out — minor shoving matches really — but in the end everyone remained friends.

Likewise, we would argue over close calls at the plate, but somehow we managed to work out an equitable solution without an adult umpire being present.

Besides, he probably would have just blown the call, anyway.

It has always been my belief that once adults get involved in kid games some of the fun quickly disappears.

This is not to say their intentions aren't honorable. They are, of course. It can be a major sacrifice to give up your free time to coach or referee a game.

Still, once an adult shows up it is not the same as playing on a vacant lot with just your buddies.

I'm not exactly sure what happens to make it less fun; just that there is a definite change in the environment. It becomes less carefree.

My dad coached my Little League team for two summers and while I always admired his dedication and willingness to participate, it put extra pressure on me.

If I struck out while he was watching I always felt I let him down.

If I struck out during one of our neighborhood pick-up games, I would just kick the dirt, spit and say, "I'll hit that S.O.B. next time."

And, I didn't spell out S.O.B., either.

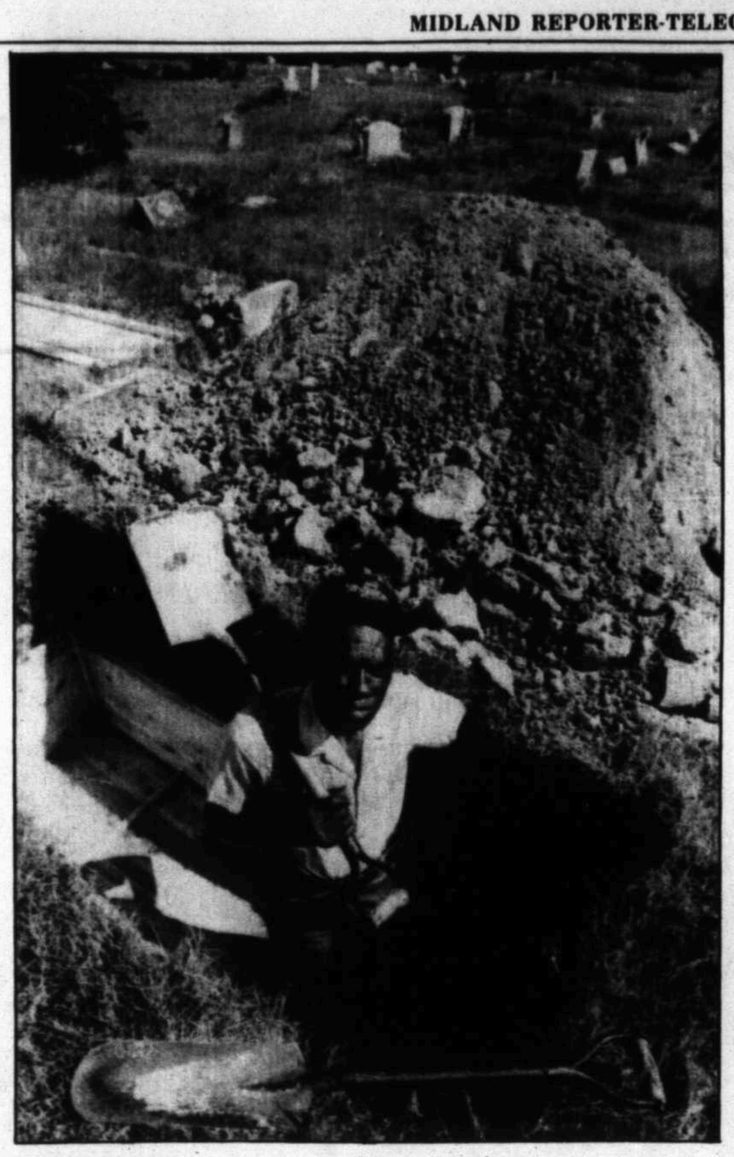

I said it and I said it loud.

You can't do that when your dad is the coach. He'll give you a lecture on sportsmanship.

But, the point is, when you just struck out with runners in scoring position you didn't want to hear some Grantland Rice speech about "how you played the game."

You want to cuss.

Seventy-two-year-old grave digger works for exercise, extra money

By MARK AUGUST

WAXAHACHIE (AP) — Most people retire to a life of leisure or the pursuit of some hobby for which there was never enough time.

Not 72-year-old Carnell Polk.

He digs graves — by hand.

Polk flips the last shovel of dirt out of a grave, wipes the early morning sweat from his forehead and chuckles: "I don't even consider retiring. I've already retired twice in my lifetime, and I'm in no hurry to retire again.

"We live in a different time where it takes a whole lot to live. I've a wife and home to support. So I guess I'll be digging graves for a whole lot longer. I just ain't going nowhere."

He took up grave digging about seven years ago, mostly for the exercise and the extra money. He digs about two graves a week. During the heat of the summer, he gets started about 5 a.m. and quits about four hours later.

He takes on a helper on rare weeks when he gets five or more orders.

On a typical morning, Polk will start and finish a typical grave, measuring 8-by-3½ feet and 4½ feet deep.

He's dug more than 600 graves, most of them around here. He's dug graves as far as 30 miles away in Milford and neighboring Italy and Red Oak.

"I took on this job because I was concerned, that in my retirement, my physical condition would get bad," says Polk, who also owns a vegetable store that he has been running near his home in east Waxahachie for about three years. "I wanted to keep in shape. For me this is just another job. But it's a job I really enjoy."

He's accustomed to hard work.

He laid track for the Southern Pacific railroad for 20 years before he tried retirement the first time. After running out of patience with idle time and little money, he went back to work, this time as a long haul driver for Southwestern Church Furniture Company.

"I did that for another 20 years," Polk says. "We had to work on those heavy pews and if you've ever sat on a church pew, you know how heavy those things are.

"So you see, I've always done hard jobs, and digging graves is something I really enjoy. I don't like the idea of having graves dug with machines. I feel they should be done the old fashioned way because one can give special care."

His equipment consists of two old shovels, a wooden frame for measuring the grave and a metal rod that comes in handy when he wants to make sure he's not digging down over another grave.

Polk charges $100 a grave. Most graves are dug today by back-hoe at a cost of about $250, says John Beckwith, owner of the Golden Gate Funeral home on East Main Street.

"He's worked for me for the past five years, and all his work has been top notch," says Beckwith, who also owns a funeral home in Oak Cliff.

"I've yet to see sommeone who does a better job at digging graves. I know what I'm talking about: I've spent 33 years in the funeral home business."

Elymas Tatum got Polk started digging graves. Tatum, who owns the Wakefield Cemetery in east Waxahachie, says he once found Polk tending to his mother's grave in the cemetery.

"That was seven years ago. I asked him if he'd mind digging graves at the cemetery," Tatum recalls. "He said: 'I'll give it a try.' What followed was nothing but good work from him. I don't know what we'd have done without his services in this area because we're in no shape to have the back hoe machines dig the graves for us. It's just too expensive."

Polk lives in a modest two-bedroom frame house with his second wife, Norma, 60. They've been married eight years. When he's not digging graves, Polk is in the vegetable shop behind the Golden Gate Funeral home.

"The grave digging business has been good to me, and it's kept me quite occupied even though its somewhat slow right now," says Polk. "While things are far from the good things I'd like to have one day, I'm able to pick up a little change from my grave-digging. And you know that helps to keep the homefront going. And as for the vegetable business, well, let's just say it helps to bring in some money.

"There's no taxes on vegetables, or is there?"

PUC says it can live with House cut 'but no more'

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission told the Senate Finance Committee it can live with the 13.1 percent cut made by the Texas House, but no more.

Public Utility Counsel Jim Boyle said the same about the 6 percent cut made by the House in his 1987 appropriations.

"The public will have to suffer if we are cut much more," Peggy Rosson, PUC chairman, told the Senate Finance Committee Monday.

The Senate group is holding hearings on the $750 million in 1987 budget reductions approved by the House last Friday and will make a recommendation on the Senate version.

In the House bill, PUC took a voluntary cut of $997,000, which includes leaving 18 employee positions unfilled. The governor had recommended a budget cut of $1.5 million

Ms. Rosson said PUC could "carry on" under the 13 percent cut, including its announced reorganization plans to separate into two divisions, one for telecommunications utilities and one for electric utilities.

"We have tried to take a look at some utilities and cut some fat but not cut muscle," Ms. Rosson said. "That is where we are now. We have cut some fat. To cut more would cut muscle."

Man wanted in death of overheated cougar

HOUSTON (AP) — Animal cruelty officials were looking for a man today who left a cougar chained in the rear of his pickup for hours in the midday heat and laughed when he was told the cat had died.

The 50-pound cat apparently strangled on the chain that confined it in the rear of the pickup parked at a southwest Houston office park, said Marcia Gitelman, an investigator with the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in Houston.

Cerebral palsy patient works out to improve muscle control

By PAT YADON

BEAUMONT (AP) — Tommy Garr excercises just to stay in shape.

The 23-year-old Lamar University senior has cerebral palsy, which affects his left arm and left leg, but "I don't consider myself handicapped," he says.

Garr has been playing racquetball about every other day for the last two years, ever since he went to work at the Downtown YMCA. He also jogs and lifts weights.

"I try my hand at everything," he says. "It gets me in better shape."

The exercise also helps him rest during the day, giving him a break from his hectic schedule of school activities and work.

And, he says, he believes the workouts are improving his muscle control, helping him to walk and run straighter.

While Garr says his cerebral palsy does not interfere at all with his racquetball or weight lifting, many handicapped people need personal supervision while exercising, the Y's program director Pam Redline says.

"I think if they were handicpped I wouldn't let them come through here on their own, at least not at first," she says.

Once she's seen what they can do, if they don't need help, "I wouldn't shove it down their throat," she says.

Some people, like Garr, follow their own regiment at the Y. One man, whose disability makes it difficult for him to walk, swims for an hour every day, which builds up his arms and works out his heart and lungs.

Ms. Redline believes that wheelchair-bound people have a special need for exercise because they don't get even the inadequate exercise that able-bodied people get from walking around.

Muscles atrophy, or dengenerate, quickly when not used. Exercise keeps the muscles toned, builds strength and also gives the sedentary disabled person a cardiovascular workout that they would not get from physical therapy.

"From the people whom I know who are confined to wheelchairs, the problem seems to be bad circulation or problems with their kidneys; that's because they're sitting so long," Ms. Redline says.

"In that way I think it (exercise) would be vitally important, especially for their whole well-being because you feel better, you're not so depressed."

The exercise may not be easy for them, but "I don't think anything can stop them. If they've got the drive and the zeal, they can do anything they want," Ms. Redline says.

"But you don't want to push them so hard that it's too hard for them."

The Y used to offer a class called Chair-obics, which could be done while seated. It was designed primarily for older people, but would be helpful for those in wheelchairs, also.

Ms. Redline recently began teaching a class for people suffering arthritis, who often are handicapped by their pain.

For some of them, even shrugging their shoulders is painful. One of the women has too much pain to walk for exercise, but she can swim.

Their class takes place in the pool, where the water's buoyancy takes pressure off their joints.

Ms. Redline encourages them to go at their own pace and tailor movements to suit themselves; if they have arthritis in their hips, for example, she might tell them to skip the leg lifts.

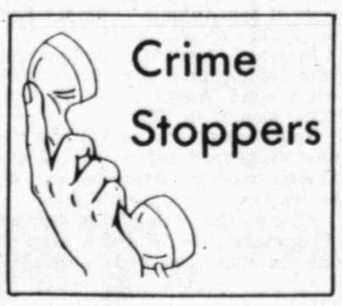

As she does with anybody else, Ms. Redline stresses that people have to pick an exercise they like, so they will do it consistently.

The Y has no exercise classes for handicapped people right now, but could start one if asked. Instructors will even take the class to the participants, which would simplify matters for elderly or disabled people.

"If I went somewhere and they said, 'We've got 20 people who desire your services over here,' I would never make them come here. I'd hop in the car and go over there; it'd be so much easier," Ms. Redline says.

Crime Stoppers seeks tips in Permian Mall burglaries

From Staff Reports

Crime Stoppers is seeking information concerning the burglaries of four businesses at the Permian Mall in Odessa.

Early on the morning of July 17, 1986, Carlyle Jewelry, Connie's Fashions, Command Performance, and Morrow Nut House were broken into and burglarized. Jewelry, ladies' clothing, and a small amount of cash were reportedly stolen.

The jewelry included a number of 14k gold rope chains and 14k gold nugget rings. The rings had the inscription "J-Tex" on the back.

Information about the burglaries at Permian Mall could be worth $1,000 this week only for information that leads to the arrest and felony indictment of those responsible.

Crime Stoppers also pays cash rewards for information on other felony crimes. Crime Stoppers can be reached in Odessa at 333-TIPS and in Midland at 694-TIPS.

Callers to Crime Stoppers do not have to reveal their identities.

Midland man in Odessa jail on marijuana possession

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 28-year-old Midland man was in the city jail just before noon today on a possession of marijuana charge.

Hector Martinez Rios, 2433 Whitmire, Apt. 88, was arraigned before Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly this morning. The judge set Rios' bond on the charge at $1,500.

Rios was arrested after 2 a.m. today by patrol officers responding to a shots fired call in the vicinity of South Crane Avenue and Clements.

Officers saw a car leaving the area, according to police spokesman Sgt. Frank Beam, and stopped the vehicle to search for weapons.

According to Beam, officers observed a tray of what appeared to be marijuana on the floorboard on the driver's side of the car. They also found a large bag of what they believed to be marijuana on the passenger side.

Beam said officers confiscated more than a pound and a half of what appeared to be marijuana.

Beam said Rios was expected to be transferred to the county jail sometime this afternoon.

DEATHS

Senaido Hernandez

STANTON — Services for Senaido Hernandez, 84, of Stanton will be at 10 a.m. Thursday in St. Joseph's Catholic Church with the Rev. Frank Colacicco officiating.

Burial will be in St. Joseph's Cemetery under the direction of Gilbreath Funeral Home.

Hernandez died Monday in Martin County Hospital following a brief illness. He was born June 5, 1902, in San Antonio, Mexico. He moved from there to Stanton 57 years ago. He was a retired farmer and a member of the St. Joseph Catholic Church. He married Maria Navarrette in 1919 at Candelaria. She died July 18, 1976.

He is survived by five sons, Manuel Hernandez of Odessa, Frank Hernandez of Midland, Senaido Hernandez Jr., Felipe Hernandez and Fred Hernandez all of Stanton; three daughters, Belen Silva, Josefa Ramos and Ramona Esparza all of Stanton, 28 grandchildren and 37 great-grandchildren.

ILLEGITIMATE

"I think it's always been there. It's just to the place of acceptance now that we know more about it then we did."

Ms. Frazee says one reason the illegitmacy rate may be increasing is because Midland's fertility rate for teen mothers is the highest in the state.

In Midland County, 34.6 births out of 1,000 are to mothers between 13 and 17 years old, Ms. Frazee said.

"That's very high simply because we have the highest fertility rate in the state.

"It's something that we're going to have to address as a community to realize the numbers are high. It's not going to be one agency. It's going to have to be a coalition of agencies to lower the rates," Ms. Frazee said.

Formed about a month ago, the Basin Adolescent Pregnancy Coalition made up of several area agencies is attempting to reduce the teen pregnancy rate in Midland County, Ms. Frazee said.

Beauty begins with proper skin care

By CYNTHIA ROBINS
Hearst News Service

Beauty has been the currency of poets from the birth of time. But modern life conspires against it. The sun fries and ages us. Pollutants fill the air. Stress lines our faces and causes our skin to break out. Our lifestyles throw up enormous barriers. Too many cigarettes. Too much alcohol. Not enough sleep. Had he lived today, Lord Byron would have thrown up his hands in despair.

If beauty is only skin deep, it's axiomatic that taking care of your skin, given the pitfalls of living in the latter half of the 20th century, enhances, aides and abets beauty. A vibrant, shiny, clean, blemish-free complexion can mean more to natural beauty than all the potions, pots and paints money can buy.

Essential to good skin care is controlling those parts of your environment that you can. Your skin reflects what you put into your mouth as much as what you put on your face. Eating well is its own good reward, a sensible improvement over the high-calorie, high-fat fast foods busy people tend to ingest. By simply cutting down on grease and sugar, buying less red, marbled meat and more fish and chicken, choosing leafy vegetables and fresh fruits over French fries, and flushing the system with eight glasses of water a day, you will find that your complexion, as well as your weight and total outlook, will improve.

CIGARETTES AND alcohol have a dehydrating effect on the skin — as well as causing other health-related problems such as cancer and cirrhosis. And as for today's recreational drug of choice, cocaine — as they say, "The lady robs your smile" and she also robs your youth, beauty and skin tone.

Enough sleep gives the skin time to refresh and repair itself. And regular aerobic exercise gives the capillary system a good work out, flushing the skin and feeding it with the nutrients carried by the blood stream.

Germane to good skin care is a cleansing regime designed for each particular skin type, of which there are four. All the cleansing lotions, creams or gels in the world cannot accomplish their work if they are applied to the wrong kind of skin.

According to beauty expert Zia Wesley-Hosford, in her book, "Putting on Your Face," an oily skin produces too much oil. Eliminating oil-based cosmetics and cutting down the amount of oil in the diet are two fairly simply ways of correcting the condition.

A dry skin doesn't produce enough oil. It is chalky or flaky in appearance and can be affected by crash diets or dietary programs that eliminate all oils or protein. Alcohol, tobacco, caffeine and stimulants can parch a dry skin even more. Strong astringents with a high alcohol content exacerbate the condition.

WITH COMBINATION skin, there can be two distinct areas on the face: The cheek and jawline tend to be dry, while the T-zone, the area from the forehead down the center of the face to the chin, tends to be oily.

And normal skin does not go to extremes; it is not excessively oily or dry. As Wesley-Hosford says, with normal skin, "Keep up the good work."

Before you can decide how to care for your face, determine what kind of care you need by finding out your own skin type. It's very simple. All you have to do is look.

Says Wesley-Hosford, "If you wake up in the morning and there is no visible oil on your face, you can probably assume you have normal skin. If, however, by midday, you have oil in the T-zone, you probably have combination skin. If you have oil on your face when you wake up and/or soon after you wash (about an hour or two), then you have oily skin; it has a sheen and feels greasy." People with dry skin will see flaky, dry patches and a plethora of fine lines around the eyes, upper cheeks and mouth.

By using incorrect products, says Wesley-Hosford, you are liable to change your natural skin condition. For instance, "Some people create dryness by using a cleanser or soap that is too harsh and following it with an astringent (which usually contain alcohol, witch hazel or citrus). If you don't have oily skin, you don't need astringent.

Different skin types require different care

Hearst News Service

Because every skin is different, it's probably a fool's errand to invent hard and fast rules for what you should and shouldn't do to and for your skin. But skin-care consultant, Zia Wesley-Hosford, has written some basic rules for different skin types in her book, "Putting on Your Face."

OILY SKIN:

- Stay away from rich, oil-based soaps.
- Never use oil-based milky cleanser or any cleanser to be used without water.
- Never use a moisturizer; instead, use pure aloe vera gel as both toner and moisturizer.
- Use an astringent during the day as well as part of your twice-a-day skin-care routine.
- Use a water-base foundation to help absorb oil.
- Use a "scrub" once or twice a week only. Frequent scrubbing activates the already overly active oil glands.
- Don't use a loofa, Buff Puff or wash cloth; these activate oil glands.
- Cut down on oil- or fat-rich foods, such as dairy products, fried foods, cheese, nuts, etc.
- Drink eight glasses of water a day to flush out toxins and excess oils. Some can be herbal teas.
- Keep your hands off your face! Bacteria is transmitted by and thrive in oil.
- Choose a hair style that keeps hair off the face.
- Don't use baby oil or oil-based cleansers to remove eye makeup unless they are water-soluble oils.
- If skin becomes excessively oily while you sleep, apply a very thin layer of calamine lotion before going to bed.

DRY SKIN:

- Use a mild, non-drying soap or cleanser.
- Be sure your diet contains a reasonable amount of fats and oils.
- Discontinue use of dehydrating substances such as caffeine, cigarettes, excessive alcohol and drugs.
- Drink eight glasses of water a day.
- Don't use any dry saunas.
- Use a humidifier in your bedroom.
- Use pure aloe vera gel and toner.
- Use a natural oil-based moisturizer.
- Exercise regularly. It brings oxygen to the skin to help it maintain its natural moisture.
- Stay out of the sun. If you must be in sunlight, use a sunblock with a sun protection factor of 15 plus.
- Don't use products containing mineral oil.
- Avoid swings in weight and drastic diets.
- Avoid diuretic pills.
- Don't use astringents or toners with astringent qualities, i.e. that contain alcohol or witch hazel.

COMBINATION SKIN:

- Use products designed for oily skin on oily areas only (usually the T-zone; the area from the forehead down the center of the face to the chin).
- Be aware on a daily basis of subtle changes in the degrees of oiliness and dryness. Your regime should be adjusted accordingly.
- Notice how changes in diet may affect the balance of your skin.
- Use a cleanser that is gentle enough for dry-normal areas, but that clears oil from oily areas.

NORMAL SKIN:

- Use a mild soap or cleanser designed for normal skin.
- Don't use astringents.
- Use aloe vera gel as toner-moisturizer to protect and maintain the skin's natural Ph balance.

Trunk show featuring designs by Oscar de la Renta will be presented Aug. 25-26 at Julian Gold, 4610 Garfield.

Priorities change

Editors' note: Erma Bombeck is on vacation. She left behind some of her favorite columns.

By ERMA BOMBECK

Traditionally when you left home, you got married and your apartment looked like a stripped-down version of the home you just left. You moved in a plastic place setting for four, a few pots and pans, a bed, a second-hand vacuum sweeper and a toaster. (You weren't legally married without a toaster.)

Nowadays, young people are setting their own priorities for the first home of their own.

The first furnishing they buy for their apartment is a stereo. No self-respecting single would be caught dead without a stereo. Humming just does not do it for this generation.

If there are no plugs in the bathroom? They don't care.

If the stove doesn't work? They don't care.

If the room isn't wired for heating? They don't care

If the front door doesn't close? They don't care.

If there are two large walls that will hold the weight of speakers, they'll rent it.

The second priority is a roommate, preferably someone of the opposite sex who owns a color television set. You can have an overbite and legs that belong on a piano, but if you come with a color TV set with a few months left on the warranty, you can write your own ticket.

Close behind the roommate comes an answering attachment for the phone. Heaven forbid you should miss a message while you sleep on the floor.

Young people have a unique outlook on the creature comforts of living. An apartment with a fireplace (that doesn't work) takes precedence over one with a refrigerator. A pool table comes years before a sweeper, and a tape deck for the car is considered more of a necessity than an alarm clock.

I visited my son's apartment a few weeks ago.

"What do you need for Christmas?" I asked.

He shrugged. "I don't know. I've got everything."

My eyes scanned his room. A sofa with a single sheet and blanket. A card table with four folding chairs. Two cereal bowls, three spoons, a stereo, a phone with a 50-foot cord, and a poster of Loni Anderson on the wall.

"That's true," I said.

"You know, there is one thing I really need."

My mind raced to an ironing board, a sweeper, a washer, dryer, window...

"I need one of those cassettes with earphones for when I jog."

DEAR ABBY

Woman's breast-implant surgery 'a bust'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am beginning to think I am going crazy. I'm 38 years old (married) and have had three breast implant operations — now I need a fourth. I'll start at the beginning:

First, I wanted to increase the size of my breasts. Well, the plastic surgeon showed me the various sizes, and I am sure he used bigger implants than the ones I picked out because I came out looking so top-heavy, I hated myself. I couldn't wait until my doctor redid the operation. (By the way, he is a board-certified reconstructive plastic surgeon, has a good reputation and is not cheap.)

Disappointment No. 2: For some reason, he replaced the too-large implants with ones that were too small. I knew right away they weren't what I ordered, so I had a third operation.

This one has me looking lopsided. My left breast is about four inches higher than my right. When I told my doctor he would have to do it over again, he refused, saying, "I'm sorry, I don't think I can please you."

Now what kind of a doctor is he? And what should I do about this situation? I certainly can't go around looking the way I am. — LOPSIDED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR LOPSIDED: I think you should see another plastic surgeon for an evaluation, or possibly some corrective surgery. If you don't know one, inquire at the Cosmetic Surgery Information Service, 860 Via de la Paz, Suite B2, Pacific Palisades, Calif. 90272. The national hotline is: 1-800-221-9808. In California, call 1-800-824-3042. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a receptionist in a busy beauty salon, and this is my beef: When a client who has an appointment comes into the shop, I always say, "Please have a seat; I will tell your operator that you are here."

Invariably, she says, "Oh, that's all right," and proceeds to walk straight through to be near her operator. She then finds an unoccupied shampoo chair or one under a hair dryer and engages her operator in conversation — disregarding the fact that her operator is working on another patron.

At this shop, we feel that the patron has paid for the operator's time and full attention, and it's rude and presumptuous for another person to burst in and usurp the operator's time and attention that rightfully belongs to another client. I hope you find room for this letter, Abby. Receptionists everywhere will be grateful. — DESK GIRL

DEAR DESK GIRL: Find room? I'll make room. Now a word to whom it may concern: Madame, if you see yourself in the above picture, color yourself a blushing pink, and please mend your ways.

(Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. All correspondence is confidential.)

Cosmetics consultant writes consumer guide

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Elaine Brumberg would be the first to tell you that cosmetics can do wonders for women. As president of her own consulting company, she advises women on how to buy and apply cosmetics. But Brumberg can be tough on cosmetics, as well. A cosmetics consumer advocate, she feels women ought to know what they're buying and what they're paying for.

She believes that often the cosmetics industry does not do as much as it should to educate consumers.

To help women through the maze of store cosmetics counters, Brumberg has written a book, "Save Your Money, Save Your Face" (Facts on File; $17.95). In the plethora of beauty books that are published annually, her book stands out. Brumberg really did her homework and comes up with specific information no woman should be without. There are charts that detail, cosmetics line by cosmetics line, how much each of the major products costs. Items range from makeup to skin-care products.

That is no small contribution. As Brumberg points out, there are more than 1,000 companies that manufacture cosmetics. Even a basic product such as foundation can range in price from $3 to $30. With the charts, a woman can decide how much she can afford to spend on cosmetics and choose the product line accordingly. Once in a department store, she can head directly for the counter that sells her line.

Brumberg notes that it is hard to comparison shop for cosmetics. Most major lines have their own counters in stores, with their own salespeople. A woman buying foundation may think she needs to spend $30 when, in reality, just a counter away, she could spend as little as $3.

But Brumberg doesn't stop there with useful information. Another set of charts lists ingredients in makeup and skin care products from major companies. For women who have sensitive skins or allergies, those charts can be invaluable. As Brumberg explains, most companies do list the ingredients in their products. Unfortunately, most of them list the ingredients on the boxes the products come in.

"And what's the first thing you do when you go to use a new product?" she asks rhetorically. "You throw away the box. A day or two later, if you experience an allergic reaction, you have no idea what ingredient or ingredients may have caused it."

Cosmetic pricing has long been a controversial topic. Brumberg explains why some products are overpriced and tells women how to steer clear of them. She also counsels women to be aware of the techniques used by salespeople at the cosmetics conters to get people to buy more than they need or products that are wrong for their skin type, their lifetyle or products they just don't know how to use.

Famous designers treated like 'royalty'

NEW YORK (AP) — The desire for status has created a licensing industry so profitable that many designers would find it hard to exist without it.

But whether the designer is personally involved or not is not the issue, according to the executive director of an industry association. "The customer knows the designer doesn't design everything that his name goes on," he said. "It's a guidepost, an image."

Pritchard, owner of Caprock Lab, introduces new instrument

James Pritchard, owner and operator of Caprock Petroleum Laboratory, recently announced that he has designed a new piece of equipment for the testing of hydrogen sulfide content. Pritchard and Caprock Labs are always staying one step ahead of the rest.

Pritchard has applied for a patent for the new device which he says is about twice as fast as other methods of testing for hydrogen sulfide. Moreover the device, designed to replace the old Tutweiler Burette, he says, has much greater accuracy. The prototype has been used in the field for approximately five months.

No doubt, Caprock Petroleum Laboratory is commited to quality analyses on a timely basis. In addition to testing for hydrogen sulfide content, field determinations of mercaptans, carbon dioxide and total acid gas can also be made by Caprock. In addition, Pritchard said he offers basic compositional analysis of oil products, corrosion tests, and water and waste water analysis.

Caprock also offers gas chromatography services including natural gas analysis and natural gas liquids analysis.

Whatever test is needed, Caprock offers a fast response time. Moreover, Pritchard says the first 100 miles and first two hours sampling time are free.

Caprock Petroleum Laboratory uses the most recent analytical procedures (all procedures are industry approved GPA, API or ASTM standard methods) and state of the art analytical instruments. By using the latest analytical equipment with computerized data systems (Nelson Analytical interface and software with an IBM PCXT), response time is greatly reduced while data acquisition is enhanced.

"Anytime a sample comes in one day, the analysis is ready the next day," Pritchard said.

Pritchard is a graduate of the University of Oklahoma, where he obtained a B.S. degree in Chemistry and has more than seven years experience with petroleum analytical laboratories. During this period he has developed new methods for analyzing gas liberated from core samples and designed several new specialized core analysis instruments. He has served as a consultant for establishing new laboratories in Aberdeen, Scotland; Cairo, Egypt; as well as domestic laboratories in Midland, Texas. All analyses are conducted in the close supervision of Pritchard.

Call 689-7252, Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. or the 24-hour number 563-5528. You will find that Caprock's rates are very competitive and will help you meet the demands of these tough times in the oil field. Pritchard said he is offering exceptionally competitive prices and discounts for volume and contract work. Nevertheless, Caprock Labs will not sacrifice service or take short cuts that lessen the value of the analysis.

Caprock Petroleum Lab, 3312 Bankhead Highway, is commited to offering timely and accurate testing at exceptionally competitive rates. Call 563-5528 or 689-7252 for a competitive bid.

March into Tall City Uniforms for your band uniform

Ora Shupp (left to right), Nita Howard, assistant manager Judy Kersey and manager Sally Emmert of Tall City Uniforms, 1220 N. Midkiff, have everything students' need to complete their band uniforms. They also have a wide selection of professional uniforms.

The experts at All Seasons Chimney Service install custom caps, measured and designed to fit each individual fireplace. the owner of All Seasons Chimney Service is shown installing a custom cap after a chimney cleaning. For appointments or free estimates, call 697-7585 between 8 a.m. and 9 p.m.

All Seasons offers discounts on chimney cleanings, caps

Once again it's that time of year for cleaning those fireplaces and preparing them for that first autumn cold front. Those seasoned professionals at All Seasons Chimney Service recommend cleaning those fireplaces early and avoiding the fall rush.

"Fireplaces should be cleaned on the average of every two to three cords of wood burned. Some chimneys build up creosote at a faster rate than others, depending on the wood burned and draft capabilities. Creosote accumulation is the major concern for having your chimney cleaned. Creosote comes from the unburned gases in wood smoke, which is highly combustible and can turn your fireplace into a blazing infernal," says the owner of All Seasons Chimney Service.

This company uses a specially designed vacuum system to control any dust or soot brought down by sweeping the chimney. Extra care is taken in keeping your home free of any dust or chimney soot.

Chimney care should not stop with the cleaning. All Seasons Chimney Service recommends a chimney cap be installed on those open fireplaces. "We are amazed at the number of damaged fireplaces we find, due to an un-capped chimney. The most common damage we find is where the brick is cracked and the mortar is falling out," says the expert. The west Texas weather with its rain and heat takes it toll on chimney structures. Rain causes the most destruction to a chimney. "Seldom have we seen and un-capped chimney more than five year old that hasn't suffered some sort of water damage," he adds.

An open chimney allows rain on the smoke shelf, and when mixed with creosote from burned wood, creates a highly corrosive acid. That mixture then seeps down and attacks the mortar joints in the back wall of the fireplace. The mortar becomes weak and the bricks on the firewall become loose or cracked.

Metal flues and fireboxes will be permanently damaged in five to ten years if left exposed. "You probably won't see the oxidation (rust), until it's too late, and fireboxes with metal flues are costly to replace," the expert explains.

Another reason for installing a cap is to control sparks. Many homes in Midland have wood shingles, which make them very vulnerable to roof fires. This is especially dangerous on windy days. Installing a cap will control those sparks.

All Seasons Chimney Service has several types of caps to choose from. Their "custom caps" offer complete protection to the internal parts of the fireplace.

Their "custom caps" (see photo), cover the entire chimney top, protecting both the mortar top and inside, while providing an attractive piece of fireplace hardware.

All caps are made of a strong galvanized metal and painted to provide extra protection and an attractive appearance.

All Seasons Chimney Service offers free estimates on caps, along with inspecting your chimney.

Their pre-fall package includes: chimney cleaning, removal of ashes, minor firebox repair and deodorizing for only $49.00, a 15 percent discount through September. In addition, they are offering a 15 percent discount on custom caps.

These experts also offer gas log replacement and minor fireplace repair.

Gold falls further

LONDON (AP) — Gold prices took another tumble in early European trading today in a second straight day of decline after last week's surge. The U.S. dollar rose against most major currencies.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $370.75 a troy ounce, sharply down on late Monday's $376.50, and nearly $12 below late Friday's price.

At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $372.50 — reflecting a modest recovery in trading that dealers described as surprisingly quiet.

In Tokyo, where trading also ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing 154.15 yen from Monday's 153.93. Later, in London, it was quoted at 154.35 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Monday:

—1.6760 Swiss francs, up from 1.6655

—6.7425 French francs, up from 6.7125

—2.3367 Dutch guilders, up from 2.3255

—1,427.50 Italian lire, up from 1,420.75

T-Bill rates inch up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities rose slightly in Monday's auction to levels in effect at the beginning of the month.

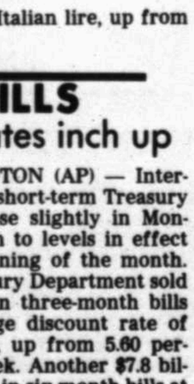

The Treasury Department sold $7.8 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.64 percent, up from 5.60 percent last week. Another $7.8 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.65 percent, up from 5.60 percent last week.

The rates, while still substantially below levels of a year ago, were the highest since Aug. 4 when three-month bills sold for 5.70 percent and six-month bills averaged 5.73 percent.

Conventional fiberglass sucker rods such as these, have proven too expensive for many shallow-to-intermediate depth wells which are well-suited to the rods because of low production. The lower cost per foot continuous rod could allow wider applications of the lightweight material.

Continuous rod string reduces many downhole joint failures

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

PETROLEUM TECHNOLOGY

Most failures in a sucker rod string occur at the couplings, but a new concept using a continuous rod string could eliminate many of those problems.

A single 2,000-ft. long fiberglass sucker rod string manufactured and installed by Fiberflex Products Ltd., Big Spring, eliminates more than 60 such potential problem joints, replacing them with a single end fitting at top and bottom, according to Fiberflex.

Three continuous fiberglass rods have been installed in San Andres producers operated by TransGulf Oil & Gas Inc., Dallas, in the Moore Field in Howard County. Rick Wadsworth of TransGulf says the long rods installed in the company's Nos. 2, 3 and 4 Russell wells, have "worked great so far" in the six weeks since being installed.

Both capital costs and operating expenses can be cut with use of the fiberglass rods, Wadsworth notes.

The lighter weight of the rods, compared to steel, allows using a smaller pumpjack which in turn reduces energy consumption and expense.

Although the first three continuous rods installed are 2,000-ft. long, an upper length limit for the manufacturing process has yet to be reached, according to C.S. (Chris) Christopher, CEO of Fiberflex.

This week, a 4,000 ft., 7/8-in. rod is scheduled for installation in a Reagan County well for San Angelo-based 3M Oil Co.

Christopher says that the maximum diameter for the continuous rod is 1 inch and that the length will be limited only by the maximum weight which that diameter can adequately support.

In field applications, the fiberglass rod makes up only approximately two-thirds of the total length of the rod string. Conventional steel sucker rods — and/or sinker bars — constitute the bottom one-third of the string to provide the weight needed to run the one-piece rod into the well.

Installing the 5/8-inch diameter rod in the initial well requires about 90 minutes set-up time, while the 2,000-ft. rod requires only about eight minutes to actually run into the well.

Fiberflex has rigged a specially equipped winch truck containing a large steel spool from which the rod is run into the well over a pulley mounted on gin poles.

"Because end fittings are the most costly part of either standard steel or fiberglass conventional length rods, the cost per foot goes down considerably with the continuous rod," Christopher explains.

TransGulf's Wadsworth agrees that the new Fiberflex rod is meeting its design justification — making fiberglass cost-competitive with steel rods.

The lower cost per foot makes the continuous fiberglass rod comparable in cost to standard steel rods, Wadsworth says.

He estimates that TransGulf was able to save 33 to 50 percent of the ordinary capital costs for wellhead equipment, because the lighter rods can use a smaller pumpjack and smaller engine.

"Even with the 1,000 ft. of steel rods on the bottom of the string, the fiberglass rods are only loaded to 48 percent of their load capacity," Wadsworth notes.

"We will certainly consider using the continuous rods in future new well installations, as well as evaluating changing the rods out in workover wells," he says.

The continuous fiberglass rod is well-suited to waterflood and other applications with high-volume pumping, Wadsworth said. The expansion energy of the fiberglass rods generates over-travel which allows the rods to pump more fluid than steel rods of the same length.

GNP barely inches forward

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy, held back by a worsening trade performance, grew at a barely perceptible annual rate of 0.6 percent from April through June, the weakest advance since the last recession, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the rate of growth in the gross national product, the broadest measure of economic health, was the smallest since GNP had fallen at a 3.2 percent rate in the July-September quarter of 1982, during the depths of the last recession.

The second quarter advance matches a 0.6 percent rise in the fourth quarter of 1982 as the country began to pull out of the recession.

The 0.6 percent performance marked a sharp downward revision from an initial estimate made last month, when the government projected that the economy had expanded at a 1.1 percent annual rate from April through June.

The revision painted an even gloomier picture of an economy pulled down by a disastrous trading performance and a steep slump in the oil and gas industry.

The 0.6 percent increase from April through June was less than one-sixth of the 3.8 percent rate turned in from January through March.

While the rate of growth was dropping dramatically, the news on inflation remained upbeat. The government said that an inflation index tied to the GNP rose at a 1.9 percent annual rate in the second quarter, the slowest advance since the spring of 1972. The good showing was attributed to the big plunge in energy prices.

For the first six months of the year, the economy grew at an annual rate of 2.2 percent, far below the Reagan administration's original prediction of 4 percent growth for all of 1986.

Earlier this month, the administration trimmed its forecast for this year to show growth of just 3.2 percent while saying the slower growth would contribute to giving the government a record budget deficit of $230.2 billion.

But even to achieve the administration's scaled-back growth estimate, the economy will have to expand at a 4.2 percent annual rate in the final six months of the year, a pace far higher than most private economists expect.

Many private analysts believe the country will be lucky to reach growth of 3 percent in the final six months of the year. Their pessimism is based in part on a belief that the country's poor trade performance is so far showing no signs of improving.

This was a major factor in the downward revision in second quarter growth. The GNP report said that the country's trade deficit had swelled to an annual level of $150.5 billion, subtracting $24.6 billion from domestic growth. A month ago, the government had estimated that the trade deficit had subtracted $4.2 billion less from total output.

Part of the deterioration in trade came from a revision in exports, which the government said were falling at a 5.6 percent annual rate instead of rising at a 3 percent rate as originally thought. The weakness came from a plunge in agricultural sales abroad.

Another large negative factor in the April-June quarter was a $28.3 billion plunge in inventories, primarily coming from efforts by the auto industry to reduce a record backlog of unsold cars.

Analysts say while this subtracted from GNP growth in the April-June quarter it will help growth later this year as businesses begin to build inventories back up to meet consumer demand.

Personal consumption spending, one of the few bright spots in the economy, was growing at an annual rate of 6.5 percent in the second quarter.

Investment spending by businesses, however, fell during the second quarter at a 2.3 percent annual rate after falling an even sharper 15.1 percent in the first quarter. The government said much of this decline resulted from cutbacks in oil and gas exploration and production caused by the dramatic fall in energy prices.

In a separate report, the government said after-tax profits of American corporations rose 4.1 percent in the April-June quarter, reversing a 3 percent decline in the first quarter.

The various changes left the GNP, after adjusting for inflation, at $3.66 trillion, in the second quarter. Before the inflation adjustment, the GNP stood at $4.18 trillion, an increase of 3 percent from the first quarter.

Lawrence Chimerine, president of Chase Econometrics, a private forecasting firm, said the country will be lucky to reach a 3 percent growth rate in the second half of the year.

"That is about the best we can do and to get that we will need an end to the business inventory liquidation and an improvement in trade," he said. "We don't have any definitive evidence that either one of those things is happening yet."

Oil prices see-saw as OPEC reins in production

By ROZ LISTON
United Press International

Oil traded on world markets seesawed Monday amid reports OPEC is taking aggressive measures to rein in production by its Sept. 1 target date to reverse the oil price collapse.

Oil prices rose in the European spot market, where oil is sold to the highest bidder, but declined on the New York Mercantile Exchange after a bout of profit-taking late in the day.

In London Dr. Geoff Pine, an analyst at the brokerage firm of Phillips and Drew, predicted world oil prices would stabilize in the $15-a-barrel range next year as OPEC members turn down their taps.

In December the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' Gulf producers — led by by Saudi Arabia — began flooding the already glutted market in a bid to recapture lost market share from non-OPEC members and drove down prices to below $10 a barrel from an average $28 late last year.

On Aug. 5 OPEC agreed to lower output by nearly 4 million barrels to around 16.7 million barrels a day for two months beginning Sept. 1 by reimposing national output quotas scrapped last December.

In Nicosia, the Middle East Economic Survey reported Saudi Arabia expects to reduce output to just over 5 million barrels a day this month from 5.4 million barrels daily in July by persuading major oil companies to voluntarily cut back oil purchases.

The Saudis are counting on client cooperation and the elimination of incentive discounts to bring down September production to within its OPEC quota of 4.35 million barrels a day, MEES said.

The authoritative oil journal said other major OPEC producers, such as Kuwait and Nigeria, are gearing up for "deep, often painful cuts in production" that could sustain the roughly $5-a-barrel rise in oil prices that has occurred since the OPEC accord was unveiled.

Injector cleaning super gas may gain regular slot

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

It looks and smells the same as regular unleaded, but it costs at least a dime a gallon more and promises to unclog the pinpoint holes in fuel injectors.

It's super gas, and the unleaded version — with names like Ultra and Ultimate and additives like Petrox and XCL-12 — is beginning to regain the allure that its leaded ancestor once held.

For some brands, sales of premium unleaded have surged in the past several months. The demand, which some oil companies haven't been able to keep up with, has been fueled by heavy promotion of new — or more — detergent additives and by lower overall gas prices.

"The marketing and advertising blitz has probably been even more successful than oil companies expected it to be," said Robert E. Cunningham, a consultant for the Dallas consulting firm of Turner, Mason & Co. "The industry was caught short for premium unleaded this summer."

Nationwide, premium represents nearly one-third of unleaded gasoline sales, compared with one-quarter a year ago, said Jan Lundberg, publisher of a newsletter on gasoline. For Shell Oil Co., which is only starting to promote the detergents in its SU200, premium unleaded represents more than half its gas sales in New York City.

Mobil Oil Corp.'s version of premium unleaded jumped 45 percent in sales during the three months ended June 30.

Adjustable rate mortgages lose favor, market share

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

With interest rates at a seven year low, more and more people are looking to buy a house. And, according to a recent survey by the Mortgage Bankers Association (MBA), 9 out of 10 Americans prefer a fixed-rate mortgage to an adjustable-rate mortgage when they buy one. Local savings and loans indicate a similar trend in the Permian Basin.

"The trend has been back to fixed rates because interest rates are so low," noted Poppy Pieper, vice president with First Bankers Savings and Trust. "When rates are high, adjustable-rate mortgages (ARMS) are popular because they start lower, then go up or down. Borrowers feel safe with them because they start out low."

Suzanne Smith, assistant vice president in charge of mortgage lending at ClayDesta National Bank ventured a guess that 1 percent of her customers had ARMS. "Because rates are the lowest they've been in over seven years, people feel the fixed rate is low enough that they can live with it for 15 or 30 years, however long the mortgage is for." She noted that rates were as low as 9.375 percent at the end of April, and climbed as high as 10.625 percent during the last four months, before slipping to 10 percent this month.

She stated that, despite the certainty of fixed rate mortgages, especially at current interest rate levels, ARMS did have their place. "Adjustable rates are better for those planning to stay in a house only a couple of years, or for the first time buyer because he can get in cheaper," she stated.

She went on to explain that with ARMs, the borrower gets a lower rate but pays extra points, which are tax deductible. Generally the adjustable rate is two points lower than the fixed rate. "Suppose you're only going to stay in a house two years. The rate starts out at 8 percent for the first year. At worst, with the 2 percent cap, the rate goes up to 10 percent the second year. You've still had a year at a rate two points below the market," she said.

Christy Ray, vice president at Petroplex Savings, said her company gets few inquiries about ARMs, which Petroplex ties to Treasury Bill rates. "We have not pushed or advertised adjustable rate loans," she said. "Our demand has been for fixed rate loans."

The national study, which surveyed more than 20 of the nation's largest mortgage bankers during the last week of July, found that 93.5 percent of the home loans orginated by these lenders were for fixed rate mortgages. The companies had combined mortgage servicing portfolios in excess of $72 billion, nearly 5 percent of outstanding mortgage debt on one-to-four unit residential properties nationwide.

According to the MBA, fixed-rate loan popularity has increased since the summer of 1984, when ARMs comprised 36 percent of mortgage companies' single-family home loan originations and nearly 60 percent of all lenders'.

Warren Lasko, MBA executive vice president, observed that "Americans flock to fixed-rate mortgages because they can budget their monthly payments more easily. They prefer the certainty of a fixed-rate loan."

Taking on an ARM means gambling on interest rates. The consumer can save over a fixed-rate loan if the rates change in his favor. If not, he has to be willing to bet rising interest rates will eventually fall.

ARMS: PRO & CON

Is it better to take a fixed-rate mortgage, or is it better to take a chance on changing interest rates and either save or lose money?

That's the issue before many prospective homebuyers, and surveys indicate a large majority of homebuyers prefer the security of a fixed-rate mortgage because it's easier to budget monthly payments.

On the other hand, an adjustable-rate mortgage, ARM, averages two points less than a fixed-rate mortgage, making it easier for a first-time homebuyer to purchase a home, and it's better for a buyer who doesn't intend to stay in a home for a long period of time. "It's ideal for Midland, with its transient nature," Poppy Pieper, vice president with First Bankers Savings and Trust points out. "Oil companies are always transferring people in and out."

Currently interest rates on fixed-rate loans are hovering around 10 percent, with rates for ARMs around 8 percent. Which will cost the borrower less over the life of the mortgage depends on what interest rates do in the future.

For example, assuming an $80,000 mortgage at a fixed rate of 10.5 percent would mean monthly payments of $731.79, or a total of $263,444.40 over the loan term.

With an ARM, using the 8.5 percent rate and assuming a maximum rate change of 2 percent annually and 6 percent over the life of the loan, if interest rates remain under or at 10.5 percent, monthly payments would be $615.13.

At the opposite end of the crystal ball, suppose interest rates rise 1 percent annually for six years, hitting a peak of 14.5 percent and staying there. In that case, the homeowner would pay a total of $331,572.48, about $70,000 more than with the fixed rate example. At the top rate under the ARM, monthly payments would reach $961.68.

As a moderate example, suppose the ARM rate rises to 9.5 percent after two years, to 10.5 percent after two more years, and remains at that level for 10 years. Then it rises to 11.5 percent for two years, to 12.5 percent for an additional two years, falls back to 11.5 percent for two years, and settles at 10.5 percent for the final 10 years of the loan.

With these six rate changes in a range of 8.5 percent to 12.5 percent, the borrower would pay $1,600 less over the life of the loan than if he had opted for a fixed-rate mortgage. Payments would range from $615.13 to $787.56.

However, prospective homebuyers should remember they can always refinance an ARM to a fixed-rate mortgage, providing they can muster the refinancing fees and points.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Texaco completes 297 barrel well

From Staff Reports

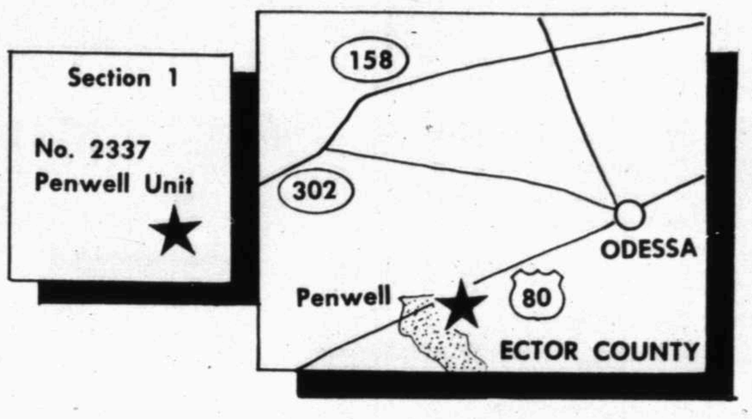

The Penwell field of Ector County yielded a strong San Andres producer for TEXACO, INC., Midland, as it potentialed the No. 2337 Penwell Unit.

Texaco finaled the well to pump 297 barrels of 33.1 gravity crude, 42 Mcfd and 264 barrels of water from perforations 3,754 to 3,837 ft. The interval was acidized with 2,250 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid and fractured with 27,000 gallons of gel, 27,000 lbs. 20/40 sand and 13,500 lbs. 12/20 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 141:1.

Drilled to 3,920 ft., the well was plugged back to 3,910 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 2,969 ft.

The well topped the San Andres formation at 3,416 ft. on ground elevation of 2,900 ft. Pay was topped at 3,754 ft.

Location is 4,358 ft. from northwest and 975 ft. from east lines of Section 1, Block B-16, PSL survey, two miles southwest of Penwell.

Suzan Conder/Reporter-Telegram

Block 1, J. Hays survey, 12 miles southwest of Post.

Hermleigh producer pumps 104 barrels

HOPI, INC., Dallas, reports a Strawn producer in the Hermleigh field of Scurry County with completion of the No. 1 E.G. White.

On potential test, the well pumped 104 barrels of crude and 134 barrels of water from perforations 6,990 to 7,018 ft. Gas-oil ratio is 1,154:1.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 7,642 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 7,600 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and 1,963 ft. from west lines of Section 90, Block 3, H&TC survey, 3.5 miles southwest of Midway.

Spraberry producer tests for 102 barrels

The Coulter South field of Garza County gained a new Upper Spraberry producer as MAGNA OIL CORP., Dallas, completed the No. 2 Lott.

The well was tested to pump 102 barrels of 42 gravity crude and 20 barrels of water from perforations 5,291 to 5,299 ft.

Magna had the well drilled to a total depth of 8,604 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 8,436 ft.

Location is 1,970 ft. from south and 850 ft. from east lines of Section 22, Block 1, J. Hays survey, 12 miles southwest of Post.

Caballos producer finaled in Thistle field

SHELL WESTERN EXPLORATION & PRODUCTION, INC., Houston, continues developing the Thistle field of Pecos County, recently adding the No. 410 Downie Ranch to the field.

On potential test, the well pumped 38 barrels of 35.5. gravity crude and 10 Mcfd from perforations 1,714 to 1,781 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,500 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid, and gas-oil ratio is 2,631:1.

Drilled to 3,200 ft., the well was plugged back to 3,152 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 3,198 ft.

The well topped the Base Cretaceous at 548 ft., Caballos at 1,620, and the Ordovician at 1,780 ft. on ground elevation of 3,271 ft. Pay was topped at 1,714 ft.

Location is 4,620 ft. from south and 2,640 ft. from east lines of Section 38, Block 10, GC&SF survey, 24 miles north of Sanderson.

Glasscock field gains Wolfcamp completion

WEST TEXAS OIL & GAS OPERATIONS, INC., Midland, reports completing a wildcat in the Blalock field of Glasscock County.

The No. 10 Woody "A", an 11,750 ft. wildcat, was potentialed to pump 32 barrels of 38 gravity crude, 58 Mcfd and five barrels of water from perforations 9,118 to 9,160 ft. The interval was acidized with 7,000 gallons 20 percent acid and fractured with 7,000 lbs. 20/40 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 1,812:1.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 11,430 ft. and plugged back to 11,108 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 8,110 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevatioin of 2,566 ft., include the Spraberry at 6,808 ft., Dean Sand at 8,311, Wolfcamp at 8,720, Pennsylvanian Shale at 9,385, Strawn Lime at 10,118, and the Devonian at 10,938 ft. Pay was topped at 9,118 ft.

Location is 1,320 ft. from north and 1,470 ft. from west lines of Section 10, Block 36, T-3-S, T&P survey, 16.2 miles northwest of Garden City.

Morrow producer flows 693.8 Mcfd

An additional Morrow gas producer has been added to the Haley field of Loving County by STANDARD OIL PRODUCTION CO., Midland.

Standard completed the No. 2 Gills "16", an 18,000 ft. wildcat, for a calculated absolute open flow of 693.8 Mcfd from perforations 16,183 to 16,588 ft. The interval was treated with 1,000 gallons.

The well was drilled to a total depth 17,855 ft. and was plugged back to 17,763 ft. with five inch casing set at 15,250 ft.

On ground elevation of 3,007 ft., formation tops include the Brushy Canyon at 7,668 ft., Bone Spring at 9,370, Wolfcamp at 12,233, and the Pennsylvanian at 15,093 ft. Pay was topped at 16,180 ft.

Location is 1,320 ft. from north and west lines of Section 16, Block 28, PSL survey, 16 miles west of Kermit.

Midland operator finals Conger wells

WAGNER & BROWN, Midland, has completed two new producers in the Conger (Penn) field of Sterling County.

The No. 1531 Ray "A" was potentialed for 43 barrels of 55.7 gravity crude, 772 Mcfd and 10 barrels of water on a 16/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 730 psi. Production is from perforations 7,613 to 8,111 ft.

The No. 1214 Grigsby was finaled to flow 21 barrels of 46.7 gravity crude, 163 Mcfd and no water from perforations 7,917 to 8,382 ft. on a 16/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 480 psi.

Mitchell field gains four new producers

WILLIAM H. ZUHONE, JR., Mattoon, Ill., has added four new producers to the Sharon Ridge (1700) field of Mitchell County. All four are in the Minatra field.

Zuhone tested the No. 1-B Minatra to pump 10 barrels of crude and 10 barrels of water from perforations 1,648 to 1,690 ft.

The No. 2-B Minatra was completed to pump 9 barrels of crude and 20 barrels of water from perforations 1,658 to 1,703 ft.

On potential test, the No. 3-B Minatra pumped 8 barrels of 30 gravity crude and 20 barrels of water from perforations 1,640 to 1,665 ft.

The fourth, the No. 4-B Minatra, was finaled to pump 8 barrels of 30 gravity crude and 20 barrels of water from perforations 1,650 to 1,685 ft.

All four are located in Section 17, Block 27, T&P survey, three miles southeast of Cuthbert.

Leaders chart future of Pacific exploration

SINGAPORE (UPI) — Four hundred international scientists and business leaders began a week-long conference today that will chart the future of energy and mineral exploration within the Pacific Basin.

The Circum-Pacific Council for Energy and Mineral Resources is meeting outside the U.S. for the first time. Delegates from 45 countries attending the conference will examine the largest display of energy data ever presented on the Pacific.

Michel T. Halbouty, founder of the council, said this meeting would be the "most constructive" in the group's 14-year history.

Halbouty, a Houston earth scientist and petroleum engineer, said it was estimated that "as much as 30 percent of the world's future crude oil and natural gas resources lie offshore, with promising prospects in both moderate and harsh deepwater environments and in the harsh ice-clad regions of the world."

He said offshore Chinese basins represent some of the world's most interesting potential petroleum areas.

Geologist, nine years experience in all phases of exploration, development, and wellsite geology. Have downtown office, geological library membership, prospect inventory. Will do contract work, retainer, or salary. Will work on sliding salary scale tied to average monthly pipeline price paid for crude.

Party gets lawmakers in trouble

NEWTON, Iowa (AP) — A state legislator who was the guest of honor at a bachelor party that resulted in his indictment and that of another lawmaker and three other people on misdemeanors says he'll be cleared of the charges.

A Jasper County grand jury on Monday indicted state Reps. Ed Parker and Al Sturgeon, a lobbyist, a dancer and a bartender on one misdemeanor count each ranging from indecent exposure to violating the state's gift laws.

If convicted, each could be sentenced to a year in prison and a $1,000 fine, prosecutor John Billingsley said.

The indictments are in connection with an April 17 bachelor party for Parker at the Back Forty lounge in Mingo, 25 miles northeast of Des Moines. It was attended by 25 of the 100 state representatives, legislative staffers, lobbyists and two news reporters.

"I will not apologize for getting married nor for the fact that many friends held a party in my honor," Parker, a Mingo Democrat, said after being charged with violating the state's gift laws. "If it were not for the fact that I'm in the political arena, none of this would have gone this far.

"I did nothing wrong."

Sturgeon, chairman of the House Human Resources Committee charged with indecent exposure, said: "My attorney has allowed me only to tell you what I plan to do. That is to plead not guilty."

"My family has been 100 percent behind me from the very start," said Sturgeon, a Democrat running for the state Senate in November.

Jim Pribyl, a lobbyist for Northwestern Bell Telephone Co., was charged with violating the state's gift laws; Dawn Wilson, one of two dancers at the party, was charged with indecent exposure; and bartender Chuck Maher was charged with permitting exposure of a female breast or genitals.

Because the charges are misdemeanors, the defendants have not been arrested and do not have to appear at a hearing scheduled for Sept. 8, Billingsley said.

Media reports of the party diverted the attention of legislative leaders who were trying to wind up this spring's session of the Legislature. Although more than 25 people attended, many said they knew nothing of the misconduct either because they had left or were in another room.

Sturgeon eventually apologized for what he called inexcusable behavior but never detailed the events prompting his apology.

The indictments against Sturgeon and Ms. Wilson said they "did perform a sex act in the presence or view of third persons."

Parker's indictment alleged he had received a gift worth more than $50 and Pribyl was accused of giving a public official a gift worth more than $50.

"I did not violate the Iowa gift law, the grand jury simply made a mistake on their interpretation of the gift law," Pribyl said. "I did not do anything illegal or unethical in respect to that event."

Sturgeon's opponent in the Senate race, Chuck Thomas, said he won't use the indictment as a campaign issue.

First tests of shuttle rockets successful

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The first in a series of tests of space shuttle booster rockets was successful, although it will take engineers several weeks to analyze the results, the company said.

The next experiment simulating conditions that led to last January's Challenger disaster will probably be conducted in late October, said Gil Moore, a spokesman for Morton Thiokol.

The company plans a series of 10 tests that will continue into next July.

"Everybody was very pleased. It was definitely a morale booster because everything went just the way it should have," Moore said Monday, adding that congratulations came from NASA officials at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala.

On Jan. 28, a booster rocket on the Challenger failed, igniting the shuttle's main liquid fuel tank and triggering an explosion that destroyed the shuttle and killed its seven-member crew.

Last Thursday, engineers at the company's Wasatch Division plant near Brigham City tested three single motor segments linked at two joints of the same booster design of the rocket that failed.

In October, Morton Thiokol engineers will test alternate substances proposed as possible replacements for the sealant material used on the Challenger's booster rockets.

The second test, like the first, will be conducted with both booster joints chilled to 20 or 30 degrees Fahrenheit to simulate the freezing temperatures that prevailed prior to the Challenger launch.

Investigators have said the cold weather on launch day may have impaired the rings' ability to contain booster gases during liftoff, causing a small leak that grew and touched off the liquid oxygen tank.

Back seat shoulder belts not so easily installed

WASHINGTON (AP) — When a new study raised doubts over whether automobile lap belts save lives, motorists were advised to install shoulder belts in back seats. But it turns out that's not so easily done.

Tracking down a spare shoulder belt requires dogged persistence and a bit of luck.

Cars have been required since 1972 to have reinforced anchor locations so rear-seat shoulder belts can be installed. But the automakers have never been required to furnish the belts or keep them in stock and few dealers know anything about them, industry officials said.

The National Transportation Safety Board finding, made public last week, that lap belts were the source of severe injuries to wearers in certain crashes sent safety-conscious motorists scurrying for ways to replace the lap belts in rear seats of their cars.

But these car owners find little help from those who sold them their car in the first place, according to safety experts and auto industry officials.

"It's a long hunt (for a retrofit belt system)...and for the near term there is not a good answer," said Clarence Ditlow, director of the Center for Auto Safety, a non-governmental watchdog group.

Take the case of Edward Soteropoulous, 39, of St. Louis, who regularly insists his 5-year-old boy buckle his lap belt. Soterapoulos also buckles up when riding in the rear seat during car-pool trips to and from work.

He said he was shocked when learning of the NTSB finding in a newspaper report and sought out a local dealer to get shoulder belts installed in the rear seats of his 1981 Mercury Cougar and 1980 Ford Fiesta.

All he got was a second shock.

"They knew nothing about it. They didn't even know where the anchors were supposed to be," Soteropoulous said in a telephone interview. He was referred to Ford's owner relations office, but, "They basically told me what you see is what you get and they don't have anything else."

Barry Sweedler, a staff member of the NTSB, isn't surprised. He said the agency got numerous telephone calls like Soteropoulous'.

Before releasing its report, the NTSB asked its 10 regional offices to try to retrofit agency cars — a mix of various U.S. makes and models — with the shoulder belts and found it virtually impossible, said Sweedler. Only the agency's Atlanta office was successful after finding a local body shop that had a connection with an Oklahoma seat belt supplier.

Sweedler suggested people try auto parts stores such as J.C. Whitney in Chicago, which he says offers a retractable shoulder belt system in its 1986 catalogue for $22 apiece. A customer service representative at J.C. Whitney said, however, she didn't know about any such belts. Calls to other company officials were not returned.

Meanwhile, spokesmen for Ford and Chrysler said there is little they can do since they never have had any shoulder belt systems that can be installed in cars already sold.

"We are investigating the whole issue and have got a lot of people looking at it," said Ford spokesman Bill Peacock.

Both Ford and General Motors said they plan to begin offering rear shoulder belts on new cars in a few years. About half a dozen foreign manufacturers already offer the belts.

GM spokesman John Hartnett said that while GM has a retrofit kit, it is not widely available because there never has been much demand for it. He said GM is also redesigning the system, which is outdated.

But Sweedler said when he tried to buy the GM retrofit system for his 1981 Buick he too ran into blank faces.

Vatican declares strict limits for all Catholics

Charles Curran

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Vatican, in punishing a prominent American priest-theologian, is declaring strict limits for all American Catholics on dissent and sexual practices.

The target of the church action announced Monday, Catholic University of America professor Charles Curran, was decreed unfit to be a Catholic theologian because of too-liberal views on sexual issues — a verdict that will cost him his job at the Vatican-controlled university.

But there was a wider warning too.

Curran had complained he was being singled out unfairly, that his views deemed unacceptable by church leaders on birth control, abortion, divorce and other sexual issues were publicly shared by numerous other Catholic theologians.

Indeed, polls have shown that many of America's 52 million Roman Catholics tend to ignore church declarations on such matters.

The Vatican's response, sent to Curran by Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger after approval by Pope John Paul II, didn't directly address the objection that he is but one of many.

Ratzinger merely quoted from a letter he sent Curran last fall, stating: "The authorities of the church cannot allow the present situation to continue in which the inherent contradiction is prolonged that one who is to teach in the name of the church in fact denies her teaching."

But that sentence came only after two pages of arguing that neither Curran nor any other Catholic has a right to such dissent.

Divorce, after a church-sanctioned, consummated marriage, is wrong, Ratzinger told him. Abortion is an "unspeakable crime," he said, quoting from church documents.

And it makes no difference, as Curran has contended, whether such decrees have been declared infallibly true by any pope, Ratzinger wrote.

He said the Second Vatican Council of the early 1960s had decreed that when the world's Catholic bishops agree on a particular position, that makes it infallibly true.

And he added, taking in all Catholics as well as Curran, "the faithful" must submit their "intellect and will to the teaching which the Supreme Pontiff or the college of bishops enunciate on faith or morals," even if those leaders "do not intend to proclaim it with a definitive act."

Attempts to reach Curran, a former president of the Catholic Theological Society of America, by telephone Monday night were unsuccessful.

He has said repeatedly he is "a committed Catholic" who simply believes such church-banned practices as artificial birth control, divorce and even abortion can be morally chosen in limited circumstances.

His punishment, the first of its kind against an American, came despite objections from hundreds of his fellow theologians who had said they would be "profoundly disturbed" by it.

All but daring the Vatican to take them on, more than 700 members of the Catholic Theological Society and the College Theology Society had signed a letter telling Ratzinger that if Curran's views were "so incompatible with Catholic teaching that he must be declared no longer a Catholic theologian, justice and fairness would dictate that other Catholic theologians who hold similar views should be treated in exactly the same fashion."

"The problem is, of course, that there are very many Catholic theologians who do dissent from noninfallible teachings," they wrote.

In addition, the bishop of his home diocese, Matthew Clark of Rochester, N.Y., had written the Vatican saying punishment of Curran could cause "a serious setback to Catholic education and pastoral life in this country."

Lobbyists fight pending acid rain legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A lobbying group bankrolled principally by electricity companies is spending more than $1 million this summer in a mail-and-phone campaign to defeat acid rain control legislation pending in Congress.

The push by the Citizens for Sensible Control of Acid Rain is among the most expensive single-issue lobbying efforts in recent years and is being denounced by lawmakers and environmental groups supporting the legislation.

Reports filed with the House clerk show that CSCAR spent $1.19 million in the second quarter of 1986, with $1.07 million of it paid to Communications Management Inc., a Rosslyn, Va., firm specializing in direct mailings.

"It costs a lot of money to engage in a national public education campaign," said Thomas Buckmaster, the part-time executive director of CSCAR and a Washington public relations man with Fleischman-Hillard Inc.

Much of CSCAR's money is coming from electric utilities opposing the acid rain bill, which would hit heavily on that industry by forcing a 37 percent reduction in sulfur dioxide emissions from coal-fired boilers by 1997.

CSCAR, formed in 1983 and active in the effort that succeeded in scuttling an acid rain bill in 1984, said in its reports that it got $1.5 million from American Electric Power Service Corp., in Ohio early this year and $1 million from Southern Company Services Inc., in Georgia late last year.

Previously, the group had reported contributions from other electricity generators as well as coal-mining and related companies that fear their industry could be hurt by the bill's emissions standards.

"They are clearly a front group for the utilities," said Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., the author of the bill, which has more than 170 House cosponsors.

At the heart of the lobbying effort are mailed packets warning that the bill could cause hikes in residential rates, raise the price of manufactured goods, create job losses and make U.S. industries less competitive in the world market.

Included in the packets are computer-generated letters that bear the recipient's name and address at the top like a letterhead. The letters, opposing the bill, are addressed to the recipient's representatives. They can be mailed in a postage-paid envelope bearing the recipient's return address.

Peter Newbould, an aide to Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., said his office has gotten about 1,000 such letters. He said the staff counted about 20 differently worded letters, each carrying the same message.

Buckmaster said that "hundreds of thousands of pieces of mail" had been sent around the country and that CSCAR will spend more than $100,000 in the third quarter. He declined to give exact figures or to say whether specific congressional districts were targeted.

But Leslie Dach, a lobbyist for the National Audubon Society, said the targets were members of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, which is expected to vote on the bill after Congress returns from recess on Sept. 8.

A packet that went to a New Jersey woman says the cost of complying with the legislation "would mean up to 30 percent higher electric bills." The legislation, however, limits residential rate hikes to 10 percent.

"Clearly, there's no attempt to mislead anybody," said Buckmaster, adding that Waxman's bill initially called for a 30 percent cap.

"It's a sorry state they are using false information," said Waxman, insisting that the bill was introduced with a 10 percent cap aimed at softening the blow on the Midwest, with its many coal-fired boilers.

A statement issued by the Sierra Club and the National Audubon Society called CSCAR a "nice sounding front group for a bad bunch of polluters."

"The utilities are scared to work in the light of day," Dach said. "This front group has got to be the most expensive plastic surgery in the history of American politics."

Buckmaster said that "we're not a front group for anybody. We are what we are.

NATION IN BRIEF

Ricky Skaggs' 7-year-old son in satisfactory condition after shot

TROUTVILLE, Va. (AP) — A trucker who thought country music star Ricky Skaggs' ex-wife had driven too close to him has been charged with firing shots that wounded the singer's son in the head and neck, authorities say.

Andrew Lee Skaggs, 7, was in satisfactory condition Monday night in Roanoke Memorial Hospital's pediatric intensive care unit, and has excellent chances for recovery, hospital officials said.

His father, nominated Monday as the Country Music Association's entertainer of the year, canceled state fair appearances in Kentucky and West Virginia to be at his son's bedside, the officials said.

Edward Dean Duehring, 36, of Germantown, Md., was charged Monday with malicious wounding, shooting into an occupied vehicle, possession of a stolen weapon, possession of cocaine, methamphetamine and marijuana, and with use of a firearm in the commission of a felony. He was held on $125,000 bond.

Duehring is accused of firing a .38-caliber pistol into the Skaggs' car on Sunday because he believed Brenda Skaggs had cut too close in front of him on Interstate 81 near Troutville, said Botetourt County Sheriff Norman Sprinkle.

Mrs. Skaggs, of Lexington, Ky., drove to the Troutville truck scales on I-81 to get help.

Duehring turned himself in at the same scales about two hours after the incident, said state police Lt. Charles Fraley.

Andrew underwent surgery late Sunday at Roanoke Memorial and was recovering Monday night after the bullet was removed from his neck and glass from his eye, said hospital spokeswoman Carol Mawyer. The bullet dislodged several teeth as it passed through the child's mouth, Ms. Mawyer said.

Skaggs, 32, of Nashville, Tenn., learned of the shooting about 10 p.m. Sunday and rushed to his son's bedside, said publicist Kathy Gangwisch. The reigning CMA entertainer of the year canceled performances today at the West Virginia State Fair and on Wednesday ay the Kentucky State Fair.

"Ricky and his ex-wife are very appreciatiative and touched by the many calls to the hospital expressing interest in their son's condition and prayers," Ms. Gangwisch said.

West Germans to buy spare parts

WASHINGTON (AP) — West Germany will be purchasing $67 million in spare parts from American firms for its Patriot air-defense missiles.

The Pentagon notified Congress on Monday it had approved the sale, which will be overseen by the U.S. Army.

Assuming there are no congressional objections, the West German government will be offered a "logistics supply support arrangement" in which it will enjoy equity with the U.S. Army in buying spare parts from American contractors for the Patriot system.

"This logistical support is needed by the Federal Republic of Germany to maintain readiness of major end items in the Patriot Air Defense Missile System, which is of U.S. origin," the Pentagon said.

Michigan congressman pushes beans

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's fondness for jelly beans is well known, but if a Michigan congressman had his way, the president would also be eating Michigan dry beans.

Rep. Bob Traxler, a Democrat whose district is the No. 1 producer of dry beans in a state that leads the nation in growing the legumes, is sending First Lady Nancy Reagan a cookbook full of tasty recipes, including several for Michigan navy bean soup, a daily fixture on menus at the Capitol.

"I'm hopeful that Mrs. Reagan will confer with the White House chefs and consider serving a bean dish to the dignitaries visiting the U.S.," Traxler said Monday. "Not only do Michigan beans make for a delectable dish, but they're also high in protein and low in cost."

Firefighters injured diving for car

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Four firefighters suffered cuts when they dove to a submerged car after the driver fled the scene, telling bystanders he had been alone in the vehicle, authorities said.

The car sped down a road Sunday and plunged into Lake Merritt, said Assistant Fire Chief Don Matthew. Bystanders said the driver swam ashore and announced, "Don't worry, I'm the only one inside," then fled.

The firefighters' injuries were minor, authorities said.

Union Carbide fines to be settled

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — The Occupational Safety and Health Administration likely will settle out of court its record $1.37 million in fines against Union Carbide Corp., says a judge who is set to hear arguments in the case.

A hearing was scheduled today on Union Carbide's motion to dismiss most of the 221 violations alleged by OSHA after an inspection prompted by an Aug. 11, 1985, chemical leak that injured 135 people.

The high number of alleged violations increases the probability of a settlement, said Administrative Law Judge James D. Burroughs. "Most of the cases are settled out-of-court. Especially the larger ones like this where there are a number of allegations against the company."
