HEAVY RAINS FALL IN MANY PARTS OF STATE AIDING CROPS

LIGHT SHOWERS FALL IN PARTS OF THIS COUNTY

MINIATURE CYCLONE AT O'DONNELL DOES SOME DAMAGE

Heavy clouds which thudded, sprinkled and teased Lubbock generally Sunday afternoon, dropped the bulk of their weight just a few miles south of town and sent a goodly rain over the route into Sweetwater, adding prosperity to a wide strip 50 miles in length.

Light showers were reported throughout Lubbock county, with Elston and vicinity receiving a real downpour. Bus drivers returning from Sweetwater report soggy roads almost throughout the entire route.

Storm at O'Donnell The rain was accompanied by heavy wind in some sections. At O'Donnell where there was no rain a miniature cyclone was reported to have done much damage to barns and outhouses, although no one was injured.

Sections west of Lubbock remained dry. North to Plainview, received light showers, a small portion of which has materially aided sugar in smilling over a heavy coverage of rain which adds gusto to farmers in a wide territory surrounding that town.

With the odor of liquid in the air, and the density of clouds overhead today, pioneer weather prophets are predicting a nice portion of rain for Lubbock county.

San Angelo Gets Heavy Downpour

SAN ANGELO, June 6 (AP)—Preceded by a wind and dust storm, rain fell in this section Sunday night, bringing much needed moisture to part of the range county. Here, the fall was 7-8 inches. Sweetwater, Rowena, Christoval and Colorado got an inch each. El Dorado 1-1/4 inches and a half inch each at Somers, Carlsbad, Brown, Mertson and Brownwood. Showers were spotted in other places, but the oil field area west got no rain at all.

Some Damage at San Antonio

Flyer's Prediction Is Made Into Reality

GALVESTON, June 6 (AP)—Back in 1915, when he was a ground school aviation cadet at the University of California, Clarence Chamberlin predicted that some day he would hop the Atlantic, according to T. W. Linn, Galveston banker, who was a "buddy" of Chamberlin's in squadron number 79 at the school of military aeronautics in Berkeley.

"Clarence was the life of the school," Mr. Linn says. "He was a great practical joker, always smiling and full of fun. But behind all this he was studious and determined. His parting words to me after the armistice were: "Just watch me, Linn. Some day I will hop the Atlantic."

TEXAS SCHOOL DISTRICT LAW HELD ILLEGAL

CREATION OF DISTRICT MUST BE BY VOTE OF PEOPLE

(By Associated Press) AUSTIN, June 6.—Validity of certain independent school districts was struck down in a supreme court opinion made public today. The court held that the legislature had no power, by special act, to create a new school district out of territory partly embraced by an old district where the latter has bonded indebtedness and has been levying tax, thus placing on the new district obligations of the former without majority vote of persons affected.

PETITION FOR BOND ELECTION TO BE STARTED

HIGHWAY COMMITTEE MEETS MONDAY AND TAKES ACTION

The committee of twelve Lubbock county citizens, appointed by the county commissioners to canvass the possibility of a $1,000,000 bond issue for this county, recommended the advisability of calling an election for the proposed issue this morning in the county court room, and circulation of a petition for an election is to be started at once, to be presented to the commissioners court for action.

Would Be Five Per Cent Bond

The $1,000,000 bond issue, coupled with the federal and state aid, would carry with it an increased tax valuation of $25 per $100 property valuation. The bond which would bear 5 per cent interest would accrue approximately $77,000 for the first year, with the remaining years decreasing in tax assessments.

Nordyke Asks Petition

Judge Charles Nordyke, with the approval of the commissioners, recommended that the committee present a petition with the proper number of signatures to the commissioners court before the commissioners would take any action toward calling an election.

Near Sustained Flight Record

The Columbia in its trans-Atlantic flight also came near approaching the world's record for sustained flight, recently established by the same plane with Chamberlin and Levine as pilots when the pair flew over Long Island for more than 51 hours. The Mode For Sports Is Particular

By BETSY SCHUYLER
NEA Service Writer

NEW YORK, June 6.—The Belmont Park races have brought out the most sportive of sports wear and revealed a new tendency in women's fashions.

Just as all social lines between classes are disappearing and just as all courtesy lines are disappearing between ages, so the differences between the erstwhile nonchalantly dressed sports clothes and the firmly, soft silhouettes of even wear are being obliterated.

No Longer Mannish
Sports clothes have taken unto themselves most of the best points of afternoon and evening styles—such as odd neck lines, lovely printed materials, pleats, flares and so on—while retaining their own virtues summed up in their carefully correct appearance. They are no longer mannish.

A large number of fashionable women sponsored one or two-piece sports dresses in soft, summer shades and a coat of one type or another over it.

Varied Moods
On these coverings, indeed, did one's eyes linger long. It seemed to me that the modes of coats were as varied as the weather. They ranged from featherweight little taffetas or figured foulard or crepe jackets topped ensembles to smart, tailored raglans in the trend that one just can't seem to get anywhere so well as in London.

Mrs. Robert Livingston Clarkson's coat was a seven-eighths length tiered model of figured blue crepe, the same material as the sports frock under it.

Mrs. Malcolm Meacham got my vote for looking as smart as any race track devotee on Saturday. Her soft citrus yellow crepe frock with its finely pleated skirt and blouse with Vionnet neckline had an unmistakable Parisian note in its delicate hand-hemstitching and its open-work monogram on the left side.

Rich Badger
She wore a tan tweed coat with a fleck of this and that color in it that gave tremendous life to the garment. A rich badger collar, flaring sleeves and a masculinity of its tailored lines. Her visca mushroom hat was yellow.

For strictly Frenchy lines I noted the taffeta coat worn by the Duchess of Torlonia. Crisp, becoming jacket revers it had and its shade was a blue I had not seen before—perhaps one might call it hydrangea. For it had that same dull soft purpleness to its shade that the flower has.

Six-toned Gray
Kathryn Brown, always original and interesting in her choice of clothes, had a stunning large pleated soft wool ensemble in grays of at least six tones combined with white. Her coat was a straight line three-quarter length with no fastenings whatsoever but of the kind that just hangs smartly open, looking sport-like and revealing the immaculate white pleated blouse under it.

Of the separate jackets I must say a word. They first appeared this spring at the French races. American women have taken to them with enthusiasm and they come in all kinds of material and colors.

One may expect a large pleated jacket worn by Mrs. Al Davis. Her smart sports dress under it was of pelican gray with its collar of pinkish felt took the same soft shade.

Medium Hats
Big hats appeared even and anon. But all said and done a big hat is often a tremendous nuisance to your neighbors at races, not to mention being a bother to yourself. So the medium or small hats retain popularity for sports wear.

Speaking of big hats, I saw Mrs. Jerome N. Bonaparte dining at the Roosevelt last week in a snug fitting, small brimmed hat of mist gray hairline. Now that all women are considering big hats, Mrs. Bonaparte is again original in choosing a medium sized one. It's the first time this season that I've noticed her sponsoring anything but a picture chapeau. Her whole costume, incidentally, was well worth noting—a pleated gray crepe de chine dress with a matching kaesha coat.

Furs Persist
Furs, incidentally, seem to survive warm days with a good deal of gusto. The fox scarf becomes fully one out of every four necks and the clipped fur sports coat still furnishes a most attractive topping for many a debutante's sports frock.

Aqueduct Guarded After Third Blast

BISHOP, Calif., June 6 (AP)—A 28 mile front along the Los Angeles aqueduct in Inyo county saw the city gathering its defensive forces today to meet the reopening of the Owens valley war over water rights marked yesterday by the third dynamiting of the city water supply system within two weeks and the fifth in the history of the big pipe line.

The dynamiter, evidently sympathizer with Owens valley citizens who contend that the city of Los Angeles has taken water from the area to the detriment of its land and without adequate compensation, did not place yesterday's charge sufficiently far under the conduit to destroy it and only its concrete sides were shattered. It probably will be in service again before night.

Two pigeons owned by Armin Hoffenstler of the Fort Worth Homing club, out of 28 entered by a 540 mile race from El Paso to Fort Worth which ended when the birds arrived at 10 o'clock Sunday morning. They had been flying since six a. m. Saturday.

SAN ANTONIO, June 6 (AP)—More than a quarter of a million dollars worth of bread is made by the army to feed San Antonio soldiers every year. A check of the two bakeries at Ft. Sam Houston reveals that a great deal is produced daily by bakery Company No. 1 at Fort Sam Houston.

New York To Rome Flight Announced

NEW YORK, June 6 (AP)—Clusette M. Bellanca, designer of the monoplane "Columbia," which carried Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine to Germany, today announced that a flight to Rome from New York in a "single engine plane" will be made probably in October. The names of the pilot, the navigator and the baker, he said, he did not wish to divulge at this time.

LAMESA NOSES OUT HUBBERS IN TWELVE INNING BATTLE HERE

Pitching Is Key To Win Of Reds And Robins In Sluggests

GOOD PITCHING MARKS OTHERS AS BROWNS WIN

CUBS TRIM BRAVES IN 7-0 WIN AS YANKS DEFEAT TIGERS

Major league teams with the best pitching are the ones that are getting the most victories at this stage of the pennant races.

Strong everywhere but on the slab, the New York Giants turned away from Cincinnati with only an even break after a four-inning split with the red-clinging Reds. At the same time the less highly touted Brooklyn Robins were making the most of their pitching strength in a close duel with the world champion Cardinals.

Reds Win Sluggest

Pitching weakness was demonstrated by two teams at once in the closing game of the Giants-Reds series yesterday at Cincinnati which went to the Reds by a 10 to 9 count.

Of nine pitchers who took the mound, none could stop the hitting—a condition, however, which the ball fan relishes as it makes for more thrills. The game had a ninth inning rally and counter rally with each club scoring three runs in the final frame.

Others Show Good Pitching

Good pitching performances were comparatively numerous.

In a 7 to 6 white crashing administered by the Chicago Cubs to the Boston Braves Sheriff Blake allowed but five hits and Zachary of the St. Louis Browns pitched a six hit game for his team's third straight over the Senators, 3 to 1.

Lockhart Wins 100 Mile Detroit Race

DETROIT, June 6 (AP)—Frank Lockhart won the 100 mile open class track automobile race here Saturday, negotiating the distance at an average rate of speed of 78 miles an hour. Cliff Woodbury, fifth, led second, Ira Vall third, Bruce Miller fourth, and Sherry Carlton fifth.

George Saunders, winner of the 500 mile race at Indianapolis, was forced out of the race in the 42nd lap with a broken cylinderhead.

Tilden And Mate Lose Mixed Doubles

ST. CLOUD, France, June 6 (AP)—Jean Borotra and Henri Cochet, world champions, lost their mixed doubles crown in the international hard court championships, defeating William T. Tilden of the United States and Senorin Eña de Alvarez, 6-1, 2-6, 6-2.

Snyder Proving Big Help to World Champs

Laugh Will Be On McGraw If Cards Beat Giants Out of Flag This Season

FRANK SNYDER

By BILLY EVANS

WILL Citey Frank Snyder of the St. Louis Cardinals former star of the Giants, prove a jinx to New York's pennant chances?

It's the uncertainty that is attached to baseball from every angle that makes it a great game, the national pastime.

In baseball, one should take nothing for granted because the most unexpected things happen. As a shining example of that truth, Catcher Frank Snyder of the St. Louis Cardinals is offered an Exhibit A.

Frank Snyder made his debut with the Cardinals in 1921. From the very start he gave signs of developing into a great catcher. Within a few years he was rated as a regular.

In the middle of the 1919 campaign, Manager John McGraw of the New York Giants, had proposed for Snyder, made a trade for Snyder. In return he gave South-paw Freddie Schupp and plenty of cash.

In those days, John McGraw had a habit of getting anybody he went after for greater possibilities in Snyder. He saw great possibilities in Snyder, and he gave signs of developing into a great catcher. Within a few years he was rated as a regular.

Starting with the 1921 season, Snyder became the first string catcher of the Giants, who proceeded to win four pennants in a row while Snyder handled the pitchers, always, of course, under McGraw's direction.

From 1921 to 1926, a matter of five major league campaigns, Snyder caught 100 or more games each year for the Giants.

After failing to win in 1925, McGraw started to rebuild his aging machine and among those slated to see new pastures was Catcher Frank Snyder. When waivers were asked, the St. Louis Cardinals claimed him.

Just prior to being claimed by the Cardinals, Snyder suffered a hand injury that kept him out for the rest of the season and prevented him from sharing in the Cardinals' world series spoils.

Snyder reported to the St. Louis club this spring in great shape and was fortunate that he did. Manager Ewing was unable to work and manager Bob O'Farrell troubled with the task of handling the Cardinal pitchers fell to the former Giant, Frank Snyder.

Apparently catching as well as he ever did, although he hasn't as yet struck his batting stride, Snyder filled the hole made by the absence of Manager O'Farrell. His excellent judgment in handling the pitchers had much to do with the fine work of the world champs during the first five or six weeks of play.

On farm, New York and St. Louis are the two outstanding clubs in the National League. They are the best bets for the pennant. Those two clubs must be distanced to win the championship in the National League.

What an extraordinary happening it would be if the work of Catcher Frank Snyder for the Cardinals, and overlooking the Giants. No one knows the McGraw strategy better than Snyder. It is more than a mere possibility.

STROKE SAVERS

This picture gives you a good idea of how I play my broom shot. I use a remarkably long club in proportion to my height.

A small man, in order to show off with a tall and more preferably built opponent off the tee, needs a longer club to get the distance.

I play my broom with an open stance, my right foot is advanced, my elbows and hands are close in and I come back slowly. That's what I want to emphasize here—slowness.

AVIATOR WINS THIRD VICTORY

Demonstrates Ability To Keep Plane In Air And To Get It Down

(By The Associated Press)

NEW YORK, June 6.—Clarence Chamberlin, who with Charles A. Levine landed 70 miles southeast of Berlin today in America's second trans-Atlantic flight has won two other signal air victories. He demonstrated his ability to keep a plane in the air and to get it down.

With Bert Acosta as a flying companion he made a record breaking endurance flight in April when the same Bellanca plane, used in the New York-Berlin flight remained aloft 51 hours, 11 minutes and 29 seconds. The estimated distance covered was more than 2,500 miles.

Lands With Broken Gear

Ten days after this flight Chamberlin showed that in an emergency he could dispense with his landing gear and get down in safety without it. Flying with two little girls and a mechanic as companions he was advised that his landing gear had fallen apart. By skillful maneuvering he finally landed on one side but nevertheless reasonably safe sides up with no injury to his passengers and little damage to the plane.

The endurance flight was started Tuesday morning, April 13 and ended Thursday afternoon, bettering the previous world mark of 45 hours, 11 minutes and 29 seconds made by the French duo, Jean Mermoz and Rene Gouvenec over the Atlantic, August 2, 8, 9, 1925. The American record was formerly held by Gayley G. Kelly and John A. Macready, 36 hours, 4 minutes and 36 seconds, established April 16, 17, 1925.

The plane carried 2,850 pounds, including the important items of 355 gallons of gasoline and 21 gallons of oil.

Bible Infallible And Inspired, Says Evangelist Here

"Forever O Lord, Thy word is settled in heaven." Ps. 119:89.

"In heaven, where dwell Seraphim, Cherubim, and all the angelic hosts, the word of God is settled. It is not questioned anywhere in the whole universe except upon this planet where we live," said Mr. E. T. Wilson in his opening remarks at the tabernacle, cor 15th and H last night.

Continuing he declared himself to be a firm believer in the Bible as the inspired word of God, and recommended it to his hearers as the one and only infallible guide book to the City of God.

"The best evidences of its infallibility," declared the speaker, "are found in the book itself, so I shall not attempt to go outside of the sacred writings to its proof of its authenticity, but refer you to a few authors of this most widely known and read book in the whole world."

"A statement from the Apostle Paul to the effect that all Scripture was given by inspiration of God, and that the things which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in Psalms, concerning me."

"Upon these infallible statements," said the speaker, "I take my stand and declare unto you my unqualified belief in the Bible as the Word of the Living God, Who made heaven and earth."

Library Service Much In Demand At This Season

Reading interest takes its highest tinge during the month of March, according to county library figures. Circulation during this month is accountable largely to the urge brought on by spring weather.

Summer brings many readers to the book shelves. Vacationists, who consider a good book a restful source, and idle students, are responsible for a creditable library interest throughout the warm months.

"This is the season of year when travel and adventure books hold a lure for the young and old," says Miss Francis Hoyt Ford, county librarian. "To those who remain at home, the vacation season is attended with reading of desirable places for outings."

Stories of Outings of Various Types are Especially in Demand

Stories of outings of various types are especially in demand. Fishing, hunting and hunting experiences of notable authors are passed around freely.

Western stories lead all other types in circulation figures. Zane Grey, James Oliver Curwood and William McLeod Rainie hold the spotlight with their fiction of the West and its heroes.

Kellogg Company Opens Campaign

Realizing the advertising success of the Lubbock Avalanche and Journal in the South Plains country, the Kellogg company, of Battle Creek, Michigan, has selected these combined papers their advertising campaign on the most popular breakfast cereal, Kellogg Cornflakes. An extensive contract for the campaign was tendered by the company to the Avalanche and Journal.

It is interesting to note that this company's daily output on this product is one and one-half million packages and that the Battle Creek plant with its 2200 employees work three continuous 8 hour shifts the year around. The company is one of the largest users of corn in the United States and Mr. Kellogg personally offers prizes for the money percentage of corn encouraging the farmers to grow only the best.

SAN SABA HAS WHITE INDIAN TREATY

Pillaging Carried On By Warring Tribes Told Of By Paners

(By The Associated Press)

SAN SABA, Texas, June 6.—"Treaty Rock," commemorating a treaty between United States Army officers and degrading Comanches, Cherokees, Kickapoo and other warring Indian tribes, is in the possession of the San Saba Fair Association.

The treaty was scrupulously kept, history records, and this section, once a sanguinary battle ground in the pioneer war between the whites and Indian raiders, became comparatively peaceful.

Treaty Date Not Fixed

Local records do not fix the date of the treaty but indicate it was entered into sometime between 1847 and 1850. Previously, in 1841, it appears, Chief Eze and Chief Bow, long powerful leaders of the Cherokees, went on the war path. They burned their homes and pillaged their property. Aroused by the depredations, the Texans gathered a band known as minute men and under the leadership of a Captain Lynch, overtook them at McNelly Blens on the Colorado River. In a battle of three days Chief Eze and Bow were killed and the band practically annihilated. Many relics of this battle recently have been found, including rusted guns and knives.

Many Whites Killed

Undeterred by the disaster of their warring neighbors, the Comanches, Kickapoo and other leading hostile tribes, continued to ravage the country heretofore. They had killed many whites, including surveyors sent out by the German Immigration Company which had purchased the San Saba valley from the Comanches. A company of Texas Rangers under Captain Ed Hurlison was sent out to subdue them. After several skirmishes an agreement was reached for a conference between the white men and the Indians at the head of Wallace Creek, 12 miles west of here and endeavor to make a treaty of peace. United States Army officers entered the conference and after a pow wow the Indians agreed not to molest the whites or interfere with settlers and land surveyors.

To commemorate the treaty several flat rocks were set up as monuments and tribal scribes wrote on them the terms of the treaty in the language of the tribes represented. As time passed some of the rocks were removed, but at least one that in possession of the Fair association, remained intact.

WHITE STEALS HOME IN 12TH TO CINCH GAME

SLED ALLEN HAS BIG DAY IN FIRST GAME HERE THIS SEASON

The Lobos, highly touted baseball aggregation from Lamesa, took the long end of a 5 to 4 count against the Lubbock Hubbers here Sunday afternoon at the Merrill park in the first appearance of the victors here this season, but it required twelve innings for the feat.

It was when Butler Walter, Lobo outfielder, made a perfect slide to home on a fielder's choice that scored the winning run for the Lamesa nine in the twelfth session. It was a game that has always been shown when Lubbock and Lamesa clubs battle one another. The game was marked with hitting and fielding performances that held intense interest among the fans that gathered for the exhibition.

Shower Hits Game

The visitors scored in the fourth inning after time was taken out for the shower that fell for only a few minutes. Taylor, right hander for the homebats, went back in without warming up and allowed the Lobos four hits and three runs. After that inning, however, the visitors were held for even scattered singles.

The Hubbers scored two runs in the fifth with two hits and two more in the seventh with three hits. Aside from the fifth and seventh innings the homebats were unable to put over additional runs.

Davis Allows Ten Hits

"Lefty" Davis, wrong hander for the visitors, went all the way pitching with apparent ease for the twelve frames and allowed but ten hits during the exhibition and only one for an extra base. Davis was in with every ball cutting the outside corners and but few times gave the homebats any thing to lean on. "Preacher" Taylor, Hubbers choice for the day, was in for the twelve sessions, too, and but for the fourth frame he allowed nothing but scattered bingles.

Allen Has Big Day

Shed Allen, ace of baseball exhibitions on the South Plains, who came back to his old stomping grounds for just one more game for the season, showed up like a youngster yesterday and had as good an afternoon as he has had for the past three years. He delivered in every trip getting three hits in three trips and one for an extra base, stole second, and had two perfect bunts down. It was indeed a big day for the old warrior. He, too, showed his ability in tossing the agate to second by cutting a runner off at second in the attempt to steal.

J. B. "Red" Hamilton had his off day as did Shed Allen when his big day—twice "Red" charged two slow rollers and had the ball thrown before he got to chalk a couple of errors on him. "Red" Gaitner, too, made a costly blunder and allowed one man to score when he tossed of a high one to "Wagon" Sanders at a critical moment. "Bucky" Brothers, young outfielder who fields and hits with but one hand, showed up well in the game accepting eight chances and losing one. He, too, singled and sent two men to second with good sacrifices.

Due to the light shower that hung over shortly before the game the attendance for the afternoon was cut considerably. The box score:

Rheims Restored

France and the United States may rejoice in unison on May 26 when the Rheims cathedral, restored after its awful desecrations from shell fire during the war, is again opened for worship. Its venerable cardinal, Lucon, remained within stone's throw of the cathedral all through the war, saw its treasures battered and burned by the booms of war. He will again come into his own when Rheims is reopened.

Europe's Teeth

George Eastman, the American philanthropist who recently gave a million and a half to improve the practice of dentistry in England, could not have found any better cause for support than that he chose.

Americans, so accustomed to drop into the dentist's office at the first symptom of a toothache, do not appreciate how far behind is the practice of dentistry in Europe. Even Germany, a leader in modern medical science, has not equalled the American progress in dentistry, and it will be remembered that the German kaiser had an American dentist who looked after the once-royal mouth. No country in the world has better teeth than America, and it is passing on our knowledge of dentistry the Eastman foundation strengthening the entente cordial to a high degree.

Making It Pay

Announcement that Major Dargue, commander of the recent good will flight around South America, will accompany a business man on a seven weeks' tour of the United States in the interest of South American commerce, shows that the government is aware of the possibilities of capitalizing on the recent flight.

That trip was more than a gesture of military preparedness or an air reconnaissance of the tropics. It was a gesture of good will, and it paved the way for increased commercial relations between the two Americas, as Major Dargue's coming business trip would make it. The flight will prove itself to have been of immense value.

Honor For Clowns

The French government has just bestowed a decoration and a medal upon one of its clowns—Coco. At first glance the idea appears to be absurd. The country's heroes—its soldiers and its statesmen—reserve all honor, but their work does not come close to the heart of the average man. It is the mimic and burlesquer who takes out of life who really does most for the great majority. Only when we look about for potential recipients of clown honor does the plan seem doubtful. Would the nation as a whole favor a congressional medal of honor for Chaplin, heckler?

No Signs of War

With the United States fleet trying to force its way through the defenses of the New England coast line, and large details of the country's land and air forces struggling for the possession of San Antonio, it might seem that we are a warlike nation. There is, however, no danger of militarism in the United States, and the efforts of this country to secure world reduction of armaments give the lie to any charge of super-preparedness, no matter on what scale war games be played by our land and sea forces.

Now that Lindbergh's across O. K. about the only form of free entertainment left is our murder

THE PLAINSMAN

To be perfectly frank about it The Plainsman sides with Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, 2nd, in their domestic unpleasantness which recently culminated in the Paris divorce courts. Reason upon reason of publicity attended the Vanderbilt family fuses, due of course to the fact that both parties are well known and that the public liberally demanded the facts. That, of course, was unfortunate but never-the-less unavoidable. The Plainsman feels just this way about it—If Jim Jones who works in the corner grocery, has a right to get a divorce or to sign legal documents permitting Mrs. Jones to get one, then William K. Vanderbilt, 2nd, 3rd or 4th has the same right, and so has his wife. If Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt find that it is impossible for them to live together as man and wife—and by that The Plainsman means in the holy bonds of matrimony—then they should part company just as Mr. and Mrs. Jim Jones should. The public can maw through the records, grin maliciously at the wrecking of a prominent family but that does not subtract one iota from the rights of the principals involved. For years the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt were not compatible was widely known. Mrs. Vanderbilt, the former Virginia Fair, made no bones about it when she said that as soon as her daughters were married—her family reared, that she would ask for a final decree of divorce and she did. The very fact that she continued as a wife and a mother—even if her activities as such were removed from her husband—shows that she felt the responsibility that she took at the altar and she should be given the credit for holding her family together, if in name only, until those daughters were grown and in homes of their own. Likewise the fact that Mr. Vanderbilt did not sue for divorce when his wife admittedly left him, shows that the divorce was necessary, and regrettable as all divorces are—but The Plainsman falls to see any room for censure of the Vanderbills for their action any more than for similar censure directed at those who do not occupy the spotlight, yet who pursue the same objective.

WASHINGTON LETTER

How Congressmen Protect Themselves, From Cranks—Fighting Off The Bad Check Artists—Bloom Boosts A Book

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Congressional mail is fascinating material for exploration, but congressional visitors are almost a menace.

The only reason congressmen retain such mental faculties as they have is that there are secretaries to protect the congressmen and sometimes even stenographers to protect the secretaries.

But the worst pest or the most pronounced psycho pathetic case at times has such a plausible exterior that he gets into the inner sanctum and then it's the devil's own job getting rid of him.

These cranks include those who come in to ask the great man to endorse a check. If he isn't there to put his name on the check himself, why his secretary will do very nicely. Often it's not good politics to refuse and the boys on the hill are not hard-hearted when someone from the home state badly needs the money, but it is hardly for these checks to come back.

The late Senator Ladd once lost $400 that way. The leader of an American Legion band is said to have cashed the check after obtaining Ladd's endorsement. Most members of Congress, however, will balk at taking a chance on such a large sum.

One senatorial secretary recently cashed a check for $45 for a young man from out near his home. Back came the check. It subsequently developed that the youth had spent $45 of the money talking over the telephone to a girl friend in the west that same evening. His mother finally made good.

Congressman Sol Bloom of New York has blossomed out the government's super-salesman. About March 15, Uncle Sam modestly put on sale one of the most important volumes published by the government printing office for a long time. This was the code of laws of the United States of America, an indexed, complete compilation produced by act of Congress after many years of labor and research.

One lawyer says that this available tome costs some $290 as massible in annotated form from private publishers, but the government only charged the modest sum of $4. Nevertheless, sales were sluggish until Congressman Sol grabbed hold of the promotion work.

Then the government printing office received more orders for the book in three days than it had in the preceding two months.

PETTY THIEVING: Recently instances of petty thieving upon Dawson county have been reported to officers. The pilferers seem particularly devoted to stripping automobiles of tires, tools and attachments. The propitious moment for those infractions seem to be when the farmer is asleep or when persons are attending church.

In many of the latter places special watchers are to be engaged in ferreting out these malefactors. Eyes of private citizens are to be directed to this vigilance.

Recently a number of persons apprehended for this violation have been incarcerated in the Dawson County jail. Terms range from 30 days to four months. And others will lodge in the same calaboose if this petty thievery continues, according to the edict that has gone forth from the sheriff's department—Dawson County Journal.

CROWELL'S GAS

With a gas well on the west of us and one recently brought in on the east Crowell might well begin to contemplate its future as a gas and oil center. The indications are very good that developments will be taking place around us. And Crowell has not secured that big hotel yet. We just as well face the facts in the case and admit that we shall be wonderfully handicapped if we do not get it. Another thing we might put down and that is, nobody is going to come in and build a hotel for Crowell. It must be done by local capital if it is done at all.—Foard County News.

SWIMMING

Don't imagine because you can swim there is no likelihood of your drowning. Statistics are not at hand, but guessing at it, will be said that drownings are about equally divided between those who swim and those who don't. Last Thursday evening an expert swimmer lost his life in one of the lakes near Dallas, two other persons losing their lives there the same day in the same manner. This brought the total number of deaths by drowning up to ten in Dallas and vicinity this season, which is yet young. Through out the summer months it is reasonable to suppose that this number will be considerably increased. If you can't resist going into the water, be careful.—Canton Herald.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Visitors are invariably amazed at the manner in which New York manages to pack its assortment of varied enterprises into so small an area.

Andre Charlot—he of Charlot's revue fame—who was born in Paris, naturalized in London and has lived almost everywhere, says that an artist can find almost anything obtainable on this earth in the 20 blocks between 37th and 57th streets with boundaries set at Eighth avenue on one side and Lexington avenue on the other.

I live in 52nd street and can carry on my entire business activity without traveling more than a dozen blocks or so, and so can anyone else similarly occupied," he points out. "Where else in the world is this possible?"

If you seek the best music, you will find it in this regime Carnegie Hall, Town Hall, Aeolian and the Metropolitan.

The art of the world comes to 57th street and juts off on Madison, Lexington and Fifth. You can see all the shows and visit the best cafes; visit the temples of filmdom and stop at hotels from the highest-priced to the lowest, dwell in costly apartments or in actor's boarding houses; call on the agencies for the theater, music, literature and art; walk along the heart of the nation's clothing industry or find anything you care to drink from beer to champagne; run the gamut of the night resorts from Chinese restaurants to 516 covert charge resorts; meet half the notables of the play world or engage almost any stage star, scenic designer, costumer, musician, painter or jazz band worth talking about; enter the offices of America's film kings and find them laying their plans for production or organizing a selling campaign—all in 20 short blocks that can be covered in a few minutes walk.

It will not be long before this belt is even more compact. Already 37th street is rather far away and, as I walked along Broadway the other morning, I saw the old Broadway theater at 41st street being leveled by the wreckers to make way for a 32-story building. Some 40 years ago this theater was considered "pretty far uptown" when Fanny Davenport opened it with "Tosca."

Here Edwin Booth gave his "Hamlet," with Modjeska as Ophelia. Elsie Janis made her first big hit there and Lillian Russell was to be seen there in the days before she attracted the attention of the world. The list of famous actors to play there make up a veritable "who's who" of the theater.

When "Ben Hur" was put on with a real chariot race it was thought that the last word in stagecraft had been said and "Little Lord Fauntleroy" brought tears to nice old grandmas in the days before grandma bobbed her hair.

Of late years it slid back, like so much of Broadway, into the movies and the ghosts of Nat Goodwin, Booth, Joe Jefferson and a dozen others must have sighed and passed on.

John's Breath

The man who said romance was dead must have died without leaving the bed in which he was born. The events which are described here happened to take place in South America; with a few variations allowing for locality they might have occurred in Africa, the interior of those numerous regions where civilization suddenly stops short and the primitive as suddenly begins. Where a half-cad native comes to a rattle-trap moving picture show, sees American pictures not more than a year old, listens to jazz made on a squeaky Anacostia phonograph, then goes off to his home in the jungle which marks the end of the main street and has to be very careful that a tiger does not spring upon him from the bushes or a dark shadow looking like a tree branch suddenly come to life as a huge anaconda searching for a pleasant supper.

I got my first hint of this tragic but fascinating case from a very casual conversation with the conductor of a train of the Brazil Central railroad when I was going up to Manaus to get some background for a rubber story. It struck me as so vivid and so extraordinary that as soon as I had the opportunity I went to considerable trouble to get as many of the details as possible from anyone left in Porto Verde—or anywhere else for that matter—who could tell me anything.

As a one-time newspaper reporter and editor, specializing in the criminological, I have written or read probably more detective cases than falls to the lot of the average newspaper man; and I have come upon some which properly be called bizarre. But I did not dream how bizarre and mysterious a case could be until I encountered this. I claim no credit for the narrative. I have merely visualized and tried to put down in as dramatic a fashion as possible what I saw and what I heard from the lips of persons whose authority was unquestioned.

Some few persons who read Spanish or Portuguese may have seen some mention of the case in South American newspaper; others will not have done so for nations naturally try to suppress news of the calamitous or horrible, just as the official communiques during the war suppressed the news of defeats. In fact the correspondent of one of the New York newspapers at Rio de Janeiro told me afterwards that he tried to get some word of it through and was gently informed that even though some of the persons concerned were Americans, it would be infinitely more tasteful not to send any report.

The curious may find details which I have passed over in the "Journal de Commercio," published at Rio de Janeiro or the "La Razón," at Pernambuco. For obvious reasons the names of the Americans involved have been changed. Those of the Brazilians have not. But I am wasting time talking about the story and not telling it.

The case began in Porto Verde, a small town in the more mountainous section of west central Brazil on one of the lesser tributaries of the Amazon. Despite its small, it is really a New York in its cosmopolitanism. Its native population is Brazilian, of course, ranging in color from coal black to milk white—the color not always indicating place in society as there is no color line in Brazil. Besides these are Italians who have come to work on the coffee plantations nearby, Germans who have come to farm, English to develop the rich industrial resources of the region, a few Americans who have journeyed there to co-operate or compete with the fellow Anglo-Saxons, and a few others, pioneers in spirit, who seek the adventurer's ever-shifting frontier.

Like so many of these tropical cities, the settlement seemed to exhaust its energies on one or two buildings, making these magnificent and letting the rest manage for themselves as best they might. There was a splendid municipal building that would have been a credit to any city in the size, built of a sort of red volcanic rock abundant in the region; a very creditable theater which every man, woman and child in town must apparently visit every night to prevent a dreadful deficit; a fair hotel, and beyond that nothing but shacks of every description, shacks of wood, of battered pieces of tin, and even of thatched rushes, in whose every door fat negro women sat grinding corn or shouting affectionately at their naked children playing in the mud.

It was a city of contrasts. Here was a shop where for outrageous prices could be bought American soap, razors, chewing gum or a single second hand watch; across the street from it was the unescapable American cinema where the latest exploits of the kings of Hollywood waited all who had the necessary number of reis. But between these two buildings walked a huge black savage whose only clothing was a breech-cloth and whose ears were pierced and lobes widened until they could hold heavy steel ornaments as big as saucers. Around his neck he wore a string of human teeth which probably represented at least four victories over his jungle enemies; if spoken to, he could only answer with a series of grunts. Next door to the shop which displayed the watch was a store where, if one had a little money and knew the proprietor, he could enter a back room and be shown a collection of dried heads. These he could buy, if he felt so inclined, though the transaction must be a trifle surreptitious for the traffic is banned by the government in far-off Rio de Janeiro. If the watcher stood for even an hour before the stately city building, the concrete for whose sidewalk had come from the state of Washington, the likelihood is that he would see at least one caçaveiro, the beautiful and deadly Brazilian rattlesnake, dash across the road for a frog or chameleon on the other side; if he chanced to be a native and left a pet goat out in his yard one night, he might wake up in the morning and find nothing but the bloody tracks of a great puma.

The contrast extended to the landscape. Here and there on the low hills surrounding the valley in which lay the town, showed a field plowed with an English plow, fenced with American fence; but everywhere else, behind, in front, in back, beside, wherever man's hand had stopped, was jungle, green, dank, poisonous, a monstrous infinite legged octopus, waiting only till the intruder's vigor had slackened for an instant, when it would dart out its swift green tentacles and claim its own once more.

As convenient a point as any at which to begin the story is with the arrival of one of the principal actors in the tragedy, not because his arrival in itself is important, but because it happened to coincide with events that began to mark the case's climax.

He was a little man of perhaps 65 or 70, with a sleepy, kindly look in his round brown eyes, one of the few features of his gentle face which could be seen, for the rest was much obscured by heavy nose glasses. The lower part of his head was bordered by a slight fringe of beard, very scanty, but whose well kept appearance showed his pride of ownership. His quick, rather jerky movements, as he got off the steambus that chugged into Porto Verde, betrayed him at once as a man of nervous temperament which, together with his appearance, marked him almost certainly as a scholar; a figure a bit unusual in Cambridge or any other university town.

He listened with apprehension to the grumbling of the black, shivering Brazilian who took his hat and began dolefully trudging off with it to the hotel. "Don't tell me . . . er . . . any more," he said after a moment, speaking in jerks much like the movements of his wispy body. "You've told me . . . er . . . quite enough . . . Quite . . . It's absurd, really . . . absurd. I don't know whether you are trying to frighten me or not. But I certainly do not think you are a wise . . . er . . . choice to receive visitors here. Not wise. If I took all your gloomy . . . er . . . prophecies seriously, I would take the next steambus back to the next of mine. You're letting it drag the ground every other foot. Yes, every other foot."

The Brazilian shrugged his shoulders apathetically. "No, no," he mumbled thickly. "Why Frascito fright you? Tell truth, Frascito always tell truth. Anybody come here, Porto Verde, big fool. Bad people here. Murder. Theens here. Evil theens. Theens which kill. One month, one peoples. Two months, two peoples. Three months, three peoples. And how? Knows nobody. Kill more peoples two, you see. Give Frascito tip for tell you this. Huh?"

The newcomer hesitated, put his hand into his pocket and, drawing out a coin, gave it to his gloomy servant. They reached the hotel from whose brick walls the

YOUTH SOUGHT IN KIDNAPING

Aviator Escapes In Plane With Girl Who Had Spurned His Love

LOS ANGELES, June 6.—Charles LaJette, aviator and Norman Burke, who he is said to have kidnaped from San Diego in an airplane, landed at Rogers airport here today.

Miss Burke was said to be planning to return immediately to her home in San Diego.

Sheriff's deputies were sent to the airport immediately after the sheriff received a report of the alleged kidnaping plane landing there.

It was indicated LaJette might be taken into custody pending the receipt of San Diego advices.

(By The Associated Press) SAN DIEGO, Calif., June 6.—Search for an airplane piloted by Charles LaJette, 36 year old aviator who is alleged to have kidnaped Miss Norman Burke, attractive San Diego girl who had spurned his affections in a spectacular get away at the Ryan flying field here, was under way throughout Southern California and Arizona today.

LaJette, police said, enticed Miss Burke and her companion, Dr. John Street into his plane with promises of a pleasure ride but got rid of the doctor by stratagem, asking him to get out and inspect a part of the landing gear and then opening the throttle and taking off as Dr. Street got clear of the machine.

If Old Fritz Only Knew— PHILADELPHIA WOULDN'T BE SUFFERING SO

Special NEA Service Writer BERLIN, June 6.—From Berlin to Philadelphia—one hour! But the Philadelphia in question is not in the U. S. It is a little village in the suburbs of Germany's capital.

After Frederick the Great had won all his battles he started to colonize the Mark Brandeburg, which had been devastated through the results of the many years' lasting battles.

Frederick the Great was a great admirer of the United States and admirer of the growing city of Philadelphia, Pa. So he named one of the colonies after that city.

One good hour's ride by motor car leads to the southern part of Greater Berlin there in a sign on a narrow road pointing to Philadelphia. Thirteen houses in all, some old and crumbled and some gaily painted up in red and blue and yellow—that is the town.

The oldest inhabitant, Ferdinand Graef, tells that his grandfather bought a small house in the year 1766 from the original colonist who himself settled there in 1771. Since then the Graef family has been living there. Graef is 87. His daughter, Mrs. von Linn, lives there too, with her husband and their daughter, which makes five generations all told.

Altogether Philadelphia counts about sixty souls, most of whom are living in quiet and peace. Life here is so peaceful and sufficient and so good to grow up to live from. But they have troubles other than poverty, old Ferdinand told me.

During the time of the inflation a Berlin banker bought the big farm which joins Philadelphia, and is trying to establish all the land here. To crush the townfolk an impossible hard for them, for instance by having a pathway leading through a small forest to the fields of the colonists forcing them to make long detours to get to their work.

"This pathway has always been open as long as I can think," said Graef, adding with a sigh, "Oh, if our old Fritz only knew this!"

Flyer's Parents Are Overjoyed OMAHA, Neb., June 6 (AP)—A flash of joy—the dispatch telling of Clarence Chamberlin's landing at Eisleben in his Bellanca monoplane Columbia broke a long spell of anxious waiting in the Associated Press office here of Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlin, his parents.

Both were outwardly affected by the relief of their son's safe arrival on a record non-stop flight. They had been there since early yesterday morning, eagerly scanning the reports coming over the automatic printer.

ONE MAN HELD FOR HIJACKING

Mystery Character, Posing As Officer, Charged In Several Cases

Through the aid of two friends who give him a petting party, Sheriff H. L. Johnson arrested a man who gives his name as T. A. Norman, a slender, red-complexioned man who is charged with hijacking occupants of parked automobiles on the roads near Lubbock for several weeks.

Victims of the hijacker who have brought charges to the Sheriff's office say Norman has posed as an officer of the law. In many instances, some say, he would flash a bright searchlight in the faces of parkers, tell them he is an officer of the law, demand payment of a fine with the aid of a gun, and then tell his subjects to drive on.

Another Record WASHINGTON — Mr. Coolidge seems to hold some sort of a record for salutes. As he was reviewing the fleet 420 shots were fired, 21 by each of 20 flagships. He gave 20 salutes in return.

(Continued from Page 1) was immediately replaced. It was shortly afterwards when officials announced to the waiting crowds at the air field that the Columbia would not arrive, as it had suffered a propeller break seventy miles southeast of Berlin and could proceed no further.

Chamberlin and Levine will be brought to Berlin tomorrow in one of the Luftwaffe's passenger planes.

Motor Trouble Caused Doubt

NOTTHERS, Germany, June 6 (AP)—Motor trouble and a shortage of gasoline caused the descent of the American trans-Atlantic plane Columbia, said Clarence D. Chamberlin, arriving here this afternoon from Klings, where the Columbia is believed to have landed.

Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine, who accompanied him, were rescued here by motor. They went immediately to the hotel Absorge, where they ordered a good meal.

Admit Disappointment The airmen were in a happy frame of mind and gave no indication of weariness. They freely admitted disappointment over their failure to reach the Tempelhof airport at Berlin, especially when informed of the all-night vigil of the Berlin crowds and the arrangements made there for their reception.

The village of Klings, where the Columbia landed, is only about nine miles from Kottbus and the airmen were brought here a few minutes after the landing.

We were forced to come down because of a shortage in fuel and the motor trouble and while the spot that we picked out looked good from the air, we soon discovered that we had dropped on dangerous swampy ground," said Chamberlin.

May Go To Berlin Today The American aviator declared that it was his intention and that of Mr. Levine to fly to the Tempelhof airfield near Berlin late this afternoon in a Luftwaffe plane. It is believed, however, that he is

Wives Plan To Join Husbands

NEW YORK, June 6 (AP)—Two overjoyed women, relieved of a four-day strain, today were preparing to journey to Berlin.

They were Mrs. Clarence D. Chamberlin and Mrs. Charles A. Levine, whose husbands flew to Germany. The wives, however, plan to make their trip by the more prosaic method of a steamer.

Women Overjoyed Hour upon hour of anxiety passed with a flood of joy when the two women yesterday heard the news that the Bellanca plane Columbia carrying the two men had reached the continent. When reports indicated that Berlin was to be the plane's destination, they sent cables, prayers of congratulations and word that they were sailing to join them.

Mrs. Chamberlin had retired at a New York hotel, but expressed joy when news of her husband's safe arrival in Eisleben, Germany, was received.

Mrs. Levine, with other members of the Levine family, received news of her husband's safe arrival in Eisleben, Germany, when she was in Belle Harbor, Long Island.

Mrs. Chamberlin had announced she would take passage on the Hertha later extended to both women to sail tonight on the Hamburg-American liner Resolute may result in a change in her plan. The offer was made on behalf of the German reception committee and the German government.

Flyer's Parents Are Overjoyed

OMAHA, Neb., June 6 (AP)—A flash of joy—the dispatch telling of Clarence Chamberlin's landing at Eisleben in his Bellanca monoplane Columbia broke a long spell of anxious waiting in the Associated Press office here of Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlin, his parents.

Both were outwardly affected by the relief of their son's safe arrival on a record non-stop flight. They had been there since early yesterday morning, eagerly scanning the reports coming over the automatic printer.

"Think goodness he's landed," exclaimed the anxious mother. "Where is Eisleben?" Mr. Chamberlin, trembling asked. He could barely restrain himself. A man was found.

"My goodness it's 116 miles off from Berlin," he shouted. The next minute was to call Mrs. Clara Mearns of Benson, Iowa, their daughter. She was in bed but Mr. Chamberlin talked to a man in a restaurant there.

"Spread the news will you?" the father asked. "They tell me Eibel (the daughter) is in bed. Call her up and give the news to everybody."

The several hours of intensity had visibly affected the flyer's parents after word had been received that they might have been lost in the heavy rains near Berlin.
