MISD trims expenses, increases salaries

Study of 1986-87 budget continues

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland school trustees Tuesday continued their study of the 1986-87 budget, cutting expenses to offset an average 4 percent increase in teacher salaries.

Under the approved salary hike, beginning teacher salaries will increase by 5.5 percent to $19,000 per year, while the maximum salary (for a teacher with a doctorate degree and 28 or more years of experience) will increase less than 1 percent to $35,675 per year.

Calling the measure a "good news situation," board president Bill Jackson said the district will be able to "give teachers a well-deserved raise (though a smaller one than we'd like) without increasing the local tax burden."

Trustees June 10 approved a preliminary budget that calls for a 4 percent increase in the actual tax rate from 76.8 cents to 79.9 per $100 valuation.

That's an increase of 3.1 cents per $100 valuation, but because the overall taxable value for the school district is down 10.4 percent, only about 15 percent of the taxpayers will be paying higher taxes than they did in 1985-86, business manager Don Furgeson said.

To offset the cost of the salary increase, Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi has recommended trustees consolidate some programs, making it possible to trim payroll costs by $1 million and hold total payroll increases to $312,000.

By consolidating programs, he said the district can afford to eliminate 10 teaching positions, a director of special programs, assistant superintendent for administrative services, coordinator of pupil services, attendance officer, elementary school principal at Pease, an administrative intern, a special education diagnostician and supervisor, bilingual education chairman, Chapter I supervisor, secretary to the assistant superintendent, secretary to the coordinators at West Elementary School, mail clerk and the administration building and a clerk at the material center. Those duties will be assigned to other departments or absorbed by other personnel.

Since the Legislature equalized school finances three years ago, Midland has been losing ground in the area of teacher salaries, Baressi said.

Previously, MISD teacher salaries ranked among the highest in the state, but officials report the district's starting salary currently is one of the lowest in the Permian Basin, making this year's increase important to maintaining the competitive edge.

"Because MISD must compete with other Texas districts in hiring teachers, it's necessary to keep our salaries competitive. Otherwise we won't be able to attract the best," Jackson said.

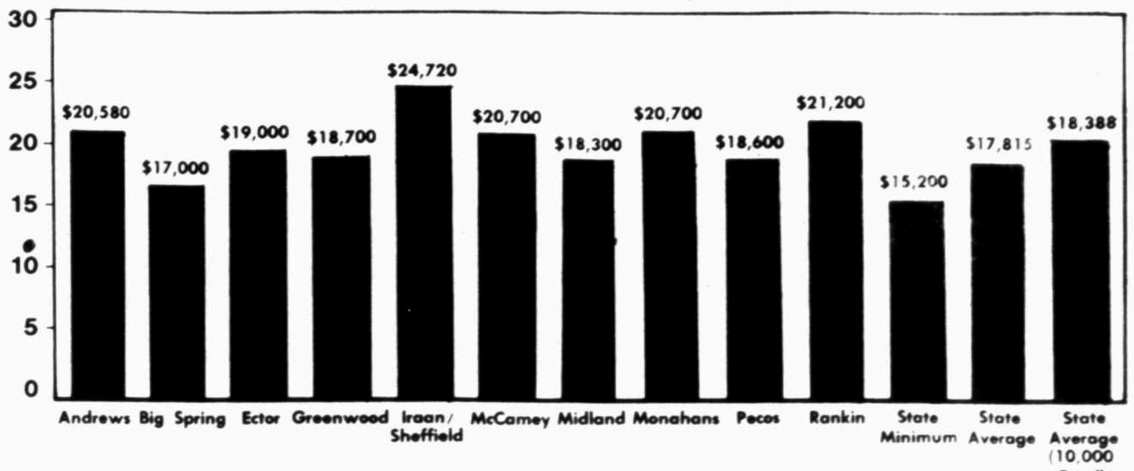

In other cost saving measures, trustees voted to discontinue educational grants for teachers and adjust the annual sick leave rebate and retirement sick leave rebate.

Under the sick leave rebate, full-time employees who complete the year with more than 30 days of sick leave will be reimbursed for each day over 30, up to 10 days.

The retirement sick leave rebate is designed to reimburse an employee who completes at least 10 years employment with the district. Employees with 30 or more years of service receive full pay, while employees with 20 to 29 years of service receive two-thirds pay and employees with 10 to 19 years of service receive one-third pay, up to 30 days.

Comparison of Beginning Teachers' Salaries (Bachelor's Degree)

Susan Conder/Reporter-Telegram

A comparison of current beginning teacher salaries shows the Midland Independent School District is below the state average for districts with enrollment of 10,000 or more students and lower than most Permian Basin school districts. On Tuesday, school trustees approved an average 4 percent salary hike that will increase beginning teacher salaries by 5.5. percent to $19,000 while the maximum salary (for a teacher with a doctorate degree and 28 or more years of experience) will increase less than 1 percent to $35,675.

Tax plan approval nearly unanimous

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tax cut for millions of Americans is one step away after a near-unanimous Senate approved the most sweeping tax-overhaul legislation in a generation.

Congressional bargainers will begin meeting in mid-July to draft a compromise between the bill the Senate passed Tuesday on 97-3 vote and a less dramatic version the House approved last December.

"I don't see anything stopping a tax reform bill being on the president's desk this year," Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, predicted.

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and the prime architect of the Senate package, said that with the Senate vote, Congress is "two-thirds of the way there" to revising the tax code.

Nonetheless, Rostenkowski said there will be "long discussions" between the House and Senate on some of the most sensitive differences between the two bills, particularly the treatment of middle-income taxpayers.

The Senate bill compresses more than a dozen existing individual tax brackets — ranging from 11 percent to 50 percent — into two brackets of 15 percent and 27 percent.

The House bill has individual rates of 15 percent, 25 percent, 35 percent and 38 percent.

Democrats in both chambers have said that under the Senate bill, the wealthy would not pay their fair share of taxes while middle-income people would not get enough of a break.

Contra aid vote looms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is moving to another showdown vote over aid to Nicaragua's Contra rebels following President Reagan's declaration that failure to act will guarantee the Soviet Union its first military base on the mainland of the Western Hemisphere.

But opponents of the $100 military aid plan were prepared to urge the defeat of the package on grounds that the rebels diverted and misused much of the $27 million they previously were granted for non-lethal assistance.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the White House was "very, very close" to victory and that "a handful of undecided people" would decide the outcome. One administration official, speaking privately, said the president needed four to six more votes.

MC cuts budget by 6 percent, adjusts tax rate

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The Midland Junior College District Board of Trustees Tuesday approved an estimated $10 million preliminary budget that calls for across-the-board cuts in expenses including payroll, travel, capital outlay and maintenance.

College officials say they have been successful in preparing a budget that is $664,000 or 6 percent less than last year's and decreased by nearly 3 percent the effective tax rate based on a 92 percent collection rate certified by the Midland Central Appraisal District.

However, the board did approve a recommendation by President Jess Parrish to increase the actual tax rate 9.4 percent — from 9.04 cents to 9.89 cents per $100 valuation.

(The actual tax rate can best be referred to by the rate adopted in the preceding year or 1985. The effective tax rate is that rate which would produce the same amount of revenue in 1986-87 as the college attained in 1985-86 taking into consider all changes in assessed value.)

Parrish told trustees that because the overall taxable value (the value placed on all taxable property) for the college is down by nearly 10 percent, nearly 85 percent of Midland property owners will pay less taxes than they did last year, meaning the college will receive less revenue.

Residents, whose property value remained the same, will pay about $8 more in taxes on a $100,000 home than they did in 1985-86 and, some residents whose property values declined, also may pay more taxes depending on the degree of the decrease, he said.

Parrish reported the college did what it could to cut expenses and hold a tax increase to a minimum in the wake of a $1.3 million shortfall in state revenues. The across-the-board cuts included a $200,000 reduction in capital outlay, $25,000 in utility costs and $80,500 in general operating expenses.

"My judgment tells me we did the right thing. I don't see how we can cut anywhere else.... We have no choice but to exercise fiscal responsibility on behalf of the college."
— Jess Parrish, MC President

"My judgment tells me we did the right thing," said Parrish. "I don't see how we can cut anywhere else."

Midland College earlier this year joined Texas' 48 junior colleges in implementing salary, promotion and hiring freezes, travel restrictions and fewer new program offerings to comply with Gov. Mark White's request to cut 13 percent from state agency budgets.

Parrish said he is "convinced" that legislators will call for further cuts to make up the shortfall and, because Midland College receives 51 percent of its funds from the state, the college will "guard against" those reductions in its own budget.

The Legislature appropriated about $10 million to Midland College for the 1986 and 1987 fiscal years based on its enrollment to be used for instructional programs and instruction-related services only.

Parrish told trustees he regrets the inability to pass the 6 percent savings on to the taxpayers, but because the college anticipates a 10 percent increase in fall enrollment, he noted there will be an increased demand for services.

"We have no choice but to exercise fiscal responsibility on behalf of the college," he said.

Gubernatorial race homing in on budget matters

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a four-part series on the current state budget crunch and what effect it could have on Texas' future.

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — More than four months remain until Election Day, and the allegations are already flying at an October-like pace.

Almost daily, claims of "fairy tales," surpluses and deficits, "flip-flops," "broken promises" and "secret plans" emanate from the campaigns' headquarters. Democratic incumbent Gov. Mark White and Republican challenger Bill Clements have their staffs digging hard to come up with embarrassing interpretations of each other's term in office.

With state government headed toward a possible shortfall of $2 billion by the end of the biennium, the charges have centered not surprisingly on fiscal matters. In the midst of that barrage, the Legislative Budget Board has issued a comprehensive, 149-page document that chronicles in hard numbers state spending trends over the last 12 years.

THE TEXAS BUDGET CRISIS

The LBB report shows:

— During Clements' 1979-1983 term, actual dollar expenditures increased by 55.7 percent from a biennial budget of $16.6 billion to one of $25.8 billion. Under White, spending has jumped 44.4 percent to $37.3 billion.

— When adjusted for inflation and population growth, state spending under Clements declined 5.4 percent, from $10.6 billion to $10 billion. Since White took office, the adjusted figures show, expenditures have increased 14.8 percent to $11.5 billion.

— The governor's office budget under Clements dropped from $93.8 million to $60.3 million, a 35.7-percent decline. Adjusted figures make that a 64.6-percent drop. During White's administration, the governor's office budget has grown to $95.2 million, up 57.8 percent. Population and inflation adjustments moderate that to 9.1 percent.

— Adjusted figures for education, which makes up more than half of the state's budget, show education expenditures declined by 5 percent with Clements in office and increased 8.2 percent since White took over.

— Again using population- and inflation-adjusted numbers, spending for all categories of state government has increased during White's term, ranging from 1.3 percent for health to 57 percent for general government. Under Clements, public safety and corrections expenses increased 30.3 percent, while the budget for human services dropped by 15.8 percent.

Hurricane watch issued as storm moves toward Galveston

GALVESTON (AP) — A hurricane watch was posted for parts of Texas and Louisiana today as fast-growing Tropical Storm Bonnie drifted toward Galveston, chasing workers off oil rigs in the northern Gulf of Mexico.

The watch, along with gale warnings for 70 mph winds, was posted at 7 a.m. CDT from Port O'Connor to the mouth of the Mississippi River. A watch means that a hurricane or incipient hurricane conditions may pose a threat to coastal and inland communities.

"All of the oil companies in the area between Sabine and the Port O'Connor-Corpus Christi area are in the process of evacuating all their (oil) rigs," said Coast Guard spokesman Chief Michael Martin in Galveston.

"Reports from an Air Force plane indicate Bonnie continues to strengthen," forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in suburban Miami said in a special advisory. "Winds are near the threshold for a hurricane and hurricane warnings may be required before mid-day."

Bonnie, with top winds of 70 mph, was centered 225 miles southeast of Galveston, Texas, at latitude 27.2 north and longitude 92.0 west, at 7 a.m. It was headed west-northwest at 10 mph and was expected to stay on that course and speed, said the advisory.

Forecasters had said earlier the storm might strengthen as it moved over warm waters in the central Gulf of Mexico.

"We have had hurricanes in the month of June before, so it's nothing out of the ordinary," forecaster Barry Damiano said.

The Hurricane Center's computer gave nearly one-in-three odds of the storm coming within 65 miles of the Galveston area in the next 24 hours, but forecaster Miles Lawrence cautioned that such predictions were far from perfect, especially when it comes to early season storms.

"In June, you don't look for the typical hurricane pattern," he said.

"The storms that form this time of year aren't the classical type. We're not as confident in our expectation of where they might head," he said.

Still, the Hurricane Center advised residents along the northwest Gulf coast to closely monitor the storm's progress.

Packwood successfully redirects tax overhaul talks

By LEE BYRD

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just seven weeks ago, Robert William Packwood had a legislative debacle on his hands, one that imperiled his own future as well as the elusive promise, long shared by leaders of both parties, of a new and simpler way to tax America.

The junior Republican senator from Oregon, in his first real test as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, had witnessed his colleagues take the tax bill sent over by the House and begin to render it to mush, each tugging and pulling, in the name of equity, for his favorite deductions.

Packwood, 53, abruptly suspended the proceedings. There was talk around the capital that for all his energy and intellect, he was failing the test of leadership.

But two weeks later, his colleagues on the committee voted unanimously for a back-to-the-drawing-board package advanced by the chairman himself, and gave him a standing ovation to boot. That triumph was followed by his renomination in Oregon and, on Tuesday, the Senate's 97-3 approval of the bill, one that goes farther to overhaul the tax code than most anyone dared hope.

A day before the Senate vote, Packwood vowed that with continued support from the public, "We will give you the most significant tax reform for the betterment of America you've seen in half a century."

Packwood claims little credit for the ideas embodied in the measure, acknowledging that most of its principles were brainstormed by others — Democrats and Republicans alike — and the assembly was done by his staff. But it was he who ordered the finished product, then sold it virtually intact.

That Packwood himself, much less the entire Senate, could support such a bill represents a remarkable turnaround. Just a year ago, he said that "on taxes, I'm predictable as the sun rising," meaning he didn't much like the idea of wholesale tinkering with the code.

For years, though, he was one of the Senate's most forceful advocates of using special tax breaks for particular groups to shape social and economic goals. "I've never met any two people who agree on what tax reform is," he once said. "To the extent tax reform means taking away many of these incentives (deductions and credits), I don't agree with that."

His reversal on that score is but the latest twist in a Senate career that has never lacked for drama. He was elected in 1968 by defeating four-term incumbent Wayne Morse by a scant 2,235 votes out of 780,000 cast. At age 35, he was the youngest member of the Senate when he took his seat. He's still as trim as he was then, thanks in part to his regular squash matches with fellow Republican Sens. John H. Chafee of Rhode Island and Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania.

He has often found himself at odds with other Republican leaders. He was the first GOP senator to call for the impeachment Richard Nixon. Nixon resigned as president in 1974.

In 1982, Packwood was ousted as chairman of the Senate Senatorial Campaign Commmittee after complaining that President Reagan's "idealized concept of America" was alienating blacks, women, Jews, Hispanic people and blue-collar workers.

Packwood, at the same time, suggested to an interviewer that the president wasn't completely tuned in when Republican leaders went to the White House for policy meetings. For example, Packwood said, Reagan once responded to the senator's concerns about the mounting federal deficit with an anecdote about someone buying vodka with food stamps.

The others at the meeting would just "shake our heads" in dismay at Reagan's tendency to get "on a totally different track" than the subject at hand, Packwood said.

Reagan was furious. Packwood eventually apologized to the president for revealing what went on in leadership meetings, but he never said he was sorry for his specific statements.

Packwood has fought vigorously to preserve womens' rights to obtain abortions, drawing such enmity from one anti-abortion group that it nicknamed him "Senator Death" and moved its headquarters from Washington, D.C., to Oregon to concentrate its efforts on defeating him.

Fresh from his victory this spring in the Finance Committee, Packwood got by his Republican primary challenger, a Baptist minister, by a fair, if not comfortable, margin last month. This fall, he faces Democratic Rep. Jim Weaver, whose $5,300 campaign treasury pales against the $2.5 million in Packwood's till.

Packwood's administrative and fund-raising skills have earned him the respect of Republican colleagues. He transformed the senatorial campaign committee into a modern, direct-mail operation that increased receipts from $2 million to $40 million.

As chairman of the Committee for four years, he took a leading role in deregulating the airline, trucking and bus industries. "It's not the business of government to prevent capitalistic acts between consenting adults," he once said.

Packwood developed a strong appreciation for civil liberties when, World War II, he watched a childhood friend, a Japanese boy, be taken away to a relocation camp.

TAX

Congressional tax experts have estimated that under the Senate bill, the after-tax income of people earning $30,000 to $40,000 a year would be raised by 0.4 percent, compared with 1.4 percent for those making more than $200,000. Roughly one in four people earning between $20,000 and $50,000 would face a tax increase.

Packwood has said repeatedly the rates in the Senate bill are inviolate and the "glue" that holds it together.

He also has dismissed arguments that the middle class would not get a fair shake.

"There's no question the average middle-income Jane and Joe working in the shoe store, working in the lumber and feed chain (store) come out better under this bill," Packwood said.

Rostenkowski, though, left no doubt about his position, saying, "I'm going to be as interested as many of the senators were ... in how this affects the middle-income family. That, I think, is the true glue that would keep reform together."

He also recommended a compromise, noting the Senate bill has two brackets while the House bill has four. "There's a number someplace in the middle," Rostenkowski said.

The bargainers also face tough arguments over a Senate move to reduce the deductibility of contributions to Individual Retirement Accounts.

Rostenkowski said he would seek to retain that deduction.

There also are differences on provisions to eliminate the deduction for state and local taxes and the elimination of the deduction for interest on consumer credit as well as Senate provisions that reduce the value of tax shelters and capital gains.

But, for now, the emphasis is on the prospect of enactment of a tax bill.

"The Senate has voted on tax reform and the score is: taxpayers 1, special interests, nothing," President Reagan said in a written statement as he watched tax overhaul — his No. 1 domestic priority for his second term — take on new life with the Senate vote.

Just before the vote, Packwood emotionally told his colleagues they were about to deliver "a great victory for America." Choking back tears, he told senators, "This country is in your debt."

The Senate bill would reduce taxes for most individuals, by an average of 6.4 percent — about $215; raise taxes for 25 million people and shift $105 billion of the federal tax burden to corporations over the next five years.

More than 6 million working poor would be taken off the income-tax rolls, while some rich investors and profitable companies making big use of legal deductions would become taxpayers for the first time in years.

The $1,080 personal exemption would rise to $2,000 for all but the wealthiest taxpayers. Standard deductions would be increased, to $3,000 for singles and $5,000 for joint returns.

Deductions for consumer interest, such as for credit cards and car loans, and miscellaneous expenses, including union dues, would be repealed. The writeoff for medical expense and sales taxes would be slashed. Income averaging would be repealed for all but farmers. Capital gains would lose their long-held preferential treatment.

Cyanide found in second brand of pain-killer

AUBURN, Wash. (AP) — Store shelves in southern King County were bare today of over-the-counter medications in capsule form after authorities investigating two poisoning deaths discovered cyanide in a second brand of headache remedy.

Residents were urged not to take any over-the-counter medication in capsules, and stores were ordered to remove such products, after a random check Tuesday turned up tainted Anacin-3 in this Seattle suburb where two deaths have been blamed on cyanide-laced Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules.

The bottle of Anacin-3 was found in a Pay 'N Save store in a north Auburn shopping center during a Food and Drug Administration spot check, police Chief Jake Evans said late Tuesday at a news conference.

"Cyanide was preliminarily specified and was identified," Evans said, adding that he could give no further details on the manner in which the bottle was found. "It impinges on our investigation," he said. "We don't want to be revealing information that we or the suspect might know."

"Any over-the-counter capsule medicine is suspect and should not be used," Evans said.

The warning applied to southern King County, including Kent and Auburn, FDA chief Frank Young said Tuesday night at a news conference in Seattle. "We don't consider it anything but a local problem," he said.

Information on how many capsules were poisoned, and lot numbers, was not being released, said Young and Evans. All capsules were suspect because of the lack of threats in connection with the tampering, Young said.

Jim Davis, director of FDA investigations in Seattle, refused to say whether there were outward signs of tampering on the bottle, which is required to have tamper-resistant packaging under federal law.

Anacin-3 is manufactured by American Home Products Inc. of New York City. Company spokesman Jack Wood said Tuesday night that the company was "quarantining our capsule products" nationwide based on what he called unconfirmed reports that cyanide had been found in their product.

Wood said it was premature to consider a ban on all the company's capsule products. Bristol-Myers, maker of Extra-Strength Excedrin, last week recalled all non-prescription capsule products.

The bottle could have been on the store shelf between three and 12 weeks, said store manager James Nordness. Employees had noted no suspicious people in the part of the store where the bottle had been stocked, Nordness said.

Cyanide-laced Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules were blamed in the deaths this month of Sue Snow, 40, and Bruce Nickell, 52, who lived a few miles apart in Auburn.

It was the first time in this nonprescription drug scare that a brand other than Extra-Strength Excedrin has been involved.

"Because of the Excedrin problem, I guess they thought they would check some other products, and one of them showed positive," said police Officer Jim Detrick, who confirmed that FBI tests in Washington, D.C., last week on two bottles of Extra-Strength Excedrin turned up capsules laced with cyanide.

The tests apparently showed the cyanide found in those two bottles was from the same batch found in the bodies of the victims, Detrick said.

FBI spokesman Joseph Smith in Seattle said the latest contaminated bottle would be analyzed in Washington, D.C. He declined to give other details.

A series of roll call votes was expected today on amendments, each of them offering a variant of the aid plan or seeking to place a new condition on it.

And congressional sources said House liberals, irked by attempts to broaden the appeal of the plan by tying it to new U.S. aid to the fledgling democracies of Central America, might seek to defeat the ground rule under which the debate will proceed.

Such a development would delay any action until after Congress returns from its Independence Day recess.

Supporters of the president's position will attempt to attach the aid plan to an unrelated bill appropriating $8.1 billion for military construction projects in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

One alternative, opposed by the White House, will be offered by Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla. It would provide $30 million immediately for non-lethal logistical aid and training and make the remaining $70 million available in installments — but only if Congress first voted to approve each installment.

McCurdy on Tuesday predicted victory for his proposition, saying, "I think it will be very close. But when all the smoke and dust clears, I think I'll win."

A bipartisan attempt at a compromise on the issue will be offered by Rep. Ike Skelton, D-Mo., and Mickey Edwards, R-Okla., in the form of an amendment.

The proposal seeks to broaden the appeal of the $100 million Contra aid package by providing $300 million in already appropriated funds for economic assistance to Costa Rica, Honduras, Guatemala and El Salvador.

French metalworkers want to stay in America

NEW YORK (AP) — Jean Wiart says the Statue of Liberty's torch was just a job, an assignment far from his home in northern France. Now the job he came to do is through but the metalworker wants to stay in America.

"It was a turning point, this statue," said Wiart, 34, speaking fluent English he has learned since arriving 15 months ago. "I left my father and mother, my brother and sister, the atelier (workshop) where my family has worked for 100 years to come here and work on this statue.

"Now I want to stay, because here I can do the work I love. There is opportunity and I want my children also to know this chance."

Wiart headed a team of 10 Frenchmen hired to build the torch and flame. Two of Wiart's colleagues also say they'd like to stay, following the path of immigrants who the Statue of Liberty honors.

They have set up a shop where they will work in New Jersey, 30 minutes west of New York City. The workshop is a branch of Les Metalliers Champenois of Bezannes-les-Reims, France, the company hired to reconstruct the torch when an American company of equal merit could not be found.

The Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation hired the French because they are experts in the metal embossing technique known as repousse, a technique first practiced by bronze workers in ancient Greece. Wiart and the others trained for seven years in France in the workshops of master metalworkers and on major monuments like Versailles.

More private projects are to be found in the bigger, richer United States, Wiart said, and working in America will mean more challenges and a chance to further refine his craft.

"It is a big adventure," he said.

BUDGET

The campaigns have picked up on two of those figures.

Early on, White's folks pointed out that the budget in actual dollars grew more quickly under Clements than during the present administration. Realizing that inflation had run rampant and that the state was growing phenominally while Clements was in office, the Republicans countered with the adjusted figures showing real spending had actually declined under Clements.

Both sides have different interpretations for "the $1 billion surplus."

Clements touts figures from Comptroller Bob Bullock that "certify" that on Aug. 31, 1983, the end of the last fiscal year over which Clements had any control, the state budget had a $1 billion surplus. He goes on to point out that White backed a $1.3-billion-a-year tax increase in 1984 and asks, "What did you do with that $1 billion?"

White turns to the 1984-1985 budget proposal that Clements sent to the Legislature before he left office in January 1983. "Bill Clements spent that $1 billion in his budget," he says, "and spent another $1 billion the state didn't have."

Most observers agree, however, that the Texas governor has little influence on the state budget. The House Appropriations Committee and Senate Finance Committee historically listen to the governor's budget plan, file it away and then work from the draft budget legislative leaders had prepared for them.

The budget, says House Speaker Gib Lewis, is not a legitimate campaign issue for gubernatorial candidates. "They have very little control, and they should not be expected to take the blame, good or bad, for it," he says.

"The office of governor of Texas must surely be one of the world's most frustrating jobs," says Senate Finance Committee Chairman Grant Jones. "Under our organizational structure, he has a tremendous amount of apparent responsibility and relatively little authority with which to fulfill that apparent responsibility."

The governor, Jones says, has three true powers: to appoint members of state boards and commissions, to veto legislation and to persuade the Legislature to take some action. "How history treats his tenure in office in large measure is dependent upon the power of persuasion," he says.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, however, believes that persuasive power is a strong one. "The governor is really the agenda setter of the state and has considerable impact on the climate in which the Legislature sets the priorities," Hobby says.

Comptroller Bob Bullock, a Democrat, says politicians of both parties wrongly spread blame and credit on national and statewide leaders. White, for example, claims President Reagan could help turn Texas around if he would impose a tarrif on imported crude oil and petroleum products.

"The Republicans don't have anything to do with the economy in Texas, and I don't think the Democrats had anything to do with it being good from 1975 to 1981, frankly," Bullock says.

"We hooked our fortunes on that (agriculture and oil) way back at the turn of the century," he says. "We benefitted when it went up, and we hurt when it goes down."

Hostage taker faces death in store siege, officials say

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — One of the three hostages who died during a 13½-hour siege in an exclusive Rodeo Drive jewelry store was probably killed by police as the gunman used hostages as a shield in an escape attempt, officials say.

Steven Livaditis, who faces arraignment Thursday on murder and robbery charges, did not fire the .357-caliber Magnum revolver he brandished at the hostages as he tried to escape before midnight Monday, Sheriff Sherman Block said Tuesday.

"To the best of our ability to determine at this time, it (the shot that killed the jewelry store manager Hugh Skinner) was fired by a sheriff's deputy," Beverly Hills Police Chief Marvin Iannone told reporters Tuesday.

"If the death of one hostage was in fact cause by a shot fired by one of our personnel, it's my responsibility to deal with that," Block said.

The marksman who fired the shot, perched atop a nearby building with a spotter, heard "some threat to kill those people (the hostages)" and believed the gunman may have pointed his weapon at one of them, Block said. Marksmen in such cases make their own decision whether to fire, he added.

"In all likelihood, it will be special circumstances, including both robbery and multiple murder," when Livaditis is charged, said Deputy District Attorney Elden S. Fox. Under California law, special circumstances allegations make the charges potential death-penalty offenses.

Officials said Livaditis, 22, who was captured late Monday as he tried to flee the Van Cleef & Arpels store using hostages as a shield, was sought by the FBI in a $250,000 bank robbery in Las Vegas, Nev., and was on probation for a 1984 burglary that netted $22,000.

"We are dealing with a ruthless mad dog, a killer who had no compunction to do what he did," Iannone said Tuesday.

Hostages William Richard Smith, 54, and Ann C. Heilperin, 40, were killed in the store by Livaditis, police said. Skinner, 64, died as the gunman tried to flee, apparently shot by a deputy.

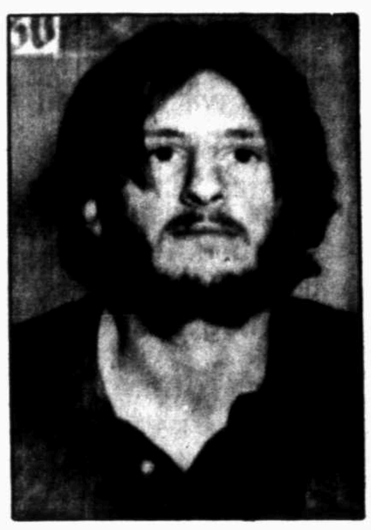

Livaditis used the store's sophisticated security measures to thwart police, who found they were unable to plan a rescue because the store was protected by bullet-proof glass, doors and surveillance mirrors, Iannone said.

"He indicated if there were a hint of an assault, he would first kill the hostages and use any energy he had left for fighting deputies," he said. "It was a classical case where a premises' security was used against us."

Despite Livaditis' telephone conversations with reporters in which he indicated he had killed at least one hostage, police believed he was bluffing, Iannone said. "We were all convinced, including the psychologists, that he had not harmed anyone in there subsequent to our arrival."

When officers burst into the store after the escape attempt, they found Smith stabbed to death and Ms. Heilperin shot in the back of the head. Both were found tied face-down on the floor.

Those who survived, employees Carol Lambert, 42, and Robert Taylor, 50, were hospitalized. Taylor was under observation for a heart condition and Ms. Lambert was being treated for burns apparently inflicted by a sheriff's "flash bang" grenade used to create a diversion.

Livaditis

Livaditis was convicted of a 1984 burglary of $22,000 of computer parts in Nevada, authorities said. He served a brief time in jail awaiting trial and was given a five-year suspended sentence and probation last June, but failed to check in regularly with probation officials and was deemed an absconder in February.

He drifted from Nevada to Hollywood this year and was being evicted from his Franklin Avenue apartment for failing to pay rent when he left voluntarily, said his former landlord, James Karubian.

Street's violence alarming

By LINDA DEUTSCH

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Merchants along ritzy Rodeo Drive whose shops were closed because of the 13½-hour siege at the Van Cleef & Arpels store in which three hostages died said they had prayed for a peaceful outcome.

"Life is more important than money," said David Orgell, whose fine china and silver shop, a fixture for nearly 30 years, is four doors from the Van Cleef & Arpels Inc. store.

"Nobody thought in terms of cost yesterday," Orgell said Tuesday. "Our minds were on getting our employees out of here safely.

"We were praying most of the day, praying that nothing terrible would happen like what did happen. It's a terrible way for it to end."

At Giorgio's across the street and down the block, spokeswoman Katy Sweet said, "We are all in a state of shock. These were people we knew. These were our neighbors. It's a horrendous tragedy."

Steven Livaditis, 22, faces arraignment Thursday on murder and robbery charges.

Ms. Sweet said she had expected a happy ending.

"In most of these situations that you read about, the police are able to talk the individual out and everyone comes out with their hands up," she said. "We were absolutely shocked at what happened."

Merchants acknowledged that security concerns and the fear of robbery are a fact of life on a street known for its extravagant wares.

"Something like this happens anywhere that you have precious articles, and jewels are as precious as anyone can find," said Ms. Sweet. "There is a concentration of fine jewelers on Rodeo, and it's a target."

Sergio Baril, manager of Fred Joaillier, which also deals in expensive gems, said his store has had an elaborate security system for six years.

"We have more security than Van Cleef had," said Baril. "We have an electronic door, and we look at everyone before they come in. We have several security guards both inside and outside the store."

"We don't have those little windows that are a death trap," said Baril.

FHA revival bill sent to Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Housing Administration, its credit limit depleted by a heavy demand for mortgages, could be back in business by Thursday now that Congress has passed a bill to revive its operations, the agency's chief says.

The House, completing congressional action, voted Tuesday to extend the FHA's statutory authority to Sept. 30 and raise its exhausted credit ceiling another $9.5 billion. The bill was approved on a voice vote.

Silvio DeBartolomeis, acting FHA administrator, said he expected the agency could resume operations Thursday if Reagan quickly signs the bill into law.

White House spokesman Dale Petroskey said the president had not received the bill late Tuesday but would sign it "when it comes."

More than 400,000 applications for FHA-insured mortgages have piled up since the agency's statutory authority lapsed at midnight June 5, DeBartolomeis said.

FHA continued processing new applications, which came in at a rate of 10,000 a day, until hitting its $74.4 billion credit ceiling last Wednesday. Since then, FHA has stopped accepting new applications.

The measure raises the FHA's depleted credit authority from $74.4 billion to $83.9 billion.

The House accepted changes in its FHA bill that were approved Monday by the Senate.

The continuing demand for FHA-insured mortgages means the $9.5 billion in new credit authority will last only until July 25, DeBartolomeis said. Tom Marder, a spokesman for the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, said the credit ceiling could be hit even earlier.

The early expiration of the FHA's credit authority keeps some pressure on Reagan to sign the $1.7 billion supplemental appropriations bill passed Tuesday by the House that contains language raising the FHA's credit limit to $132 billion.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, had sought a limited extension of the FHA's credit authority as a way to keep the heat on the president, who has threatened to veto the appropriations measure, according to a Senate aide who spoke on condition of anonymity.

A boom in home sales spurred by the lowest interest rates in nine years spurred the unprecedented rush for FHA-insured mortgages that exhausted the agency's credit ceiling for the first time in history. Congress passed emergency legislation to tide FHA over until this month, when the credit ceiling was hit for the second time in history.

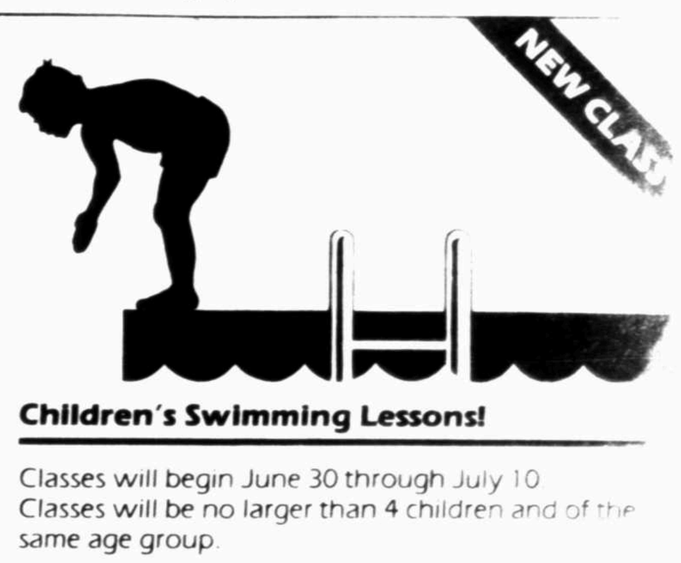

FHA-insured mortgages, which were being issued at a rate of 3 percent, allow people who don't have enough money to make down payments to purchase homes. They account for 15 percent to 20 percent of the mortgage market.

AIDS not transmitted on job, study concludes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Health and Human Services Department, alleged with queries about a Justice Department legal memorandum on AIDS victims, reiterated that casual contact in the workplace does not spread the deadly disease.

"There is no medical or scientific evidence that the AIDS virus is spread through casual contact occurring in the workplace, schools or similar setting," the department said Tuesday.

The agency said the Justice Department memo dealt with "the technical legal interpretation of statutory language" and "does not reflect any new scientific or medical information on AIDS transmission."

AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, is an affliction in which the body's immune system becomes unable to resist disease. There is no known cure. Its main victims are male homosexuals and intravenous drug users.

Alcoholics closer to cure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government, faced with conflicting opinions by two of its biggest health care programs, is taking a fresh look at whether alcoholics can be successfully treated with drugs to make them nauseous at the mere thought of taking a drink.

The Public Health Service said the treatment, chemical aversion therapy, is being reviewed at the request of Pentagon officials who run the health care program for military dependents, called CHAMPUS.

Chemical aversion therapy for alcoholism is covered on a case-by-case basis by Medicare, said agency spokesman John Kittrell, but only under carefully controlled conditions, including hospitalization and direct care by a physician.

Whites minorities called

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional panel has called on South Africa's white minority government to recognize the outlawed African National Congress as a negotiating partner toward majority rule despite members' misgivings about alleged communist influence in the ANC.

A resolution adopted by the House Africa subcommittee Tuesday also echoed earlier legislation asking President Reagan to press the South African government for the unconditional release of jailed ANC leader Nelson Mandela.

Rep. Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., the panel's chairman, said hesitation about pressing South Africa to end apartheid and to negotiate with the ANC would only increase communist influence and cause "those struggling to turn to the Soviet Union."

Weapons traffic curbed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted unanimously for legislation that would tighten controls on transportation of weapons and make it easier to prosecute those selling firearms to criminals and terrorists.

The legislation went to the White House on a voice vote Tuesday. It was part of a compromise that led to final passage last month of landmark changes to the 1968 Gun Control Act.

The provisions provide that in many instances, those transporting a gun across state lines would have to follow state and local laws.

Specifically, the transporters must follow the laws in the state and locality where they reside, and in the community and state where the trip ends. The laws of states and communities along the way, however, would not apply.

Another provision covers unloaded guns transported in automobiles. The legislation specifies they can not be carried in the glove compartment or console.

Increases to spare retirees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Tuesday voted to protect retired federal employees from losing their cost-of-living increases because of the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law.

Civil Service, military and some railroad retirees had their annual increases canceled last January as part of this year's $11.7 billion Gramm-Rudman spending cut.

The bill, approved 396-19 and sent to the Senate, would mandate that those pensioners receive their inflation increase in January 1987. Current estimates put those increases at about 2 percent.

U.S. still world's largest debtor Department of Commerce says

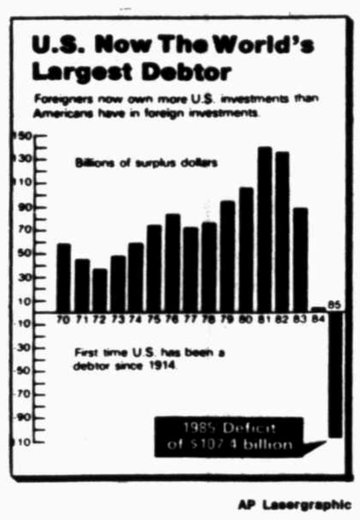

WASHINGTON — The United States, long the planet's wealthiest nation, also became its biggest net debtor last year, with foreigners holding $107.4 billion more in American assets than U.S. investors held abroad, the Department of Commerce reported Tuesday.

The massive debt, which is bigger even than the estimated $100 billion obligations of Mexico and Brazil, was amassed entirely after March 1985 when the United States' international balance sheet edged into the red for the first time since World War I.

Commerce officials said that the latest figures continued a "substantial decline" in the U.S. investment position over the last several years, but other economic experts likened it to a plunge. Only four years ago, worldwide net U.S. investments were a positive $136.2 billion.

In theory, an uncontrolled deficit could lower U.S. living standards by forcing the United States to raise money to pay off the debt — by exporting more goods at cheaper prices, cutting government spending and lowering the value of the dollar.

But economists were split Tuesday on whether the United States' new title of world-champion debtor threatens to place it in a position similar to developing nations such as Mexico, where the national economy is all but overwhelmed by past-due bills abroad.

"The speed of the deterioration is breathtaking, and that's a major cause for alarm," said C. Fred Bergsten, president of the Institute for International Economics, a Washington think tank. He forecast that the net investment debt would rise to at least $500 billion before leveling off late in this decade and could approach a crushing $1 trillion by the early 1990s if current economic conditions are unchanged.

Robert Solomon, an international economist at the Brookings Institution in Washington, another think-tank, was less dour. "It's true our debt is larger than Mexico's and Brazil's, but our economy is a lot larger too," he said.

In 1985, the Department of Commerce said, American holdings abroad totaled $952.4 billion — up 6 percent in a year. But foreign investment in the United States totaled $1.059 trillion, an increase of 18.6 percent.

Total foreign assets in the United States rose $166 billion in 1985. About $127 billion of that stemmed from new cash investments here, and most of the rest came from increases in the values of existing assets, such as stocks.

Extended daylight savings passes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Let there be light, sayeth the Lord. And let there be more of it in the evening, addeth the Congress, which passed legislation to lengthen daylight-saving time by three weeks.

The action came on a voice vote Tuesday as the House sent the proposal, which has the support of the Reagan administration, to the president's desk.

Under the plan, beginning next year people would set their clocks ahead an hour on the first Sunday in April. Under a 1966 law, daylight-saving time has begun on the last Sunday in April.

No change would be made in the ending day for daylight-saving time, the final Sunday in October.

Supporters of more daylight time had pushed to move the final day to the first Sunday in November, but a compromise was reached to extend it only three weeks instead of four.

Much of the opposition to more daylight-saving time came from rural lawmakers whose districts and states straddle the western edges of time zones. They complained that the change would force children and farmers to begin more of their days in the dark.

No safe haven

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has finally taken steps to make it more difficult for terrorists of the Irish Republican Army to find a safe haven in the United States. After months of delay it has approved a treaty with Great Britain designed to make it easier to extradite IRA fugitives guilty of criminal activity. The vote was 15 to 2, which bodes well for approval by the entire Senate.

That approval should be forthcoming. The proposed treaty is a revision of a previous pact fraught with loopholes. Under the old agreement those who committed crimes found it fairly easy to duck extradition to unfriendly courts by arguing that they were not really criminals but political dissidents. The "political offense" clause provided protection for murderers and those quilty of other violent crimes.

Both President Reagan and Britain's Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher have been lobbying to plug this loophole. Many supporters of the revision said it should be approved on the grounds that Mrs. Thatcher cooperated with the United States in the attack on Libya. Even if she had not, an American government dedicated to fighting terrorism should not provide shelter for IRA terrorists.

The proposed revision describes in stark terms the criminal acts for which extradition should be permitted. They include murder, the use of explosives, and the taking of hostages. These brutal activities would not be considered political offenses, and those who engage in them would not be sheltered on our shores. That's the way it should be in any country in which the population respects law and rights.

The Senate committee's vote was applauded by a member of the British embassy, who said, "Sense has broken out." He definitely spoke the truth.

Another View:

Panamanian concern

Alarming reports about government in Panama are a timely reminder that official corruption and drug trafficking can threaten U.S. security in the hemisphere as surely as direct political gains by Soviet clients.

Fidel Castro of Cuba and Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua are the heirs of corrupt authoritarians who so demoralized public life as to inspire revolution and reduce politics to a test of brute force. That is not yet the prospect in Panama, but the potential exists, as has been shown in a series of disturbing articles in The Times by Seymour Hersh. The questions thus raised have been usefully underlined by Sen. Jesse Helms and anonymous members of the intelligence community.

Panama, the site of the canal and headquarters of the U.S. Southern Command, represents an obvious, vital American interest. Two decades ago, when that interest seemed menaced by Panamanian agitation over the canal's formal ownership, the United States set out to negotiate a treaty reconciling both countries' needs. Some Americans worried about this accommodation because the Panamanian strongman, Gen. Omar Torrijos, was a populist and friend of Fidel Castro. Our diplomats, however, found him trustworthy and finally produced an agreement.

But Torrijos died in a plane crash in 1981 and the current military leader, Gen. Antonio Noriega, apparently lacks his redeeming virtues. Washington soon received credible reports about his being tied to big narcotics traffickers. Moreover, while democracy became the hemisphere's dominant trend, the Noriega regime seemed resolved to be a conspicuous exception.

Washington pressed for presidential elections in 1984 but when the candidate supported by Noriega and the White House lost, Hersh reports, the general rigged the results and Washington acquiesced. How could he fail to take this acquiescence as a broader endorsement?

And then the maneuver backfired. The new president soon showed too much investigatory zeal in a murder linked to the general and was himself dumped. Since then, Panama has plainly been run by the military and its leader has been accused not only of electoral fraud and cover-up of a murder, but also of selling American secrets to Cuba and profiting from drug smuggling.

The immediate questions are obvious: How can Washington promote democracy and narcotics control in Central America while it is compromised by ties to Noriega? And how could it disengage from his regime without jeopardizing its own interests in Panama? The disclosures also point again to a deeper lesson: that the pursuit of strategic interests and of democracy are not contradictory. Entrusting vital foreign stakes to corrupt leaders may momentarily appear as clever realpolitik, but it usually explodes in crisis.

Insurers play on senior citizens' fear

WASHINGTON — Congressional investigators will report today on the undercover evidence they gathered on fast-talking health insurance hucksters who take advantage of fearful elderly Americans and sell them "Medigap" policies they don't need.

Jack Anderson

About 75 percent of all Americans over 65 buy these policies to cover the "gap" between Medicare benefits and actual health costs.

The investigators were working for a subcommittee chaired by Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., the 85-year-old guardian of senior citizens' rights who sits on the Select Committee on Aging. We've been given an advance look at some of the horror stories they'll tell about the strong-arm tactics used to sell Medigap policies. For example:

— A 77-year-old Washington state woman paid $700 for supplementary health insurance from a man who identified himself as a Social Security representative. He was in fact a marketing agent for 14 insurance companies, seven of which sold Medigap policies.

— An 83-year-old Wisconsin widow living on $8,000 a year was persuaded to pay $800 a year for health insurance by a woman who claimed to be a Medicare worker. The saleswoman said that after three months of serious illness the widow might run up medical fees of $20,000 that Medicare wouldn't pay, and that she ran the risk of losing her home to pay the medical bills.

— An elderly Michigan couple paid $4,000 a year for 13 separate supplemental policies — which didn't cover eye, ear, dental or nursing home care. State insurance officials stepped in, but too late to stop the first $4,000 payment.

— A 76-year-old North Carolina woman was scared into believing that Medicare wouldn't cover the high costs of hospital care unless she supplemented it with several additional policies. She bought 13 in two years; the premiums amounted to half her total income.

In 1978 we reported that the health insurance industry grossed about $1 billion in premiums. That figure has now passed $4 billion a year.

A congressional study at that time concluded that most major insurance companies weren't involved in the high-pressure sales abuses. It blamed small, little-known companies that specialize in sales to the elderly, and in 1980 Congress outlawed some of the shady tactics uncovered by its investigators.

Specifically, Congress made it a felony, punishable by a $25,000 fine, for insurance sales personnel to misrepresent themselves as government employees, or to sell the elderly more medical insurance than they need. Most experts consider one supplemental health policy — like that offered by Blue Cross/Blue Shield — to be adequate for most elderly Americans. Anything more is "overloading."

The 1980 law also ordered the Health Care Financing Administration to conduct a study of state efforts to curb abuses by insurance salesmen. The study was to be completed by Jan. 1, 1982, but has not yet been sent to Congress.

An official HCFA spokesman attributed the 4½-year delay to a paperwork overload at the agency.

But HCFA sources told our associate Stewart Harris the study was actually completed a year and a half ago, and has been held up by agency brass hats. They also said the insurance industry has been lobbying the HCFA, hoping to have the report's conclusions watered down. The report is especially critical of some companies that sell cancer insurance, the sources said.

Pepper's committee will call Health Care Financing Administration officials on the carpet early in the current series of hearings to have them explain why the report due in 1982 has not yet been delivered to Congress.

PENTAGON WATCH: A secret General Accounting Office report offers a scathing critique of the Defense Department's multibillion-dollar anti-satellite program. It points out that the technology is still unproven; costs are out of control, and the anti-satellite weapons will be obsolete by the time they become operational. To keep the cost under a $4 billion budget, the Air Force has had to slash the number of anti-satellite weapons by two-thirds: from 100 to 33. Why does the Air Force persist in a costly program that isn't working? Sources tell us it's to please Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, who likes the project.

COSTLY DANGEROUS, WASTE: An Energy Department plan for getting rid of obsolete tools and machinery from nuclear weapons plants has come under fire from the General Accounting Office. A "waste isolation pilot plant" would bury the contaminated hardware deep in New Mexico salt beds, where they would remain dangerously radioactive for thousands of years. The problem is that officials underestimated the $2.8 billion cost of the plant by several millions, and gave no details on environmental and safety plans for the project, the GAO said.

MINI-EDITORIAL: We weren't really surprised when the South African government justified its suspension of civil rights and its ban on "unauthorized" press coverage by invoking the Red Menace. The communist bogeyman has been a useful device of would-be dictators as far back as Adolf Hitler. Instead of a Reichstag fire, South Africa provoked civil disturbances as an excuse to create a society as closed, repressive and paranoid as the Soviet Union. South Africa's white extremists are apparently willing to destroy their country to save it.

The unheeded time bomb at our own door

WASHINGTON — Every once in a while the Reagan administration thinks seriously about Mexico — for example, when it's not thinking about Nicaragua.

James Reston

It pays attention if there's an earthquake in Mexico or a drug crisis or a financial crisis that might hurt U.S. bankers, but most of the time it prefers to dream of faraway places, including outer space.

However, Secretary of the Treasury James Baker has been concentrating recently on Mexico because President Miguel de la Madrid has threatened to default on his $100 billion debt. And this is a direct challenge to the so-called Baker Plan of settling international economic policy on debt, exchange rates and trade by negotiation rather than confrontation.

The chances are that the International Monetary Fund will come through with a $1.5 billion loan that will make possible another $6 billion in credit. That will deal with the immediate crisis, but as usual it will be a short-range response to the much deeper and enduring long-range economic and social problems of that nation.

What Mexico needs is not merely another loan but a continuing partnership with the United States to help the growth of its potentially rich economy. This would require a wholly new bipartisan approach in Washington to what is called the Mexican time bomb.

For only by a dramatic expansion of its economy can Mexico deal with the menace of unemployment and underemployment, now running at more than 50 percent, and with the flight of its people and capital into the United States. Even the alarming drug traffic across the Rio Grande is at least partly the result of Mexico's desperate poverty.

This has been recognized in Washington ever since the last world war. Franklin Roosevelt had his Good Neighbor Policy and Kennedy his Alliance for Progress. President Johnson even talked about a North American Common Market, and President Reagan flirted momentarily with that idea when he came into the White House, but increasingly the problem has outrun the slogans and the short-term policies.

In the past, the United States has dealt mainly with the effects and not with the causes of the Mexican chaos, and admittedly there are some causes it cannot control. It cannot dictate the price of oil, which accounts for three-fifths of Mexico's foreign exchange. It cannot control the alarming human fertility of Mexico, whose population was around 20 million at the end of the last world war and is expected to be more than 125 million by the end of the century.

It cannot even control the irresponsibility of Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina, who, like the ghouls of the Middle Ages who stripped the wounded on the battlefield, called a meeting the other day in the middle of the present crisis to announce that the Mexican election of 1982 had been a fraud and to suggest that maybe President de la Madrid should be impeached.

Fortunately, Helms' bad neighbor policy has few supporters in Washington. There are some here who would rather concentrate on the political corruption and one-party government in Mexico than remember that alone in Latin America, Mexico's one-party government has at least kept the peace and avoided a military dictatorship for more than half a century.

The United States and the international monetary organizations are justified in calling for economic reforms in Mexico before shoveling more and more billions into the mess, but there's a limit to the sacrifices the Mexicans can make under present circumstances without inviting violence in the streets and provoking the ancient Mexican hostility against the gringos and bankers to the North.

Washington thinks of these deeper economic and philosophic questions only fitfully. They have not been given the priority they deserve. Reagan, for example, started his stewardship with a visit to Mexico, but he has talked more about the menace of Nicaragua in the last month than he has talked about the fire in the Mexican ashes in the last five years.

"If the United States has one truly special relationship with another country, that country is Mexico," William D. Rogers, former assistant secretary of state for Latin American affairs, wrote the other day in The Washington Post.

"A nation can choose its friends, but not its neighbors. We and Mexico are fated to live together....We had best learn to exist side by side, with civility and understanding. What injures Mexico does damage to our own national interests as well."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, June 25, the 176th day of 1986. There are 189 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 25, 1876, Lt. Col. George A. Custer and his 7th Cavalry were wiped out by Sioux and Cheyenne Indians in the Battle of Little Big Horn in Montana.

On this date:

In 1788, the state of Virginia ratified the U.S. Constitution.

In 1906, in New York, architect Stanford White was shot to death atop the original Madison Square Garden, which he had designed, by Harry Thaw, the jealous husband of Evelyn Nesbit.

In 1942, the British air force staged a thousand-bomb raid on Bremen, Germany, during World War II.

In 1950, war broke out as North Korea invaded South Korea. The United Nations Security Council, meeting in emergency session, called for a cease-fire. The call went unheeded.

In 1962, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the use of an unofficial, non-denominational prayer in New York state public schools was unconstitutional.

In 1973, former White House Counsel John Dean began testifying before the Senate Watergate Committee.

Ten years ago: The Supreme Court ruled that private, non-sectarian schools may not exclude black children because of race.

Five years ago: The Supreme Court ruled that male-only draft registration is constitutional.

One year ago: The White House threatened economic sanctions against Lebanon and military reprisals unless the 40 American hostages from a hijacked TWA plane were released in the next few days.

Today's birthdays: Broadway producer George Abbott is 99. Movie director Sidney Lumet is 62. Actress June Lockhart is 61. Basketball hall-of-famer Willis Reed is 44. Singer Carly Simon is 41. TV personality Phyllis George Brown is 37.

Thought for today: "Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers." — Alfred, Lord Tennyson, English poet (1809-1892).

U.S.'s 'quiet diplomacy' in South Africa

"What is our policy in South Africa?" I asked Nattily, a top-ranking source at the State Department.

"We deplore what is going on there and will take tough measures to see that the South African government changes its ways."

Art Buchwald

"What kind of measures?" I asked.

"We will threaten them with the only thing the Botha government understands — quiet diplomacy."

"What kind of quiet diplomacy?"

"It wouldn't be quiet if I told you, would it? I can only reveal that in our experience, the more you raise your voice, the less influence you have. But if we can go in through the back door there is always a chance we can make a deal with Botha."

"What if you can't?"

"Then we continue our quiet diplomacy, hoping the South African leaders will see the light."

"Does quiet diplomacy really work?" I asked.

"All the time. We've used it in every fascist country in the world, and it's never failed."

"You mean governments have stopped beating up people in the streets after you come in with Q.D.?"

"You have to take my word for it. The quieter you are about human rights' violations, the better behaved the foreign government is about locking up people."

"What is wrong with instituting economic sanctions against South Africa?"

"They don't work."

"Then why don't we have them against Cuba?"

"With Communists they work," Nattily said. "But sanctions against a friendly fascist power would hurt the people we are trying to help."

"That means your chance of using sanctions could hurt our relations with South Africa?"

"Correct. I think Secretary of State George Shultz summed it up best on the evening news when asked if the U.S. would levy sanctions, he replied, "No.'"

"What do you say to Bishop Tutu when he calls on the U.S. to invoke sanctions?"

"We don't say anything to Bishop Tutu if we can help it. Our policy is to remain neutral in South Africa."

I then asked Nattily, "Does it bother you that Botha has instituted a state of emergency and anyone can be locked up for no reason?"

"Of course it bothers us, and we intend to bring it up at the next quiet diplomacy meeting in Pretoria. You are aware that President Reagan sent Botha a very tough note about the South African martial law edict."

"Did it have any effect?"

"No, but that is the advantage of quiet diplomacy. Very few people know that Botha told Reagan to stuff it."

"That's a foreign policy?"

Nattily said, "Do you have a better one?"

"I might go for the sanctions if I was bankrupt in ideas."

"Forget it. We're on top of this thing. We've war-gamed it from one end of Foggy Bottom to the other. In foreign affairs there is a time to shout and a time to whisper."

"And?"

"Well, you don't hear anyone in the administration shouting about South Africa."

"So we can relax knowing that we're up to our necks in quiet diplomacy?"

"To quote the Secretary of State when asked on one of the morning news shows if we had the situation under control, his answer was, "Yes.'"

House panel slashes Reagan's 'star wars' budget request

TIM AHERN

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is all but assured of receiving less money than he wants for "Star Wars" research after a second key congressional committee voted to cut deeply into the program, sources say.

The House Armed Services Committee voted Tuesday in a closed-door meeting to approve a $3.4 billion Star Wars budget for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, said the sources, who would speak only on condition of anonymity.

The vote by the Democratic-controlled panel followed last week's decision by the Republican-run Senate Armed Services Committee for a $3.95 billion budget for the program, known formally as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

Reagan had asked for $5.4 billion for the program, which will receive $3 billion in the current year.

While the committee votes have yet to be ratified by the full House and Senate, the decisions show Congress is not willing to give Reagan all the money he wants for Star Wars.

"Clearly, this shows that Star Wars will be cut. It's simply a matter of how much," said one congressman, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The House panel, working on its version of a Pentagon budget for fiscal 1987, approved the SDI budget that was proposed by one of its subcommittees last week, the sources said.

That approval followed defeat by the full committee of four other SDI budget proposals — all smaller than Reagan wanted. The committee first rejected a freeze of Star Wars spending at current levels, then defeated proposed budgets of $4.1 billion, $3.1 billion, and $4.8 billion, the sources said.

The House panel is working toward a total Defense Department budget of $285 billion, the figure contained in a House budget blueprint. The Senate panel approved a $301 billion budget and Reagan had sought $320 billion.

In other decisions, the House panel approved the entire request of $1.4 billion for research and development of the single-warhead, nuclear-tipped missile, known as Midgetman. The Senate panel had voted to freeze the program at its current spending level of about $700 million.

The House panel also halved Reagan's requested $30 million for anti-satellite weapons, compared with the $28.5 million passed by the Senate committee.

Both panels also proposed lifting a current ban on testing the weapons against targets in space, a prohibition that was put into current law by opponents of the weapons.

The House panel is working toward a total Defense Department budget of $285 billion, the figure contained in a House budget blueprint. The Senate panel approved a $301 billion budget and Reagan had sought $320 billion.

In addition, the panel approved $76.8 million for construction at proposed new Navy ports in Everett, Wash., and New York City. The Navy wants to base an aircraft carrier at Everett and put the Iowa, a reconditioned World War II battleship, at Staten Island, N.Y.

Opponents of the "strategic homeport" plan say it is unneeded and is only an attempt by the service to spread ships around the country and ensure Capitol Hill support for its shipbuilding budget. Proponents argue the plan is justified by the fear of an attack similar to the 1941 Japanese strike on the U.S. fleet at Pearl Harbor.

All-terrain bikes pushed for recall

WASHINGTON (AP) — The widely popular all-terrain vehicles, which have been associated with a rapidly rising injury rate in recent years, could be banned if a Congressional committee gets its way.

"It is irresponsible to dawdle while people are killed and injured," said Rep. Doug Barnard, D-Ga., in urging approval of a report recommending a ban of the motorized tricycles.

The Democratic-controlled House Government Operations Committee voted 20-15 to approve the report which, Barnard explained, recommends that the Consumer Product Safety Commission "act to ban or suspend future ATV production and to recall ATVs currently in use."

Republicans sought a 100-day delay in acting on the report to give the commission time to complete its ongoing study of the vehicles, but lost that by the same 20-15 party line margin.

"Enough is already known" to require action now, Barnard said. "Users of ATVs are dying and getting severely injured in unprecedented numbers."

Committee Chairman Jack Brooks, D-Texas, stressed that the action does not mandate a recall. "It is an expression of deep concern about these deaths and injuries. It is an attempt to get the CPSC to move."

Rep. Robert S. Walker, R-Pa., responded with a warning against the committee taking over the powers of a regulatory agency. Passing the report says in effect, "if they don't ban ATVs, we will," he remarked.

Brooks conceded that if the Safety Commission doesn't act, the matter could return to the committee for legislation banning the vehicles at some time in the future.

All-terrain vehicles are motorized recreational cycles popular in rural and beach areas. Most are three-wheeled and those are the ones the committee is concerned about.

Sales of ATVs, which are primarily made in Japan, have risen from 136,000 in 1980 to 594,000 in 1985, according to government statistics.

As the sales and use of the vehicles grew, so have accidents, with deaths climbing from 26 in 1982 to 174 last year. At the same time, injuries rose from 8,600 in 1982 to 85,900 last year.

The Safety Commission, responding to sharp increases in deaths and injuries associated with all-terrain vehicles, launched its investigation more than a year ago and has held a series of public hearings across the nation to study the dangers of these vehicles.

Commission officials also have likened the rising toll to other fads such as skateboards, where injuries leveled off after the initial interest and after users became more skilled.

WATCH
(Conditions are right for a tornado or severe thunderstorm to form)

WARNING
(A tornado or severe thunderstorm already is in existence.)

Conditions forecast for 8 AM Thursday

In North Texas, isolated to widely scattered thunderstorms, some strong gusty wind possible through tonight. Chance of showers south on Thursday. Highs in the 90s, overnight lows in the lower 70s.

In West Texas, numerous showers and thunderstorms in the Trans-Pecos, becoming scattered on Thursday. Elsewhere, widely scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms. Highs mostly in the 80s and 90s. Lows tonight in the 60s and 70s.

In South Texas, increasing cloudiness and windy, with a 50 percent chance of thunderstorms. Heavy rains possible. Low in the mid 70s. Winds becoming east at 40 to 50 mph with higher gusts to near hurricane force.

Temperatures warming some

From Staff and Wire Reports

Warming daytime temperatures, partly cloudy skies and only very slight chances of rain are in the National Weather Service's forecast for the Permian Basin area. Thursday's high is predicted to be near 90, according to NWS forecasters at Midland Regional Airport. A less than 20 percent chance of thunderstorms exists for tonight and Thursday.

The overnight low for tonight should be in the middle 60s with southerly winds at five to 10 mph. Winds from the south will increase to 10-20 mph on Thursday.

The 83-degree high of Tuesday was 11 degrees below the record high set in 1980. This morning's low was 10 degrees above the record low of 57 set for this date in 1940.

STATE

Showers and thunderstorms fell across much of Texas as Tropical Storm Bonnie continued her steady move toward the state's upper coast.

Early today, the storm was about 235 miles southeast of Galveston, and weather officials chances were goof that it could develop into a hurricane with 24 hours.

The storm was moving west about 10 mph, and its winds were about 55 mph early today.

Showers and thundershowers fell over the southeast, the upper coastal plains, and were scattered just south and southeast of Brownsville.

Heavy rains and thunderstorms continued in far West Texas and the Trans-Pecos, where flash flood watches remained in effect, and over the southwest portion of the Panhandle. Elsewhere, skies were clear to partly cloudy.

Early morning temperatures were mainly in the 60s and 70s. Overnight temperatures ranged from 63 at Guadalupe Pass to 77 at Laredo.

Winds were generally from the south and southeast at 5 to 15 mph except in East Texas where the winds were northerly.

NATION

Tropical Storm Bonnie built steam today and rain was scattered across broad sections of the nation while South Bend, Ind., had a record low as temperatures took a sharp dip in the Great Lakes region.

Showers and thunderstorms ranged from southeast Arizona through New Mexico into west Texas.

Flash flood watches remained in force in sections of southwest Texas and southern New Mexico while a flood warning continued for the Pecos River Basin of southeastern New Mexico.

Midland statistics

FORECAST

Tonight: Partly cloudy with low in the mid-60s and southerly winds at five to 10 mph. Thursday: Partly cloudy with a high near 90 and southerly winds at 10-20 mph. Chance of rain less than 20 percent for tonight and Thursday.

Oops, Jimmy Connors falls in first round

A dejected Jimmy Connors
...first round Wimbledon casualty

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Jimmy Connors and John McEnroe have hung around a lot of courts together, berating umpires, giving club officials fits and playing some of the best tennis of their generation.

They are together again at Wimbledon this year, even though McEnroe is home in the United States helping care for his new son and Connors is leaving much sooner than expected after a first-round loss to Robert Seguso on Tuesday.

On his way out the door, Connors invoked the ghost of "MacBrat" for a parting shot at the British press that has used them for headlines and target practice over the years, and which this time asked one question too many about retirement.

"You don't know what you have until you lose it," Connors said. "That's what you're feeling towards McEnroe right now. You're so quick to jump on him and call him every name in the book. Then when he doesn't come ...

"Are you going to treat me the same if I don't come back here next year? Are you going to say, 'Geez, Connors isn't coming back here.' Why don't you just let me make my own decision on whether I'm going to play or not going to play.

"And don't you worry about that. That's not your worry, whether I'm going to play any more tennis or not."

For the rest of this two-week grass-court tournament, Connors won't have to worry about that, either. He was trying to come back from a 10-week suspension resulting from poor behavior at a winter tournament in Florida, then from a pulled groin muscle suffered in a grass-court victory over Seguso less than two weeks ago.

Seguso's booming serve was the final obstacle. The Floridian beat the 33-year-old two-time Wimbledon champ and No. 3 seed this year 6-3, 3-6, 7-6, 7-6 to advance to the second round.

"He was kind of unconscious," Connors said. "He was serving bomb after bomb after bomb. I was waiting for him to falter just one inch, and I was going to be all over him. But he just kept going 'boom, boom, boom.' "

Seguso, who served 14 aces and won on his third match point, said the victory "is my best — Connors at Wimbledon. He's one of the greatest ever."

Connors was one of five seeds to be eliminated in first-round matches Tuesday, a day jammed with make-ups from the rain-plagued opening-day card.

Joining Connors among the upset men's seeds were No. 15 Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, a 6-4, 6-2, 6-3 loser to Australian Pat Cash, and No. 9 Andres Gomez of Ecuador, defeated 6-1, 3-6, 7-6, 6-4 by another unseeded Australian, John Fitzgerald.

Two women's seeds also went out.

No. 5 Pam Shriver lost to Betsy Nagelsen 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, and Wendy Turnbull of Australia, the 14th seed, fell to countrywoman Jenny Byrne 7-6, 6-2.

Both top seeds advanced with straight-set victories.

Men's No. 1 Ivan Lendl completed a match interrupted Monday by rain, beating Leonardo Lavalle of Mexico 7-6, 6-3, 6-4.

In the women's draw, Martina Navratilova, seeking her fifth straight Wimbledon victory, took less than an hour to oust Australia's Amanda Dingwall 6-3, 6-2.

Second-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd advanced to the second round with a 6-4, 6-1 victory over 14-year-old American Mary Joe Fernandez in a match of tennis role-model vs. teen-age hero-worshipper.

"I tried to block that out of my mind and treat her as another tennis player," said Fernandez, a quarterfinalist earlier this month at the French Open.

Other winning seeds among the men included No. 5 Stefan Edberg, No. 6 Joakim Nystrom and No. 8 Anders Jarryd, all of Sweden, No. 10 Tim Mayotte and No. 16 Johan Kriek, both of the United States, and No. 14 Martin Jaite of Argentina. On the women's side, No. 3 Mandlikova and No. 7 Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia and No. 16 Kathy Jordan of the United States advanced.

Britain's top men's player, John Lloyd, lost a first-round match to South Africa's Christo Steyn after being up 2-0 in sets. Afterward, Lloyd said he would not play singles again.

"I think now is the time," said Lloyd, the husband of Chris Evert Lloyd. "I find it difficult to get charged up."

Another unseeded player also made news, but not directly related to the outcome of her match.

American Anne White, who last year was ordered not to wear a skin-tight bodysuit on court, showed up in a similar outfit against Britain's Sara Gomer.

Midland Angels find leadoff 'King'

King stats: Three hits, two homers and four RBI

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

A trio of Angels, including one who just donned his halo, carried a heavy portion of the load Tuesday night as Midland posted a 5-1 Texas League victory over El Paso.

On the mound there was Sherman Corbett — in his first start since a leave of absence for the death of his father on Sunday — pitching 7⅓ innings and allowing eight hits and one run, the latter not coming until the eighth.

At the plate, a pair of hitters crushed Diablo starter Pete Kendrick, collecting five of the team's seven hits, scoring all five runs and claiming four of five RBI.

Pete Coachman, who replaces Mark McLemore at second base, was 2-for-4 at the plate with a double and two runs scored.

Coachman was followed by designated hitter Kevin King, 3-for-4, two homers (numbers eight and nine), three runs scored and four RBI.

This isn't to say they were the only Angels to shine, they were just the ones who shined the brightest.

"KING SORT of took the spot light," said Angel manager Joe Maddon, who is seeing a strong payoff from a recent coaching move. "We put Kevin up to the top of the order — we were forced to when McLemore left. We're trying to get him to think of himself as more of a contact hitter and we'll take what happens after that."

If Monday and Tuesday's games are any indication, what happens could be devastating to TL pitching.

In eight at bats, King has six hits, four runs scored and four RBI.

"He's responded real well to the move," said Maddon. "We've been throwing him many, many pitches in BP and he's done a lot of work on the tee (not golf)."

For awhile, King was wondering about Maddon's decision.

"I was getting frustrated," said King. "I'd get two or three hits but they'd all be singles. Joe kept saying to be patient, that the singles were fine and the home runs would come. He was right."

Leading 1-0 from a run King scored in the first on a Raul Tovar single, King followed with a pair of two-run homers, the first coming in the third inning with Coachman on from a single and the second in the fifth with Coachman on from a double.

"Being at the top of the order (leadoff Monday and second Tuesday) you have to make contact with the ball," said King. "Things have worked out for me so far."

THE BIG criticism people have had of King this year is the number of strikeouts he's had, 63 in 56 games (.326 average). However, when balanced with the rest of his stats, the high number begins to pale.

First, King is now hitting .280, has a slugging percentage of .456 and an on-base percentage of .374, numbers that have driven in 31 runs and scored 33.

"For the amount of games he's played (56), his run production is very good, almost one per game," said Maddon.

"Strikeouts are going to come no matter who you are. Look at Reggie Jackson," said King. "I'm a free swinger and I'm going to strike out. But, I'm going to get my hits, too.

"I think coming to the Angels and Joe Maddon is a blessing. He's stayed with me when times were tough, everybody has. He never lost his confidence in me. They kept pulling for me and I think it will come through for me now."

WHILE COACHMAN and King were doing the offensive damage, Corbett was working on a shutout for 7⅓ innings before being tagged by Charlie O'Brien's solo shot over the left field fence.

"He hit a fastball on the inside part of the plate about waist high," said Corbett of the only Diablo to make it as far as third base in the game. O'Brien was stranded on third after a one-out walk in the second inning.

Other than O'Brien, Robbie Allen was the only Diablo to do much damage, going 3-for-4 but failed to score and didn't collect an RBI. Corbett wasted Allen's efforts.

"I've been throwing the ball pretty well," said Corbett, 4-4 about his performance this year. "There are times when I don't get any runs to help me but I can't do anything about that. Most of the time I try to pitch to keep us in the game."

With his performance Tuesday, Corbett improved his ERA to 3.57 and the home run was only the fourth allowed in 75⅓ innings of duty.

"I try to keep the ball down and get ahead of the batters," said Corbett. "I can't change my style of pitching because I'm in a hitter's park rather than a pitcher's park like Beaumont."

ANGEL NOTES — Three of the four new Angels have now reported. Coachman and Dante Bichette reported Tuesday from Palm Springs and Al Romero has been in town for three games. The fourth, Pat Keedy is still lost somewhere In Transit USA. Coachman brings a .316 average from 68 Class A games. He scored 74 runs on 87 hits and knocked in 41. He also has speed on the base paths with 30 thefts. Bichette was hitting .276 in Palm Spring in 67 games with a display of power, 15 doubles and 10 homers for 73 RBI...Diablo Steve Stanicek extended his hitting streak to 20 games with a single in the seventh and Alan Cartwright upped his streak to 19 with a single in the fourth...The victory gives Midland a 3-2 series win over the Diablos...Tonight, right hander Mike Cook will open the stand against Beaumont...

Boston Celtics top draft choice Len Bias died of cocaine intoxication, according to Maryland medical examiner

Cocaine blamed for Bias' death

BALTIMORE (AP) — University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias died from a dose of cocaine that he had probably snorted only minutes before he collapsed in his dorm room where he was celebrating his new professional career, the state medical examiner said Tuesday.

The cocaine killed Bias by interrupting the electrical activity in his brain, causing the heart to begin to beat irregularly, Dr. John Smialek said.

"This resulted in the sudden onset of seizures and cardiac arrest," he said at a news conference where he released the findings of an autopsy on the 22-year-old All American.

Bias died Thursday, two days after being the No. 2 pick in the NBA draft, selected by the champion Boston Celtics.

SMIALEK'S REPORT was turned over to Arthur A. Marshall Jr., the prosecutor investigating Bias' death.

Marshall said after receiving the report that he will look into the possibility of bringing a manslaughter charge against the person who provided the cocaine to Bias.

The autopsy showed that "nothing but the cocaine killed him. The reason he died was cocaine," Marshall said.

"Manslaughter is not an easy thing to develop, but we're sure going to look at it," he said.

Smialek said he couldn't determine how much cocaine Bias took, but said he would not call it an overdose. "I don't think he took a lot of cocaine," he said.

Maryland basketball coach Lefty Driesell was not in his office Tuesday and could not be reached for comment.

But Celtics president Red Auerbach said the report was "what they more or less were surmising."

"The main thing was that they seem to be quite certain that he was not on cocaine prior to this one incident," he said. "I think what happened, in all probability, and I'm just guessing, is that he was so elated at achieving a major goal in his life that he was tempted. They said 'Hey, this one time.' And that's what happened."

The medical examiner described Bias as very healthy, with no heart disease or damage.

"Len Bias had a large heart, but that was not unexpected considering his superb athletic condition," Smialek said.

He said there was no evidence that Bias was allergic to cocaine, but that he exhibited a sensitivity to the drug.

"This particular concentration might not have killed another individual. On the other hand, some might have been killed by lesser concentrations," Smialek said.

The blood cocaine level was 6.5 milligrams per liter, about average for the 16 deaths from cocaine use recorded in Maryland in the last three years, he said. The autopsy turned up no evidence of alcohol or other drugs.

No adulterants were found in the blood, indicating that Bias had ingested a pure form of cocaine, the medical examiner said. It appeared that Bias had snorted the cocaine, Smialek said, but he added he couldn't be certain.

There had been reports of a delay of as much as 30 minutes before Bias' roommates summoned an ambulance to the University of Maryland dormitory where he collapsed. Smialek said Bias would have required medical care within four or five minutes of the time his heart stopped to save his life.

The necessary medical care would have been use of life support equipment or cardiopulmonary resuscitation administered by a professional, he said.

A TEAMMATE gave Bias cardiopulmonary resuscitation before the ambulance arrived.

Smialek said there was no evidence that Bias had used cocaine previously, although he wasn't sure.

Western, Mid City take tourney wins

From Staff Reports

Western's Blue and the Mid City Angels took victories Tuesday in the opening round of play in the Joe Mowles Memorial American Little League tournament at the North Central diamonds.

Western got a three-run homer from Juan Ramos in the fourth inning to back the four-hit pitching of Stephen Wooten to spill the Eastern Optimist by a 6-2 margin. Eastern, the defending champion, now falls to the loser's bracket in the double elimination tournament while facing a tough road to keep its title.

Eastern's Mario Rodriquez was tagged with the loss. Both of Eastern's runs came on Oscar Molinar's two-run homer in the sixth inning. Cory Watson had two of the four Eastern hits off of Wooten, who was in total control of the game until Molinar's blast in the final frame.

Mid City produced a surprising 5-2 win over the Tower Cubs, who had the talented Robert Thorns on the mound and the Angels produced the win with three 10-year-old stars. Travis Baumgartner, Joseph Golding and Kerry Doan, all 10, collected three of the five Angel hits off Thorns. Mano Fuentes tripled and singled for the other hits in the attack.

Doan also picked up the win in relief of Marty Eriva. Thorns had two of the three hits for Tower.

Action continues today at 6 p.m. when Mid City takes on the North Central Cubs in a key winner's bracket game. Western draws today's bye.

In the other game today, Eastern and Tower will square off and the loser will be the first team to fall from the list of hopeful tournament champions in elimination.

The tournament will continue through Saturday. The championship could be decided in a 9 a.m. Saturday contest, but a second game could be forced that day if a loser's bracket team comes through with a victory.

On Thursday, Western will play the winner of the North Central-Mid-City contest for the right to move into the tournament finals Saturday. Also on Thursday, the winner of the Tower-Eastern contest will meet the loser of the Mid-City-North Central game in another elimination contest.

Pitching as usual seems to be the key in this yearly event. The two winning teams Tuesday in the opening round of the tournament gave up a total of seven hits between them.

Teams falling into the loser's bracket early will have to draw deep into their pitching staffs.

Eastern won the city championship a year ago, skating undefeated, but that won't happen this year.

STAT

Rookie Andy Allanson of the Cleveland Indians hit his first professional home run Monday night in his 1,026th at-bat. He was homerless in 870 minor-league at-bats over three seasons before connecting on his 156th at-bat this year.

STREAKS

Atlanta's Zane Smith has allowed one home run in 117 innings this season.

SWINGS

Toronto's Jimmy Key, who was 0-3 with a 13.27 earned run average after six starts this season, is now 5-5 with a 4.67 ERA.

SEASONS

June 25

1924 — Relief pitcher Emil Yde of the Pittsburgh Pirates doubled in the ninth to tie the Chicago Cubs and then tripled in the 14th to win his own game.

1937 — Augie Galan of the Chicago Cubs became one of the first switch-hitters to hit a home run left-handed and one right-handed in the same game. The Cubs beat the Broolyn Dodgers 11-2.

1950 — Chicago's Hank Sauer hit two home runs and two doubles to pace the Cubs to an 11-8 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies.

1968 — Bobby Bonds, in his first game with the San Francisco Giants, broke in with a bang, hitting a grand-slam homer off John Purdin.

Ryan returns to Astros with 8-4 win over Cincinnati

California defeats Rangers to tie for first

Associated Press

Nolan Ryan, just off the disabled list, won his first game since April 25 and Glenn Davis hit a two-run homer Tuesday night to lead the Houston Astros over the Cincinnati Reds 8-4.

Ryan, 4-6, had been on the disabled list with an elbow problem. He pitched five innings and gave up one earned run, one unearned run and two hits while walking four and striking out five.

Davis had three of Houston's 12 hits. His 16th homer and second in two days capped a five-run fifth inning. Tom Browning was the loser, allowing six runs — all unearned — and six hits in five innings.

In the Houston fifth, Cincinnati left fielder Eric Davis misplayed Billy Hatcher's liner for a three-base error, allowing two runs to score. Hatcher came home on a single by Phil Garner and Davis followed with his homer.

Houston Manager Hal Lanier said Ryan "felt fine and he didn't have any discomfort. That's what's important. He had good velocity and his control will improve. If he continues to throw like that and gets his control back he's going to be a big factor from now on."

Houston's victory, coupled with San Francisco's 3-0 loss to San Diego, put the Astros one-half game behind the Giants in the National League West.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Padres 3, Giants 0

Eric Show and two relievers combined on a four-hitter against the Giants, who scored 18 runs a day earlier. In breaking the Giants' five-game winning streak, the Padres scored off rookie Terry Mulholland in the fourth inning when Tony Gwynn tripled and Kevin McReynolds singled. McReynolds and Tim Flannery singled home insurance runs.

Show pitched two-hit ball for five innings. He left because of soreness in his pitching elbow and Lance McCullers and Rich Gossage finished up.

Dodgers 6, Braves 2

Franklin Stubbs hit two home runs and Len Matuszek also homered, backing Orel Hershiser's three-hitter as Los Angeles broke a four-game losing streak. Stubbs, who went 3-for-3 with a walk, homered in the first inning off David Palmer and then hit his 15th homer in the fourth for a 2-2 tie. Matuszek connected two outs later. Palmer had allowed just five homers in 95 1-3 innings this season.

Expos 6, Mets 2

Tim Wallach drove in two runs, Mitch Webster went 3-for-5 and scored twice and Mike Fitzgerald hit a two-run homer, giving the Expos their fourth victory in five games with the Mets, whose lead in the NL East was reduced to eight games.

Meanwhile, Bryn Smith won his first game in June, scattering six hits, including Darryl Strawberry's fourth-inning homer, in 6 2-3 innings.

Phillies 7, Cubs 6

John Russell, who drove in two earlier runs, led off the bottom of the 10th with a home run against Chicago relief ace Lee Smith. The Cubs had tied the score 6-6 on Ryne Sandberg's two-out, two-run double off Steve Bedrosian in the ninth. Russell had an RBI double off Steve Trout in the second inning and an RBI single in the fifth.

Cardinals 5, Pirates 2

Ray Burris pitched one-hit ball for six innings before needing relief help as St. Louis won its fifth straight game, its longest winning streak of the season. The Cardinals, showing the style that won them the 1985 pennant, stole five bases and scored three runs without hitting a ball out of the infield. Ken Dayley, the fifth St. Louis pitcher, struck out Barry Bonds with the bases loaded to end the game.

Baseball Roundup

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Angels 12, Rangers 3

Rob Wilfong drove in four runs, three with a double in California's six-run third inning, as the Angels defeated Texas for the fifth consecutive time this season and moved into a first place tie with the Rangers in the AL West. Ron Romanick allowed two runs in seven innings and benefited from a 13-hit California attack against Edwin Correa and three relievers. Correa, who lasted only three innings, gave up seven hits and eight runs.

California's big third inning including RBI singles by Ruppert Jones and Reggie Jackson and a sacrifice fly by Wally Joyner.

A's 8, Royals 4

Eric Plunk and Steve Ontiveros combined on a six-hitter as Oakland won away from home for the first time since May 23. The A's jumped on Bret Saberhagen, 4-8, for three runs in the third inning and two in the fourth.

Alfredo Griffin walked leading off the third and stole second. After Tony Phillips walked, Mike Davis doubled to score Griffin, Carney Lansford brought in Phillips with an infield out and Davis scored when Saberhagen balked. In the fourth, Griffin had an RBI grounder and Jerry Willard the first of his two RBI singles.

Yankees 8, Red Sox 1

Ron Hassey equaled his career high with four hits — a home run, double and two singles — and drove in three runs while Dennis Rasmussen allowed six hits in 7 2-3 innings as the Yankees moved within four games of first-place Boston in the AL East. They have amassed 19 runs and 31 hits in winning the first two games of the three-game series.

Hassey's third-inning double was wasted but he singled home the tying run against Rob Woodward in the fifth and the go-ahead run scored on Willie Randolph's grounder. The Yankees nailed down the victory with a four-run sixth, including Mike Easler's RBI single and Hassey's two-run homer.

Orioles 2, Tigers 1

Baltimore managed only two hits off rookie Eric King through nine innings. But Bill Campbell relieved at the start of the 10th. With two out, Lee Lacy doubled and scored on a single by Tom O'Malley. Baltimore's Scott McGregor allowed three hits in 8 2-3 innings while relief ace Don Aase pitched the last 1 1-3 innings for the victory.

Blue Jays 8, Brewers 0

Rookie left-hander John Cerutti pitched a six-hitter for his first major-league shutout and complete game. George Bell, one of five Blue Jays to collect two hits, hit a two-run homer. Loser Teddy Higuera, who came into the game with a 9-5 record and 2.21 ERA, lasted only 2 2-3 innings and allowed four runs on eight hits.

Twins 2, White Sox 1

Rookie Allan Anderson pitched a three-hitter for his first major-league victory while Mark Salas singled home the tying run in the seventh inning and scored the winner on Greg Gagne's grounder. Anderson, a 22-year-old left-hander called up from the minors earlier this month, walked three and struck out nine. In his first two appearances he had allowed eight runs and 16 hits in 15 innings. It was the fewest hits allowed by a Twins' pitcher this season.

Mariners 8, Indians 7

Jim Presley's two-run double in the ninth inning rallied Seattle past Cleveland.

John Moses and Phil Bradley drew walks off Ernie Camacho, 1-1, to start the rally. Gorman Thomas sacrificed before Presley sliced his double past right fielder Cory Snyder.

Boston's Rich Gedman, left, reacts in pain as he tries to take out Yankee second baseman Willie Randolph, but Randolph was able to complete the double play in an 8-1 Yankee win.

Price of rat climbs for Kingman

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The $2 rat that Oakland slugger Dave Kingman had delivered to a female sportswriter has cost him $3,500.

The price of the prank could cost him his job if "an incident of a similar nature" takes place, the club said Tuesday night.

Kingman, in the meantime, remained as non-commital as the rodent itself, which has found a home with a 5-year-old Kansas City boy.

Sandy Alderson, the A's vice president for baseball operations, announced during the A's-Kansas City game Tuesday night that Kingman had been fined $3,500 and would be "released immediately without further compensation if an incident of a similar nature occurs in the future."

Kingman, 37, has a one-year contract with the A's for a reported $600,000.

The 37-year-old veteran, who has been embroiled in controvery before, dressed and left Royals Stadium Tuesday night without once acknowledging the sportswriters clustered around him.

On Monday night, Kingman had a Royals Stadium guard deliver a pink box to Susan Fornoff of The Sacramento Bee during the first inning of Oakland's game with the Royals. Inside was a small rat — at first thought to be a mouse — with a label that said "My name is Sue."

Although Kingman later labeled the rodent "a $2 rat" and said he was merely pulling a practical joke, Fornoff was not amused. She said she has been harassed at times by Kingman since she began covering the A's last season. She said the ballplayer has told her he doesn't believe women belong in the clubhouse.

"The club has advised Kingman that if an incident of a similar nature occurs in the future, he will be released immediately without further compensation," the statement said.

"The Oakland A's deeply regret the conduct of Dave Kingman last night toward writer Susan Fornoff.

"The club has apologized to Ms. Fornoff for the incident. The club has fined Kingman the sum of $3,500."

Jackson another key NFL fumble

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Oops, there goes another Heisman Trophy winner, slipping through the suddenly fumble-prone fingers of the National Football League.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle can only hope the attorneys representing his league in current litigation brought by the rival United States Football League are more persuasive with the jury than the Tampa Bay Bucs were with Bo Jackson.

Mr. Jackson, a football player of some considerable ability, threw the Bucs a curve and decided instead to try and hit curves, signing a baseball contract with the Kansas City Royals. He thus becomes the fourth consecutive Heisman recipient to shun the NFL, a rather troubling trend. The other three — Herschel Walker in 1982, Mike Rozier in 1983 and Doug Flutie in 1984 — were lured to the USFL by fat contracts. Money, however, did not figure in Bo's equation.

BASEBALL, ONCE lavish in its financial treatment of veteran free agents, always has been rather penurious when it came to kids. There are indications that Kansas City did not unlock the vaults to sign Mr. Jackson and, in fact, the Royals probably secured his services for considerably fewer bucks — a package worth a reported $1.1 million — than the $7 million the Bucs were tossing around.

"Bo does what Bo wants to do," Mr. Jackson said, explaining his decision and referring to himself, as he often does, in the third person. Maybe what Bo wants to do is play a more pastoral sport, where life and limb are not in perpetual danger. Maybe Bo just got tired of getting beat up by big guys just because he went running by them with a football under his arm.

Or maybe, just maybe, Mr. Jackson knows that guys named Bo have been more successful in baseball than they have been in football.

Football had Bo Matthews, a running back out of Colorado who played from 1974-79 with the San Diego Chargers. A fine fellow, but can you compare his career production — 1,372 yards — with the record book accomplishment of, say, baseball's Bo Belinsky?

Belinsky, a roguish character who played night games even when his team didn't, lasted eight years and won 28 games. But he's in the Hall of Fame, courtesy of a no-hitter pitched May 5, 1962 for the Los Angeles Angels against Baltimore. Matthews, it is safe to say, is unlikely to show up in Canton, Ohio anytime soon.

FOOTBALL HAD Bo Hickey, a running back out of Maryland, who played for the Denver Broncos in 1967. Baseball's one-year Bo was Bobo Holloman, who was 3-7 for the St. Louis Browns in 1953, his only major league season.

Holloman, however, is remembered as the only player to pitch a no-hitter in his first major league start, beating the Philadelphia A's on May 6, 1953. Hickey, on the other hand, is hardly remembered at all.

Another Bobo was one of baseball's legendary characters. Pitcher Bobo Newsom lasted 20 years, winning 211 games and surviving a nomadish itinerary that took him to nine different teams — one of them, the Washington Senators, four times.

Like Mr. Jackson, Newsom liked to refer to himself in the third person, often talking about "Ol' Bobo." And like Mr. Jackson, he rather enjoyed playing baseball, an occupation he pursued until he was 46 years old.

Newsom got his nickname because that was how he greeted everyone he met. Baseball seems to encourage that kind of comraderie. There was, for example, Clarence Coleman, the laconic catcher of the original New York Mets, who also had a singular identification for all acquaintances, friend or foe.

Coleman called everybody, "Bub," which explains, of course, why he was called "Choo Choo."

Chicks await Royals' Mr. Heisman

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The president of the Southern League's Memphis Chicks says the arrival of Heisman Trophy winner Bo Jackson in the lineup next week should help the team on the field as well as the ticket office.

"There is no doubt that having Bo in a Memphis uniform will stimulate more interest in the Chicks and hopefully he'll help us win more games," George Lapides said.

Lapides said word that Jackson would be playing in Memphis already has started a rush for tickets and news media requests for credentials has outstripped the stadium's tiny press box.

Avron Fogelman, the Chicks' owner and co-owner of the world champion Kansas City Royals, announced Tuesday that Jackson would begin his professional baseball career in Memphis on Monday night when the Chicks play Columbus, Ga.

"Even though he's been hitting the base of the scoreboard in Kansas City, Bo knows he needs help," Fogelman said. "Bo knows he needs fine tuning."

He said Jackson needs to work on hitting against professional pitchers.

Howe returns to baseball

Cleared of cocaine suspicions

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — The up-and-down world of pitcher Steve Howe is on the rise again now that he has been cleared of suspicions that he was again using cocaine.

In a decision made by the head of minor league baseball and approved by Commissioner Peter Ueberroth, Howe won reinstatement Tuesday with the San Jose Bees of the California League and said he expects to be back in the big leagues soon.

Howe, who will take the mound Thursday night against the Fresno Giants, was banned from play on May 15 by John Johnson, president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, because of a disputed drug test.

JOHNSON RELEASED a statement Tuesday from his St. Petersburg, Fla., office saying he took Howe off the ineligible list and placed him on the Bees' active roster.

The National Association governs minor league baseball, but Johnson said his decisions to suspend and then reinstate Howe were supported by Ueberroth.

"Since his suspension last May, Howe has undergone additional drug rehabilitation therapy and shown a positive and constructive attitude in addressing the concerns which give rise to my action," Johnson said.

"His progress will continue to be monitored and I am hopeful that he will continue his professional career without further interruption," Johnson said.

He added that Ueberroth's office was pleased about the "thorough professional re-evaluation of Howe's drug rehabilitation program and that Howe has renewed his commitment to adhere to that program."

Johnson left unanswered questions about why he suspended Howe in the first place or what was found in his "re-evaluation."

Howe, the 1980 National League Rookie of the Year with 17 saves for Los Angeles, also declined to go into specifics of the suspension or the reasons why he was reinstated. But he expressed bitternesss that allegations of drug abuse were again brought against him.

"Wouldn't you feel bummed out if you felt that you didn't do anything wrong and you were fired from your job?" said Howe, 28.

"I'm reinstated. That clears me. That means that I didn't do anything wrong. So all the other questions are irrelevant. I'm not going to open up a can of worms. I'm tired of the controversy and basically I'm tired of being thrown in the fishbowl."

Howe said he's been working out during the past five weeks and staying close to the club. He was being scouted by several major league clubs shortly before his suspension and reportedly was only a few days away from signing a contract.

"I think I still am a few days away from being signed by a major league club," said Howe, who has a 2-1 record and 1.97 earned run average in 10 games. He struck out 26 and walked just three while starting four games and getting two saves.

BEES' GENERAL manager Harry Steve also was bitter about the suspension.

"I'm looking at eight starts where we could have had 1,000 to 1,500 more people here and probably sold his contract," Steve said. "But I'm thankful for getting him back. I hope we get a few starts out of him and then he can be on his way back to the majors."

Steve complained that timing of the suspension was bad.

"He was real close to going with a major league club," he said. "At the time it happened he was probably three or four days away from being signed. He can still salvage the season and make a great contribution to a major league club. His talent is not a question mark at all. If somebody's willing they're going to get a heck of a pitcher.

Howe claims he has turned away from cocaine use after it nearly destroyed his career. He was released by Minnesota following a cocaine episode last summer and had no saves and a 6.16 ERA for the Twins.

At his peak, though, he was a top pitcher. In 1983, he saved 18 games and had a 1.44 ERA. In 1984 former Commissioner Bowie Kuhn ordered Howe to serve a one-year suspension for violating baseball's drug rules, but Howe wasn't placed into any of the drug-related punishment categories by Kuhn's successor, Ueberroth.

Howe voluntary entered a rehabilitation program and submitted to regular testing.

Howe's attorney, John Lence, said he believed an error had been made at some point in either the administration or evaluation of the disputed drug test.

Boivin heads NHL Hall inductees

MONTREAL (AP) — In 1,150 NHL games from 1951 to 1970, Leo Boivin scored just 72 goals. Obviously, scoring wasn't the reason for his selection to the Hockey Hall of Fame.

"I remember the solid body checks he used to throw," said Jean Beliveau, a member of the Hall of Fame Players Selection Committee that named Boivin and two others to the Hall on Tuesday. "He had great dedication."

Boivin, best remembered as the premier bodychecker of his era, was named along with rugged defenseman Serge Savard and diminutive, high-scoring center Dave Keon.

Savard spent most of his career with the Montreal Canadiens, helping them win eight Stanley Cups, and Keon chalked up tremendous scoring totals in 18 seasons while helping Toronto win four league titles.

The Hall of Fame selections wrapped up business at the NHL Congress here. The NHL held its amateur player draft last Saturday and the Board of Governors got together for their annual meetings Sunday and Monday.

Boivin, who played with five NHL teams, most notably the Boston Bruins, is remembered for his ferocious hip checks that are still regarded as the classic criteria for defensemen. Boivin was selected to play in three All-Star games and was captain of the Bruins from 1963 until traded to Detroit in 1966.

"I was never a Cup winner, (so) this has to be the biggest thrill of my life," Boivin said. "I can't believe it, getting to go to the Hall of Fame with those two guys (Savard and Keon)."

Assessing his style, Boivin said: "To me, hitting a guy good and hard on his feet really felt good. I felt I was contributing."

Savard played 16 seasons in the NHL, 14 with the Canadiens. He overcame serious leg injuries in his fourth and fifth seasons to establish himself as the key defenseman on a team of stars.

"He was the big one of the Big Three," Beliveau said, referring to Savard, J.C. Tremblay and Guy Lapointe.

Those players were key elements of the Canadiens' four straight Stanley Cup championships in the late 1970s.

Fort Worth welcomes Cruz

FORT WORTH (AP) — Steve Cruz grew up in Fort Worth's Diamond Hill neighborhood.

And when he arrived at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport Tuesday, it was the people of Diamond Hill who turned out to give a hero's welcome to the fighter who defeated Barry McGuigan Monday night for the World Boxing Association featherweight title.

Some of the crowd had gone to Las Vegas for the fight, but many had paid $26 to watch it on closed-circuit TV at the Tarrant County Convention Center. For them, this was their moment when their conquoring hero returned home.

They met him at the gateway and carried him on their shoulders. They greeted him with signs, showered him with confetti and presented him with a pink T-shirt that said: "New WBA champ Little Steve Cruz."

The girls kissed him and the guys shook his hand. They called out his name and asked him to sign any piece of paper they could find.

There were gray-haired women and barefooted babies. They wore coats and ties and cutoff shorts, cowboy hats and baseball caps, tank tops and T-shirts that said: "Barry Beware."

"It's a victory for all of us," said Taco Gonzalez. "He didn't do it for him, he did it for all of us. If you don't come from the neighborhood, you just can't understand it. That's our champion, that's the pride and joy of Diamond Hill."

Richard Guerra said that Cruz' victory has brought the people of Diamond Hill together.

"You always hear about fights and stealings and robberies in our neighborhood," Guerra said. "That gives us a bad name. This gives us a good name."

Cruz' aunt, Josie Avina, said Cruz was a big hero to all the kids in the Diamond Hill neighborhood.

Propel yourself to success.

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Thursday, June 26, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You will enjoy new success in both your business and personal lives. New financial opportunities arise this coming fall and again in the spring. Strike a better balance between work and recreation. Travel could make a dream come true. Your keen intellect is a tremendous asset. Your career takes a big leap forward.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: China authority and author Pearl S. Buck, former Virginia governor Charles Robb, U.S. Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, film villain Peter Lorre, singer Anna Moffo, baseball's Babe Herman, Cubs legendary slugger Hack Wilson, Olympic athlete Babe Didrikson Zaharias.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You succeed because you find it easy to play a wide variety of roles. You also take decisive action when there are things to be done! Let a financial scheme simmer for a while.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A secret romance shows signs of bursting into full view. A business project is running right on schedule. More cash is available. Seize an opportunity to travel for fun. Widen your horizons.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A dream vacation may now be possible. Express your beliefs when you have a chance and you gain an important advantage. Career advancement seems slow, but each step is a great one!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Look to the future, not to the past. Consider other people's feelings as well as your own. You tend to procrastinate when you need to act.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Others are depending on you now. Keep your spirits high. Be more discreet when it comes to love and romance. A financial situation will improve in time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New technology eases your workload while putting extra cash in your pocket. Your creativity helps you win your spurs in the marketplace. Keep any diet or exercise resolutions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Help a friend get back on track again. You uncover a secret by accident. A phone call from a relative could provide the missing piece to a puzzle. Give romance a chance to develop at its own pace.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can be very persuasive now. As people gravitate toward you, keep your thinking crystal-clear. If you try to operate in a vacuum, your career could stall. Seek your associates' views.

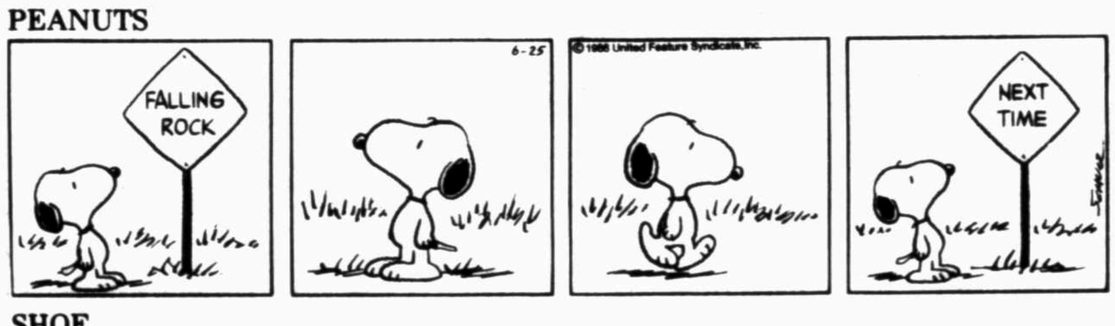

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Consult an authority figure before proceeding with a project. Guesses are not good enough when it comes to making financial projections. Check and re-check your figures. Ignore a feeling of restlessness at work.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Things are better than they seem. Concentration is the key to greater success and financial growth. Focus on reaching a new understanding with an important associate. Know the source of any funds you receive.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Patience is a saving grace when money is tight. You may be thinking about starting or expanding your family. New employment opportunities should be investigated right away. Move quickly to beat out the competition.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your personal relationships would be more satisfying now. Forget past grievances and mistakes. Be candid and a family member will come around to your point of view. Travel brings new rewards.

Opening lead: King of ◇

Sometimes there are more urgent uses for trumps than ruffing. They can be the only line of communication between dummy and declarer. A thoughtless declarer would be defeated in quick time on this example.

South's hand was too strong for a simple overcall, so he elected to double at his first turn and then bid spades at his next. Once a fit was located and North showed some values, South decided he stood to gain little from a double of five clubs, and so he persevered with five spades. (As the cards lie, North-South can collect five tricks against five clubs doubled.)

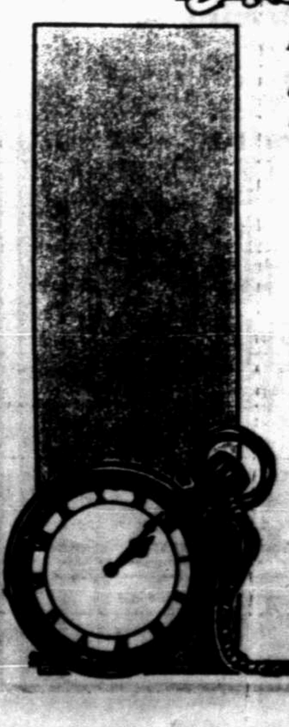

West led the king of his partner's first-bid suit and continued with another diamond. Declarer ruffed and, if trumps were 2-1, the contract was unbeatable. It would seem, therefore, that declarer should draw at least one round of trumps.

However, declarer saw that, if trumps were 3-0, he could not afford even one round of trumps, because he would be an entry short in his hand to ruff both of his heart losers. And the bad spade division was not too unlikely since East probably held 10 cards in the minor suits and he had to have some hearts—West would have bid differently with an eight-card heart suit!

So at trick three declarer carefully led a heart to the ace. When that held, the contract became iron-clad regardless of how the trumps broke.

Declarer used two high trumps as entries for two heart ruffs—East's spade void bothered him not. The ace of clubs permitted declarer to return to hand to draw the last trump, and he cheerfully conceded a club to the defenders as their second and last trick.

WATCHERS

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

If you need a good helper, try advertising in our classifieds. Who knows? You may spark the beginning of something big!

Barnes

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Penthouse magazine may republish nude photographs of television actress Priscilla Barnes but may not identify them as her, a federal appeals court has ruled.

Penthouse initially published the photographs under an assumed name in 1976, and sought to republish them naming Ms. Barnes after she became well known as a star of the TV show "Three's Company."

Because of a dispute over how Ms. Barnes agreed to be identified, the magazine sought federal court approval of its plan to republish the photographs. But U.S. District Judge James Ideman ordered Penthouse to refrain from publishing the photographs and to return the originals to the actress.

Ideman's order was overturned Tuesday by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here, which ruled that Penthouse must refrain from using Ms. Barnes' name in connection with the photographs.

Ms. Barnes was a Hollywood club hostess when the pictures were taken in 1975 by freelance photographer Jeff Dunas.

Ms. Barnes' agent, Lou Pitt, did not return telephone messages seeking comment.

Welch

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Raquel Welch, who won a $10.8 million judgment against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and several executives over her firing from the movie "Cannery Row," says the extent of the award surprised her.

"I just wanted to clear my reputation and get back to my work, my work in movies," she said as she left Superior Court on Tuesday.

The actress had sued for $20 million, contending that former MGM executive David Begelman, producer Michael Phillips and director David Ward plotted to remove her from the 1980 movie and replace her with actress Debra Winger.

The defendants had argued that Miss Welch breached her contract by applying her makeup at home instead of at the studio Dec. 19, 1980.

The film based on John Steinbeck's novel starred Miss Winger and actor Nick Nolte. It failed at the box office and received mixed reviews.

Reeve

NEW YORK (AP) — Christopher Reeve, the Man of Steel in three "Superman" movies, was resting comfortably in a hospital following an emergency appendectomy, his publicist said.

"He's in good condition, and he's expected to be out of the hospital shortly," Catherine Olim said Tuesday. Reeve was recuperating at St. Luke's Hospital in Manhattan, said hospital spokeswoman Saundra Shohen.

Ms. Olim said Reeve was taken to the hospital early Tuesday after complaining that he hadn't felt well overnight.

She said Reeve's hospitalization was not expected to cause any great delay to filming of the movie "Street Smart," on which he was working.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A lawsuit by a fight attendant who alleged she was assaulted by a member of the Oak Ridge Boys' backup band on an airplane in Nevada must be dismissed because California has no jurisdiction, a federal appeals court ruled.

Marilyn Scott and her husband, John, Los Angeles-area residents, sued the Oak Ridge Boys and Don Breland, a guitarist for the singing quartet's band, over a February 1983 incident on a Pacific Southwest Airlines plane awaiting takeoff in Reno for San Francisco.

The Scotts' lawyer, Michaeline Abate Re, said Breland accosted Mrs. Scott and hit her several times. Other members of the group pulled Breland away and he was escorted off the flight, Ms. Re said.

She said Mrs. Scott suffered no physical harm, but was traumatized. Later, the Oak Ridge Boys "apologized and sent her lots of little albums and T-shirts," the lawyer said.

U.S. District Judge Alicemarie Stotler of Los Angeles dismissed the suit and a three-judge appeals court panel affirmed the ruling Tuesday.

MOSCOW (AP) — Two Americans, an Australian and a Frenchman were the only Westerners chosen for the final round of the violin contest at the prestigious Tchaikovsky competition on Tuesday. All five Soviet entrants were among the final 12.

David Kim, 23, and Frank Almond, 22, were the two Americans who made the coveted third round, where contestants perform one concerto by Tchaikovsky and one by another composer.

Both smiled broadly as Soviet violinist Viktor Tretyakov, chairman of the jury for violin, announced the results. Kim is from Carbondale, Ill., and Almond is from San Diego, Calif., but both now live in New York City.

"Now, we're going to go and drink about 70 beers," joked Kim, as he threw a consoling arm around Peter Vinograd from New York City who did not make it into the third round.

Kim said he had learned a lot about Soviet competitors and the kind of standards expected at the Tchaikovsky competition by competing in an international contest in Italy last September.

"I thought, 'I'm a pretty good American violinist, I stand a chance', " he said. "But the Soviets come so well prepared to these things. I was out, boom."

As a small consolation, Vinograd received cheers from the Soviet audience in the Rachmaninov Hall of the Moscow Conservatory as he was awarded a second-round diploma from Tretyakov.

Violinist Michaela Paetsch of Colorado Springs, Colo., who played last in the second round on Tuesday afternoon, cried on Vinograd's shoulder as she heard that she had not been selected for the third round, but had won a special prize for the best performance of a compulsory work by Soviet composer Yuri Falik.

She will receive her prize at the closing ceremony for the competition July 4.

Ik Hwan-bae, a native of South Korea and now a resident of New York City, was the other American of the five who played in the second round not selected for the final.

Earlier Tuesday, 10 Americans were among the 26 cellists to make it to the second round of the cello competition and 42 of 80 singers heard they had made it past the first round in their field. Soprano Barbara Kilduff, a native of Huntington, N.Y., was the only American who made it to the second round in singing.

The American cellists who advanced to the second round were David Starkweather, a San Francisco native; Bion Yu-ting Tsang, a Michigan native; Sara Sant'ambrogio, a Boston native; Judy Stone, an Illinois native; Diane Chaplin, a Los Angeles native; Lawrence Figg, hometown unknown; John Sharp, a native of Waco, Texas, and a soloist with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra; Johann Paetsch, a native of Colorado Springs, Colo.; Michelle Djokic, a native of Trenton, N.J., who plays in the Rhode Island Philharmonic; Rafael Figueroa, a native of Puerto Rico who plays in the Puerto Rico Symphony Orchestra.

Dollar falls

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar fell modestly against most major currencies in thin European trading early today. Gold bullion held steady at around $343.

Currency traders said the market had settled down after a volatile session Tuesday in which the dollar declined sharply. They said investors were reluctant to take up strong positions in an atmosphere of uncertainty over where the dollar is headed.

Today the U.S. currency was fluctuating within a narrow range in what was described as mainly technically based trading.

Selected midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Tuesday:

—2.217 West German marks, down from 2.2283

—1.8172 Swiss francs, down from 1.822

—7.069 French francs, down from 7.08

—2.499 Dutch guilders, unchanged

—1,525.00 Italian lire, up from 1,524.75

—1.365 Canadian dollars, down from 1.36635

The British pound edged up to $1.5163 from $1.5115.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 166.45 Japanese yen, down from 165.90 yen. Later, in London, the dollar was quoted at 165.80 yen.

London bullion dealers fixed a recommended gold price at midmorning of $343.25 an ounce, up from $342.30 late Tuesday.

In Zurich, the metal was bid at $343, unchanged from late Tuesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold closed at a bid of $342.75, up from $340.81.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $5.11 an ounce, up 1 cent.

Agreement not expected from latest OPEC meeting

New York Times News Service

BRIONI, Yugoslavia — OPEC oil ministers met informally on the Adriatic island of Brioni Tuesday, one day before beginning the group's regular summer session that will focus on ways to reduce crude-oil production and raise prices.

There seemed to be little likelihood the ministers would reach a significant agreement at the session, which will be the sixth meeting this year of the 13 ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

In New York, markets seemed to anticipate the discord, as contract prices for August delivery of crude oil declined 10 cents, to $12.90 a barrel.

OPEC still faces a glut of crude oil that is outstripping demand and depressing prices. OPEC production in the first half of June was estimated at 18.5 million to 19 million barrels a day, compared with about 15 million barrels in the period last year.

But Iran's oil minister, Gholam Reza Aghazadeh, said discussions Tuesday had "taken a political orientation." Asked about the $17-to-$19-a-barrel price range proposed at the May meeting in Saudi Arabia, which Iran and its allies did not attend, Aghazadeh replied, "I don't accept it."

And Saudi Arabia's oil minister, Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, said his country would not make any significant cuts in Saudi output, estimated at 4.6 million barrels a day.

Meanwhile, reports reveal that OPEC's oil production in 1985 fell to a new low of 17.2 million barrels per day — or just over 30 percent of total world production — compared with 18.5 million barrels per day in 1984, the British Petroleum Co.'s 1986 Statistical Review of World Energy said Tuesday.

White plans to hold second energy summit

DALLAS (AP) — A Houston energy summit meeting planned for next month will expose members of Congress, other politicians and business leaders to the impacts of the oil price slump on other industries, Gov. Mark White said.

"It is time for Congress to take the initiative. If the administration will not act, then the Congress must," White said.

White announced he would hold the July 24 energy summit, a sequel to one held in Dallas April 15, during a speech to the the Energy Policy Group meeting here to drum up support for an oil import tarriff.

"The administration maintains that lower oil prices, lower interest rates and the lower international trade value of the dollar are supposed to drive the economy into a rapid expansion which will more than compensate for the declining fortunes of the oil and gas industry," White said.

However, he said, "Nationally, unemployment is up. Manufacturing output is down, with U.S. factories operating at their lowest capacity in 2½ years. Capital expenditures are down, and even retail sales are sluggish."

Hunt brothers file suit against 23 major banks

DALLAS (AP) — Three sons of the late oil tycoon H.L. Hunt and two of their oil companies are seeking more than $3.6 billion from 23 major banks for alleged violations of antitrust and banking laws.

The plaintiffs claimed in a suit filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court here that the banks made a "concerted and vindictive effort ... to force several of the individual plaintiffs to 'make good' on the more than $1.5 billion in loans outstanding to Placid Oil Co. and Penrod Drilling Co. and to dismantle and to ultimately destroy those companies."

Placid Oil, Penrod Drilling, the three Hunt family trusts that own the businesses and Nelson Bunker Hunt, William Herbert Hunt and Lamar Hunt asked for more than $1.2 billion in actual damages. The suit also asks for a court assesment triple that amount.

The Hunts and their companies also claim the banks are not entitled to repaymnent of their loans because of the alleged wrongdoings.

The suit claimed the banks participated in "deception and fraud, breached fudiciary duties, including unlawful discrimination against Placid and Penrod in favor of some of the banks other customers, broken promises and violations of the antiturst laws and other laws including 'those regulating banks."

Instead of addressing a need for restructuring $1.5 billion in loans, the suit said, the banks:

— Orchestrated financial crises through false promises of cooperation and calculated delays.

— Controlled and manipulated the companies' operations for the banks' own benefit.

— Undercut the companies' attempts to sell some of their assets and borrow from competing banks by disclosing confidential information.

— Pressured Placid Oil to eliminate exploration and development activitity and to liquidate assets.

— Made demands that would have put both Penrod and Placid out of business.

A statement from the Hunt companies said that since 1980 Placid and Penrod have paid their banks almost $1.5 billion in interest on various loans, as well as $1 billion in principle.

The Hunts' lawyer, Edwin McCabe of Boston, said there was a national issue at stake.

"The banks skimmed staggering petro-dollar profits during the energy crisis of the last decade. Now that energy prices have collapsed, the banks are turning their backs on the U.S. oil and gas industry and willingly with those who would destroy our exploraton and production capacity," McCabe said.

Alan Edgar, an oil analyst with Schneider Bernet and Hickman in Dallas, predicted the Hunt companies and the banks will negotiate an agreement to restructure the loans. "They have to," he said.

He called the lawsuits "an indication of the adversarial relationships between banks and the industry they've overfinanced."

Because Penrod and Placid are private companies, the amount of losses they have incurred with falling oil prices is not known, but Edgar said: "One word would describe it — big."

He described the two companies as large, aggressive and "caught in the crash in the oil industry."

The Associated Press attempted to obtain comment from the banks Tuesday night to no avail. Named in the suit were:

Bankers Trust Co., Manufacturers Hanover Trust, Citibank, Chemical Bank, and European American Bank, all of New York; Bank of America, Crocker National Bank, First Interstate Bank of California, and Security Pacific National Bank, all of California.

Also, First National Bank of Chicago and National Westminster Bank Group, also of Chicago; Republic-Bank Dallas and Interfirst Bank Dallas; Texas Commerce Bank and First City National Bank, both of Houston; Mellon Bank of Pittsburgh; Marine Midland Bank of Buffalo, N.Y.; and First National Bank of St. Paul, Minn.

In addition were four Canadian banks, Bank of Nova Scotia, Toronto Dominion Bank, Royal Bank of Canada and Bank of Montreal; and the Bank of Scotland.

Banking official expects more Texas banks to fail

DALLAS (AP) — State Banking Commissioner James Sexton said several more bank failures can be expected in the state this year.

"We've had eight failures already, and there were just 12 failures for all of 1985," Sexton said Tuesday. "I wouldn't be surprised if we had 15 to 17 bank failures in Texas for 1986."

Of Texas' 1,936 banks, Sexton predicted that about 60 to 70 are unable to maintain capital at 6 percent of assets, the level required by federal regulators, the Dallas Times Herald reported.

In March, regulators with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. eased the capital rules for banks with a high percentage of loans in energy and agriculture, allowing such institutions to apply to operate on as little as 3 percent capital if their problems could be traced to economic conditions and not bad management.

Sexton began a similar program in Texas, extending it to all banks with capital problems, regardless of loan portfolio composition.

However, only one Texas bank has applied for and been granted capital forebearance, Sexton said.

Nationwide, 75 to 80 of the country's 14,440 commercial banks have taken advantage of the forebearance program, according to William Bosies, who handles federal agency relations for the American Bankers Association in Washington.

Sexton said the FDIC recently loaned some Kansas investors the money needed to purchase a failed bank in that state because no other purchasers could be found. He speculated that the same approach might be tried in Texas.

Restaurateurs capitalize on slow economic times to expand

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

In tough economic times, the survivors are those who take what opportunity gives them and work with it. That is the philosophy of three Midland entrepreneurs — a philosophy allowing them to open two new businesses this year.

Greg Eidson and Mike Riek, who opened Ocean's Seafood & Steaks in February, are getting together again to open Cassidy's Rib House. They will be joined in the venture by Kenny Ho, owner of the Golden China restaurant at Mission Square Plaza.

With more than 40 years of combined restaurant management experience, the group have set a tentative opening date of July 7 for the restaurant in the location that formerly housed Peoples' Restaurant. They plan to serve barbecued ribs, brisket, chicken, sausage and ham.

With many businesses feeling the pinch of the slow economy and several Midland restaurants closing their doors, it is unique to find someone willing to risk a new venture. "We wouldn't have been able to do this if the economy was not slow. We were able to make a deal on the lease that we could never have swung when business was booming," said Riek.

Eidson agreed, "We have benefited from the slow down, but I think we can give something back to the community and people can benefit from an affordable and enjoyable place to dine out."

The three partners point out that they have gone into the new business without spending a great deal of money. "Many times people make the mistake of buying (or leasing) a place like this and then jumping in and spending $100,000 to remodel and create an atmosphere and a concept to be identified with their restaurant," noted Riek.

"We are not going at it like that. We are using the place basically like it was when it was Peoples'. We were able to lease not only the building, but the equipment, furnishings and fixtures," he added.

Ho feels that people in Midland will continue to dine out even in tough times, and his Golden China, located in the same shopping area as the new Cassidy's, is proof of that. "When I opened Golden China, we had two sections for seating. In the last year, we have increased that area to four sections, and sales are up due to the additional seating."

Riek is no stranger to expansion either. His original Ocean's on Neely became the springboard for the larger Ocean's Seafood & Steaks on Big Spring. Partnered with Eidson, they have seen the new seafood restaurant grow beyond any expectation they had, and in a location that had proved unprofitable for several other restaurants. "Immediately after opening, our business was increased by 30 percent and we had to cut the bar area in half to get additional seating," Eidson said.

All three men agree that good food and service, coupled with reasonable prices, have allowed them to be successful in their businesses. "Midland is saturated with exclusive places to eat. With three country clubs and three private dining clubs, we are looking to keep our prices in line with the middle class. Conceivably, a person will be able to afford to come eat at Cassidy's a couple of times a week. Average check tabs will be in the $5 to $8 range," stated Riek.

Even though Midland has no shortage of barbecue restaurants, the three businessmen still feel they can fill a niche with a more formalized sit-down service, several barbecue entrees on the menu, a 50-item salad bar and full liquor service. The restauratuers said the salad bar, complete with desserts, will be unique to barbecue dining.

The group plans to do very little advertising, depending on word-of-mouth to bring customers into Cassidy's. Says Riek: "Word-of-mouth will either make or break a business. Most people won't tell you if there was something wrong with their food or service; but they will tell all their friends if they had a bad experience at a restaurant. I have found that if people really like a place, they will tell five or six others about it — if they don't like a place, they'll tell 20 others."

The new establishment will hire about 50 employees and be open seven days a week.

Babysitting service now open at the mall

By MELLA McEWEN

Midlander Judy Greer decided to open FUN TIMES, a drop-in sitting service located in the mall, for two reasons: she has been shopping with her kids, and she wanted to find a job. Her new store is handy for parents who want to shop, go to a movie or even get a haircut.

Greer accepts newborns through 8 years, and is currently having a Sesquicentennial special on fees. She keeps two employes at Fun Times during the week, and three on weekends. The service is open during mall hours, except for Fridays, when it stays open until 10 p.m. "to encourage parents to go to the movies."

Parents are given beepers in case [illegible] but are asked not to leave the premises until Greer receives a clarification from the Deparment of Human Resources on what "on or near the premises" means.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Four wells added to Mitchell field

From Staff Reports

MOBIL PRODUCING TX & NM, INC. reports four new producers in the Iatan East Howard field of Mitchell County, all on the Mary Foster lease.

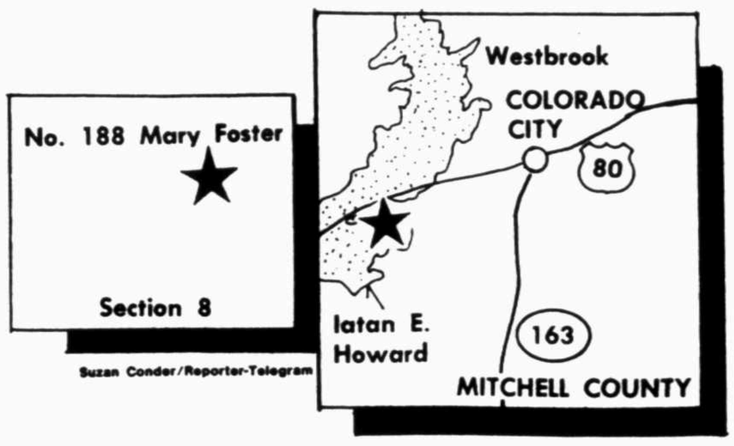

On potential test, the No. 188 Mary Foster pumped 95 barrels of 28.6 gravity crude, 1 Mcfd and 266 barrels of water from perforations 2,482 to 3,152 ft.

The No. 187 Mary Foster was finaled to pump 24 barrels of 28.6 gravity crude, 1 Mcfd and 278 barrels of water from perforations 2,396 to 3,157 ft.

Mobil tested the No. 190 Mary Foster to pump 8 barrels of 28.6 gravity crude, 1 Mcfd and 64 barrels of water from perforations 2,363 to 2,857 ft.

Also, the No. 192 Mary Foster was completed to pump 45 barrels of 28.6 gravity crude, 1 Mcfd and no water from perforations 2,485 to 3,410 ft.

All four wells are located in Block 29, T-1-S, T&P survey.

Mobil reports another Spraberry producer

Mobil also completed another producer in the Spraberry Trend area of Midland County.

The No. 6 TXL "N" was finaled to pump 88 barrels of 39 gravity crude, 60 Mcfd and 38 barrels of water from perforations 8,577 to 9,252 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,600 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid and fractured with 99,000 gallons of gel and 162,000 lbs. 20/40 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 682:1.

Drilled to 9,300 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 9,290 ft.

The well topped the Spraberry at 7,164 ft., Dean at 8,549, and the Wolfcamp at 8,741 ft. on ground elevation of 2,700 ft. Pay was topped at 8,577 ft.

Location is 669 ft. from north and 672 ft. from west lines of Section 29, Block 37, T-4-S, T&P survey, 20 miles south of Midland.

Means field gains five barrel producer

N.B.N. EXPLORATION, INC., Odessa, has completed a third well on the Nichols Sisterload lease in Andrews County.

Completed in the Means field, the No. 3 Nichols Sisterload was potentialed for five barrels of 28.5 gravity crude and 29 barrels of water. Production is from perforations 4,824 to 4,862 ft., which had been acidized with 250 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid.

Drilled to a total depth of 5,000 ft., the well was plugged back to 4,880 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 4,998 ft.

The well topped the San Andres at 4,948 ft. on ground elevation of 3,185 ft. Pay was topped at 4,814 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from north and 1,988 ft. from east lines of Section 1, Block A-36, PSL survey, 9.1 miles northwest of Andrews.

Judge enters order against Phillips in homeowners case

AMARILLO (UPI) — Phillips Petroleum Co. has been ordered by a federal judge not to destroy any more documents relating to a suit against the oil company by homeowners in the town of Phillips, who are seeking to stop evictions from their homes.

U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson entered the order after ruling that Phillips Petroleum last month did destroy documents relating to the case. The judge refused to find the company in contempt as the homeowners had asked.

In a closed-door meeting, Robinson ordered both parties to come to an agreement about the documents before she entered the order.

In a motion filed two weeks ago, lawyers for the homeowners charged that employees working for a construction company under contract to Phillips on May 28 and 29 removed large numbers of documents from the Phillips camp department and burned them. The lawyers said some of the papers were relevant to the suit. Although the company was not found in contempt by the judge, Robinson did order Phillips not to destroy any personnel, tax, real estate and claims office documents pertaining to the small Hutchinson County town in Phillips offices in Borger, Phillips or Bartlesville, Okla., while the suit is active. The order also gives the homeowners' lawyers the right to inspect any other documents before they are thrown away.

The oil company has ordered residents of the company town to relocate before the end of the year. Company officials say they want the land for possible expansion.

Although some homeowners have taken advantage of a moving assistance plan offered by the company, others have filed a class action suit seeking to stop the evictions and asking for damages for all homeowners on the grounds that the company engaged in racketeering and violated numerous federal laws.

Pennzoil's Liedtke presses for import fee, $22 barrel minimum

SAN ANTONIO (SWN) — Stating that the oil industry is "engaged in a struggle for survival" and that its problems "threaten the economic vitality of the entire nation," Pennzoil Chairman Hugh Liedtke has called for an import fee setting the minimum price of oil at $22 per barrel.

Speaking at the Energy Good Scout dinner here, Liedtke said Mexico should be exempt from the fee.

"Lacking such a fee," he said, "if Mexico can't pay its debts, eventually the American people indirectly will have to shoulder the burden of paying off Mexican bank loans."

Implementation of such a fee, he said, "would provide not only regional and money center banks a new stability, but also bring that same stability to the multitude of service, supply and other companies closely tied to the oil industry."

Liedtke also called for a return to traditional standards of morality in over business dealings.

"Ours is fast becoming the era of the fast buck artist and the shady dealer, of eroding standards of honesty and fair play," he told the group.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Howell initiates Main Pass offshore gas sales

HOUSTON (SWN) — Howell Corp. announced initial sales of natural gas from its Main Pass Block 64 production platform. Sales of 10.2 million cubic feet (MMcf) per day of natural gas began on June 14 to SNG Trading, a unit of Sonat, Inc., at a price of $1.70 per thousand cubic feet (Mcf).

Howell Petroleum Corp. is the operator of Main Pass Block 64 and holds a 62.5 percent working interest. The sales agreement was negotitated by Howell Gas Management Co. and will continue for at least 90 days, under the provisions of a limited term "certificate to transport" application approved on June 13 by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

Triton devalues reserves by nearly 10 percent

DALLAS (SWN) — Triton Energy Corp. announced that it is reducing the book value of its U.S. oil and gas properties by $18 million, or nine percent of the $200 million total net book value of the company's worldwide reserves, at the third fiscal quarter ended February 28, 1986. The reduction is in accordance with the Securities and Exchange Commission's position that oil and gas properties must be written down and charged against earnings on a quarterly basis if the carrying value of those properties exceeds current values as determined by SEC guidelines.

NL Industries files suit against uninvited suitor

NEW YORK (UPI) — NL Industries Inc. said it is filing suit against Harold Simmons, who owns 17 percent of its 60 million outstanding shares and wants to buy the rest, and Coniston Partners, an investment group whose acquisition overtures to NL last spring were rebuffed.

The lawsuit charges that Coniston sold its 4.5 percent holding in NL to Simmons, a Dallas-based investor, in contravention of a standstill agreement concluded in April, said Joseph M. Garrison, NL director of investor relations.

Garrison said Coniston agreed not to buy any more NL shares and not to sell their holding to any person who would thereafter own more than 5 percent of the company's stock.

Ratex loses money, directors in second quarter

OKLAHOMA CITY (SWN) — Ratex Resources Inc., formerly Deep Gas Exploration, Inc., released unaudited financial information for the three month period ended March 31, 1986, and announced its default on three separate loans, in the total principal amount of $1,528,000, triggering default provisions under the company's loan agreement with its primary lender. Although terms of the various loan agreements provide for acceleration of the respective debts, no demand has yet been made by any lender.

For the second quarter of fiscal year 1986, the company reported an unaudited net loss of $2,473,230, or ($1.12) per share, of which $1,970,000 was attributable to a write-down of the company's investment in its oil and gas properties.

Separately, Ratex announced the resignations of five directors from the company's board of directors. Resignations were tendered by Jess Harris, Jr. on April 30; Ran Ricks, Jr. and James J. Kelly on May 1; Homer O. Croasmun on May 5; and John J. Harvey on June 13.

Inexco stockholders to vote on LL&E merger

HOUSTON (SWN) — Inexco Oil Co. announced that a special meeting of its stockholders would be held July 22 to vote on the proposed merger between Inexco and a subsidiary of Louisiana Land & Exploration Co. (LL&E). The proxy materials were scheduled to be mailed on or about June 23, to stockholders of record on June 20.

FOCUS on BUSINESS

For years, photographers have been putting film in their cameras. The Fuji Film Co. of Japan has decided to market their film with a camera in it. A model displays a box of Fuji 110 color film equipped with a small plastic lens ready to take pictures right off the shelf.

Birth control for roaches

Birth control is the latest weapon in scientists' war against the pesky insect that is one of the hardest house-hold pests to get rid of — the cockroach.

Cockroaches have existed for millions of years, primarily because of their adaptibility and especially their ability to develop a resistance to most poisions.

Researchers at the Department of Agriculture are trying out a birth control spray that is supposed to sterilize the pests. The main ingredient in the spray — developed by Dr. Carl Djerassi, a chemistry professor at Stanford University and the man who first synthesized the birth control pill for humans — is a synthetic insect hormone called hydroprene.

When immature roaches were exposed to the spray, they developed into adults with a number of abnormalities, including an inability to produce eggs, reported an Agriculture Department spokesman.

Another new development on the roach front, a toxic bait resembling a "kind of oatmeal cookie enclosed in a child-proof container" has produced extremely good test results according to researchers.

Detecting wallpaper

BFGoodrich Co. says its Koroseal wallcovering line is now formulated to provide an advance warning of fire before there is smoke or open flame in a room where the product is installed.

The company said the development, called the Early Warning Effect, will "emit a colorless, odorless and harmless vapor that will activate ionization-type smoke detectors" when heated to 300 degrees Fahrenheit.

Nearly 85 percent of the smoke detectors in commercial use in the United States are ionization-type detectors, which use ions, or charged particles, to detect smoke, the company said.

BFGoodrich said the early warning effect could be triggered by such things as electrical outlet overloads that heat wall surfaces, electrical fires in walls by fires started in other rooms and other situations where smoke and fire danger may not be readily detected.

Snail farming

California's snail farmers are facing some unique problems — such as how to keep the delicacies from crawling away.

Tracy Brash and Mike Beyrles are snail farmers who process about 300,000 snails a month, mostly through their own cannery.

The snails are fed a special diet of bran and soymeal, then starved in order to cleanse their digestive systems. After being cleaned, the slimy crop is sent to the cannery or shipped fresh to gourmet restaurants.

Brash has high hopes for the business's future, based on the fact $230 million worth of escargot is imported annually.

Philip Morris cancels deal to sell Seven-Up

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Philip Morris Cos. said Tuesday that it had ended its agreement to sell its Seven-Up Co. to Pepsico Inc. because of opposition by the Federal Trade Commission.

Meanwhile, the FTC filed suit in Federal District Court here to block the proposed takeover of the Dr Pepper Co. by the Coca-Cola Co.

In response, Coca-Cola agreed to delay the purchase of Dr Pepper stock until the end of court hearings scheduled to begin July 16 in Washington.

The actions were part of the struggle for control of the nation's carbonated soft-drink market, dominated by the industry's two intensely competitive leaders — Coke, with 39 percent of the market, and Pepsi, with 29 percent.

Last Friday, the trade commission voted unanimously to oppose both mergers, which would have given Coke and Pepsi a combined market-share of more than 80 percent. Seven Up and Dr Pepper, the No. 3 and No. 4 soft-drink companies, each has about 7 percent of the market.

Antitrust experts said the FTC's vote was the strongest action taken by the Reagan administration against a corporate merger and was the first time the administration had clearly defined the limits of its laissez-faire antitrust policies.

While Philip Morris, which bought Seven-Up in 1978 for $515 million, said it was still seeking a buyer, analysts predicted that any purchaser would face a daunting task trying to recapture Seven-Up's falling market share. They said few beverage concerns had the marketing clout to match either Coke or Pepsi in the soft-drink market and to rejuvenate the Seven-Up line.

"If Philip Morris, one of the nation's great consumer marketing companies, with a bankroll that could choke a horse, cannot beat Coke's or Pepsi's distribution system, I would be hard pressed to say what buyer could," said George E. Thompson, beverage analyst for Prudential-Bache Securities. Thompson predicted the "Seven-Up brand will continue deterioriating at a fairly rapid pace."

Sources close to the merger talks said that Philip Morris was concerned that litigation, which could take several months, would reduce Seven-Up's value to another potential bidder. "Seven-Up is in bad shape and Philip Morris could not afford to leave it in limbo much longer," one source said.

Wall Street sources speculated about possible buyers for Seven-Up, including Anheuser-Busch and the Seagram Co. But a source close to Seagram said there was "little possibility" the company would be interested. Anheuser-Busch declined to comment.

"The Federal Trade Commission threatened to take the matter to court, and we've decided to terminate the agreement," said George Knox, director of communications for Philip Morris, the cigarette and consumer products company.

"We're disappointed that the FTC objected to the acquisition," said James Griffith, a spokesman for Pepsico. "We think clearly that Pepsico had the best chance of rejuvenating the Seven Up brand." Griffith added that Pepsi was still interested in buying Seven Up's international operations.

In its short filing seeking a preliminary injunction against the proposed $470 million acquisition of Dr Pepper by Coke, the FTC argued that any combination of the two would increase market concentration in certain unspecified geographic areas, make entry by other companies into those markets more difficult and ease "collusion among participatants in the relevant markets."

The commission also argued that other companies' cost of doing business would rise and competitiveness would decline, "all of which increase the likelihood that firms in the market will increase prices and restrict output of carbonated soft drinks."

Opinion was divided on the chances of the Coke-Dr Pepper merger. Some analysts predicted that Coke would call off the deal, even though the company indicated today that it planned to follow through. "Their plan was to frustrate the Pepsi-Seven-Up deal in the first place," asserted Martin Romm, analyst at the First Boston Corp.

Others predicted that with the cancellation of the Pepsi sale, the Coke-Dr Pepper merger would mean less market concentration and might therefore be less objectionable to the administration and the courts.

The sources said the FTC's opposition, as well as a temporary restraining order granted last week by a Federal District Court in Columbus, Ga., in a case filed by the Royal Crown Cos. pressed Philip Morris to act. They said the company had exercised a clause in the agreement that allowed it to cancel anytime after June 1 if the merger had not been completed by then.

Mexico seeking agreement on debt payments

New York Times News Service

MEXICO CITY — Mexico's new finance minister, Gustavo Petricioli, said Monday night that the country could no longer maintain "strict" servicing of its foreign debt because of the sharp drop in its oil revenues.

In his first news conference since succeeding Jesus Silva Herzog last week, Petricioli also said he was exploring "transitory mechanisms" to protect the country's foreign reserves pending a long-term agreement with its creditors.

Although Petricioli did not clarify his remarks, financial experts here interpreted them as meaning that Mexico will seek a temporary suspension of at least a part of the $1.8 billion coming due for payment in July.

In recent weeks, many foreign bankers have said that they expected Mexico would need to negotiate some short-term relief along these lines and they viewed such an arrangement as a preferable alternative to a unilateral moratorium on payments.

Petricioli said that Mexico had managed to avoid an economic collapse and a huge loss in reserves over the past five months but that no progress had been made in negotiations with the country's creditors.

In response to a question, he also confirmed that he held lengthy talks on the Mexican crisis here last Saturday with Juan Sourrouille, the economy minister of Argentina, another Latin American nation struggling to maintain its debt obligations.

Mexico, which owes $97 billion abroad, was last forced to suspend interest payments in 1982, but its financial situation appeared to be on the way to recovery until falling oil prices wiped out an estimatd $6 billion in export revenues this year.

Mexico is now seeking a new "standby" agreement with the International Monetary Fund which it hopes will be followed by completion of a $5 billion to $6 billion "rescue" package currently being organized by the Reagan administration.

But the government has repeatedly insisted that these new resources should be dedicated to stimulating a domestic economic recovery rather than being used simply to cover interest payments.

"We are aiming for reasonable and equitable debt servicing based not on what we owe but on what we can pay," Petricioli said, adding that this was clearly linked to the world price of oil. "As oil prices improve, so will our capacity to pay," he said.

Petricioli and top financial aides, including Jose Angel Gurria, Mexico's principal debt negotiator, are expected to fly to Washington this week for talks with the IMF, United States officials and foreign bankers.

Accompanied at Monday night's news conference by the planning and budget minister, Carlos Salinas de Gortari, Petricioli gave special emphasis to Mexico's determination to resume its economic growth in 1987 and 1988 based on a "new attitude" toward the debt problem.

Tenneco will cut volume of gas sales

HOUSTON (UPI) — Tenneco Oil Exploration and Production will reduce its volume of natural gas sales on the spot market starting July 1, officials announced Tuesday.

Tenneco has been selling on the spot markets since 1983 and often sells more than 500 million cubic feet of natural gas daily. Following the example of several other companies, Tenneco officials said the move was prompted by a dramatic decrease in gas prices.

Tenneco anticipates the removal of about 80 million cubic feet of natural gas per day from the spot market, but might make adjustments baed on close monitoring of the market.

Car sales gain 5 percent over year ago figures

DETROIT (UPI) — Domestic car sales were up 5 percent in the middle 10 days of June when compared with the same period last year, industry figures showed Tuesday.

General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co., Chrysler Corp., American Motors Corp., Volkswagen of America and Honda Motor Co. sold 251,842 cars during the June 11-20 period, compared with 239,739 for the comparable 1985 period.

GM sales for the period were up 11.2 percent, while Honda's were up 10 percent and Chrysler's 8 percent. Ford sales were off 7.1 percent, while AMC sales plunged 39 percent and VWA's sales slumped 19.1 percent.

For the month to date, the five companies have sold 470,089 cars in the United States, up 3.2 percent from 455,554 cars sold in the June 1-20 period of 1985.

Sales for the year to date, however, are down 6 percent. The five companies have sold 3,848,654 vehicles so far this year compared with 4,090,195 a year earlier.

WHITE

White also noted that the national trade deficit is running more than $7 billion higher in the first quarter this year than it was in the first three months of 1985.

"Twenty states in the heartland of America — from North Dakota to Texas and from Missouri to Wyoming — now find themselves in the middle of an economic recession. Nearly 10 percent of the workforce in those states are unemployed," he said.

White for months has unsuccessfully urged President Reagan to impose an emergency tariff on imported oil as crude oil prices have fallen to their lowest levels in years.

The April summit, attended by several other oil state governors, led to a later White House meeting between some of the governors and President Regan. White, however, was not invited.

"For us to wait around for the prices (of oil) to go up because of the whim of someone in the Middle East is a terrible way to run the most critical part of our nation's defense and that's our fuel industry," White said.

"You can not just walk away from this problem. There has to be a solution to it," White said after the meeting. "It's becoming more critical every day. The administration can't ignore it. It won't just go away."

Gasoline supply continues increase

NEW YORK (UPI) — The nation's gasoline stocks increased for the seventh straight week but there were signs that the unexpected and unseasonal buildup may be peaking, according to a report by the American Petroleum Industry.

In most years, gasoline supplies decline during the peak driving season that begins with the Memorial Day weekend. But stocks increased to 228.6 million barrels in the week that ended June 20, up from 227.9 million in the previous week and 215.4 million in the corresponding week last year, according to the oil industry trade group.

Despite the modest overall increase, supplies of unleaded gasoline, which accounts for more than 70 percent of the market, fell slightly, dropping to 119.4 million barrels from 120.1 million last week but ahead of 102.3 million last year.

Part of the unleaded decline was the result of lower imports, most of which are unleaded gasoline. Imports were 160,000 barrels per day, down from 304,000 the week before and 321,000 the previous year.

Gasoline production inched up to 7.2 million barrels a day from 7.1 million barrels the week before and 6.7 million daily barrels in the previous year's corresponding week.

Distillate supplies, including home heating oil and diesel fuel, continued their normal seasonal buildup. Stocks were 103.5 million barrels, up from 101.4 million barrels in the previous week but below the 108.6 million recorded last year.

Mesa acquisition of Pioneer approved

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Mesa Limited Partnership unit holders and Pioneer Corp. shareholders have approved Mesa's acquisition of Pioneer, officials announced Tuesday.

The acquisition means that Pioneer will receive about 61 million newly created preference-A units of Mesa in exchange for Pioneer's assets and liabilities, said T. Boone Pickens, Mesa general partner.

Pioneer will distribute to its shareholders 1.84 preference-A units in exchange for each share of Pioneer common stock and will distribute 31 cents per share as a liquidating distribution.

"We are delighted both Mesa unitholders and Pioneer shareholders have given their overwhelming support to the acquisition proposal," Pickens said.

The preference-A units are entitled to a cumulative first right to quarterly cash distributions in a $1.50 annual amount.

Pickens said that the addition of Pioneer's oil and gas properties, most of which are located in the West Texas Panhandle field, further consolidates Mesa's operations in the Amarillo area.

About 75 percent of Mesa's reserves are now located in the West Panhandle and Houston fields, he said.

Evidence of humans in Americas 32,000 years

By THOMAS H. MAUGH II
Los Angeles Times

French researchers have found new evidence that man has lived in South America for at least 32,000 years, suggesting that Asians migrated across what is now the Bering Straits to the Americas more than twice as long ago as is currently believed.

The new report, published in Thursday's issue of the British journal Nature, is the latest piece of evidence in what has often been an acrimonious scientific dispute about when the first settlers arrived on this continent. Previous studies suggested that Asians crossed the Bering Land Bridge more than 50,000 years ago, but all of those studies "have been discredited for technical and other reasons," according to University of California, Los Angeles anthropologist Gayle Kennedy.

"If (the French researchers) have solid evidence," Kennedy said, "this is a very important discovery."

Archaeological sites normally are dated by analysis of charcoal and other carbon-containing artifacts. All living organisms incorporate radioactive carbon-14 into biological molecules. Scientists know how much carbon-14 is in an organism when it dies and how fast the carbon-14 is converted to nonradioactive forms.

By measuring how much carbon-14 is left in an artifact, therefore, it is possible to tell how long ago an organism lived or an artifact was made.

Currently, the oldest accepted site of human activity in the Americas is at Monte Verde in Chile, which dates back approximately 13,000 years. The oldest artifacts in California date from about 10,000 years ago, according to oceanographer Jeffrey L. Bada of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography.

Many scientists, such as anthropologist Christy G. Turner II of Arizona State University, believe that the oldest residents of this continent migrated from Asia roughly 15,000 years ago — just about the time that glaciers were receding from the last ice age.

Subsequent waves of migration were thought to have occurred 6,000 and 4,000 years ago.

The new evidence, however, suggests that man immigrated here a much longer time ago and that small pockets of population persisted during the ice age.

Since 1973, French and Brazilian archaeologists have been excavating an ancient rockshelter in Boqueirao da Pedro Furada, a plateau in the state of Piaui on the northeastern coast of Brazil. More than 200 similar caves decorated with wall paintings have been discovered on the plateau.

Anthropologist N. Guidon of the Graduate School of Social Sciences in Paris participated in excavations at the site and collected charcoal from four separate hearths that had been used intermittently by the prehistoric occupants of the cave. He also collected charcoal on small pieces of rock that had flaked off the wall paintings in the cave.

These charcoal samples were analyzed by G. Delibrias of the Center for National Research in Science at Gif-sur-Yvette.

Guidon and Delibrias reported in Nature that the newest of the 17 charcoal samples they analyzed was about 6,000 years old and that the oldest was about 32,000. Fragments of charcoal from a wall painting were found to be 17,000 years old, which "makes the site of Pedra Furada the most ancient (painted cave) site in America, and one of the most ancient in the world."

Significantly, stone tools were found associated with each of the hearths, and the evolutionary refinement of the tools matches the historical sequence identified by radiocarbon dating.

Most anthropologists contacted by the Los Angeles Times were reluctant to draw conclusions about the new report because they had not yet seen it and because there have been so many previous reports that have turned out to be wrong.

"We just lost a date in the Yukon that looked very good for 27,000 years," said UCLA's Kennedy. "The scientists redid their dating and found that the new date was only a fraction of the old."

"In the past," said geologist Vance Haynes of the University of Arizona, "when it came down to critical examination of the evidence for older sites, the dates haven't held up. The possibility (that some of the sites are older) is there, but it's not something you want to pick up and run with."

Astronaut corps copes with Challenger disaster

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The elite crew who flies America's space machines has not been spared the shock and the self-examination that jolted NASA after the Challenger disaster.

The accident grounded the shuttle fleet and sent the National Aeronautics and Space Administration into an agony of scrutiny, both from within and without.

In one moment, 5 percent of the nation's trained space explorers were gone. For the astronauts left behind, there was grief and anger, followed by a growing realization that many of their own dreams also died when Challenger exploded 73 seconds into its Jan. 28 flight.

Six astronauts have since left the corps and at least two others are preparing to go. One died in an airplane accident and another has been removed from flight status.

From an exclusive club that once numbered 102, the astronaut ranks have been reduced to 88. And the number is slipping.

Some, like Owen Garriott, 56, who resigned June 12 after 20 years, are leaving because they no longer want to wait for another space flight.

"There's no question that the long delay in the flight schedule is the primary reason that I've decided I'd rather be in space activities on the outside than wait for the possibility of another flight," Garriott said.

Garriott made two flights. He had been scheduled to make a science flight this year, but that was scrubbed after the disaster.

"It will be at least a year and a half before the first flight," Garriott said, "and another year or two beyond that before we're flying a science mission."

James van Hoften, 42, a two-flight veteran who is leaving next month, said the waiting also shaped his thinking.

"If I were to wait two or three more years, I would have one more flight," he said, "but people (in industry) aren't interested in how many times you have flown.

"At my age, I feel I'm at a perfect time to transition into a whole new line of work," said van Hoften, who is going to work for Bechtel Inc. in San Francisco.

Robert Overmyer, 49, resigned June 1, saying, "Opportunities on the outside were more appealing to me than they were in the government."

Overmyer, who retired as an Air Force colonel, was caught in an economic reality that affects all senior military astronauts.

Astronauts are not promoted beyond the rank of colonel in the Air Force, Army or Marine Corps, or beyond captain in the Navy. The military astronaut must return to regular military service to advance in rank, or face mandatory retirement.

Some have chosen to leave the military and take civilian astronaut jobs, which carry a big pay cut. A Navy captain in the astronaut corps now receives about $58,700 annually, counting flight pay and housing allowances. A civilian astronaut without a medical degree starts at $42,653. A medical degree adds about $8,000 to the civilian rate.

To private industry, particularly aerospace industries, astronauts are prized employees. One recently retired astronaut said he was routinely receiving $4,000 for five days of consulting work.

Canker symptoms found in mature citrus grove trees

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Citrus canker may have infected producing grove trees for the first time since the bacterial disease was discovered in the state nearly two years ago, state officials say.

The appearance of canker symptoms on navel orange and grapefruit trees in a grove near Palmetto followed the discovery of similar symptoms on 227 trees in 138 private yards on Anna Maria Island.

Tests necessary to verify a canker infection take several days, but lesions on the leaves, fruit and stems appear to be the type caused by canker, officials said.

Citrus canker is harmless to humans and to the state's largest citrus crop — juice pulp. But it causes fruit to drop early, weakens trees and scars fruit.

Citrus Canker Project spokesman Vicky Boyd said Friday that lesions thought to be canker were found throughout a 20-acre block in a mature grove near Palmetto. She refused to identify the grove, but The Ledger newspaper in Lakeland reported that it was owned by Manatee Fruit Co.

"Right now, the block is quarantined and we are continuing to survey around it to see if any adjacent blocks or groves are infected," Boyd said. "This is definitely quite severe. We're just hoping it has not spread."

Walter Preston, president of Manatee Fruit Co., said the company called agriculture officials last week after reports that canker was suspected on trees and, for the first time, edible fruit, at several properties on nearby Anna Maria Island and in two locations in St. Petersburg.

If canker is confirmed, it would mark the first time since the disease appeared in Ward's Nursery in August 1984 that it has been found in mature, producing grove trees.

Previously, the disease was found in 18 citrus nurseries and on rootsprouts in two non-producing groves. Since the canker campaign began, more than 10 million trees from infected nurseries have been destroyed.

Florida Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner said he was not all that surprised that canker may have been found in a commercial grove.

"We were more surprised we had not found it up to this point," Conner said.

If tests confirm the presence of canker, infected trees would be destroyed by burning and those for two rows around them would be defoliated as a precaution.

BANANAS....For Active People!

A change in eating habits does not happen overnight. It takes commitment and determination to identify what's best for you and to stay on the route to a moderate and balanced diet.

Seemingly "magic" formulas, crash diets or fads simply don't result in long-term solutions to weight control and fitness. It takes a balanced approach: moderate intake of a variety of foods coupled with regular exercise.

Fortunately, an array of satisfying, nutritious foods and creative recipes are still within your reach once you gain a solid awareness of the basics for healthful eating. Learn about calorie content, find out which foods give you only "empty" calories, which foods contain more fats than others and which foods supply the highest satiety with the most nutrients. Put the basics into practice with your food selection and your eating habits will take a gradual turn for the better. For example: substitute fruit for pastry on your coffee break; eat whole-grain breads and vegetables, add flavor to foods with herbs, spices and flavorful vinegars instead of heavy sauces and condiments.

Foods arranged with attention to shapes and colors will please all the senses; variety and aesthetics can make dining intriguing enough to keep you from falling back into old habits.

Here are recipes that use bananas to illustrate the variety you can have with just one fruit: a hearty chewy bran muffin, nutritious blender drinks, a tasty chicken salad and a light, refreshing dessert.

Bananas are one of the most convenient, nutrient-rich foods available. At 101 calories, a medium-size banana makes a satisfying snack when eaten out-of-hand. Also, bananas add vitamin A, an abundance of potassium, plus fiber to your diet. Extra potassium is especially important after a strenuous workout when your body needs to replace lost nutrients. Bananas are a terrific food to include in an active life—one based on that simple formula of moderation, variety, exercise and creative cooking.

BACKPACK BANANA MUFFINS

2 extra-ripe, large Bananas, peeled
1 cup whole bran cereal (not flakes)
1/4 cup milk
2 eggs
1 cup brown sugar, packed
1/2 cup butter, melted
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1-1/4 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon salt

Slice bananas into blender. Whir until puréed (1-1/4 cups). Mix bran and milk to soften slightly. Add mixture to blender along with eggs, sugar, butter and vanilla. Whir and stir until well mixed. Combine remaining ingredients. Pour in banana mixture. Stir until just blended. Pour into greased muffin pan cups. Bake in 350° F oven 25 to 30 minutes. Makes 12 muffins.

BANANA FRUIT SMOOTHIE

*2 extra-ripe Bananas, frozen
1 can (6 oz. or 3/4 cup) pineapple juice
1 cup seedless grapes
1 cup strawberries
2 egg whites

Slice bananas into blender. Add juice; whir until just mixed. Add remaining ingredients. Whir until smooth. Serves 2 to 3. (Recipe may be doubled.)

*Peel bananas, place in plastic bag and freeze overnight.

PEANUT CHICKEN SALAD

3 medium Bananas, peeled
3 cups cooked chunked chicken
1/2 cup sliced celery
1/3 cup peanuts
2 tablespoons chopped green onion
Spicy Lite Dressing
Crisp salad greens
2 apples, cored, sliced
2 oranges, peeled, sliced

Dice 1 banana; combine with chicken, celery, peanuts and onion. Stir in Spicy Lite Dressing. Refrigerate 15 minutes to blend flavors. Mound onto salad plates lined with salad greens. Slice remaining bananas; arrange with apples and oranges on each plate. Serves 4.

SPICY LITE DRESSING: Combine 1/2 cup plain yogurt, 2 tablespoons mayonnaise, 1 clove pressed garlic, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon ground cumin and 1/4 teaspoon ground ginger.

BANANA PEANUT SMOOTHIE

(Not Illustrated)

*2 extra-ripe Bananas, frozen
2 cups nonfat milk
2 tablespoons honey
2 tablespoons peanut butter
1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon

Slice bananas into blender. Add remaining ingredients. Whir until smooth. Serves 2 to 3.

*Peel bananas, place in plastic bag and freeze overnight.

BANANA-ORANGE YOGURT TART

(Not Illustrated)

3 extra-ripe, large Bananas, peeled
1 cup orange juice
4 teaspoons unflavored gelatin
2 cartons (8 oz. each) vanilla yogurt
1 tablespoon grated orange peel
1 tablespoon brown sugar
Gingersnap Crust
1 teaspoon cornstarch
1 firm Banana, peeled, sliced
1 large orange, peeled, sectioned

Purée 3 extra-ripe bananas in blender (1-1/2 cups.) Pour 1/2 cup orange juice into medium saucepan. Sprinkle gelatin over juice to soften. Heat mixture until gelatin dissolves. Cool slightly. Stir in puréed bananas, yogurt, orange peel and sugar. Set saucepan over bowl of ice water to thicken slightly, but not until firm. Stir occasionally. Turn thickened mixture into Gingersnap Crust. Chill until firm overnight. Meanwhile, combine remaining 1/2 cup orange juice with cornstarch. Cook until sauce boils and thickens. Cool. When ready to serve, garnish tart with sliced firm banana and orange sections. Spoon cooled orange sauce over top to serve. Serves 6 to 8.

GINGERSNAP CRUST: Combine 1-1/2 cups gingersnap crumbs and 1/4 cup melted butter. Press in 9-inch tart pan with removable bottom. Bake in 400° F oven 7 minutes. Cool completely.

For more Banana recipes, send stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dept. FBB, Dole Consumer Center, P.O. Box 7758, San Francisco CA 94120.

Pojoaque produces peppers

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

POJOAQUE, N.M. — Espanola No. 9, New Mexico No. 6 and Rio Grande No. 9: Here, people speak of peppers by name, reverently almost. And it is here, in the Rio Grande valley, that some gift of climate, air and nature produces chile peppers of perfection.

"It's quite different from the chile to the south of here," said Peter Casados, who makes a living in nearby El Guique producing, packaging and selling native products, mostly chile and corn. There are two official state vegetables here: chile (technically a fruit) and the pinto bean. There are certainly no chiles like this chile, New Mexican chile, in the San Luis Valley of Colorado, where Eduardo Archuleta grew up.

"My dad married my mother because of her chiles," said his son, Alonzo, 35. "Both my grandparents were sheepherders, and they grazed their sheep on common fields on the New Mexico-Colorado border. In the winter when they came and put the sheep away, my mother's father would ask my father to come visit." New Mexico chile worked its addictive spell on Eduardo.

Today, 10 children later, Eduardo, 77, and Virginia Archuleta, 75, keep a baby food jar filled with corazones, the hot veins in the chiles; she picks them out so the food will not be too hot for her 30 grandchildren. For unexpected guests, Virginia Archuleta will whip up light galletas rancheras, ranch biscuits, and get out a jar of home-pickled chile pasado (partly red) for sandwiches of biscuits and chile. The Archuletas cure peppers in a dark room for eight days before stringing them into ristras. For Lucy Gonzales, a daughter, impeccably cured and cleaned chile amounts to a heritage. "It takes a good six hours to make a chile string," she said. "We find it hard to believe that somebody would go to all that trouble to sell it for $4 a pound.

"With store-bought, there is a difference," she added, wrinkling her nose. "It's sour. You can smell it right away. Many of the younger people don't know the right taste of the chile."

The Archuletas live in a small, tidy house here, near where the Nambe and Pojoaque Rivers meet, out on the road that leads toward Taos. Virginia Archuleta's view through the window above the kitchen sink is of the Sangre de Cristo mountains.

The black pumice stones she uses as a metate and mano, the pair of implements used to grind corn and dried meat in this part of the country, came from Colorado. She shapes tortillas by hand and bakes them on the flat surface of a small wood-burning stove in the corner of the kitchen; each tortilla bears the stove's serial number, printed in reverse. Sometime in the 1930s or '40s, the Archuletas paid Pojoaque Indians for a micaceous pot, which she calls a sarten, by bartering a bowlful of corn or beans. This unpainted pot can go right on the stove; the mica in it conducts heat. The Archuleta children, remembering the chile del sarten it has held, will one day fight over it. With these things and these ways of doing things, the clan is content.

Hot habit-forming

Associated Press

Hot is habit-forming, according to Paul Rozin, a psychologist at the University of Pennsylvania who has studied spicy foods.

"Side effects like a burned mouth and watery eyes have not diminished the popularity of spicy foods," he said. "In fact, many people actually enjoy the 'thrill' of the burning sensation caused by chili peppers." People develop a taste for hot foods after repeated exposure to them, he said.

DEAR ABBY

Mental illness shadows woman

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I've read your column ever since you started, 30 years ago. In May 1955 I had what was then known as a "nervous breakdown." I was a successful young businesswoman at the time. I spent only six weeks in a hospital where I received shock treatments.

I regained my mental health and raised four children. Many years later, one of my sons was arrested on a drug-related charge and was sent to prison. I was informed that because of my history of "mental illness" I could not visit my son. I was dumbfounded! I went to the prison anyway and asked to see the warden. When he saw that I was a neatly dressed, calm, rational, middle-aged woman, he allowed me to visit my son. Abby, it has been 31 years since my mental illness, but my "record" followed me!

I am attaching a letter a reader sent to you many years ago. I didn't write it, but I could have. I carried it in my wallet for years. Please run it again:

DEAR ABBY: You are to be commended for the letters on mental illness you ran in your column. In those letters I saw clearly the attitude of society, which makes it so difficult for the emotionally disturbed to recover:

I had 10 years of emotional trouble and was one of the lucky ones whose family stood by me. I wonder how many people know anything of the dark and horrible world a mentally ill person lives in. There are not words to describe the fear and terror. And then the hurt they receive when trying to recover and they become aware of the strange things they did during their illness.

An ignorant society has done a good job in making the mental patient feel ashamed. Too much cannot be said about the uncaring attitude of the public concerning mental illness. If ever a human needs understanding and patience, it is the one who is in the dark and lonely world of mental illness. I lived there — and I know. But with God's help, I am ... RECOVERED

WHAT'S COOKING

Quick recipe fits busy teen's life

By ELIZABETH EDWIN Lifestyle Writer

"I don't cook a lot," Elaine Howard said as she stirred some white clam sauce. In the kitchen, Ms. Howard likes to keep things easy, but it is quite the contrary with the rest of her life.

Ms. Howard recently graduated with honors from Midland High School where she was very active. At MHS she was involved in National Honor Society, Junior Classical League and Pack Backers. She was also selected Who's Who Among Students in American High Schools, Who's Who in Foreign Languages and a National Merit Commended Scholar.

For the future, Ms. Howard is looking forward to attending Rice University where she plans to "study some kind of engineering, maybe chemical."

For this summer, however, Ms. Howard is keeping herself busy with her job at the UA Cine 4.

"I do anything they need me to do — concessions, tickets, stocking, cleaning, cleaning ... and more cleaning," Ms. Howard said.

She works approximately 25-30 hours a week, usually 6 p.m.-midnight.

"It doesn't leave much time for goofing around," Ms. Howard said. "After working that late I like to sleep late.

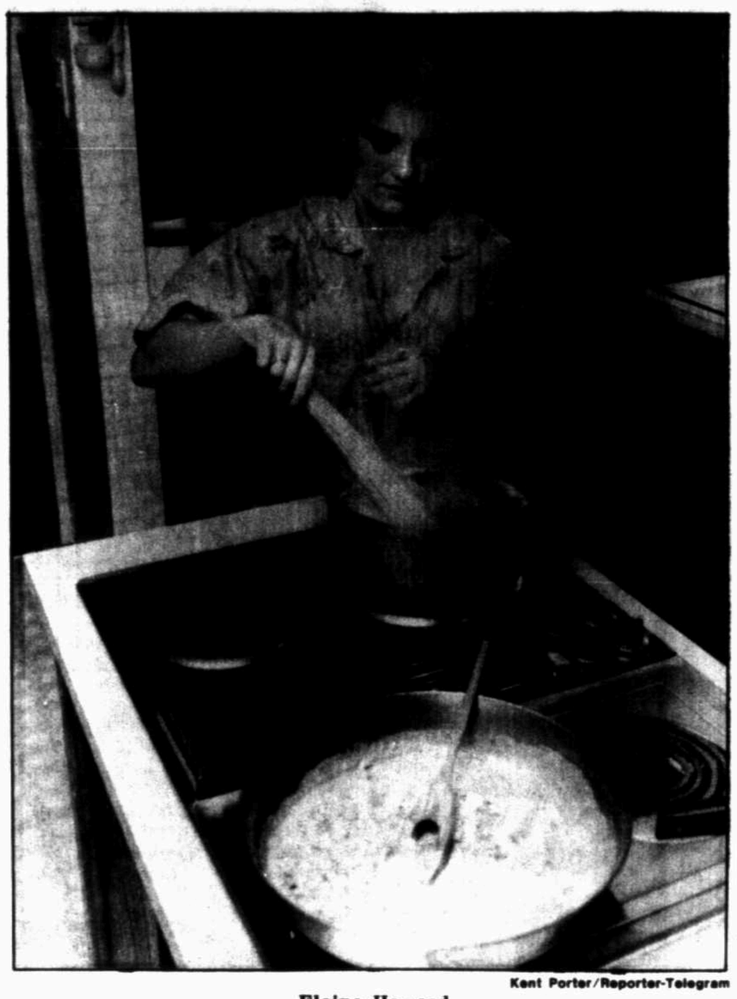

"I think working has taught me more responsibility and I think I learned that there is a time for respect and a time you can goof around with employers at work," she said. "Sometimes too much respect all the time gets stiff."

Ms. Howard hobbies include horseback riding and playing the guitar, but lately she hasn't had time for either activity.

"I also like to read a lot, almost anything I can get my hands on. I like science fiction and fantasy. Romances are a little too mushy for me, though," Ms. Howard noted.

Between her activities, getting ready for college and working, Ms. Howard doesn't have a lot of spare time to spend cooking and doesn't cook very often. When she does, though, spaghetti is one of her favorites.

"I cook a lot of spaghetti," she said. "It's easy. This recipe is real quick. It really only takes a few minutes. Other than that, I cook a mean omelet and a lot of sandwiches," she said with a laugh.

SUGGESTED MENU
Tossed Salad
Spaghetti in White Calm Sauce
Garlic Bread
Jello or Pudding

SPAGHETTI IN WHITE CLAM SAUCE

Sauce:
1 10 ounce can baby clams (preferably whole)
1 10¾ ounce can Campbell's cream of mushroom soup
1 medium clove garlic, minced
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 tablespoon butter

Pour in entire cans of soup and clams. Stir in garlic and parsley and bring to a low boil, stirring occasionally.

Spaghetti:
About ½ pound (or two good hand fulls) of spaghetti
Large pot with more than enough water to cover spaghetti

Add a pinch of salt to water and bring to a hard boil. Slowly add spaghetti. Cook 8-10 minutes stirring occasionally.

GARLIC BREAD
1 to 3 cloves crushed garlic
¼ cup butter
1 loaf French bread

Soften butter and stir in garlic. Slice bread and spread garlic butter on slices liberally. Place bread (in loaf shape) on cookie sheet and place in oven until butter is melted or until crust is hard.

Tortellini pasta tossed into picnic salad

Associated Press

PICNIC PASTA TOSS
1 7-ounce package frozen or refrigerated cheese-filled tortellini
1 7-ounce package frozen spinach tortellini
⅔ cup sliced pitted ripe olives
1 large carrot, thinly bias sliced
¾ cup clear Italian salad dressing
½ teaspoon finely shredded orange peel
2 tablespoons orange juice

In a large saucepan cook both kinds of tortellini in a large amount of boiling unsalted water according to the package directions. Drain in colander. Rinse with cold water; drain again.

In a large bowl toss together tortellini, olives, and carrot. In a small bowl combine dressing, orange peel, and orange juice; pour over pasta mixture. Toss well. Cover; chill thoroughly.

Makes 8 to 10 servings.

THE BUTCHER

Beef industry's leaner, low-cholesterol steaks lack flavor of predecessors

By MERLE ELLIS

Steaks just don't have the flavor they once had. I'm not sure whose fault that is. The beef industry is convinced that it's yours. The "consumer wants lean beef," they say, knowing full well that "lean" and "flavorful" are more than a bit at odds with one another.

Whoever is at fault, it's a fact steaks are leaner, have less cholesterol, fewer calories and all that good stuff — but they also need a little help in the flavor department. One solution: stuff 'em!

Two steaks that are great for stuffing are also the two that need help most in the flavor department: top round and top sirloin.

Buy one or either at least 1½ or preferably 2 inches thick. Make a small cut with your boning knife right in the center of the side without the fat cover. Do not cut a large opening, rather pivot your knife so that you enlarge the pocket inside the steak to within a half inch of the outside edge, without enlarging the original opening any more than is necessary.

Spoon the stuffing into the pocket to fill the opening. Then secure the opening with three or four toothpicks and lace up with the string.

CARPETBAG STEAK

1 lean beef sirloin or top round steak, cut 1½ to 2 inches thick (approx. 2 lbs.)
1 10 ounce jar of oysters (small size)
3 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1 or 2 dashes Tabasco sauce

Cut a pocket in the steak. Drain oysters and reserve their juice.

Melt butter in a heavy skillet and saute oysters until they are firm and plump. Remove the oysters from the pan and stuff them into the steak. Add the reserved oyster juices to the butter left in the pan and stir in the Worcestershire and Tabasco sauce.

Bring to a boil and reduce the juices by about one half. Pour some of the buttery juices into the pocket of the steak and use the rest to baste the steak as it broils. Secure the opening with toothpicks and string.

Broil the steak 3 inches from the heat turning occasionally until cooked to the desired degree of doneness, 10 to 12 minutes for medium rare. Or grill over coals: Sear each side over high heat then lower the coals and cook to the desired doneness, turning occasionally.

Carve the ½-inch slices to serve. Spoon over any extra juices.

MAYTAG STUFFED STEAK

1 lean beef sirloin or first cut top round steak cut 1½-2 inches thick (approx. 2 lbs.)
1 slice of bread, cut into tiny cubes
2 tablespoons butter
1 small onion, minced
2 cloves garlic, minced
¼ pound blue cheese (Maytag Blue to be authentic)

Cut a pocket in the steak. Melt the butter in a heavy skillet and saute the garlic and onion over medium-low heat until the onions are soft and transparent.

Toss in the bread cubes and continue cooking until the bread is nicely toasted and crisp. Remove from heat and let cool. Toss in crumbled blue cheese.

Stuff mixture into the steak and secure with toothpicks and string. Broil the steak 3 inches from the heat turning occasionally until cooked to the desired degree of doneness, 10-12 minutes for medium rare. This is also great cooked on an outdoor grill over the coals.

Allow to stand 2-3 minutes before slicing into ½-inch slices.

Merle Ellis is a columnist for Chronicle Publishing Company.

Seafood popular in American homes

Associated Press

Americans rank taste, quality and nutrition as the primary reasons for buying seafood, according to the Better Homes and Gardens Consumer Panel. It says seafood is prepared in 61 percent of American homes at least three times each month.

TEXAS ★ CELEBRITY ★ RECIPE

(By RUSSELL M. GARDNER and CHRIS FARKAS)

"I am excited and proud to share with all my fellow Texans the celebration of of this historical milestone — Happy Sesquicentennial, Texas!" — Barbara Bush

COLD SPINACH SOUP

1 package frozen chopped spinach, cooked
4 cups light cream
4 chicken bouillon cubes
¼ cup dry vermouth
⅛ teaspoon ground mace
2 hardcooked eggs, chopped
1 tablespoon grated lemon rind

Put cooked spinach into blender and reduce to pulp. Put bouillon cubes into cream and scald, stirring until cubes are dissolved. (Note: "I put cream into top of double boiler — easier and keeps from burning!" — Ms. Bush.) Remove from heat. Stir in spinach, vermouth, lemon rind and mace.

Chill. Top with egg or serve piping hot with croutons. Serves 6.

Restauranteur's new bistro offers bouillabaise

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jonathan Waxman, the innovative chef-owner who gained a national following for his work at Jams, is expanding his repertoire and, he hopes, his wallet with a second formula.

The effort at the new place called Bud's is to offer less expensive, bistro equivalents of inventive New American cooking.

Respect for native ingredients is the ticket here, as is a host of clever techniques. As an example, here is Waxman's recipe for that great French standard, bouillabaise.

WAXMAN'S BOUILLABAISE

6 pounds fish bones
½ cup olive oil
2 onions, sliced in thin strips
3 cloves garlic, smashed and peeled
4 shallots, sliced in thin rounds
3 leeks, sliced in thin rounds
1 cup Sauvignon Blanc wine
2 bay leaves
1 sprig parsley
1 fennel bulb
1 red bell pepper
2 small white potatoes, peeled and sliced in ½-inch rounds
2 ounces each: swordfish, tuna, scallops, shrimp, red snapper, salmon and pompano
5 threads saffron
2 ripe tomatoes, seeded and chopped
Zest of one orange
Salt and pepper
Croutons rubbed in olive oil and garlic, toasted

Rinse fish bones under cold water. In large casserole or stockpot, heat 2 tablespoons of olive oil. Saute fish bones, onions, garlic, shallots and half the leeks in olive oil until soft and transluscent.

Add wine, 4 cups of water, bay leaves, parsley, saffron and 1 small piece of fennel. Simmer for 45 minutes. Strain and set aside broth. Discard bones and vegetables.

Meanwhile, roast red pepper over gas flame or under broiler until blackened. Put in closed paper bag for 15 minutes. Remove, peel and seed. Puree pepper in blender or food processor until almost smooth. Set aside.

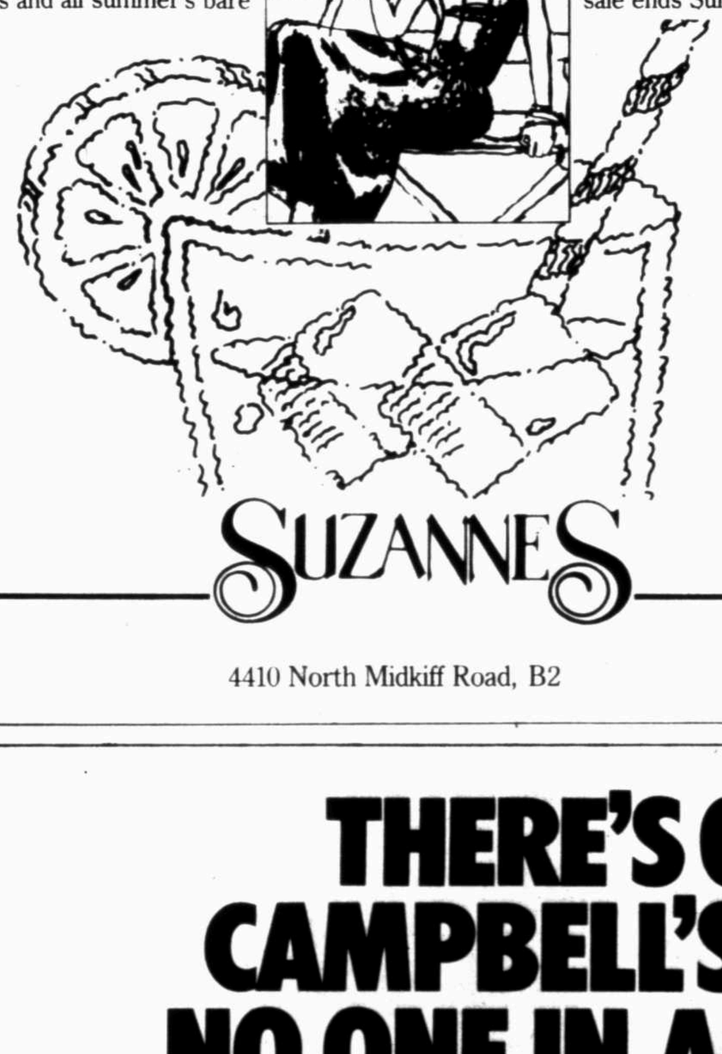

Reheat broth to a boil and reduce liquid to 3 cups. Add potatoes, lower heat to simmer and cook for 5 minutes. Add remaining fennel and cook for 5 minutes. Add rest of olive oil. In order, add swordfish, tuna, scallops, shrimp and all other fish. Cook over 5 minutes.

Add tomatoes and orange zest. Taste and correct seasoning with salt and pepper if necessary.

Summer dishes, wines paired

Hearst News Service

BLANQUEFORT, France — It's a dirty job, but someone's got to be chatelaine of Chateau Magnol in the lush countryside of Bordeaux, France's most famous wine district. But what really makes Madeleine Croteau unusual isn't just that she was chosen to run the chateau over 174 other candidates.

Although she certainly looks and sounds like "here," Croteau was Boston-born and Maine-raised. Her unaccented linguistic ability in both languages allows her an ease most would envy, if they weren't already envious of her spiffy employment.

Aside from running the chateau, which is part of the adjoining Partager winery, another painful job requirement has Croteau doubling as on-site public relations wine expert for the company. She conducts knowlegeable tours of the sprawling, immaculate Partager facility, tracking the life of the grape from vine to bottle. But it's back at the chateau, where wine and food are an integral part of French life, that she really shines.

On sun-filled summer afternoons, guests repair to the chateau's living room, make their luncheon selections from a lengthly cold buffet and dine at tables spread out over the lawn, overlooking the chateau's vineyards. Here are Croteau's choices of wines to go with a cold buffet:

One of the chateau's summer specialties is a crepe cake combining crab or tuna, vegetables, lettuce and mayonnaise. "The Gateau de Crepe, while fairly aromatic, is a little bland to bring out the taste of the vegetables," Croteau says. Her wine choices are a Pouilly Fume, Graves, Chablis or white Burgundy.

A cold chicken? Croteau recommends a Beaujolais. If the chicken has been cooked with a lot of garlic, her choice is a Chateauneuf du Pape, which, surprisingly, she also says in an excellent complement to pizza prepared with lots of pepperoni.

For pasta salads replete with spices, chives, parsley and vinegar, Croteau opts for a heavier Burgundy. "A Beaujolais is too skimpy for spicy food," she says.

For cold shrimp, Croteau says the choice depends on the dressing. For shrimp prepared with a tomato dressing, she would choose a Beaujolais. If the shrimp has a mayonnaise base, she would opt for a light white wine.

Croteau's choices to accompany a cold salmon would be a Loire white, a Pouilly Fume, Muscadet or a white Graves.

A cheese party? Croteau says a Sauterne will go with blue cheeses, Swiss and "everything but cheddar and brie." If you're serving a goat cheese salad, she recommends a white Burgundy.

The proper wine for a spicy, peppery cold ham? Here, Croteau heads south of the French border and selects an Italian red as the perfect complement.

For a summer lawn party, Croteau advises having at least three different wines available.

Cost, lack of public support killed MidTran

By DOUG DRUMMOND
Assistant City Editor

The dream was to provide Midland with its own customized mass transit system.

But the outcome was more than a million loss for taxpayers.

So, after six years, the City Council approved Tuesday a plan to phase out MidTran, the city's mass transit system.

Full service will be discontinued July 11 and partial service will end in October.

Reasons for MidTran's failure ranged from a lack of public support to the decline in oil prices, officials said.

"To be honest with you, it always has been a losing proposition," said City Manager James Brown. "And even more so lately."

Since 1980, the total cost of MidTran has been more than $3.6 million, based on MidTran administrative office records released this week.

Of that, those records show the city lost $1,447,270 from 1980 to April of this year, and the federal government doled out an additional $1,580,319.

Revenue during the same period was some $630,000 — about 17 percent of the total MidTran cost.

In addition to the losses, passenger counts have fluctuated.

In 1980, 66,925 people used MidTran. That figure spiraled to 171,003 in 1982 before dropping to 80,104 the next year, records show.

This year 60,269 people boarded MidTran buses in the first four months, said MidTran Director Sylvester Cantu.

"When you say it didn't work, that's not right," said Cantu, the fourth manager of MidTran in six years. "Sure it worked...The people who were using the service would say that.

"But, simply put, it was not going to pay for itself, and the decision was tied to economics."

THE IDEA OF a "MidTran" began in 1977 when a Chamber of Commerce task force was formed to study Midland's transportation needs.

Gordon Marcum II, a city councilman who was on the first MidTran board of directors, said a group of businessmen came up with the idea.

"They said Midland is a 'unique' city so lets come up with a 'unique' transportation system," Marcum said, noting the group hired consultants to help draw up plans.

The project, funded mostly by federal money in the beginning, began operations Feb. 4, 1980.

At the time, Harrell Feldt, a key player in getting the MidTran idea off the ground, said:

"There is nothing so satisfying as to see something that was a dream become a reality."

It also was touted by other officials. Pete Snelson, a state senator at that time, called the Midland transit project a blueprint for other cities.

The plan was to run a "demand-response" and a subscription system.

Under such a system, the buses would be used in the early morning and early evening hours for those who paid a weekly or monthly rate to be taken to and from work each day.

Also, riders could call a day ahead and arrange to be picked up. During slack time, officials planned to provide transportation for Midland's social service agencies.

"We were never as presumptuous to think it (MidTran) would make money," Marcum said. "But we wanted to run as close as we could to breaking even."

The system did neither.

IN THE FIRST year, MidTran lost nearly $200,000, records show. That increased to $330,000 in 1981.

In 1982, the figure ballooned to almost $600,000. But officals said they had a glimmer of hope because ridership was at a record high that year — more than 170,000.

"During the boom, we had huge waiting lists and a lot of things going for us. Even though we weren't breaking even, we were coming closer and closer," Marcum said.

But the oil crisis hit and ridership dwindled again. MidTran officials made a variety of changes to attract more riders but the strategies never quite worked.

Changes included the addition of a Saturday service, a flex-route, expanded service to Water Wonderland and more shuttle trips to the Regional Airport.

Brown said one of the strategies was to use a "fixed-route" system. A fixed route system is where buses pick up passengers at designated stops.

"That was a disaster," Brown said. "All we had was a bunch of buses running around empty."

Marcum said he cannot pinpoint the reason for MidTran's failure but said part of the problem was the declining economy.

"The oil business started going down and ridership fell," Marcum said. "The MidTran cost kept climbing with inflation. We went through several major reorganizations, trying to economize the best we could and still run a quality service."

But MidTran continued to be a financial nightmare.

"A lot of things happened that you could not perceive," Marcum said. "I think at first people were afraid we would not stay in the business, consequently they did not start subscribing."

Marcum said a lot of the problems may have dealt with the attitudes of Midland residents.

"TO A PERSON from the East who has used a transit system all his life, this was a pretty good deal. But to an individual West Texas guy, the personal car is important to him.

"It's like I have my own horse, and I'm going to ride it — I have my own car and I'm going to drive it."

In April 1985, Bob Babbitt with McDonald Transit of Fort Worth told the City Council the system could be operated more cheaply.

The city subsequently asked Babbitt if his company would take over operations.

Eight months later, McDonald placed one of its men, the 34-year-old Cantu, as MidTran director.

Cantu, who had three years of experience with the Lubbock mass transit system, was the fourth director.

He followed Joyce Fisher, Jim Johnson and Doris Velasquez in the post.

Cantu said he made cuts in operating costs and made attempts to streamline the service.

He also said he had planned to ask the council for more buses before the city decided to phase out MidTran.

"I was a little surprised," he said of the City Council's decision to disband its mass transit system. "But I knew there were economic problems in the city. I was hoping maybe some low level of service could be continued, but ..."

District 1 City Councilman David Godfrey said the decision to finally shut down the system was an "obvious way" to save money.

"In good times, it was something the city could provide," Godfrey explained. "But with a tough budget coming up, we couldn't justify it."

Despite its failure, Brown and Marcum said it is possible a mass transit system could surface in Midland once more.

"If the economy improves and it is where we get more of a diversification," Marcum said, "I think it is a possibility. We'll just have to wait and see."

Idea of MidTran began in 1977

From Staff Reports

Following is a capsule look at the history of MidTran:

1977 — The Midland Chamber of Commerce formed a task force to look into the city's transportation needs.

April 1978 — The task force files with the Secretary of State for MidTran to become a non-profit corporation.

August 1979 — Joyce Fisher becomes the first transportation director of MidTran.

February 1980 — MidTran buses begin the first day of operation.

October 1981 — Jim Johnson becomes the second MidTran director replacing Ms. Fisher.

May 1983 — Johnson is asked to resign by City Manager James Brown. Brown said, "I just lost confidence in him." Doris Velazquez, operations manager, is named to the post.

July 1983 — City Councilman David Godfrey suggests MidTran be eliminated due to a $400,000 projected deficit. MidTran is not disbanded but council members urge officials to make budget cuts.

February 1984 — Ms. Velazquez says she intends to apply for another federal grant for funding of a 12,500 square-foot, $400,000 facility. No further action was taken on the proposed garage.

February 1985 — Assistant City Manager Mike McGregor says Ms. Velasques resigns due to "personal reasons." No one was named to replace her at that time.

April 1985 — McDonald Transit, a Fort Worth consultant group, tells City Council members MidTran can be operated cheaper.

December 1985 — Sylvester Cantu, a McDonald Transit employee, is named to director. The move was part of an agreement between the consultant company and the city.

June 1986 — The City Council votes to end support of MidTran.

Council approves pastor's request for tent revival in east Midland

By DOUG DRUMMOND
Assistant City Editor

Troy Wilson, a 25-year-old Midland pastor, said he didn't see why such a "big fuss" was made over his request for a permit to hold a six-week tent revival.

Wilson, 5009 Rio Grande Drive, asked City Council members Tuesday to approve a temporary land use permit along the south side of East Jax Ave., between Jackson and Tilden streets.

The proposed permit was to hold a tent revival from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. for six weeks.

Wilson told council members he had talked to most of the neighbors, noting no one had been against his revival.

But District 2 City Council member Oralia Corrales said she opposed approving the permit, saying some of her constituents objected.

"I'm not against religion," Ms. Corrales said. "But I'm opposed to the situation of it lasting six weeks...I don't think people should be bombarded with it (the noise).

"People should be able to go out to the backyard and enjoy a quiet evening."

District 3 Councilman Kelly Fish said he also objected.

"I don't think it is fair to encroach on somebody on that block who does not want the revival there," he said.

During discussion, council members took an informal vote. Since there was a 3-3 deadlock, it was apparent the permit would be denied.

Ms. Corrales then said she would approve the permit if Wilson would agree to hold his revival for only three weeks.

Wilson agreed and council members unanimously approved.

"I was kind of disappointed," said Wilson, noting his church owned the land where the revival would be held. "I didn't think the approval would be a problem."

The City Council also rejected a request by West Texas Consultants for a zone change from an Agriculture Estate District to a Planned District at the southwest corner of Loop 250 and Todd Drive.

The vote was a 3-3 tie. To approve such a move, the council must have a majority.

The consultants said the lot's owner wanted to build a convenience store at the site, but a group of neighbors showed up to oppose such a move.

The neighbors said the rezoning would hamper their neighborhood.

District 1 Councilman David Godfrey, who voted to rezone the land, said the proposal was what the City Council had earlier requested.

"We indicated to the applicant what we would find acceptable," he said. "I have to approve it."

In addition to Godfrey, Mayor Pro Tem Katie Heck and Council member at-large Gordon Marcum II approved the request to rezone.

Fish, Ms. Corrales and District 4 Councilman Robert Rendall opposed, prompting the request to be rejected.

In other action, a group of Midland citizens asked the city to consider cutting its budget by seven percent.

Charles "Bro" Seltzer, a local attorney, made the request, noting the city's tax base has decreased about seven percent since last year.

"I want you to keep faith with the city of Midland," Seltzer said.

Godfrey said the council "totally concurred" with Seltzer, saying it was to his and other members' benefit to keep taxes and government spending down.

Commissioner's proposal to resolve jail woes, balance budget draws fire

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County Commissioner Durward Wright's proposal to resolve the jail problems and to balance the county's 1987 budget with "a minimum impact" on taxes and services encountered a barrage of opposition on Tuesday.

Wright is proposing the lease-purchase of a 144-bunk modular jail to be set up east of Midland, the scrapping of the proposed renovation of the existing jail on the fifth floor of the Midland County Courthouse, and thereby gaining a "cash flow" of about $650,000 a year.

"This proposal bears further investigation and refinement," Wright said. "If people are willing to make this thing work, it will work. If people are dead set against it, it won't work."

And he did meet with opposition and with some "let's-see" concession on Tuesday, when he presented his proposal to Midland lawyers and judges in the Midland County Courthouse.

One judge termed the commissioner's plan as "totally unrealistic."

Wright's proposal would eliminate the approximately $300,000 annual cost of transferring prisoners from the overcrowded Midland County Jail to other West Texas jails and would cut out the $800,000 bond amortization incurred in the $3-million jail bond issue of May 1985.

Wright called the prisoner transfer an "ever-spiraling cost and drain on county assets."

FUELING HIS proposal is the estimated $800,000 to $1-million "shortfall" of tax revenue for the 1987 fiscal year based on the declining tax base (from $5.12-billion to $4.56-billion) and no change in the current 19.96-cent tax rate. The county's 1986 budget is about $14-million.

No suspects in narcotics office burglary

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

A deputy in the Sheriff's Department Narcotics Division said Wednesday there were still no primary suspects in the weekend burglary of the Midland County Sheriff's narcotics office.

Sheriff Gary Painter said Tuesday the Sheriff's Department withheld the information surrounding the Saturday morning break-in to enhance efforts to catching the perpetrators.

However, knowledge of the burglary was released to the local media Tuesday after Painter learned that some members of the news media had found out about the break-in.

About $8,000 worth of cocaine, heroin, methamphetamine and marijuana had been stolen from a locked metal cabinet in the narcotics office located in a shopping center complex on West Wadley Ave.

Painter said burglars were able to unlock the office door after smashing a hole in the wall of the office. He said it appeared they had originally intended to steal deputies' weapons found in the office, but apparently stumbled onto the metal cabinet and opted to take the drugs instead.

Drugs usually are not stored in the narcotics office but are kept at the Texas Department of Public Safety Lab here in Midland, he said.

In this case, however, the drugs were kept in the office as deputies expedited paperwork on the drugs to have them destroyed.

The cases involving the $8,000 worth of drugs were either awaiting convictions or dismissals, Painter said.

A deputy in the Sheriff's Department narcotics division said he did not know if there were any pending cases that would now have to be dropped due to a lack of evidence.

He said he was going to check with the district attorney's office, but did not think that would be the case.

"We had worked so hard to get that stuff off the streets. It just really hurts," Painter said. He added that it is "embarrassing, but it's not the worst thing that's ever happened and certainly not the last."

If the burglars are caught, they can look forward to being charged with burglary, possession of and intent to sell controlled substances, Painter said.

He confirmed that the Sheriff's Department had ruled out the possibility of this being an inside job. Such speculation had been raised when it was learned that the location of the narcotics office had been a secret in order to guard against the disclosure of the deputies' identities.

There are tentative plans at this time to change the location of the office, a narcotics division deputy said.

Local Jaycees win first at convention

From Staff Reports

The Midland Jaycees won first place in the nation for their personal skills programs at the 66th National Jaycee Convention in Milwaukee, Wis., last week.

The group also was recognized in several other areas. Local persons who attended were Kenny Gallagher, Jim Beck, Brad Sincock, Tom Wolfinger and Karen Wolfinger.

According to Gallagher, the personal skills programs are individual development programs which offer personal financial planning, stress management, dress for success seminars, networking and job search.

In addition, Gallagher received the Charles E. Kulp, Jr. Memorial Award. It goes to top local chapter presidents in the United States. He was the Midland president for the 1985-86 year.

Midland was recognized as the fifth largest chapter in its population division. It has 326 members. It is the 28th largest chapter in the United States.

The population division for Midland is cities with a 50,000-75,000 population. Gallagher explained that these figures could be misleading. "The divisions are set when the U.S. census is done and it can't be changed."

The Midland chapter received second place in its population division in community improvement and financial management.

Community improvement included the Centennial Plaza, Christmas in April and Christmas Tree lighting.

Financial management included such fund-raising projects as football concessions, Lite Run for Fun, Children's Film Festival, Radio Daze and the National Junior College Athletic Association Basketball All-Star game.

Midland's Jaycees earned third place in its population division for public relations. This includes all projects related to the promotion of Jaycee functions.

This year's convention was at the site where William C. Brownfield wrote the Jaycee creed 40 years ago. Next year's convention will be held in Reno, Nev.

DEATHS

Clyde B. Payne

Payne

Clyde B. Payne, 64, of Midland, died Tuesday at a local hospital.

Services will be at 3:30 p.m. Thursday at the Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Terry Chapman, pastor of Parklea Baptist Church, officiating, assisted by Miram Dickson. Burial will be at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Payne was born Feb. 14, 1922, in Blair, Okla., where he was reared and attended school. He attended college at Oklahoma A&M in Stillwater. On June 14, 1941, he married the former Thelma Odell Goolsby in Blair. They recently celebrated their 45th wedding anniversary.

He served in the Air Force during World War II as a fighter pilot for the 9th Division in Central Europe in the Battle of the Rhine and Battle of Ruhr Valley in 1945. He made a total of 22 combat missions in the P-47. He received three Battle Stars Air Medal with two oak leaf clusters before his discharge in 1946.

Payne owned and operated a restaurant and a combine company in Blair until 1950 when he moved to Midland. He worked with Amerada, later known as Amerada-Hess, for the next 20 years. He then became employed with Tenneco Corp., retiring in July of 1985 as area manager for drilling and production.

He was a member of the National Rifleman Association, Midland Shooters Club and Ranchland Hills Country Club of Midland.

Survivors include his wife; one son, John Payne of Fort Worth; one daughter, Jan Payne Sellers of Midland; his mother, Bertie Payne of Altus, Okla.; three brothers, Lloyd Payne of Wellston, Okla., Melvin Payne of Mesa, Ariz., and Billy Payne of El Paso; three sisters, Aline Harrod of Altus, Okla., Ruby Mae Brown of Blair, Okla., and Idell Pendergraft of Phoenix, Ariz.; and six grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to the American Heart Association, 3525 Andrews Hwy., Suite 208, Midland, 79703.

Fronie Robinson

Fronie Robinson, 83, of Midland, died Saturday at her home.

Services were to be today at 2 p.m. at the Macedonia Baptist Church. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery with Rev. O.J. Archie officiating.

Mrs. Robinson was born Oct. 21, 1902. She lived in Midland for 35 years.

She is survived by her husband, Ted Robinson of Midland; one daughter, Mary Neighbors of Austin; three grandchildren; six great-grandchildren; and one great-great grandchild.

Lois Drake Hicks

PECOS — Lois Drake Hicks, 81, died Tuesday in a Pecos nursing home.

Graveside services will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at Ozona Cemetery in Ozona, directed by Pecos Funeral Home of Pecos.

Mrs. Hicks was born Sept. 2, 1904, in San Angelo. She had lived in Pecos for two years and was a former resident of San Angelo. She was a Methodist.

Survivors include two daughters, Joan Stocks Nobles of Fort Davis and Sarah Hicks Buss of Austin; one son, Banky Stocks of Kent; one daughter-in-law, Honey Heiser Hicks of Austin; three brothers, William F. Drake Jr., Richard O. Drake Sr. and Jack Drake, all of San Angelo; one sister, Eula Marie Wood of San Angelo; nine grandchildren; and 12 great-grandchildren.

OC to oversee bond program

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The board of trustees of Odessa College Tuesday night approved creation of a non-profit corporation and temporary board to oversee a bond program to fund capital purchases for every participating public school and junior college district in the state.

According to OC business manager Roger Coomer, the college was selected by the Texas School Administration to serve as the legal vehicle to issue lease purchase bonds.

Under the statewide program, OC will ask public school and junior college districts that wish to participate to submit lists of capital purchases they plan to make, such as equipment and property, with cost estimates, Coomer said.

Once all lists are submitted, he said, he and the three temporary board members, who are members of the OC business staff, will determine the amount of the bond issue necessary to cover all purchases.

Coomer speculated the lease purchase bonds, which will be sold by Rauscher-Pierce, could exceed $500 million.

OC trustee James H. Gilliland, who proposed the resolution to set up the program, said the purpose of the lease purchase bond program would be to allow public school and junior college districts in the state to obtain funding for capital purchases at the lowest possible interest rates.

According to Coomer, OC will receive one-eighth of one percent (.125) of the total bond issue for initiation and administrative purposes.

He said he would expect a large bank, perhaps even a Japanese bank, to purchase the lease purchase bonds, with pay-back periods that could be three, five or seven years at the lowest interest rates available.

Coomer said that even though a public school or junior college district that decides to participate indicates it plans to buy a specific amount of capital equipment or property the notice of intent would not represent an irrevocable commitment.

Unused funds would continue to draw interest, which would be used to retire the bond issue. According to Coomer, any profit that might be realized from the program could be used to fund scholarship programs.

Coomer said public education districts participating in the program will be able to realize significant savings by being able to jointly take advantage of far lower interest rates than would be available on an individual basis. He speculated such a bond issue would attract an AAA rating, the best available.

As to how the program would work, Coomer said each participating district would continue to make capital purchases exactly as they do now.

The only difference would be that the bank or other financial institution holding the bonds would pay the invoice and the purchaser would make a specific payment to the lender, which would be applied toward retirement of the lease purchase bonds.

Coomer also presented OC trustees a fact sheet for the college's proposed 1986-87 budget.

The budget calls for a $1.1 million decrease from the previous year although the proposed tax rate is 1.1 percent higher.

OC President Phil Speegle told trustees the slightly more than $14 million budget anticipates no raises, including step raises, a smaller faculty and a smaller administrative staff.

He observed many people will find themselves confronted with "circumstances they don't like, but many people in Odessa are living under circumstances they don't like either," he said.

Proposed budget cuts for the coming fiscal year include: utilities, $160,000; maintenance, $130,000; administration, $50,000; and operating cost reductions, $177,000.

Convicted murderer's son pleads guilty to felony retaliation charge

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The 22-year-old son of a man convicted of murder Tuesday entered a plea of guilty in 244th District Court Tuesday to a charge of felony retaliation.

John Shaw, who legally changed his name from Johnny Meadows Jr., was scheduled to face trial Tuesday for allegedly threatening to kill former Ector County Sheriff A.M. "Slim" Gabrel and burn his business.

Under a plea bargain arrangement, Shaw will be sentenced to two years in prison. District Attorney Eric Augesen said Tuesday Shaw will be granted credit for time already served in the county jail awaiting trial.

Shaw has remained jailed in lieu of $50,000 bond since he was arrested Feb. 11.

The elder Meadows is serving a 99-year sentence for the 1971 killing of Gloria Sue Nix Green.

Ms. Green disappeared from an oil well servicing company office on the Kermit Highway in June 1971. Her body was found under a mattress in south Odessa in January 1972.

Following his trial and conviction in a Tarrant County district court in 1974 for the strangulation killing of the 26-year-old woman, Meadows confessed to the killings of three other women but was never brought to trial. The confessions were held inadmissible when a judge held they were not given voluntarily.

JAIL

Midland voters in May 1985 approved a $3-million bond issue to renovate the County Jail to bring it up to standards set by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards, to fund a study of long-range county government needs into the 21th Century, and to expand Culver Youth Home.

Wright proposes to go ahead with the study and expansion of the Youth Home and to use the balance as its own sinking fund to pay off the $3-million bonded indebtedness. Youth Home expansion would be about $500,000, and the initial study would cost about $50,000.

Nixing the renovation, although authorized by the voters, apparently would not be illegal, Wright said bond counsel told him. He still is investigating the legality of his propsal.

Since that May 1985 election, new legislation has been passed which would prohibit a governmental body from not following through with the voters' mandate in a bond election. The 1985 bond election would not be affected by the recent legislation, he said.

But retired Judge Perry D. Pickett said he held "serious reservations" about the legality of Wright's plan.

"It hasn't been tested in the courts," Pickett said. "I think your plan is unrealistic and impractical. I just think it is totally unrealistic."

Attorney Michael Cunningham suggested that voters might view the Commissioners' Court's possible decision not to renovate the jail as approved by the voters as an affront. "That concerns me," he said. "The elected officials turn around and say 'Ha! Ha!' That bothers me."

"Under this (current) plan, the county would be obligated for almost $800,000 per year in amortization of bonds and up to $300,000 for prison transfer," Wright said. "With the tax-base shortfall in mind, there would be no other choice but to increase taxes by almost 15 percent."

Wright said the county's "ultimate tax rate" would be 23 cents to 24 cents per $100 valuation. He based that on the estimated effective tax rate of 22 cents plus bonded-debt retirement.

WRIGHT'S PROPOSAL calls for the modular jail to be located on the county's seven-acre tract near the Midland County Exhibit Building almost 2½ miles east of the downtown courthouse.

The acreage was site of a proposed $8.4-million jail, which voters turned aside more than a year ago when they voted in the $3-million bond issue for jail renovation, the long-range study and the Culver Youth Home Expansion.

The modular jail would house 144 prisoners, would contain a courtroom and hearing room and sheriff's offices, and could be in place by the summer of 1987.

The lease-purchase price of the facility would be $400,000 per year for 10 years or $4 million.

Further, Wright said the $2 million which would have been spent on the jail renovation would have been wasted funds.

"We would have thrown $2 million down the drain for two extra bunks," he said. The jail now is certified to house 85 inmates. "Somehow, that does not seem too practical to me."

And Wright noted that "at the end of any given year" during the lease-purchase of the modular jail from Modular Jail Systems Inc. of Humble, the jail could be "turned back" to the company.

"It's on skids," he said. "It's an attractive, conventional-looking building and is absolutely maximum security."

In a June 2 letter to Patrick Graham of Modular Jail Systems, Wright noted that the "entire game has changed since our look into a satellite jail" last year. "The price of crude oil and real-estate values have cut our tax base considerably."

"...The plan I am pursuing is basically to allow the money voted in the (1985) bond election to be used to build the Youth Home expansion and the balance, with arbitrage and some overage on account, to act as its own sinking fund...We would not renovate the fifth-floor jail."

Wright wrote that by increasing the county's effective tax rate by 7.5 percent (from 22 cents to 23.65 cents per $100 valuation), the county could amortize — pay off — the 10-year lease-purchase of the modular jail.

LAWYERS meeting with Wright expressed misgivings on locating the jail and a district courtroom apart from the courthouse.

Attorney Jim Eubank said the concept of a jail apart from the courthouse was having problems in Abilene. Attorney Bob Freeman suggested building the modular jail on the courthouse square — "between here and Wall Street."

And 318th State District Court Judge Barbara Culver, already beset by cramped courtroom quarters, noted that her civil cases "are getting no priority unless I go out to the (modular) jail to try my cases."

Her fourth-floor courtroom is without a jury box and spectators gallery. When her court is in need of a jury trial, she must "borrow" one of two other district courtrooms or the County Courtroom. Courtrooms are not always available.

"You are not able to give Judge Culver a proper facility...as mandated by law," Freeman said. "I don't think she has proper facilities for a courtroom."

Wayne Merritt, president-elect of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and former chairman of the Midland County Jail Task Force Committee, said that setting the jail apart from the courthouse would required "extraordinary coordination" in uniting pre-trial detainees with judges and the court system.

"We can do it on a planned basis with...judges cooperating and the sheriff coordinating," Wright said.

Wright noted that his proposal would call for using the 18 single cells in the current courthouse jail for "temporary holding cells" during the courts' working day.

Prisoners would not be housed there at night but would be returned to the modular jail. He indicated that decisions would have to be made later on the fate of the courthouse jail and that that would depend on the economy.

Wright said the plan which he now is investigating affords "some optimism for the first time in six years" of the commissioners' pondering the jail problems.

"It looks like it has potential," Wright said of his "short-term" solution to the jail problems. "I think that it will be a minimum inconvenience."

Man in custody after robbery

From Staff Reports

The Midland Police Department has a 26-year-old man in custody in connection with the robbery late Tuesday of $264 in cash from a Midland motel.

According to reports, Gerrie Parks, of 6401 Driftwood Dr. in Midland, reported the incident to police just after 10 p.m., and the suspect was arrested soon after.

In other reports, May Moore, 3602 Andrews Hwy., reported the burglary of an auto in the 3200 block of Cuthbert. She told police two Visa credit cards, a checkbook, and a diamond pinky ring valued at $200 were stolen from her vehicle after someone broke the glass on one side of the vehicle, causing $300 damage.

Janie Delgado, 609 S. Baird, reported the burglary of her residence at 10:30 p.m. Tuesday. She told police a Sears 13-inch color television valued at $250 was taken.

Police have two suspects in the burglary of a vehicle in the 1400 block of S. Mineola. Oscar Garcia reported a Sears Craftsman tool box and assorted tools valued at $100 and an electric saw valued at $60 were stolen.

Police Roundup

Several items were reported stolen from the American Music Center at 2400 E. Mulberry. Roy Gomez reported that a Yamaha mixer, and assorted tires and rims of undetermined value were stolen.

The Midland County Sheriff's Office Wednesday reported the burglary of a building north of Interstate 20. The burglary of Rig Service, Inc., County Road 1300, was reported by Doris Fayo of 5501 McKnight in Odessa.

She told authorities a radiator and battery valued at $150 and five boxes containing bearings, oil seals and gauges, value undetermined, were stolen from the business sometime between last Saturday and Tuesday.

According to reports, entry was gained by cutting a lock from a door on the west side of the business.

GHS vandalism probe continues

From Staff Reports

The Midland Sheriff's Office is continuing the investigation into the vandalism of Greenwood High School which occurred June 20, when part of the white brick exterior and several doors of the $6 million, two-and-a-half-year-old building was spray painted black with obscene language and other markings.

Sgt. Buzz Cupp of the Criminal Investigation Division, who is handling the case, said information has led to at least two juvenile suspects, who were probably students or ex-students, he said. No motive for the vandalism was apparent, he said, and he could recall no similar problems in that area.

"Greenwood is basically a good school," Cupp said. "They do a good job of taking care of their internal disciplinary problems."

Max Dickerson, business manager for the Greenwood Independent School District, said the original damage estimate of $4,000 was high. "The original was high, but right now I can't give an estimate," he said.

"The paint was sandblasted off Friday, and when you do that, you lose some of the brick sealant the building was constructed with. And, it has been wet with the rains since then, so I just don't know how much the sealant was affected."

Dickerson said he could not recall any incidents of major vandalism since he began working for the Greenwood school district 13 years ago.

Fingerprinting effort scheduled

From Staff Reports

The merchants of the Market Manor Neighborhood will sponsor the fingerprinting of children as part of a crime prevention effort in Midland.

Re/Max of Midland is organizing the event, which will be held from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday at 2101 N. Midland Dr.

There will be no charge.

Cisneros: Cities need 'defense'

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — Cities and towns must have a "municipal defense" against federal cutbacks and adopt aggressive planning if they are to survive times of change, said the president of the National League of Cities.

"You've got to think of the future of Waycross, Albany, Athens, of Columbus in terms of the year 1990."

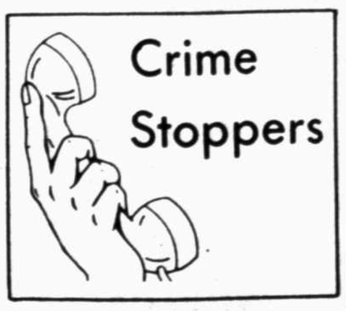

Crime Stoppers seeks data on local burglary

The recent unstable economic condition of the Permian Basin has caused many businesses to close or relocate, and as a result many commercial buildings in the Midland area are vacant.

As the number of vacant buildings increase they become potential targets for burglary and vandalism, according to police.

This scenario proved true in the burglary of Ducommun Metals, located on County Road 125 West in Midland.

Between May 13 and May 21, unidentified persons entered the building by prying open a door. Once inside, they removed a 300 gallon pressure tank and two remote control units used to operate overhead cranes. The remotes taken were Robinson Crane Boss model 400. The stolen items are valued at $6,000.

Crime Stoppers will pay a $1,000 cash reward for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the persons responsible for the burglary. The phone number for Crime Stoppers in Midland is 694-TIPS, in Odessa 333-TIPS. Callers do not have to reveal their identities.

Group wants city to erect skateboard structure at park

By HOLLY LONGABERGER
Staff Writer

Only a month old, the Midland Skateboard Association will petition the Parks and Recreation Department on Friday to build a half-pipe at Ulmer Park.

A half-pipe is a piece of U-shaped plywood on which skateboarders skate.

"We just want the city to build something for skateboarders. They have a BMX track (bicycle track) at Ulmer Park," Billy Simons, treasurer of the Skateboard Association, said.

Simons added that on July 8 the association will meet with the city about getting skateboard improvements for Ulmer Park. The park is located between Kentucky and Holloway.

The club was formed by Joe Deleon, Roger Peet and Simons about a month ago.

The reason for forming the association, according to Simons, was to protect youth who skateboard.

"We've seen too many kids almost hit by cars, and police telling them to stay off the streets. We want a place where kids can go, be safe and have fun," he stated.

Simons, who is 20 years old, said most of the 30 members are between the ages of 13 and 20 years.

The meetings are every two weeks at the Skate Stiks store in Dellwood Mall.

Those interested in joining the club should go by Skate Stiks where the time and place of the next meeting will be posted. There is a $10 yearly fee.

Because of its newness, the Skateboard Association has not sponsored any events, but four of its members recently went to Dallas to compete in skateboarding events.

Simons, who has been skateboarding for two years, said the four individuals did not do as well as they had hoped because the other skateboarders have professionals teach them, whereas "we must learn by ourselves."

Simons believes skateboarding in Midland is not just a fad.

"Now that so many kids are interested and we have a skateboard shop, I think it will be here for awhile," he said.

Tigua Indians visualize future, remember past pleasures, peace

By PAT HENRY

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Two Tiguas, an elder of the tribe and a youth, speak of the past and visualize the future:

For 300 years, the Rio Grande has watered the fields of the Tiguas. Miguel Pedraza, 81, is a part of that cycle.

On a recent Saturday, the first official irrigation day of the spring, Pedraza prepared to open the gate that will flood his two-acre plot in Ysleta. He inspected his flowers and trees and the field where he will plant corn, tomatoes and squash.

"When I was just a kid, it was beautiful all around here. Now there is pollution. I don't like the future," he says.

"In the past, there was nothing but farm land. I helped my grandfather in his fields. To make a living was very easy. We raised everything and we had plenty to eat but no money. Nowdays, people must go look for work."

Pedraza is half Tigua, half Piro Indian. In 1680, El Paso's Lower Valley was settled by 3,000 Tiwa-speaking Indians (Tigues, Piros, Tompiros, Jemez and Thanos tribes) fleeing the Pueblo Revolt in New Mexico. These several tribes became known as the "Tigua," the oldest identifiable ethnic group in Texas.

"As far as I know, the Tiguas, the way I heard it, lived all along the Rio Grande in pueblos. They stayed there because of their farms. They were not warriors until the first time the Spaniards tried to raise trouble with them. We didn't ask the Spaniards and the Anglos to come and fight."

Then Pedraza laughs because his wife, Margaret, is the great-granddaughter of Spaniards. They have been married 48 years.

Twice in his lifetime, Pedraza has been to Washington in an official capacity as a tribal elder: in 1968, when President Lyndon Johnson signed a bill recognizing the Tigua and putting them under the jurisdiction of the Texas Indian Commission; and in October, in connection with legislation concerning the transfer of jurisdiction to the federal government.

"Nowdays, I don't know what's causing this trouble with the state of Texas. The United States took everything away from us; so we have the right to ask them for help."

Pedraza points to his pink adobe home.

"Almost everything you see there I built myself. I started the house in 1948. First, I put down a cement foundation, then I built on that foundation. Do you understand what I am saying? I am an Indian. I will die an Indian."

Inside his home, Pedraza shows one of his most prized possessions, a plaque thanking him for 27 years of "understanding us kids" as a bus driver for Ysleta Independent School District.

An elder on the Tigua tribal council, Pedraza brings out another treasure, a symbol of his heritage — a buffalo-hide drum, brought by his ancestors to the Lower Valley. As a boy, Pedraza learned to play the drum and to chant. He served one year as tribal governor, a title his son, Mike, now fills.

He is a Roman Catholic, but he also clings to Indian beliefs. Although Pedraza remembers the tribal hunting trips to Hueco Tanks, he refuses to hunt animals for pleasure.

"Those plants by the door are alive. Who is doing it? Nature. We believe in good things. There is a very strong spirit in everything. I can show you my drum, but you cannot see my spirit. My spirit is great."

Tigua Danny Archuleta, 20, has faith in the future.

He sees the survival of his tribe in the play of youngsters pretending to be eagle-messengers or tossing dry cereal in a bowl in a mock corn dance.

When Archuleta was a boy, he did not care about his Indian heritage. In 1980, his parents moved from Central El Paso to one of the 113 low-income housing units on the reservation.

"I hated it with all my heart. I ran away. Then I returned. I started asking questions. I learned a little bit from everybody," Archuleta says, sitting behind the desk in his classroom at South Loop School, where he directs the state-funded, 10-year-old Tigua Indian Cultural Program.

Courtroom shooting leaves one dead, another charged in murder

FORT WORTH (AP) — About 35 stunned spectators ducked for cover when a man rose from his seat in a crowded Tarrant County courtroom and fired a shot into the chest of a man who was about to go on trial, officials said.

Two bailiffs grabbed Domingo Arzola Velasquez Sr., 56, from behind and subdued him, authorities said, and Velasquez was charged later Tuesday with murder in the death of Harry Lloyd Walker II, 35, who died at a hospital about an hour after he was shot.

Walker was shot shortly after 9 a.m. while awaiting a court hearing on a misdemeanor charge stemming from a March 1 incident in which he was accused of pointing a gun at Velasquez' son, Domingo Velasquez Jr., 22. At the time he was shot, Walker was sitting beside the estranged wife of the elder Velasquez.

Tarrant County Sheriff Don Carpenter said the shooting was the culmination of a domestic quarrel between Velasquez and his wife, Mary Ann.

Family members said Velasquez was convinced there was a romantic link between his wife and Walker. The couple had filed for divorce in January, court records show.

Witnesses said Velasquez entered the courtroom with two other men, slipped into a seat at the back of the fourth floor courtroom and sat for about two minutes, then stood up, pulled a gun and shot Walker, who was sitting nearby.

Outside the courtroom, halls were jammed with people who rushed to the fourth floor to see what was happening.

An attorney, Jim Stephenson of Bedford, who was a police officer in Irving until 1979, said he was talking with a bailiff when he heard the shots. He said he rushed to a side door, saw Walker stumbling toward him, and over Walker's shoulder saw Velasquez with a gun.

"I could see the pistol in his right hand," Stephenson said. After Walker had been hit, Velasquez grabbed his wife around the neck in a choke hold and was pointing the gun at her while pulling her backward very slowly, the lawyer added.

A courtroom bailiff ordered everyone to hit the floor and threatened the gunman with his revolver.

Stephenson told the Dallas Morning News he ran back to the bailiff's office, a few feet from the side door, grabbed a gun and returned to the side door of the courtroom.

"I hollered at him — I don't remember what — and he shot at me," Stephenson said. "The woman was to his left, so I had a clear shot. I pulled the trigger several times and nothing happened."

Tarrant County Sheriff Don Carpenter has a Fort Worth courtroom cleared of photographers after one man shot another to death as he waited to go before a judge Tuesday.

Increased violence linked to prison reforms

HOUSTON (AP) — Reforms ordered by a federal judge may have inadvertently led to an increase in violence in the state's prisons, a Texas Department of Corrections official testified.

But the judge who presides over the reforms noted that the TDC was warned to hire more guards and forestall violent episodes.

Carl Jeffries, a TDC assistant classification director, testified Tuesday during a hearing in federal court on a request that TDC be held in contempt and fined for failing to follow the court-ordered reforms.

In 1981, U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice ruled that conditions in Texas prisons violated the U.S. Constitution's protection against cruel and unusual punishment. State officials in May 1985 signed an agreement that was to end courtroom battles in the lawsuit filed in 1972 by inmate David Ruiz.

Jefferies said violence erupted within the TDC when officials abolished the use of inmate building tenders — inmates who received special privileges in return for helping keep order in the prisons — and were slow to replace them with guards.

Under questioning by Justice on Tuesday, Jeffries said inmate killings and the development of gangs escalated under the new policy.

"Did the killings grow with the growth of the gangs?" Justice asked.

"I think the gangs came as an outgrowth of that," Jeffries replied. "We had a period in there when the inmates were really fighting for control."

Jeffries said he had not seen a report that warned TDC several years ago that violence would flare unless officials quickly substituted guards for inmates.

"I made reference (in a prior court order) to this report," Justice said. "It said TDC would have to act very quickly. Obviously, TDC did not."

The inmates' attorney, William Bennett Turner of San Francisco, said the TDC has failed to hire enough staff, to provide adequate housing and facilities, protection from abuse, medical treatment and counseling.

He termed TDC officials' testimony Tuesday as excuses for why they violated the court's order.

"I don't find these excuses acceptable.

TDC officials testifying Tuesday said security within the nation's second largest prison system has improved since the outbreak of violence last year, but admitted that guards have not been assigned to all housing areas.

Mexican officials detain 18 suspected 'terrorists'

DEL RIO (AP) — Mexican authorities have arrested 18 people who fit the profile of possible Middle East terrorists and who were trying to enter the United States, U.S. officials said.

Seventeen of 18 are on their way to Mexico City for deportation after they were arrested Monday at a hotel in Sabinas, Mexico, about 90 miles south of the United States, said Jerry Goodman, associate chief of the U.S. Border Patrol in Del Rio.

The group, reportedly including three women, included 11 Lebanese, six Syrians and one Turk, Goodman said.

"They were trying to make arrangements to be smuggled into the United States," Goodman said. "I would consider them suspects until you could prove to me they were not suspects,"

Goodman said U.S. authorities told Mexican officials about the attempted border crossing. He said Mexican authorities made the arrests at the Sabinas Hotel, interrogated the men in Piedras Negras, just across the border from Eagle Pass, Texas. He said the group's leader was hospitalized in Piedras Negras and the others were sent to Mexico City for deportation.

He said, however, that he did not know if the suspects were carrying money. U.S. authorities have been on the alert for possible retaliation from terrorists after the U.S. raid on Libya in April.

Goodman said the 18 arrived in Mexico City on June 14 for the World Cup soccer championships. On June 17, they went to the U.S. Consulate in Guadalajara and applied for visas, but were denied, Goodman said.

"They were people 18 to 30 years old; they were from the Middle East, fairly well educated, had come to the World Cup and had no reason to be in Sabinas, Coahuila, which is near the border," Goodman said.

"They also had U.S. addresses on envelopes they were carrying," Goodman said.

Republican RRC candidate says opponent favors trucking industry

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Republican Railroad Commission candidate Milton Fox Tuesday accused Democratic opponent John Sharp of carrying water for special interest groups by opposing deregulation of the state's trucking industry.

At a Capitol press conference Tuesday, Fox said he favors deregulation of the Texas trucking industry as a way to reduce "artificially higher rates" that result from a regulated system.

"If Sharp has his way, all Texans will continue to pay higher prices for goods shipped intrastate by truck," Fox said.

Sharp, a state Senator from Victoria who has campaigned heavily on truck and rail safety, said he has support from groups who favor deregulation as well as those who endorse a continuation of current policies.

"I don't think (Fox) understands the issue well enough to know what he's talking about," Sharp said. "To say I'm in the pocket of the trucking industry is a little bit ridiculous."

Fox, a state representative from Houston, also implied that Sharp might be pushing for a strengthening of commission policies regarding the transportation of goods within the state

"Sharp has made a large appeal for rail and truck safety, about which I feel everything must be done for improvement," Fox said, "but I wonder if that's not a cover-up for his ties to the monopoly trucking interests."

Currently, the commission issues permits to companies that want to transport goods within the state. Applicants for trucking permits must go through a lengthy review process to determine the need for such service. Few companies or individuals receive permits.

Often it is more costly to transport goods within Texas than it is to truck across state lines, because the commission dictates to companies how much they can charge for specific routes.

Meanwhile, John Thomas Henderson, a Republican candidate for the commission whom Fox defeated in a June 7 runoff, endorsed Sharp in the November general election. In a prepared statement issued Tuesday, Henderson called Fox "a government junkie" who favors regulations as "the solution for everything."

"Mr. Fox is the only Republican on the ballot who believes that more government is the best government," Henderson said. "He has been feeding at the trough of the taxpayers for 14 years."

Fox said he was not surprised at Henderson's endorsement of his Democratic opponent. "I don't think (Henderson) has really been too at home in the Republican Party," Fox said. "I'm not really alarmed by it, and I don't think it's going to cost me too many votes."

Anti-abortion group endorses Clements

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Right to Life Committee, a prominent anti-abortion group, endorsed Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements Friday.

And the president of another pro-life group, the 100,000-member strong Texas Coalition for Life, said his organization "probably" will endorse Clements within a month.

The Texas Right to Life Committee, an umbrella group for scores of local Right to Life organizations, did not side with incumbent Democratic Gov. Mark White because "the current governor didn't lift a finger to support our efforts in the last session," the group's president said.

Texas Right to Life president Robert Powell said his non-partisan group has more than 30,000 members on its mailing list and did not endorse a gubernatorial candidate from either party in the primary elections.

Powell said Clements has agreed to support his group's legislative package next session. Also, Powell said, former Gov. Clements has agreed to appoint one of his staff members to act as a liaison between his office and the various anti-abortion groups.

Bill Price, Texas Coalition for Life president, said he "would find it hard to conceive" that his group would endorse White or stay neutral in the governor's race.

The coalition backed unsuccessful candidate Tom Loeffler in the May 3 primary. At the time, Price said Loeffler got their endorsement because Clements did nothing as governor to help the anti-abortion cause.

Loeffler's deputy campaign manager John Weaver took that same position with the Clements campaign after the primary. Reggie Bashur, Clements' spokesman, said Weaver has talked with Price and the two are planning a meeting next week.

State health department holds public hearing without public

AUSTIN (AP) — The agency officials were there. The reporters and television cameras were there. The only thing missing at the Department of Health public hearing was the public.

No one showed up Tuesday to testify about the way the state agency administers a federal program that gets food to poor mothers and children.

Similar hearings in past years drew "very, very slim" crowds, according to Ray Krzesniak, a health department accountant. But Tuesday was the first complete shutout.

"At this time I will open the hearing to comments, either oral, written or both," Krzesniak said in an attempt to start the public hearing at the Department of Health auditorium.

"Is there anyone here today that would like to provide testimony...No ?...Don't be bashful," he said.

Seventeen people, including reporters, signed in for the hearing. None cared to testify.

The session was the annual hearing to gather public input about the way the Department of Health handles the Women, Infants and Children program that supplies food for about 215,000 poor women and children in Texas.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture spends about $100 million a year on the WIC program in Texas, and requires the state to hold the annual hearing.

The Department of Health is proposing no major changes in its administration of the program, so Krzesniak said there really was little to testify about.

"I never know what to expect" at the hearings, he said. "I wouldn't be surprised if a lot of people showed up. On the other hand I wouldn't be surprised if very few showed up."

In previous years, the health department held a series of four or five regional WIC hearings around the state.

"We found we always had a very low turnout doing it that way. So we asked the U.S. Department of Agriculture if we could trim that down and have just one hearing here in Austin. They agreed to that. It doesn't seem to affect one way or the other the amount of turnout that we get," he said.

In past years, witnesses have included grocery men who had ideas about better ways to run the program, local health department officials who administered it in their regions and WIC participants who just wanted to offer thanks for the food.

STATE IN BRIEF

Federal bill will raise water costs, official says

AUSTIN (AP) — Some Texans face higher costs for water under legislation pending in Congress, says Charles E. Nemir, executive administrator of the Texas Water Development Board.

"Instead of encouraging more efficient use of existing reservoirs, the policy of seeking a federal profit at the expense of state and local government sponsors may well cause needed reallocation projects to fail," said Nemir in a letter to Texas members of a congressional conference committee working on water legislation. "The consequences will be no return to the federal treasury and increased water supply costs for the state of Texas and its taxpayers."

Nemir said that some of the water in a number of existing reservoirs built by the corps is no longer needed for the purposes authorized by Congress in the original plans. Under the Water Supply Act of 1958 that water can be reallocated to other uses, such as for municipal and industrial supply. The corps required the entity purchasing the reallocated supply to pay 100 percent of the actual costs in developing the reservoir.

However, Nemir said, the corps has now changed its procedures and requires payment at replacement costs. The result has been a 15-fold increase in the reallocation costs at some reservoirs, he said.

Group backs budget cuts

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' budget deficit could be solved with spending cuts but it will be up to the 1987 Legislature to decide if that is politically feasible, says the Texas Association of Taxpayers.

Although some state officials, particularly Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, have said increased taxes seem inevitable, there are still some who think spending cuts are the solution, the nonprofit organization representing businesses said Tuesday in its monthly publication.

The TAT has estimated a shortfall of $3.3 billion through 1989. The figure is based on the level of current state spending plus "unavoidable" increases.

"Both gubernatorial candidates have subscribed to this idea (spending cuts) in slightly different forms," the TAT said. "Former Gov. Bill Clements has flatly promised to balance the budget through spending reductions. Gov. Mark White has said he believes the budget can be balanced but has not ruled out anything but income taxes."

Gas explosion kills man

RAYWOOD (AP) — A 22-year-old Liberty man was killed when an explosion and fire erupted an at isolated Mobil Oil Corp. natural gas transmission plant, officials said.

The dead man was identified as Doug Garness, driver of a tank truck, officials said. Garness was employed by Triangle Petroleum Service of Liberty.

The cause of the 11:20 a.m. explosion Tuesday at the Raywood Gas Plant was under investigation and damages had not been determined, said Pat Richardson, spokeswoman for Mobil in Houston.

"We do not know exactly what happened," she said.

Shultz signs over $200 million aid to Philippines

By HENRY GOTTLIEB

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz today signed an agreement providing the Philippines with $200 million to aid its struggling economy, and expressed confidence Congress would approve a request for $150 million more.

Shultz, who signed the agreement at the Foreign Ministry with Vice President Salvador Laurel, said the money would be used "to support the Philippines government budget at a time when the country is confronting a severe fiscal crisis."

He met later with President Corazon Aquino at her official residence, a tightly guarded government guest house across a street from the Malacanang Palace.

More than 250 demonstrators protested the meeting, but dispersed 30 minutes before Shultz arrived after being told by police they could not stay.

"Down with imperialism, military bases are a curse," the demonstrators chanted in Tagalog as they marched away carrying signs saying, "Shultz go home" and "No to U.S. Imperialism."

When he was in Manila in late April, the secretary of state promised to speed up delivery of the money, which normally would have been provided in smaller payments over a longer period of time.

WORLD

He met over breakfast with armed forces chief Gen. Fidel Ramos and Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, a session Ramos described as "a reunion of old friends. We didn't ask or request anything."

His also was to meet with Roman Catholic Cardinal Jaime Sin, one of the most influential figures in the Philippines.

The $200 million grant is part of a $505 million aid package the Reagan administration says is the most it can provide the hard-pressed country in the fiscal year that ends Sept. 30.

The only money in the package that had not been earmarked for the Philippines before Mrs. Aquino took over as president from Ferdinand E. Marcos in February is $150 million now being considered by Congress.

"We are taking the necessary measures to make available remaining portions of the assistance," Shultz told reporters. "And I think I can say to you that the $150 million pledge the president made to Mrs. Aquino is well received in our Congress and I am even more confident than I was a month or so ago, when I talked about it, that it will pass."

Shultz's optimism is based on support of the appropriation by key leaders in both parties and statements by Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., influential chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, that he would like to provide the Philippines with even more aid.

"I'm here to sign this agreement, but really to say how firmly we support the new government of President Aquino and the things that you are doing to revitalize the political, economic and security processes here in the Philippines," Shultz said.

In summary, he said the money will provide "breathing room" for the economy, which is weighted down by by high unemployment, low growth and a $26 billion foreign debt.

Other aid yet to be provided includes loans at relatively low interest rates, and funds for food imports and a program that aids Philippine ability to export sugar.

Philippine newspapers continued to print reminders that the bulk of the aid has long been promised.

The Manila Daily Inquirer and News Herald reprinted comments by Mrs. Aquino's executive secretary, Joker Arroyo, that "before we react with joy like jumping chimpanzees we should know that what Secretary Shultz is bringing is rental money...not aid money as people would make it appear."

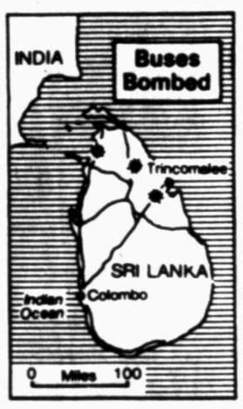

While the United States views the program as economic support for the Philippines, many Filipino leaders see it as rent due on Clark Air Base and Subic Bay naval station, two of the most important U.S. military installations in Asia.

Later this week, Shultz will meet with representatives from the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, a six-country trade organization concerned about protectionist trade moves in the United States. Shultz also will meet high-level representatives from ASEAN's key trading partners, Japan, the European Community, Australia, New Zealand and Canada.

Sri Lankan police blame separatists for bombings

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Police said Tamil separatist guerrillas set off three explosions today, killing 17 people and wounding more than 50 others only hours before the opening of a national political conference on the Tamil ethnic crisis.

Police and the government's Joint Operations Command reported the three almost simultaneous explosions. They said two blasts occurred on government-run buses, and a third hit a police jeep escorting a third bus, injuring eight policemen.

AP Lasergraphic

The joint Operations Command said 17 people were killed in the most devastating explosion, at Kantalai, 22 miles southwest of Trincomalee. Police at Trincomalee said six people also were injured in the bombing of the bus at Kantalai. Police said most of the dead and injured were Sinhalese.

The other explosions struck a bus near the village of Illukulam, 152 miles north of Colombo, and a police jeep near Pulmoddai, 161 miles northeast of the capital.

Officials said 42 people, mostly Sinhalese, were injured in the bus explosion near Illukulam.

All three blasts were blamed by police on Tamil militants fighting for a separate homeland in Sri Lanka's north and east. There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the bombings.

The explosions came hours before a so-called All Party Conference called by President Junius R. Jayewardene began meeting to discuss the Tamil issue. The conference was closed to reporters.

The island's major Tamil political grouping, the Tamil United Liberation Front, announced Monday it was boycotting the conference and accused Jayewardene of killing Tamil civilians.

South African government ends its daily news briefings

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government said today that the state of emergency it imposed June 12 has curbed black unrest so much that there is no point in continuing its daily news briefings.

The move came a day after two bombs exploded in central Johannesburg, injuring 19 people.

Such attacks generally are blamed on the African National Congress guerrilla group, which has been fighting white domination since 1961. The group is outlawed in South Africa but has offices in nearby countries.

No one claimed responsibility for those blasts, and today ANC spokesman Tom Sebina declined comment on the explosions in a telex to The Associated Press in Johannesburg from ANC headquarters in Lusaka, Zambia.

The blasts came as President P.W. Botha signed into law two controversial new security bills that were passed last week by a government-dominated President's Council after being rejected by mixed-race and Indian legislators.

Botha signed the measures in Cape Town late Tuesday, giving his government permanent powers to impose sweeping security clampdowns in any district declared an "unrest area."

In Pretoria the state Bureau of Information suspended indefinitely daily news briefings held since the government imposed unprecedented curbs on the press under the nationwide state of emergency declared June 12.

The bureau said the "decline of incidents of unrest" since the emergency meant there is little to report.

The move marked a further reduction in the already severely curtailed flow news from the bureau, virtually the only source of official information since the state of emergency was imposed.

After the blasts in Johannesburg on Tuesday, the Bureau of Information said it had not determined the kind of devices used, but called the attacks "callous acts of terrorism."

The 19 injured was the highest casualty toll from apparent sabotage attacks in Johannesburg, the nation's largest city.

Bureau of Information spokesman Casper Venter said Tuesday that two blacks were killed in racial unrest, bringing the death toll to 59 under the emergency.

He said police shot a man in Witbank, east of Johannesburg, and the other was shot dead by blacks near Uitenhage in the eastern Cape province. Venter said three blacks attacked a supermarket with rocket-propelled grenades and automatic rifles in the tribal homeland of KwaNdebele, wounding a black man.

Also Tuesday, a veteran anti-apartheid legislator told Parliament she has lists of 1,800 people who have been detained under state of emergency rules.

Israeli secret service director resigns in beating controversy

JERUSALEM (AP) — The head of Israel's secret service resigned today because of the controversy over the beating deaths of two Palestinian bus hijackers and was granted immunity from prosecution in the case, the Cabinet secretary announced.

Shin Bet chief Avraham Shalom and three other security agents were granted presidential clemency and cannot be prosecuted in the case, Cabinet secretary Yossi Beilin said. The other three agents have not resigned, he said.

The resignation appeared to preclude any full-scale investigation into allegations that Shalom ordered the Palestinians killed and then covered it up, and was an apparent victory for Prime Minister Shimon Peres and Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who opposed an inquiry.

Peres and Shamir warned an investigation of the incident could damage Israel's security because it might make public details of how the counterintelligence agency operates. Shamir, who was prime minister at the time, has been accused of knowledge of the alleged cover-up.

The decision on Shalom was reached after all-night consultations among Yosef Harish, Israel's new attorney general, Peres and other top Cabinet ministers. Leftist legislators immediately denounced it, and four minor political parties filed motions of no-confidence against the government.

"This decision is wrong and disappointing. ... It is one big whitewash intended to allow the political echelon to escape investigation," legislator Yossi Sarid of the Citizens Rights Party said on Israel radio. "Shamir can throw a big party."

Other legislators challenged the legality of the decision by President Chaim Herzog to grant clemency before legal proceedings have begun.

Shalom asked for clemency — which grants him immunity from prosecution — Harish said in a statement released at the prime minister's office. Harish said that "it appears there is no point to an investigation" now that clemency has been granted.

"Shalom announced that he wanted to be relieved because the publicity and the revelation of his identity would not allow him to continue fulfilling his job," Beilin said in a statement to reporters outside the prime minister's office.

The controversy marked the first time in Israeli history that the Shin Bet chief's identity was revealed in public while he was in office.

Beilin said he did not know when Shalom's resignation would take effect or who would replace him.

"The prime minister told the Cabinet he would establish a committee to determine new operating procedures based on the lessons of the past," Beilin said.

The controversy centers around the hijacking of an Israeli civilian bus to the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip. Two of four hijackers were killed when Israeli soldiers stormed the bus, but another two were captured alive and killed later.

Shalom is alleged to have ordered the killings and to have covered them up by giving two previous inquiry commissions false evidence.

Israel radio reported that several legal precedents exist for the president to grant clemency before legal proceedings have begun. Beilin said Herzog "acted according to full legal authority."

But a Justice Ministry official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said a 1948 ruling by Yitzhak Zamir, the former attorney general, said the president could not grant clemency until a court handed down a verdict.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Mrs. Klinghoffer's statement read in ship hijacking trial

De Rosa

GENOA, Italy (AP) — One of the Achille Lauro hijackers cried and kissed American hostage Marilyn Klinghoffer after her wheelchair-bound husband was shot to death, according to a sworn statement by Mrs. Klinghoffer read in court today.

Mrs. Klinghoffer, who died of cancer this spring, gave the statement to Italian authorities Oct. 12, three days after the hijacking ended.

Her statement was read today in Italian by Judge Lino Monteverde, who is conducting the trial of 15 people charged in connection with hijacking the Italian cruise liner off Port Said, Egypt. During the hijacking, Klinghoffer was slain and his body was dumped overboard.

Mrs. Klinghoffer said in the statement that 10 Americans and five Britons among the passengers and crew were separated from the other hostages and taken to an upper deck.

Her 69-year-old husband remained on a lower level of the ship because he was confined to a wheelchair, her statement said.

"About 3:15 (or) 3:30 (p.m.), I heard two shots," Mrs. Klinghoffer said in the statement. "Right after, I heard a noise of something going into the water...a splash."

She said the hostages asked about the noise, but "none of us got a precise answer." At one point, she asked one of the gunmen about her husband's fate.

"He said he was well. Then he gave me two kisses, he was crying," she said in the statement.

One of the men accused in the hijacking, Ahmad Marrouf al-Assadi, testified last week that he was upset when another hijacker told him he had shot Klinghoffer. Assadi testified that when Mrs. Klinghoffer asked him about her husband, he didn't know what to say and embraced her.

Three of the four men accused of carrying out the Oct. 7-9 hijacking are being tried in a heavily guarded courtroom beneath the Genoa courthouse. The fourth, Bassam Al-Ashker, was 17 when the hijacking took place and will be tried in juvenile court.

Also being tried are 12 men charged with having a role in the hijacking, but only two of these are in custody. The rest are being tried in absentia, including the alleged mastermind, Palestinian guerrilla leader Mohammed Abbas.

Ashker appeared at the 5-day-old trial for the first time today. He retracted a pre-trial confession, testifying that he had never seen Klinghoffer and that none of the hijackers had killed anyone on board.

Earlier in the trial, two other defendants, Yousef Magied Al-Molqi and Ibrahim Fatayer Abdelatif — also retracted pre-trial confessions.

The ship's captain, Gerardo De Rosa, testified Tuesday he was not sure during the ordeal that an American passenger had been slain because he never saw a body.

He testified, however, that Molqi, wearing bloodstained jeans, entered the bridge at one point and said "Boom, boom." De Rosa said Molqi handed him Klinghoffer's passport and that of a New Jersey woman, saying, "This will be the second."

ANC role stressed by Tambo

LONDON (AP) — The head of South Africa's outlawed black guerrilla movement said today his meeting with a minister in the British Foreign Office demonstrates the African National Congress must be part of a solution to strife in South Africa.

Oliver Tambo met Tuesday with Lynda Chalker, a junior minister in the Foreign Office, in the first contact at such a high level between an ANC leader and the British government. Both termed the talks useful but could not agree on how to end apartheid, South Africa's system of racial separation.

Tambo, speaking to reporters at Heathrow Airport before leaving for Tanzania, said Britain's previous refusal to meet with the ANC had put Britain in the same position as the Pretoria government and made it appear to be "on the side of South Africa and the South African racists."

Syria seeking Arab support

LONDON (AP) — Syria is planning a limited war with Israel later this year to regain the disputed Golan Heights and is seeking military support from its Arab neighbors, according to an article in the latest edition of Jane's Defense Weekly.

This week's edition of the magazine quoted unidentified "moderate Arab sources" as saying Syrian government and military officials have visited several Arab countries, including Libya and Jordan, in recent weeks to brief Arab governments on the purported war plan.

Jane's said Jordan is believed to have resisted Syrian pressure to launch "diversionary attacks" across the Jordan River to coincide with a Syrian attack on the Golan Heights.

But it quoted "well-placed Jordanian sources" as saying that King Hussein was considering lending diplomatic support to a Syrian assault.

Italy links Syria to terrorism

ROME (AP) — Interior Minister Oscar Luigi Scalfaro says Italian prosecutors have concrete evidence that Syria is a main source of international terrorism.

Scalfaro made the comment Tuesday during a news conference at which he and U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese III signed an agreement to expand cooperation in combating international terrorism.

The two officials, who signed the accord after two days of talks, said the agreement created a new Italian-American panel to share information and experts on terrorism.

AIDS conference concluding

PARIS (AP) — Scientists and health officials attending the Second International AIDS Congress say that despite some advances, the disease still is 100 percent fatal and education is the only known weapon against it.

J.B. Brunet, an official of the French Ministry of Health, addresses the three-day congress that ends today on the worldwide threat posed by AIDS.

AIDS, an acronym for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, is spread through exchanges of blood or semen, and homosexuals and intravenous drug users have been its primary victims in the developed world.

However, in Africa the disease has been found among men and women of all classes and Brunet says health education is the only weapon.

"Obtaining behavioral changes before the devastating effects of AIDS become clearly apparent is therefore the main and most difficult goal...for countries which have just begun to face this epidemic," Brunet says.

A summary of his remarks was made available prior to his address.

Opposition leader beaten

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — Police beat up an opposition leader when he tried unsuccessfully to return to Paraguay for a fifth time, the exile and a former U.S. ambassador said.

Domingo Laino flew back to Uruguay after his fifth unsuccessful attempt to return home, and was taken to a hospital for X-rays. A doctor who examined him at the airport said he was suffering from bruised ribs.

Laino told reporters at the airport in Montevideo, Uruguay, that police grabbed him and punched him when he tried to get off the plane in Asuncion. The opposition leader, visibly in pain and walking with difficulty, quoted the police as saying, "Laino, we can kill you."

President Alfredo Stroessner, the general who has ruled Paraguay since 1954, expelled Laino in 1982 for "subversive activities."

Prison rebels assassinated

LIMA, Peru (AP) — President Alan Garcia said Tuesday night that security troops shot and killed 30 to 40 guerrilla inmates after they surrendered following a prison riot last week and that they would be arrested.

In a nationally televised address, Garcia said the chief officers and troops "proceeded to brutally assassinate the subversives" after they surrendered. He did not say how many soldiers did the killing.

The government says at least 280 inmates were killed last Wednesday when thousands of troops stormed three prisons in or near Lima to put down simultaneous prisoner uprisings. The government says the inmates who were killed belonged to the Maoist Shining Path guerrilla movement.

The United Left, the major opposition coalition, alleges that troops killed dozens of prisoners at Lima's Lurigancho prison after they surrendered, citing reports by surviving prisoners and other witnesses.

Manage Your Own Time & Business

For some it's hard work, for others it's pure pleasure. If you've always wanted to be your own boss and make your own decisions consider being an owner operator with Aero Mayflower Transit Company, Inc., the most recognized name in the business. You'll travel the country in your own tractor with our trailer and we'll supply your loads.

To qualify
- Be 21 or older with a good driving record.
- Be able to invest a minimum of $4,500 (if you don't own a tractor.) Financial assistance is available to qualified applicants.
- Attend a training program.

Interested? Call toll free 1-800-428-1220 (Indiana call 1-800-382-1212) between 8:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. Indianapolis time.
