Smashes A Cake, But Cake Still Remains

Record News Cooking School Expert Creates Sensation at the Kemp Ball Room; Says Any Husband Could Do It.

TODAY'S PROGRAM

2 p. m. Tour of the Kemp hotel kitchens under direction of the chef, Louis Schepp.

2:30 until 4:30 Mrs. Ida L. Chitwood's lectures and demonstrations. Today is Pie and Pastry day.

HOLDING a perfectly baked angel food cake of delicate texture before an interested class of 250 local women at The Record News cooking school at the Kemp hotel ballroom Monday afternoon in the opening session, Mrs. Ida L. Chitwood, nationally known food expert and demonstrator of cookery, astounded her audience to the breathless stage when she smashed the sides of the cake together between her palms, and smilingly explained as the cake resumed its former round shape, that the unique test was the proof that the Belle of Wichita flour, used in its preparation was a 100 per cent flour for cake baking as well as bread making and other kitchen uses.

FROM an attractively arranged model kitchen, on a specially built platform at the end of the ballroom, Mrs. Chitwood delivered a practical and comprehensive lesson on cake baking, specializing on angel food, and as she talked in her entertaining manner, she actually mixed the cake, illustrating the steps in her lecture, baked the cake, timing it properly, and frosted the cake with plain white frosting which she made before her audience, embellishing the cake with fancy border of pink frosting, and an elaborate design of wild roses, green leaves and trailing vines.

"No difference how far you get from Wichita Falls, you hear about it in some way or another," Mrs. Chitwood told the women in her opening address, "and I have heard over the state, that women of this city have made quite a study of health and good foods, and are intelligent and well posted along those lines.

"IT will be a pleasure to conduct a school with such women as members of the classes. I wish some of you mothers would bring your daughters along, I am interested in the young girls, for most of them are looking forward to successful marriages, and a knowledge of cooking and correct foods is vitally important, whether the bride prepares elaborate meals or not."

Seek Gas Relief in Repeal of Cox Bill

Repeal of the Cox law giving to the state railroad commission the right to fix charges of a gas company for supplying fuel for domestic and commercial use will be sought in the legislature by Texas communities involved in the historic dispute over gas rates charged in the north part of the state. This, it has been revealed, is the latest plan of attack of those who regard the charges unfair. It marks another step in the long legal battle to which some 20 or more Texas cities, the Lone Star and the North Texas Gas companies are parties.

A meeting of the communities involved is to be held in Dallas next Saturday morning and will be attended by Mayor Frank Collier who will represent Wichita Falls' interests. A bill to repeal the Cox law has been drafted by Hamp Abney, city attorney of Sherman, and is to be introduced in the present legislature.

CRAWFORD ON STAND IN HIS OWN DEFENSE

Prominent Dallas Lawyer Fights Against a Death Verdict

MOTHER TESTIFIES

Dramatic Scene Enacted When Prominent Woman And Son Heard

DALLAS, Jan. 26.—(AP)—William Lester Crawford sobbed today when great gusts of emotion swept over him as his mother, Mrs. Kate Lamar Crawford, bared her life for her son on trial in criminal court here for the killing of Paul M. O'Day, September 11. Then the defendant added to the sensations of the day when he took the stand and declared that he did not learn of the alleged insults made by O'Day to his mother until the night before the tragedy, when he read a brief in a will suit over the estate of his father, the late Col. W. L. Crawford.

Clashing currents of contention augmented the intensity of the trial when opposing attorneys rushed developments to the crucial period. With the close of a hectic day for Judge Charles A. Pippen, court attaches, jurors, lawyers and spectators in the crowded and dismal courtroom, the defendant on the stand. He had regained his composure, which had been completely broken when W. J. Strawbridge, juror in one of the will suits trials, repeated what O'Day is alleged to have said about Mrs. Crawford, when the judge instructed the jury to return a decision in her favor.

Scores for Defense.

Spectators sensed the importance of the defendant's testimony when he declared that he dit not hear the taking of the deposition of Willis Evans, negro coachman. "The first time I heard that was when I read it in the brief the night before this trouble," he declared.

Crawford Takes Stand

William Lester Crawford took the stand immediately following Dealey's testimony. The crowds packing the court room rose to their feet and silence fell over the court room.

Crawford testified that he was now in his twenty-eighth year, was born in Dallas county and was the son of the late Colonel W. L. Crawford, and Mrs. Kate LaMar Crawford, who had preceded him on the witness stand.

"What was the home life of your father and mother up to the time of your father's death?" he was asked by the prosecution.

"That is a memory I cherish," Crawford replied, and his voice grew husky.

"Was it a happy home life?"

"Yes, sir."

Crawford continued, describing the relations of members of his family, in response to the question: "My father," he said, "was a kind of pal with me. I had no brothers and he made himself a pal to me. With my mother, it was the same. We lived our life together. My father worshipped my mother to a point of idolatry. He called her 'Mother,' and his voice always had a ring of respect and reverence in it when he addressed her."

"What were your feelings toward your mother?"

"My father always taught me to respect my mother," the witness declared with deliberate emphasis.

Details Will Suits

"After father's death," Crawford added, "Judge W. W. Smith took charge of his affairs."

A history of the Crawford will suits then followed.

Crawford told of his mother's visit to his office in February, 1921, as she was on the way to the office of Locke & Locke, where the depositions of a negro coachman, Willis Evans, were to be taken.

In this the defendant corroborated the testimony already given by his mother and others, that she did not want her son to go to the office where the negro's testimony was to be taken.

"My mother thought the negro was a boy named Will, who had worked for us," Crawford continued, "and that he might become impertinent and humiliate me with references to our domestic affairs. I went with her in spite of her request that I do not, and saw the parties in Locke & Locke's office seated about a table taking the negro's testimony."

The defense contention on this point that Crawford did not remain in the office all the time while the negro's testimony was being taken, was substantiated.

Asked Him to Leave

"I remained in the office, only six or seven minutes," Crawford said, "and then my mother whispered for me to leave, asking me to do this for her, that she would join me at my office after the deposition of the negro had been taken. I left the office and went to my own office, but at 6 o'clock in the afternoon my mother had not come, so I went back to look for her. I remained there then until they had recessed to meet again next morning." He said he took his mother to the office of Locke & Locke again the next morning and then went to his own office.

"I probably remained three or four minutes, then," he testified.

The court room crowd sensed the importance of this testimony. The statements bore directly on the question of whether Crawford knew before September 10 of the negro coachman's

CITY ASSURED OF TRUCK AND FIRE STATION

Bullington Gives Land For House; Council Asks For Bids

With a gift to the city yesterday of a tract of land suitable for a station and decision of the city council last night to advertise for bids on a new truck and hose, virtual assurance has been given that a fifth fire house will soon be added to Wichita Falls' fire fighting facilities. It will probably be spring, however, before the truck is purchased and the station built.

Bullington Gives Land.

The land may be used for a station site and is strategically located in that section of the city in greatest need of it. It is within four blocks of the Alamo school and can serve the Floral Heights, the Highland Heights and other thickly settled residential additions in the west part of town.

Bids on a modern pumper truck and on 4,000 feet of fire hose will be called for presentation to the council on March 2, it has been decided. Financing of the station and truck will be cared for in the 1925 budget, preparation of which will start within the next month.

PARNELL GETS A BACK FIRE OVER MUNICIPAL BILL

Collier Will Wire Wichita Senator To Delay Its Progress

A request that further legislative proceedings on the measure be halted until interested parties can obtain another hearing will be wired to Senator J. D. Parnell at Austin today by Mayor Frank Collier, acting in behalf of this city and other municipalities who are protesting against Senator Parnell's bill regulating the operation of municipally owned public utilities. Mayor Collier has been authorized by the commissioners to take this step against a measure which, it is felt, will be harmful in the extreme to public utilities in the hands of a municipality.

Telegram From Houston.

In a telegram received Monday morning by Mayor Collier from Mayor Oscar Holcomb of Houston it was suggested that this city bring pressure to bear on the Wichita Falls senator. Mayor Holcomb characterized the Parnell bill as one which would be a "death blow to municipally owned utilities," and in his telegram said: "Parnell senate bill No. 83 death blow to municipally owned utilities. Understand same has been reported on favorably by committee. Suggest you wire your senator asking for rehearing. Vitally important and if you are not familiar with bill at least ask rehearing so you can familiarize yourself with it."

At present, passage of the measure would have no effect on Wichita Falls since this city does not own or operate any public utility projects. It has been pointed out, however, that the day might come again when the city would acquire a light plant, a street car system or some other similar enterprise and in that event it would be vitally interested.

To Towns Over 1000.

Senator Parnell's bill will be applicable to all owns and cities over 1,000 population. It provides for the arbitrary expenditure of all revenue derived from the operation of the utilities. The manner in which funds shall be used to insure workmen about the plants, how interest and sinking funds shall be provided and other disposition made are set forth. Among other things it provides that net profits made by one utility may not be transferred to the use of another in which a deficit may occur.

BLIZZARD HITS WITH SNOW ON GALE'S CREST

Wichita Falls Whipped By Fiercest Attack of The Season

OUT OF THE NORTH

All Texas Feels Latest And Bitterest of Year's Northers

Winter's third aggressive advance on Wichita Falls was in full swing Monday night.

Swept in by a 25-mile an hour gale from the north, a snow storm of husky proportions bit and cut through the city, while tumbling barometers and sinking thermometers attested to the power behind it. Near-zero weather, it was predicted, would hold North Texas in its grip before daylight Tuesday morning. Railroads reaching into the Panhandle reported the storm was increasing in fury there early Monday evening, while weather bureau reports indicated no relief could be expected before Tuesday night at least.

Another Kind of Storm.

Wichitans last night were given a glimpse of another kind of snow storm, the exact opposite of the one which covered this section with a fleecy blanket last Sunday. Whereas the fall a week ago came in a mild temperature, with practically no wind, yesterday's was borne in on the wings of a howling gale with the temperature sinking well below the freezing mark. Last Sunday the snow was a thing to revel in and admire; it settled down slowly, without sting or bite; it transformed the landscape into an alabaster-tinted picture and spread a clinging robe of white over everything it touched.

Monday night's, however, was different. Fine, powdery and sharp, the flakes were whipped through the streets with a fury that speedily cleared the business section of traffic. At 6 o'clock the storm began in earnest and prevailed until 12 o'clock. During that time the streets resembled a series of creviced roofs with a great fire burning below and sending up swirling clouds of white smoke.

Whirled By Wind.

The flakes, caught by the wind, were twirled and eddied into fantastic designs for all the world resembling smoke or fog playing over the roof of a huge building.

A maximum temperature of 66 degrees was registered Monday morning by the thermometer at the government observation station operated here by the Wichita Falls Electric company. At 5 o'clock it had dropped to 23 degrees, which was a variation of 43 degrees in about eight hours. A maximum wind velocity of 25 miles per hour was recorded with an average of 15 for the day.

BARBERS HIDE SCISSORS; MEET IN A BANQUET

Wichita Tonsors Dine In Honor of New Officers At Mahaney Cafeteria

Tonsorial artists, shave and haircut fellows, 44 of them, members of the Wichita Falls Journeyman Barbers' union, banqueted last night at Mahaney's cafeteria in honor of the newly elected officers of their union and the proprietors of the shops that furnished them their working places.

Banqueted, and laughed at their mate's expense as toastmaster, H. M. Newman bared the lives of the city's financial and judicial pillars. Wylie L. Robertson of the City National bank, and H. F. Weldon, formerly of the thirtieth district court, and called them to account for their shortcomings in the chair.

The razor and scissors were put away for the evening, and the other things a barber sells forgotten in an hour of conviviality and friendly banter.

Thirty Years Ago

"It's good for men to get together," Judge Weldon told them. "You've taken your shots singly at me for 30 years, and I'm going to use this opportunity to take 30 years of pent-up vengence on you all at once." And with a marvelous memory for the cuts of core, and locks that weren't, shots just right, and for endless queries of "Anything else?" the judge dragged forth skeletons whitened with age and told the stories of yesterday's barkers and the fellows that shaved him 30 years ago.

Then in a serious vein he told them, "The barber of 30 years ago and that man of today are two different kinds of people. Development since the advent of your organization has taken you from the ranks and placed you on a pedestal of your own, a pedestal from which there is not a prosecutor or defense attorney in the state could ask better than to have an entire jury taken, in order to be assurred of a safe, sensible, and sure verdict."

"You are among the best citizens in Wichita Falls," they were told by Mr. Robertson, who stressed the value of building in the matter of credit, and on social and religious lines.

Install Officers

The banquet was preceded by a business meeting at the Labor Temple at which officers of the union for the coming year were installed. A. B. Farmer, president, W. O. Ridley, vice president, C. D. Brown, secretary and treasurer; Cecil Williams, recorder; A. V. Adams, guide; and Chester McDaniel, guardian. The following were present:

SMALL SON OF O. M'DONALD IS PAINFULLY HURT

Mrs. McDonald And S. F. Vanhooser Also Suffer Injuries In Crash

AUTOS COLLIDE

Machine Driven By A. B. Williams Crashes Into Car at 6:30 p. m.

O. L. McDonald, Jr., 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ollie McDonald, 502 Austin street, was seriously injured and his mother and grandfather, Mrs. McDonald and S. F. Vanhooser were less painfully hurt at 6:30 Monday evening when an automobile in which they were riding crashed with a machine driven by A. B. Williams, 1512 Harrison, at the intersection of Austin and Ninth. Both cars figuring in the accident were almost demolished.

The McDonald lad is in the general hospital with a badly mashed and lacerated left leg and painful cuts and bruises. Mrs. McDonald was treated at the same place for cuts and bruises and, with her father, was later taken home after the latter's mashed and broken right hand had been dressed. A second boy, also in the machine, was shaken up and bumped about the head in the crash but was not hurt.

The accident came when the McDonald and Williams cars both sought to pass the corner at the same time. The McDonald machine was running south on Austin, police were told, and Mr. Williams was coming east on Ninth. The swirling snow sweeping the intersection made vision difficult for both drivers, and neither saw the other car, they said, until too late to avoid the collision.

Mrs. McDonald, her father, Mr. Vanhooser and the two boys were trapped in their machine when it turned over under the impact of the smash with Williams' machine. A number of passers-by hurried to the assistance of the victims and lifted the wrecked McDonald car from the victims. They were taken into the W. L. Sr. John home, 901 Austin, and given first aid there until ambulances could take them to the hospital.

Mr. Williams is employed at the Parmenter Motor company. O. L. McDonald, father of the injured by, is a county motorcycle officer.

The train started from Louisiana over the Southern Pacific last Friday, according to word to Fort Worth and Denver City railway offices here and was on exhibition Monday in Houston, where it attracted considerable attention among produce and grocery circles. It will be exhibited Tuesday in Dallas, will then be in Ft. Worth and will come up here Wednesday. The potatoes are packed in refrigerator cars which may be heated so that no damage will result from the cold wave.

Mr. Witherspoon has gone to Fort Worth to come up with the shipment.

WACO NONE TOO SURE OF TEXAS LEAGUE BERTH YET, SAY THOSE OFFICIALS WHO FAVOR OAK CLIFF

Dallas Suburb Believed Better Proposition By Some—Odds Back Brazos Village, However

Waco in the Texas league again!

Well, not yet exactly. But—

Writes Jinx Tucker in the Waco News-Tribune: "It seems that the only thing that prevents the announcement this morning that Waco is a member of the Texas league is the mere technicality of a Texas league meeting."

Lone Star loopers will gang up in Shreveport Saturday for the purpose of first placing the orphan Galveston franchise in some city and then beginning schedule arrangement for the 1925 diamond foray.

Oak Cliff would be a better location for the eighth franchise than Waco, a city which failed with a class D team and a city which refused to support a champion Texas league team in the old days prior to 1919 and the entrance of Wichita Falls to the organization, believe some Texas league officials.

Waco seems destined for another fling at a class A berth, but there is a possibility of opposition to this in the session of moguls Saturday.

"I would rather see Oak Cliff in the Texas league than Waco," one league official told the writer yesterday. "There seems a great possibility of Waco being taken into the league again, but there will be probably some opposition at the meeting."

Naturally owners of the Dallas club would rather see Waco in the league than Oak Cliff. These men would not want to run the risk of split gate receipts, which probably would ensure more or less should a club be placed in Oak Cliff. But, in Fort Worth they seem to take to the Oak Cliff idea, and it is possible Fort Worth will favor Oak Cliff in preference to Waco at the league meeting.

So on the face of it, Waco hasn't cinched a Texas league berth yet, and there's still a chance for a slip-up. But the odds favor the Brazos river village.

Presuming Waco gains entrance, Buddy Tanner and his Spudders should prove a drawing card in that city. Tanner was one of the outstanding baseball lights of the old Waco Navigators who with Ellis Hardy at the helm navigated the Texas league channel to the pennant with ease three straight years. And Wacoans will remember that the Wichita Falls franchise was at one time Waco's.

✣ ✣ ✣ ✣

Waco's club in the Texas Association carried the Monicker, "Indians." Wonder if they'll hold to that name in the class A circuit.

✣ ✣ ✣ ✣

But Six Major Player-Managers.

While five of the American league managers will direct their teams while filling a position in the line-up, only one of the eight pilots in the National league will take an active part in the games of that organization.

The five managers expected to play with their clubs in the A. L. the coming campaign are Tris Speaker of the Indians, Ty Cobb of the Tigers, Stanley Harris of the world's champion Senators, George Sisler of the Browns and Eddie Collins of the White Sox.

Beauty Dave Bancroft is the lone player in the old league.

Just what part of the games the various active pilots in the younger circuit will play this year is a question. Cobb has been trying for two campaigns to build an outfield for the Tigers that will be acceptable without including himself. Heinie Manush now seems ready to play center the way Cobb wants his successor to handle the job. While Cobb plans to start the season with himself at his post, and Manush and Heilmann at his elbows, the probabilities are that close to half of the Tiger games will find Manush in center and Red Wingo in Manush's present lot.

Eddie Collins, in all probability will play through the season.

Tris Speaker found age handicapping him last season when he suffered injuries. He failed to get back into trim again in a hurry. He has taken unto himself a bride now and that may be taken as an indication that he believes the time has come when he can quit the daily grind in the outfield and lead a more leisurely and pleasant existence.

Sisler played through last season while still handicapped by his eyes. It is probable that a winter of rest has helped the optics, temporarily thrown out of alignment by a sinus infection a year or more ago. Unless the trouble handicaps him more than it did last season he will be at his old post again when the bell rings.

Harris of course will continue to play second for some years to come barring injuries.

Bancroft undoubtedly will play short another year for himself while rebuilding his team. Bancroft's infield aides will be youngsters and he will want to give them first hand coaching during the games as well as at training and practice sessions.

✣ ✣ ✣ ✣

Fletcher, Killefer, and McKechnie were the last of the National league generals to play. Robinson, McGraw, Hendricks and Rickey have not played for years.

Jack's Still Interested in Ring—But Made of Platinum

This is one of the most interesting studies of Estelle Taylor, movie star, to whom Jack Dempsey is to be married shortly, an inset of Jack himself and the artist's impressions of the high spots in Dempsey's life. Reports regarding Dempsey's retirement from the prize ring are conflicting. Dempsey is still interested in the ring but this one is a platinum one with a diamond in it.

Sparks Breaks Mitt And Can't Fill Assignment

Hoffman Rated By Wofford As One of Southwest's Cleverest

Harry "Dago" Ryan, an old Wichita Falls pugilistic favorite out of Dallas and a welterweight who gave slugging Duke Trammel gobs of trouble in bouts staged here, will return next Thursday night in the legion ten-round main event to strut his wares against Johnny Hoffman, San Antonio welterweight and a newcomer in Spudder leather-pushing circles, so announces Don Wofford.

The legion, originally intended to bring Jimmy Bean of Enid to Wichita Falls to scrap the flashy Speedy Sparks, Lawton middleweight, but Sunday morning at one o'clock Sparks notified The Record News that due to a fist injury he would not be able to box for at least six weeks or so. In the meantime, Promoter Don Wofford got busy and arranged the Ryan-Hoffman bout.

Hoffman Clever.

Sparks took on Babe McGority, Blackwell, Okla., light heavyweight, last Friday night and in the fourth round broke a bone in his left hand, thereby lost the bout on a technical knockout.

"Hoffman comes to Wichita Falls touted as one of the cleverest welters in the southwest. Wofford believes Johnny will give Ryan gobs of real trouble, and went so far as to declare last night that Hoffman is a better boxer than Johnny Simpson, also a San Antonio glovester who has appeared here and gained popularity with local fandom.

Sherwood Returns.

There probably will be a trio of six-rounders, said Wofford leading up to the final. George Storey, and Oklahoma City welter probably will setup Battling Jennings of Henrietta, the promoter said. Kid Pendlan of Lawton and Navy Lyons of Thrift will be brought in. It is not a certainty yet that these two will meet each other, for Wofford may decide to pit one with Storey and the other with Jennings.

Little Johnny Sherwood, one of Trammel's proteges and a flashy young featherweight, will hook up with Tabby Levine. The pair met here before with Tabby taking the decision, but Duke declares that his boxer has improved very much since that day. His most recent victory was made over Jack Dalton, Dallas veteran.

NEILSON'S DEFEAT OF PHANTOM FINN IN BROOKLYN RACE CAUSES U. S. OPPONENTS TO TAKE HEART

True, Handicap Was Large, But Critics Believe Nurmi's Weakening Under Stiff Competitive Schedule

By TOM THORPE
I. N. S. Special Correspondent

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—Paavo Nurmi's defeat in the Brooklyn college games was the talk of the athletic world today. The phantom Finn misjudged the capabilities of his rival, Gunnar Nielson. The mistake cost him considerable prestige. It will also make his task of beating his field in the Milrose three-quarter mile test a more difficult one than it would have been had he kept his record clean.

His American rivals are going to take heart after seeing the colors of the Finnish star dragged in defeat.

True it is that the handicap which Gunnar Nielson of the Finnish-American A. C. received was a most goreous one. Starting from the 100-yard mark in a 2,000 yard test is quite an advantage to be given over a rival.

However, before the race everyone agreed that Nurmi would have little trouble in vanquishing his opponent. For this reason the defeat is something more than a passing fancy.

Stiff Battles Ahead

To the real dyed in the wool critic it means the Finnish title holder is not unbeatable. It has been said of a race horse that a champion is one for whom no excuses are necessary. The same holds good in the case of Paavo Nurmi. From now on he is going to receive some hard battles from his rivals.

Some trainers believe the schedule of races Nurmi has competed in since his arrival in this country has begun to tell on his condition. So far as consistent performances are concerned, the Finnish champion has set a precedent not likely to be surpassed in some years.

Our Training Jolted

His jumps about the country have given some of our training ideas a slap in the face. They have broadened out the mind of more than one old timer. Henceforth, we may look to see our athletes making long jumps without offering alibis for their failure to win.

Nurmi set a precedent that is going to have much to do with making intersectional competition more popular. In this respect it is going to exercise a great influence in bringing about a finer understanding between the athletes in various directions of the country.

WALKING IS PI FOR HIM

Ugo Frigerio, Italian walknig star who is now in the U. S. to show his fellow countrymen here and American followers of the heel and toe game how it is done, says he is a type setter in Milan. He finds the printing industry a strenuous one but walking is pi.

Attorney Begins Investigation Of Baseball Scandal

Sand And Frisch Examined But Lawyer Divulges Nothing

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—Frank Frisch, captain of the New York Giants, and J. P. (Henie) Sand, short stop of the Philadelphia baseball team were examined by an assistant district attorney today as a preliminary to the proposed grand jury investigation of last fall's ball scandal.

Assistant District Attorney Brothers, who has been placed in charge of the investigation by District Attorney Banton, did not divulge the results of his interview with the two players.

Sand is the man to whom Jimmy O'Connell, Giant outfitider was alleged to have offered a $500 bribe if he would not bear down too hard in a game with the pennant chasing Giants. Frisch was said by O'Connell to have been one of three Giant players who induced him to make the bribery proposal to Sand.

Mr. Brothers said he had accepted the offer of Baseball Commissioner Landis to bring to this city any National league player the authorities may wish to question concerning the scandal.

District Attorney Banton announced last week he planned to present the evidence to the grand jury under a state law which specifically provides for the prosecution of persons charged with bribery in connection with organized baseball.

Abo Antelope All Set For His Race With Ray Tonight

Contest To Be Shortest And Hardest For Paavo So Far

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Unperturbed by the first defeat of his American campaign in a handicap race Saturday, Paavo Nurmi, the Abo Antelope, today declared himself fit for the two races in which he will be a central figure tomorrow and Wednesday at Madison Square Garden in the 18th annual track and field carnival of the Millrose A. A. the most pretentious indoor meeting of the season.

Nurmi will be only one of an unusual galaxy of international stars competing, but his race against Joie Ray at three-quarters of a mile tomorrow night and a mile and a half Wednesday, will attract outstanding interest.

Nurmi's race tomorrow will be at the shortest distance at which he has met any opponent here and critics are convinced will prove his hardest. Besides Ray the Finn will have such high class opposition as Jimmy Connelly and Lloyd Hahn.

Rivalling Nurmi's races in general interest will be the American debut of Ugo Frigerio, the Italian holder of the Olympic walking championship and the comeback of George Goulding famous Canadian heel and toe veteran, who holds many world's records. Frigerio and Goulding will show their prowess in separate handicap events tomorrow night.

The series of spring axe other features of tomorrow's program, with Jackson Scholz, Olympic 200 meter champion, making his first indoor start against such competition as Loren Murchison, Frank Hussey and Harold Leer.

WOMEN GOLFERS BILLED FOR THREE TOURNEYS

Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, national women's golf champion; Glenna Collett, former national champion, a dozen other noted women golfers and a host of newcomers will clash in a series of three tourneys in Florida in February—tourneys that may produce a new figure to be reckoned with in the 1925 tourneys.

The first of the three meets will be staged at Palm Beach, Feb. 16 to 20. The next will be on the Ormond Beach links, Feb. 25 to 28. The third will be held at St. Augustine, March 3 to 7. The Palm Beach event is the Florida women's championship, the Ormand Beach affair the annual championship and the St. Augustine rounds the Florida East Coast tourneys.

Walter Johnson Falls For Movies

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Following the example of a long list of athletes who have refused to let the pleasure of sport dim their business eye, Walter Johnson, the Washington pitching ace, now may soon be seen disporting himself before the moving picture camera at $2,000 a week.

Tom Moore, Washington picture promoter, has made the offer, and he said today the pitcher had "tentatively" accepted. Moore, who is an old friend of Johnson, declared that if the deal went through, a six weeks' vaudeville tour was in prospect after which Johnson would be placed "on location" for pictures at Los Angeles. If Johnson finally agrees to a long term contract it means he will not accompany the world's champions to Tampa for spring training.

Commercial Loop Opens Up Second Half Race Tonight

Iowa Park Clashes With Hudson-Essex In Feature

Commercial league basketeers will begin over again tonight with a clean slate on the legion court in the first double-header of the new race of the split season. Faichney's fast-stepping Hudson-Essex quint, victor and undefeated in the first half of the league schedule, is billed to meet stiff opposition in the Iowa Park five. They are all out after the automobile crew now, and the Park lads hope to be the first team to take a fall out of the champions.

Landon-Hill, tied with Iowa Park when the initial scramble came to a close last week, victorious in the final game of the race, and undefeated in three games played recently with outsiders, hopes to make a real bid for the title. This club clashes with the Knights of Columbus on tonight's card. The Knights failed to dent the win column in the first half, but they are back with fond expectations of producing a sudden and surprising change of form.

Dundee Out After Lightweight Title

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—Johnny Dundee, veteran Italian lightweight and former world featherweight champion came back to the United States to enter the lightweight elimination tournament and not to reclaim the featherweight title, James J Johnston, Dundee's manager said today.

Fear of provoking the wrath of the state athletic commission prompted Johnston to issue a forma statement today clearly defining Dundee's position.

"Dundee never intended to reclaim the featherweight title which he voluntarily relinquished," Johnston said

T. T. A. C. Cagers Beat Times Five

The T. T. A. C. cagers of the Grace Methodist church grabbed their fourth straight win over the Daily Times basketball quint last night on the Grace court by a 35 to 9 tabulation.

Hanks, the Times' star forward, failed to get loose in the manner he displayed in other games with the T. T. A. C., and was held scoreless. He was closely guarded with Charley Ross leading in the defense.

The general all-around play of the Methodist club was superb. Arnold and Coleman, forwards, led the scoring, each connected with four field goals for eight points.

The victors are willing to take on any Wichita Falls team with players who are not more than 20 years old.

Three Eye Loop Now Eight Clubs

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—The Three Eye league, one of the oldest minor leagues in America, today expanded from a six to an eight club circuit and elected L. J. Wylie, president of the Decatur, Ill., club as president of the league, to succeed A. R. Tearney of Chicago. John C. Ryan, retiring president of the Peoria, Ill., club was elected vice president of the league.

President Tearney resigned after serving the organization for 12 years, because his extensive business interests in Chicago demand more of his time. He still retains the presidency of the Western league, however.

Springfield and Quincy, Ill., both former members of the league, were admitted to membership.

RICH CHALLENGES DUKE.

Harmon Kid Rich, former Wichita Falls welterweight boxer, is fast recovering from a dislocated jaw, injury received in a battle with Roughhouse Smith several weeks back, and has begun working out again in his home, Davenport, Okla. Rich sends a challenge to Duke Trammel, Fort Worth welter.

Workers' Jeers To Another Send Him Into Death Hole

He Brings Out Bodies of Four And Barely Saves Self

DIED IN THEIR TURN

Each Lost Life As He Went To Find Fate Of Another

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 26.—(AP)—A small gas filled shaft, 47 feet deep, within a caisson of the new American Insurance Union building here, claimed the lives of four men today, three of the victims going to their doom as heroes in the eyes of their fellow workmen. A fifth man who went to the rescue of his pals in the shaft came through unscratched and a few hours later a movement was started intended to fittingly reward him for his heroism.

The dead:

C. R. Bowen, 22, Greenwood, Ind.

Jack Smith, New York City.

John C. McCarthy, 48, New York City.

John Peterson, 22, Columbus.

All the men were steam fitters, employed by the John Gill Construction company, of Cleveland.

Explanation Not Clear

Circumstances surrounding the tragedy are not clear. It is believed Bowen was in the shaft fitting pipes when he was overcome and fell to the bottom. Fellow workmen noticed that activity had ceased within the shaft. Then one of the victims climbed down to see what had happened. When neither appeared within a short time another went down the tube to investigate. Then McCarthy, the last of the victims, volunteered and he disappeared through the mouth of the shaft, some 18 or 20 feet above street level.

All was quiet within the tube and workmen gathered about suspecting that something was wrong. Ambulances and physicians were summoned. Tenseness became quite apparent.

Suddenly a huge crane swung high into the air from another part of the excavation. Dangling from its steel cable was a man. It swung around and deposited William V. (Big Bill) Martin, a structural steel worker, on top of the cassion. Fellow workmen remonstrated. Three had gone down and had not come back and he must not go, they declared.

Snaps Fingers at Them

"Big Bill" snapped his fingers, put his foot into the rope stirrup and signalled the crane engineer. Some one handed him a gas mask. The crane winch screamed and he was dropped into the shaft.

Minutes seemed like hours to the watchers. The cable jerked the crane moved upward and out of the mouth of the shaft came the limp form of a man, a rope around his waist.

Three more times the cable was lowered and each time it brought to the surface a limp form.

A fifth time it was dropped into the shaft. The cable jerked again. Out of the shaft came "Big Bill," his foot in the stirrup. He clung to the cable desperately. His face was ashen white. The gas mask was gone. He had done what he set out to do. Spectators cheered.

Lowered to the street, an effort was made to put him in an ambulance. Weakly he brushed men aside and edged away from the crowd which surrounded him.

When he had recovered he refused to talk.

"The bosses can tell you about it, I wont," he asserted.

The bosses said that "Big Bill" found the four dead men at the bottom of the shaft and that he had reported that he worked as fast as he could in getting them out. He took off his mask when it hampered him, he said.

A SON OF ITALY.

Almarindo Portfolio was born in Italy. He came to America when a lad. He could not speak English and he did not have a dollar in his pocket. Now he's forty-seven and has retired from business. He amassed a fortune and now he is going to take a trip around the world.

His business had a seven million dollar turnover last year. He turned it over to six of his employees who didn't watch the clock and then he sailed for other lands. The new proprietors had been with the original proprietor for years. Two are Americans of Italian parentage; two are native Americans of old stock; one is an American of Irish origin, and the sixth and last is of Hebraic origin. This gift of a seven million dollar business is a reward for enthusiastic work and loyal service.

Portfolio was ten when he came to America. He attended the public schools until he was fifteen. Then he became an errand boy at three dollars a week in the establishment of a cloak manufacturer. At the age of twenty he was general manager at fifty-five dollars a week. At thirty he was half-owner and at forty-seven he had two million dollars to his credit and handed the business over as a reward of merit to six wage earners who had never watched the clock.

This is a lesson to some of the youngsters of the hour. It is as certain as fate that the worker who watches the clock never gets very far.

MANKIN ON THE MAP.

Representative Luke Mankin of Williamson county jumped into nationwide fame in a single night. He has a bill which carries the death pensity for a person or persons convicted of crime perpetrated while wearing masks. It applies to those who slay, those who burglarize, those who defile women, those who cause death by terrorizing tactics, highjackers who pillage after dark, in fact all types of criminals who go about after night fall wearing disguises and who may be called a murderous menace to life and property. Law enforcement is the demand of organized society and there should be one law for all and favoritism should not be shown.

RAIL BROTHERHOODS DESERT.

Now the rail brotherhoods of America have withdrawn from the LaFollette third party organization. All the big brotherhood chiefs supported LaFollette in the campaign last year. They were smashed. Senator LaFollette's platform was smashed. Now the million American socialists must go it alone. American labor organizations gambled on LaFollette and they lost. No leader carries the votes of organized labor in his pocket.

WHERE FAMINE SPREADS.

There are three million Koreans suffering from a famine and the peasants in that unhappy land are attempting to stave off death by living on tree bark and roots. Now if the Armenians were starving and living on roots, there would be Near East Relief societies organized everywhere under the flag. Koren is in the far away Orient and a province of the mighty empire of Japan. Let the Japs feed them appears to be the slogan of the peoples of the Occident.

What Today Means To You

AQUARIUS

Today's planetary aspects are quite favorable and indicate success in business ventures and happiness in social or family affairs. Nothing, however, that savors of risk or speculation will turn out well. In business, today is a great opportunity for launching any enterprise or new thought, over which you have carefully deliberated, and for which you have worked out a plan of action. If engaged in literary pursuits, you will find the vibrations create an urge, which will enable you to accomplish much with facility that has hitherto borne the earmarks of being difficult and tiresome. Any social entertainment will be successful, and, in the more intimate affairs of life, the signs indicate that engagements will be happily made, and augur contentment and peace for marriages celebrated today.

A child born today will be normally healthy and will recover very speedily from any slight physical ailments to which it may be subject in infancy. As this child grows older, a sense of being immune from all sickness will make it careless of conditions, and at this stage of life, parental influence and advice are essential, in order that the child may escape the dangers or irregular habits and ill-considered feeding. Its disposition will be very cheerful, and it will always be the center of an admiring group of friends. Any disappointment or temporary set-back will quickly take the heart out of it, as it will lack courage and persistency. Its life will be a happy one, provided fortune is always smiling. If, however, contrary conditions prevail, it will become gloomy and morose.

If today is your birthday, you are full of ambitions, hope and optimistic plans, but you are a trifle weak in execution. You have a very alert, quick mind, and can think very rapidly.

In this sense, you are a chameleonic opportunist. It would be better for your material prospects if you could, after evolving a good idea, stick at this one thing until it was finished and completed, without going off at a fresh tangent on the slightest provocation. You would also accomplish more if you did not leave, or trust, so much to others. Being so honest yourself, you are disposed to think everyone else is built on the same lines. You should resolve to love all, but trust a few.

In your affections, you are extremely jealous—more often than not without cause—and this condition not only makes you miserable, but brings unhappiness to others. You do not set sufficient store on the pleasures and joys of loving companionship, but attach too much importance to trifles and to unimportant happenings.

More Truth Than Poetry

AT LAST.

I didn't make a decent score last summer,
I never seemed to swat the pellet clean.
Not even once did I impel a hummer
Within approaching distance of the green.
I couldn't putt, for some unfathomed reason—
No sort of break or run of luck I had,
My game, through all a long and sorrowing season
Was pretty bad.

But now I find I'm doing vastly better;
I'm making pars and bogies every day.
The nervousness that held me in its fetter
Is passing very rapidly away.
I step up to the tee, serene and breezy,
No qualm of apprehension I display,
And when I watch it close and hit it easy,
It sails away.

My ball flies over bunkers like an arrow,
In vain the lurking sand-traps lie in wait,
And though the fairways still are rather narrow—
They do not worry me—I play 'em straight.
Not once within a fortnight have I blundered;
So rapidly have I reduced my score,
That it has dropped from well above a hundred
To seventy-four.

The struggle of ten years at last is ended,
I feel like one who walks upon the air,
A great and heavenly calmness has descended—
Upon a soul once leaden with despair.
This is not luck; it isn't accidental,
But since across the course the snow has spread,
I'm playing by the method known as mental
While I'm in bed.

BAD CHECKS.

There are two kinds of bad checks. One is given by man, the other by nature.

One kind is written on paper, the other on character. One is worth nothing, the other may be worth everything.

The first is a worthless check passed by a forger. The second is when a bolt of misfortune—a bad check in the advancement toward your goal—comes out of a blue sky.

Then you have to do one of two things; quit, or work harder than ever.

A horse's mettle is tested by pulling on the reins; a man's by receiving a bad check from nature.

Out in Kansas there is a blind student who is known as one of the best collegiate debaters in the southwest. He has won every speaking contest in the college he is attending. Last year he was elected the most popular man in school. He is earning his own way and is doing four years' work in three years.

Up until the time he was 13, when he lost his sight, he had never read a book through in his life.

One day he said to me: "If I hadn't lost my sight, I would never have amounted to a thing. Now I have to work, I have to take things seriously."

Most of us can do so much more than we are doing that an obstacle we have to climb makes us accomplish more with a handicap than we would have done without it.

In the bank of life, a bad check may, in the end, be cashed at a premium.

Huber is the case of another blind man who made a bad check redound to his success. Although he was blind, he became the greatest authority during his lifetime on the subject of bees.

It will be found, in the history of most men who have achieved success, that this has been due to their overcoming of obstacles, and not to their having had no obstacles to overcome. In fact, obstacles are put before us as a challenge to our ability. Overcoming what is unpleasant or puts a difficulty in our way has a tendency to develop our faculties.

We should not complain, therefore, when nature or events put difficulties before us. We should hitch up our belt a notch tighter, and tackle them, for in so doing we develop our strength, and make ourselves much fitter to meet future dangers.

Life is just one obstacle after another, and "to him that overcometh shall be given the crown of life."

This passage of scripture is one that we should always keep in mind, for it is our overcoming ability that demonstrates the amount and quality of life in us. We are constantly running away from difficulties, but, after all, it is these that bring out the best there is in us.

The best player in life is not the one who has the cards dealt favorably to him, but the one who can best play a bad hand.

THERE'S NO TURNING BACK.

Haven't you ever said to yourself: "Well it won't matter if I do this thing just this once. I can go right back to my former standards, and never do it again?"

Maybe you've been to a bridge party, where they all played for money—not very much money—but you'd been brought up to believe that gambling of any kind was sinful—and so you had just the tiniest qualm about this apparently harmless form of indoor sport. But you had some money with you, and it would be rather nice to win a little more so you could get those novelty gloves you saw down town.

Then it is that you have the thought which I quoted at the beginning of the article. And so you played bridge, and won some money. It didn't hurt your moral character a whit, probably. No one there thought any of the less of you for it. They were all doing it, too.

Only, the next time you went to a bridge, some of the more sophisticated girls set up a clamor that a small stake be laid on each game, and the more cautious sisters protested. You rather sided in with the cautious sisters, whereupon the sophisticated Susies raised a howl of "why Anne! You played for money at the Andersons' last week. What's come over you?"

And you feel that you're in for a raz, so you say quickly, "Oh, I'd just as soon play for money if the rest of the girls want to."

After that, it's quite definitely understood in your crowd that you're always willing to play for money. And you can't go back.

This isn't particularly important, perhaps, in a crowd of young girls who only have a little pin-money, but when you consider that the same principle applies to all the much more serious things of life, you begin to realize that it's a rather dangerous habit, this business of lowering your standards just for a second, "because you can go right back." You can't.

If you decide to smoke, as so many perfectly nice, perfectly silly, weak-chested young things are doing nowadays, you don't say to yourself: "Now I'm going in for smoking in a really serious way."

You say: "Oh, just this once won't hurt me. I'll just try it, and I'll never do it again."

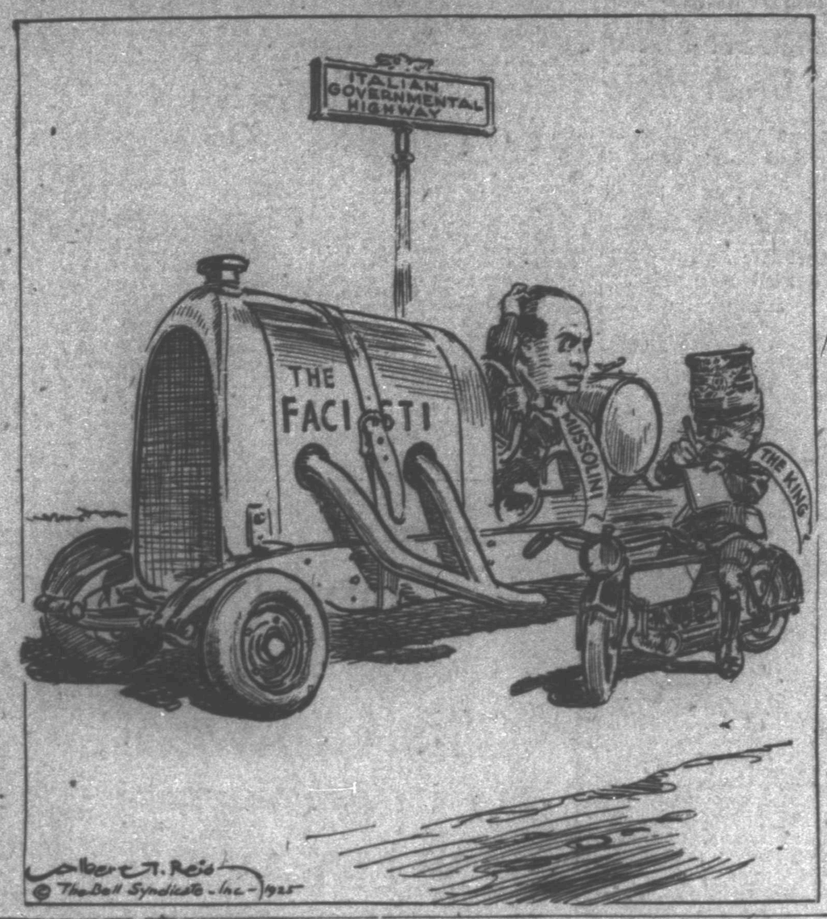

But the boy or girl who sees you do it will remember it, and the next time there's any discussion about smoking at all, your name will be dragged into the conversation, and someone will hold you up as one of the foremost advocates of smoking.

No one will ever believe all your frantic denials. If you don't want people to think you smoke, don't ever smoke. Then you're perfectly safe. You've been true to your principles, and no one can accuse you of cheating.

Don't take chances. Stick to what you think is right.

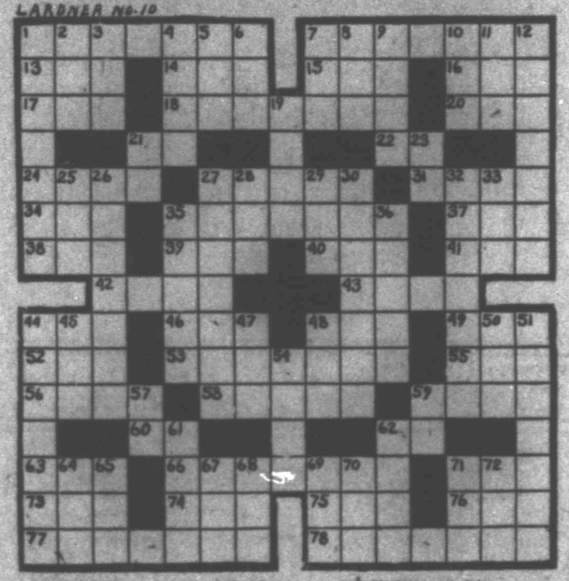

One little slip may be the big slip that sends you sliding down—down from those high standards of decency and honesty that form the character of every right thinking girl.

Cross-Word Puzzle

LARDNAR NO-10

How to Solve the Cross Word Puzzle.

Every number in the form represents the beginning of a word, reading either horizontally or vertically. If there is a black square to the left of the number, the word is horizontal; if above it, the word is vertical. The same number may of course begin both a horizontal and a vertical. The definitions for the correct words to fill the form are found below, with numbers corresponding to those on the form. Run through the definitions till you find one that you recognize, and put it in its proper place on the form, one letter for each white square. GLEANINGS FROM THE BOOK OF LIFE

A SOUND BASE OF HOPE FOR THE FUTURE.

Ancient traditions, when tested by the severe processes of modern investigation, commonly enough fade away into mere dreams; but it is singular how often the dream turns out to have been a half-waking one, presaging a reality.

Ovid foreshadowed the discoveries of the geologists; the Atlantic was an imagination, but a discovery represented in history by Columbus, found a western world; and though the faint forms of centaure and satyrs have an existence only in the realms of art, creatures approaching man more nearly than they in essential structure, and yet as thoroughly brutal as the goat's or horse's half of the mythical command, are now not only known but notorious.

Thomas Huxley was first to emphasize that it is a truth of very wide, if not of universal application that every living creature commences its existence under a form different from, and simpler than, that which it eventually attains.

The oak is a more complex thing than the little rudimentary plant contained in the acorn; the caterpillar is more complex than the egg; the butterfly than the caterpillar; and each of these beings, in passing from its rudimentary to its perfect condition, runs through a series of changes, the sum of which is called development.

In the higher animals these changes are extremely complicated; but within the last century, the labors of such men as Huxley, Von Baer, Rathke, Reichert, Bischoff and Remak have almost completely unraveled them, so that the successive stages of development which are exhibited by a dog, for example, are now as well known to the embryologist as are the steps in the metamorphosis of the silkworm moth to the school boy.

Huxley says that exactly in those respects in which the developing man differs from the dog, he resembles the ape.

"Thus, identical in the physical processes by which he originates—identical in the early stages of his formation—identical in the mode of his nutrition before and after birth, with the animals which lie immediately below him in the scale—man, if his adult and perfect structure be compared with theirs, exhibits, as might be expected a marvelous likeness of organization. He resembles them as they resemble one another—he differs from them as they differ from one another."

Thoughtful men, once escaped from the blinding influences of traditional prejudice, will find in the lowly stock whence man has sprung the best evidence of the splendor of his capacities: and will discern in his long progress through a past a reasonable ground of faith in his attainment of a nobler future.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE.

The General Run.

"A decent respect for the opinions of mankind," does not mean making one's self an exact copy of the majority of his acquaintances.

Yet in all places where people are gathered together, there are certain things that "are done" and certain things that "are not done" and all the little people in the gathering make it a point to observe these standards as closely as possible.

There is a great and unwholesome fear on the part of too many people of making themselves ridiculous by conduct which is not exactly like the conduct of the majority of people about them.

The average school boy feels humiliated if he cannot wear the same general kind of clothes as do the leaders in the school, talk the same general kind of slang, and think the same general kind of thoughts.

Half the boys that go to college, if they have not the physical ability to "make the teams" try to get a little reflected prominence by breaking into the fraternities to which the hulking athletes belong, or becoming minor officials of the teams.

While they are engaged in these endeavors the education that the college was instituted to provide passes over their heads, and they get practically no benefit from it whatever.

In every neighborhood there are certain standards of things that "are done," and dozens of people who cannot afford to do them, do them just the same, because they are afraid that they will be looked down on, if they fail to keep up with their neighbors.

It will be found that most families, who live beyond their incomes, do so in a foolish and futile effort to maintain the same standards that are maintained by far wealthier people.

We are not trying to belittle the importance of public opinion, or the desirability of standing well in the community.

But public opinion is not the opinion of a few social or monied snobs. It is the opinion of intelligent people, and, among these, people are rated by what they are and what they can do, not by what they try to be and what they think they can do.

The men who have risen to eminence are men who repeat the opinions of their neighbors but who nevertheless try to live their own lives, and do things their own way.

They are not afraid of being laughed at because they do not cast themselves into the common mould.

And, if they can say or do anything that has not been said before they are perfectly willing to say or do it, even if a few people who surround them may look at them with pained surprise.

It is the few original and courageous people in every generation who have made the world move forward—not the great crowd forever seeking to be like everybody else.

It takes nerve and courage to be unlike others, but if you are unlike them it is not necessarily an indication that you are weak minded. It may be a proof that you really amount to something.

Anyway it is wise to be a little unusual than to be like a paper cut pattern, which is what so many people very closely resemble.

CHILDREN'S CROSS WORD PUZZLE

HOW TO SOLVE THE PUZZLE.

The words start in the numbered squares and run either across or down. Only one letter is placed in each white square. (Running Across).

Word 1. In the picture. Also the missing word in the rhyme: "Cross patch, draw the —, Sit by the fire and spin."

Word 4. In grammar, the words that name things.

Word 5. A synonym for the word in capitals in this sentence: "An UNOCCUPIED house stood by the road."

(Running Down).

Word 1. A weapon of war, with sharp steel point, used in ancient times.

Word 2. A synonym for the words in capitals in this sentence: "The man gave a HEAVY KNOCK at the door."

Word 3. A synonym for the word in capitals in this sentence: "The burglar made a HURRIED exit."

YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE ANSWERED.

Irrigation

Comparison Between the Water Used in the Imperial Valley and Lake Kemp.

Occasionally you hear some one compare our irrigation water with the water used on some other project. Quite often the remark will be made that if our water was as good as the water in some other place we would grow good crops.

It is our intention to make a series of comparisons between the water in Lake Kemp and the water used in other well known and well established projects in the west. We have a large number of analyses covering practically all the streams supplying irrigation water. However, these analyses are not in such shape that they can be easily understood.

Every one has heard of the Imperial Valley in Southern California and of what wonderful crops are raised there. The Yuma project in Arizona is also well known. These projects are quite close together; they are located in the hottest part of the United States. The Imperial Valley is the largest body of irrigated land so far developed. Much of it lies below the sea level.

Both the Yuma and the Imperial project take their waters from the Colorado river. Practically every one knows the Colorado river because it is the river that flows in the Grand Canyon in Arizona.

For something like 20 years irrigation has been practiced in the Imperial, using Colorado river water exclusively, yet during the low flow of the Colorado river its waters often contain more than 1,200 parts per million of salt. Lake Kemp water contains about 700 parts per million.

In other words, the water of the great Colorado river, supplying the largest irrigation project in the United States, contains almost twice as much salt as does the water of Lake Kemp.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Somebody's Little Finger

DICK CONVERSE'S artful "probably the last time she will ever see me" again made Rosalie absurdly curious.

She adroitly said nothing to her giggling pupils but her pensive silence gave the shrewd Nannette a decided hint that her teacher wouldn't mind if they earned the fudge.

They scampered down the hillside, their giggles trailing after them.

Dick moved cautiously toward Rosalie. He was beginning to realize that this little country school ma'am was not going to be so easy to placate as he had expected. There was a most disdainful tilt to her charming head.

But he flattered himself that he was looking rather well in his new grey flannels and he thought he knew exactly how to make her forgive him.

He began his apologies in a low, contrite voice, letting rather stammering phrases give her the impression of almost boyish embarrassment. In spite of herself she began to feel a bit sorry for him.

"—no excuse at all," he murmured. "—yet I am the one who is suffering—it all means nothing to you, you are young and have many friendships ahead of you—but I, who have never before met a girl like you—"

"I suppose," she remarked bitterly, "all the girls you have met previously didn't care at all how much you drank."

He lifted his expressive eyes to hers.

"Ah," he said sadly, "that is just the truth. They didn't care. They just drank along with me. Until you came there was nobody to make me understand what I was drifting toward—what a sot I was letting myself become."

He told himself, ironically, that he was laying it on a bit too thick. But he went boldly on, working his way to his dramatic climax in which he gave her to understand that the day that Harrison Quimby had taken her away from him at the country club had been a sort of turning point in his misspent life.

"The scorn in you sweet eyes—" he sighed. "It was that that made me realize what I must seem like to a girl like you! I am not asking you to forgive me, not asking you to give me anotner chance at your friendship but I did want to tell you what a difference you'd made in life to me."

She was beginning to believe him. She wanted to believe him! It was rather sweet to feel that she was an ennobling influence in his life.

"— if I had only met you when I was younger," he sighed. "I'd have been a different man. You can twist me around your little finger, my dear —" he crushed his cap in his hand, he seemed to be utterly wretched. Suddenly he held out his other hand toward her. "Goodbye and heaven bless you—" he murmured brokenly.

She hadn't the heart to refuse to shake hands with him. And when her hand was in his she really didn't mind that he should press her's rather ardently as he murmured.

"You're a darling girl, Rosy Lee!"

THE children came shouting back, their arms filled with gay weeds.

"Meet you at the drug store, mademoiselles!" he assured them blithely. "I suppose you really couldn't all ride down with me?" he asked Rosalie.

It seemed rather silly not to, she thought. But rather silly to do it, considering that quarter of an hour before she had refused so haughtily. So she shook her head, murmuring:

"No, we'll walk, thank you."

They went to the postoffice first, Rosalie feeling a conscience stricken pang as she dropped her curt letter to Chet into the letter slot. But that done she had no alternative but to go through with her decision and register the package with the ring in it. Dick stood at her elbow as she was stowing the receipt in her purse. He bowed elaborately and with twinkling eyes murmured:

"Why, how do you do, Miss Blanchard? And how have you been since I saw you last?"

Which sent her charges into gales of giggles.

"And you too, Miss Quimby," he shook hands ecstatically with Nannette. And have I had the pleasure of meeting your esteemed, contemporary? And do you know anywhere we could purchase beakers of foaming soda in which to commemorate this happy chance?"

Rosalie tried not to laugh at his nonsense but he was insouciantly droll that she had to. And it was fun to stroll down the village street, more fun to sit on high stools by the soda fountain sipping a cool drink and watching Dick do all sorts of sleight of hand tricks with lumps of sugar and spoons and lemonade straws.

He bought the promised fudge for the children, eyed Rosalie beseechingly and added a huge box of nougat for her and when the clerk had tied the bulky parcel he said, very tentatively:

"This is rather heavy to carry, suppose we all ride up the hill."

So they all piled into his roadster.

HE STOPPED about a quarter of a mile from Pendleton's gates. The youngsters jumped out. Dick leaped after them and helped Rosalie down most solicitously. He waited until the children had started up the road with the parcel before he murmured:

"I don't suppose you'll do it but I can't resist asking you. You said you'd never been in New York. I'd know you had really forgiven me if you'd let me take you in town to luncheon some day soon. Any day you say. This time you could trust me. I—the fact is, I've been on the water wagon ever since that day at the country club. Oh, please do believe me! Please do try to trust me! If you could go on Saturday we could have luncheon together and go to a matinee and I'd bring you out here on the five fourteen train—do say you will."

She knew perfectly well that she shouldn't accept. But the week had been so deadly! And she was so eager to see New York!

She drew a long breath and nodded.

"There's a train at eleven forty," he said quietly. "If there happens to be anybody else going in from Pendleton I won't try to see you on the train but I'll meet you about 10 minutes after the train gets into Grand Central. In that fruit shop on the Forty-second Street side."

"Oh, Miss Rosy Lee!" chattered Nannette, when she caught up with them, "isn't Dicko too silly! I was so glad at the stiff way you acted with him! Daddy says Dicko can twist any woman right around his little finger—I don't suppose," she added whimsically, "Daddy would like Dicko's candy—but then, we couldn't very well not take it, could we? Specially when it was the very last time Dicko was going to see you!"

CHAPTER XXVII.

AGAIN Rosalie found herself living through days of uncertainty. She knew perfectly well that she most certainly should not accept any sort of invitation from the redoubtable Mr. Converse. She had been warned against him repeatedly, she had practically given her word that she would accept no invitations from male relatives of her pupils, and surely the embarrassments to which her previous coutings with Dick Converse had subjected her should have prevented her from any further attempts to go out with him.

Then, too, her sound good sense told herth at for all his noble sounding speech about reform, no middle aged man would suddenly give up his mildly dissolute ways for a little country school ma'am whom he scarcely knew.

But she argued with herself silly, saying that surely a luncheon and matinee, being daytime pleasures, would afford him no opportunity for misbehaviour.

Dorothy Dix's Letter Box

THE YOUNG GIRL WHOSE MOTHER DEMANDS ALL OF HER PAY ENVELOPE—WHAT CONVERSATIONAL "LINE" MAKES A HIT WITH THE FAIR SEX?—IS DEAFNESS A BAR TO MATRIMONY FOR ANY ONE?

DEAR MISS DIX—I am a girl of 19, the oldest of a family of seven children. My people are very poor, and I am working my way through a business school. I expect to finish in a few months. When I start to work I shall be expected to turn over my pay envelope to mother and accept what she gives me from it.

I am not complaining about that, but at times it seems that I would rather die than live with my mother. She sees my faults; I see hers. She is cross and irritable with me, and says such cruel things to me that for days afterward my heart aches with the memory of them. Yet my mother is a good woman, and I hate myself for feeling as I do toward her. What can I do? UNHAPPY NINETEEN.

ANSWER:—The cold-blooded remedy for your situation is for you to hold on to your pay envelope and pay your mother board instead of turning over all of the money to her. If you give her everything you earn you become her slave, whom she can treat as she pleases and say anything too she likes; but if you are a paying guest, who can leave if things are unpleasant, it will force her to be courteous to you.

It is a sordid truth, but it is a truth, nevertheless, that nobody treats the person with money as he or she treats the person without money. One of the chief things that money buys us is consideration and respect from our fellow creatures. And this is true, even in the close relationship of parents and children, and husbands and wives. That is why it is never safe for parents to turn over their property to their children or children to hand over their pay envelopes to their parents.

A tenderer way to solve your problem, Unhappy Nineteen, is by showing your mother a great deal of affection, and appreciation, and sympathy. You can blind her eyes with love, so that she will not see your faults. You can stop her nagging lips with kisses.

Keep in mind how hard life is to the poor woman who has brought seven children into the world, and who has toiled, and sacrificed, and been torn with anxieties in her efforts to keep them fed and clothed. You can't wonder that she is cross and irritable, or that she flies into tempers and says cruel and bitter things, for she is worn out in body and mind and her nerves are raw.

Be good to her. Be patient with her. Tell her that you love her, and appreciate her, and are grateful to her and you will find that your domestic troubles will vanish. All that most nagging mothers need is a little jollying and the assurance that they have not toiled in vain for their children. DOROTHY DIX

* * * * * * *

DEAR MISS DIX:—I am a young man about 19 years of age. I am rather good looking, a good dancer and a good dresser. I am able to get girls, but I can't keep them. They tell me I haven't got a "line." What can a young man talk about to interest girls? SAMMY.

ANSWER:—Well, Sammy, a bigamist who had married 26 times once told me that it was the easiest thing in the world to fascinate women. All that a man had to do was just to talk to them about themselves.

I guess that theory still holds good, and that you are in no danger of boring any young lady as long as you keep telling her what wonderful eyes she has, and what a cute dimple appears in her cheek when she smiles, and that the first time you saw her there was, somehow, something different about her from any other girl you had ever met in your life.

The strictly personal is always a good line. Another good line is to display an interest in the girl's interests. Most girls do things nowadays, and they like to talk about golf, or tennis, or their work, or clubs, or their chums. Some few even like to talks about books. Just follow the girl's lead, and if she isn't a dumbbell you can soon have her merrily chatting along.

No hard and fast rules can be given for developing a conversational line that will make a hit with the fair sex, because tastes differ and the kind of talk that one girl will lap up will be poison to another. Some girls like to be jollied and flattered; others are embarrassed by compliments they do not know how to reply to. Some girls expect every boy to make love to them; other girls regard a soft speech as an offer of marriage. Some girls like boys who are always clowning; other girls are disgusted by the village cut-up stuff.

So all the advice that I can give you is to study your girl and and hand out the line she calls for.

It isn't hard to interest girls. Just don't talk about yourself too much; don't be patronizing; don't sneer at women. Don't be too fresh. Don't try to be funny, unless nature made you that way, and you will have no difficulty in developing a line for which the girls wil fall. DOROTHY DIX.

* * * * * * *

DEAR DOROTHY DIX:—I'm a girl of 20, very deeply in love with a splendid youg man, who has asked me to be his wife. I have not made him a promise yet because he is suffering from deafness. Do you think this would interfere with our future happiness? UNDECIDED.

ANSWER:—It depends altogether on the kind of a woman you are. If you are wise, and sympathetic, and brave, and have an inexhaustible patience and forebearance, the fact that your husband suffers from deafness need not interfere with your happiness. On the contrary, his affliction would draw you closer to him, make your love deeper for him and bring out all the tenderness in your nature. There are no happier wives than those who mother their husbands.

"Send it to the Laundry"

Mrs. Chitwood Came to See Us

And this is part of what she said: "You know, I always think of home washing as an oppressing custom left over from times when a wife had to do everything for her family—the same period that saw wives spinning.

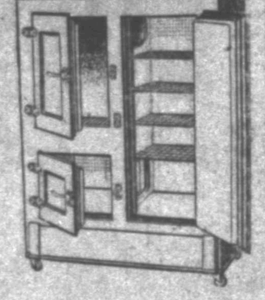

"If women only realized how much their time, health and beauty are worth, they could see that home washing costs more than the laundry charges.

"My home washing is certainly sent to the laundry, and that's what I'd advise all wives to do. You save yourself that way."

pares the meals or only manages them.

"We used to try to retain our beauty by the use of cosmetics and various remedies when some part of our person became run down, worn out or unattractive. Now we know, with the widespread study of health and the diet, that pure, properly prepared and selected foods are the only thing that will keep us young and healthy.

"There are domestic science departments in every modern high school, women all over the nation are realizing the importance of the study of foods and cookery, and in order to please the women of this progressive city, The Record News has established a scientfic and authoritative Cooking School for a week, free to all women as a bit of service to the community and the city in which it lives. You who appreciate the school can express your favor of this act of courtesy by returning, and bringing with you a friend.

Explaining that the school offered the sifted out results of many scientists and food experts in their years of experiment, Mrs. Chitwood invited questions, criticisms, and suggestions from her listeners, stating that if any problem should arise which she was unable to explain, that research and an exchange of ideas would prove helpful to all.

TO her audience of interested women, most of them armed with notebooks and pencils, Mrs. Chitwood, in a thoroughly human and likable manner, told the women the intricacies, which, she explained much as one neighbor tells another, are really only scientific simplicities of cake baking.

"All the cakes in the cook book can be classified into two types, a sponge cake, or a shortening cake. Different methods are used in making the two, and variations of those different methods make the many kinds of cake which we know.

"Select good materials: for the best results in cooking, you must have the best equipment and the best materials you can get. Homemaking is not a sideline, it is a profession, and a highly technical one, and a professional worker of any sort must have the right kind of equipment for successful practice.

Making the cake and the frosting before the eyes of her audience and explaining the various steps in plain "kitchen language" that every housewife present could readily understand, answering all sorts of questions, sprinkling her talk with intimate little personal experiences and interesting anecdotes, Mrs. Chitwood completely won the hearts of her hearers, and assured herself of a large and successful school in this city.

SOME of the "cake wrinkles" for angel food that the demonstrator introduced were beating the egg whites until just the right moment, when a peak pulled on the tip of the spoon stands straight up instead of flopping over at the point; adding all dry materials, even the cream of tartar, through a sieve to insure even distribution; and pouring the cake in a cold ungreased pan to start the baking in a cold oven.

"Interesting facts about the icing introduced, which, it was stated, would hold its shape without becoming too hard or too runny, and would keep for a week or more, included the process of manufacture which required that the sugar be dissolved in cold water before being placed on the fire, and then that the sirup be brought slowly to a boil.

Forty per cent of the success of the cake is due to proper flour, 20 per cent to proper mixing, and 40 per cent to an evenly baking oven, Mrs. Chitwood stated, as she pointed out the perfect baking qualities of the handsome Hotpoint range in which the cake was baked.

"BE relaxed, and entirely rested before you attempt to ice and decorate your cake. It takes a steady hand and quiet nerves to do the job enjoyably and pleasantly," she admonished.

Mixing the frosting to the right consistency and using several pastry bags with various shaped nozzles, the expert colored a portion pink, another portion pale green with vegetable colorings, and festooning the sides and top with trailing vines and green leaves, she added wild roses of pink and demonstrated two patterns of borders. The cake was then passed through the audience so that the observers might view the simply but elaborately resulting trick.

Following the lecture, the women met the demonstrator and asked further questions about puzzling details, jotting memos down in notebooks so that they might return home and try their hand on friend husband.

This afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Mrs. Chitwood will lecture on pie, telling about the old familiar one telling how to make flaky, tender pie crust, "the kind you love to touch," and introducing to Wichita Falls women two or three brand new recipes that have been worked out the past season in eastern laboratories, and that have never been seen in this city.

DECORATION of pies in newer methods will also be demonstrated in a practical and easy manner.

A cordial invitation is extended by The Record News to all women of Wichita Falls to attend the Cooking School which will be held every afternoon this week through Friday, from 2:30 to 4:30 o'clock in the ball room of the Kemp hotel.

Justice Tendered With Etc.—

By MARGARET STALLINGS
Record News Staff at Austin.

AUSTIN, Jan. 26.—A woman in a faded green cotton dress sat in the governor's reception room, her tired, weary eyes watching the door into the private office.

A sick baby cried fretfully.

Seven other children, the oldest a boy of 10 years, slumped in their seats—watching the door.

They were the family of Sylvster Montalbano, whose parole expired Wednesday, and who, unless further action was taken by the governor, be taken back to prison.

Smiling and happy Texas' first woman governor, Miriam Ananda Ferguson entered her office on the first day of her term.

The eyes of the woman who was governor looked into the eyes of the woman who was to plead before her—plead for bread for the eight little ones.

The woman governor saw the eight children—saw their cheap cotton dresses—their heavy shoes—the look of poverty—saw the mute pleading in their eyes.

Opened telegrams — and prepared her first message to the thirty-ninth legislature.

Several hours later Governor Miriam Ferguson told J. E. Winfree of Houston, attorney for the Montalbanos, that she would extend the parole 60 days.

"I do not want this man to go back to prison without an investigation and in that time the application can be brought before the board of pardons," was the statement made by Governor Ferguson to Mr. Winfree.

And the woman governor of Texas stooped to pat the head of the youngest of the Montalbanos.

Dorrace, Daughter Of Jim, Will Be A Queen of Cuba

Governor's Daughter Accepts Invitation From Havana

AUSTIN, Jan. 26.—(AP)—An invitation to be queen of the Cuban carnival the second week in March, was accepted today by Miss Dorrace Ferguson, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Ferguson.

The invitation was extended by cable from leading citizens of Havana, Cuba, who said the republic of Cuba, through this means, desired to cement friendly relations with Texas and also to honor the daughter of the state's first woman governor.

Miss Ferguson is to be accompanied by another young woman, who is to be selected as the most beautiful girl in Texas. The selection of Miss Ferguson's companion will be made by a committee of Havana citizens, from a moving picture film of contestants. Each city of Texas desiring to do so is to enter a contestant for the honor. Pictures of all these girls are to be taken; the film will be forwarded to Havana and a committee in that city will make the selection of the girl they think is the most beautiful in Texas.

GAS PRICES ARE INCREASED.

Magnolia Follows Lead Taken by Cities Service and Pierce.

DALLAS, Jan. 26.—Following an increase in filling station gasoline price by the Cities Service Oil company and the Pierce Petroleum corporation several days ago, the Magnolia Petroleum company posted a price of 16 cents a gallon today. Gulf Refining company stations still retail gasoline at 14 cents, while prices of independents range from 14 to 16 cents.

And while newspaper men speculated and gathered news for the story the eight little Montalbanos clung to one another—and smiled.

The night's journey to Houston would seem as nothing.

At home there was a 40-acre farm —Joe, the 10-year-old boy who made last year's crop, talked of the big things "we" could do this year.

The note could be paid off—new shoes for the baby. "Dadda" was going home with them.

A Story Without A Title

About a Governor-That-Was And Can't Be In The Chair Of a Governor-That-Is

By MARGARET STALLINGS
Record News Staff at Austin.

AUSTIN, TEX., Jan. 26.—Jim Ferguson sat in the governor's chair and grinned as the news writers came in the door.

After 10 years that grin just naturally spread as the familiar faces came in—some of them saying "howdy Governor"—in the same manner that they greeted him 10 years ago.

"The governor," said Jim, "is over at the mansion, getting things in order."

The linen closet must be well stocked—the pantry filled—directions given to her two daughters—and her own room arranged — and the "housewife from Temple" finds that things over at the mansion are much the same that they were 10 years ago—and husbands and daughters must be considered.

All of this while feature writers from New York and feature writers from Texas pace the floor of her reception room over at the capitol and fill the pockets of her private secretary with 10-cent cigars.

But they do not see the "governor."

She is at the mansion for a great part of these first few days—and when she comes to the office Jim sits by her side—and talks to the newswriters.

Jim's friends are coming to see him —from all parts of Texas.

They find him the same "Jim" of 10 years ago.

Same black coat—same white shirt and black string tie—same broad brimmed black hat.

And he remembers all of his friends —can tell them where he saw them last—and they tell us that it's a great day for Texas and the people for they are "at home" in the office of Governor Miriam Ferguson.

"The governor," Jim calls her—and again "my wife"—and adds that "she is finding her days very full."

"You never in your life heard of the like of convicts in Texas who have six or seven children at home dependent upon them," said Jim—"and they have flocked to the office these first few days to present their pleas to my wife."

"What do you do?" we asked him.

"Oh, the furnace over at the mansion is working and I have to bring in the coal," he replied.

"Really?" we inquired.

"Yes indeed"—and Jim grinned.

"And I'm eating molasses," said Jim, "we've got at least 20 gallons over at the mansion sent to us by friends from all over the state."

"It comes in from two to five gallon lots—and it's still coming—and it's sure fine, too."

"Pure old East Texas ribbon cane—open kettle kind like your mammy used to make—and it's the best eating in the world with hot biscuits."

"I'm still pleading for old Boss but the governor still says there's to be no cow at the mansion—so I bring in the milk bottles instead of a milk pail."

And the governor-that-was leaned back in the chair of the governor-that-is and laughed heartily.

BETTER THAN WHISKEY FOR COLDS AND FLU

The sensation of the drug trade is Aspironal, the two-minute cold and cough reliever, authoritatively guaranteed by the laboratories; tested, approved and most enthusiastically endorsed by the highest authorities, and proclaimed by the people as ten times as quick and effective as whiskey, rock and rye, or any other cold and cough remedy they have ever tried.

All drug stores are supplied with the wonderful elixir, so all you have to do is to step into the nearest drug store, hand the clerk half a dollar for a bottle of Aspironal and tell him to serve you two teaspoonsful. With your watch in your hand, take the drink at one swallow and call for your money back in two minutes if you cannot feel the distressing symptoms of your cold fading away like a dream, within the time limit. Don't be bashful, for all druggists invite you and expect you to try it. Everybody's doing it.

Take the remainder of the bottle home to your wife and children, for Aspironal is by far the safest and most effective, the easiest to take and the most agreeable cold and cough remedy for children as well as adults. Quickest relief for catarrhal croup and children's choking up at night. —Adv.

Dorothy Dix's Letter Box

THE YOUNG GIRL WHOSE MOTHER DEMANDS ALL OF HER PAY ENVELOPE—WHAT CONVERSATIONAL "LINE" MAKES A HIT WITH THE FAIR SEX?—IS DEAFNESS A BAR TO MATRIMONY FOR ANY ONE?

DEAR MISS DIX—I am a girl of 19, the oldest of a family of seven children. My people are very poor, and I am working my way through a business school. I expect to finish in a few months. When I start to work I shall be expected to turn over my pay envelope to mother and accept what she gives me from it.

I am not complaining about that, but at times it seems that I would rather die than live with my mother. She sees my faults; I see hers. She is cross and irritable with me, and says such cruel things to me that for days afterward my heart aches with the memory of them. Yet my mother is a good woman, and I hate myself for feeling as I do toward her. What can I do? UNHAPPY NINETEEN.

ANSWER:—The cold-blooded remedy for your situation is for you to hold on to your pay envelope and pay your mother board instead of turning over all of the money to her. If you give her everything you earn you become her slave, whom she can treat as she pleases and say anything too she likes; but if you are a paying guest, who can leave if things are unpleasant, it will force her to be courteous to you.

It is a sordid truth, but it is a truth, nevertheless, that nobody treats the person with money as he or she treats the person without money. One of the chief things that money buys us is consideration and respect from our fellow creatures. And this is true, even in the close relationship of parents and children, and husbands and wives. That is why it is never safe for parents to turn over their property to their children or children to hand over their pay envelopes to their parents.

A tenderer way to solve your problem, Unhappy Nineteen, is by showing your mother a great deal of affection, and appreciation, and sympathy. You can blind her eyes with love, so that she will not see your faults. You can stop her nagging lips with kisses.

Keep in mind how hard life is to the poor woman who has brought seven children into the world, and who has toiled, and sacrificed, and been torn with anxieties in her efforts to keep them fed and clothed. You can't wonder that she is cross and irritable, or that she flies into tempers and says cruel and bitter things, for she is worn out in body and mind and her nerves are raw.

Be good to her. Be patient with her. Tell her that you love her, and appreciate her, and are grateful to her and you will find that your domestic troubles will vanish. All that most nagging mothers need is a little jollying and the assurance that they have not toiled in vain for their children. DOROTHY DIX

* * * * * *

DEAR MISS DIX:—I am a young man about 19 years of age. I am rather good looking, a good dancer and a good dresser. I am able to get girls, but I can't keep them. They tell me I haven't got a "line." What can a young man talk about to interest girls? SAMMY.

ANSWER:—Well, Sammy, a bigamist who had married 26 times once told me that it was the easiest thing in the world to fascinate women. All that a man had to do was just to talk to them about themselves.

I guess that theory still holds good, and that you are in no danger of boring any young lady as long as you keep telling her what wonderful eyes she has, and what a cute dimple appears in her cheek when she smiles, and that the first time you saw her there was, somehow, something different about her from any other girl you had ever met in your life.

The strictly personal is always a good line. Another good line is to display an interest in the girl's interests. Most girls do things nowadays, and they like to talk about golf, or tennis, or their work, or clubs, or their chums. Some few even like to talks about books. Just follow the girl's lead, and if she isn't a dumbbell you can soon have her merrily chatting along.

No hard and fast rules can be given for developing a conversational line that will make a hit with the fair sex, because tastes differ and the kind of talk that one girl will lap up will be poison to another. Some girls like to be jollied and flattered; others are embarrassed by compliments they do not know how to reply to. Some girls expect every boy to make love to them; other girls regard a soft speech as an offer of marriage. Some girls like boys who are always clowning; other girls are disgusted by the village cut-up stuff.

So all the advice that I can give you is to study your girl and and hand out the line she calls for.

It isn't hard to interest girls. Just don't talk about yourself too much; don't be patronizing; don't sneer at women. Don't be too fresh. Don't try to be funny, unless nature made you that way, and you will have no difficulty in developing a line for which the girls will fall. DOROTHY DIX.

* * * * * *

DEAR DOROTHY DIX:—I'm a girl of 20, very deeply in love with a splendid young man, who has asked me to be his wife. I have not made him a promise yet because he is suffering from deafness. Do you think this would interfere with our future happiness? UNDECIDED.

ANSWER:—It depends altogether on the kind of a woman you are. If you are wise, and sympathetic, and brave, and have an inexhaustible patience and forebearance, the fact that your husband suffers from deafness need not interfere with your happiness. On the contrary, his affliction would draw you closer to him, make your love deeper for him and bring out all the tenderness in your nature. There are no happier wives than those who mother their husbands.

"Send it to the Laundry"

Mrs. Chitwood Came to See Us

And this is part of what she said: "You know, I always think of home washing as an oppressing custom left over from times when a wife had to do everything for her family—the same period that saw wives spinning.

"If women only realized how much their time, health and beauty are worth, they could see that home washing costs more than the laundry charges.

"My home washing is certainly sent to the laundry, and that's what I'd advise all wives to do. You save yourself that way."

pares the meals or only manages them.

"We used to try to retain our beauty by the use of cosmetics and various remedies when some part of our person became run down, worn out or unattractive. Now we know, with the widespread study of health and the diet, that pure, properly prepared and selected foods are the only thing that will keep us young and healthy.

"There are domestic science departments in every modern high school, women all over the nation are realizing the importance of the study of foods and cookery, and in order to please the women of this progressive city, The Record News has established a scientific and authoritative Cooking - School for a week, free to all women as a bit of service to the community and the city in which it lives. You who appreciate the school can express your favor of this act of courtesy by returning, and bringing with you a friend.

Explaining that the school offered the sifted out results of many scientists and food experts in their years of experiment, Mrs. Chitwood invited questions, criticisms, and suggestions from her listeners, stating that if any problem should arise which she was unable to explain, that research and an exchange of ideas would prove helpful to all.

TO her audience of interested women, most of them armed with notebooks and pencils, Mrs. Chitwood, in a thoroughly human and likable manner, told the women the intricacies, which, she explained much as one neighbor tells another, are really only scientific simplicities of cake baking.

"All the cakes in the cook book can be classified into two types, a sponge cake, or a shortening cake. Different methods are used in making the two, and variations of those different methods make the many kinds of cake which we know.

"Select good materials; for the best results in cooking, you must have the best equipment and the best materials you can get. Homemaking is not a sideline, it is a profession, and a highly technical one, and a professional worker of any sort must have the right kind of equipment for successful practice.

Making the cake and the frosting before the eyes of her audience and explaining the various steps in plain "kitchen language" that every housewife present could readily understand, answering all sorts of questions, sprinkling her talk with intimate little personal experiences and interesting anecdotes, Mrs. Chitwood completely won the hearts of her hearers, and assured herself of a large and successful school in this city.

SOME of the "cake wrinkles" for angel food that the demonstrator introduced were beating the egg whites until just the right moment, when a peak pulled on the tip of the spoon stands straight up instead of flopping over at the point; adding all dry materials, even the cream of tartar, through a sieve to insure even distribution; and pouring the cake in a cold ungreased pan to start the baking in a cold oven.

"Interesting facts about the icing introduced, which, it was stated, would hold its shape without becoming too hard or too runny, and would keep for a week or more, included the process of manufneture which required that the sugar be dissolved in cold water before being placed on the fire, and then that the sirup be brought slowly to a boil.

Forty per cent of the success of the cake is due to proper flour, 20 per cent to proper mixing, and 40 per cent to an evenly baking oven, Mrs. Chitwood stated, as she pointed out the perfect baking qualities of the handsome Hotpoint range in which the cake was baked.

"BE relaxed, and entirely rested before you attempt to ice and decorate your cake. It takes a steady hand and quiet nerves to do the job enjoyably and pleasantly," she admonished.

Mixing the frosting to the right consistency and using several pastry bags with various shaped nozzles, the expert colored a portion pink, another portion pale green with vegetable colorings, and festooning the sides and top with trailing vines and green leaves, she added wild roses of pink and demonstrated two patterns of borders. The cake was then passed through the audience so that the observers might view the simply but elaborately resulting trick.

Following the lecture, the women met the demonstrator and asked further questions about puzzling details, jotting memos down in notebooks so that they might return home and try their hand on friend husband.

This afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Mrs. Chitwood will lecture on pie telling about the old familiar one telling how to make flaky, tender pie crust, "the kind you love to touch," and introducing to Wichita Falls women two or three brand new recipes that have been worked out the past season in eastern laboratories, and that have never been seen in this city.

DECORATION of pies in newer methods will also be demonstrated in a practical and easy manner.

A cordial invitation is extended by The Record News to all women of Wichita Falls to attend the Cooking School which will be held every afternoon this week through Friday, from 2:30 to 4:30 o'clock in the ball room of the Kemp hotel.

Justice Tendered With Etc.—

By MARGARET STALLINGS
Record News Staff at Austin.

AUSTIN, Jan. 26.—A woman in a faded green cotton dress sat in the governor's reception room, her tired, weary eyes watching the door into the private office.

A sick baby cried fretfully.

Seven other children, the oldest a boy of 10 years, slumped in their seats—watching the door.

They were the family of Sylvster Montalbuno, whose parole expired Wednesday, and who, unless further action was taken by the governor, be taken back to prison.

Smiling and happy Texas' first woman governor, Miriam Amanda Ferguson entered her office on the first day of her term.

The eyes of the woman who was governor looked into the eyes of the woman who was to plead before her—plead for bread for the eight little ones.

The woman governor saw the eight children—saw their cheap cotton dresses—their heavy shoes—the look of poverty—saw the mute pleading in their eyes.

Opened telegrams — and prepared her first message to the thirty-ninth legislature.

Several hours later Governor Miriam Ferguson told J. E. Winfree of Houston, attorney for the Montalbanos, that she would extend the parole 60 days.

"I do not want this man to go back to prison without an investigation and in that time the application can be brought before the board of pardons," was the statement made by Governor Ferguson to Mr. Winfree.

And the woman governor of Texas stooped to pat the head of the youngest of the Montalbunos.

Dorrace, Daughter Of Jim, Will Be A Queen of Cuba

Governor's Daughter Accepts Invitation From Havana

AUSTIN, Jan. 26.—(AP)—An invitation to be queen of the Cuban carnival the second week in March, was accepted today by Miss Dorrace Ferguson, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Ferguson.

The invitation was extended by cable from leading citizens of Havana, Cuba, who said the republic of Cuba, through this means, desired to cement friendly relations with Texas and also to honor the daughter of the state's first woman governor.

Miss Ferguson is to be accompanied by another young woman, who is to be selected as the most beautiful girl in Texas. The selection of Miss Ferguson's companion will be made by a committee of Havana citizens, from a moving picture film of contestants. Each city of Texas desiring to do so is to enter a contestant for the honor. Pictures of all these girls are to be taken; the film will be forwarded to Havana and a committee in that city will make the selection of the girl they think is the most beautiful in Texas.

GAS PRICES ARE INCREASED.

Magnolia Follows Lead Taken by Cities Service and Pierce.

DALLAS, Jan. 26.—Following an increase in filling station gasoline price by the Cities Service Oil company and the Pierce Petroleum corporation several days ago, the Magnolia Petroleum company posted a price of 16 cents a gallon today. Gulf Refining company stations still retail gasoline at 14 cents, while prices of independents range from 14 to 16 cents.

And while newspaper men speculated and gathered news for the story the eight little Montalbanos clung to one another—and smiled.

The night's journey to Houston would seem as nothing.

At home there was a 40-acre farm—Joe, the 10-year-old boy who made last year's crop, talked of the big things "we" could do this year.

The note could be paid off—new shoes for the baby. "Dadda" was going home with them.

A Story Without A Title

About a Governor-That-Was And Can't Be In The Chair Of a Governor-That-Is

By MARGARET STALLINGS
Record News Staff at Austin.

AUSTIN, TEX., Jan. 26.—Jim Ferguson sat in the governor's chair and grinned as the news writers came in the door.

After 10 years that grin just naturally spread as the familiar faces came in—some of them saying "howdy Governor"—in the same manner that they greeted him 10 years ago.

"The governor," said Jim, "is over at the mansion, getting things in order."

The linen closet must be well stocked—the pantry filled—directions given to her two daughters—and her own room arranged — and the "housewife from Temple" finds that things over at the mansion are much the same that they were 10 years ago—and husbands and daughters must be considered.

All of this while feature writers from New York and feature writers from Texas pace the floor of her reception room over at the capitol and fill the pockets of her private secretary with 10-cent cigars.

But they do not see the "governor."

She is at the mansion for a great part of these first few days—and when she comes to the office Jim sits by her side—and talks to the newswriters.

Jim's friends are coming to see him—from all parts of Texas.

They find him the same "Jim" of 10 years ago.

Same black coat—same white shirt and black string tie—same broad brimmed black hat.

And he remembers all of his friends—can tell them where he saw them last—and they tell us that it's a great day for Texas and the people for they are "at home" in the office of Governor Miriam Ferguson.

"The governor," Jim calls her—and again "my wife"—and adds that "she is finding her days very full."

"You never in your life heard of the like of convicts in Texas who have six or seven children at home dependent upon them," said Jim—"and they have flocked to the office these first few days to present their pleas to my wife."

"What do you do?" we asked him.

"Oh, the furnace over at the mansion is working and I have to bring in the coal," he replied.

"Really?" we inquired.

"Yes indeed"—and Jim grinned.

"And I'm eating molasses," said Jim, "we've got at least 20 gallons over at the mansion sent to us by friends from all over the state."

"It comes in from two to five gallon lots—and it's still coming—and it's sure fine, too."

"Pure old East Texas ribbon cane—open kettle kind like your mammy used to make—and it's the best eating in the world with hot biscuits."

"I'm still pleading for old Boss but the governor still says there's to be no cow at the mansion so I bring in the milk bottles instead of a milk pail."

And the governor that was leaned back in the chair of the governor-that-is and laughed heartily.

The new members are: Leon Callan, San Antonio, formerly of Menard county; Caesar Kleberg, Kingsville; Dr. F. F. Jarrell, Smith county. The headquarters of the commission are to remain at Fort Worth.

BETTER THAN WHISKEY FOR COLDS AND FLU

The sensation of the drug trade is Aspironal, the two-minute cold and cough reliever, authoritatively guaranteed by the laboratories; tested, approved and most enthusiastically endorsed by the highest authorities, and proclaimed by the people as ten times as quick and effective as whiskey, rock and rye, or any other cold and cough remedy they have ever tried.

All drug stores are supplied with the wonderful elixir, so all you have to do is to step into the nearest drug store, hand the clerk half a dollar for a bottle of Aspironal and tell him to serve you two teaspoonsful. With your watch in your hand, take the drink at one swallow and call for your money back in two minutes if you cannot feel the distressing symptoms of your cold fading away like a dream, within the time limit. Don't be bashful, for all druggists invite you and expect you to try it. Everybody's doing it.

Take the remainder of the bottle home to your wife and children, for Aspironal is by far the safest and most effective, the easiest to take and the most agreeable cold and cough remedy for children as well as adults. Quickest relief for catarrhal croup and children's choking up at night. —Adv.

Income Burden to Be Lighter, 1925

Income tax payments for this year are scheduled to be considerably less painful than those of last, under the interpretation of the tax law as made here by the internal revenue bureau. In other words, the annual visit of the average citizen to Uncle Sam's extraction office will be attended by qualms of less intensity because of the 25 per cent reduction in assessment made by the treasury department.

"Income taxes this year will not hurt anybody," Deputy Collier declared Monday.

As an example of the workings of the schedule, he said that a single man with a salary, say, of $1,800 would be taxed $12 if not part of the $800 on which he would pay was exempt. Two per cent will be charged on the first $4,000 income, four per cent on the second $4,000 and six per cent on the third $4,000.

A few returns are now being made to the tax office but the big rush will not start until the middle of February, it is predicted. All returns must be paid by March 15 this year as formerly.

CRAWFORD

words with he deceased prior to the killing.

Strawbridge's testimony was not permitted to go to the jury by the judge at this time because of its nature.

With his fine features drawn, Crawford told the court of his early life and the great love his father bestowed upon him, and he had been instructed to revere, honor and respect his mother. He said his family life was happy and this was accentuated by his testimony when he told of how his mother, who said she heard the negro's deposition, had prevented him from learning its contents through tactful suggestion.

A history of the will suit battle of four years was brought out by questions of the defense counsel. Crawford's half-sister and her two brothers were the ones who contested the will for the $200,000 estate the colonel was reported to have accumulated after his second marriage.

Mrs. Crawford was the first witness of the day and long before court convened every available space of the court room was filled. More women than men were present. The first questions brought out that she had testified at the preliminary hearing of W. L. Crawford. She said her first marriage was to L. C. Q. Lamar, Jr., son of Judge L. C. Q. Lamar, secretary of the interior in the cabinet of President Cleveland.

Mrs. Crawford told officers of coming to Dallas in 1883, of opening an art studio and then returning to Washington. Later she went to Europe to finish her art education, and when she came back to Texas, taught two years in Kidd Key college, Sherman, after which she went again to Washington. She said she filed suit for divorce from her husband in Washington and came to Dallas, living with her sister, Mrs. Evans.

Relates Her History.

"Did you come to Dallas before you got your divorce?" she was asked.

"Yes."

"When?"

"I came here the first of September, 1895."

"Did you live with your sister?"

"Yes, until I found a lot on San Jacinto street and built a little home on it."

"You had never heard of Colonel W. L. Crawford up to the time of your coming here in 1895, had you?"

"No, I met him after I came here."

"Do you remember meeting him?"

"Yes. I was down town with my sister; he was standing on Main street in front of his office and she said she had some matters of business to discuss with him. She stopped to talk with him and introduced me."

"Later didn't Colonel Crawford tell you that you could try your divorce case here and that it would save you the trip to Washington and expense?"

"Yes."

Mrs. Crawford told of her home on San Jacinto street, the arrangement of the rooms and their size, the questions bringing out that among those living there was Mrs. Crawford's son, Lucius, born in her first marriage. In reference to the courtship by Colonel Crawford she said that her sister, Miss Ollie Lester, about 18 or 19 years old, visited her and Colonel Crawford brought several young men to call on Miss Ollie.

"Up to the time of your divorce, did Colonel Crawford ever indicate what his interest in you was?" she was asked.

Colonel Is Divorced.

Mrs. Crawford testified she was not present in court when her divorce was granted and up to that time she and Colonel Crawford never had been alone together. "After the divorce, what was the next time you heard from the colonel?" she was asked.

"He sent a little note to me by a negro servant the day after and asked if he could call."

"That night, when he called, where were your sister and your son, Lucius?"

"In the dining room, right next to us."

In spite of the fact that Colonel Crawford knew that every word he would say would be heard, did he approach you on any unusual matter that night?"

"Yes, he asked me to marry him."

"That was a little after September, 1896?"

"Yes."

"What did you say to him?"

"I told him that I had worked hard, perfecting myself in my art and that I would not marry any man."

Mrs. Crwaford then detailed how Colonel Crawford returned each night—on the fourth bringing a ring with him which she said she did not accept then. He left it in the box in the house, however, she said. His conversations and proposals were overheard by others in the house, the witness said. She asserted she talked to relatives about Colonel Crawford's repeated proposals and finally agreed to accept him. Colonel Crawford wished the marriage to occur the next evening, but it was set for three days later, she said.

Objections by State.

Questions as to whether Colonel Crawford had revealed to her his financial standing brought objections from the state, and defense counsel said:

"Well then, I'll simply ask you right out—did you marry Colonel Crawford for anything he had, or for the advantages of his social position?"

"I did not," Mrs. Crawford replied firmly.

"If any one ever said that you did, was it true or false?"

"It was false."

In answer to other questions the witness declared that Colonel Crawford never had remained at her home later than 12 o'clock, midnight, and never was there under the influence of liquor.

Mrs. Crawford testified that the first payment on the home on Ross avenue which she and Colonel Crawford occupied was from funds she derived from the sale of her San Jacinto property.

The questioning then went to the night before O'Day was killed. She said her son, William Lester, was home and had a brief in the suit contesting the will of Colonel Crawford. The will left the estate to Mrs. Crawford and William Lester. It was being contested by Colonel Crawford's children of his first marriage.

She testified her son said he intended to read the brief, that later she was awakened and went to his room. She said he read parts of the brief to her. Asked whether she knew of a deposition by Willis Evans, she said she did. Defense counsel asked to introduce excerpts from the brief. The testimony taken from Willis Evans also was read.

The excerpts from the brief prepared by O'Day in the will contest case referred to Mrs. Crawford and Colonel Crawford to Mrs. Lamar's house, alleged statements by her to Evans about Colonel Crawford continued.

"When especially it is considered that such visits occurred at a time when the defendant was the lawful wife of another man, such testimony, in conjunction with other testimony introduced is indicative of relations between the testator and defendant prior to their marriage, of a different and less honorable and conventional character than those which usually precede the marriage of an honorable man and an honorable woman and which not infrequently explain and precede the marriage of a man of the age of the testator, fifty-eight, with a woman of the age of the defendant at such time."

The brief continued by declaring the testimony indicated "her design, plan and ultimate object in marrying the colonel, towit, the appropriation and enjoyment of all his property."

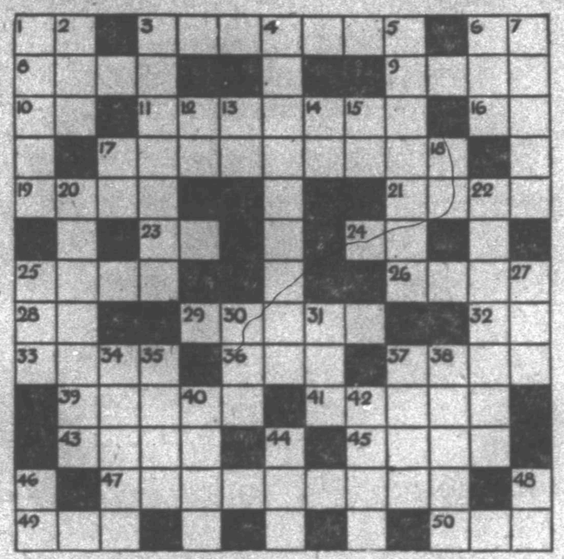

The testimony of Willis Evans was taken in the will case as a deposition, was ruled out as evidence, but included in the brief on appeal. He had been a coachman in the Crawford family before Colonel Crawford married Mrs. Lamar. The defense contends young Crawford knew nothing of the deposition of the former coachman until the day he got a copy of the brief.

Resuming examination of Mrs. Crawford defense counsel brought from her denials of the testimony in the will case by Evans that Colonel Crawford had remained at her home until in the morning, that he never had been intoxicated and reiterated her denial she had married Colonel Crawford for his money. She told of having loaned her second husband money.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung disease, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Adv.

Who's Who—— And What of It?

Sidelights on the Legislature

By W. BOYD GATEWOOD

The new presiding officer of the Texas senate, Lieutenant Governor Barry Miller of Dallas, has already, through his acts, served notice that he intends to be a stickler for rules and order.

Somewhere on the senate floor will rise the hum of conversation from an animated group of senators.

"Bang! Bang! Bang!" goes the Miller gavel and the Miller voice, distinguishable anywhere for its individual tonal texture, booms out:

"Order, gentlemen. Order. I should dislike to overwork the sergeant at arms."

Then flashes the good-humored, tolerant, infectious Miller smile.

Pep and personality. That's Barry Miller. Three score years rest as easily on his broad straight back as half that number. He thrives on politics and political campaigns. Last summer, in cruel heat and fatiguing itineraries he set a pace that many times flabbergasted a much younger man.

The other day a political observer who liked to speculate in interesting possibilities said, "Barry Miller may be the next governor."

Who can tell?

Young Dan Moody, the attorney general, may shortly be asked to unravel the senate tangle on the eleventh hour Neff nominations.

When the senate balked at confirmation of a number of his previous recess appointments, Neff hastily cast a new lot before that body. Thus far the senate has ignored the nominations and Neff retired from office with the patronage list unconsidered.

The point of law now to be answered is: Did the Neff nominations pass out with the Neff administration? Or must the senate act on them within the prescribed ten days, either confirming or rejecting?

Governor Ferguson's nominations have not yet been submitted. A great many here believe that they will not be submitted until between the first and fifth of February.

The much rumored fight expected to develop on the confirmation of Charles O. Austin of Dallas, Governor Ferguson's appointee for a member of the banking commission, finally blew up with a loud report. So frightened was the whispering chorus which spread the rumor that it retired forthwith, in the face of the senate's confirmation, and not one can be found at this date, either peeping or cheeping.

Incidentally, here is an interesting, untold sidelight on the Austin case, here recorded to keep the record straight:

Early after Austin's appointment certain persons began connecting his name with that of the ku klux klan and predicted, because of that, he would get it in the neck. It was even said that Barry Miller, rampant klan anti, was riled at Ferguson for naming Austin for the next post.

Such was far from fact.

Lieutenant Governor Miller told this reporter the real story just after Austin's appointment had been approved by the senate.

"Sure," said Miller, "Charley Austin joined the klan away back in its early history. He joined it as he would have any other patriotic fraternity. But he attended only three meetings. At the third meeting a cyclops, a kleagle or a whatyoucallem got up and jumped all over Jews and Catholics. Austin has many friends of both faefions. He jumped to his feet and, in a fiery speech, registered his resentment and tendered his withdrawal at once. That ended his klan membership.

"Now," declared the lieutenant governor, "I'm not just spouting off hearsay evidence. By an odd chance I came across actual evidence. While ill at home some time ago I became keenly interested in the Mayfield-Peddy senatorial contest. I got hold of a transcript of the evidence and in that I came across the testimony of three klan witnesses who testified that Austin withdrew from the klan in 1921 under the circumstances which I have related."

In conclusion, it should be said that Barry Miller is enjoying the laugh on the Austin "alarmists."

On the very same day of the Austin confirmation, other rumors were burned at the stake to make a Roman holiday for the senate.

There had been persistent and growing report about the capital of late that the state guaranty bank fund law was to be the target of a repeal attack by the administration, the move to begin in the senate. The following official statement coming from the senate is definite:

"The rumor that an attempt was to be made to repeal the guaranty fund law by the present administration is entirely unfounded in fact."

What actually has been done is this:

Senator Holbrook has a bill pending in the senate and Representative Blount two in the house proposing to permit guaranty fund banks to change their system of operation to that of the bond plan, and fixing definitely the amount of the bond to be

The senate statement added that "this is the only legislation along these lines contemplated at this time" by the thirty-ninth legislature. The senate committee on banking will hold a hearing on the bills next Monday at 8 p. m.

An Electric Range Gives More Freedom for Social Affairs

Mrs. Chitwood Says:

"With an Electric Range, you can tell exactly how long a dish will cook and at what heat.

"And being able to leave the kitchen means time for other important things."

ELECTRIC Ranges have proved a most important factor in cutting down the time required for household duties, and in affording women the opportunity to participate in interesting and beneficial public activities, club work, and social affairs.

Their absolute cleanliness saves countless hours heretofore spent in scouring utensils and in constant scrubbing and cleaning of the kitchen. Electric ranges eliminate all dirt, soot, ashes, fumes and greasy smoke

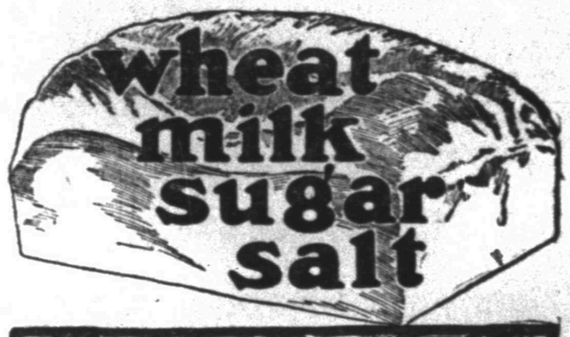

The simple, automatic operation makes it unnecessary to spend much time in the kitchen tending to cooking. The Electric Timer and Heat Control can be depended upon to turn the heat ON and OFF just at the right time and to maintain an even accurate heat throughout the cooking period. Perfect results are assured without watching.

Come in and have us explain the unequalled comforts, conveniences, safety and superior cookery offered by this most modern and efficient Range

STOCKS

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—Stock prices fluctuated irregularly during the early part of today's trading and then broke sharply when the call money rate was advanced to 4½ per cent, as a result of the heavy calling of loans which was estimated as high as $20,000,000. Net losses in the active issues ranged from 1 to 5 points.

The calling of loans was due to the strengthening of bank reserves as a result of a decrease of nearly $20,000,000 in surplus shown by Saturday's clearing house statement, temporary withdrawals of out-of-town funds from this center and preparations for heavy month-end requirements. Call money renewed at 4 per cent and then advanced successively to 4¼, 4 and 4½, closing at the top. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged with business quiet.

All the so-called pivotal industrial shares lost ground. U. S. Steel common closed 1⅞ lower at 126¾ after selling as high as 128¾. American Can crossed 165 in the early afternoon and then slipped back to 163¾, off ⅛. Baldwin showed a net loss of 1¼ at 131 and Studebaker was half off at 42½.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 26.—The cotton market was rather a two side daffair today and while not exactly active, developed more disposition to trade than has been the rule of late. Following a somewhat better start in which March showed a gain of 11 points over Saturday's close, the market turned reactionary under pressure of rather liberal selling and at the lowest of the morning, the most active months showed a loss from the early high of 36 points and a net loss compared with the previous close of 25 points. Most of the early loss was regained during the afternoon as the market showed a tendency to rebound as soon as the selling pressure was lifted. Final results exhibited net losses of only 7 points on March.

FLAMES CLAIM 4 CHILDREN

JOPLIN, Mo., Jan. 26.—Four small children, the oldest six and the youngest two, were burned to death today in a fire that destroyed the four-room home of Mr. and Mrs. Senck Cooper, near here.

The dead: Dorothy Cooper, 6; Mary Belle Cooper, 4; Cecil Cooper, 3, and Jack Cooper, 2.

The children were alone in the house when the fire broke out.

The mother, who had been chopping wood not far away and later had gone to the home of a neighbor, was not apprised of the tragedy until the house was in embers and the children dead.

Hoof And Mouth Cost

Bartlett of Marlin

Bill Hangar There

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD
Record News Staff

AUSTIN, TEX., Jan. 26.—An expensive malady is the foot and mouth disease whether its victims are valuable cattle or cheap men. Texas herds were threatened in certain sections of the state not many months since and hundreds of blooded stock were slain by order of the federal and state agents who control the livestock industry.

J. Roog Scott of Coleman, is here. He's the chairman of the livestock sanitary commission. He is going to remain here until his successor has been appointed and the owners of the cattle slain are reimbursed by the state. A special appropriation will be necessary and a legislative act must come before the appropriation.

Experts appraise the value of the stock slain to prevent the spread of the disease and the total appraised value approximates $325,000. It is a 50-50 priposition and the federal government is expected to pay one-half and the state government the other.

THUS in the neighborhood of $165,000 must be appropriated to make good the losses of the herdsmen of the state. Chairman Scott insists there is no other way out of it; that it is the law and in his opinion a wise law.

Churchill J. Bartlett of Marlin, is here.

He was secretary of state when James E. Ferguson was ousted from the office of governor and his office holding privileges taken from him by the high court of impeachment. Bartlett is a lineal descendant of one of the signers of the Declaration of American Independence. His grandfather was a native of New Hampshire and his grandmother a native of Alabama.

This Bartlett who came to Texas was a California argonaut and on his return trip from the gold fields he crossed the Isthmus of Panama, invaded Texas, it looked good to him and he became an adopted son of the commonwealth. Bartlett was not overlooked when Ferguson was thrown out of office, but a court decree vindicated him and ever since he has been fighting the battles of his former chieftain.

HE was not a candidate for reappointment and is not an applicant for any position within the gift of the new governor. He came to Austin with hundreds of others to witness the inauguration and to renew his pledge of friendship and loyalty. Incidentally, whenever a Ferguson has been a candidate since the impeachment, Falls county has landed in the Ferguson column, and in the Satterwhite campaign for speaker, Representative Dunn of Falls, was one of the lieutenants for the man from the west.

Another familiar face has appeared in the new picture of the capitol and its inmates. Also in the lobbies of the big hotels. William A. Hanger is here. He hasn't missed a session for a quarter of a century and there was a time when he was a most pugnacious and able member of the upper house. He defended Ferguson in the impeachment case. He declared the verdict a crucifixion and not a trial.

ON the day of his arrival in the city of Austin, Senator J. Roy Hardin introduced his resolution providing that the impeachment trial and verdict should be expunged from the record. The two events may not be linked together, but regardless of the political affiliations of Ferguson and Hanger in recent years the Fort Worth lawyer was his close personal friend and for years after the impeachment was one of his personal advisors.

Hanger was one of the five who dominated the Waco convention in the month of May, 1924, and sent to the Madison Square Garden convention the delegation headed by Thomas B. Love which went down in defeat with William Gibbs McAdoo.

There appears to be new alignments now, but Hanger who is as close mouthed as an oyster and as agile as the Irishman's flea smilingly waved aside newspaper writers when they pumped this question in his direction, "Where is Jim going from here?"

Kiwanians Visit Day Nursery And See It At Work

Catch a Glimpse Of What It Accomplishes For Needy Youngsters

THEY LEND SUPPORT

Club's Efforts Help In Maintaining Proper Care And Treatment

Tiny kiddies at play and at work; rows of clean, happy faces reverently bowed over clasped hands at the luncheon table—these sights were the privilege of Kiwanians Monday noon when they gathered at the Lamar Avenue Baptist church to see the Day Nursery kiddies in their six-day kindergarten classes under the instruction of Miss Earle Carter, whose services are made possible by the Kiwanis club for the children of the Day Nursery, operated by the Federated Missionary societies of the city.

Visiting the Day Nursery building, Kiwanians saw the small quarters and meager equipment with which Mrs. Rebecca Carrington so efficiently cares for 45 little tots a day, supervising their food, sleep, play and cleanliness. They saw the rows of clean, white beds where the youngsters take their nap; they saw the huge bathtub with a drainboard arrangement, which enables one worker to bathe the little ones, a second to dry them and a third dress them. They talked to the older children and shook the friendly foot of the tiniest redheaded baby. They were "on the grounds" and realized, perhaps for the first time, the importance if the work to which they had been contributing.

Following the visit, Kiwanians were served a delicious chicken dinner at the First M. E. church, South, by the ladies of the Federated Missionary society.

President J. T. Gant turned the meeting over to Dr. Felix Collard, former chairman of the educational committee who introduced Mrs. W. B. Jarrell, outgoing president of the federation. Mrs. Jarrell introduced Mrs. W. W. Cook as the new president, and Mrs. Cook in a brief talk, expressed her appreciation to the Kiwanians for the assistance they were giving the Day Nursery, and pledged the support of the federation in building a bigger and finer Day Nursery and free kindergarten for Wichita Falls.

"You Kiwanians have been the prime moving element in the progress of the Day Nursery," stated Mrs. J. A. Kemp, prominent worker in the federation, "you have caught the vision in the right way by attacking the problem of the under-privileged child at the root. Save a child and you have saved seven adults."

Dr. Collard stated that the spring work for the club would be to put the day nursery and free kindergarten on a better basis through enlarged quarters, better supplies and equipment and the supplying of badly needed improvements.

Mrs. W. B. Jarrell then addressed the club, thanking the members for the interest they had taken in the nursery.

Dr. Collard, after explaining that the children were cared for at the rate of 3 1-2 cents a day, introduced Mrs. Rebecca Carrington, matron, under whose management the nursery is maintained.

Rev. Milo Atkinson, on behalf of Kiwanians delivered a talk on the slogan, "We Build" and its application to the souls as well as the material welfare of the tiny kiddies in the care of the club.

Daredevil Lockwood, in the city for the Fritz Motor company, for which he will make an endurance run, made a short talk and offered his services to the Kiwanians as a means of raising funds for the Day Nursery.

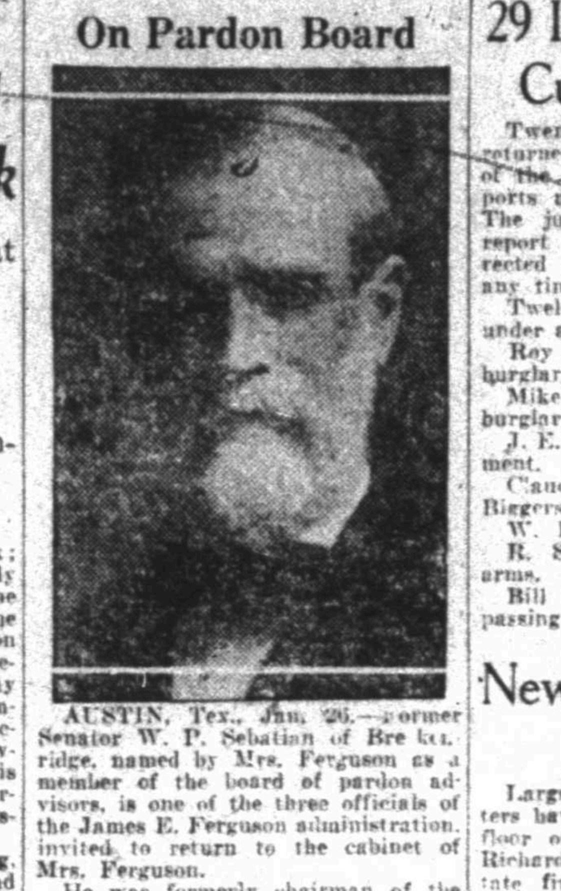

The offer was accepted by President J. T. Gant who appointed D. M. Bernard in charge of a committee composed of Dr. Felix Collard, Dr. O. W. Wilson, and Dr. Milo Atkinson, to confer with the Daredevil and decide upon a course of action.

On Pardon Board

AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 26.—Former Senator W. P. Sebastian of Breckenridge, named by Mrs. Ferguson as a member of the board of pardon advisors, is one of the three officials of the James E. Ferguson administration, invited to return to the cabinet of Mrs. Ferguson.

He was formerly chairman of the board, but resigned shortly after Ferguson's impeachment to aid Ferguson in the 1918 campaign for governor. Others of the previous Ferguson administration are C. O. Austin, banking commissioner, and W. R. Dulaney, prison commissioner.

references to Colonel Crawford and his visits to Mrs. Kate LaMar before the couple were married.

Dead silence prevailed in the court room as the defendant declared he had not on this occasion, in Locke & Locke's office, or anywhere else, heard the negro testimony, given in deposition, for the Crawford will suit.

It was this testimony and O'Day's alleged language based on the testimony in the brief filed in the will suit, that constitutes the alleged insult to his mother, which Crawford has said caused him to kill O'Day.

"While I was in that office," Crawford testified, "where they were taking the negro's deposition, I heard no portion of the negro's testimony. The first time, I heard that was when I read it in the brief the night before this trouble."

At this point in Crawford's testimony, Judge Pippen announced a recess until 10 a. m. Tuesday.

He Talked to Victim

George W. Dealey swore he saw Crawford hail O'Day at the entrance of the American Exchange National bank building just before the shooting, but he admitted that he had told no one but a brother. Frequent Attacks Of Biliousness

From Which Kentucky Man Suffered Two or Three Times a Month, Relieved by Black-Draught

LAWRENCEBURG, Ky.—Mr. J. P. Nevins, a local coal dealer and farmer, about two years ago learned of the value of Thedford's Black-Draught liver medicine, and now he says:

"Until then I suffered with severe bilious attacks that came on two or three times each month. I would get nauseated. I would have dizziness and couldn't work.

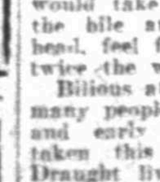

"I would take pills until I was worn out with them. I didn't seem to get relief. After taking the pills my bowels would act a couple or three times, then I would be very constipated.

"A neighbor told me of Black-Draught and I began its use. I never have found so much relief as it gave me. I would not be without it for anything.

"It seemed to cleanse my whole system and made me feel like new. I would take a few doses—get rid of the bile and have my usual clear head, feel full of 'pep' and could do twice the work."

Billious attacks are "seasonal" with many people, especially in the spring and early summer. Millions have taken this purely vegetable Black-Draught liver medicine to ward off such attacks, and the good results they have reported should encourage you to try it. Get a package today.

"Lasses" White Are in Town Jan. 28

The "Lasses" White all star minstrels now on its fifth and most successful tour comes to the Palace on January 28 and 29. As one of its principal features this season, second only in importance to "Hotel de Blackville," "Lasses" has written a distinct departure from the usual minstrel offering in a sketch called "Plantation Days of 1924." Scenically much is promised as the locale of the sketch is the log cabin home of Uncle Eph and Aunt Dinah a few miles from Blackville where the pickaninnies of the vicinity assemble for a picnic incidental to which is a dancing contest. The occasion is one of singing and dancing and in the interpretation of its various characters the full strength of the company is enlisted. Aside from its other merits it should prove a treat from the singing and dancing standpoint. Associated importantly with "Lasses" this season are Dan Holt, Charlie Morris, "Bobby" Burns, "Jack" Hays, Maxwell Gordon, Frank Gilmore, Karl Denton and "Billy Doss, a monologist who is one of the big hits of last season's company. His current monologue is adding to his popularity.

SOAKS RIGHT IN AND QUICKLY LIMBERS UP STIFF CREAKY JOINTS

Pharmacists call it "Joint-Ease" because it's for Swollen, Sore, Painful, Creaky Joints.

It took a good many years to get together a combination of pain subduing and swelling reducing agents declared to be the one remedy that almost instantly penetrates through skin and flesh and starts right in to make swollen, inflamed, creaky, pain racked joints as good as new.

They call the new and wonderful preparation "Joint-Ease" because the medical man who turned the trick, worked for years to perfect some low-priced remedy that would really benefit the millions of people who have one or more joints that need helpful attention.

So "Joint-Ease" is prepared only for people who have a swollen, painful, creaky, disordered or stiff joint, whether it be in knee, elbow, shoulder, ankle, neck or finger and whether it is caused by rheumatism or something else.

Of course, it can't help but quickly put an end to such superficial ailments as lumbago, neuralgia, neuritis, aching muscles, stitch in the side, crick in the neck or sore feet because of its penetrating action, but what it is really recommended for is joint ailments of any nature whatever.

Ask for a tube of "Joint-Ease." You can use it several times in one evening for quick results, because it goes right through the skin with only a few seconds rubbing. It surely is a swift penetrator and when it gets under the skin, it starts right in to clean up all joint trouble.

All druggists dispense it daily for about 60 cents a tube, as do first class druggists everywhere.

Town Talk

DR. CARRIE WEAVER SMITH, who unsuccessfully fought a case in local court last week, sends us a cartoon on the eclipse. Dr. Smith, who is superintendent of the Girls Training school at Gainesville, takes a different view of the eclipse. Shapes its meaning to suit herself.

This cartoon she sent, reprinted below, was headed: "The Lone..... State Is the STAR of Idealism to be in Eclipe?"

Look at the cartoon.

THE CARTOON, OF course, is Dr. Smith's protest over the proposed wire fence to be erected at the girl's training school.

Dr. Smith calls is "a most reactionary recommendation."

She shows, in her cartoon, a Texas girl kept in by a high wire fence, girls in other states are at liberty to come and go as they please.

THE board of control recommends in its budget, submitted to the legislature, expenditure, of $10,000 to construct such a fence, as pictured in the cartoon.

Juvenile court judges, after sending girls to the Gainesville school for several months or more, are surprised to find the girls have returned home in a remarkably short time.

GAINESVILLE, few minutes automobile drive from the Oklahoma line, has been the scene of many escapades into Oklahoma.

From there girls go to Dallas and Fort Worth or return home. If any particular effort is made to have them returned, they remain in Oklahoma. There they are safe.

OF course the board of control will say to Dr. Smith that it is building the $10,000 fence to protect the girls. An explanation with a double meaning. They may protect these girls from harm which might come to them from wild animals which may hibernate in the vicinity of Gainesville or they may protect the girls by keeping them in the school of correction—similar to the manner in which prisoners are kept in a ptenitentiary.

In other words, it appears the board of control has struck a snag in Dr. Smith's cartoon—which is her objection. All of which means more business for the legislature.

THE palm for nerve and moral callousness goes to a man, now very much sought after by police and welfare officials here, who faces a charge of wife desertion and child abandonment if he is ever caught.

It seems that a year or so ago he married a local woman and their union was blessed by an infant daughter. By a former marriage, however, the man had two other small children and these, too, were cared for and nurtured by the woman after her marriage.

Now the man has run away, leaving his wife with her own baby and the two foster children to support.

Convinced that he had definitely abandoned his family, the woman has appealed to the proper authorities for assitance and to enlist their aid in an effort to apprehend him.

A MAN walked into Clayton's cafe Monday afternoon, sat down by an acquaintance who happened to be there and, as is generally the case under such conditions as existed yesterday, began remarking about the weather.

"Sure is chilly outside, huh?"

A few moment later a steaming bowl was set before him.

"What's all this?" he inquired of Heloise who hovered expectantly behind the counter.

"Didn't you order chili?" she said.

"That," remarked the customer, "is service, anyhow."

Attorneys of Wichita county will hold their annual banquet and business meeting next Friday night at the Wichita club, according to a decision of the officials of the organization Monday. The meeting was to have been held last December but was postponed.

Walter W. Pollock, president of the Manufacturers Appraisal company of Pittsburgh, is in the city conferring with officials regarding the installation of the new Somers, or unit system of tax appraisement and equalization. He met Monday afternoon with Tax Assessor and Collector W. R. Hyer, Mayor Collier and others. The tax system is nearing completion under the direction of J. Ben Stoner, associated with Mr. Pollock in the enterprise, and will be ready for use when taking of renditions for 1925 taxes are started by the city.

Changes in the plans for an addition to the county jail are to be made by the Southern Steel company, awarded the contract for the work, it was decided Monday by the county commissioners court. The modern addition which will greatly increase the jail's facilities will be built on to the western side of the present structure instead of the eastern side as was originally planned.

With just five more days in which payments may be made without becoming delinquent, the automobile license bureau in County Tax Collector Guy Raley's office is playing host to increasingly large crowds each day. Monday showed that approximately 9,000 of the 20,000 cars in the county have thus far been registered. Arrests will start next Sunday for those who do not have 1925 license tags.

A suit involving an oil and gas lease near Iowa Park, styled Mrs. Martha Dowling vs. Mrs. J. F. Boyd et al., is on trial before Judge H. R. Wilson of the 30th district court. Taking of testimony will be continued Tuesday.

Five marriage licenses were issued Monday by the county clerk's office. They were as follows: Byron Bunker, Dallas, and Miss Velma Van Loh, Clara; Paul Dewey Richards, Wichita Falls, and Nellie B. Lewis, Wichita Falls; W. A. Beavers, Burkburnett, and Miss Bertha Mae Eckelberger, Burkburnett; William Thomas, Wichita Falls, and Willie Brown, Wichita Falls; Silas Words, Holliday, and Miss Flo Guest, Phoenix, Ariz.

W. G. Bralley, county juvenile officer, has gone to Waco to attend a state meeting of juvenile authorities from all over Texas. Several important matters relating to the handling of delinquent juveniles will come up the session, it is understood.

Milton Johnson of the First National bank has gone to Wynne, Ark., on business.

Dr. A. H. Douglas, director of the city health department, is in Austin attending the convention of the Southwest Water Works association.

Man's inhumanity to man keeps the coroner busy examining used stomachs.

Beginning At Austin In The Ferguson Household

Records News staff photographer at Austin had the pleasure of seeing some of the home life of Governor Ferguson the other day, when he made these photographic studies in the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Nalle.

Little Ernest Nalle, the boy who Jim during the campaign pleaded should not bear the stigma of impeachment through life, was the center of attraction. The chief impression was a fond grandmother, well-bred mother and bright youngster. Judging from the way Ernest enjoys his playthings he can't be bothered whether Jim Ferguson was ever impeached or not, nor whether the "stigma" is going to be removed.

The train runs by electricity, can be made to go ahead, back up or take the siding. Little Ernest asked the photographer if he would like to see the train work. Of course he was interested. So the little fellow handled the train like a real electrical engineer. He incidentally remarked that he was fond of electricity.

His grandmother asked him what he called his railroad.

"The Sugarland," was the prompt reply.

Another toy that Ernest showed the photographer was a steam shovel that his famous grandmother gave him. He showed how it worked and said he believed he could put a real fire in the engine, but mother and daddy wouldn't let him play with fire. In the other picture is shown her daughter, Mrs. George Nalle.

What is Accomplished by Mrs. Chitwood With Gebhardt's Eagle Chili Powder is easy of accomplishment By You

Ladies in attendance at this week's cooking school no doubt are marveling at the many ways Mrs. Chitwood is employing Eagle Chili Powder, the beautiful finishing touch she gives to salads with it and the delightful flavor it gives every thing on which it is used.

Of course all have used Eagle Chili Powder for making home made Chili con Carne and other Mexican flavored dishes. But to many it is a revelation to find Mrs. Chitwood using this unique condiment in place of paprika, giving not only a more beautiful color and decoration to salads and other dishes, but adding a distinctive and pleasing flavor.

Be sure and get a copy of "Mexican Cookery for American Homes" and make careful notes of what Mrs. Chitwood has to say about Eagle Chili Powder. The combination of this unique cookbook and the splendid recipes of Mrs. Chitwood will enable you to secure unusually pleasing results in cookery.

Eagle Chili Powder is absolutely pure and wholesome. It is made from only selected genuine Ancho peppers that are grown especially for and under the direction of Gebhardt.
