Affirmative action given court okay

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, handing civil rights forces a sweeping victory, today reaffirmed the legality of affirmative action in the American workplace to remedy past discrimination against blacks and other minorities.

The court's latest word on affirmative action came in two rulings.

In one, the justices approved a plan in Cleveland that reserves about half the promotions in the city's fire department for qualified minority candidates.

In the other, the court upheld a ruling that a union representing sheet metal workers in New York and New Jersey must significantly raise its non-white membership by August 1987.

The rulings represent a major defeat for the Reagan administration, which sought to limit on-the-job racial preferences.

By a 6-3 vote in the sheet metal workers case, the court rejected the administration's position that only actual victims of discrimination may benefit from court-ordered affirmative action remedies.

The justices said that more sweeping remedies do not violate federal civil rights laws or the Constitution's equal-protection guarantees.

Justice William J. Brennan, in the court's main opinion, said, "We hold that (federal law) does not prohibit a court from ordering, in appropriate circumstances, affirmative race-conscious relief as a remedy for past discrimination."

Writing for the court's 6-3 majority in the Cleveland case, Brennan said agreements between employers and minority groups may provide racial preferences even more extensive than a federal court would have awarded after a trial.

He said such agreements do not amount to unlawful "reverse discrimination" against white males.

Dissenting were Justices Byron R. White; Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, who is about to retire; and Justice William H. Rehnquist.

Church leveled by blaze

By NOBLE B. YOUNG
SDN Staff Writer

Fire destroyed the Hermleigh Church of Christ Tuesday, a fire loss in part attributed to a lack of adequate water pressure and a high wind.

"The main thing is there were no injuries and it is something that can be rebuilt," said Minister Rio Evans Wednesday morning.

He said he was last inside the church Tuesday approximately two hours before the fire was reported around 1:43 p.m.

Church elders were to meet Wednesday afternoon to decide the immediate future of the congregation, according to Evans.

Services are expected to be continued at some other location in the Hermleigh area.

Evans did not have a firm estimate for the dollar value of the loss, but said, " There is a strong feeling among the congregation to rebuild the church."

Several reports of smoke coming from the structure were phoned into the Snyder Fire Department beginning at 1:43 p.m. Tuesday.

Fire fighters were at the scene until 6:30 p.m., but efforts to douse the fire were hampered by the high winds and lack of water at the scene.

Fire Chief Terry McDowell said Wednesday morning that his engines could get only "about 50 to 60 pounds of water pressure" from two fire hydrants in the community.

This was not enough to refill water carrying booster trucks or effectively fight the fire with the high volume engine pumps, he said.

Rainfall continues here during night

Snyder received a total 1.64 inches rainfall Tuesday from both a morning and overnight shower.

The morning cloudburst, which also caused a 30 minute electrical blackout for three-fourths of the city, dropped approximately one-half inch of rainfall here.

Rains that fell during Tuesday night added the 1 inch-plus to the total, bringing the year's official figure for Snyder to 11.37 inches.

Only Snyder and Dunn recorded moisture from the morning thunderstorm.

Overnight totals from the second storm system included Lake Thomas (at the pump station), .30 of an inch; Ira, .60 of an inch; Lloyd Mountain, .20 of an inch; and west of Snyder, .60 of an inch.

With the Tuesday rain, the forecast for July 4th for the Snyder area now mentions the possibility of scattered thunderstorms for the holiday.

The forecast for Wednesday night calls for mostly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms. Locally heavy showers are said a possibility also.

New threat scuttles cotton spray plan

A county cotton producer's group has cancelled plans to attempt an early season spray for boll weevils due to sightings of another potential cotton-destroying pest — bollworms.

The spray program for the weevil — which would have entailed a first for the county — was first proposed June 11 by the Scurry County Producers Association.

It was proposed to spray all cotton planted in the county during May, a plan which would have involved an estimated 5,000 acres here.

Cost of this operation was figured at $30,000 and it was to be financed through monies funded through the "at the gin" assessment on Scurry County cotton.

One of the potential hazards of such a spray noted at the time by association members was that it would also kill many "beneficial" insects — those which keep down populations of other cotton-destroying pests.

One such pest is the bollworm.

Tuesday, Deanna Myers, county entomologist, reported to members of the producers association that she has now spotted an emergence of boll worms in select areas of the county.

Due to "present bollworm infestations," the group Tuesday decided to cancel the spray program for the boll weevil.

Myers said small larvae of the worm are now present in fields in the northeast corner of the county and around Camp Springs road.

In addition, small worms and "tan and white eggs" can be found in the Hermleigh-Inadale area.

She noted a bollworm moth trap on the Johnny Eicke field north of the Camp Springs road is presently catching high numbers of bollworm moths.

This outbreak greatly increases the risk associated with any spray program which would destroy beneficial insects, she notes.

Based upon this information, the boll weevil plan was waived off.

Myers noted "at this time

July 4th activities begin to warm up

Many events related to the July 4th celebration here Friday and Saturday will have setup and registration activity underway by Thursday.

One July 4th activity was to begin Wednesday afternoon as entries for the Palette Club Art Show were to be accepted from 1 until 7 p.m. at the Towle Park Barn across the street from the National Guard Armory.

The art displays will open to the public at 9 a.m. Friday and will remain open Saturday also.

The arts and crafts displays in the Towle Park National Guard Armory will be set up from 4 until 9 p.m. Thursday. These displays will not open to the public until Friday at 10 a.m., however. The armory will be open both Friday and Saturday.

The set up times for food booths will also begin Thursday after 5 p.m.

Also Thursday, the first rounds will begin of both the racquetball tournament and the Highway 80 Tennis Tournament sponsored as part of July 4th here.

The racquetball play will be from 6 until 9 p.m. Thursday at the Western Texas College courts.

The tennis action will be at the junior high and high school

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Don't yell at your children when they misbehave. People will know for sure they are yours."

Coming home from Kerrville Sunday, our family stopped at one of those country churches located between Junction and San Angelo.

Our attendance swelled the audience to 55, and we had memories of a very similar rural congregation in Coleman County that we used to attend when visiting grandparents.

It was a typical country congregation–full of gray-haired folks who had probably sat in the same pew the past 50 or 60 years.

There were more women than men present, and we assumed that most of them had out-lived their spouses. You could count the number of young people on one hand.

Upon arrival, we were handed the week's bulletin which keeps the members informed on members and congregational activities. One item caught our eye.

The announcement told about an evening fellowship dinner–to be followed by a game of volleyball. We were tempted to stay around and watch.

Another Snyder native has made his mark, and we ran into him in Kerrville last week.

Bryan Hargrove, son of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Hargrove, is on the job as golf professional at the plush Riverhill Country Club.

Bryan, who took over there on June 1, runs a first-class operation, and a couple of members we talked to are already singing his praises.

Prior to his assignment in Kerrville, Hargrove was assistant golf pro at Tapatio Springs at Boerne between Kerrville and San Antonio.

There's one bad thing about taking ole-what's-her-name on a trip–she tries to get elected to the Master Charge Hall of Fame.

Ask Us

Q. — Regarding the Snyder ISD budget, how much will the 3 percent pay raise for the professionals cost Snyder?

A. — When school officials first announced the plan, they estimated the pay raise would add some $200,000 to the payroll portion of the budget.

In Brief

Stay granted

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — Attorneys for killer Theodore R. Bundy took their pleas to halt his execution to an Atlanta court after a week of legal rejections in Florida that gained him another 24 hours of life.

"Something has to happen before 7 a.m. Thursday," attorney Polly Nelson said Tuesday evening as Bundy's bleary-eyed lawyers worked in Miami on arguments to present to the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

U.S. District Judge William Zloch rejected their request for an indefinite stay. Instead, he delayed the execution originally set for 7 a.m. today, giving lawyers time to plead for their client's life in higher courts.

Local

Session brief

Members of the Scurry County Appraisal District board of directors approved district bills and minutes from their previous session during their regular meeting Tuesday.

Directors attending the 8 p.m. session included Pete Hester, Ross Blanchard and Mairl McFaul. John Reed and Dwaine Williams were not present.

Seed spitting

In the July 4th tradition, youngsters pre-school through sixth grade can compete in a watermelon seed spitting contest at the Scurry County Library Thursday.

It is part of programs planned at the library each Thursday all summer. Beginning at 10 a.m., each child will receive a slice of watermelon and prizes will be given for distance in various age categories.

The watermelons are being given by Furr's, Piggly Wiggly, Thriftway and Safeway.

Liberty bash plans underway

NEW YORK (AP) — Workmen put the finishing touches on the Statue of Liberty for the big weekend bash as more tall ships glided into view and businesses overlooking New York Harbor reported customers swarming in.

"We're jammed," Dennis Starr, vice president of The Liberty Cafe in the South Street Seaport facing the harbor, said Tuesday evening as noise bubbled around him at the restaurant.

"There's no doubt the celebration is contributing to the increase in business," which was about 25 percent above normal, he said.

At the Vista International Hotel at the World Trade Center, also in lower Manhattan, assistant manager Luis Rosario said his business was "fantastic. It's going to be a madhouse. We've been sold out."

Now through Sunday, all 825 rooms are reserved.

At the Hilton Hotel in midtown, rooms were booked solid for Friday, and the availability of rooms for Thursday and Saturday "looks sort of iffy," said Robert Fischer, the night manager.

The big bash came closer Tuesday as the aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy, flanked by six tugs and two police boats, made its way into the harbor and dropped anchor halfway between Liberty Island and Governors Island.

The carrier will be a floating reviewing stand for the news media during the centennial observances of the statue.

Refurbishing of the statue, which began three years ago, is almost finished, National Park Service spokesman Manny Strumpf said. Workers on Liberty Island were doing some minor landscaping, touch-up painting and stone cleaning, he said.

President Reagan is to unveil the statue with a laser light show Thursday night.

Airship destroyed in crash; 1 dead

Four other crewmen and a firefighter on the ground sustained only cuts and bruises when the 343-foot-long, 10-story Heli-Stat crashed Tuesday night at the U.S. Naval Air Engineering Station, authorities said.

The craft, sponsored by the U.S. Forest Service, was designed for logging remote areas with a minimum of environmental damage. But some federal agencies criticized it for structural problems and for running behind schedule at a cost of $34 million, more than three times the original projection of $10.7 million.

The Heli-Stat, which had never flown horizontally, was hovering at about 40 feet when one of the four helicopters malfunctioned and lost power, said Nick Grand, a U.S. Naval Air Engineering Center spokesman.

A fire caused by ruptured fuel tanks in the Heli-Stat's helicopters was quickly extinguished, but the airship was destroyed, Grand said.

The Heli-Stat "just burst right in the air," said Petty Officer Chuck Peterson. "I couldn't believe it. Flames flew."

Gary Oleshfski, of Bordentown, who was alone in one of the helicopters, was killed in the crash, Grand said. Tuesday was Oleshfski's 39th birthday.

The craft crashed about three-quarters of a mile from where the German dirigible Hindenburg blew up in May 1937, killing 36 people, he said.

The craft was comprised of four tailless helicopters mounted on an aluminum frame that supported the blimp. The pilot, who survived, sits in the left rear copter and flight engineers in the other three.

Unlike the Hindenburg, which was filled with highly explosive hydrogen, the Heli-Stat's blimp was filled with helium, a non-explosive gas.

The craft, which was 43 feet longer than a football field, was designed by Frank N. Piasecki, a helicopter pioneer who began its assembly in 1979 under a Forest Service contract.

The Navy was monitoring the experiment by the Piasecki Aircraft Corp. of Sharon Hill, Pa., Grand said.

The airship, estimated by Piasecki last year to cost $24 million in federal funds and $10 million in private investment, was designed to lift 24 tons. It was based on the principle that once filled with helium, its resultant buoyancy made the craft almost weightless, so that the thrust generated by the copters' combined 6,100 horsepower could be directed toward lifting the timber.

Grand said he believed Piasecki achieved his first untethered flight in May.

Piasecki said last year the Heli-Stat might reach 72 mph, but conceded it could crash relatively easily if caught in a storm at low altitude.

Forest Service officials said the Heli-Stat had shown promise for logging because back areas could be reached without having to cut roads. Piasecki also said it might be used to fly oil derricks.

Dear Abby

Free Ride in Hearse Is No Way to Go to Church

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I thought this was so good, more people should see it. It's written in a half-teasing way, but there's a lot of truth in it. It came with our church newsletter, "The Kitsap Adventist News." I hope it makes your column.

V.M., BREMERTON, WASH.

DEAR V.M.: It did:

Dear Church Member: Don't wait until the hearse hauls you to church. If you do —

1. You will go, regardless of the weather.
2. You will go, regardless of the condition of your body.
3. There will be beautiful flowers there, but you won't enjoy them.
4. You will go, regardless of how your family feels.
5. The minister may say many good things, but they will do you no good.
6. There will be beautiful music, but you won't hear it.
7. There will be heartfelt prayers, but they will not touch your heart.
8. There will be friends and relatives there, but you won't worship with them.
9. You will go, no matter how many hypocrites are there.
10. You will go, no matter how much you are needed at home or at work.
11. You will receive no blessing from the service.
12. You won't feel concerned about your clothes.
13. You will never have to decide about attending church again.

Aren't you glad to be alive and well and full of zest and able to choose to go to church?

PORT ORCHARD, WASH.

DEAR ABBY: In answer to the lady who was upset when her mother-in-law referred to police officers as "pigs" in the presence of her 8-year-old daughter, and she (the child's mother) remained silent:

A dear friend who is a retired police officer was once asked if it bothered him to be called a "pig." He replied, "On our force, we don't mind being called 'pigs' because to us it stands for P-ride, I-ntegrity and G-uts!"

DEAR FRIEND: Wonderful! Perhaps the lady can pass this on to her daughter, thus helping her to appreciate and respect the fine men and women who have chosen a profession that requires them to put their lives on the line daily in the line of duty.

DEAR ABBY: You correctly informed "Ohio Dropout" regarding the GED test. However, you failed to say that anyone age 18 can go to a junior college, regardless of whether he or she has completed high school, or received a GED. After completion of the required program, one can transfer to a four-year college and receive a bachelor's degree.

I know, because that's what I did. I went back to college, received my BA, and am now working toward my law degree, even though I, too, began as a "high school dropout."

DEAR ABBY: "Sue From Delawhere" is absolutely right. It's amazing how few people know their geography. Our son, who was born and raised in New Castle, Del., is now stationed in Hawaii with the Navy, and when he's asked where he's from, he says "Pennsylvania" because it's easier than explaining where Delaware is. Abby, Delaware happens to be the home of the DuPont Co., the largest chemical company in the world.

Clements says there's no 'secret plan' for budget

AUSTIN (AP) — Bill Clements has a "blueprint" for solving the state fiscal crisis, but the GOP gubernatorial candidate has no secret plan, according to an aide.

Democratic Gov. Mark White said Clements had left him with the impression that he had a secret plan.

"Bill Clements says he has a plan. I believe the voters of Texas deserve to see his secret plan," White said.

Throughout the spring, as he urged White to call a special legislative session to deal with the cash crisis, Clements said he knew how to make the needed spending cuts. But the Republican candidate would never reveal specifics.

"I'm not going to get into a detailed road map and blueprint of where and how you are going to cut that budget," he told reporters April 1.

"I think the voters understand my modus operandi very, very well. When I tell them that detailed road map will be forthcoming prior to the legislative session of 1987, they believe me, they understand me and I have credibility with them.

"Just like I used to tell my children: Santa Claus will appear on Christmas Day. Christmas is coming. Thanksgiving is coming. And November (election day) is coming," Clements said.

Now, White says he will call a special session as soon as legislative leaders come up with a spending cut plan. And the governor said it is time for Clements "to lay your cards on the table."

Textures, colors make fashion news

By Florence De Santis

Fashion knits have a history going back 30 years, but only in recent times has the idea mushroomed to the point where many designer collections feature their most avant-garde styles in knits. As for popular-price sportswear, many firms do only knits.

It's now taken for granted that any kind of garment can be done in knit, ranging from jersey to handmade. There are two ways to achieve fashion impact. The more conservative is to emphasize texture in the knit itself — in solid colors. The other way is to go for pattern in many colors, the hotter or more contrasting the better.

Solid colors and patterns can be seen in the currently popular bared-top skimp dresses. David Polizzi makes a solid orange tank-top skimp with a black hem band in flat sweater knit of cotton/rayon blend. Tannersport does a V-neck long torso skimp with shirred skirt in plain cotton-/rayon interlock, but prints it in a Klee-like modern-art abstract of many colors. Rodier Paris, looking toward fall, does the look in a two-piece with combined textures. A ribbed skirt picks up the ribbed cuffs and openwork forming a double V below the bateau neckline and over the shoulders of raglan sleeves — all in white.

Cotton knits have become a whole new fashion category for all-season use. Again, they are divided between conservative and avant-garde. For Across America by Knit Maven, stitching is emphasized — in chevron, maze and cabling used in patterns rather than just vertical rows. Most come in solid colors, but with fashion colors included, such as turquoise and yellow. However, they're moving into color patterns for fall, sometimes in the oversized look so popular now, such as a huge cabbage rose jacquard in yellow, red, green and royal blue. Others are in multicolor geometric abstracts, an architectural arch theme or a skyscraper horizon.

Since this firm specializes in popular-price items, one can see that the avant-garde-pattern look in knits has truly "arrived" at all price levels. Some are intarsia — knit into the garment — while others are printed on the fabric. The prints usually appear on such garments as knit pants, which are cut and sewn, as opposed to sweaters, which are done on needles. Esprit does a lot of these prints in youthfully whimsical patterns, as in their purple and white miniskirt with black outlining the jagged abstract motifs.

Sweaters as tops in separates outfits are popular for day and evening as well as for casual wear. It's really a matter of how you mix and match. For a blazer and pants, White Stag likes a plaid shirt and a tweed pullover vest that mixes red and gray. For business, keep the blazer, but substitute a pleated skirt, a white shirt and a gray cotton-knit vest.

For women who like a feminine touch in a business outfit, the lace-trimmed sweater is appearing for early fall. Maureen Cullinane is noted for her use of beautiful lace collars on her sweaters, and less expensive versions can be found. Jessica McLintock adds a lace Bertha collar to a soft cardigan in a collection featuring this idea.

Above all, patterns form the leading fashion look. Some are relatively conservative, such as Beldoch Popper's cotton/wool boucle textured pullover, divided into big black and white triangular segments. However, the same firm also does an all-cotton V-neck in cockatoos of blue, red, yellow and green spaced on white. The skirt can be any one of these colors.

© 1986, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN

FLAT KNIT, as in this interlock cotton/poly dress from Tannersport, is printed in a multicolor abstract modern-art theme. Price: about $54.

CONSERVATIVE PATTERN is done at Beldoch Popper in an airy cotton-/wool blend boucle stitch of black and white segments.

PATTERN KNIT for summer or fall is from Across America by Knit Maven, in natural, raspberry or turquoise with black.

California's social art show loses money

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Though all three are located in the Bay area of California, Macy's, Kaiser Corp. and the Oakland Museum would seem to have little in common.

Recently, however, all three institutions participated in a series of exhibitions, lectures and panels on the place of crafts in American lives.

The museum served as headquarters for the first major conference in nine years sponsored by the American Craft Council, while Macy's San Francisco devoted a substantial portion of its furniture floor to a display of 19th and early 20th century American Arts and Crafts furnishings and contemporary craft objects by 80 California craftsmen.

Meanwhile, at Kaiser's Oakland headquarters building, a 5,000 square foot exhibition space accommodated 37 pieces of furniture by 34 artists. The one-of-kind pieces were made partly or wholly of aluminum.

Approximately 80 other institutions, galleries and museums in the San Francisco area organized special exhibitions to coincide with the conference, which brought about 800 craftsmen, collectors, educators and dealers together to look at, talk about, and demonstrate the techniques of making objects.

In meeting the ACC's goal of providing "an overview of crafts in a societal context," the event also revealed the many contradictions inherent in crafts today. Making things by hand for use or art, or both, has assumed enormous economic, cultural and personal importance in the United States. Yet, the place of crafts often appears to be minimized.

Thus, although recent surveys reveal that many are deeply interested in the crafts, the conference had several hundred fewer registrations than had been expected and ran about $20,000 in the red, according to Jack L. Larsen, president of the American Craft Council.

The Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Brooklyn Museum and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts sent representatives to talk about major craft exhibitions each museum has planned for 1986 and 1987. Furthermore, the American Craft Museum is scheduled to open in New York in October.

BEAUTY BRIEFS

Unapproved hair grower

When a leading drug firm, Upjohn, developed a drug seven years ago to treat high blood pressure, no one could predict that a side effect would be its ability to grow body hair. The firm then began testing the substance — Minoxidil — in a solution applied to the scalp. Hair growth was observed in some 36 percent of the subjects after four months and in many more after a year. The effect stopped if the subject ceased using the solution. The Federal Food & Drug Administration is looking into it, but naturally the unapproved drug is already being rubbed into scalps all over the country. It has also caused a spurt in use of other, even less-tested products for baldness. None except the one original drug are regarded seriously by dermatologists.

SANDMAN'S DUST. By Melvin Jules Bukiet. Arbor House. 234 Pages. $15.95.

Really fine first novels are extremely rare and probably can be counted on the fingers of one hand. A lot of these initial efforts are pretty dreadful stuff, but there are some that are passable.

"Sandman's Dust" by Melvin Jules Bukiet is passable. Although the author's technique is a bit clumsy at times, Bukiet does do a nice job of spinning his themes of youth, innocence and the universal presence of evil into a pleasant reading experience.

Set in the small, rural town of Norma, N.J., a place where the major local concern is raising chickens and selling eggs, the book's plot concerns Lillian Bloom, a pretty 16-year-old, with a passion to escape her surroundings.

Opening lead: ♣ 2

Up, up and away

By James Jacoby

The Jacoby team reached the semi-finals of the Vanderbilt Team Championship last March. There we played against a team led by my young friend Chris Compton, a bridge professional from Houston. Since we lost the match, I hope Chris won't consider it boastful if I write about a deal where aggressive action on my partner's part gained for our side.

On today's deal, I was West and Robert Radwin of Los Angeles was East. North's bid of two clubs was the Drury convention, an artificial response inquiring of the third-seat opener whether he had a full opening bid. South's two-diamond bid denied a full opener. Two hearts would now have ended the bidding, except for Radwin's boldness. Certain that I had at least 11 high-card points (why else would North-South stop at two hearts?), he came in with three clubs. Inexplicably South bid three hearts and, sitting West, I could not keep from bidding four clubs. North might now have doubled (a heart lead would let us make it), but caught up in the rhythm, he bid four hearts.

Robert Radwin's double of four hearts had a bizarre sound to it but was well conceived. If experienced players were going to stop at two hearts, was it reasonable that they could suddenly make four? By doubling, my partner took the words right out of my mouth. Defeating the opponents two tricks for 500 was one of our pleasant moments during the match. Too bad we didn't have more of them.

A GOOD CUP OF COFFEE

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — To brew quality coffee and avoid waste, these tips are offered by Joan Wilson, division services manager in General Foods Corp.'s Consumer Center in White Plains:

Buy quality; it goes further and tastes better. Use discount coupons; these savings are significant and really add up. Don't overstock; you risk losing quality and by artificially increasing demand, you help to push the prices higher.

Painting to be returned to France

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A painting, "Erminia and Vafrino Tending the Wounded Tancred," by the Italian artist Pier Francesco Mola (1612-1666), donated by the Kress Foundation to the Fine Arts Museums of San Francisco in 1961, is to be returned to France as the result of newly discovered facts about its history.

Curators in Paris and San Francisco are now convinced that the painting, acquired by the foundation from a Parisian dealer in 1953, is the one purchased by Louis XIV in 1685, later passed to the French national collection, and unaccounted for since 1875.

The agreement to return the painting has engendered much goodwill. Before it leaves San Francisco, the Louvre will lend San Francisco a companion Mola painting from the royal collections, "Erminia Guarding her Flock," so that the two pictures may be displayed together here.

The Entente Cordiale between Britain and France was concluded in 1904.

LAFF-A-DAY

"— And this is the Decision Makers' Decision Maker!"

DENNIS THE MENACE

"SOME OF THAT OPERA SOAP MUSTA GOT INTO HER EYES."

'Too Tall' applauds new training facility for Dallas Cowboys

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Ed "Too Tall" Jones talks like a man whose contract has just been extended, and Dr. Bob Ward acts like a kid with a new toy, all because of one thing: the Dallas Cowboys' new training facility at Valley Ranch.

"I just walk on Cloud Nine," said Ward, the Cowboys' conditioning coach. "There's no doubt in my mind that we'll set the pace (with this facility), not only in the country - in the NFL - but in the world."

What excites Ward is a facility that features some of the most sophisticated equipment, surrounding the area's two (soon to be three) football fields. There is a 10,000 square foot outdoor weight area housing Universal weights of all shapes and sizes designed to exercise every part of the body, plus rowing machines, exercycles, and a martial arts area.

There are machines designed to make players run faster than they would normally be capable of and machines that increase their strength.

There's a jungle gym and exercise stations, and a sand pit for running and jumping in. There's a sprint track, jogging track and an incline-decline track all made of an elastic-type material that decreases the shock on legs.

"It saves them from stress and gives them endurance," Jones said. "That's my concern at this point. I want to save my legs."

Jones said he still is trying to figure out all of the equipment and its capabilities. But he does know it's all designed to turn the Cowboys into the fittest athletes they can be.

"The facility can have us in the best shape ever, and it will increase our playing time," said Jones, who at 35 is concerned about his longevity.

Highlights of the facility include:

- The Sprint Master, a towing machine based on the idea that if you can force an athlete to run faster than normally possible, his muscles will remember the action and repeat it while running unassisted. The Sprint Master forces the athlete to increase his stride length and frequency, translating into faster times.

After a few weeks of training on the Sprint Master, most athletes can reduce their 40-yard dash times as much as four-tenths of a second, one fitness authority said. In football, that is a significant improvement.

- The Diagnostic Power Trainer, which operates on the opposite principal of the Sprint Master. The athlete wears a heavy leather belt, which is connected by a line to a machine with gears, similar to those found on a bicycle. Once hooked up, the player must overcome a heavy force, and apply some force of his own, to go forward.

The machine also plots a graph that shows when the athlete is putting out any force and when he is "taking a vacation," as the machine's inventor, Larry Brown, would say.

The purpose is to reduce errors in the athlete's form and increase his muscular and cardiovascular development while working under load. The exercise is especially useful because it can be adjusted to suit the individual athlete and his needs.

Running back Tony Dorsett would work under a light load. Theoretically, when the load is removed in game situations, he should be faster. Center Tom Rafferty would work on a heavy load to maximize the amount of force he can exert on an opposing lineman.

- The 285-yard incline-decline track, part of the half mile track circling the complex, which not only puts a little variety into the jogging workout but is another form of over-speed training. It has two hills and four changes in elevation and is the only track of its kind, Ward said.

After tackling the incline-decline track, joggers can either continue along the jogging path or challenge themselves in the 50-yard sand pit. They can also stop off at the circuit exercise station.

- The outdoor weight area, which has more weights than the Cowboys have ever used before. Players also can row, bicycle and practice martial arts in this area.

But all this equipment and machinery isn't any good if the athletes don't use it.

"That's where you your own self discipline comes in," Jones said. "But they made it so nice, with the racquetball courts and tennis courts, that you look forward to going out there."

Quarterback Danny White added, "The big question is whether it makes us a better team. That's the bottom line. It definitely takes away any excuses ... that an athlete might have for not reaching his potential."

With Hough on the mound...

Rangers recapture first place

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - The Texas Rangers were back in first place today in the American League West thanks to some basics, good pitching and defense, on their part and a little help from the Chicago White Sox.

The Rangers, who had lost six of their last eight games, snapped out of their doldrums Tuesday night with a 5-0 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

They moved back into first place about two hours later when the Chicago White Sox defeated the California Angels, 5-3.

Veteran knuckleballer Charlie Hough, 8-3, provided the pitching and the Rangers infield turned four double plays and made four other spectacular plays in the victory over Minnesota.

Hough, notching his first shutout in more than a year, was backed by home runs by Pete O'Brien, his ninth, and Pete Incaviglia, his 14th, in snapping the Twins' four-game win streak.

Hough allowed five hits, walked three and struck out two in besting Twins right-hander Mark Portugal, 2-7.

"I don't think Charlie had his real good stuff in the first few innings," said Rangers manager Bobby Valentine, "but he got better as the game went along, and the defense played great behind him."

The infield turned four double plays in the first five innings to keep the Twins off the board.

O'Brien, who had a tough June, gave Hough all the runs he needed with a 2-run shot in the fourth. The Rangers got a run on three singles in the sixth, and Incaviglia homered with a man on off reliever Neal Heaton in the eighth.

"We don't usually get Charlie too many runs to work with," said O'Brien. "But we got him six in the first inning against Seattle and he kind of went to sleep. We didn't want to get him in his comfort zone too early tonight."

Hough didn't allow a hit over the final four innings, retiring 12 of the last 13 batters he faced.

"It was great to get an effort like that out of him tonight," said Valentine, "because our bullpen needed a rest."

Seaver's start for Sox shakey but he picks up the victory

by The Associated Press

Tom Seaver, who reached the 300-victory mark while often working without a lot of runs, may have finally found an easier way to win in the major leagues.

Pitch for the high-scoring Boston Red Sox.

Seaver struggled in his Boston debut Tuesday night, but still wound up as the winning pitcher when the Red Sox rapped 14 hits for a 9-7 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

"These guys have a very good thing going for them here and it's nice to show I can contribute," said Seaver, acquired Sunday from the Chicago White Sox for infielder-outfielder Steve Lyons.

Boston won its sixth straight game and maintained its eight-game lead in the American League East over New York. The Red Sox beat Toronto for the eighth consecutive time at Fenway Park.

Seaver won his 307th career game by pitching seven innings, giving up four runs on nine hits. He retired the Blue Jays in order only once, but was tough in the clutch as he stranded nine Toronto runners.

Seaver, 3-6, won for the first time since April 23, while Joe Sambito pitched the final 1 2-3 innings for his seventh save. Doyle Alexander's record dropped to 5-4.

In other AL games, Texas beat Minnesota 5-0, Chicago tripped California 5-3, Seattle defeated Kansas City 8-5, Cleveland ripped Oakland 9-0, New York downed Detroit 5-4 in 10 innings and Baltimore beat Milwaukee 7-3.

White Sox 5, Angels 3

Ozzie Guillen hit a two-run double and California first baseman Wally Joyner made an error that allowed three more runs to score, highlighting a five-run third inning that helped Chicago over the host Angels.

Bobby Bonilla and Steve Lyons opened the third with singles against Mike Cook, a 22-year-old right-hander making his major-league debut.

Floyd Bannister, 4-4, got the victory in his first start since coming off the disabled list on June 17. Dave Schmidt took over at the start of the sixth and pitched two hitless innings. Bob James finished up with two hitless innings for his 12th save.

Mariners 8, Royals 5

Ricky Nelson's pinch-single broke an eighth-inning tie and keyed a four-run uprising as Seattle sent visiting Kansas City to its fifth straight loss.

Danny Tartabull opened the eighth with a single off Dan Quisenberry, 0-2.

Yankees 5, Tigers 4

Dale Berra hit a solo home run against Detroit reliever Willie Hernandez with one out in the bottom of the 10th inning, leading New York over the Tigers.

Indians 9, A's 0

Mel Hall hit a pair of two-run homers and Tony Bernazard also homered twice, sparking Cleveland past Oakland in a game interruped by a bench-clearing fight started by Indians Manager Pat Corrales.

The brawl erupted in the seventh inning after Corrales complained to home plate umpire Derryl Cousins when A's reliever Dave Stewart threw close to Julio Franco following Bernazard's homer.

GIRL'S SOFTBALL

Miami Vice 12, Blue Jays 10

The Miami Vice managed just three hits but it was enough to post a win over the Blue Jays Tuesday evening.

Kayla Walker slammed a triple for the 'Vice. She also took honors as winning pitcher. Amy Ramirez and Karla Walker punched a single apiece.

For the Blue Jays, the loss spoiled a two-double, one-single effort by Renee Matthews. Also hitting for the 'Jays were Hayley Patterson and Rebecca Ramey, two singles each; Sara Wyatt, a double; and Annie Bedwell and Alison Beeks, one single each.

O'Jays 11, Shamrocks 8

Freqently in girl's softball action the leading hitter is also the winning pitcher. That held true Tuesday as Jami Brown hurled the O'Jays to a win over the Shamrocks while rapping a pair of singles.

Amy Vaughan, Bianca Rocha and Sonia Ramos popped a single each for the O'Jays.

The Shamrocks were led by Amanda Davis' two doubles and a single. Holli Burns, Melissa Garvin, Michelle Spencer and Katie Thornton plugged a single apiece.

Blue Bombers 9, Bluebonnets 8

The Blue Bombers scored three runs in the bottom of the fourth inning to nip the Bluebonnets in this Division I ballgame, held Tuesday evening.

April Mena got the Bombers' only extra base hit, a double, while Paula Laster and Mendy Winter clipped two singles each. Haley Ingram added one single.

Shawndalyn Callaway was the winning pitcher.

The Bluebonnets, who had come from behind to take an 8-6 lead in the top of the fourth, got a double from Brook Lowrance; two singles from Paige Gayle; and one single each from Michelle Roemisch, Mandy Baker and Danisha Ollison.

Lloyd receives test she needed

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Chris Evert Lloyd got the test she wanted as she stayed on course for yet another Grand Slam final clash with Martina Navratilova.

Lloyd, the No. 2 seed and three-time champion, wanted a tough match to prepare herself for a possible third straight Wimbledon championship meeting with her archrival.

And on Centre Court, with temperatures reaching 110 degrees, Lloyd had to draw on all her years of experience to subdue a determined quarterfinal challenge from seventh-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia.

Lloyd surrendered a set before she triumphed 7-6, 4-6, 6-4 to set up a semifinal on Thursday against No. 3 seed Hana Mandlikova, the reigning U.S. Open champion.

In the other women's semifinal, Navratilova, who is aiming for a fifth straight title, meets No. 10 seed Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina.

If Lloyd and Navratilova win Thursday, they would meet for the 70th time in their careers, the 15th in a Grand Slam title match. Lloyd won the last meeting in the final of the French Open last month.

In today's men's quarterfinals, No. 1 seed Ivan Lendl was to meet Tim Mayotte, the No. 10 seed and the only American left in the competition, while defending champion Boris Becker, seeded No. 4, was to face Czechoslovakia's Miloslav Mecir.

Ex-Green Berets at confab

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Former Green Beret Capt. Isaac "Ike" Camacho vividly remembers the night North Vietnamese troops captured him. It was the night he and three buddies learned that President Kennedy had been assassinated.

But the assassination in 1963 would be overshadowed for Camacho for the next two years as he fought for survival in a jungle prison.

He did survive, and in 1965 became the first prisoner of war to escape from the North Vietnamese and live to talk about it.

Comacho was one of more than 600 former and active members of the Special Forces, who wear the distinctive green beret, and the Office of Strategic Services, of World War II fame, who gathered Tuesday in the Marriott Hotel for the start of the national Special Forces Association annual convention.

"We'll talk about the hard times and the good times," Camacho, 49, said between hugs and handshakes with buddies he has not seen for several years. "We're like brothers."

Camacho, retired from the Army, is a supervisor with the Postal Service in El Paso. He served in the Special Forces from 1960 to 1975.

A "weapons man" training civilians in 1963, he and three other Green Berets were with 75 civilians in a camp about 55 miles northwest of Saigon when the enemy hit them. Most of the civilians were killed, and the four Americans were captured and taken into the jungle.

"We did hard labor," Camacho said. "Cutting trees, digging holes."

Living on a diet of rice, rotten fish, worms, roaches and rats, the men, with their legs in metal chains, were forced to sleep in separate, small wooden cages at night.

Often they were beaten with the butt of a rifle or forced to spend days in a dark, wet "spider hole" as punishment.

Camacho began thinking of escape. His break came one night when two more American captains were brought in as prisoners. The guards had run out of chains; so they took off Camacho's to use on one of the new captives.

"I knew it was my only chance," he said. "I knew they would get more chains; so I knew it was time to go."

That night, Camacho managed to use some soap he had saved as a lubricant to loosen one of the wooden pegs to the cage. Luck was with him — the heavy seasonal rains began, enabling him to sneak past a guard and head into the jungle for a four-day, 400-mile journey back to safety.

He could not have tried to help the others escape, he said, because they all were in chains and had no boots.

Using the survival skills he had learned in training, he followed the sun, stars and the flow of water to the Mekong River, where he slowly swam downstream for 24 hours. He remembers hanging onto a branch in the river.

Education majors test has trial date

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court today ordered a trial for a challenge of a Texas law that requires college students to pass a standardized test before they can take education courses necessary for certification as teachers.

At question is the Pre-Professional Skills Test, which the Texas Board of Education proposed to screen prospective teachers. Texas teachers also must pass the National Teachers Exam.

Under the board's rule, a student failing the PPST could not schedule more than six hours of professional study — education courses, in the case of would-be teachers.

Certification in Texas requires at least 18 hours of professional courses.

The suit challenging the law claims the test is biased against blacks and other minorities and that requiring the test would result in depriving public school students of teachers of minority races.

Today's ruling dissolved a preliminary injunction issued by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler.

Church blaze levels building

Commercial transport trucks from Holcomb Transport, York Trucking and Fluid Transports of Snyder were ultimately called to haul water to the scene.

The chief said also the spread of the blaze was enchanced by a strong southwesterly wind blowing into the church's front attic vent.

He said Wednesday that some sort of electrical problem was the most likely cause of the fire. It apparently started in the office area on the building's north end and spread into the attic.

economic infestations of bollworms have not been seen." She added, however, these "may develop."

Regarding this, she urged all cotton producers to be on the lookout for signs of bollworms on their cotton.

She said the "economic threshold" for pre-bloom cotton is 15 to 25 percent bollworms.

During this stage, a heavier infestation will see the worms strip the developing cotton of its "squares" — the portion of the plant which develops into the boll.

Diverticulosis and added fiber

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have diverticulosis and recently added bran to my diet. Can bran cause problems or be dangerous in any way?

DEAR READER — I am not aware that the sudden addition of bran to anyone's diet is dangerous, providing the amount of bran is not gigantic. However, if you notice digestive problems stemming from your new-found healthful diet, back off and use your own judgment.

In a 180-degree switch from previous dogma, doctors now recommend high-fiber diets for many intestinal disorders, such as chronic constipation and diverticulosis. In addition, a high-fiber diet might prevent colorectal cancer and breast tumors, and some experts believe that serum cholesterol can be lowered by bran-like foods.

Bran consists of indigestible vegetable fiber. In general, uncooked vegetables are also a good source of this fiber — so, rather than put all your eggs in the bran basket, you might enjoy more dietary variety if you chose to supplement your bran with salads. (Oat bran is good, too.)

Current information appears to indicate that Americans need to increase dietary fiber. How much of an increase is still debatable, but, certainly, two or three portions of vegetable fiber a day should suffice.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my new Health Report on DIVERTICULAR DISEASE. Other readers who would like a copy should send $1, plus their name and address, to P.O. Box 2597, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am a 26-year-old male, 5 feet 8 and 160 pounds. Starting in 1978, I had difficulty with concentration, memory, dizziness, shortness of breath and fatigue. It got increasingly worse; finally, I could no longer go to school or work and ended up in a psycho ward. I have been to every type of doctor you can think of, and they all say there's nothing wrong with me. I've been on Norpramin, which helps ease the terrible physical pain.

What is very confusing to me is this: I've started taking Tagamet and lactobaccilus and feel like a completely new man. Could it be that my digestive system was not absorbing any nutrients, or that I had some super-strong allergy to foods? After being on this regimen for several months, I can now work and am 85 percent better. Can you shed some light on this?

DEAR READER — Although I am delighted at your good news, I have difficulty figuring out what went on. Tagamet is an anti-ulcer medicine; your symptoms don't fit with those of peptic ulcer. Lactobacilli are harmless bacteria; lactobacillus medicine is often used to repopulate the bacteria in the intestine.

I would guess that your digestive system was somehow not working efficiently and you may have been deprived of certain nutrients as a result. Food allergy is a possibility, but you don't mention making dietary alterations. You might have had a "spontaneous cure" that was unrelated to anything you did; this can happen in many diseases.

Your story is certainly intriguing and your improvement was nothing short of miraculous. I'd welcome comments from readers who might have some thoughts about why you got better when you did.

Teenager gets death penalty

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Convicted murderer Juan Soria has been assessed the death penalty for abducting and killing Arlington teenager Allen Bolden.

A Tarrant County jury, which had been deliberating since 3:47 p.m. Tuesday, returned the verdict at 10:01 p.m. to Judge Joe Drago in County Criminal Court No. 4.

As Drago read the verdict, Soria, 19, stood with his hands clasped behind his back and showed no emotion.

His mother, Lydia Soria, began crying and held her hands over her face. Several other members of the Soria family also wept.

Bolden's mother, Laurie Bolden, shut her eyes tightly and threw her head back as the verdict was read.

Later, Bolden's father, Ed Bolden, hailed the decision as a landmark for Tarrant County, because Soria did not have a long criminal history.

"We see this as a new beginning, a chance of change in this county ... It certainly doesn't bring my son back, but it does something for the other victims," he said.

Bolden praised the Tarrant County District Attorney's Office for taking the case to trial and credited prosecutors' diligence for securing the death penalty. He said the main reason Soria received the death penalty was "the absolute weeks of planning that went into the execution and death of my son."

Joe Soria said his brother didn't get a fair trial.

"He's been pushed a lot more I think (than other defendants)," he said as he knelt beside his weeping mother. "One thing is it was really being pushed by the state."

Defense attorney John Beatty said he was surprised by the verdict because jurors deliberated for so long.

"I agree with Mr. Bolden — this case is a novelty."

The decision came one year to the day after the body of Bolden, 17, was found hidden in a north Fort Worth ravine. He was stabbed in the back of the neck.

The jury last week found Soria, an unemployed mechanic, guilty of capital murder. It then had to decide whether to sentence Soria to life in prison or death by injection.

Under state law, a person sentenced to life in prison for capital murder can be eligible for parole in 20 years.

The case will automatically be appealed.

While the jury was deliberating outside the courtoom about 9 p.m., the angry husband of one juror stormed into the courtroom, demanding that his wife be released because he wanted her at home.

After being told she would not be excused, the man rushed from the courtroom, ran down a hall and slammed a glass door so hard that the glass cracked in numerous places.

An arrest warrant for criminal mischief over $200 naming Raul Sanchez was issued later.

Prosecutors urged jurors to condemn Soria to death because they said the teen-ager showed no remorse for killing Bolden, who was working as a lifeguard at the Fort Worth Boys Club when he was abducted.

Prosecutor Alan Levy characterized the slaying as "a casual murder at random" and said Bolden was killed because Soria wanted his car.

Court-appointed defense lawyers J.R. Molina and Beatty, however, argued that Soria deeply regretted his actions and would not be a future danger to society. They said Soria had had only minor brushes with the law until the murder.

Patience and determination are called for in the year ahead to garner the rewards you will be capable of achieving. Be single-minded where victory is concerned.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your initial tendency today is to do things the hard way. Put your imagination to work and search for paths of less resistance. Is there romance in your future? VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) An important career matter requires delicate handling today. If you sense the conditions aren't right, don't rush in and buck the odds.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Carefully think over in advance what you intend to talk about to another today or you might inadvertently say something difficult to retract.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) When shopping today, do not make purchases that exceed the resources you have at your disposal. You'll regret it later when the bills are due.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Unless you and the other party involved are sincerely in accord, an agreement you make today is likely to fall apart at the seams.
