

Student self-discipline promoted by ACISD plan

A new discipline program developed "in order that a student may learn and teachers may teach" has been adopted by the school board for use in Rockport-Fulton High School and Junior High. The Aransas County School Board took action on the proposal after School Superintendent Joe Randow read an outline of the plan to the board at their meeting Monday evening, July 10.

The plan had been prepared by a committee of teachers from the two secondary schools. The need for a revamped discipline program was discerned by the board at one of their last meetings of the school year. It was at that spring meeting that the board received a petition from a group of concerned parents, calling for a better defined student discipline program in the schools.

The plan read by Randow at Monday's meeting cited four areas crucial to a good discipline program — parents, students, teachers and administration. Randow stressed the need for cooperation and involvement from all parties involved in the program.

The plan leaves each teacher free to develop their own classroom discipline approach, but emphasizes that each teacher's plan must be documented with the principal and on file in the office. Students will be made aware of their classroom rules at the start of school.

In keeping with the view of parents as an integral part of the plan, a copy of the new discipline policy and their child's teacher discipline plan will be distributed to all parents at the start of school. As a show of their support and an acknowledgement of their familiarity with the plan, parents will be requested to return a signed statement of support to the principal at the beginning of the year.

The program, as described in the proposal read by Randow, is designed to "develop rules and disciplinary procedures that will promote self-discipline; to deal with personal problems that affect life

High rise plan opposed

By PAT BLAIR

Staff writer

FULTON — Plans for Oak Shore Towers, a high rise to be located on Fulton Beach Road in Fulton, drew protests from several persons present at the meeting of Fulton's city council Tuesday night, July 13.

However, the council voted 4-1 to sign a letter, subject to approval of Fulton City Attorney Allen Lee, stating that the proposed condominium project is not in violation of any existing city ordinances.

And a request from members of the city's zoning committee, that a moratorium be declared on all construction in Fulton pending adoption of a city zoning ordinance, was tabled until the council could get a legal opinion from Lee who was absent from Tuesday's session.

Fulton's zoning committee had more to say on high rises — and mobile home parks — in its meeting Wednesday night. That story is on page 8 of today's Pilot.

Plans for the high rise development were presented by Oliver Hensler, developer of the project, and representatives of Bennett, Martin and Solka, architects and designers of the 72-unit condo project.

The project will be located on the old Oak Shore Inn site. Ralph Bennett, a representative of the architectural firm, told those at Tuesday's meeting that the site contains about three acres. He said the project is so designed that only one tree will be lost in order to accommodate the proposed building. The condominiums will be connected to the Rockport sanitary sewer system and Hensler has already secured permission from the cities of Rockport and Fulton for this.

Bennett told those at Tuesday's meeting the building will set back off the property and all trees except the one will be retained. The garages and boat barns will face inward, away from Fulton Beach Road and sewage, which will be delivered to the Rockport sanitary sewage plant during non-peak hours, will be held during peak hours in an underground storage tank.

Only one dwelling unit — for a live-in manager — will be provided on the first floor. Each of the remaining nine floors will have eight two- and three-bedroom dwelling units, six containing 1,200 square feet and two with 1,600 square feet.

In answers to questions from the audience, who expressed concern primarily over the building's safety in event of hurricanes or fires, Bennett said the condo will have two emergency stairwells with built-in firefighting equipment. He said the firefighting systems will be monitored continuously and although the local fire department would be called in event of a fire, the fire would be fought "from within — like any other high rise."

On the question of hurricanes, Bennett said, "It's a substantial building. It won't be subjected to stress from a hurricane."

Hensler added he is "going by the Southern Standard Building Code" in planning and constructing the building.

In answer to a query from Elaine Faulkner, "Does the FAA know what you're planning?", Hensler simply replied, "Yes." He then elaborated that the floor-to-floor measurement will be eight feet, eight inches, amounting to about 90 feet.

"We expect this building to create a tax base of about $14 million," Hensler said. In response to another question from Faulkner, on when construction will begin, he said, "It won't be long — weeks."

Charles Belaire, chairman of the city's zoning committee, asked if Hensler had considered the effects of the project on traffic patterns and the water supply of this area.

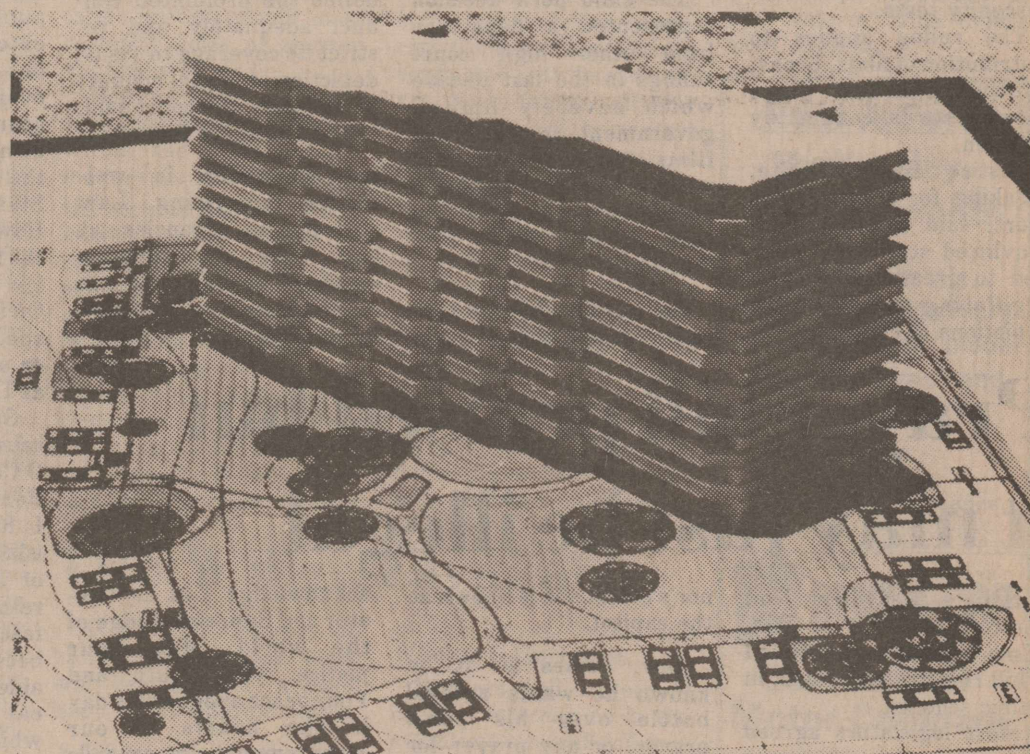

To both questions, Bennett replied, "We can build 72 units this way or 72 units of two or three levels — there's no difference (to the traffic or water supply)."

Faulkner asked if the developers have an alternate plan for construction of two-story units. Bennett answered, "No. We're going this way."

Elaborating on the question of water, Hensler said permission has been secured from the city of Rockport to tap onto a six-inch water line.

The project received support from at least two members of the audience, Charles Humbert and Jane Goodrich who said, "I hate high rises, but I would like to point out, they have done a beautiful job. It's a big improvement over what was there."

Fulton Alderwoman Pat Loflin said, "I'm [See High rise, page 12]

Bait stand construction to go out for bids

FULTON — The city of Fulton will advertise for bids for a bait-concession stand adjacent to the new public fishing pier.

Motion to advertise for bids was made by Alderman Elgin Dietz at Tuesday night's, July 13, council meeting, seconded by Isabel Gutierrez and approved by unanimous vote of the council.

No one spoke for or against the proposed stand at the time Dietz made the motion but later in the meeting, Mrs. Jack Bohn questioned whether the bait stand would achieve the city's stated purpose of having someone to provide security for the fishing pier.

She also asked who will run the bait stand and Dietz said the city will prepare a prospectus and select the bait stand operator on the basis of bids.

Also on Tuesday's agenda, Fulton council members approved the Texas Municipal League-recommended rate increase for Central Power & Light — about 48 percent of the increase requested by the utility company.

Already adopted last month by the city of Rockport, the ordinance would allow annual revenue requirements of $72.86 million for CP&L, an increase of 22.67 percent in the company's base rate and 8.72 percent in total revenues.

CP&L's rate request, for annual revenue requirements of $156 million, will go before the Public Utility Commission for hearing Monday, July 19, in Austin. If the PUC does not make a decision on rates at that time, CP&L will be able to put its rates into effect under bond.

A request by Nathan Sprinkle, grounds chairman for the Fulton Cemetery Association, for city funds was tabled pending a workshop.

Sprinkle, on behalf of the Association, asked the city for $300 to assist in the upkeep of Fulton Cemetery. The FCA originally petitioned the city some three or four months ago and the request was rejected after City Attorney Allen Lee said the city could not legally make such a donation.

Sprinkle said the cemetery was dedicated to Fulton in 1888. He added one of Col. George W. Fulton's sons was buried there in 1870.

Charles Belaire gave the city a report on the progress of the zoning committee, a group appointed to draft a zoning ordinance for Fulton. "It's possible," he said, "that within three weeks from tonight, we may have a zoning ordinance" for the council to review.

Southwestern Bell Telephone's rate request was on the agenda for discussion but Fulton Mayor L.E. Casterline said the city is waiting to see what action the Texas

Municipal League will take in the matter.

The council also deferred a letter from the TML concerning a recent ruling by the U.S. Supreme Court that would make cities liable under the Sherman Anti-Trust Act. Alderwoman Pat Loflin said, "I want (City Attorney) Allen Lee to explain it."

Lee was not present at Tuesday's meeting.

An Emergency Preparedness ordinance was approved. The financial report was deferred on the basis that the city's books are still in the hands of the accountants.

Hearings set Thursday on property appraisals

Hearings on residential and commercial property valuations in Aransas County will begin Thursday morning, July 22, when the Aransas County Appraisal District reconvenes in the board room of the Aransas County Appraisal District office.

The review board (ARB) met at 9 a.m. Friday, July 16, to begin going over appraisal notices in preparation for the hearings.

Hearings on mineral and industrial property were held Wednesday, July 14, at the Aransas County Courthouse. Representatives of area industries including Reynolds appeared before Pritchard and Abbott, the professional appraisers who assessed value on oil and minerals in the county.

Cam Leonard, chairman of the ARB, said any of those businesses that were not satisfied after their meeting with Pritchard and Abbott could appear before the review board. "No one did," he added.

Pritchard and Abbott is expected now to go over its oil and mineral valuations for Aransas County then turn over the revised appraisal roll to Jack Groseclose, chief appraiser for the Aransas County Appraisal District. The revised roll was not available as the Pilot went to press.

As of early Thursday, some 45 people had applied to appear before the ARB in its hearings that start next Thursday morning. These hearings, Groseclose said, will be on residential and commercial property and raw lands in the county.

Under the state tax laws that established the countywide appraisal districts and appraisal review boards, anyone wishing to appear before the ARB must register to do so, Groseclose emphasized.

They line up early for Wal-Mart jobs

The lines started early for hopefuls applying for jobs with the new Wal-Mart Store opening soon in Aransas County.

With applications and prescreening by Texas Employment Commission personnel from Corpus Christi starting at 9 a.m. at First National Bank's Town Hall, many job-seekers were already at the door by 8:30 a.m. on the first day, Wednesday, July 14.

By Wednesday afternoon, an estimated 100 to 150 persons had filled out applications and Norma Saenz, in charge of the Employment Commission workers here, said she was anticipating 400 to 500 applications before the end of the four-day application period.

More people were waiting in line by 8:30 a.m. Thursday, the second day of the prescreening, and additional applications were taken Friday. Last day for applications and prescreening is Monday, July 19, from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Women seemed to outnumber men among the applicants Wednesday and on Thursday morning, and ages covered all the ranges. Saenz said special consideration would be on persons 30 to 70 years in age and the handicapped, provided they were able to do the job.

She added Wal-Mart was hiring "only

Ruling is bad news for the child porn peddlers

Plowing new ground in exceptions to constitutional guarantees of free expression, the U.S. Supreme Court has given sweeping approval to state criminal laws barring child pornography.

No decision by the high court in recent years will be more widely praised than this one. It hands law enforcement agencies a new and powerful weapon in battling a moral blight that has flourished too long in America.

In ruling that child pornography has no redeeming virtues, the court described the dissemination of such material "a serious national problem" and ruled it will henceforth be exempt from ordinary obscenity tests.

The ruling applies to distribution of films, books, photographs and plays showing sexual conduct by children.

Justice Byron White, speaking for a unanimous court, said justices were convinced states are entitled to greater leeway in regulating pornographic depictions of children.

The court's decision in New York vs. Paul Ira Ferver upheld the validity of 20 states' laws making it a crime to distribute materials portraying children in sex acts.

Three justices, William Brennan, Thurgood Marshall and John Paul Stevens, expressed concern that, under the court's holding, a few serious works of art, science or education could be condemned because they contained a lewd scene involving a child.

However, because of what the court felt was a matter too long delayed, the justices agreed those situations could be dealt with in later cases.

The child porn decision represented a departure from other high court rulings in the last decade which severely limited government regulation of films, photographs and written materials under an obscenity test defined in a case styled, Miller vs. California.

The standard set in that case required that a work, to be prohibited, must appeal to the "prurient, lascivious interest in sex," portray sexual conduct in a "patently offensive way," and have virtually no serious artistic, political or scientific value.

But the test of obscenity, the court held, does not reflect the "surpassing importance" of prosecuting "those who promote the sexual exploitation of children."

Child pornography now lies outside the protection of the First Amendment guarantee of free expression, the court concluded.

To be valid, a child pornography law, under the new ruling, need only define the prohibited conduct adequately and restrict its coverage to visual depiction of sexual conduct by children, the court said.

The Rockport Pilot joins the community in welcoming this ruling. Law enforcement agencies at last have an effective means of dealing with one of the nation's most shameful practices.

Sailors are gennerally a conservative lot

IF THERE HAS BEEN anything written specifically about Matagorda Island I have so far not been able to find it either among my own books or in the Texana collection at the public library. In fact the extent of my information lies in newspaper articles over the past year or so in connection with who should own and control the island, the U.S. Government, the State of Texas, or the Hawes family of Victoria, the last real owners but still low man on the totem pole. On that score I'll not go into specifics because the reader already knows as much as I, or is not interested.

Strangely perhaps, because I have sailed to Port O'Connor and Matagorda Peninsula countless times, I had never visited the island until the past Fourth of July weekend. I shall return again. It is a fascinating place and will become even more so if I am able to gather more historical information. Meanwhile, as everyone knows, it is a game preserve maintained by the federal government. Even though private individuals run cattle there it abounds with birds and other wildlife, deer, jack rabbits and alligators.

The park ranger on duty is an articulate and intelligent young man who has been there just a month, four days of each week. The remaining days he uses to commute to Texas A&I University where he is working toward a master's degree. He offered to take us to the old lighthouse and in turn we invited him to lunch aboard the sloop "Karakal". With him we might have had differences had conversation become political. Regarding the Parks and Wildlife Service which he considers grossly underfunded, he said he is doing all he can to persuade everyone to vote Democratic in the next presidential election. I glanced about the harbor, some dozen sail, flying burgees from yacht clubs, Rockport, Corpus Christi and Houston. Sailors are generally a conservative lot. I smiled and replied that I doubted he'd find much support on that day.

On the ranger's recommendation we chose late afternoon to visit the lighthouse. A couple fitted into the cab of his pickup and half a dozen more piled into the truck bed. We passed through a group of abandoned World War II military barracks and hit the trail, winding dirt roads, bumpy. By the time we reached the lighthouse most of us had had enough exercise for the day, but all hands began the climb to the top, about 80 feet, I should guess. Earlier the ranger had confessed that his own knowledge of the island was limited. He too had been searching for information, confessing the while to his embarrassment when unable to answer so many visitors' questions.

Austin at Wharf

THE LIGHTHOUSE, A tall black iron pencil, rose against the almost cloudless sky. Built sometime before the Civil War the structure is built of approximately 10-foot-high sections of iron plates, bolted together. During that war and in order to prevent its falling into the hands of Yankee invaders the lighthouse had been dismantled and hidden, the plates buried in the sand. The original light, a fine, intricate thing came from England or Scotland and was supposed to be identical to the system still in use at the famous candy-striped light on Elbow Key in the Bahamas. "Karakal's" skipper explained in detail, details I'd heard before, but too complicated for this non-mechanical mind to absorb, much less explain. In any event the original light at some unknown earlier date had been removed and sent to Galveston. The present electric light is powered by a generator.

Partly because of the uncertain status of the island's future little or no money is spent on cosmetic upkeep. Bird droppings covered the winding iron staircase and the light platform at the top. The last two levels required climbing two vertical ladders. Perspiring, I pushed through the narrow door that opened to the outside platform and a cool gulf breeze.

Eastward the beach and the gulf that met the horizon, to the south the length of the island, sand, marsh grass and clumps of salt cedar. To the north Pass Cavallo, and westward Espirit Santo Bay and the low lying mainland. Straight below us were the foundations of buildings that are no more, and an old cemetery surrounded by a post and wire fence. A few cows grazed. We searched for deer, in vain.

Returning to the harbor the first cool of the evening was upon us. The ranger stopped twice to let us watch deer which did not flee. They simply stood, gazed at us. "What are those dummies staring at," they seemed to ask. Jack-rabbits abounded and we learned that a now over-abundant number of alligators have taken a fancy to them. A problem for the rangers. Always overhead were the usual gulls and pelicans and better because they are less often seen, graceful man-of-war birds.

My thoughts returned to the ranger. As a government employee his pay is close to the bottom. With an equal education to his, but in another field our young man might as well have become another bureaucrat in Foggy Bottom, living in a comfortable, but likely as not crowded suburb, fighting his way up through the vicious maze. A bit earlier "Karakal's" skipper had told us about his visit to Washington, tying up near Mt. Vernon. The first thing that caught his eye was a sign warning of the danger of even putting one's hands in the water. That was the Potomac, where George Washington swam and fished as a lad, a spot where legend has it that young George demonstrated his strength by throwing a stone from one bank to the other. Times have changed, the land has changed, but the people, rather much less than those who dream of "the good old days" may think, a discovery made not long ago by the author Richard Reeves who retraced de Tocqueville's 19th century journey in America.

Property sale is long overdue

The U.S. government at long last is going to sell billions of dollars worth of property it owns and use the money to help pay off the national debt.

Government officials and citizen groups have been advocating such a sale for years, but it was only recently that President Reagan and Congress cleared the way.

It would take volumes to record the history of how the government came by the millions of acres of land and other properties accumulated in the nation's 200-year history.

In the past, the government has been reluctant, often adamant, in refusal to part with land and other property, even though maintenance and other costs in some instances have been astronomical.

President Reagan advocated sale of surplus properties during his campaign, and Congress only recently approved an amendment to the property disposal law requiring proceeds from the sale of Defense Department properties be used to reduce the national debt.

The sales are being supervised by President Reagan's Property Review Board, which has identified some 60,000 acres of federal land, including a portion of Waikiki Beach in Hawaii, which will also be sold.

The land being put up for sale is the first step in President Reagan's efforts to dispose of surplus land and buildings to help balance the federal budget and is worth hundreds of millions of dollars.

The 17-acre Waikiki Beach property, used by the Defense Department as a vacation spot for U.S. troops, is valued at $13 million an acre, or $221 million for the tract.

The Reagan administration hopes to sell $1 billion in surplus properties in fiscal 1983 and projects revenues will total about $17 billion over the next five years from the sale of land owned by federal agencies, and possibly of timberlands and grazing fields.

Pending receipt of appraisals, the government does not know the exact value of properties, but whatever the figure, the money will go a long way toward reducing the national debt.

Now if Congress can bring itself to rewrite and simplify income tax laws so all Americans must pay a fair share of taxes on their earnings, the federal deficit of nearly a trillion dollars could be eliminated for the first time the government began using deficit financing.

The federal government has no business owning anything it does not need to carry out governmental functions.

Prayer bill praised but it may just be illegal

Debate was fiery and rhetoric eloquent as Alabama legislators approved a bill reinstating prayer in public schools.

Most legislators agreed it was time to put prayer back in schools, but they had trouble deciding which prayer.

One choice was a prayer written by Gov. Fob James' son. The other was the Lord's Prayer, authored by Christ Himself in Biblical times and given to His disciples.

The choice between the two prayers sparked heated debate, and when it was over, the legislature adopted the prayer composed by Fob James III.

A sign on the door of the capitol press room told the story with irreverent brevity: Son of Fob, 1, Son of God, 0.

Sen. Mike Weeks challenged his colleagues to vote for the Lord's Prayer instead of one written by "some little whippersnapper." Fob III, as the governor's eldest son is known at the capitol.

Gov. James let it be known he wants a legal battle over his son's prayer, or any prayer for that matter. He believes the time is right for restoration of school prayer, outlawed by the Supreme Court in 1962.

That historic decision made it unlawful for officials to require recitation of any "prescribed prayer" in public schools.

President Reagan has offered a constitutional amendment that would nullify court bans on school prayer. Commenting on this, Gov. James said he believed the Justice Department is "on Alabama's side now, and that's a drastic change from bygone days."

Here is Fob III's suggested prayer, which he and his supporters in the legislature contend is non-sectarian:

"Almighty God, You alone are our God. We acknowledge You as Creator and Supreme Judge of the world. May Your justice, your truth and Your peace abound this day in the hearts of our countrymen, in the councils of our government, in the sanctity of our homes, and in the classrooms of our schools in the name of the Lord, Amen."

The opposition was quick to attack when this prayer was read, claiming it was not much different from the one banned from public schools in 1962. One legislator said Alabama is too poor to spend a million dollars on a court case "we know we're going to lose."

But the die was already cast and Fob III's prayer passed the House, 81-8. The Senate followed suit, 21-5.

The Rockport Pilot, although sympathetic to the views of those who feel prayer should be permitted in schools, fears the James version may run afoul of the Supreme Court's 1962 decision, which clearly forbids "prescribed prayer."

Let's send a delegation to Washington, D.C.

Editor's note: The Live Oak Peninsula Philosopher on his grassburr farm reports on the farming situation this week, more or less.

Dear editor:

Anybody familiar with the matter knows that farming is in financial trouble, just as any business would be when it's paying 1982 costs and getting 1982 income.

You can get by paying a Congressman 1982 wages while getting 1982 results, but you can't do that farming. The government can spend more than it takes in and keep going, or at least it has for a long time now, but no agricultural experts have figured out how a farmer can. Small town bankers take a different view toward deficit financing than Washington.

I can't say it'd be any comfort to a farmer trying to keep his head above water but I've just read about a tract of land that costs $50,000 an acre to operate and hasn't produced one salable commodity in years.

The land is located in Washington D.C. It's the 18 acres surrounding the White House. It takes 26 full-time employees at a cost of $900,000 a year to keep that piece of land in shape. That figures out to be $50,000 an acre.

Farmers ought to send a delegation to Washington to try to figure out how it's done. If you can spend $50,000 an acre, not produce one penny of income, and still not get foreclosed on, you'd have the kind of information farmers have been needing for years.

As for having 26 employees working 18 acres, which is not quite sevenths of an acre apiece, even a farm in the shape of this one out here could get by on a few less. Oh, it might take 26 for a few months to straighten things out, but after that I could cut back quite a few. Yours faithfully, J.A.

Reagan Administration

Proposal could shorten season

The Reagan Administration's proposed "regulatory reform" legislation could cut short hunting seasons for migratory birds and waterfowl and should be opposed by hunter interests, according to the National Wildlife Federation.

In an emergency alert to its affiliate organizations in each state and three territories, NWF Executive Vice President Jay D. Hair said the 4.2-million member Federation must "do everything in our power to stop" passage of Administration-supported legislation that claims to reduce the "red tape" associated with some federal regulation.

"We support the concept of regulatory reform," said Hair, "but this legislation would do far more than reduce red tape. It would gut some of the most important laws in this country."

The regulatory reform bill is especially pernicious, said Hair, because the programs it could most damage — such as those that establish hunting seasons — aren't even mentioned in the text of the bill. The Federation previously voiced opposition to the regulatory reform measures because of their adverse effects on health and environmental protection regulations.

A major feature of the bills would require federal rules to lie before Congress for up to 45 days before being finally adopted, during which time Congress could review and, if it chooses, veto the proposed rule.

This provision for Congressional review, said Hair, "would play havoc with the establishment of hunting seasons. As it is now, notices of the start of hunting seasons are often published only days before the beginning of the seasons. Adding another review to an already lengthy survey and consultation process would most certainly delay or shorten hunting seasons."

Hair said that a recent memorandum circulated within the U.S. Department of the Interior details the harm to migratory bird hunting that could be caused by the bills, presenting, Hair said, "another compelling reason" to oppose the legislation.

The Federation has asked other conservation organizations, including the Izaak Walton League of America, the Wildlife Management Institute, Ducks Unlimited, Inc. and the International Association of Game and Fish Agencies, to join in the effort to block the bills. The Senate has already passed a regulatory reform bill (S.1080). In the House of Representatives, HR.746, is awaiting action by the Rules Committee before going to the full House for action.

The establishment of hunting seasons begins with an extensive survey of migratory bird populations conducted by the governments of the United States, Canada and Mexico, and by state conservation agencies. Consultations also are conducted with four separate state-federal flyway councils. Out of the process come determinations of bird populations and other species characteristics which are used to set bag limits and season lengths.

Allowing Congress to review and perhaps change hunting season regulations could result in "all kinds of horror stories," said Hair.

"Seasons could be delayed or closed altogether, bag limits could be tinkered with and anti-hunting interests would have greater opportunities to legally interfere with seasons," he said. "The adverse impacts — on wildlife and on sportsmen — could be substantial. And there's much doubt as to whether the ill-defined emergency provisions in these bills would overcome the large problems that exist."

Hair said the Administration's "zeal for regulatory reform has not been tempered by responsible and reasonable considerations of all the negative implications" apparent in the "reform" bills before the Congress.

Park visitations up for the year

AUSTIN — Visitation at Texas' state parks this year is running 16 percent ahead of last year's pace.

Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials said the parks hosted 8,519,349 visitors through April.

Prospective overnight visitors are advised to make advance reservations in person, by mail or telephone with the park they intend to visit, especially during the high-use summer vacation period.

While campsites at many state parks are filled to capacity during summer weekends, officials of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers report that camping and picnic facilities at some of their lake projects are underutilized.

One such facility is Granger Lake near Granger in Central Texas. Officials there said the Granger facility is the least utilized of all Corps projects in the state.

The Granger facility includes two parks which offer overnight camping and picnic facilities. Two other lakeside sites offer day-use facilities. All four have boat launching facilities.

For information on Corps facilities in the northern half of the state, write to the Corps of Engineers, P.O. Box 17300, Fort Worth, TX 76102; for the southern half of the state, write the Corps office at P.O. Box 1229, Galveston, TX 77553.

Texas bred trials highlighted at Goliad

Texas Bred Trials highlight the second weekend at Goliad after an action packed opening weekend at La Bahia Downs and track officials are preparing for even bigger second weekend July 17-18. The Saturday races will consist entirely of Texas Bred Feature trials at 300 yards for two-year-olds. As of this report 209 two-year-olds have been nominated with some 180 expected to start in the trials. This year's purse is estimated at $150,000 which will exceed last year's purse of $137,300 won by Hustling Fool.

The Sunday program should be one of the meets most exciting days. Finals in the Six Flags Derby (Gross purse of $32,000), Hidalgo Futurity (Gross purse $17,400), Fannin Feature (Gross purse $9,850), South Texas Sprint Series Number Two (Est. Gross $4,000) and the Championship Series Number Two (Est. Gross $4,000) will be run.

Leading the Derby qualifiers was El Agostadero owned by Marcelino Davila Jr. of Hargill with a time of 18.11 for 350 yards. The top Hidalgo Futurity qualifier was Jody Hustle owned by Jim Lee and Ronnie Singletary of Victoria with an 18.17 clocking for 350 yards. The fastest Fannin Feature qualifier was Jagmar owned by Noe and Judy Martinez of Corpus Christi with a time of 13.41 for 250 yards. Other July 18 races will include the Three Oh's Dash Trials and Heza Charger Sprint Trials. Post time both is noon.

The Goliad track is extremely fast this meet. Track Superintendent, Fred Pena, and his crew have worked hard at putting the surface in excellent condition. The first weekend saw a 97 speed index recorded by Jagmar in race number five Saturday.

Fishing Report

By Ted Norman

The area fishermen were almost threatened with some rain earlier this week as the promising clouds to come to this part of the coast in a long time roamed just north and east of the area. But the rains, much needed by some, not wanted by others, didn't come and the fishermen had only beautiful sunny skies and hot weather.

We are only about three weeks away from some good speckled trout fishing and two to three weeks away from the good red fish season.

Lots of people can be seen along Fulton Beach Road, and around the Copano Cove area floundering as the low tides remain and the flounder season gets in full bloom.

The black drum are scarce and will be until early fall as will the croaker and sheephead.

Pompano and Spanish mackerel should be plentiful for the next few weeks.

Tarpon should be in the area until late October.

The reports of many small red drum being caught are encouraging that the much sought after fish is making a comeback.

If you are interested in the red fish you might take note that the red feeds by smell or touch as well as by sight. The fisherman who has the best luck with the red is the fisherman who wades over grassy flats in his search for swirls or flashes, the indication that a red is in the area.

The same thing can be accomplished from a shallow draft boat moving slowly over the water.

After making the cast, rewind the line just fast enough to keep the lure or bait off the bottom and vary the speed.

A run of reds can begin in August but if conditions aren't just right it can be September before they appear.

Gulf waters reopened to area shrimpers, season looks good

AUSTIN — Gulf of Mexico waters which were closed to shrimping on May 25 reopened 30 minutes after sunset on Wednesday, July 14, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials announced.

The closure was enacted to allow small shrimp to grow to a larger, more valuable size before harvest.

Texas has traditionally closed its waters each year out to nine nautical miles. In 1981 and 1982, U.S. waters out to 200 nautical miles also were closed at the same time.

The closure in 1981 resulted in an estimated net gain of 12 million pounds of shrimp, valued at $22 million to the shrimpers, according to C.E. Bryan, the department's shellfish program director. Biological samples in the Gulf during 1982 appear similar to samples in 1981, indicating an above-average harvest, Bryan said.

A new research program called SEAMAP which began this summer is expected to provide biologist with more data on the Gulf fishery for shrimp and other important species. Research vessels operated by the TP&WD and other conservation agencies in the Gulf states, along with vessels of the National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS), will radio data on a daily basis via satellite to the NMFS research laboratory in Mississippi.

Bryan said the data are expected to help biologists compare the status of shrimp, groundfish, plankton and water conditions in various portions of the northern Gulf of Mexico.

QUOTE FOR THE WEEK! "Think about things that are pure and lovely, and dwell on the fine, good things in others." Philippians 4:8

Body can deal with heat

The body has an effective if uncomfortable way of dealing with excessive heat. It sweats.

But the body has its limits, warns the Texas Medical Association. Summer's high temperatures can overtax the system and cause heat disorders such as cramps, exhaustion and stroke. All are caused by inadequate levels of body fluids, commonly resulting from perspiring heavily.

Sweat acts as the body's cooling system. When exposed to excessive heat, the body perspires. As the sweat evaporates from the skin's surface, the excess heat is drawn away. This lowers the body's temperature.

Loss of water and salt through excessive sweating, however, reduces overall blood volume. This can cause fainting and dizziness. Drinking plenty of fluids, slightly increasing the amount of salt in food, and staying out of the mid-day sun usually will prevent these problems.

Heat disorders fall into three overlapping categories: Heat cramps: This most common heat disorder usually occurs in early summer when people are out of shape and unaccustomed to warm-weather workouts. The loss of salt and water through perspiration causes the muscles to cramp involuntarily.

Heat exhaustion (or prostration): The main type is a fainting spell accompanied by heavy sweating. Other symptoms are a headache, nausea and tiredness. Victims continue to sweat, indicating their cooling systems are working. They can be revived by elevating their feet slightly while lying in a cool place.

Heat stroke: Usually occurring in the very young or the elderly, this disorder demands immediate treatment to prevent death. The body is so dehydrated that it can no longer sweat, so the victim's temperature can skyrocket to a life-threatening 100 degrees.

Prior symptoms are dizziness, faintness, confusion and an upset stomach. After collapse occurs, delirium, seizures or unconsciousness are common. The victim should be rushed to an emergency room. If possible, douse the person with cold water or ice on the way.

Oil production up

AUSTIN — Texas crude oil production totaled 72,770,172 barrels in April, according to Railroad Commission Chairman Jim Nugent.

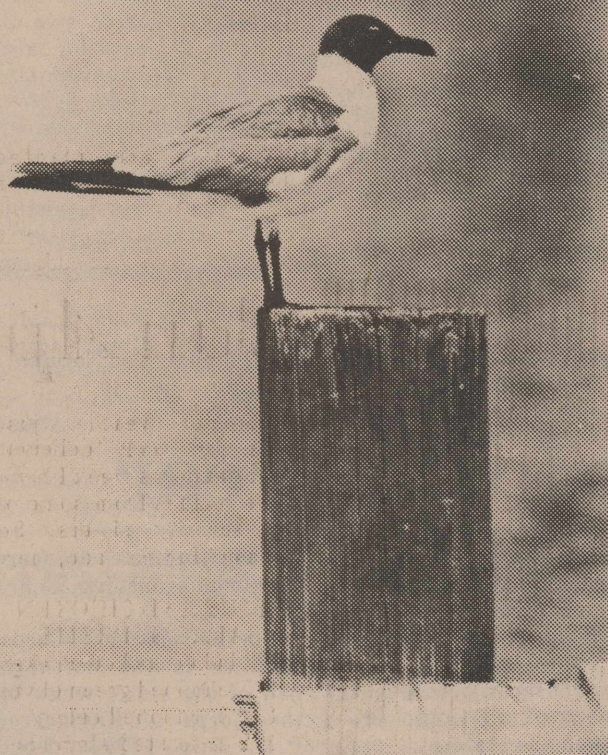

The figure compares with reported production totaling 74,997,266 barrels and April 1981 production of 74,163,737 barrels.

Animal control

Fifty-eight animals — 33 dogs, 24 cats and one possum — were impounded by Rockport's Animal Control Officer Doug Wilcox during June, according to Wilcox's report to the city council this past Monday, July 12.

Wilcox said no dog bites were reported. Five warnings were issued during the month and no citations. Eleven animals — 10 dogs and one cat — were returned to their owners or adopted during the month, four dogs were sent to the Gulf Coast Humane Society in Corpus Christi and nine dogs, 23 cats and the possum were destroyed because of sickness or injury.

Police report

An outboard motor, carburetor, ice chest and a pair of cobra skin boots, were reported taken in thefts in Rockport.

The 9.9 hp motor, valued at $900, was reported taken sometime between 8 p.m. July 8 and 1 p.m. Monday, July 12. Owner is L.M. McAdoo of Fulton.

Jimmy Anders reported the theft of the carburetor, valued at $200, and the ice chest valued at $100 from an air boat at his repair shop. He told police the theft occurred sometime within the past month. The boots, valued at $50, were reported missing from the residence of Myrtle Evans. Theft allegedly occurred within the past two weeks.

In other action, Larrietta Lee Wood of Fulton was ticketed for improper backing and no liability insurance after her car was in collision with another vehicle about 10:36 a.m. Wednesday, July 14.

Police said Wood was backing from a private parking area on Market when she was in collision with a car driven by Peter James Osgood of Rockport.

Rockport thieves very sportsminded

Sportsminded thieves made off with more than $1,100 in sports items including rods, reels and slalom skis in two separate incidents reported in Aransas County recently.

The skis, two ski cases and two life jackets were taken from the side of Jim Palmer's Key Allegro residence early in the month, between 10 p.m. Sunday, July 4, and 8 a.m. July 5. Total value of the missing items was $710.

In a burglary reported July 9, more than $400 in fishing equipment was taken, including four reels, three rods, a three-tray tackle box with lures, a 20-inch floor fan box, a six-inch floatable fillet knife and a stainless steel folding knife.

The items belong to A.E. Schweppe on Copano Ridge Road who told deputies the burglary occurred sometime between May 25 and July 3.

Mona McNutt reported theft of 10 gallons of gasoline, valued at $13, from her car while it was in the driveway of her residence. The gasoline was apparently taken from her tank between 9 a.m.

Saturday, July 10, and 11:30 a.m. Sunday. McNutt told deputies she found the gas cap in the drive by her vehicle Sunday morning.

Arnold attends summer writing institute

Kathy Arnold, who will teach freshman English and journalism at Rockport-Fulton High School this year, was one of many area teachers attending the Summer Writing Institute recently sponsored by Corpus Christi State University and the Region II Educational Service Center.

From June 21 through July 9, Arnold and other teachers attending the institute received intensive training in the theory, practice and teaching of the composing process. Led by Dr. Joyce Carroll, professor of English and writing at McMurray College and Eddie Wilson, English teacher from Abilene Cooper High School participants, through reworking their own writing processes, learned how to better guide their students through composition.

Teachers in the seminar also examined various types of revising procedures, evaluation and composition strategies.

Participants were required to write every day of the class and according to Arnold, "re-write, re-write and re-write," turning in two pieces of polished writing at the end of the three-week session. The Summer Writing Institute was modeled after the well-known Bay Area Writing Project originated in California; as well as on the National Writing Project, "which has produced tremendous success across the nation," according to Arnold.

The course was originated because most English teachers have studied literature in college but few were offered courses in teaching them how to teach composition.

Zinnia's showy colors brighten Texans' gardens

By Ted Brice

Though coming in last in the alphabetical list of annuals the zinnia is first in preference of many gardeners.

The zinnia is a native to Mexico. The zinnia that we know today have come a long way in development and improvement from its ancestry of a Mexican wild flower.

The zinnia is very showy when planted in masses and blooms all summer and into fall. There are shades of red, salmon, yellow, lavender, creamy white, and there is one flower arranger finds intriguing — "Envy" — a chartreuse green. All zinnias need full sun except the green one which needs semi-shade.

The giant double dahlia flower types along with giant cactus with twisted petals are the most popular cultivars. Some of these cultivars will have seven to eight inch blooms on strong wiry stems with narrow leaves. The California Giant zinnia falls into these two cultivars mentioned above. Thanks to the hybridizer we now have multicolors and striped varieties. There are small cultivars and singles. There are small pom-pom cultivars, these sometimes are referred to as the Tumpnellia variety. Mass plantings, along walks and edges of beds as well as around pools, give mounds of color throughout summer and fall. This is one of the few annuals that you have so many choices of color and sizes to select from. You cannot find an annual more suited for this Southwestern area with so many choices of color.

Zinnias are planted normally from seed, even though they are available as started bedding plants. All the seed catalogues usually offer a good selection of zinnia seed. This gives you all winter to enjoy picking the sizes and colors you want next summer in your garden.

Some of the more vital statistics for zinnias are the height at maturity of eight to 38 inches. Plant the seed eight to 15 inches apart depending on the final size of the plant. The seed may be started or transplanted outside when the night temperature does not go below 50 degrees. The period of germination for zinnia seed is five days.

Zinnias like hot weather and simply just stand still in cool weather.

There are many zinnias in bloom now in this area. If you do not have any zinnias, pick out the colors and cultivars that you like and plan on planting them while there is still time this year.

Microwave cooking secures high nutrient content in poultry

COLLEGE STATION — Poultry cooked in a microwave oven measures up favorably with that cooked in an electric oven.

Nutrient retention and cooking yield were found to be quite good in cooking tests using chicken broiler-fryers, points out Dr. James H. Denton, poultry marketing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System. Fryers were cooked in a microwave at two rates (800 watts and 1600 watts) and were compared to those cooked in electric ovens at 250 and 400 degrees Fahrenheit.

Broiler halves cooked at 800 watts in the microwave and roasted at 250 and 400 degrees Fahrenheit were similar in cooking yield, notes Denton. But those cooked at 1600 watts were more dry in appearance and had higher cooking losses.

Tests showed no difference in thiamin (A vitamin) content of broilers cooked in the microwave at 800 or 1600 watts. Broilers cooked at 400 degrees Fahrenheit in a conventional oven retained more thiamin than broilers cooked at 250 degrees Fahrenheit.

However, thiamin retention was greater in broilers cooked to an internal temperature of 197 degrees Fahrenheit in the microwave than those cooked to a temperature of 180 degrees Fahrenheit in an electric oven. So it appears that nutrient retention in microwave cooked poultry is quite good, says Denton.

Important Things

The morning sunlight catches the cascading water and bands it with rainbow colors. The little girl watches, transfixed. Later, if someone asks her how she liked the waterfall, she'll struggle with words. Most of us are inadequate when it comes to describing something important.

The waterfall is very important, not only because it is beautiful but because it shows God's workings in a tangible form. The water cascades down over rocks, seeking union in the pool at the bottom. In turn, that pool will spill into a brook and the brook will merge with a river and the river with the sea. It's a kind of master plan that is mind-boggling in its scope.

So, the little girl senses a kind of miracle, even if she can't put it into words. No one can be precise about miracles. But the Church can help you to better understand.

One Night A Man Had A Dream

He dreamed he was walking along the beach with the Lord. Across the sky flashed scenes from his life. For each scene he noticed two sets of footprints in the sand — one belonging to him and the other to the Lord.

When the last scene had flashed before him, he looked back at the footprints in the sand. He noticed that many times along the path there were only one set of footprints in the sand. He noticed that it happened during the saddest and lowest times in his life. This really bothered him a lot and he questioned the Lord.

"Lord, you said that once I decided to follow you, You would walk all the way, but I noticed that during the most troublesome times of my life, there was only one set of footprints, I don't understand why, when I needed you most, You deserted me."

The Lord replied, "My precious, precious child, I love you and would never leave you. During your times of troubles, trials and suffering, when you see only one set of footprints, it was then that I carried you."

'Spoon River' to be presented Sunday

A group of skylarking children playing tag among tombstones of a cemetery would be impermissible. It would be too irreverent to the sleeping dead if heedless brats hopped, skipped and danced upon the resting place of the departed. However, a thoughtful stroll among the headstones of a very old graveyard — where no one you ever knew or loved is buried — preferably at the magical moment of dusk on a summer evening — that is permitted, that can be a dramatic experience, if one begins to wonder about all those people under the headstones, what their lives could have been like. And that, in effect, is what "Spoon River Anthology" is about.

"Spoon River Anthology" is the name of the play being presented at Rockport's First United Methodist Church for the entire family at 7 p.m. Sunday, July 25. And "anthology" — a strange word to be found in the title of a stage play — is an accurate description of this comedy-drama; for it is a collection of fables, supposedly a collection of epitaphs from the graveyard of a little Illinois town called Spoon River.

These are not, however, epitaphs which could ever have appeared on a headstone. They too truthfully reveal the secret passions, joys, fears, aspirations, sins, heartaches, successes, failures and hypocrisies that stirred these people while they lived. Some are raucously comic, some angry, bitter or despairing.

In book form this album of spoken-from-the-grave autobiographies has enjoyed enormous popularity ever since Edgar Lee Masters first published it in 1915. It had gone through more than 70 editions when Masters died in 1950 at the age of 82.

At first it scandalized many readers with its disclosure that small-town life was not as pure and wholesome as people had liked to believe. But it was also recognized as a paean to the sturdiness of Americans in the heartland of the country, to the dauntlessness of their spirit. "Spoon River Anthology" for years has been considered as much a loving tribute to America as the poems of Walt Whitman and the stories of Mark Twain.

One critic in 1915 stated that Masters in his book had "made articulate a whole ignored or forgotten part of the American soul and even part of the human soul."

The play being presented at the United Methodist Church on Sunday, July 25, is a dramatized version of Masters' now-classic evocation of a small town's life through gravestone - vignettes of its passed-on citizens. The dramatization was made in 1963, 48 years after the book first came out, by Charles Aidman, who originated in Indiana, just one stateline away from the Illinois prairie-land which Masters immortalized in his book. ("Spoon River" is clearly a recollection of the two small towns where Masters spent his childhood, Petersburg and Lewiston, Ill. before he hied off to a legal career in Chicago.)

The Alpha and Omega Players will portray the Spoon River citizens, blending readily from one role to the other, and frequently joining in double antiphones of love or hate — as when, for example, a married couple, long released from a domestic harness that had galled each of them, exchange recriminations, proving that even the dead can quarrel.

Interspersed in their portrayals will be a series of both, old, familiar folk songs (like "Jimmy Crack Corn") and new folk ditties with words by Aidman and tunes by Naomi Hirshhorn.

Drexel Riley directs this presentation which, when it scored its first success on Broadway in 1963, was described by the critic of the "New York Times" as being "like a brooding and loving American folk poem brought to life on a stage."

Certain time for the July 25 performance will be 7 p.m. at the First United Methodist Church. There will be an offering taken.

Area 4-H'ers to learn new technique for bread

Area 4-H'ers will have the opportunity to learn a new technique for making yeast bread at an event called Bread Fair on Friday, July 23 at 2 p.m. in the County Homemaking Building in Sinton. The process the 4-H'ers will learn at the Bread Fair will be using a plastic bag for mixing the bread ingredients and each participant will take a loaf of bread home to bake. The method eliminates the need for mixing bowls, numerous utensils and extensive clean up normally associated with bread making.

The recipe for the bread was developed by the Wheat Flour Institute and is known as the sponge method. Each participant will actually make the bread and will get recipes for several variations.

4-H'ers interested need to pre-register by calling 364-2338 in Sinton by 1 p.m. July 22. Each participant should also bring a rubber spatula and a one-pound loaf pan.

High rises concern committee

FULTON — A question of how to stop high rise developments pending in Fulton came before members of the city's zoning committee Wednesday night — along with a question of whether the ordinance could prohibit any additional mobile home parks in the city.

The high rise question was tackled in a meeting of the zoning committee that followed the unveiling, in last Tuesday's council session of plans for a 10-story condominium project on the old Oak Shore Inn site on Fulton Beach Road.

Committee members asked Alderman Elgin Dietz, present at Wednesday's session, if the Oak Shore Towers project, being developed by Oliver Hensler, would open the door to future high rises.

"No," Dietz replied. "There was nothing we could do (about the Oak Shore Towers project). We have no ordinances. But if another group comes in and we have an ordinance, we can stop it."

The proposed Fulton zoning ordinance, now being drafted by the committee, would limit height of buildings to two and one-half stories or 35 feet.

The committee asked Dietz to ask the council to write a letter to Hensler requesting answers to three questions: What effect will the proposed development have on water supply in Fulton? What effect will it have on traffic in the area around the condominium? and What size pipe will supply water to the project?

Committee member Jean Jenkins asked, "How legal would it be if two-thirds of Fulton citizens petitioned against high rises?"

Dietz said, "I can't answer that." Committee Chairman Charles Belaire said he would ask Fulton City Attorney Allen Lee.

In other action Wednesday, committee members discussed the possibility of including a provision in the ordinance that would bar any new mobile home parks in Fulton "at this time," in Belaire's words.

Committee member Elaine Faulkner suggested this provision also be extended to travel trailer parks. "I don't think we need any more travel trailer parks in Fulton," she said.

Jenkins added, "I agree." She later observed, "There's no place to put them."

The committee did discuss regulations for mobile home and travel trailer parks, agreeing that provisions similar to those in the Rockport ordinance would be adopted if these facilities cannot be legally prohibited.

Earlier in the meeting, Fultonite Harold Shirey appeared before the board to question its setback requirements for property. The committee proposes setback requirements of five feet from the property line on either side and the provision, if adopted, would prohibit any substantial remodeling or renovation to nonconforming property.

"Those setback requirements will result in a lot of nonconforming land in Fulton," Shirey said.

Shirey recommended altering the provision so it applies only to new construction, saying if it is applied to existing structures, it could limit resale. "You've got so many non-conforming uses, you'll effect a lot of people," he said.

Jenkins said the committee's goal was to build in some way of requiring conformance when property had deteriorated.

"If you make it difficult," Shirey said, "you'll miss out on a lot of improvement. I'm not arguing," he said later in the meeting. "I'm talking about something people are going to have to live with."

Also present at the meeting was Dan Shelton who asked to have his nine acres of land zoned as multi-family. He said he has been working on selling his property since he recently purchased a lot in Rockport County Club Estates, "and I don't believe anybody's going to buy a nine-acre residential lot."

Another Fulton resident, Fran Smith, questioned a provision that sets minimum lot sizes at 50 by 125 feet, pointing out there is "a whole area" in Fulton where lots are 50 by 80 feet. She expressed concern that the zoning provision would limit future use of the lots in question.

Belaire said this would be referred to Lee.

The committee, after first considering prohibiting fences in front yards, Wednesday night voted to accept a provision similar to Rockport's recent amendment that allows fences in front yards to the property line provided they are at least 40 percent open (such as chain link or picket fences).

The committee reviewed the zoning maps and expected to submit it to Lee for consideration Friday, July 16.

Copies of the maps will be made available for public inspection in Fulton's City Hall between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. weekdays.

Also agreed on by committee members was a provision that commercial signs on Fulton Beach Road be attached to buildings. No freestanding signs will be allowed.

Police have busy month

"June was a busy month" according to Rockport Police Chief Joe Hinojosa who made his monthly report on police activities to Rockport's city council this past Monday, July 12.

Accidents were up by two — 19 during June, 1982, compared to 17 for June of the prior year — but arrests were down, 31 compared to 50 for June, 1981.

For the first time in several months, speeding was not the leading reason for traffic citations. Instead, the leading cause was no drivers license, with 15 tickets issued for that offense. Eleven speeding tickets were issued, and the same number of citations were issued for driving with expired inspection stickers and no liability insurance.

Alcohol-related offenses continued to head the reasons for arrests, with 11 persons arrested during the month for public intoxication and six for driving while intoxicated. Three persons were arrested for disorderly conduct.

Other reasons for arrests included one for simple assault, two for burglary, four for murder, one possession of marijuana, one theft, one aggravated assault on a police officer and one failure to stop and leave required information.

Four persons were arrested on warrants and one was adjudged mentally ill and taken into protective custody.

Thirteen prisoners were lodged in Aransas County Jail at a cost to the city of $300.

Other reasons for traffic citations during the month included expired license plates, seven; failure to yield right-of-way, seven;

following too closely, five; failure to stop and leave information, one; excessive noise (tires and mufflers), one; driving without headlights on, one; no inspection sticker, one; and disregard of a "No U-turn" sign, one.

Chief Hinojosa said officers responded to 114 alarms and made 489 property checks during the month, responded to 13 prowler calls, 32 family disturbance calls, two runaway calls and delivered five emergency messages.

Police were called to assist the county 13 times during the month, the ambulance three times, received three animal calls and three fire calls. They provided funeral escort once during the month.

Signs urged in Ski Basin

Rockport City Attorney Allen Lee has been authorized to send a letter to the Aransas County Navigation District "insisting" that rules and regulation signs be posted in the Ski Basin.

The action came as the result of a motion by Rockport Alderman Richard Beck during Monday night's, July 12, meeting of the city council following the monthly water safety patrol report to the council.

The report showed 70 warnings issued during the month by Water Safety Patrolman John R. Parker, including 31 for no observer in the boat and 16 for speeding.

In the discussion following the report, Ed Armstrong observed that no rules are posted in the basin, adding that a sign that used to list the regulations "has been down for a year."

That was followed by Beck's motion that Lee be authorized "to send a letter to the ACND insisting they put the signs up again."

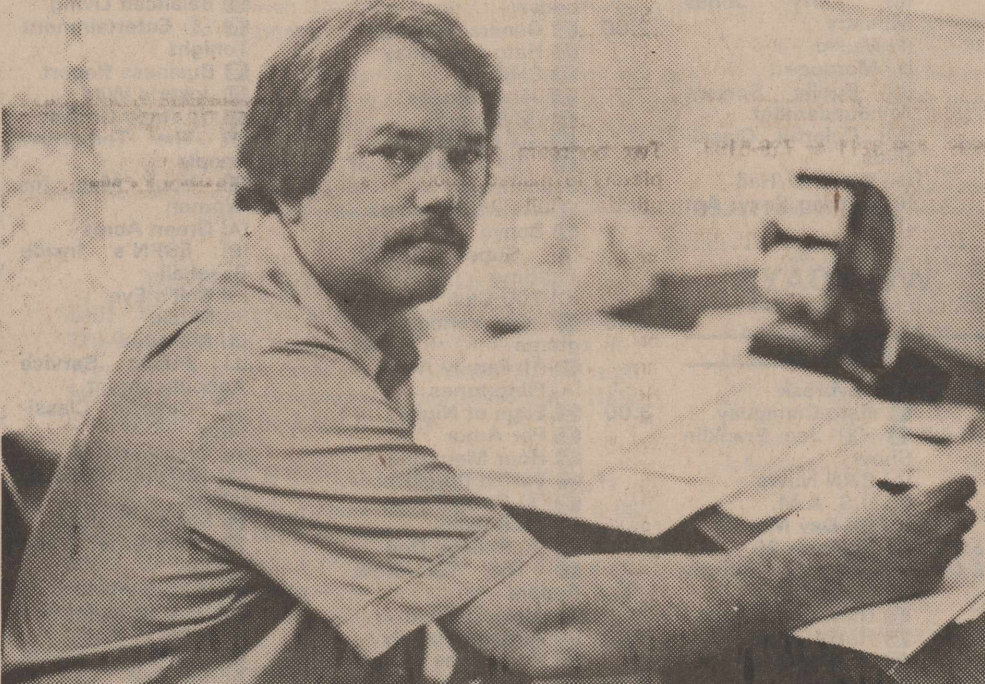

Other violations observed during the month, according to Parker's report, included six wreckless skiers/boaters, three instances of no life-jacket on a minor, seven sailing vessels in the Basin, two swimmers in the Basin and five instances of boats going in the wrong direction.

The water safety patrol officer assisted 10 disabled vessels and three beached vessels during the month.

REAL ESTATE CONSUMER

When showing your home to potential buyers, consider these tips.

A well-lighted home is inviting. Open your draperies during the day and turn on all your lights in the evening. Turn off the radio and television so there will be no distractions.

Avoid having too many people present during inspections. The potential buyer may feel like an intruder and hurry through the house.

Small children often have the uncanny knack of interrupting at the very moment the prospect is asking for information. Make an agreement with your spouse to have one of you occupy the children while the other remains available to answer questions.

Keep pets out of the house during inspections. Also, be courteous, but do not try to force conversation with the potential buyer. The prospect wants to inspect your house, not visit. Ask your broker for additional hints on showing your home.

These days the biggest barrier to buying a home is not necessarily the cost of the home. It is the cost of the financing.

To help a buyer get over this barrier, some builders are offering homes for sale with financing made favorable through what's called a "buy down." This is how it works.

A homebuyer applies for a standard mortgage at, say, 15 percent interest. The builder pays the lending institution a fee for the top two or three percent of the loan for two or three years. The builder thus "buys down" the interest rate, and the homeowner's mortgage payments are reduced for the first several years.

During that initial grace period, it is hoped the homeowner's income will increase enough to support the higher payments after the builder's subsidy ends.

Texas property tax laws contain two provisions for reduced taxation of lands devoted to agricultural use, but both laws require that these deductions be paid back when such agricultural use ends.

For buyers of certain open-space lands, these roll-back provisions mean the assumption of a potential burden of up to five years of deferred taxes, plus seven percent interest compounded annually.

Thus, a landbuyer who terminates the agricultural use of the land one year after purchase could face up to five years of back taxes.

In the event that the buyer defaults on the purchase, the seller who financed the purchase could have the mortgage to repossess the rollback tax burden along with the land.

Buyers and sellers should check with the chief appraiser in their district to see if they will be affected by these tax provisions.

The seller of a parcel of real estate normally gives the buyer a deed, but a buyer should view an offer of a quit claim deed with caution.

Anyone can legally sign a quit claim deed for any piece of property. The deed simply conveys the rights of the signing party without guaranteeing that the signing party has any rights at all.

A quit claim deed has legitimate uses. Suppose a parcel of land belonged to a person who died without leaving a will. If that person's heirs all agree to relinquish any possible claim on the land to that person's son or daughter, then they can execute a quit claim deed in favor of the son or daughter.

However, outright transfers of a title for a sale normally involve a general warranty deed backed by title insurance. If you buy property, get legal council before signing any agreement.

Nowadays it is not uncommon for single people to purchase homes as an alternative to renting.

The rising cost of housing, however, often places home ownership beyond the reach of a person with only one paycheck. To overcome this problem, many singles have teamed up to buy a house. Such partnerships - referred to as "mingles" - provide for sharing the down payment, closing costs, loan payments and household expenses.

Some partners even prepare formal contracts stating how expenses will be shared, how property rights are divided and how disputes will be settled.

Developers in Dallas and other cities are building units specially designed for this "mingles" market. These units have two master bedrooms with a common kitchen and living room.

Shared housing - it's just another way in which people are coping with the high cost of home ownership.

Individual tax problems occupy ACTA

"They were more interested in their own particular tax problems rather than the general situation," said Mitch Ammons, describing the special meeting called by the Aransas County Taxpayers Association to discuss the recent tax appraisal notices.

Of the meeting held Tuesday Ammons said, "I think it went pretty good." Chairman of ACTA, Ammons admitted that he had expected the negative reaction expressed by many of the participants.

The session had been planned as a general information guide on reading the tax statement and preparing, if necessary, to deal with the Appraisal District and the Review Board.

Some 40-50 persons attended the meeting, which was open to "all interested taxpayers." Many present were not ACTA members, noted Ammons. A majority of the participants who spoke concentrated on their own statements and sought answers directly related to their particular situation, as Ammons said.

Ammons, in the past, critical of the Appraisal District, repeatedly stressed in the meeting the fact that he felt the district was being "extremely fair" in re-evaluating possible errors brought before them by taxpayers in the past week.

He reiterated this stance later, saying, "When someone goes down and proves to the district's satisfaction that there's been an error, they have been very receptive."

One point Ammons was able to get through in the session on Tuesday was that correct documentation and information was essential in requesting a change on the statements. Taxpayers going before the Review Board, said Ammons, should take all "necessary ammunition" with them, including photographs, past records and receipts. The presentation for the review board should be thought out well in advance, said the chairman.

Other items covered by Ammons included a discussion of the types of property taxed, how property was listed on the statements and how tax rates would be set by local taxing entities.

Ammons explained the 40 percent homestead exemption and why ACTA had been concerned with it recently. In an answer to a question from a visitor, he explained that as yet, no entity, save the City of Rockport, had made a commitment regarding any tax exemptions. Rockport has already promised a one percent or $5,000 exemption.

When the state legislation enabling the homestead exemption passed, ACTA formulated a written request to local taxing entities asking for a full 40 percent exemption. At Tuesday's meeting, Ammons reiterated ACTA's stance on the importance of receiving the full exemption.

Marine Lab described as 'window to the sea'

By Juliet K. Wenger
Coastal Bend Council of Governments

"A window to the sea." That is the way Dr. Pat Parker describes the University of Texas Port Aransas Marine Laboratory, of which he is assistant director. Students, as individuals and as classes, from all parts of the Coastal Bend and much further, and at grade levels from junior high to graduate school are gaining new impressions of the sea through that window.

This is an educational institution. At the same time, it is an important research laboratory. Dr. Parker believes that within the next five years, the results of research now underway there will identify the factors that control productivity in our waters. This would enable us to obtain factual information about the effects that certain actions or conditions would have in benefiting or damaging productivity.

Some of the projects that are underway that could lead to this knowledge are a study of the food web from the bays to the shelf of the Gulf, contribution of sea grass communities to productivity as a food source and a nutrient pump system, and a mariculture project dealing with reproduction and survival of the red fish.

In the more than 30 years that scientists have worked in the laboratory, a body of knowledge has been developed. Dr. Parker says that, for instance, we now know the importance of fresh water flowing into the bays. This is no longer a question.

Research, he says, when it answers questions often raises new ones. Recently it was learned that Russia is going to dam big rivers which flow into the Arctic Ocean. This will be a major change, with worldwide repercussions. We don't know what it is going to do to climate or marine life.

Studies have established a base line that makes it possible to evaluate an unexpected happening. The value of this proved itself two years ago when an offshore Mexican well blew out and oil washed ashore on Padre and Mustang Islands. The federal government contracted with the Laboratory to study the effect of oil on marine organisms and make toxicity studies. The base for the studies was already in place.

Dr. Parker says Texas has some severe problems on its coastline, which leads the Laboratory into applied research, beyond its obligation to carry out basic research.

Each professor and each student is involved in a specific project. New faculty members bring new resources into the Laboratory. One of four scientists who have recently joined the faculty is working to show how bacteria in the sea may be responsible for creating mineral resources.

There is continuity in the research, from which students learn and to which they contribute. In the summer, there are 50 students living on the island campus. Of these, 35 are undergraduates from schools throughout the state, and 15 are University of Texas graduate students.

In the winter, the Visiting Class Program changes the complexion of the Laboratory. Classes of students come from all our towns in the region, from throughout the state and from Kansas, Nebraska and New York City College. These students, whether they are attending junior or senior high school or college, are not for the most part science students. Richard K. Tinnin, director of marine education at the Laboratory, says this is a unique educational experience for them.

He says education is "opening your eyes and seeing what's around us." These students spend, usually, three days on the campus. There are three boats which are floating laboratories to take them into the Gulf, bays or Laguna Madre.

On the islands, there are varied environments to study, marsh, Gulf beach, beaches along the Laguna, Black Mangrove, the jetties, all with their own colonies of marine life.

Dr. Parker calls the Visiting Class Program one of the big successes of the Laboratory. It started out with 15 students one year. Now, 3,000 students have this opportunity each year.

The Library is another resource for the Coastal Bend. It is called by Dr. Parker the best marine library on the Gulf Coast. It is open to all scholars. Tinnin says he spent hours there when he was an undergraduate then a graduate student at Texas A&I University. Soon it will be moved into a handsome new building which is under construction. This building will also house a 300 to 400 seat auditorium, which can be used for meetings and conferences on the island, and a Visitors' Center.

The public is welcome now from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays, and there are exhibits and displays to be seen. But there will be seven large tanks, 400 to 600 gallon, in the new Visitors' Center, showing the public much more about marine life, and mariculture and other work underway in the Laboratory.

A world of ocean and shoreline, constantly evolving and changing, is visible to all of us through this "window to the sea".

Success is not always final. If you build a better mousetrap, nature will breed a smarter mouse.

There's nothing wrong with being a self-made man if you don't consider the job finished too soon.

18 candidates draw ballot positions

Eighteen candidates for the Rockport charter commission drew their positions on the ballot of the Aug. 14 special election.

Absentee voting will begin July 26 on the election that will determine whether the city will have a 15-member commission to draft a city charter for Rockport.

The order in which they will appear on the ballot, candidates are T.E. Griffith, Jerry L. Beattie, Thomas (Eddie) Ratliff, Martha Ann (Marty) Dillon, J. Curtis Kovacs, Edward M. Armstrong, Richard W. Lilly, Gayle C. Atchley, Gordon N. Dancer.

Also Mary Lou Tiner, William G. (Bill) Walston, Robert K. (Bob) Phillips, Ralph

M. Winkelman, Iris Jenkins, Marce P. Ramirez, Richard G. McMakin, J.C. Harlan and James (Pat) Brown.

Voters in the election will first be asked to mark their ballots "yes" or "no" to the question, "Shall a commission be chosen to frame a new charter?"

Those who vote "yes" will then be asked to mark their ballots for up to 15 candidates to serve on the commission if the question passes.

City Administrator Herman Johnson emphasized that a voter cannot vote for more than 15 of the candidates. "If anyone votes for more than 15 candidates, their ballot cannot be counted," he said.

within the school and to strengthen interaction between the school and the home."

Students breaking rules will have full knowledge of the violations their action represents and it's consequences. Basic rules stressed by the plan call for students to be in class on time, to have necessary books, study materials and homework and not to disturb other students or the teacher.

An effort to correct a discipline problem caused by a student must be made by the teacher prior to sending a child to the office. Prior to taking that action, a teacher must have gone through the following steps: counseling with the student, contacting the parents, assigning the student to the teacher's detention hall and any other steps established in the teacher's individual plan.

If each of these steps fail to solve the problem, the student is then sent to the principal. Procedures open to the principal for securing discipline include verbal reprimands, conference with parents, detention, in-school suspension, corporal punishment, one to three days of suspension or referral to the attendance officer.

A student having been in in-school suspension for nine days may be referred to the superintendent for consideration of an extended suspension of up to 10 days.

A group of infractions will result in the student's immediate referral to the principal, with no intermediate action by the teacher. They are: use of profanity, fighting, dangerous acts of any kind, physical or verbal threats, theft or vandalism of private or public property, possession of a dangerous weapon, possession or use of alcohol or dangerous drugs and use of tobacco on the school grounds.

The program entails two types of detention halls, regular and alternative. Regular is 30 minutes after school and alternative is a 30 minute session prior to, and a 30 minute session following, school hours.

A student missing regular detention will be assigned an extra day. Missing alternative detention will result in an assignment of up to three days of in-school suspension.

In-school suspension, unlike classroom detention hall, is an all-day suspension in a separate supervised room used expressly for that purpose. Students will be assigned to in-school suspension for the following infractions: cutting of classes, excessive tardiness, infraction of the rules listed above (profanity, violence, etc.), for being extended more than one day in the alternative detention room; not being present for alternative detention and any other infraction that the campus administrator judges to merit assignment.

Students assigned to in-school suspension must, according to the plan, "bring Earlier, Rockport Mayor Burt Mills emphasized that anyone who wants to see a charter commission elected must answer "yes" to the question: "Just voting for the candidates won't be sufficient," Mills said.

He explained the responses to the question will be counted first and only if the "yes" answers outnumber the "no's" will the council count votes for the candidates.

Absentee voting will continue through Aug. 4 at Rockport's City Hall, from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays.

Voters in both wards 1 and 2 in the city will go to City Hall on election day, Aug. 14, to cast their ballots. Polls will be open from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m.

your own lunch if you plan to eat." No contact with other students will be allowed, either in or out of the suspension class. Students will sit in assigned seats and must bring all necessary study materials. Students will do school work. Students will not be given any free-time breaks except for one restroom break in the morning and another in the afternoon.

The tardy policy outlined within the new program calls for a student to be assigned to detention hall for two tardies within a six weeks. Three tardies will result in a student's assignment to alternative detention; four, to two days in alternative detention; five, to a student's being assigned up to three days in in-school suspension and having their parents notified. Six tardies will get a student assigned to detention hall, in-school suspension, notification of the attendance officer and a parental conference.

Seven tardies may result in a student's three-day suspension. A parent conference will be required prior to the student's returning to school.

Cutting classes or "playing hooky" will be punished in the following manner: for cutting two classes, a student will receive one day in alternative detention; for two classes, two days in alternative detention; and for three or more classes, the student will be assigned up to three days in in-school suspension.

Application must be made at the appraisal district office prior to the beginning of the hearings on July 22, Groseclose said, adding that anyone who wants to appear before the ARB will be given that opportunity.

Persons selected from the Texas Employment Commission prescreening will be scheduled for interviews by Wal-Mart personnel who will be in Rockport Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, July 20-22.

Saenz said the store officials plan to hire approximately 85 people who will work in the new store on a four to five-week temporary basis. At the end of that period, store officials will select 50 to 60 permanent full- and part-time employees.

Among those filling out applications Wednesday was Alvin Kail, a resident of Rockport for four years who said he had been waiting in the application line since around 8:30 or 8:45 a.m.

Another job hopeful was Mary Trainor who "just moved here in January — from Panama City, Fl." She'd been in line since 8:45 a.m. Wednesday and was still waiting for her pre-interview at around 11:30 a.m. "It was pretty hot out there," she said, referring to the wait before Town Hall's door opened. "It was fainting temperature. A lot of people left."

Elizabeth Brumley was planning to stick around Wednesday at least until lunch time. She'd also arrived at about 8:30 a.m.

Saenz said applications were being taken for day and evening employment for office personnel, register cashiers, department

Grain explosions can be prevented, says expert

COLLEGE STATION — Within the past three years, 43 grain elevators have exploded, causing 85 deaths, many serious injuries and hundreds of millions of dollars in property damage and production losses.

"While grain dust explosions are complicated, they can be prevented," says Dr. Gary Nelson, safety engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

"Grain dust explosions are the result of a rapidly burning fire inside an enclosure," he explains.

"Fuel, air, an ignition source and a closed container are the necessary ingredients for an explosion."

Eliminating any one of the four ingredients can prevent an explosion, says Nelson, while eliminating fuel, air or an ignition source can prevent a flash fire.

"Since grain dust provides the 'fuel' that can lead to a flash fire or elevator explosion, dust control can be a key factor in preventing such fires or explosions," points out the engineer.

Precleaning grain before it enters the elevator should be considered to help in controlling dust, says Nelson.

Other steps that would help control dust include transferring grain throughout the elevator as gently as possible to avoid creating additional dust, using exhaust ventilation systems at transfer points and other locations to remove airborne dust, and sweeping, mopping, vacuuming or otherwise removing grain dust that has not been removed by ventilation systems.

"If precautionary measures fail and an explosion does occur, two things can minimize damage," Nelson says. "These are explosion suppression and explosion venting."

Explosion suppression involves advanced technology where pressure-sensitive electronic equipment detects the beginning of an explosion and releases extinguishing chemicals, all in about 60/1,000 of a second — less time than an eyeblink. These systems should be considered for key locations, advises the engineer.

Vents at key positions also help minimize explosion damage by acting as safety valves to prevent the buildup of high, destructive pressures.

Nelson also advocates a systems approach to designing new elevators or altering existing structures to reduce the risk of explosions. This calls for continued research to determine which preventive measures will reduce the explosion potential to a minimum level at minimum cost.

Research is needed regarding the development of ventilation system design guidelines for grain elevators, he adds.
