DRINKING CHARGES FLUNG AT SOLONS

POISON ALCOHOL ARGUMENT ENDS IN LONG DEBATE

SENATORS AND MEMBERS OF HOUSE DRINK TO EXCESS, IS CLAIM

(By the Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The blunt statement that members of the house and senate "drink to excess" was made on the house floor today by Representative Celler, democrat, New York, who called upon his colleagues to keep poison denaturants out of industrial alcohol to protect those who "ape their betters."

Celler's speech started a heated debate during which Representative Blanton, democrat, Texas, declared that "it already is against the laws to drink the stuff," while Representative Laguarda, republican, New York, called up and demanded immediate action on a resolution requesting information from Secretary Mellon about under-prohibition enforcement in New York City.

"Is Called 'Murder'"
In the midst of the exchanges, Representative Fairchild, republican, New York, introduced a resolution to declare to federal officials that there is "no such thing as legalized murder," and that any federal official that causes the death of a citizen is guilty of murder and should be held responsible and at his own risk.

Would Probe "Poisoning"
WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Full information whether the Anti-Slavery League of its general counsel, Wayne B. Wheeler, has had any hand in the poisoning of industrial alcohol, would be requested of Secretary Mellon in a resolution prepared today by Senator Edwards, democrat, New Jersey.

Witnesses' Absence Delays Bonner Case

CORPUS CHRISTI, Jan. 3.—Illness of one witness and absence of another caused delay here Monday in the scheduled trial of Frank H. Bonner, charged with murder in connection with the deaths of J. A. Barnes and his son, who were killed by the explosion of a bomb several years ago.

Judge A. W. Cunningham recessed court at 10:30 a. m. until 1 p. m. to give Sheriff Ben D. Egan time to learn the condition of Chief of Detectives A. L. Bugz of Austin, who was reported too ill to attend the trial. Bugz is a state witness. The missing was Mrs. Harry Barnes of Dallas, county, who could not be located.

Smith Credentials To Be Investigated

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Senate democrats in conference today found themselves in substantial agreement that the credentials of Frank L. Smith, senator-designate from Illinois should be referred to a committee for investigation before Smith takes his seat in the senate.
The conference was called by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the party floor leader. Nearly all of the minority senators participated. The general view developed was in accord with the purpose of a pending resolution, by Senator Ashurst, democrat, Arizona. The credentials of election of Senator Nye, republican, North Dakota, were referred to the senate elections committee, being invoked in the case of Smith, if he presents himself on the governor's appointment as the successor of the late Senator McKinley.

Four Grandjuries To Be Called For Norris Testimony

FORT WORTH, Texas, Jan. 3.—(AP)—Members of the four grand juries that have indicted Rev. Dr. J. Frank Norris, militant fundamentalist pastor, five times since he was accused of burning the First Baptist church here in 1912 will be summoned as witnesses in his murder trial beginning January 10 at Austin, W. P. McLean, Jr., special prosecutor, announced today.

Application for subpoenas are being prepared, McLean said. Service on all the former grand jurors is expected to be obtained before Dr. Norris is called to trial on a charge of venue to Austin for killing D. E. Chippa, Fort Worth lumberman, in the First Baptist church office here last July 17.

Dr. Norris was indicted for arson in connection with the burning of the church, January 11, 1912 and of the First Baptist parsonage about two months later while a perjury case against him was pending. A second perjury indictment came later to correct a technical error in the first which accused the pastor of writing threatening letters to himself to aid his defense in the arson charges. He subsequently was cleared in all the cases.

U. S. Postal Receipts Show Best Christmas

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—(AP)—Santa Claus' messenger, Uncle Sam, raked in a neat bit of money for his services this Christmas. The exact amount he has not had time to calculate, but his workers estimate the American post office to the postal service for handling gifts and greetings.

Total postal receipts for December are estimated at about $69,000,000 while the average monthly receipts for the year prior to December were about $51,000,000. This increase in revenues is due to the carrying of Christmas gifts and greetings.

Never before had such a huge sum been paid to the postal service for handling Christmas mails nor had such a quantity of gifts ever been handled during the holiday season. Postmaster General New, proud of his postal workers in distributing the vast quantity, at the same time gives credit to the public for its co-operation in mailing early.

Wartime Secret, Disclosed, Relates How Boche Radio Protected Yanks

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The radio gossiping of German submarines and their kidding of French radio stations took a positive hand in helping the American navy to carry the American expeditionary force across the Atlantic without loss of a man.
The story of the part the buzz of the enemy radio played in this undertaking was told by Rear Admiral John Malligan, Jr., during recent hearings on the navy re-arrangement appropriation bill reported today to the house. His story follows:
"It has caused a great deal of wonder and I have heard many people ask the question, how it was that our transports were not torpedoed whereas other classes of vessels were torpedoed in these waters, and some of our enemy ships west bound were torpedoed, but in no case was a transport carrying troops successfully attacked by a submarine."
"During the war the allies built and established radio compass stations on the south coast of Ireland, the coast of England and the west coast of France. The German submarines used their radio very freely, not knowing that these compasses existed. They talked to

MATADOR-AGGIE GAME APPROVED HEARTILY HERE

BOOSTER CLUB TO GO IN SESSION TO PLAN FOR FOOTBALL CLASSIC

The Matador club, Lubbock godfather of athletics at the Tech college, is to meet either late this afternoon or tonight to map out plans of procedure in underwriting the proposed game of the Matadors with Texas A. and M. college here October 28, Walter Myrick, president of the club said today.

This announcement that such a game is not only possible, but very probable, has met with the heartiest approval of all citizens of the city, and no trouble in underwriting the affair is anticipated, although college officials say the contract for the game will not be signed until such time they are assured that the game will be financed. Some funds will be necessary, according to present plans, not as a donation, and no cash at this time is wanted, but the athletic department of the college, which has not yet had time to build up sufficient finances of its own, must have definite knowledge that the funds will be available if needed.

Support is Certain
As for that matter, no fear is held whatever, that the game will not be self-supporting, for it is Tech's first chance at a contest of this calibre on the home grounds.

Various plans for guaranteeing the finances have been offered, Mr. Myrick said, and all of them are very good, but an effort will be made at the meeting today to stammer these down to one, so that concerted action may be had. One of them, considered by many as the most plausible of any yet mentioned, is that merchants of the city take over a certain number of tickets, guaranteeing payment, and in this way the funds not only will be guaranteed but added publicity for the game will be secured.

200 New Students Enroll Here Today

Public schools of Lubbock opened with routine class room work Monday morning after two weeks holiday recess, and while no accurate check-up has been made on the number of new pupils, it was estimated by Superintendent M. H. Duncan that approximately 200 were added to the rolls today.

Others were turned away, but will return later, at the beginning of the next semester, three weeks hence, upon recommendation of heads of the various departments. Three weeks on the present semester yet remain, and in order to have the work of these pupils conform to that of other members of the classes, they were asked to wait until the end of this semester.

Emmett Whitaker, State Legislator, Visits Lubbock To View Texas Tech; Banquet Will Honor Him On Tuesday

He's Washington's New Storm Center

Emmett L. Whitaker, representative in the state legislature from this district, arrived here Monday morning for an inspection trip through the Tech college pursuant to the plea that will be made by himself and college officials for additional appropriations for the college. Mr. Whitaker will be here through Tuesday.

Today he was shown through various departments of the institution by Dr. Paul W. Horn, president, but he would make no statement regarding his plans on behalf of the college until he made a more thorough inspection of the needs and requirements.

Banquet on Tuesday
He was guest of Doctor Horn and E. W. Provence, business manager today at noon, in lunch at the college cafeteria, and tomorrow night will be honored guest at a banquet in the cafeteria to be attended by 35 or 40 college officials and citizens of the city.

Mr. Whitaker holds the honor of being one of the youngest legislators ever to represent a Texas district in the state law making body. Tech this year will need much additional financial aid from the legislature if the school is to continue in its long strides forward, and officials believe that Mr. Whitaker will be of much benefit to them in having these needs taken care of.

CALIFORNIA, Calif., Jan. 3.—(AP)—A heavy earth shock was felt here shortly after 5 o'clock this morning. No damage followed the tremor, which came as two severe jolts.

The Americans dickered with their captors and finally bargained the sum down to $350. Connors, paroled by the bandits Saturday, went to San Francisco Del Oro, obtained the money and returned to the bandits' camp, where upon he and his partner were released. Dispatches make no mention of ill-treatment by the bandits.

The agent is appealing to the rural population to plant more acreage in grain crops, to utilize the land during ordinarily idle months, and at the same time at a profit to the farmer. There is an estimated acreage in grain in the county now of from 12,000 to 15,000 acres, with this amount being increased as the cotton crop is being taken from the land.

WORK IN COUNTY TO BE RESUMED WITH STATE AID

FEDERAL AID ALSO TO BE AVAILABLE IN 30 DAYS OFFICIALS PROMISE

The temporary injunction granted recently to Attorney General Dan Moody, restraining the state highway commission from further procedure in the construction program on highways over the state, was dissolved by Judge George C. Calhoun of the 53rd district court at Austin, today, according to advices received by the Daily Journal from L. A. Howard and W. F. Schenck, Lubbock attorneys who filed an intervention measure in the hearing for the county commissioners court.

Federal Aid Promised
The dispatch also states that federal aid on all the projects in this county has been promised to be made available within thirty days, and that the highway commission will resume maintenance work on Lubbock county highways affected by the construction program, on which very little maintenance has been done since the contract on the Mazon road was awarded.

Plans and specifications on the five projects in this county, a total of over $2 million, have been finished, and on the four latter projects, bids on which are approved, both by state and federal departments.

The dispatch is interpreted to mean that the contract on the Mazon road construction project now will be shared in alike by county, state and federal departments. Bids on which are to be received by the commissioners court here January 12, just what will be the disposition of the contract, however, county officials would not say, pending receipt of more definite information. On this project the courts were authorized to proceed with awarding of the contract provided the county paid all the contract except $500, and the state and federal department was to enter the negotiations on the surfacing contract. Present contracts are only for grade and drainage structures.

Resume Maintenance
Regarding resumption of maintenance on state designated highways in the county, it was said that this will be started at once. Practically all maintenance work was stopped some time ago when the state department considered it a waste of money to maintain the highways in a condition with a construction program either contracted for or planned. The highways have depreciated materially during this time, but it is understood that maintenance will be resumed soon.

Messrs. Howard and Schenck, who intervened in the injunction proceedings for the county, will leave Austin on the return home, tonight, the dispatch stated.

Here's One Queen Who Won't Visit U. S.

A new portrait study of her majesty, Queen Ena, of Spain.

BY FRANCES LOVELL-OLDHAM
NEA Service Special Correspondent
LONDON, Jan. 2.—King Alfonso XIII and Queen Ena of Spain are not coming next year on a visit to the United States nor to South America or Cuba. This is semi-official, for the Official Spokeswoman herself told me.

Spain hasn't recognized any Official Spokeswoman for the Queen but she was here recently on a visit with the queen just the same. I met her. It happened to be in the London shop of Paul Carel, Paris and London couturier. The business was handled and the Queen by two Russian aristocrats—Princess Lubanov and Lady Lubanov, widow of a famous British ambassador. As children they were brought up with royalties. They know most the crowned heads and their kinsmen by their Christian names. And they number them among their customers. Which is why I saw the queen of Spain there that day. She was on a holiday in England, her native country, she being a granddaughter of Queen Victoria and cousin of King George.

Princess Lubanov presented me.

"Oh, yes," said the queen smilingly. "I remember you as the little American girl friend of the princess whom I met here last year when we were both dress-making."

The queen paused for a chat.

"Frances and I were discussing the Roumanian queen's recent trip in America," said the princess. "I think she did not offer a visit. But at the mention of her cousin's recent hectic progress through the United States, her big blue eyes took on an expression of very hard and very earnest disappointment. The pretty lips tightened. The fair eyebrows leveled. It was very eloquent. It said 'more than is my husband's favorite. Every time he wanted me to be really smart, Alfonso would say:

"My dear, put on that London dress. It suits you as my queen."

She Knows Clothes
Her majesty was dressed that day in one of her favorite colors, violet, with a gorgeous squirrel coat. I saw her choose a beautiful evening gown of sequins in aqua marine and turquoise blue. It was cut with a square front neck and a deep V back.

The next day I saw her again. She was wearing a wine-colored felt hat, milk coat and smart gray suit. She bought a black velvet coat with heavier fur collar and cuffs. It was tightly fitting and had the new blouse back. She chose an evening wrap of aqua marine blue, with gold threads, and trimmed with pearl-gray fox. It was lined with a pair blue.

Her majesty loves colors and, in particular, loves mauves, blues and violets, which suit her blue eyes, delicate fair skin and golden hair to perfection.

One of the new hats she bought was of black velvet, softly draped. It had little gray birds around it, between the velvet crown and the felt brim. Another was of a rose-copper color made of clipped felt with a tiny gold ornament on one side and one in the matching shade on the other.

This evening gown, made of sequins in aqua marine and turquoise blue, was one of the selections of the Queen of Spain.

IF CENSORS OF MOVIES JUST WOULD USE TASTE

In a certain popular book, the author has drawn an amusing sketch of a man on the board of movie censors in a certain state.

"Now, as I live in that particular state, I often have occasion to wonder if all his brethren on the board aren't cut from the same pattern, their interest in the uncensored pictures exceeding their wisdom in censorship."

My idea of the pernicious play evidently does not coincide with theirs, and in the last few months I have begun to understand the affinity of the small-salicy god for a nice, large ripe tomato. Had the entire board of censors been strung across the stage one night recently, I could not have answered for my aim.

The completely ruined play was a well-known classic. It featured two highly gifted stars of the cinema who could have lifted a story from the "Police Gazette" out of the gutter. The plot was tragic, dramatic and strong. I went thrilled with anticipation.

In about fifteen minutes I began to wonder what it was all about. Sudden shiftings of scene with no explanation of the transition. It was incoherent and silly. What I figured out finally was that the censors had cut all scenes with love making, and in doing so had incidentally cut out the vital organs of the play.

The manager of that particular place usually comes and asks me what I think of a show. "You should give refunds to everybody who saw this one," said I. "It's only a waste of time to come in."

"I know," he apologized. "But, I can't help it. The samples they show us at the exchange are complete. It's the censors."

A few days ago I saw another movie that the censors had passed in its entirety.

Pernicious? Judge for yourself. It was a suave, polished, pleasant affair of a series of risque situations featuring six divorcees. The heroine, not a vamp, but a quiet wellbred woman of charm and refinement, figured in three.

No, a farce, not a comedy, not a rank blurb of vulgarity? A beautifully played affair with four clever stars.

10-CENT CAMPAIGN FUND
LAREDO, Texas, Jan. 3.—John A. Valls, district attorney, spent 10 cents to be re-elected, he reported to the secretary of state. Valls has been district attorney for years, and was unopposed at election. All he bought toward his reelection was five two-cent stamps.

U. S. Birdmen Are Facing Short Hop

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala, Jan. 3 (AP)—A short hop of 55 miles to San Jose, Guatemala, and then 100 miles to San Salvador are the next stages ahead of the U. S. army "good will" fliers.

The five amphibian planes came down on the flying fields here at 1:05 o'clock yesterday evening, completing the 283 miles from Salina Cruz, Mexico in 3 hours 55 minutes.

With the completion of the sixth leg, the fliers have put a little over 1,400 miles behind them in their 20,000 mile journey which began at San Antonio, Texas, December 21. Their route will take them down the west coast of South America, across Chile and Argentina to Buenos Aires and thence northward, to end at Washington, D. C.

ROAD PLANS ANNOUNCED

It consists of approximately 80,000 miles of the most important roads and comprises transcontinental routes east and west and air routes through routes north and south.

BASEBALL STARS READY TO FACE LANDIS

WEDNESDAY SET AS PROBE DATE BY SPORT CZAR

SOME OF PLAYERS ADMIT RISBERG'S CHARGES; NEW VERSION TOLD

(By Associated Press)
 CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—The baseball court of Commissioner K. M. Landis, former federal judge, is getting a crowded docket with a hearing of some of the most famous players in the game set for next Wednesday.

Invitations were sent today for Eddie Collins, Ray Schalk, Red Faber, Don Bush, Clarence Rowland and about thirty others, who were named in an affidavit given the commissioner Saturday night by Charles A. "Swede" Risberg. He told Landis that the Chicago White Sox, with whom he used to play, had filed a four game series September 2 and 3, 1917, so that Detroit would lay down in four games and give the Sox a better chance for the pennant. Landis set Wednesday as the date for further investigation.

Some Admit Charge
 Some of those Risberg named as contributing $45 each toward a present of about $1,100 for the Detroit players, admitted raising the pool but gave a different version of its circumstances.

Everybody knew, said Nemo Leibold, Sox outfielder at the time, that the Chicago team gave Detroit that money for leading Boston in three games, September 2 and 3, 1917, killing the Red Sox chances of winning the pennant from the White Sox. The Detroit pitchers were not hired to lay down for the Sox, he said.

Ray Schalk, the Sox new manager for 1917, admitted he gave his 245 and told the same story as Leibold.

Rowland Denies Story
 Rowland, who managed the White Sox that year and is now an American league umpire, denied any knowledge of the pool and was the first to welcome the invitation of Landis to face Risberg and his charges Wednesday.

Risberg's two hour recital Saturday night was confirmed by frequent nodder George "Buck" Weaver, who played third base for the Sox then. Weaver did not contribute his $45, Risberg said, but gave Oscar Vitt, Detroit outfielder, a hand bag. Weaver spoke up to verify this, and added that he made it in the form of a Christmas present.

The Boston version of the Detroit present by the White Sox was the basis of a direct question by Landis at the hearing Saturday night.

"When I first came into baseball," the commissioner said, "I heard the Sox had raised a pool to pay the Detroit pitchers to slough those best Boston. Was that the way of it?"

Risberg Affirms Story
 "No," Risberg. "I never heard of that. That money was collected by myself and Chick Gandil (Sox first baseman) and was for paying the Detroit pitchers to slough those two double headers to us at Chicago, Labor day and the Sunday before."

Rowland investigated the scheme and told me as we entered the dugout for the first game that everything was all fixed "during one of the games Eddie Dyer (Detroit short stop) booted one hit around and Eddie Collins said to me 'that's terrible work out there.'"

Bristling Battles of Bare Fist Days
 MY LIFE STORY
 Jack McAuliffe

Copyright, 1926, NEA Service, Inc.
 I suppose if I were a fancy writer I could draw word pictures that would thrill the blood and thrill the heart of a month's end of your romance. I might call it "Romance and color" but to me it was LIFE.

Blink pitched stealthily in the dead of night. Rich idlers, sons of the aristocracy of early New York and New England, dodging the brass buttons and his coats of the law to see me fight.

Bloody battles that lasted twenty, thirty, forty and fifty rounds! Men, real he-men with hearts of oak and muscles of steel, jabbing, blocking, covering, basing out with sudden spurts, backing away eagerly. Fights on dirty black barges under the summer sky.

Lines of Chatter
 When Bill Carrigan, new manager of the Boston Red Sox, voluntarily retired from the American League, it marked the passing of the last conversational catcher.

Twenty-one years ago when I broke into the American League a hot line of chatter was considered a most important asset of every catcher.

Few had the same line of stuff, but the object was the same, to keep the batter from concentrating.

Some of the old-timers made it a point to indulge in personalities, others resorted entirely to sarcasm, while the smarter backstops simply insisted on engaging the batter in conversation without much thought as to what they said in the rear. Well, I finally whipped everybody in our block but good old Paddy Garrity.

He was one of the best fighters I ever saw. Naturally good. My size, age and weight.

My fight with him was the first real big fight of my life. It is still vivid in my mind. We met one night under the corner lamp on North Second street.

Unfolding Sport Drama Of 1926

No Sport Was Immune from drastic upsets during the year 1926. It would be difficult to designate the biggest surprise, Dempsey's defeat by Tunney, Tilden's loss of the tennis title to Lacoste, Von Elm's victory over Bobby Jones, greatest of all golfers, or the fact that Willie Hoppe and Jake Schaefer were forced to bow to the superiority of European billiard stars. In all probability the loss of the heavyweight title by Jack Dempsey would be named the biggest upset of the year if put to a popular vote. Most of the experts regarded Tunney as a set-up for the champion.

Nineteen hundred and twenty-six has gone in history as America's golden year of golf. The Stars and Stripes were raised over the world's best stars in the international classic won by Bobby Jones—the British open.

Then followed another international triumph when Jess Sweetser made a gallant and nerve racking start to win the British amateur, the first time an American ever won it.

In America itself thrilling triumphs were warning the blood of every Yankee fan. Bobby Jones performed the almost unbelievable by winning the American open at Scioto with a score of 294. His card at the British open was 291.

George Von Elm sent a buzz of surprise echoing through locker rooms when he defeated Bobby Jones at Baltusrol, 2 and 1.

And for sensational play, look at the world's record match of 54 extra holes played between Gene Sarazen, the defending champion, and Macdonald Smith in the Metropolitan open.

Smith won and his average for seven rounds was 79.4-7 strokes per round. Best that for golf!

Mrs. G. H. Stetson of Philadelphia defeated Mrs. Wright D. Goss of Short Hill, N. J. for the women's national championship, 3 and 1, while little Dorothy Page of Madison, Wis., defeated Mrs. O. S. Hill of Kansas City, 3 and 2, to win the western title. Mrs. Stetson won the eastern crown. In the south Mrs. Marion Turple of New Orleans defeated Mrs. David Gant of Memphis, 5 and 3, and the Pacific coast crown now adorns the pretty brow of Mrs. Guy Wood of Spokane, who finished ahead of Mrs. Anne Wolferton of California.

Frank Dolp of Portland defeated Bob Stein of Seattle to take the western amateur, 6 and 5, while in the south Emmet Spicer of Memphis took the title by beating L. P. Jones of Memphis, 4 and 7.

Freddy Lampright, formerly of Cleveland and now of Tulane, staged a brilliant comeback to hold his intercollegiate title another year. He beat Paul Haviland of Yale, 7 and 5.

Walter Hagen, capped the western and eastern open with card of 279 and 275 and then he took the P. G. A. Macdonald Smith shot 283 to cap the Canadian open. Then he won the Metropolitan open from Sarazen in a great playoff that had the nation following the scores for 54 holes. Then he shot a 277 to take the Chicago open.

Walter Hagen inscribes his name in the Hall of Fame because he has conquered all his professional brothers for three straight years and his third P. G. A. triumph marks him the only major champion to survive a long list of the divisional heads who went into the ash heap.

While Sweetser gets international honors for his dazzling work in Britain.

Baseball was no exception to any other sport in 1926, the year being filled with decided upsets.

Pittsburgh and Washington, picked to repeat as pennant winners, early fell by the wayside and despite a belated effort in the home stretch were unable to come through.

St. Louis in the National league was the "piper" dope master of the season. Given only an outside chance to finish in front, the Cardinals came through to glorious victory and then climaxed the season by winning the "world" championship from the Yankees, favored to cop.

The New York Americans, less considered than the Cardinals, won the American league pennant because at least four clubs, all considered stronger, Washington, Philadelphia, Detroit and St. Louis, suffered a complete reversal of form.

Three winning streaks of 16, 11 and eight games enabled New York to take down the pennant. With the exception of those sustained streaks the Yanks played less than 500 ball on the season.

Rogers Hornsby, after leading the National league in batting for six consecutive years, saw his hope of equalling or bettering Cobb's record of nine in a row shattered when he slumped badly at the bat. The strain of leading St. Louis to a National league pennant undoubtedly handicapped his work at the plate.

Not to mention Babe Ruth in reviewing the year's activities in baseball would make the article incomplete. The Babe, after being counted out by most of the experts at the close of the 1925 campaign, got wise to himself, underwent six months of conditioning and had one of the best years of his career.

While the season itself was filled with surprises, the real explosion of the year as far as baseball is concerned, was confined to the football season. While the collegians were doing their stuff on the gridiron, major league managers were taking all the baseball play by severing relations with many of the outstanding stars of the game.

The resignation of Ty Cobb created the loudest noise, then came the retirement of Tris Speaker, the passing of Eddie Collins, the passing of George Sisler to be re-engaged as manager of the St. Louis Browns, and the release of Lee Fohl, Bill McKechnie and Art Fletcher.

Of the new men appointed to succeed the seven major managers who lost their jobs, the coming of only one occasions much comment. The Boston Red Sox made a ten-strike by luring Bill Carrigan back into the game after he had been out of it for 10 years.

The element of uncertainty continues to hover over the baseball situation and there is no telling what may happen before the curtain is rung up on the 1927 season.

Carrigan's Style
 Bill Carrigan was such a catcher. His line of chatter was clean, very often complimentary and most of the time flavored with humor.

"That fellow Carrigan sends you away smiling—even when you take three through the heart of the plate," is the way I once heard an opposing batsman put it.

While Carrigan rambled on through most of the game, he reserved his best stuff for the pinch. It was with a couple of men on and a base hit badly needed that Bill went into high.

If the player up in a pinch happened to be some minor league star who came to the majors with a fat batting average, Carrigan would immediately start to tell him that he understood the pitching in the league he came from was practically as good as the majors.

He would appear to his vanity and before he knew it, Carrigan's pitcher would have a couple of strikes on him, while he was courteously replying to Bill's queries.

Riding of Felch
 In the days of Carrigan, the Boston sub reclining on the bench all perked up when Nap Felch of the Chicago White Sox came to the bat.

Hap was a rather sensitive fellow, didn't relish being "ridden," and for that reason the bench subs never overlooked him. When he came up several remarks that always got under Felch's skin would immediately float plateward from the bench.

That would start Felch arguing with the Boston players not in the game. Carrigan would add fuel to the flames by agreeing with Felch, telling him those "bushers," not even in the game, had plenty of nerve "riding" a star like him.

Incidentally he might look toward the Boston bench and in an authoritative manner order the yelling out. In all probability that was the sign to keep it up.

Out On Two Strikes
 Well, do I recall a game in which "Dutch" Leonard sneaked over a first strike on Felch that he never knew was pitched, as later events proved.

The second pitch, which Leonard also delivered with little or no warning, Felch just did see. He took a belated swing, missing the ball a foot.

On the next pitch, he didn't get his bat off his shoulder, so interested was he in the conversation that he was carrying on with the Red Sox.

When the umpire yelled, "Strike three," Felch let up a roar that could be heard miles away. It wasn't a kick on the umpire's judgment; he simply wanted to know since when a batter got only two strikes, and he meant it.

Yes sir! Besides being a great catcher, Bill Carrigan was a most affable conversationalist. He kidded each and every batter and made him like it.

HUGGINS SAYS YANKS HAVE GOOD CHANCE TO WIN
 By NEA Service
 NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Miller Huggins just before his departure for the south, was queried as to the chances for the Yankees to repeat in the American league.

Being manager of the Yanks, it was thought that he should be in a better position than anyone else to comment on the strength and weakness of his club.

"Sure, we have a chance, a mighty good one, provided I am able to strengthen our front here and there. My greatest worry is the catching department," he said.

It is apparent that Huggins is wise to one of the weaknesses of the Yankees, while the latter was holding up a poor bunch of catchers.

Pat Collins, despite the fact that he went for a couple of months, is just a good minor league catcher, Hank Severoid is a veteran who is about through, Benny Bengough, the closer of the staff suffered all year from a bad arm.

Less Love, More War to Feature Pictures
 HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Jan. 3.—(P)—Love clinches for the final fade-out will be fewer in next year's crop of motion picture films.

What's more the sheiks and shebas are going to have a hard tussle to hold their place through the season, while the comedy crowd works at premium figures and war and costume pictures are given the right of way.

That is how John McCormick, west coast coast production chief, lines up the program at First National studios. Natural endings, he says, are the new rule.

"Perhaps the year's generous importation of foreign indie pictures had something to do with it," McCormick explains. "Europeans have been accustomed to logical developments—whether happy or tragic—in their literature for hundreds of years and naturally demand it on the screen. Americans, however, like the lighter, less natural, trend for stories; but now they are getting the old world idea: It means more natural pictures for next year."

Wellington C. Of C. Names Its Officers
 WELLINGTON, Texas, Jan. 3.—The Wellington Chamber of Commerce luncheon club at its meeting Wednesday elected the following officers for 1927:

A. F. McDonald, president, W. W. Fletcher, secretary.

As a part of its work for 1927 the luncheon club will endeavor to secure for Wellington the establishment of a wholesale grocery house; a cotton oil mill; the designation of the highway from Wellington to Memphis and Turkey; a new railroad, an extension of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railway, and a closer relationship between the people of the city and the rural communities.

Robbery Suspect Taken To Houston
 FORT WORTH, Jan. 3.—(P)—City Detective Percy Heard of Houston, who killed Frank Pierce, Fort Worth man, while the latter was holding up a drug store at Houston December 17, today returned to Houston with Charles Hunton, 23, accused as Pierce's companion in a series of hold ups.

Hunton, also known as Hutton, is a drummer and admitted to police here after his arrest Saturday that he had been "on parties" with Pierce at Houston the night five stores were held up and Pierce was slain.

Sensational Feats Of Locke, Nebraska's Great Sprinter Big Event In College Sport

The year 1926 was another notable one in track and field athletics. While not quite so sensational as the year previous when Faavo Nurmi made his American invasion and Dehart Hubbard smashed all existing records for the running broad jump, still many high class achievements were tabulated.

The coming to this country of Charles Hoff, Norway's great pole vaulter, caused quite a furore in American ranks. Hoff's tour was more or less successful until he ran into trouble with the A. A. U. He failed to better his world record made in the old country, however.

In the two big outdoor intercollegiate meets—the Western Conference and the I. C. 4 A., staged in the east-Michigan and Southern California repeated their successes of 1925. Neither encountered much difficulty in leading their respective fields.

The national collegiates brought out the usual galaxy of stars from various sections of the country, though no startling performances were recorded. The came may be said virtually about the Penn relays, the Drake relays, the Ohio relays and several other annual classics of such nature.

If the work of any one individual stood out above the rest of the year, that personage was Roland Locke, Nebraska's phenomenal sprinter. Locke ran the 100 and 220-yard dashes in record time on several occasions. More than once his race were run under adverse conditions. He was without doubt the leading sprint man of the collegiate campaign and the most consistent.

Charles Borah of Southern California gave a good account of himself as a freshman at the Trojan institution and seems certain to develop into one of the best dash men the college ranks have produced in quite a stretch.

Many other promising athletes were uncovered during the season and with more experience should hang up real reputations before they bid farewell to collegiate athletics.

The year saw the passing of a long list of stars who have been in the spotlight for the last two or three campaigns. For instance, Roland Locke, the "Nebraska Cyclone," finished as a collegian, as did also George Guthrie, Ohio State's great hurdler; Leighton Dye and Bud Houser of Southern California; McInnis, Wisconsin, and a host of others.

THE FRONTIER STILL LIVES

Our foreign friends have two pictures of America. One is of an America which is all New York, clutter and uproar and high buildings, and modern efficiency and convenience.
And light and heat and even food comes forth. A land of ease and cream and silk.

The other picture is of the stuff that wild west novels were made of—a land of wild forests and tomahawking redskins, of wild animals and log cabins and deep snows and hardship of all sorts.

We laugh at the foreigners for this latter picture, but we ourselves are sometimes as laughable for assuming their first picture to be rather true of America as a whole. Partly they will grab a newspaper left behind by some scurrying commuter and will turn to the want-ads. They will scan
these, but they will not move.

After a while a couple will go out and beg the price of coffee and come back waiting trains. They are hiding from the cold. Partly they
will grab a newspaper left behind by
some scurrying commuter and will turn to the want-ads. They will scan
these, but they will not move.

Not in the movies. But in America in real life.

EAT YOUR BUNK AND LAUGH!
Not long ago the publishers of a cer-facts about himself and his life. "Make it interesting," they requested.

WHEN YOUTH GROWS OLD
We are appalled of the observation of Thomas Edison that youth is not going to the dogs after all. In an interview the other day, the famous inventor and scientist expressed great hope in the young generation in America. The youth of today has better morals than father or grandfather had, and a great deal better than the ancestors farther back than that, he says.

IN NEW YORK
SEE-SAWING
and BROADWAY

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—This Christmas season scene struck me as typical of Manhattan perhaps because of its subterranean setting.

For several days, as I played with the rest of the human ants through the clicking, whirling turstiles of the subway, I had noticed a languid group of workmen fixing a Christmas tree in the waiting room of one of
the railroad stations.

Now there is nothing quite so impersonal as a railroad station. Perhaps the good folk of Hantown Centers did find a certain social aspect in the depot, but even there the strange traveling men bring a Christmas tree in the waiting room of one of
the railroad stations.

Meanwhile in the great, warm vestibules men sit by the hour. Here is heat without cost. There is no mystery about these men. They are back waiting trains. They are hiding from the cold. Partly they
will grab a newspaper left behind by
some scurrying commuter and will turn to the want-ads. They will scan
these, but they will not move.

The crowds kept up a continuous purr of other side of the tree, giving it not the slightest attention. They were too busy eating trains. Perhaps he felt it incumbent upon him?
self to place two men who would fly in perfect harmony. This, according to the war department, was one of the most difficult problems he had to solve.

But he made his selections with care and to date all reports indicate that the teams are working without a discordant note.

In emergencies there are often as many separate schools of thought as there are men in the plane.

And so it is! —GILBERT SWAN.

AVIATION ALSO HAS BACK-SEAT DRIVERS SAYS LEAD-ER PAN-AMERICAN FLIGHT

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Motoring has its back-seat drivers and so has aviation.

Imagine yourself looping the loop or fighting your way out of a tail spin while your wife—or husband—yells frenzied advice in your ear!

Not a word is said about what happened to the tricksters who planned to sell a tin star and a fraudulent "diploma" to an ignorant but aspiring kid!

Major Dargue, according to his brother officers, is something of a psychologist.

But if that sort of thing wears on a man's nerves day after day, say for months, as it might have done in the Pan-American flight, it is likely to end in a royal row and perhaps even a fire fight.

Major Dargue felt that a "blowup"
along the line of flight might be disastrous. Army and navy fliers on their various record flights have in the past avoided such friction among themselves, insofar as is known.

Six years ago a navy balloon blew northward as far as Mattice, somewhere near Hudson Bay, with three naval officers, Hinton, Farrell and Kisor. After they had been rescued, one man's frazzled nerves gave way under pressure and he attacked one of his comrades.

Maybe it would serve the purpose to abolish the war and navy departments and just appoint Colonel Mitchell—

SAINT AND SINNER

BY ANNE AUSTIN COPYRIGHT 1926 NEA

After the coroner had failed to break down Cherry's story in even a minor point, a dozen witnesses were examined in rapid succession.

The servants had nothing of importance to tell, or, if they had, they did not tell it. Their examination was a matter of form, and disposed of as rapidly as possible.

Cherry and her new husband were taken by Farrell and Boyle, in plain clothes, to a downtown restaurant, while Faith and her father and Bob followed in Bob's car.

"The things we've got to face," Bob told Faith and her father, when their orders had been given, "is that circumstances are against Cherry. Her testimony makes it absurd to suspect Wiley."

"But his car was within a few feet of the place where you saw those peculiar footprints," Faith cut in eagerly. "Cherry testified, and the testimony of the officers corroborate her, that Chris parked his car within a few feet of the porte cochere, which starts just past Mr. Cluny's bedroom window. His car must have been right by that terrace before the window."

"But he couldn't possibly have gotten out of the car, climbed up the pillars of the porte cochere, leaped to the drain-pipe, climbed to the window and got the vase and killed Uncle Ralph while Cherry was speeding down the stairs. Besides, he had no motive—none in the world. That is, if Cherry is telling the truth," he lapsed into heavy-eyed brooding.

"He did have a motive," Faith whispered, with an anxious look about her. "If Cherry ever told him about Mr. Cluny's will—"

"His will! Good Lord! I'd forgotten all about that!" Bob whistled. "Just what were the terms of that will? Did Cherry tell you?"

"Only what I told you before," Faith leaned closer to him across the table. "Dad knows about it—Cherry told him, to prove how generous your uncle was."

"She'll never touch a penny of his money!" Jim Lane struck the table sharply. "Money! Money! I wish to God she'd never met a rich man in her life!"

"He was Bob's uncle, Dad, and he loved Cherry. He thought only of making her happy. He knew he was old and he drafted a will weeks ago, a temporary will, just in case anything happened to him. I imagine he left her at least a hundred thousand dollars."

"A hundred thousand! Uncle Ralph was worth at least three millions, and I know he was sore at his children for the way they had opposed his marriage. I believe he would have left them the minimum that would have kept them from contesting the will. I'll wager that will leaves her a million, at least. But what has that got to do with Wiley?" Bob demanded.

"Don't you see?" Faith frowned at his density. "If he were planning to marry Cherry, as we know he was, and if he knew about that will, he might be tempted beyond his strength—and kill Mr. Cluny on the impulse of the moment, to secure the money for Cherry, and consequently for himself."

Bob shook his head. "I don't believe Cherry would have been foolish enough to tell him or that Cherry would have stuck his head into the noose, with no more motive than that. No, Faith, I believe it's a bigger mystery than that. I don't believe Chris Wiley killed him."

A Baby Is to Be Born

D-DIET

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine.

If a woman is in good health and in the early months of the process of childbirth, there is no reason why her diet should be changed. It must be made sure, however, that it contains a sufficient amount of food for her activities and enough of the important body-building substances to meet both her needs and those of the child.

Meat, fish, fowl and eggs are almost wholly protein in character. These substances have great structural value, but they also tend to throw special burdens on the kidneys. If the physician is anxious to avoid the possibility of such a strain, he will limit the amount of protein substances that the expectant mother should have, telling her that she should not eat more than four ounces of meat, fish, fowl or eggs in any one day, or more than four ounces of any combination.

Protein Substitutes

Sugars and starches, such as make up the bulk of rice, potatoes and bread, take the place of protein, but have the disadvantage of causing acid unless they are properly prepared.

Rich pastries and foods fried in deep fats are sometimes indigestible. On the other hand, well cooked cereals, vegetables and salads, with milk, cream and butter may form the basis of any substantial diet. Fruits supply vitamins, aid digestion, and are attractive.

During the early months when the mother may be nauseated, she can take a cup of hot coffee with two crackers, or some dry toast before getting out of bed, indeed, without lifting her head from the pillow. If this movement makes her dizzy or gives her a headache.

After this meal, she remains in bed for an hour and then gets up for breakfast. An irritable stomach will tolerate a dry meal when liquids will provoke vomiting. The liquid secreted should therefore be largely dry during the breakfast period. Liquids may be taken freely between meals, and cold liquids are better tolerated than warm.

In extreme cases the physician will withdraw all food for twenty-four hours or more, and will modify the diet to meet the physical condition of the patient as determined by his examination.

Effect on Child

There has been much argument both among physicians and the public as to whether it is possible to restrict the size of the child by cutting down the mother's diet. Even the most careful investigations have failed to establish the possibility that the child's size may be greatly restricted through such measures.

On the other hand, both the mother and the child require certain amounts of specific food substances if they are to remain healthful and strong.

Operations Are Noted "After studying their movements for some time, we discovered that they operated in a rectangle which roughly is shown on this chart, extending approximately 400 miles off shore, but leaving a gap of about a hundred miles south of them between the bottom of the rectangle and the coast of Spain, and also a gap to the eastward near the coast of France. They had selected the crossing of trade routes in the Bay of Biscay, the east westward ships to the coast of France and the north and south bound routes to Gibraltar and the Azores, and in the beginning of the war they had decided to occupy that rectangle.

Three Routes Given "Our method was to meet the convoys 500 miles off shore with our destroyers. The destroyers, before leaving Brest, were given three routes, A, B, and C. A being the best route. That generally was to the southward of this rectangle. Then up to the northward would be B and C through the rectangle.

AUSTIN, Jan. 3.—(AP)—Willie Geise, charged with the murder of Charles Engler near here, August 8 or 9, 1925, was granted writ of habeas corpus and ordered released today by criminal District Judge J. R. Hamilton.

Complaints Are Filed Shortly after he had been freed from custody by habeas corpus, three complaints charging Willie Geise with the triple murder were sent to the Travis county grand jury now in session. Justice of the Peace Frank Tannehill announced.

The complaints charging Geise with the triple murder were signed, respectively, by E. L. Young, R. D. Thorpe and J. McClain. Young is a special officer, Thorpe a city finger print man, and McClain a city detective.

Judge J. R. Hamilton announced "this is not a picture gallery and no pictures can be taken."

The application, read by Polk Shelton, charged that Geise was illegally confined. The state answered that a complaint had been filed against Geise before his arrest.

Pistol Ownership Stressed District Attorney J. D. Moore stressed Geise's alleged ownership of a pistol upon which the state will partly hinge its case.

Defense Raps Arrest W. D. Hart, one of Geise's attorneys, asserted that Geise was "arrested in his field and taken to the bottoms of Onion creek. That, called for an investigation."

Hart declared two separate juries questioned Geise and examined his pistol and exonerated him. He asserted that Geise has a perfect "alibi."
