Fire Department Gets Air Force Foam Truck

The Mayor, the city manager, and the Snyder fire chief met at the central fire station Thursday afternoon to inspect the newest addition to the Snyder fire department.

The new arrival is a sophisticated foam truck, acquired from the U. S. Air Force for the astounding sum of $1680. According to local fire chief, Alfred Kohl, the new truck should greatly enhance the fire fighting capabilities of the local department. The chief believes that the new equipment will prove most valuable in combating tank battery and other types of oilfield fires.

This truck began its life as an Air Force Crash truck in 1974. It was completly refurbished by Air Force crews in 1978. The city was notified of the avalibility of two of these trucks last week and Kohl traveled to Holloman AFB in New Mexico over the weekend and inspected the machines. The City of Snyder was fortunate enough to acquire the best of the two units. According to local personnel, the truck needs only minor routine maintenence to be ready for service.

This highly capable machine boasts three remote control nozzles, mounted on the front of the cab, and two hand lines on each side of the body. Equipment on the truck can deliver foam, water, and dry powder at ranges of up to 100 feet from the truck.

One of the greatest advantages to this machine is that one person can control all of its functions from the driver's seat. In many instances, the driver will never have to leave the cab. This feature will greatly reduce the possibilities of injury to fire fighters.

This giant truck, dwarfing the other equipment in the arsenal of the Snyder fire department, should prove to be a valuable asset to the local department. At the price City Manager John Gale quotes, it should qualify as the buy of the year for the City of Snyder.

Keeping tab on our neighbors:

Jerry Tidwell of the Hood County News says a Congressman sent a letter to folks back in his district a couple of years ago that portrays some of the insane things that happen in government.

"The proposition is that Santa Claus is probably in violation of a staggering list of federal regulations and the popular North Pole resident probably should hire a lawyer.

"We are concerned that our annual visit from Santa Claus may be delayed because of his failure to fill out the necessary forms. The only hope is that Santa will use his powers to cut through the endless government red tape."

The violations include:

—No certification of Santa's sleigh by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

—No seat belts and no emission control devices for the reindeer.

—No Interstate Commerce Commission permit assigning Santa to a certified route.

—The possibility of unfair competition with the U. S. Postal Service with unauthorized mail deliveries.

—Violations of the Sherman Antitrust Act for maintaining a strict monopoly in the field.

—The Department of Labor is trying to determine if the elves are receiving the minimum wage or being paid proper overtime.

—The possibility that Rudolph is being fed an unauthorized drug to make his nose light up.

—A current audit of Santa's income tax return to determine whether he is declaring as taxable income the tons of cookies and gallons of milk left for him under Christmas trees.

—Lack of an environmental impact study regarding disposal of Christmas trees.

—No economic impact study relating to the empty wallets of many a mom and dad.

Ash Exposure Could Be Bad

CHICAGO (AP) — Loggers and farmers repeatedly exposed to airborne ash particles from the eruptions of Mount St. Helens could develop silicosis, a chronic lung disease, a new report says.

Dr. Peter Baxter of the national Centers for Disease Control, one of the authors of the report published in today's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, said thousands of workers in Washington state face the health hazard. The report says outdoor workers should wear face masks to avoid the lung-scarring disease.

Ask Us

Q.—Why are so many lights missing from the Christmas decorations downtown?

A.—For some reason, it has been difficult this year to get replacements for burned out lights, say Chamber of Commerce officials. They were not available at all from a Lubbock supplier. So, an order was placed with a New Jersey firm. Only half of the order was shipped before the decorations were put up, despite the fact that they were ordered two months ahead, the earliest ever. Bill Warner, chamber manager, says they hope the remainder of the order will arrive within the coming week.

Nation's Jobless Rate Hits Six Year High For November

WASHINGTON (AP) — The unemployment rate surged to a six-year high of 8.4 percent in November, the government said today, as layoffs triggered by recession dimmed prospects for a bright holiday season.

The Labor Department said the number of unemployed Americans jumped by 484,000 during the last month to 9 million, while the number of people holding jobs declined by 190,000.

That propelled the unemployment rate from 8 percent in October to its highest level since October 1975, when the economy was beginning to struggle back from its worst recession since the Great Depression.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the administration had anticipated the increase in the jobless rate.

"This is the price you have to pay for bringing down inflation," he said. "We feel that the proper measures are in place to put the economy back on the track and that unemployment will begin to abate sometime next year."

Janet Norwood, commissioner of the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics, told the congressional Joint Economic Committee today that "the economic downturn is widespread," and the labor market is behaving the same way it has in earlier recessions.

The 9 million people out of work is the highest since 1939, according to Labor Department figures, but the severity of the current problem is nowhere near as great because the population and labor force are so much larger now. At the depth of the 1974-75 recession, 8.4 million people were out of work.

The latest rise in unemployment was particularly sharp among adult men, the government said.

Their jobless rate rose from 6.7 percent to 7.2 percent in November, just below the post-World War II high of 7.3 percent in May 1975.

Unemployment also remained extremely severe for teen-agers at 21.8 percent and for blacks, at a record 16.8 percent. For minority teen-agers, the jobless rate was 41.3 percent.

Private economic forecasters and officials in President Reagan's administration expect the current recession to send unemployment even higher, possibly to the postwar record of 9 percent.

Since July, the number of people who want to work but cannot find jobs has climbed by 1.5 million.

The number of people who held jobs in November stood at 98 million.

The government said 364,000 people lost their jobs during November, mainly because of layoffs. Unemployment also rose because there was a greater number of people looking for work but unable to find it.

As in the prior two months, unemployment increases were especially large for workers in blue-collar occupations because of declining orders for manufactured goods.

Layoffs among factory workers have retailers worried about a lackluster Christmas shopping season. As a result, stores are not hiring as many people to work the holiday season as in past years.

Friday update

Second Session Begins

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Negotiators from the United States and the Soviet Union opened a second full bargaining session today in talks aimed at reducing nuclear missiles in Europe.

Chauffeur-driven limousines carrying the U.S. delegation arrived at the Soviet mission shortly before 11 a.m. (5 a.m. EST). U.S. Delegate Paul H. Nitze smiled at reporters gathered at the main gate but refused to answer questions.

The two delegations agreed Monday to a news blackout on progress in the politically sensitive talks, which have been scheduled for Tuesdays and Fridays.

Soviet spokesman Vladimir Evdokuchin said there would be no statement issued after today's meeting. "The blackout remains in force for the moment," he said.

The negotiations are being closely watched in Western Europe, where NATO governments are facing intense domestic pressure to cancel a December 1979 decision to deploy 572 cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Europe starting in 1983.

Haig To Call Nuclear Talks

CASTRIES, St. Lucia (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. was expected to call today on the other members of the Organization of American States to join in a unified approach to counter leftist influence in Latin America.

U.S. diplomats said Haig's speech was revised Thursday to take into account a heated private discussion he held Wednesday night with Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto Brockman.

Haig told reporters he got no assurance from d'Escoto that Nicaragua's leftist government would stop its "interventionism in EL Salvador." And d'Escoto called the United States a "symbol of intervention" and said it was the "only American country to have made military intervention a custom."

Salim Refuses To Quit

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Tanzania's foreign minister Salim Ahmed Salim has refused to withdraw from the deadlocked race for U.N. secretary-general, and Security Council members indicated that they consider Austrian incumbent Kurt Waldheim is still a candidate despite his offer to step aside.

Ugandan Ambassador Olara Otunnu, the Security Council president for December, said Thursday he had asked both men "to step aside so we can consider other candidates, and Waldheim complied."

AT&T Seeks Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six months after the biggest telephone rate increase in history, the Bell System is seeking a new rate structure that would raise the cost of most interstate long-distance calls.

The rate request, filed Thursday with the Federal Communications Commission by American Telephone & Telegraph Co., calls for a total annual increase in revenues of $181.4 million — most of it from business customers.

Consumers would be assessed $34.1 million of the total, but the effect on individuals would vary widely. Depending on when and where the calls are places, consumers actually could reduce their interstate long-distance bills.

Faces New Questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard V. Allen, already under review for filing an inaccurate financial disclosure form, faces new questions about failing to list his consulting firm's clients despite an apparent legal requirement to do so.

When the White House national security adviser filed his government disclosure form in February, he did not include the names of any clients, even though federal law requires the listing of those he was "directly involved" with who paid at least $5,000 in the previous two years.

Allen has acknowledged that his firm, Potomac International Corp., had several clients who paid over $5,000, but he claims he was advised by the White House counsel's office that he did not have to list them because the fees were paid to the company, not to him.

At County Museum...

Santa Visit To Launch Christmas Happening

The arrival of Santa Claus at 1 p. m. Sunday will mark the opening of the Scurry County Museum's sixth annual Christmas Happening.

Activities will continue in the museum and on the Western Texas College campus until 5 p. m. There is no admission charge.

While youngsters visit with Santa Claus in the museum, older visitors may see demonstrations of Christmas card making and home decoration ideas or have their pictures taken in an old-fashioned Christmas setting. Sue Travis will be demonstrating home decoration ideas at 2 p. m., while Donna Holt and Donna Sullenger will present the Christmas card demonstrations throughout the afternoon. The photographers, Dr. Ed Barkowsky and Gerald Corkran, will also be at work from 1 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Christmas candies made by homemaking students at Ira High School will be available for sampling in the museum, and visitors can see a new traveling exhibit of photorgraphs from the National Park Service as well.

Candy-filled pinatas will become the center of attention just outside the museum at 2:15 p. m. when Robert Adams will invite youngsters to try their luck at breaking a pinata. Jerry Baird will be serving campfire coffee all afternoon, and Mickey Baird will be popping corn.

At 1:30 p. m., fifth grade students from Stanfield Elementary School will present a special adaptation of "A Christmas Carol" in the Fine Arts Theatre under the direction of Mrs. Ben Brock. Junior high school students will present "'Tis the Season" in the theatre at 2:45 p. m. Mrs. B. J. Dryden will direct their presentation.

Music of the season will be presented by WTC students directed by Jane Womack in the Fine Arts Theatre at 3:45 p. m.

Planetarium shows are scheduled at 2 p. m., 3 p. m. and 4 p. m.

More than 700 visitors attended last year's Christmas Happening, the largest attendance since the project was begun.

"We appreciate all the community residents who give their time to help us make the Christmas Happening an afternoon of family enjoyment," said Sharon Sutton, museum director. "We invite everyone to come out and see the Christmas decorations and just spend a pleasant afternoon. It's our gift to the community, and our way of saying Merry Christmas."

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS—Donna Holt and Donna Sullenger will demonstrate the making of simple Christmas cards during the Scurry County Museum's Christmas Happening Sunday afternoon. Their booth will be in the multi-purpose room of the museum, and they will provide the supplies needed to get aspiring artists started. Sue Travis will demonstrate the making of home decorations in the museum at 2 p. m.

Man Accused Of Murder Returned To Jail Cell

DAINGERFIELD, Texas (AP) — A former high school math teacher accused of gunning down five worshippers during a Sunday church service last year was returned to jail after being found competent to stand trial, authorities said.

Officials said Alvin Lee King III, who is charged with murder in the deaths of five people and attempted murder in the wounding of 10 others, was transferred from a mental health facility to Morris County jail Thursday under maximum security.

"The feelings around here are still running pretty high," said Sheriff Joe Skipper. "We're not taking any chances."

King was turned over to Morris County officials here after a team of psychiatrists at Rusk State Hospital determined he is mentally competent to stand trial for the June 22 attack on worshippers at the First Baptist Church of Daingerfield.

"He doesn't really talk," Skipper said Thursday. "He just says 'yes' or 'no' to questions. He seemed meek as a lamb."

King is accused of bursting into the church, shouting, "This is war," and spraying the stunned congregation with gunfire.

Moments after the shooting, the heavily armed flak-jacketed man ran outside and shot himself in the head with a .22 caliber pistol, police said.

After recovering from his wound, King was confined at the mental hospital and underwent months of testing.

King's attorney, Percy Foreman of Houston, said Thursday he has hired a psychologist and two psychiatrists to review King's hospital records. He said he will wait for their report before deciding whether to oppose the competency finding.

"Part of the man's brain was shot away and that was given in previous reports as one reason why he was incompetent to stand trial," Foreman said. "That part of his brain is still shot away, but now they say he is competent. I want to see if that is scientifically sound."

Foreman has until Dec. 16 to request a competency hearing. If no hearing request is filed, State District Judge B.D. Moye can set a trial date.

Although rumors of threats against King have circulated in this Northeast Texas town of 2,800, Skipper says he doesn't expect anything to happen.

"This is a law-abiding town. We won't have any trouble," he said.

Father, Son Are Inmates

ROSHARON, Texas (AP) — Stanley Fletcher finally is getting to know his son Curtis, but only because what he feared would happen did the teenager ended up in prison.

The Fletchers are one of about 20 father-son combinations imprisoned by the Texas Department of Corrections. But TDC officials say that as far as they know, the only father and son sharing a cell are the Fletchers at the Ramsey One Unit.

"I had been hurting for the love of my kids for so long," the father said, recalling their reunion. "When I heard he had come in the back gate, my first impulse was to run up and hug him."

They shook hands.

When his son was 6, Fletcher was serving a 50-year prison sentence for two rape convictions. Ten years later, it was the son who was sentenced, to nine years in prison for using a shotgun in the robbery of a 23-year-old woman outside a Houston convenience store.

"I don't know of any others that share the same cell, but we do have at least one other father-son combination here," said David Moya, assistant warden at the Ramsey.

"Generally, it doesn't cause any great problems. In this case, it has worked out very well," Moya said.

TDC spokesman Guy Taylor said younger inmates normally are not put in cells with other prisoners.

"And not all fathers and sons are allowed to live in the same cell and work together. But in this case, the chance for the father to teach his son a trade appeared an excellent option for us," Taylor said.

Fletcher, 52, is teaching his son carpentry, and they hope to open a cabinet-making shop in Cleveland, Texas, when they get out of prison. The elder Fletcher probably will be paroled in May and his son is expected to leave prison two or three years later.

"We've spent a great many hours talking about the situation we're in, the things we've done, the things so bad that shouldn't have been done. And what we should do to better ourselves in the future," the elder Fletcher said.

One of the elder Fletcher's regrets is that he wasn't there when his six children were growing up.

"With their daddy in prison, I guess it was pretty hard for a woman to properly see that all six were attended to," Fletcher said, referring to his wife.

"If I had been there, I'm convinced not one of the boys would have strayed," he said. "It liked to drove me crazy the first four of five years I was down here. I was worrying myself sick they'd start fooling with alcohol or drugs and end up here. As it was, their mother wouldn't let me correspond with them. I was of no influence at all."

Stanley and Curtis Fletcher were first reunited last April when the teenager was bused in from the Clemens Unit in Brazoria for a visit at the Ramsey unit, about 30 miles south of Houston. From the start they wanted to share a cell, but the permanent reunion didn't take place for another six months, after the elder Fletcher's request for parole was denied again.

Before their first visit, neither knew what to expect.

"I had heard some stories that had been told about me to the kids," the elder Fletcher said. "I didn't know how he might feel. I figured we'd just have to iron it out."

His son said he didn't know his mother had hidden letters from his father. He said the family didn't talk about the father much.

"I wished a lot of times that he had been there," he said. "All I knew was that he was in prison. I didn't know if it was in Texas, Louisiana or where."

He said they shook hands and "ended up talking all night and half the next day ... What I found was that everything that was said about him is different from what I now know about him."

President Reagan has made a valiant effort to curtail welfare—including the much-abused "aid for dependent children."

Nonetheless, illegitimacy continues to escalate in both incidence and acceptability.

This year government will spend seven billion of your dollars rearing illegitimate children.

One in every six babies now born in the United States has unmarried parents. That's 597,000.

That is a 50 percent increase in 10 years.

If you limit statistics just to school-agers the numbers are more ominous:

Nearly one-third of the babies born to white teenagers are illegitimate.

Among black teenagers, 83 percent.

Though the number of abortions has increased dramatically, among unmarried teens there are still three live births for every five abortions. Partly because the social stigma isn't there anymore. On the contrary, pregnant girls are no longer expelled from most high schools.

Helen Warnock of the Salvation Army's maternity home outside Tulsa says, "Just a short time ago, getting pregnant when you weren't married was the worst mistake a 'nice girl' could make. Now having a baby is a kind of status symbol."

Jane Mavary of Alan Guttmacher Institute, specializing in family planning, recently told Time magazine that, "we live in a leisure-oriented society. We live in a world of tight jeans."

Captain Carol Bryant runs the Salvation Army's Booth Memorial Home for unwed mothers in Chicago. She sees girls 13 and 14, seeking to act older by emulating Brooke Shields, without making any logical connection between flirtation and intercourse and pregnancy..."

James Whitten of Harlem's Reality House, says, "For some girls, having an illegitimate baby is a sought-after sign of maturity."

A Johns Hopkins study indicates that half of America's teen-age girls engage in premarital sex resulting in pregnancies, abortions or illegitimate births.

On average, they have their first experience at 16. That's "on average;" many are as young as 11.

It has been argued by generations past that ideals are meant to be unattainable, like a moral alarm clock which we deliberately set too early. All of us then can cheat a little and grab, say, an extra hour's sleep.

But in this generation our moral clock has lost its hands and we are free at least to make up our own version of what time it is.

Yet, as a poet once wrote:

"We do not see the vital point, that 'tis the eighth most deadly sin...

"To wail, 'the joy is out of joint,' and not attempt to put it in."

To Twentieth Century Club...

Mrs. Bartels Presents 'Christmas Collectibles'

"Christmas Collectibles" was the topic of the December program for the Twentieth Century Club meeting at the Martha Ann Woman's Club. Mrs. B. J. Bartels, speaker, displayed many ornaments, figurines, and nativity scenes which she has collected through the years. On each trip she takes, she acquires at least one thing, usually typical of the Christmas customs in a paticular area.

Mrs. Bartels showed her unique array of tree decorations, which include bells, Santas, balls, etc., some made by methods no longer used and of materials no longer available. Angels of straw, olive wood, ceramic, and nativity scenes in all sizes came from all around the world. Sturdy ones are available for grandchildren to arrange, while more delicate porcelain and glass are reserved for the mantel.

Christmas cards can trace the history and development of a country. Mrs. Bartels told some of their history. Charles Dickens sent cards to his friends, beginning a custom which has grown ever since. Many card companies still use illustrations from Dickens' stories. In the United States, a collector of cards from the late 1800s until the 1980s might have the first showing of cars, trains, telephones, women's suffrage; the 1920s used roses and mistletoe; World War II had servicemen and patriotism; the 1960s had space exploration; the 1970s featured health; and the 1980s are back to a more traditional Christmas. Fine art by old masters and those signed by the artist make valuable collections.

Christmas plate collecting has grown into a big business, from its modest beginning with the Danish custom of presenting an honored guest with the plate from which he ate. In 1895, Denmark issued a porcelain plate limited edition which sold for 50¢. It is now valued at over $3,000. The big three were: 1985, Bing Grondahl; 1908, Royal Copehagen; and 1910, Rosenthal (German).

In the 1960s, many companies issued plates. Collecting has become so popular that there is now an Annual World Plate Collector's Fair.

Glass tree ornaments originated in Germany's Thuringin Forest (now in East Germany) in the 1920s. It developed into a cottage industry which was ended by the British blockade of 1840.

Toys, Christmas stamps, books, lights, trees, jewelry, candles; all of these can be interesting collectibles. Addresses of catalogues showing prices can be obtained.

Each member of the club shared at least one decoration or custom which has been a part of her family's Christmas for many years. In the business meeting, Mrs. Guy Stoker, president, outlined the MAWC Bazaar schedule with each member choosing a time to work. Mrs. Clyde Key was hostess to nine members.

Opening lead: ♥4

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Six spades is an excellent contract on today's hand. The auction was straightforward. After North supported spades at his second turn South checked for aces and kings. When North denied holding any kings South subsided in a small slam.

Opening leads against slams are a controversial issue. Whether to make aggressive leads from honors or passive leads from weak suits is the major point of contention.

The auction seemed to call for an opening heart lead and West brazenly led one away from his king-nine. Declarer won East's queen with his ace and drew trumps in three rounds.

At this point declarer had a choice of finesses, but had to guess right because of the opening lead. Without a heart lead declarer would have the time to take both minor suit finesses. If either wins, a 75 percent likelihood, the slam will make. However, a heart forces South to choose the winning finesse immediately.

With nothing to guide his choice of finesses, declarer took the best percentage play available. He cashed the ace-king of diamonds, and when the queen didn't fall singleton or doubleton, finessed the club successfully and pitched his heart loser.

Although West didn't show an immediate profit, he gave declarer the toughest defense.

Phyllis George shared this beauty tip with Beauty Digest magazine recently: "My mother beleived that soap and water was the best cleanser for little girls, and she was right. Now that I'm older, I've updated her advice. I use plain old cold cream as a cleanser, followed by rubbing alcohol to tighten my pores."

"Pathfiners"...

Seeks Answers To Well-Being

PATHFINDERS By Gail Sheehy. Morrow. 494 Pages. $15.95.

In 1976, Gail Sheehy published a book titled, "Passages," which described the predictable crises of adult life. Now, Ms. Sheehy, a journalist, has written a new book, "Pathfinders," which attempts to explain why some people overcome life's crises while others do not.

For her research, Ms. Sheehy developed a "Life History Questionnaire" which was completed by 60,000 people and was tabulated by a computer team at New York University. While Ms. Sheehy concedes that 60,000 does not constitute a statistician's random sample, she writes that "it greatly enlarges the data pool on which lifecycle theories have been drawn up to now."

From the questionnaire, Ms. Sheehy was able to compile a list of prospective interviewees — people who seemed to have a sense of well-being and who might be considered "pathfinders." For the interview, Ms. Sheehy traveled to 38 states, four Canadian provinces and three European countries.

The result is a 494-page book full of information, 15 pages of notes and sources and an extensive bibliography.

The persons Ms. Sheehy interviewed have striking life histories — and she comes up with a jarring piece of information about "baby givebacks" — a tiny, transcontinental baby adoption market for uppermiddle-class professionals who decide they cannot cope with a child, and who give back their offspring to carefully chosen counterparts who are eager for a child and who promise to provide the same kind of home.

The book also contains a "Life History Questionnaire" for those who wish to know approximately where they stand in the sense of overall wellbeing as compared with the 60,000 people surveyed for the book. Carol Deegan

Dear Abby

Widow Kicks Up Heels At Husband's Funeral

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Recently my husband attended the funeral of a fellow Legionnaire. (I was informed that my presence wasn't necessary.) Services were at 2 p.m., and afterward the relatives and members of the Legion met at the Legion Hall for a supper with the widow and her two teen-aged children, which was all well and good, but then they proceeded to dance!

I don't know how many other members of the funeral party were dancing, but I am told it looked like some kind of celebration! Well, as luck would have it, my 19-year-old daughter and her boyfriend just happened to drop by the hall at 11:30 p.m., and the first thing my daughter saw was her father dancing with the bereaved (?) widow!

Abby, is this something new, that people have so little respect for the dead that they would bury a spouse in the afternoon and dance the same evening?

I am no prude or saint, but I can't imagine anyone doing this. I am ashamed of my husband for being a party to this disgraceful scene.

Please give your deep-down "gut" feelings about this.

CONFUSED IN INDIANA

DEAR CONFUSED: On the face of it, it would seem most inappropriate for mourners to dance only hours after burying a loved one. Your husband is the only one who knows what really occurred and why. I suggest you ask him for an explanation.

DEAR ABBY: I think this women's lib thing has been carried too far. When I took my children (ages 2 and 3) to see Santa at our local department store, we found that "Santa" was a woman!

She was dressed in a regular Santa Claus outfit — only "Santa" had long dark hair hanging to her shoulders. And she wore lipstick and eye makeup, too. "Santa" spoke to the children in her normal feminine voice, making no effort whatsoever to come across as the jolly, bearded, white-haired old man the kids had expected to see.

The kids were confused and I was shocked. Abby, I'm all for employing women if they can do the job as well as men, but a lady Santa Claus! I think that was unreal.

What do you think?

HORRIFIED

DEAR HORRIFIED: Traditionally, "Santa" is not a lady's bag.

DEAR ABBY: We have a beloved family member (I'll call her "Aunt Letty") who poses a rather sticky problem for us all. She's widowed, no longer young, but she's spry and good company.

Aunt Letty is adored by us all, but when she is invited to dinner, she always brings at least one other person along — and very often two or three! She never rings up to ask, or even to tell us she's bringing someone — she just appears with her "guests." This, of course, creates problems with place settings and food portions for a planned dinner.

As a result, we have omitted Aunt Letty at times, but we always feel a touch guilty because she's such a dear. How is this best handled?

THE RELATIVES

DEAR RELATIVES: Lovingly, of course. But in the future when one invites Aunt Letty, she should be given a stern warning that she is not to bring anyone along without first consulting her hostess.

DEAR ABBY: What is the difference between a psychiatrist and a psychologist?

KANSAS CITY QUESTION

DEAR QUESTION: A psychiatrist is a medical doctor (physician) in addition to being trained to treat mental and emotional disorders. A psychologist is trained to treat mental and emotional problems, but is not a medical doctor.

Aging Leaders Hail Conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senior-citizen groups are hailing the recommendations of the White House Conference on Aging while calling for a Justice Department probe of allegations that the Reagan administration packed the event with partisans.

The accusations grew in intensity Thursday as the four-day conference ended with about 2,300 delegates and 1,200 official observers shouting overwhelming approval of nearly 600 recommendations drafted by 14 committees.

Among the proposals were maintaining current Social Security benefit levels; restoring the minimum Social Security benefit; ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment; expanding Medicaid and Medicare benefits; and instituting tax credits for home care for the elderly.

The approval is only tentative. Final results, based on a poll within a month to see how each participant feels on each recommendation, will be published in a conference report, which is due by next June.

Jack Ossofsky, chairman of the Leadership Council of Aging Organizations, a 25-group coalition, hailed the recommendations: "Our victory was overwhelming....Somehow or other the truth comes out."

Rep. Claude Pepper, the Florida Democrat who all week had battled and negotiated with conference leaders, called them "wonderful recommendations....Democracy has a way of rising to its proper height."

The $6 million conference began Monday amid complaints — denied by officials — that the committees were rigged with Reagan supporters to ensure that they would produce recommendations in line with administration policies.

On Thursday, dissidents said their allegations were substantiated by the appearance of documents that purportedly came from conference files but were not on conference stationery.

The documents, circulated by sources who asked not to be identified, purportedly listed delegate "whips" and "adversaries" and the overall number of "favorables" and "unfavorables" on each committee.

One of the documents was a Sept. 18 letter from Polly Sowell, deputy personnel director for Texas Gov. William P. Clements Jr., to Betty Heitman, co-chairman of the Republican National Committee.

The letter, which Mrs. Heitman acknowledged was authentic, contained a list of Texas delegates and the statement: "There are only four of them, marked with an asterisk, who would put loyalty to the president ahead of their commitment to the elderly and who would not take offense at the involvement of the Republican Party."

Mrs. Heitman, in a telephone interview from Baton Rouge, La., said she gave the letter and information from Republicans in other states to the conference staff to identify Reagan loyalists.

She said she sought the political intelligence because others had used "scare tactics with the delegates, telling them that the administration was going to destroy Social Security."

But Mrs. Heitman said, "I had nothing to do with stacking any committees."

Ossofsky called the documents "just unbelievable, absolutely a terrible disgrace....I want the attorney general to look into this."

Paul Kerschner, associate director of the National Retired Teachers Association-American Association of Retired Persons, said: "The documents that are being circulated around this convention today are full proof that this is a gray scam. This is watergate on the elderly....This is the smoking gun."

The aging-group leaders vowed to monitor closely the poiling of participants on the conference recommendations.

David Newhall III, chief of staff for Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker, denied the Reagan administration manipulated committee assignments or ran a "whip" operation to orchestrate committee votes.

"I would doubt very much that these documents have anything to do with either the administration or the (conference) staff," said Newhall. "The conference was not stacked. The outcome proves more clearly than my statement that it was not."

Newhall said he would check on the letter to Mrs. Heitman and stated that other documents "appeared to be stuff that was created once the conference was underway, not ahead of time."

The Republican National Committee was criticized two months ago for secretly polling 916 delegates. Newhall told a House committee in October that "overzealous operatives" conducted the poll and that he wouldn't touch the results "with a 10-foot pole."

He said Thursday that he was not familiar with what the RNC did but added, "I'm not convinced there's any great conspiracy here."

Panther Gets Most Votes

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The Florida panther may be singing "see ya later, alligator" in the state animal sweepstakes.

Most observers thought the alligator, or the popular manatee, also known as the sea cow, would top the list when the state's schoolchildren began casting ballots for the state animal.

But in early returns, announced Wednesday by state Rep. Bill Bankhead, the panther was No. 1 with 5,600 votes.

"It's surprising," the Jacksonville Republican said in a news release. "Most people assumed the manatee or alligator would be easy winners."

The Caribbean manatee trails with 3,900 votes with 16 of 67 counties reporting in the non-partisan election. The alligator has a slight lead on the Key deer for third.

Ballots listing those four candidates include a spot for write-ins, and sure enough the monkey, buzzard, dolphin, blue whale, tiger shark and baboon have been getting votes, Bankhead said.

County totals are due at the Department of Education by Dec. 11 and the final tally should be available by Jan. 1 — in time for Bankhead and the senate sponsor of a similar bill to amend legislation with the name of the winner.

Woman Kidnaps Baby From Distraught Mom

DALLAS (AP) — A woman who kidnapped a 3-week-old boy after promising the child's mother she would get gifts for the infant may have sold the baby, police say.

Authorities said Thursday that Linda Sample gave her son, Sarae O'Dale Sample, to a woman who said she would take him to a Salvation Army gift exchange program. The woman took the baby Monday and has not returned, police said.

The 32-year-old mother told police she met the kidnapper in October, a month before her child was born. They exchanged telephone numbers and talked about being pregnant, police said.

"It could be one of two things," said Dallas police investigator Jim Shivers. "She got conned into giving her baby to a lady who possibly is in the baby-selling business ... the other possibility is a frustrated mother situation. A woman has several miscarriages. She decides she wants a baby and goes and gets one."

Authorities said Ms. Sample could give police little information.

"She doesn't even know the woman's name," said Sgt. Jerry Huffman. "That's what is so bad about it. We just don't have much to go on."

Ms. Sample says she fears with woman may have planned the kidnapping in advance in order to sell the child.

"I'm afraid she wants to sell it or keep it for herself," Ms. Sample said Thursday. "If she plans to sell the baby then she had plenty of time to make preparations. She kept in contact with me. She really wanted my baby."

Ms. Sample said she met the woman in the parking lot of a grocery store. She said the woman told her about a gift exchange program for children.

"The woman said she was having a baby herself in March," Ms. Sample said. "She sounded so nice, and she said she could help me get gifts for my baby."

The Dallas mother said she threw the other woman's phone number away and soon forgot about the conversation until the woman called her Sunday to say the gifts were still available.

Ms. Sample said the woman came by her home about 9 a.m. Monday with diapers and formula. She was carrying a shopping bag containing a baby blanket and a lime-colored infant suit, police said.

The woman told the child's mother she could not come along because there would not be enough room in the car once other children had been picked up, authorities said.

"She said she could get gifts for my other baby, Sasheka, and for my sister Cynthia's three children," the distraught mother said. "She said she would come back in 30 minutes to work in the other kids."

When the woman did not return after six hours, Ms. Sample notified police.

Timber Places Tighten Security

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — In the millions of acres of timberland in East Texas are a handful of people at work stealing lumber of private and commercial concerns.

Statistics show that although only a few timber thieves are at work, their activities are costing timber businesses thousands of dollars a week.

The timber thief's tools are often sophisticated — walkie-talkies and citizen's band radios are employed to coordinate accomplices and to thwart security efforts.

Smaller operations incorporate a simplistic but successful scheme of diverting timber from its legitimate destination for an illegitimate profit to be pocketed tax-free. The small operation also may incorporate simple "timber rustling" or falsifying deeds to sell timber not owned by the salesman.

Timber industry executives explain that while strikes by timber thieves are few, the number of dollars lost in one theft is staggering. For example, a single timber load is worth $1,000 and 50 loads may be handled daily. If one load were taken each day of the year by one timber thief more than $250,000 would be lost.

Because the number of thieves are few, the number of contractors many and the amount of loads and sales great, discovering the illegal activity is tough. Often, the timber-stealing may go undetected long after the actual theft has occurred.

"If timber theft is as bad as some people say, we've either been very lucky or we've been living through ignorance," says Glenn Chancellor, vice president of land and timber for Temple-Eastex, the largest timber landholder in East Texas with more than 1 million acres in 22 counties.

"We've tried to set up as foolproof a system as we can. We use two different people to verify the logs coming in, a logging supervisor and an audit forester, who conducts random visits," Chancellor says, "It's just not a major problem for us right now, but that could mean that we don't know about it."

Another major timber company in the region, Kirby Forest Industries, has used similar security methods and one of those measures clued the company to a $100,000 ripoff that had been operating for more than seven months right before administrators' eyes.

John Wood, general manager for resources at Kirby, said a single thief has been responsible for stealing more than $100,000 worth of timber. A grand jury has indicted a suspect who is now awaiting a court appearance.

"He made one mistake ... he stayed on a big company too long. He should have stayed with the smaller businesses," Wood said, adding he suspects the thief has been stealing timber for 20 years. "It has not happened to Kirby on this scale before, but it has on a smaller scale of about one or two loads per week."

Kirby officials went through their contracts with loggers and log truck scale receipts to piece together the pattern of "diversion" theft, which involves a single contractor who enters a company's track to cut, haul and deliver the timber. The illegal contractor then diverts the load to another company that unknowingly accepts the wood and pays the contractor for the lumber as if it were his.

He also may get paid for cutting and hauling timber, which could be the second payment he has received for the same work as contracted by the original timber company.

"Ninety percent of our logging contractors are just as honest as they can be and that's a good percentage," Wood said.

But he added the case has caused his company to become "sensitized" to timber theft and has led to stricter administrative measures. Kirby also has discovered another suspected scheme involving false land deeds.

In such operations, Wood said, people file false deeds for timber land not their own, transfer the deed several times and eventually buy it back and sell the timber at the site. The many transfers of false deeds make it difficult for companies purchasing the stolen timber to detect the illegal activity when they research the land's ownership.

In some cases, the phony deed holder may enter into a contract with a company allowing them to enter the track and cut the timber, nearly making that company a party to the theft. While Wood says his company now conducts more intensive title searches in those cases, the "absentee landowner" often still does not know his land has been cleared of timber.

Predictions for the timber theft are mixed. Temple-Eastex's Chancellor says the current economic slump, which has curtailed the demand for building materials, is likely to cause larger industries to shy away from extending themselves by entering into contracts where timber theft is more likely to occur.

But the need of private citizens to survive during the financial pinch has Kirby's Wood saying "temptation" may get to the best of people, drawing them closer to illegal activities.

Without debate, say the two officials, is the move by companies to meet the timber thief head-on — before his saw meets tree bark, they hope.

As Chancellor suggests, his company is watching Kirby's case against the suspect carefully because it may determine the future of other such cases.

But despite the case's outcome, he said, his firm is not reluctant to boast, "We'll prosecute."

Texas Tech Student Sentenced To 20 Years

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A 20-year prison sentence has been given to a Texas Tech student accused of raping a woman and taking photographs of her during the attack.

Ronald Charles Pylant, 22, was sentenced Thursday, one day after a state District Court jury of eight men and four women convicted him of aggravated rape in the Sept. 15 assault near Lubbock International Aiport.

The victim, a 21-year-old Texas Tech student, testified that Pylant forced her at knifepoint to drive to a field. Then, in the back seat of the car, he raped her and took photographs during the assault, she said.

Pylant's lawyer, Floyd Holder, had argued Thursday for leniency for his client, who he described as a first offender who had been "hard working, ambitious, an Air Force veteran who took jobs on the side" while attending college.

"He has demonstrated he will be of some use to society," Holder said.

He said the rape victim "suffered no permanent physical disability."

"Save for the unusual aspect of the photos, it's hard to see a less aggravated offense on the scale of the case," the defense lawyer argued.

Holder, noting that penalities for rape can range from a five-year probated sentence to 99 years in prison or life imprisonment, said:

"Those people whose total life has affected people in a negative way are the ones the Legislature had in mind with the 99-to-life sentence ... This young man (Pylant) is clearly worth saving. He has touched some lives in a positive way."

During the trial, which was moved from Lubbock because of pre-trial publicity, Texas Tech senior William Benjamin Wofford testified that in the university library Sept. 29 he found photographs of the victim performing sex acts. Wofford said he found the photos above a hanging light fixture in a study room.

Given Week To Reconsider

NEW YORK (AP) — Black nationalist Fulani Sunni-Ali says officials have given her a week to reconsider her refusal to cooperate with a federal grand jury investigating the $1.6 million Brink's robbery attempt that left three people dead.

Mrs. Sunni-Ali, also known as Cynthia Boston, emerged Monday from a closed session of the grand jury and said she had refused to answer questions because the lawyer of her choice, Chokwe Lumumba, was barred from representing her. Lumumba and Mrs. Sunni-Ali are members of the separatist Republic of New Africa.

Mrs. Sunni-Ali said she was told to come before the grand jury again next Monday. Mrs. Sunni-Ali was arrested in the wake of the Oct. 20 robbery, but charges were dropped.

Rescue Teams Find Two Alive

BERGOO, W.Va. (AP) — Rescue teams early today found two survivors and one body and tried to establish contact with two other coal miners trapped a third of a mile underground when a ceiling fell in, authorities said.

One of the freed miners was treated and released from a hospital and the other suffered serious injury and was being treated in the mine, authorities said. The two who were freed said they had been separated from the other three in the accident Thursday night and were unable to contact them.

The body was found after the two were rescued and the name of the miner was not released, pending notice to relatives.

Miners used a large scoop shovel in an attempt to dig out their trapped fellow workers, said state police Sgt. Fred Dickinson. Special mine rescue teams and state mine inspectors were at the scene to assist in the effort, he said.

Miner Larry Clevenger, 18, of Webster Springs was brought out at about 4:20 a.m. after being trapped for about seven hours. Donzil Cutlip, 27, also of Webster Springs was reported freed about 15 minutes later, but Dickinson later said Cutlip "appeared to have serious injuries" and would not immediately be moved from the mine.

Clevenger was suffering "from minor shock" and was immediately taken to Webster Memorial Hospital at nearby Webster Springs, Dickinson said.

Rescue teams had been maintaining voice contact with Clevenger and Cutlip throughout the rescue efforts over a telephone system, Dickinson said.

They were among eight miners at work about 1,800 feet straight into a hill and 300 feet below the surface when the collapse occurred, Dickinson said. Officials said three of the miners got out immediately.

The mine is owned by the Elk River Sewell Coal Co., a non-union operation, said Webster County Sheriff Gary Payne, who answered a telephone at the company's Bergoo office.

Bergoo, a small community of 460 people, is located east of Webster Springs in mountainous Webster County, in the east-central part of West Virginia.

Fire Ant Plan To Be Launched

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas farmers and ranchers need the help of environmental groups in fighting the fast-spreading fire ant, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said Thursday.

Brown also urged Texans to write their congressmen and seek federal approval of pesticides that would be available at a lower cost. Present effective ant-killing liquids and dust cost up to $12 a pound.

"We are enlisting the support of environmental groups in this fight," he told a news conference. "If we are to control the imported fire ant in Texas effectively, we must look for alternatives in chemical controls."

He said the Environmental Protection Agency should be encouraged "to move faster on approval for Ferriamicide, a pesticide which shows promise at very low cost." He predicted it could be sold to farmers and homeowners for 29 cents a pound.

Amdro, which has been used by the Texas Department of Agriculture this year and will be used in aerial applications next spring, is non-toxic and biodegradable. The state obtained about 29,000 pounds for about $2.75 a pound but it will cost homeowners about $12 at stores.

Brown said the fire ants have spread across East Texas as far west as San Angelo "and they are heading for the Rio Grande Valley." About 40 million acres in 107 counties are affected.

The commissioner said 48 counties have already contracted with the state agriculture department for aerial or hand application of pesticides next spring at a cost of $4 per acre. The local cost will be $1 an acre, with the state paying another $1 and the federal government $2.

In addition to rural and suburban areas under contract, the department already has treatment contracts with Houston, Fort Worth, San Antonio and Corpus Christi.

South Dakota's Badlands are deep alluvial and volcanic ash deposits that have been carved into spectacular forms by millions of years of water and wind. Early pioneers feared and avoided the stark lanscape which draws tourists today.

Help for alcoholic's family

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read your column about the woman whose husband is an alcoholic. Perhaps Al-Anon can help her as you suggested, but sometimes an alcoholic and the family needs to hear from someone who has been there. If he were to attend an AA meeting he would hear some shocking stories.

My father has been an alcoholic for 32 years, half his life. Alcohol has put him in shock, a coma, heart failure and diabetes. Yet he still drinks. I was 12 years old when he wanted to die so badly he pointed a gun at his skull for four hours.

There are five children in my family who were affected so badly by it that two of us have gone through divorces, one is married to an alcoholic, my sister is an alcoholic along with her boyfriend and I almost blew it by becoming an alcoholic myself. I sought help and am now living a very beautiful life with a man I love.

My point is that not only is this woman affected by her husband's problem, but her children are in for years of misery if her husband does not stop.

My boyfriend's father died of alcoholism at age 42. A good friend just shot his brains out at 28 because his 22-year-old wife began drinking. Tell this woman her husband has no excuse for drinking and that if he cannot seek professional help he is doomed. I'd like to say to her husband: "You need help, damn it!"

DEAR READER — My mail would indicate that many other readers feel the same way. Alcohol is indeed one of the nation's biggest health problems. I'm sending you The Health Letter number 14-6, Alcohol Can Be Dangerous to Your Health, which details how alcohol damages the body and the mind. You may want to use it in helping people understand why they should quit. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

I would strongly urge anyone who has a drinking problem to seek professional help. Family members of those who will not seek help should check under Alcoholism in the Yellow Pages of the phone book for possible aid. Al-Anon, an organization for family and friends of alcoholics, is often a good starting point.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My mother was recently hospitalized for tests to find out why she has been hyperventilating. These spells cause her to shake violently, have difficulty breathing and even pass out. All tests show she is in excellent health. Now her doctor has prescribed tranquilizers and a very strong sleeping pill that knocks her out for the entire evening. She is very methodical about taking those pills and won't go outside the house for fear of hyperventilating. Our family is very upset with her being dependent on those pills. Can you tell us what causes hyperventilation and make any suggestions?

DEAR READER — Hyperventilation is overbreathing. This causes the body to blow off too much carbon dioxide and upsets the body chemistry and can cause fainting, numbness around the mouth and tingling. It is usually caused by anxiety.

While tranquilizers may control the anxiety, they will not uncover the basic cause for the anxiety or help your mother cope with it. I would suggest at least a consultation with a psychiatrist to see if professional counseling might help your mother resolve her problems to the extent that she might not need pills.

Clements Car Ticketed For Illegal Parking

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The SO-1 license plates marking the red Lincoln as Gov. Bill Clements' car might be impressive in some parking lots, but they meant little outside a Mexican restaurant.

While Clements was in the restaurant Thursday as the guest of a reporters' organization, his car was ticketed for being parked in a fire zone.

Ernest Copeland of Longhorn Security Service said the ticket was written after the manager of the restaurant called to complain about the car parked in front of the establishment.

However, before the governor finished his news conference and lunch, Copeland scurried back to the car and took the ticket off the windshield.

"My captain told me to forget it," he said.

But George Bayoud of the Clements' campaign staff told Copeland to put the ticket back on the car.

"He's parked illegally and he gets a ticket," said Bayoud.

Gun Shots Heard Here

Four arrests and several reports of gunshots on the east side of town occupied Snyder police Thursday.

Numerous reports of shots being fired on the east side of Snyder kept local officers busy last night. Officers maintained close patrols in the areas where the shots, thought to be shotgun blasts, were reported but they were unable to locate the individual or individuals responsible.

Thursday afternoon, police arrested two male juveniles for the September theft of letters from a sign at the Blue Parrot. The boys were later released to the custody of their parents.

In other action, officers arrested a male subject in the 2400 block of Gilmore Ave. on charges of unlawfully carrying a weapon. Police also made one arrest for DWI and picked up six subjects on charges of public intoxication.

Hot Tub Rage Is Newest Thing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — On a typical Friday or Saturday night, the parking lot at the former Montessori school is packed with cars as disparate as the clientele. Jaguars, Porsches and Alfa Romeos are parked next to Fords, Chevrolets and Volkswagens.

Inside, a roaring fire lights the lobby where guests — mostly couples — sign in for an hour or two of soaking in sybaritic splendor.

Hot tubbing — the backyard custom of lounging in 100-degree bubbling water — has become the latest thing to do on a date in Los Angeles.

The idea was popularized by two area establishments — Hot Tub Fever and Le Hot Tub — where, for $10 an hour per person, patrons rent hot tub rooms complete with sauna, showers, hair dryers, tape decks and "relaxation" beds.

At Hot Tub Fever, once the door to a private room is shut, the rest of the world is a thousand miles away. Hot tubbers can idle away their time soaking in a five-foot tub while listening to taped music, lounging on a rubber hammock slung over the tub, playing backgammon on a floating board or relaxing in the sauna.

For Dedra, 19, and Miguel, 21, both students, it was their first time at the place. "I really enjoyed it," Dedra said. "It was different and relaxing."

Another couple, Sharon and Wayne, both in their late 30s, came because it was something out of the ordinary. "We usually go to the movies," she said.

The weekend action is not restricted to just single couples.

Carole Cook invited her husband, Jim, who just turned 34, to Hot Tub Fever as a birthday present.

For the true hedonist interested in more than just relaxation, there is the V.I.P. room which has the added attraction of a fireplace, built-in color television set with remote control and videotape machine, bathroom complete with bidet, and backdoor entrance for those celebrities who wish to go unnoticed.

"We've had office parties in the V.I.P room," said owner Steven Freedberg, adding that he gets a lot of V.I.P. business from the movie and record industry.

The 39-year-old Freedberg, who used to be in the packing business, says his average customer is between 18 and 45 and stays between 1½ and two hours, although the record was 12 hours and 40 minutes.

He said business is brisk on Friday and Saturday nights from about 8 p.m. to 2 a.m. The club is open until 6 a.m. on weekends and until 3 a.m. Monday through Friday.

Hot Tub Fever offers various fruit juices to its guests, but patrons can bring their own more spirited refreshments if they desire, Freedberg says.

Hot Tub Fever Inc., which is owned by Freedberg and several other partners, invested $500,000 to renovate the building.

The initial capital outlay has kept a lot of competition out of the market for now, with only a handful of clubs located primarily in northern and southern parts of the state.

Hot Tub Fever's main competitor in the Los Angeles area is Le Hot Tub Club, a smaller $250,000 establishment with only six rooms and a low-key setting. The building is wedged in between a YWCA and a small retail business. There is no large lobby where customers can wait, and patrons must make reservations specifying how long they plan to stay.

To owner Larry Davis, hot tub establishments are "the American version of the Japanese bathhouse." The bearded 34-year-old entrepreneur — who got into the aquarium business 17 years ago, branched into retailing hot tubs four years ago and started renting them two years ago — says the club gets a lot of stag parties and anniversary parties.

"We got about 25 students once who had just taken their bar exam and decided to celebrate, even though they weren't going to be getting the results for a couple of months," Davis said, who calls his typical customer a "BMW driver."

"They are in their late 20s to late 40s and annually make between $30,000 to $100,000 and up," he said.

"We have a lot of women who come in with their boyfriends blindfolded as a birthday surprise. They will have called in advance and reserved a room," he said.

Davis said he gets a lot of noontime business from nearby Century City, a fashionable area of Los Angeles filled with office buildings and attorneys' offices.

"We get women from Century City who don't want to eat lunch, so they will come in groups during their lunch hour, soak and gossip," Davis said. In the evening they are replaced by businessmen, he said.

Davis looks at hot tub establishments as relaxation centers or as mini-vacations. Sometimes it's too relaxing.

Defeat Rival Howard College...

Dusters Claim Conference Opener Here, 70-63

It wasn't the best played basketball game ever held at Scurry County Coliseum but it will go down as a big one in Duster history. Western Texas College popped arch-rival Howard County 70-63 last night to account for their 11th victory and - more importantly - their first conference win.

The outcome gives the Dusters an 11-1 record, 1-0 in Western Athletic Conference play, while Howard falls to 7-6 and 1-1.

The Dusters return to action Monday against another WJCAC opponent as they play host to Odessa here at 6 p.m. A men's game will follow at 8.

"We didn't execute offensively as well as we have, but defensively I was very proud of the kids," said Coach Joe Cushing after the game. "I'd also like express my appreciation to the crowd. It was a vocal group and I think they really helped us a lot."

The first half was an offensive show between Howard's 5-11 freshman Nell Haskins, who had 15 points, and Western's freshman 6-1 freshman Vickie Teal, who had 17. That trend diminished somewhat in the final 20-minute period, though both topped the scoring list for the game.

Western trailed most of the first half before rallying past the visitors, 31-24. But back-to-back turnovers and a couple of missed freethrows let Howard pull near again and WTC took only a 33-31 lead into the locker room at halftime.

Howard out-shot the hosts 12-6 early in the second half to pull back in front 43-39 and it appeared the ballgame might go down to the wire. But Cushing slipped freshmen Dale Pieper and Shara Fredenburg into the lineup and the tide began to turn again.

Pieper, hitting medium-range jump shots on the run, broke a 45-45 tie with 11:25 left to play and though Howard locked the totals at times, Western never fell behind again.

Western Texas began to stretch its lead with about five minutes remaining in the game after Haskins had made it 55-54 on a pair of free throws. Pieper hit a short jumper, Teal connected off of a rebound and Pieper scored again as WTC ran out to a 61-54 advantage.

The clincher may have come at the 2:02 mark when sophomore Valerie Wells blocked a Haskins pass and Norma Frazier later converted it into two points for the Dusters. With 60 seconds remaining Cindy Maddox used a pair of charity shots to freeze the finish, 68-58.

Cushing lauded regulars Teal and Wells, among others, and expressed his pleasure with the players coming off the bench - most notably Fredenburg and Pieper. He also explained what he felt was the problem with the offense.

"Cindy (Maddox) was sick and wasn't able play her normal game. That probably worked in reverse for us, but we needed her experience out there," he added. "I feel like if she had been able to do the things she normally does for us we would have played a better game offensively."

Haskins' 27 points led all scorers, but HCC had only one other player in double figures, Carrie Lee Lutrick with 12. Kelli Mull and Pam Roberson added 6 each. Howard hit only 13 of 24 freethrow attempts.

Teal scored 26 for the Dusters and also led in rebounds with 11. Wells notched 14 points, six rebounds, seven steals and three blocked shots, while Pieper scored 12 points and had six rebounds and two blocks. Fredenburg scored 8.

Nielsen Leads Houston To Victory Over Browns

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston football fans may have witnessed a changing of the guard when quarterback Gifford Nielsen came off the bench to rescue the Oilers in a come-from-behind victory over the Cleveland Browns.

Nielsen, relegated to backup status when starter Ken Stabler unretired during the exhibition season after first announcing he would quit the game, completed five of his first six passes after entering the game in the third quarter. He directed an 80-yard drive that resulted in a 30-yard touchdown pass to tight end Dave Casper.

It was enough to spark Houston to a 17-13 victory in a National Football League game Thursday night.

The scoring pass put the Oilers ahead for the first time, erasing Cleveland's 6-3 halftime lead built on field goals of 18 and 19 yards by Matt Bahr. Toni Fritsch's 32-yard, first-quarter field goal provided Houston's only first-half points.

Houston rookie Avon Riley provided the game's turning point when he blocked a punt at the Cleveland 11 later in the third quarter. Adger Armstrong returned it to the Browns' 3 to set up Earl Campbell's 1-yard touchdown run that boosted the Houston lead to 17-6.

Campbell, long the Houston workhorse, carried the ball just 15 times for 31 yards.

Campbell, the National Football League's leading rusher the past three seasons, played a secondary role to Nielsen, who completed seven of 11 passes for 86 yards and no interceptions after replacing Stabler.

Cleveland quarterback Brian Sipe drove the Browns to a fourth-quarter score, a 1-yard plunge by Cleo Miller. Sipe, who increased his league-leading interception total to 23, also took the Browns to the brink of a winning comeback before they were stopped at the Oiler four with 20 seconds left in the game.

Cleveland dropped to a 5-9 record while Houston improved to 6-8. The loss left Cleveland alone at the bottom of the AFC Central Division standings.

Frazier Comeback Ends In Deadlock

CHICAGO (AP) - He had to settle for a draw in the verdict, but in his mind Joe Frazier was a winner...and his comeback will continue.

"From what I did tonight after a five-year layoff, I didn't see too much missing," said the 37-year-old former heavyweight champion who drew with Floyd "Jumbo" Cummings Thursday night. It was his first fight since he retired after being stopped in the fifth round by George Foreman June 15, 1976.

Referee Nate Moran scored the 10-round bout at the International Amphitheatre 46-45 for Cummings, but the fight was declared a draw because judges Harold Mararvitz scored it 47-47 and Collins Brown 46-46. A fighter must have at least two of the three officials vote for him in order to win.

A majority of boxing writers at ringside favored Cummings.

Class AA Quarterfinals Here...

Owls To Battle Pipers Tonight

Hale Center and Hamlin, ranked No. 2 and 7 respectively by the Harris Poll, meet in Snyder's Tiger Stadium at 7:30 to determine a Class AA quarterfinal champion.

Tickets are $4 for adults and $2 for students. Hale Center is the home team and its fans will occupy the west stands. Gates will open at 6 o'clock.

Hale Center, coached by former Rotan mentor Don Mullins, reached tonight's playoff by stopping Clarendon 31-14 last week. Hamlin, under the direction of Bill Grissom, stopped Plains 28-22.

Harris rates Hale Center a three-point favorite and West Texas football fans are expecting a close battle between two well-balanced teams.

Hale Center, 11-1, features quarterback Ernest Pardo; not big at 5-8, 150, but a player who gets the job done. Pardo has passed for 1,455 yards and 21 touchdowns this season.

Also in the Owls backfield are running backs Joe Davis and Mitch Johnson, who have almost 2,000 yards between them. Davis has over 1,000; Johnson over 700.

Hamlin's key threat could be quarterback Brad Lakey, who ran for 113 yards and passed for another 104 in the Pied Pipers' win over Plains last week. Kelvin Williams is a key receiver for the Hamlin team, while Eddie Bolden handles most of the ball carrying duties. Bolden, only a sophomore, had 127 yards rushing against Plains.

Defensively, the Pipers offer possible college material in 6-1, 245 noseguard Ken Johnson and 6-0, 230 tackle John Hunter.

Westerners Win 90-69

SAN ANGELO -- Coach Larry Dunaway's Westerners topped Angelo State University junior varsity 90-69 here last night to hopefully set the scene for next Monday when Western Texas takes on WJCAC foe Odessa College in Scurry County Coliseum.

Dunaway was in transit when he relayed the results and was unable to provide many details of the contest, but did comment on the contest and the upcoming battle with Odessa.

"We came out real flat in the first half, just like we've been doing for so long on these road games," he said. "In the second half we finally loosened up and played basketball. We scored over 50 points in the second half."

WTC took a 32-23 lead into halftime, then shelled the hosts for 58 second-period points to run away with the victory.

Darren Lee scored 30 points to lead the Westerners, while Pete Thomas grabbed 14 and Derrick Grow, Dwayne Hunt and Jerrold Whitmore added 12 apiece.

Dunaway hadn't charted the game but added, "Jerrold had an awful lot of assists. He's had 13 twice before and it's possible he may have broken the school record (14). We're going to check and see today (Friday)."

Dunaway's man concern is the upcoming contest with Odessa, scheduled as part of a double header at 8 p.m. WTC's Dusters take on the Odessa women at 6.

"If we can knock off Odessa we'll be right back in the thick of it," said Dunaway, whose team is 1-1 in WJCAC play. "That's the important thing now. We've hopefully gotten over this losing streak and now we can get mentally prepared to play Odessa. A big crowd will be important for us. This game could go right down to the wire and if we can get some people out yelling for us it could make the difference," he added.

Heisman Awarded Saturday

NEW YORK (AP) - Marcus Allen, the record-breaking running back from the University of Southern California, says he doesn't consider himself a shoo-in to win the Heisman Trophy as the nation's best college football player.

The Heisman winner will be announced Saturday evening at the Downtown Athletic Club of New York, which sponsors the award and conducts the nationwide balloting of sports writers, editors and broadcasters.

Tar Heels Top Tulsa

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) - Freshman Michael Jordan scored 22 points Thursday night to lead top-ranked North Carolina to a 78-70 college basketball victory over ninth-ranked Tulsa.

Jordan scored North Carolina's first six points and finished with 10 in the first half. Along with James Worthy, he led the Tar Heels out of two first-period droughts to give them a comfortable halftime cushion, 34-22.

Sloppy ball handling and cold shooting by North Carolina allowed the Hurricane to tie the game 18-18 with 7:06 left in the first half.

But the Tar Heels responded with a 10-0 spurt of their own, the last basket coming on a Jordan slam dunk.

North Carolina continued to break away from Tulsa in the second half and held a 24-point lead, 60-36, again on a Jordan dunk. Tulsa pared a 22-point deficit to seven at 68-61 with 3:25 left. Jordan's tap-in with 55 seconds left gave the Tar Heels a safe 76-66 lead.

The loss evened Tulsa's record at 1-1.

Tigers Nip Estacado In Double Overtime

LEVELLAND -- Snyder's Tigers won their third straight contest here Thursday morning to advance in the winner's bracket of the Levelland Invitational Basketball Tournament.

Riley Kitchens scored 26 points, including all of Snyder's overtime tallies, as the Tigers defeated Lubbock Estacado 55-54 in double overtime.

Snyder, 4-2 now, was to take on the loser of the Morton-Levelland contest at 11:30 today.

A 50-50 tie at the end of regulation forced the first of two overtimes between the Tigers and Matadors. Estacado scored first for a 52-50 lead in the first extra period before Kitchens came back to tie the totals again. Estacado also scored first in the second overtime for a 54-52 advantage. Snyder later lost possession with 13 seconds remaining but got the ball back with eight ticks left when a Matador player missed on two freethrow tries.

After Snyder inbounded the ball, D.W. Lofton's shot-to-tie bounced from the rim. Kitchens was there to grab the rebound however, and as he put the ball back up he was fouled. The shot, just at the buzzer, tied the game at 54-54, and Kitchens' followup freethrow gave Snyder the victory.

Both John Wilson and James Caldwell also shot in double figures for the Tigers, with 11 points each. Lofton scored four, while Ricky Housden had two and Brad Robertson notched one.

Harris was the leading scorer for Estacado with 13 points.

Felines Trade Wins In Levelland Tourney

LEVELLAND -- Snyder's Felines were to play either Brownfield or Vernon here this afternoon after losing to the host team last night in the Levelland Invitation Tournament.

The Felines overwhelmed Pampa 65-25 in the tourney opener Thursday morning, but fell to Levelland in a game played at 9 last night, 58-44.

Snyder was to play the loser of a Brownfield-Vernon game at 2:30 today as the tournament continues.

SHS led Levelland 22-20 at halftime, but the hosts generated 22 third-quarter points while holding Snyder to 8. Levelland then outscored the visitors 16-14 in the final quarter to complete the victory.

"We played real well except for about four minutes of the third quarter," said Coach Ken Housden. "They hit us with the press which we normally handle well, and we made some mistakes. That was the turning point in the ballgame."

Michelle Townsel scored 26 points to lead the Tigers while Pam Perceval had 8. Donna Logsdon scored 32 points - all from long range - to lead all players.

In the opener against Pampa, Snyder built an 11-8 lead and made it 26-10 by halftime. Townsel again led the Felines with 25 points. Brenda Anderson had 9 and Theresa Browning and LaDonna Halford pitched in 8.
