Reagan calls peace proposal 'milestone'

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — While admitting that details are "kind of fuzzy," the Reagan administration says a new Jordanian-Palestinian formula for peace in the Middle East is a "milestone...along a road that has many more to be achieved."

As President Reagan arrived here Wednesday for a four-day vacation at his ranch, administration leaders stressed they are seeking more information and clarification of the agreement announced in Amman between Jordanian King Hussein and Palestine Liberation Organization President Yasser Arafat.

On Monday, Arafat agreed in a pact with Jordan on a strategy for peace in the Middle East that calls for peace with Israel in return for a Palestinian state federated with Jordan, sources said.

Reagan, in brief comments to reporters as he prepared to leave Washington, said "it seems as if some progress has been made" and added, "We're being optimistic about it."

In Washington, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said that U.S. knowledge of the Jordanian-PLO agreement was "kind of fuzzy."

"We don't know exactly what is coming out of this," Shultz said in an interview with Voice of America.

However, a senior administration official who accompanied Reagan to California said, "We view the milestone that has been reached in Amman as one along a road that has many more to be achieved.

"We see the apparent willingness of Palestinians and of Jordan to commit themselves to a peaceful resolution of the Arab-Israeli dispute as an important and very constructive step," said the official, who spoke only on condition he not be identified.

The pact was the first formal PLO acceptance of Hussein's call for a "land for peace" offer to Israel, said government sources in Jordan and other informed sources who spoke on condition they not be identified.

The Reagan administration official said the "land for peace" provision implies acceptance of major elements of U.N. Resolution 242 even though it is not specifically mentioned. The resolution calls for recognition of Israel's sovereignty and borders in exchange for land that Israel occupied in 1967.

According to some accounts, the agreement calls for PLO participation in any peace talks with Israel. Israel had rejected any negotiations with the PLO, which it considers a terrorist organization.

The administration official, asked if the Amman announcement stipulated Palestinian representation at negotiations, said, "I wouldn't comment on that."

The official also confirmed that Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy will visit the Middle East next month but said the trip was unrelated to the latest developments.

On another front, Reagan and Saudi Arabian King Fahd issued a joint communique asserting that a stable Middle East peace "must provide security for all states in the area and for the exercise of the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people."

The two leaders met Monday and Tuesday in Washington, focusing their talks on the search for a "just, stable and lasting solution" to the Arab-Israeli conflict, the statement said.

CNN bureau chief escapes from captors, radio says

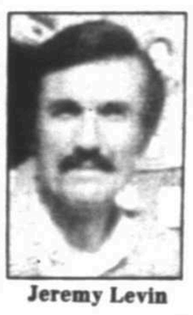
From Wire Reports

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Jeremy Levin, the Beirut bureau chief for Cable News Network who disapeared last March 7, escaped from his captors early today, the Christian Voice of Lebanon radio station said.

The report said Levin, 51, showed up at a military headquarters of the Syrian army in the eastern Lebanese city of Baalbek about 2 a.m. It gave no further details.

Fleeing in pajamas, he walked for two hours until he encountered some Syrian soldiers and was handed over to a Syrian army post in Baalbek.

Today he was being transferred to the Syrian military command at Chtaura in the Bekaa Valley, from where he was expected to go under Syrian escort to Damascus.



Jeremy Levin

Levin told the local Agence France-Presse correspondent today:

"I fled toward midnight from the two-storey villa where I was being held. I walked for two hours in the valley before hearing dogs and human voices.

"I thought my kidnappers were at my heels, so I hid under a truck. But when I saw it was Syrian soldiers I gave myself up."

Levin did not say how he escaped. During his captivity he was tied to a radiator and his kidnappers bandaged his eyes each time he left the room.

"My kidnappers changed the place where I was held four times," he said, adding he could not identify his captors.

Love-smitten Britons pour their hearts out in newspaper ads

LONDON (AP) — Eros, the 92-year-old god of love, was back in London today as Bootle told Sossiewag Pooh Flibs she's the girl of his dreams and an ad in the London Times informed Little Runner: "Oooooooooooo Zooooooooooo Zooooooooooooo Zoooooooo."

It's Valentine's Day again, when Britons celebrate the ancient festival of love with declarations of affection that range the emotional gamut from passionate to screwball.

Fittingly, the day was enlivened this year by the unveiling of the renovated statue of Eros by Ken Livingstone, leader of the Greater London Council, at the Royal Festival Hall.

The statue, poised on one leg drawing a bow, was placed at London's Piccadilly Circus intersection in 1893. It was removed last August to a Scottish foundry to repair the ravages of time, weather and revellers who used to swing on its wings. Eros will return to Piccadilly Circus upon completion of a $10.8 million plan to improve roads, modernize the subway station and build a pedestrian piazza.

"I am delighted he is back in the capital where he belongs. He is as much a part of London as the Cockney sparrow and Big Ben," said Livingstone.

The overhaul included repairing the god of love's fractured ankle, bent thigh and cracked knee.The 400-pound, 8-foot, aluminium statue by Sir Alfred Gilbert also underwent X-ray and chemical tests and overall straightening and strengthening.

Meanwhile, romantic messages from love-smitten Britons appeared in newspaper ads. In one, Bootle told Sossiewag Pooh Flibs she's the girl of his dreams.

Another ad in the London Times informed Little Runner: "Oooooooooooo Zooooooooooo Zooooooooooooo Zoooooooo."

At the Times, there was no precise meaning available for the anonymous "Oooooooooooo Zooooooooooo Zooooooooooooo Zoooooooo" message. But it was believed to convey enthusiasm.

Little Runner, Bootle and Sossiewag Pooh Flibs could not be contacted for comment. Neither

DPS informant testifies Peterson admits to setting building on fire

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

A onetime informant for the Texas Department of Public Safety testified this morning that John Thomas Peterson admitted setting up the burning of the O'Michael Building in November 1982.

Ken Albritton said he was riding in a car with Peterson and his brother in late November when the two admitted their parts in the fire.

Peterson asked his advice on whether the damage was extensive enough to justify a full insurance claim, said Albritton, of the day the three men drove past the burned building.

Because he feared for his life, Albritton said he set up the Andrews County burglary, in which the Petersons were caught in the building, with an undercover DPS officer he worked for as an informant.

Albritton said he aided the DPS on three occasions out of "a combination of public service and fear." He later said fear of law enforcement was the primary motive. "I haven't stopped fearing yet, sir," he said.

The witness also claimed his Andrews County conviction was a "farce" in which the prosecutor and others involved lied to get him put in prison. This case is currently on appeal, according to Albritton.

The two men who claim to have set fire to the O'Michael Building in November 1981 Wednesday told jurors their versions of the events involved in the burning of the downtown office building.

L.C. Burditt, 52, of Midland, and Lawrence Earl "Cotton" Peterson, 39, of Odessa, testified to different versions of the Nov. 25, 1981 arson of the building, which burned about one year after a bond issue to finance construction of a downtown civic center failed.

Before leaving the stand Wednesday, John Peterson claimed he had been offered "special favors" by Ector County Sheriff Bob Brookshire, including a reduced sentence and "an overnight visit in the jail" from Peterson's wife, after his arrest if he would stop talking with the FBI about the fire.

Peterson, 45, also said recently retired District Judge R.L. McKim told him to stop talking with federal authorities.

During his three days on the witness stand, Peterson linked Ector County Commissioner Willie Hammond and former Odessa City Councilman Keith Weddel to the fire.

Hammond and Weddel were indicted in September for conspiring to burn the building for the insurance claim and aiding in setting the fire. Hammond is also charged with lying during a deposition taken in the civil suit over collection of the claim.

Senate commitee adopts amendments to water plan

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN — The Senate Natural Resources Committee adopted over 50 amendments to their version of a statewide water plan while the House gave final approval to its proposal with a 105-17 vote.

Both water plans differ in varying degrees with the House proposal having an $800 million price tag compared to the Senate's more expensive package of $1 billion.

Other differences in the House and Senate plans are sections concerning environmental protection. Sierra Club spokesman Ken Kramer said the Senate plan, introduced by Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, offers better protection for bays and estuaries along the Gulf Coast.

Employees of former FNB to get profit-sharing checks

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Exactly 16 months after the First National Bank of Midland was declared insolvent, its 900 former employees will finally be getting their profit-sharing checks, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. announced today.

"The checks are being mailed Friday from the FDIC office there (in Midland)," said Roger Aksamit, an attorney with Kemp, Smith, Duncan and Hammond, of El Paso, which represents the FDIC. Aksamit said the assets of the plan totaled $6.49 million, to be divided among the approximately 900 former FNB employees based on their salaries and years of service.

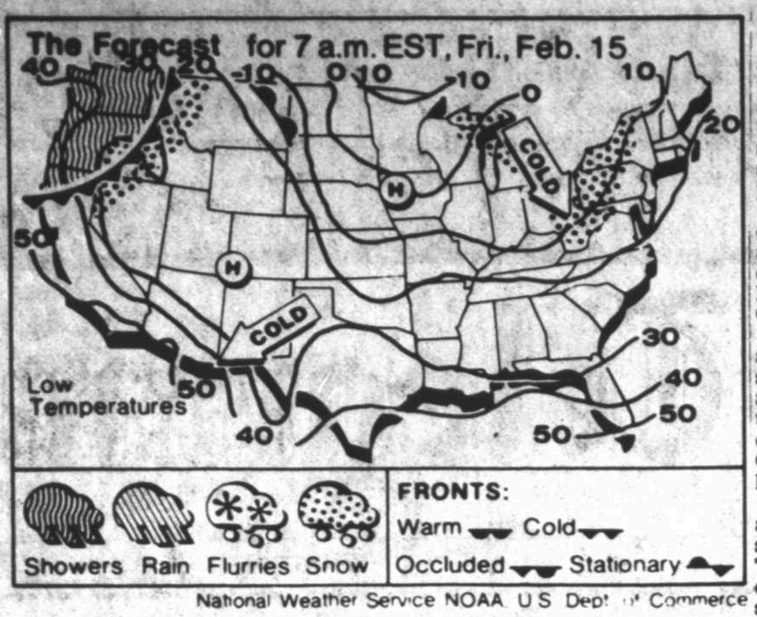
WEATHER SUMMARY



National Weather Service NOAA U.S. Dept. of Commerce

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts snow for Friday for the Northwest, the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence Valley.

Midland should experience spring-like temperatures

Spring-like temperatures will reach the Midland area Friday as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport predicts the fair skies and lows in the upper 20s tonight will warm to highs in the mid-60s Friday. Winds will continue from the south at five to 10 mph through Friday.

Thursday's high of 61 was 22 degrees below the record set in 1962. This morning's low was eight degrees above the 1951 record low.

STATE

Patchy areas of light snow fell in the Texas Panhandle early today between Dalhart and Childress in response to a minor upper level impulse rippling across New Mexico and West Texas.

High-level cloudiness covered the remainder of the state except for the Edwards Plateau and Trans Pecos region, where clear skies prevailed.

A ridge of high pressure building into Central Texas brought northerly winds at 10 to 20 mph to most of the state with gusts to almost 30 mph in the Hill Country. North winds generally under 10 mph were observed west of the Pecos with light southeasterly breezes in the lower Rio Grande Valley.

Temperatures early today ranged from 26 at Lubbock to 60 at Brownsville.

The National Weather Service said a cloud cover would blanket most of South Texas today, with a chance of widely scattered showers. Highs were expected to be in the 50s and 60s.

NATION

Light snow and gusty winds swept across the Midwest today while temperatures dipped to below 30 in Florida and balmy weather prevailed in much of the far West.

A low pressure over eastern Ontario sent snow and gusty winds to the Great Lakes, Ohio Valley and parts of the Mississippi Valley.

Wind gusts of up to 25 mph were common from eastern Iowa across Michigan to western New York. Gale warnings were issued for Lake Michigan and eastern sections of lakes Superior and Erie.

Travelers' advisories for snow and blowing snow were in effect for northeast Ohio, western Pennsylvania, all but the eastern Panhandle of West Virginia, the western mountains of Maryland and in western New York, western lower Michigan, upper Michigan and extreme northeastern Wisconsin.

Heavier snowfall amounts during the 6 hours ending at 1 a.m. EST included 2 inches at Buffalo, N.Y., and Marquette, Mich., and an inch at Detroit and Cleveland.

A hard freeze hit northern Florida overnight, with lows of 30 degrees reported in Jacksonville and 26 in Tallahassee.

Dense fog spread across northwest Utah, combining with icy spots to make driving risky.

Fair skies and mild temperatures prevailed across southern California and the desert southwest, with early-morning temperatures in the 50s to 60s.

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Crane, Upton, Reagan, Glasscock, Andrews, Gaines, Howard, Martin, Dawson, Borden, Tom Green, Sterling, Irion and Coke: Tonight and Friday: fair, low upper 20s and high mid 60s. Wind southerly 5 to 10 mph.

Crime spree ends with suspect's death

COLBY, Kan. (AP) — Three men and a woman apparently held up a roadside restaurant, shot the manager to death and killed two hostages "execution-style" in a crime spree that ended when one of the suspects died in a shootout with police, a sheriff said today.

An undersheriff, a grain elevator operator and two of the suspects also were wounded in the three-county rampage in rural northwest Kansas on Wednesday, said Thomas County Sheriff Tom Jones.

Larry McFarland, the manager of a Stuckey's restaurant along Interstate 70, was shot to death in an apparent robbery, Jones said. After the body was found the suspects exchanged shots with Thomas County Undersheriff Ben Albright, leaving him wounded.

Minutes later, two men were abducted and a pickup truck was stolen at a nearby grain elevator. The two abducted men were subsequently "laid down in a road" and shot in the face, said Jones. He called the crimes "needless, bloody, ruthless murders. There's just no rhyme or reason to it."

The chase ended with a gunbattle when a police roadblock forced the pickup truck off the road.

One of the three surviving suspects was hospitalized, and two others were jailed. They were beig held without bail on probable cause for first-degree murder and were to be formally charged in a hearing here today, said Thomas County Deputy Sheriff Mike Bond.

Authorities identified the suspects as Mark Anthony Walter, 18, and Lisa J. Dunn, 18, of Suttons Bay, Mich.; Daniel Eugene Remeta, 27, Traverse City, Mich.; and James C. Hunter, 33, of Amoret, Mo.

"Why in the world did they do what they did in our particular county? I just don't know," Jones said.

He said a high school student found the body of McFarland, 27, about 3:30 p.m. Wednesday inside his restaurant along the I-70 exchange at Grainfield, a Gove County town of about 400 people about 35 miles southeast of Colby.

A short time later, Albright, 27, was shot at least twice when he approached a suspicious vehicle at the I-70 exchange at Levant, an unincorporated community of about 80 people a little more than 40 miles northwest of Grainfield.

The wounded officer called in a description of the vehicle and suspects, Jones said. Albright was in serious but stable condition today following surgery at Citizens Medical Center in Colby.

The suspects then drove a short distance to the Bartlett and Co. grain elevator in Levant, where they allegedly abducted two men, stole a pickup truck and shot the elevator manager, Maurice Christie, 61, wounding him, Jones said. He was in serious but stable condition at Citizens Medical Center today.

Around 4:30 p.m., the bodies of the hostages, Glenn Moore, 55, of Colby and Rick Schroeder, 29, of Levant, were found along a road northwest of Levant. Both had been shot in the face, Jones said.

"They appeared to be execution-style killings. They were just actually laid down in a road and shot two or three times in the head," the sheriff said.

The suspects were heading north on Kansas 25 in Moore's pickup when they ran into a roadblock just north of the Thomas-Rawlins county line, forcing them to turn around and drive into the yard of an unoccupied farmhouse. They jumped out of the truck and exchanged gunfire with a Kansas Highway Patrol trooper and two Colby police officers, said Jones.

Walter was killed in the exchange, while Remeta and Ms. Dunn were wounded, the sheriff said.

Remeta was admitted to Citizens Medical Center but was expected to be transferred to jail later today, Jones said. Ms. Dunn, who was treated at the hospital and released, and Hunter were being held in the Thomas County Jail in Colby.

FIRE

About $150,000 was collected after this suit, according to testimony. Weddel shared ownership of the building when it burned with former Odessa Mayor Bob Bryant and attorney Ray Stoker Jr.

Hammond owned no interest, but acted as go-between in the arson for pay, according to federal prosecutors.

Both Peterson brothers and Burditt said they agreed to testify in the trial in return for protection from prosecution for the crime. The Petersons are in federal custody, while Burditt is serving two years probation for keeping a gambling place in Midland County.

While the testimony of the three admitted co-conspirators varied in many places, there were some common areas.

Burditt and John Peterson talked of Hammond's direct involvement before the fire. All three told the jury that Burditt and "Cotton" Peterson eventually set the fire.

Burditt told jurors the arsonists tried four different tactics before setting the building ablaze Nov. 25, 1981. "Cotton" Peterson testified to three, combining an unsuccessful attempt to get fishing string wrapped in gas-soaked toilet paper to ignite an upstairs office. Both said Peterson finally set off the fire by throwing a lit "Molotov cocktail" through a partially open second-story window.

Hammond's attorney, Warren Burnett, traced the criminal histories of the three key federal witnesses for the jury — emphasizing the men's interest in keeping from being convicted of the arson.

Burditt admitted to a string of offenses, including possession of an illegal weapon in Odessa, burglary and gambling in Abilene, three charges of "bootlegging" in Eastland and the current deferred sentence he is serving for promoting gambling in Midland.

"Cotton" Peterson admitted having been arrested several times for assault, conviction for sale of heroin in Temple and the Andrews County burglary for which he was sentenced to 50 years in 1982 before entering the federal witness program.

After his arrest for the arson, John Peterson was also charged with murder. He was serving a 15-year sentence for an Odessa burglary and facing prosecution for the Andrews County burglary when he entered the witness program, according to testimony.

Burnett questioned how "Cotton" Peterson could have thrown the burning incendiary through the window on the first try, but the witness insisted "It wasn't that hard."

John Peterson paid the two arsonists part of the money they had been promised one day after the fire, according to "Cotton" Peterson, who recalled he and Burditt had gone to Hammond's house earlier that day to collect the money.

"Let me go call Bob," he recalled Hammond saying before making the payment. Former Odessa mayor Bob Bryant has been questioned during grand jury investigations of the fire, but never indicted.

The younger Peterson brother also said Hammond had passed John Peterson the key to the building before the fire. Burditt placed Hammond at several meetings regarding the fire.

Odessa attorney Royal Caswell, representing Weddel with Travis Shelton of Lubbock, wondered how Burditt and Peterson managed to avoid detection the night of the fire while pouring gasoline out the window, then stringing toilet paper and string down the wall, before managing to set the builing ablaze — less than two blocks from the sheriff's and city police offices.

Under questioning by Burnett, Burditt recalled unsuccessful attempts to record a conversation between he and Hammond set up by Midland FBI agent Billy Kirkwood. Hammond admitted no connection with the fire during the conversation, according to the transcription read by the lawyer to the jury.

Burditt told Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom McHugh how John Peterson first approached him about setting the fire, but how Hammond was present at later meetings during which the scheme took shape.

If convicted, Hammond's maximum sentence would be 25 years in prison and a $40,000 fine. Weddel faces maximums of 15 years in prison and a $20,000 fine if found guilty of the conspiracy and aiding in the arson.

The fun of the thing for the senders and recipients is that they know who they are but nobody else does.

The fun of the thing for the Times is that at $4.32 a line, the ads are a paying proposition.

Here's a brief selection:

— ICKLE NICKY SNEASNAKE Mrs. Khee loves you (snots and snots and snots)

— HEFFLO PECKHAMIENSIS - Let us work a mystic wreath, unknown unto the world beneath Fosco Wellensis ecclesiasticus

— TO DILLY DUCK from The Drake

— DRAGON you're very cuddly, but oh so fierce in the morning — Give it to me more.

— TO SCOOTE SHOES all my love. Banana Boots

— RITA, dearest, over ten years now and still I love you. It broke my heart to part with you, but the dice were loaded against us. Remember those gentle summer nights. Remember me now I am gone away. Farewell. Be strong. Kev.

Among other London papers, the Guardian carried three pages of similar Valentine's Day ads, the Daily Mail six, the Daily Mirror four, the Daily Express two, and the Daily Star two.

Historians say Valentine's Day has its origins in the third century, when two Christian martyrs, both named Valentine, died. They were executed during a pagan Roman erotic festival known as the Lupercalia held in the ancient equivalent of February. The early church attempted to Christianize the festival in honor of St. Valentine, but nobody knows which one of the martyrs it is intended to honor.

In Beirut, a telephone caller claiming to speak for the underground Islamic Jihad organization told a foreign news agency that the group had "decided to release" Levin, "contrary to reports that he escaped."

"This decision," the caller said, "was in response to numerous interventions on his behalf by certain sister parties that we respect."

On his own kidnapping, Levin said that he was near the shoreline of West Beirut when a gunman aged about 20 accosted him and pushed him inside a car.

He had been all alone at his place of detention, Levin said, adding he knew nothing about the fate of the other four Americans kidnapped in West Beirut during the past year.

At Baalbek, in a message to his wife, Levin wrote: "Hello my dearest wife. I am OK. God willing, I will be with you soon. give my love to our family."

Members of Levin's family in the United States said they had no confirmation of the reports of his freedom.

His wife, Lucille, who said her husband's purported release is "a real Valentine's present, told Associated Press Radio in Washington, D.C. that she called the State Department after hearing reports of her husband's freedom.

Asked whether she now expects to hear from Syria, she said: "Well, I think that would be great. I don't know, it's hard to speculate. I think that would be wonderful."

"I did expect it. I have expected it, but a year is an awfully long time," she said. Mrs. Levin said she also was concerned about other Americans missing in Lebanon.

She said in an interview on NBC-TV's "Today" show that she was "really believing" her husband was free."

Asked if she thought he might have escaped, she said: "I don't think that's what happened. I think this is a message from the Middle East, a desire for peace, and we should answer it with our prayers and careful concentration on peace with them."

Clare Moss, Levin's step-daughter, said from her home in suburban Washington, D.C., "I know this is it. We all feel it is."

There were reports published in the United States that the U.S. State Department last July saw a videotape showing Levin alive. He was also mentioned by William Buckley, a kidnapped U.S. Embassy political officer, who recently appeared on a videotape obtained by the British television agency Visnews.

William L. Eagleton, the U.S. ambassador to Syria, said in a telephone interview from Damascus that "we have only heard through press sources the same rumor" about Levin's escape. "I don't know anything specific."

He said the Syrian government had not informed the embassy of anything related to the matter but that "it's certainly conceivable" that the U.S. Embassy would be asked to get involved in returning Levin to the United States.

Levin is among five Americans who have disappeared or been kidnapped in the Moslem sector of Beirut since Feb. 6, 1984, when Druse and Shiite Moslem militias drove the Lebanese army out in the latest round in Lebanon's long civil war.

The missing Americans are Buckley, who was kidnapped last March 16; the Rev. Benjamin Weir, a Presbyterian minister, who was kidnapped May 8; Peter Kilburn, a librarian at the American University of Beirut, who disappeared Dec. 3; and the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest and head of the Catholic Relief Services Office in Beirut, who was kidnapped Jan. 8.

In the videotape obtained by Visnews in late January, Buckley said "Today the 22nd of January 1985, I am well and my friends Benjamin Weir and Jeremy Levin are also well. We ask that our government take action for our release quickly."

Buckley was holding a copy dated Jan. 22 of the French-language Beirut newspaper L'Orient-Le Jour. Visnews never explained where it had gotten the videotape.

Following the kidnappings and other escalated violence in west Beirut, most foreigners have fled the Moslem part of the capital. The Cable News Network office where Levin worked has been closed for months.

WATER

The organization fears the House version would lead to inland dams that would cut needed fresh water flow to the bays.

The Senate version also would give the state control over ground water pumping in some areas if local voters did not enact controls.

An amendment introduced by Montford during the Senate hearing and approved by the committee Wednesday calls for a six-member multistate water resources planning commission, which wasn't in his original bill.

Committee chairman Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, said the committee considered 82 amendments during its five-hour session on Wednesday.

The differing plans of the House and Senate are on a collision course that probably will lead to a House-Senate conference committee.

After Wednesday's 105-17 vote, Speaker Gib Lewis said he favored tighter restrictions to guarantee environmental protection, but he said he compromised to get the bill moving.

"I'm more of an environmentalist than other people," he said. "At the same time, I'm more of a realist. I think what we worked out is a pretty good compromise. What we sent to the Senate is a well-balanced package."

Wednesday's House vote sent to the Senate the legislation needed to implement their water plan.

Following the vote, Lewis complimented Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, and other committee members for their "outstanding job for the citizens of this state." Craddick is chairman of the committee and author of the House bill.

If approved by lawmakers, the proposed constitutional amendment would go to Texas voters this November.

The House on Tuesday gave 134-11 approval a plan allowing the state to sell $800 million in bonds to pay for the water program. It includes $200 million for flood control projects, $200 million for water quality projects, $200 million for reservoirs and $200 million for other use.

Correction

A Jan. 31 story on pre-paid legal insurance incorrectly listed one of the services offered by Pre-Paid Legal Services Inc. The story said the company would defend a personal-injury suit under $1,000 up to $250 worth of legal expenses, and up to $5,000 if the client is named in a civil suit in the first year he is with the plan. Actually, the $250 in services is a collection-service benefit; the $5,000 is for defense of a suit.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

CHECKS

"The checks will range from $130,000 down to maybe $1,000," he said.

"That's terrific," said Jim Stevenson, director of human resources for RepublicBank First National Midland, which took over many of FNB's assets after the bank failed on Oct. 14, 1983.

Stevenson welcomed the news on behalf of the many RepublicBank employees who also had worked for FNB, himself included.

"I understand what they were going through. It's going to make a lot of people very pleased," he said. "It was a drawn-out process — there were a lot of legal issues which had to be resolved."

The delay in disposing of the plan's assets had less to do with the FDIC than with the Internal Revenue Service, which oversees this kind of retirement plan, according to Aksamit.

"It takes a period of time to liquidate the assets and get permission to distribute," he said.

"There was a lot of frustration" among the former employees, according to Stevenson. The employees feared that the assets' value would be reduced, but because the FDIC made prudent investments, "the answer to that is no," he said.

"The other concern was the timing," but with today's announcement, "they'll be dancing in the streets."

Public housing projects trap poor in ghettos

DALLAS (AP) — Over the past 11 years, Congress has appropriated more than $223 billion on grants and programs designed to help the poor escape from decaying urban ghettos into suburban public housing.

But the walls around the nation's inner cities failed to crumble. They have been shored up by racial discrimination, politics, poor program design and inadequate enforcement of federal regulations, the Dallas Morning News found during a 14-month investigation of federal housing policies.

George Romney, the former Michigan governor who took charge of the nation's housing programs in 1969, said in a recent interview that despite the government's efforts, the traditional residents of the inner cities have found it difficult to move to the suburbs of major American cities.

"I don't think that there was any question that the barriers were to keep the poor and minorities in the central city," Romney said.

Romney said that when became Secretary of Housing and Urban Development in 1969, he felt a "moral, social, economic and political" duty to reverse decades of discrimination in housing programs.

The future of American cities seemed dependent on the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development's success at ending the confinement and deprivation of the poor in high-crime ghettos, said Romney, who served as HUD secretary under President Richard Nixon.

"The reason that we have this pattern of (deteriorating) central cities is that the suburbs wanted to confine to the central city, as much as they could, the problems of the area and then to drain the central cities of their resources, both economic and human," Romney told the News in a recent interview.

Some efforts to open up the suburbs backfired, restricting rather than expanding the housing options for black and Hispanic families, according to case studies of several cities and according to government documents obtained through the federal Freedom of Information Act.

Census figures show that in recent years poverty has become more concentrated within the nation's central cities. In 1975, the percentage of urban blacks in poverty was 29 percent, while it was 10.8 percent for whites.

As of 1983, 35 percent of urban blacks lived in poverty, compared with 11 percent of urban whites.

The government tried to open up the suburbs through new housing programs. But partly because of HUD's anemic enforcement of its own regulations, 85 percent of the tenants in its largest new construction program were white and only 9 percent of all tenants moved from central cities to suburbs, according to government studies.

"The growing concentration of minority groups in the hidden city that no one goes to look at any more" is "the most critical problem facing American cities in the '80s," said Princeton University urban expert Richard Nathan.

The phenomenon threatens to divide entire metropolitan regions along political, racial and economic lines, Nathan said.

U.S. Census findings show that the flow of blacks and Hispanics from central cities into the suburbs has been little more than a trickle. A senior Census Bureau analyst said that this trickle has not included the hard-core poor, who are left behind in the inner city or in ghetto suburban areas.

The Census Bureau's most recent figures, based on 1980 data, indicate that in the nation's 100 largest cities, 41.4 percent of low-income whites lived in poverty-dominated census tracts. The figures also show that 73.8 percent of low-income Hispanics and 82.9 percent of low-income blacks lived in such ghetto areas.

Just under 30 percent of American households lived in central cities in 1982, according to federal estimates. Among blacks, the figure was 58.9 percent.

The concentration of the poor and minorities in inner cities "does not create an immediate problem for the suburbs," said Brookings Institution housing expert Anthony Downs. "But it is a problem for the future of the country.

Jury chosen in Mattox commercial bribery trial

AUSTIN (AP) — A jury of eight women and four men has been chosen to hear the expected three to fours weeks of testimony in the commercial bribery trial of Attorney General Jim Mattox.

State District Judge Mace Thurman said the state would present the first prosecution witness Friday morning.

The trial was in recess today after Wednesday's daylong jury selection process.

In addition to the regular jury, two alternate jurors were picked, one man and one woman, to sit through the trial and be ready in case a regular juror becomes ill.

"It's a good jury," said Roy Minton, Mattox's chief attorney.

"I'm delighted," said Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle.

Both warned would-be jurors the trial would be long and complicated, and highly controversial.

"You are going to hear tapes of him (Mattox) and other lawyers yelling at each other and using bad language that you won't like, but your only duty is to decide if Mr. Mattox is guilty of the charge made in the indictment," said Minton.

"Does anyone think the attorney general should be free to bribe anybody?" Earle asked the panel. "Does anyone have any problems with deciding whether the attorney general is telling the truth?"

He got no answers.

Mattox was indicted in September 1983, accused of threatening in a telephone call to put the Houston law firm of Fulbright & Jaworski out of the municipal bond business unless one of its partners, Tom McDade, dropped efforts to question Mattox's sister in connection with a lawsuit involving the state, South Texas rancher Clinton Manges and Mobil Oil Corp. The suit was settled last year.

McDade will be the first witness.

Mattox has denied threatening McDade and says the prosecution has no tape of the telephone conversation.

Most of the would-be jurors said they knew something of the case from newspapers, radio and television, but had made no decisions.

"About half of the people testifying in this suit are lawyers, and lawyers don't think they are right — they know by God they are right," said Minton. "My knees shake at the thought of putting Jim Mattox on the stand, because he is a lawyer. You put McDade and Jim, both lawyers, in a room together and you'll have a terrible fight."

During the selection process, 15 members of the 92-member jury panel were dismissed from consideration. Seven said they had already made up their minds on the case.

The eight women jurors include three clerical workers, a technician, a tax examiner, an accountant, a registered nurse and a youth minister.

The male jurors include a bookkeeper, a cable TV technician, a contractor and an elevator serviceman.

"Commercial bribery is an effort to get somebody to violate a duty of trust," Earle told the panel in explaining the state's charges. "Any benefit can be that which is offered for money or for economic gain."

"The indictment has nothing to do with Mattox threatening anyone," Minton said. "He is charged with offering a benefit in return for violating a trust to a beneficiary.

Women don't need to wait for men to ask first

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — A woman has nothing to lose by making the first move as long as she's willing to deal with the man's answer, a Texas A&M assistant professor of psychology says.

Dr. Charlene Muehlenhard has Valentine's Day advice for women: If you're tired of waiting, take the initiative. Ask him first.

In studies on woman-initiated dating, a fairly new development in romance, she looked at the attitudes of conservative versus liberal men toward a woman asking them for a date, and the effect the aggressive woman has on a relationship.

She said some men found it refreshing for the woman to ask first.

"Some men commented that 'I'm always the one to stick my neck out and I'd like it if someone else would do that for a change,' or 'I'd be really flattered,'" said Ms. Muehlenhard.

The response was about the same among both conservative, or traditional, and non-traditional men, she said. Both said they would respond positively to a woman who asked them out if they like her and wanted to date her in the first place, Ms. Muehlenhard said.

Restaurant hosts benefit dinner

NEW YORK (AP) — A benefit dinner was held at the Tavern on the Green restaurant to honor Pierre Franey, the man who popularized French cooking in the United States. The five greatest chefs of France flew in to create the ultimate meal.

But the dinner, organized to raise $300,000 for the March of Dimes, came close to culinary disaster when pastry chef Gaston LeNotre's plane — and his dessert — was delayed by bad weather for 14 hours.

It was not until the 500 paying guests had sampled the sweetbreads with truffles, the frog's legs soup and the lobster dumplings with zucchini blossoms that LeNotre's plane landed from Paris.

LeNotre arrived at the restaurant just in time to serve an original creation called "Pleasure."

Franey, the author of the syndicated newspaper column "The 60-Minute Gourmet" and two cookbooks with the same name, awarded LeNotre with a Steuben glass snail for his efforts.

The four main dishes were created by Paul Bocuse, Roger Verger, Alain Chapel and Jacques Maximin, who all run restaurants granted the highest four-star rating awarded by the prestigious Michelin guide.

The chefs spent only two hours preparing the food, during which time they consumed several bottles of Dom Perignon for energy.

"But this is not difficult," said Maximin, who runs Le Chantecler restaurant in the famed pink Negresco Hotel in Nice. "You are not a great cook if you can only do it for 20. You must be able to do the same thing for 2,000."

The dinner was much simpler but more delicate than a similar dinner prepared for the March of Dimes last year by 14 of the greatest U.S. chefs, who ran the gamut of ethnic specialties.

It may take months to reach miners' bodies

PRICE, Utah (AP) — It will take months to reach 27 miners killed and entombed by a fire Dec. 19, officials said after special teams reentered the still-burning Wilberg mine and began a two-mile journey to the bodies.

Wearing oxygen tanks, the teams made "very encouraging" progress Wednesday in exploring the first 500 feet of the mine, said Bob Henrie, spokesman for the Emery Mining Corp.

Workers began sealing four tunnel junctions to isolate the recovered section from the rest of the mine, a process that is expected to take three or four days, Henrie said.

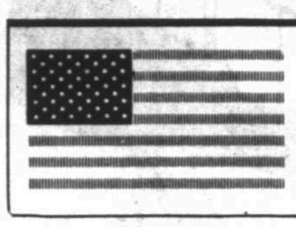
"The feeling at the mine is one of real excitement, satisfaction and achievement about what was accomplished today," Henrie said.

Rescue crews found 25 of the 27 bodies before being forced from the mine by a flare up of the fire Dec. 23. The mine was then sealed to reduce oxygen to the flames and was not entered again until Wednesday.

The bodies are more than a mile from the entrance — the only portal that had not been damaged by the fire — and workers will have to detour around the fire to reach the bodies. They may have to travel two miles through passages weakened by the flames and likely blocked by cave-ins, Henrie said.

Meanwhile, Henrie said the company would decide today whether to take legal action on the decision by the federal Mine Safety and Health Administration to exclude representatives of Emery and Utah Power & Light Co. from hearings into the disaster. Emery operates the central Utah coal mines owned by Utah Power.

New Democratic Party chief looking to South, West to build power base



NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paul G. Kirk Jr., the new chief of the Democratic Party, is looking to the South and the West to rebuild the national party's political fortunes after its landslide defeat by President Reagan last November.

"We have a solid base in the Northeast and Midwest," Kirk said in an interview Wednesday, "and we have a responsibility to those areas. But the South and the West are going to make the difference if we're going to be competitive."

And Kirk is wasting no time trying to woo those regions. He will start with the South on Friday when he meets in Atlanta with the 13 Southern state party chairmen and other Southern officials.

He plans to follow up the meeting in Atlanta with a visit to Plains, Ga., for talks with former President Jimmy Carter.

"I didn't wait for an invitation," said Kirk, who was elected chairman of the Democratic National Committee earlier this month, defeating the Southern candidate, former Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina.

"This is not just a cosmetic visit," he said. "We're going to talk about substantive issues. I don't have all the answers. I want to learn from the South and the West. I want to work with people in those regions to build a base large enough to put together a political majority and win the right to govern."

Kirk is aware that his defeat of Sanford for the party chairmanship angered many Southerners, who viewed his alliance with liberal Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts as a potential handicap in bringing the conservative South back into the Democratic ranks.

"In a contest like that, some people will be upset," the Massachusetts native said. "But they're being helpful and hospitable. We have the same sense of purpose."

Kirk, who served on Kennedy's Senate staff from 1969 to 1977, said he is "proud of my friendship with Senator Kennedy." But, he added, "I'm my own person, and my responsibility is to the party."

Kirk said he wants to "listen to the concerns" that Southern Democratic leaders have about the future of the party. "The party can only benefit from their views," he said.

He said he believes there are at least some areas that he and the Southern party leaders will agree on, including the image of the national party in the South.

"There's been the perception that the national party has not been in sync with progressive mainstream America," the Democratic leader said.

Touchy issue

Deciding what to do about the Midland County Jail has been a thorny issue for several years and the result has been nothing has been done. The jail is still in hot water with the Texas Commission on Jail Standards and a lot of Midlanders probably are uncertain about what is needed and what it will cost.

That's why it's welcome news that the Midland Chamber of Commerce board has appointed an 11-member task force to wade into the jail issue and make recommendations to county commissioners on resolving the dilemma.

The jail issue isn't an easy one and is rendered even more complex by the personalities involved. Some commissioners have wanted to build a new jail while others have wanted to renovate the existing facility to bring it in line with jail commission requirements. For a time, former Sheriff Dallas Smith even sought construction of a "jail stockade" away from the courthouse. That proposal evoked the wrath of residents in neighborhoods where construction was proposed and eventually the plan died. Most recently commissioners have talked about building an entirely new jail facility, again away from the present courthouse building.

None of the proposals has been particularly inexpensive and that's probably at least part of the reason voters earlier turned thumbs down on construction plans for the jail. Earlier this year commissioners had again scheduled a vote on a bond proposal for the jail, but cancelled the election after a citizens' group asked them to do so to allow time for additional information to be given the voters.

Now, however, the chamber decision to toss the jail dilemma to a task force appears to take away personalities and returns the jail discussion to where it should have been all along: An unemotional assessment of the situation with the interest of all Midlanders at the forefront.

The task force is composed of some of those who have been calling for construction of a new jail, some who have strongly recommended alternatives to new jail construction and some interested civic leaders who can inject new thought into the discussion.

Guidelines in which the task force will be working appear realistic enough. They include:

— That the study initially be limited to needs associated with the jail and sheriff's office.

— That the group not be restricted on alternatives.

— That the chamber and task force be permitted the right to require a consensus of opinion of the group before making any report or recommendation to commissioners.

— But that the report or recommendation ultimately be presented to commissioners for consideration.

When the task force makes its recommendation on the jail, Midland residents should be able to rely on it as an honest assessment of the community's county jail needs and the best route to achieve them financially. That's what has been needed all along.

Another View:

Openings for blacks

Relations between the Reagan White House and the familiar circle of black leaders are not cordial or likely to get that way.

In January, the president met with a group of black businessmen and academics.

Familiar faces — Jesse Jackson, Benjamin Hooks of the NAACP and John Jacob of the Urban League — were absent. All three have made overtures, but President Reagan does not appear eager to respond.

Newsweek quotes a White House aide: "All they would do is go out and posture for the cameras and dump all over the president. They're more interested in preserving their own supposed leadership than in a serious dialogue about the problems of blacks."

The magazine says an internal White House memo describing present black leadership as "unremittingly hostile to this president" suggests that Mr. Reagan cultivate new black leaders more in sympathy with his programs and policies.

It did not make sense for the reigning black spokesfigures to put all of their eggs into one basket before the election. In a similar vein, it has not been wise for members of the congressional Black Caucus to tie their fortunes to the Palestine Liberation Organization, the late Maurice Bishop of Grenada or other extreme radical causes and personalities.

Racial bloc politics, the politics of exclusion and hostility, has its risks, and being ignored or shut out by a winning adversary is among them.

Black Americans as a whole have more to gain by moving in the mainstream of national life than by swimming against the current to advance the careers of spokesmen with a vested interest in perpetual underclass status for their constituents.

A multiracial society might be expected to have multiracial politics to a greater extent than appears to exist in the United States today. There must be openings for new leadership, and more flexible leadership than has been characteristic of the recent past, to cope with the new realities and politics emerging as times change.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Feb. 14, the 45th day of 1985. There are 320 days left in the year. Today is Valentine's Day.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 14, 1929, the St. Valentine's Day Massacre took place in a Chicago garage as seven rivals of Al Capone's gang were gunned down.

On this date:

In 1778, the American ship Ranger carried the recently adopted Stars and Stripes to a foreign port for the first time as it arrived in France.

In 1849, President James K. Polk became the first chief executive to be photographed while in office as he posed for Matthew Brady in New York.

In 1859, Oregon was admitted to the Union as the 33rd state.

In 1876, inventors Alexander Graham Bell and Elisha Gray applied separately for patents relating to the telephone. The U.S. Supreme Court eventually ruled Bell was the rightful inventor.

In 1894, comedian Jack Benny was born Benjamin Kubelsky in Waukegan, Ill.

In 1903, the Department of Commerce and Labor was established.

In 1912, Arizona became the 48th state.

In 1945, Peru, Paraguay, Chile and Ecuador joined the United Nations.

In 1962, first lady Jacqueline Kennedy conducted a tour of the White House on network television.

In 1979, the U.S. Ambassador to Afghanistan, Adolph Dubs, was killed during a shootout between his Moslem extremist kidnappers and government security forces.

President Reagan's 'secret'

The secret of President Reagan's popularity is that he has the ability to make us all feel good, when we know we should feel bad.

Art Buchwald

Last week's State of the Union speech was another triumph for the "Gipper."

I have no idea how it played in Peoria, but from what I could tell it went over quite well in Washington.

"What did you think of the president's speech?" I asked a secretary in my building.

"I thought it was wonderful," she said. "He leveled with the American people."

"When did he do that?"

"When he asked the lady cadet from West Point to take a bow from the balcony."

"You felt that was the highlight of his address?" I inquired.

"That and when he asked the lady from Harlem to also take a bow, because of what she had done for little babies."

"Yes, but what about the fact that the president glossed over the budget deficit and indicated that he wanted to proceed with the MX missile and 'Star Wars'? Did you have any feelings on that?"

"Not really. I just thought Nancy looked beautiful in her red dress."

A young man working as an intern on my floor said, "I thought it was a good speech and it was about time someone came out for the poor people and the farmers and the urban centers and deregulation of the airlines and the Peace Corps."

"Then you didn't get the impression that the president was avoiding the issue of how he expected to reduce the budget deficit without raising taxes?"

"Frankly, I wasn't listening that closely. All I know is what he told us. The country's in excellent shape now, and it's going to get even better if Congress passes all of Mr. Reagan's programs."

"That's a big 'if.'"

"Well, they sang Happy Birthday to him."

"Was there anything about the speech you didn't like?"

"I was very annoyed when George Bush and Tip O'Neill kept talking while the president was speaking. They shouldn't have done that."

"Perhaps they weren't paying attention because the president had given the same speech before," I suggested.

"It doesn't matter if they heard it before. They should have pretended they didn't."

My third survey victim told me the thing she liked about the speech was the president's tie.

"Is there anything else you remember about it besides the president's tie?"

"No," she said. "Was I supposed to?"

"Forget the president's speech for a moment. What did you think of the Democratic reply?"

"What reply?"

"They put on their own reply to the president's State of the Union speech."

"I didn't hear it. I was watching 'Dynasty.'"

"Don't tell me you'd rather watch 'Dynasty' than hear the Democrats defend their party."

She said in disbelief, "Now you're putting me on."

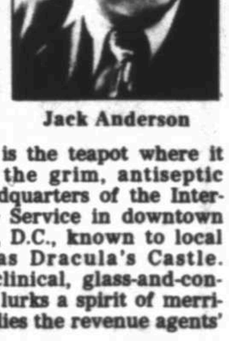
IRS strippers have 'em blushing

WASHINGTON — The federal government, which has regulations forbidding just about anything, appears to have been caught with its "can'ts" down in a touchy area of employee decorum. The question, stripped to its bare essentials, is: Should government workers be permitted to have strip-teasers entertain at the office?



Jack Anderson

The answer seems to be: Nobody knows. At least no one has been able to dig up a regulation that might cover the situation.

The most fascinating feature of this titillating tempest is the teapot where it originated: the grim, antiseptic regional headquarters of the Internal Revenue Service in downtown Washington, D.C., known to local taxpayers as Dracula's Castle. Behind its clinical, glass-and-concrete facade lurks a spirit of merriment that belies the revenue agents' grim image.

On Aug. 30, 1984, at 3 p.m., a woman demurely clad in an evening gown and carrying a violin case showed up unannounced in the office of a supervisor on his birthday. The young woman first sang a congratulatory message and played a tune on her fiddle. Then, in the course of a little dance number, the young woman stripped down to a revealing swimsuit. The whole birthday surprise lasted no more than seven or eight minutes.

The repercussions lasted a lot longer. An IRS spokesman described the birthday boy as a married man and a "shy kind of guy whom you can make turn red pretty easily." Sure enough, the supervisor was so discomfited he reported the "Strip-A-Gram" to his boss, a branch chief, who reported the incident to the district director.

The IRS, perhaps wary of the Supreme Court's ruling that sleeping in the park opposite the White House constitutes free expression protected by the First Amendment, has declined to ban stripping outright. Pressed for comment, an IRS spokesman told my reporter Scott Barrett only that "we don't sanction" such forms of free speech on government premises.

A second incident occurred in almost equally august quarters last Dec. 19 at the Smithsonian Institution's environmental research center in Rockville, Md. A woman employee who had, until then, been making no great fuss over her birthday, was visited by a young man dressed in a Santa Claus outfit. With approprite jollity, St. Nick peeled off everything.

William Klein, director of the research center, said he had been "totally unaware" that the birthday-suit surprise had been planned. "If I had known, I would have stopped it," he said. "I totally disapprove of it."

When asked for enlightenment on the legality of stripping in government buildings, the Office of Personnel Management responded in effect that there is no official policy. An official did cite a passage in the Code of Federal Regulations, titled "General Conduct Prejudicial to the Government," which reads: "An employee shall not engage in criminal, infamous, dishonest, immoral or notoriously disgraceful conduct or other conduct prejudicial to the government."

But of course it wasn't an employee who did the stripping. Is it prejudicial to watch? The OPM official passed the buck to the General Services Administration, which is directly responsible for government buildings.

"We're not arbitrators," said a GSA spokesman, doing a little sidestep and tossing responsibility deftly over the footlights. "I doubt there's a policy on this."

He did say that GSA, like any landlord, doesn't encourage in-house parties, and expressed the feeling that such affairs should be "in good taste."

• • •

STRICTLY PERSONAL: Some readers have suggested that the government's fancy computer equipment must be tempting targets for sticky-fingered employees, and asks if this is a problem.

Unfortunately, it is indeed a problem, and at the Pentagon, where security should be the tightest.

The Defense Department's Office of Special Investigations is trying to track down the thieves who have been heisting electronic equipment from top-secret communications facilities.

The stolen items include computer gear, oscilloscopes and "scramble" devices that protect sensitive telephone conversations from wiretappers. The OSI investigation is zeroing in on Pentagon employees with top-secret clearance who have access to the equipment, and at least one higher-up who reportedly tried to prevent the official inquiry by covering up the thefts.

What's particularly scary is that the stolen items were apparently used to tap into the Pentagon's main computer by using the classified password. The investigators are trying to determine whether the thefts are the work of one or two individuals or an organized ring.

Meanwhile, computers are causing a different problem at the Federal Aviation Administration. According to the Transportation Department's inspector general, some FAA employees spend too much time playing games on the computers they're supposed to use to predict dangerous flying weather for the nation's airlines.

Mengele: A reason to prosecute

LOS ANGELES — Irena Kirkland is, among many other excellent things, a life-affirming person and one of Washington's dozen or so CTs — Correct Thinkers. One reason she is both of these things is that she passed through a furnace few of us can even imagine and emerged an alloy of steel and laughter. Somewhere in Latin America, perhaps in Paraguay, there lurks an evil man who today has fresh reasons to fear the kind of steel and spirit he helped to produce in people like her.

George F. Will

Irena Neumann, as she was before she married Lane Kirkland, and her sister Alena, arrived at Auschwitz in October, 1944. They tumbled from cattle cars with 2,500 other Jews. She and Alena had been sent from Czechoslovakia to a concentration camp for a year before they arrived at the Auschwitz depot under the eye of Josef Mengele.

All but 200 of the 2,500 were immediately dispatched to the gas chambers. Those spared were thought suitable for labor. Any sign of infirmity–even wearing glasses–could get a person selected for death. Irene and Alena (who today lives in Geneva) may have been spared because, although they were nearsighted, their youthful vanity caused them not to wear glasses.

A "kapo" — a prisoner functioning as a guard — asked their birthdates. Having long since lost all documents, they could have said anything, but they told the truth. When the kapo heard the identical birthdates (with their heads shaved they did not stand out as identical twins), she told them to give different birthdates. Otherwise they would be sent to Mengele, the sadistic pseudo-doctor and science quack who conducted lunatic experiments, especially on twins, who mesmerized his small, warped mind.

Recently in Jerusalem, at a meeting of twins and others who survived Auschwitz, a mother recalled that Mengele was enraged when she gave birth. He had not noticed she was pregnant. Novel forms of abortion interested him, so a chance had been missed. He forced her to cover her breasts with tape so that he could see how long the child would take to starve to death. He was enraged when she killed her own child with a morphine injection, an act of mercy.

The Lord said, Vengeance is mine. But here in Los Angeles, the Simon Weisenthal Institute is giving the Lord a hand concerning Mengele. The Center has discovered documents that suggest U.S. authorities may have had Mengele in custody in 1947, and that in 1962 he may have sought admission to Canada. The Center wants to know what the government knew and when it knew it, and what is now being done about tracking him to Paraguay, or wherever. Good questions, all.

A federal magistrate here has just held that Andrija Artukovic, 85 and infirm, is mentally competent to cooperate with his lawyers in fighting extradition to Yugoslavia. He faces prosecution for complicity in the murder of 770,000 persons while he was minister of the interior in the Nazi puppet government of Croatia. After four decades, Nazi crimes still resonate in this season of sickening commemorations, such as the commemoration of what is ludicrously called the "liberation" of Warsaw by Soviet oppressors.

Why, it is frequently asked, continue trying to prosecute old men like Mengele and Artukovic? Certainly the reason is not deterrence, not the prevention of Holocausts. No punishment can affect the calculations of the genocidal, who are not careful calculators of cost-benefit ratios.

Yes, prosecutions foster awareness of the Holocaust and, yes, pursuit of the genocidal is an obligatory response to life in an age of genocides, in Uganda, Cambodia and, today, Afghanistan. But regarding the real bedrock reason for pursuing the criminals, Irena Kirkland has a more correct idea.

She knows there can be no proportionality, no punishment that "fits" the crimes. But she also knows the truth of this Italian proverb: Revenge is a dish best eaten cold. Her reason for feeling deeply pleased about the continuing pursuit of Mengele is this: Somewhere, Mengele is feeling fear.

That reason may seem to lack metaphysical flourish, and it is not "forward looking" in the sense of having a utilitarian, reforming purpose. But who cares? Irena Kirkland's reason satisfies an intuition so deeply felt that it surely expresses some constituent of our moral nature. It is the conviction that someone who has caused so much pain should never know ease. Let us just say that Irena Kirkland's thinking is correct thinking, and get on with the prosecutions, by which we keep faith with the persecuted.

TB rate rises in Turkey

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Tuberculosis, once the leading cause of death in Turkey, is making a comeback after having been brought under control a decade ago through a vigorous medical campaign.

According to official statistics, 200,000 Turks now suffer from active tuberculosis, up from 72,000 10 years ago.

Since 1977, the ranks of tubercular patients have been swelling at the rate of 30,000 people annually.

More ominous for the future is the high incidence of healthy carriers of tubercle bacillus, the bacterium that causes the disease. They number 13 million out of a total population of 50 million, according to the latest figures.

"The tuberculosis problem is about to explode. These 13 million are under constant risk of developing the disease," said Dr. Ferit Kocoglu, head of the Association to Fight Tuberculosis.

"The problem will remain on the agenda for 66 years at least until these people are dead and buried," he said.

In the 1940's tuberculosis was the leading cause of death in Turkey, with 260 deaths per 100,000 people.

At least one member of every family had the disease, health officials say.

In the 1950's the Health Ministry launched a massive campaign throughout the country to eradicate the disease more commonly known as consumption.

Health teams fanned around the country to take X-rays and to give BCG vaccination to the people.

Seminars were given to educate the public, specialized clinics were set up for tuberculosis diagnosis and treatment.

The mortality rate plummeted by 40 times.

Currently the rate is eight per 100,000 people. Consumption ranks eighth in Turkey as a cause of death after heart disease, cancer and childbirth complications.

Kocoglu said this compares poorly with industrialized nations but Turkey is still much better off than most countries.

Officials cite various reasons for the current acceleration.

"We thought we had licked the problem and relaxed our vigilance... but the snake has raised its head again," President Kenan Evren said in a recent statement.

He said other communicable diseases such as malaria and hepatitis are also on the rise, mainly because Turkey is surrounded by countries where such epidemics are not under control.

Several solidarity members detained in raid

WORLD

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — An Interior Ministry spokesman said today seven prominent Solidarity activists were detained in a police raid, but he believed they would not be arrested. Solidarity leader Lech Walesa, who was released, was attempting to gain the activists' release, his wife said.

Andrezej Sadlinkski, a spokesman at the Interior Ministry in Warsaw, said the seven were detained Wednesday because they "are known for their anti-state activities."

Walesa, who was at the meeting, was released immediately after police forced their way into it in Gdansk on Wednesday afternoon. He was out attempting to gain the activists' release and was unavailable for comment, his wife, Danuta, said by telephone. She said she did not know anything more about the incident.

Sadlinksi said the prosecutor's office in Gdansk would determine whether the seven would be arrested but added "I do not think it will happen."

"As I know, Mr. Walesa was also there and he was released," Sadlinski said in a telephone interview. "I don't think it is an extremely serious case, but as those people are known for their anti-state activities such a detention has an absolutely legal character. It was certainly not any meeting for a bridge game."

Under Polish law, a person may be held for up to 48 hours before he is placed under formal arrest.

Spokesmen at the prosecutor's office and police headquarters in Gdansk were unavailable for comment.

There was no mention of the raid in state-run newspapers.

About 20 plainclothes and uniformed policemen forced their way into an apartment to break up the meeting, according to Grzegorz Grzelak, a Walesa aide.

The seven activists were taken away in cars, Grzelak said.

Among those detained were Solidarity leaders from throughout Poland, including Bogdan Lis of Gdansk, Wladyslaw Frasyniuk of Wroclaw, Stanislaw Handzlik of Krakow, Janusz Palubicki of Poznan, and Adam Michnik of Warsaw, a prominent union adviser and leader of the disbanded KOR workers' rights group, Grzelak said.

Also detained were Gdansk union activists, Jacek Merkel and Mariusz Wilk, Grzelak said.

Pakistan helps in attacks on military posts

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The Soviet-installed regime in Afghanistan has acknowledged that three strategic military posts are under rebel siege and accused Pakistan of providing assistance to the guerrillas.

Many people, including children, have been slain and considerable damage caused in Pakistan-supported attacks on the border posts of Barikot, Bangash and Chamkani, the Afghan government radio said Wednesday.

Western diplomatic sources in New Delhi said earlier that Soviet airborne assaults on Chamkani and Barikot failed to free the beleaguered Afghan troops. The Chamkani siege reportedly began nearly two months ago.

Americans buy cars in China

PEKING (AP) — A Shanghai company is cashing in on demand for vintage American cars imported to China in the 1940s before the Communist takeover, the official China Daily reported today.

The Hudsons, Plymouths and Fords have been located by the Shanghai Mechanical and Electrical Equipment Supply Corp. and sold to foreign collectors, the English-language newspaper said.

One car recently was sold to an American businessman for more than $10,000, it said.

"We have spent a lot of effort in searching for these cars," said the firm's spokesman Gu Jiajun.

He said most are damaged or rusted, "but we have organized a special team of many skilled hands to undertake repairs."

Badgers march in for Chap homecoming

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

With the loss to New Mexico Military Institute at Roswell Monday, tonight's game with Amarillo College assumes an immediacy that transcends what was expected to be a light-hearted homecoming caper for the Midland College Chaparrals.

Instead of a one-game cushion in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference race, Midland College, 20-4 and 11-2, finds itself locked with Odessa College in a tie for first place.

If the late February showdown with the Wranglers is to carry title significance, this is a game MC must win.

A week ago, this game didn't carry the same pressure as it does now.

THE CHAPS easily could have lost both of its New Mexico adventures. Last Thursday's win over NMJC was a 78-75 squeaker that went down to the final seconds before a couple of Teviin Binns free throws stowed it in the win column.

Monday, again the 6-9 Binns' role was significant. After picking up two quick personals, the WJCAC's leading scorer played in handcuffs the rest of the night and wound up with only one point.

"We had our chances to win," said Coach Jerry Stone. "Zeak Williams got three straight steals, but we only got two field goals, since we had a turnover. That gave us the lead, but we then had another runover and they got a three-point play out of it."

With 12 seconds left, Ricky Grace drove for two, "But they canned one from the corner with three seconds left and we just didn't have time to get a good shot off."

NMMI, forgotten as a title threat after being mauled in Midland back in December, lurks a menacing game behind the leaders after the 64-63 win over the Chaps.

"Amarillo has been real tough against us and we were fortunate to win that game last month in overtime," Stone worried as he looked at the remainder of the schedule. "We only beat Howard by three on our floor and we've split in two meetings with Odessa this year and we only beat Western Texas by nine on our court."

Of Midland's four losses this season, three have been to WJCAC foes, one of which was to AC, now 8-4, in the finals of a preseason tournament at Amarillo.

4-5A swimmers to battle

MHS boys put district title on line

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Most of the District 4-5A boys and girls swim teams are tapering down their workouts and resting in preparation for the Friday and Saturday district competition at the Odessa Permian Pool.

All but Midland High's boys team that is.

The two-time defending district champion Bulldogs will have some swimmers who will be shaved and rested for the meet which qualifies the top six swimmers in each event for regional competition in Lubbock March 1-2. But many of the favored Midland swimmers are still doing heavy workouts in preparation for the regional and state meets.

"Some of our swimmers that are trying to crack the top six will shave and taper," Midland Coach Jesse Marsh said, "but those who are in the top four already, we're just going to take a chance on."

WITH MARSH expecting to place at least two swimmers in each of the 11 finals on Saturday, beginning at 2 p.m., he seems to be taking a fair risk.

Leading the 7-0 Bulldogs is senior Andrew Jordan, a freestyle and breaststroke specialist. But the list of strong Midland swimmers does not end there.

Seniors John Brenner (backstroke, individual medley and butterfly) and juniors Ricky Perkins (butterfly and freestyle sprints), Alan Smith (freestyle sprints), Bret Carver (breaststroke) and many more highlight the list.

Others expected by Marsh to make Saturday's finals are Sam Perry, Jay Green, Alan Gruzins, Paul Harris, Kyle Cook and Rob Frable.

Midland packs a strong punch in diving also with the top three divers in District 4-5A. Senior Doc White is the favorite on the one-meter board, but sophomores Nate Neatherlin and Gene Dockal will give White a run.

The Bulldogs aren't the only area swimmers expected to do well in the weekend competition, however.

Midland Lee Coach Charles Guthrie lists a number of athletes, on both his boys and girls teams, that he expects to advance past district.

"We just don't have the team depth to win it all," Guthrie said. "Most of our kids are sophomores and juniors. They'll be there in certain events, but in others they're not going to make it."

The girls' team title should be a contest between Abilene Cooper and San Angelo, with both Midland teams fighting it out in the middle of the pack.

PERHAPS LEE'S best bet on the girls team is its 200 medley relay team consisting of Caroline Reed, Kelly Simmons, Kristin Burton and either Janet Faulkner or Tamara Mathis.

Reed is also a strong contender in the 100 backstroke and 200 individual medley. Simmons competes in the 100 butterfly and the backstroke, while Burton is strong in the 500 freestyle.

On the boys' side for Lee, Guthrie has a young bunch of hungry swimmers with a good chance of making a splash at Permian.

Sophomore Alan Reed's specialties are the 200 and 500-yard freestyles, while the Rebs' only seniors, Frank Yarborough and Nick Huppler should also qualify for the finals. Yarborough in the 50 freestyle and 100 breaststroke and Huppler as a member of the 400 freestyle team.

The Midland girls are led by sophomore sensation Becky Simpson. Simpson has not lost a district meet in either the 200 or 500-yard freestuyle events this season.

Junior Debbie Colson (butterfly and sprints), Kathleen Dunbar (butterfly and individual medley), and Stacey Barbee (breaststroke and individual medley) are all possibilities to make the finals.

Friday's preliminaries begin at 1 p.m. at the Permian Pool and should last until 5 or 5:30 p.m. The diving finals, in both one-meter and three-meter events, will be held Friday evening after the swimming prelims are finished.

Saturday's swim finals will begin at 2 p.m. and last about two hours.

Midland College's Teviin Binns has major college recruiters knocking at his door, hoping to get him to perform his skills in their uniforms next season.

Mustangs halt cage slide

DALLAS (AP) — The smallest Mustang stopped Southern Methodist's stampede off the Southwest Conference basketball summit with his finest game.

Stubby Butch Moore, a 5-foot-9 junior guard built like a bulldog who looks like smokin' Joe Frazier, scored a career-high 25 points Wednesday night to carry the Mustangs to a hard-earned 81-79 victory over Texas A&M.

The victory gave SMU a one-game edge over A&M, Arkansas and Texas Tech in a still-to-be decided league race.

IN OTHER games, Tech nudged Rice 61-60 and Texas Christian bounced Baylor 81-70.

"Butch Moore is the best player they have," said Aggie Coach Shelby Metcalf. "I've said that all along. He's a great competitor."

Moore hit his first nine shots and said, "I haven't had a game like this since I played against Mt. Vernon in high school back at Newburgh, New York.

"I felt in the warmups like my shot was going to go. So I took it to 'em."

SMU made 15 of 18 foul shots in the second half but went 8:29 without a field goal as the Mustangs almost blew a 19-point lead.

"The team came back from three tough losses (Arkansas, North Carolina State, Baylor)," said SMU Coach Dave Bliss. "The Aggies made a great comeback at the end but we just gutted it out. The first half of this game showed what this team can do."

Bliss said his players had earned a day off with their victory.

"We're going to take tomorrow off and work out very lightly on Friday to get ready for Louisville," said Bliss.

SMU meets Louisille in Moody Coliseum in a nationally televised nonconference game on Saturday afternoon.

SMU improved its league record to 9-3 while the Aggies fell to 7-4 before a sellout crowd of 9,007 in jammed Moody Coliseum. The Mustangs are 19-5 overall and A&M is 15-7.

Guard Don Marbury scored a game-high 27 points before he fouled out for the Aggies.

"SMU has a lot of talent but I don't think anyone can leave here saying that we didn't put on a show for the crowd," Marbury said. "In fact, a lot of those folks in the crowd belonged to the Aggies."

Jon Koncak scored 24 points for the Mustangs and had five blocked shots while Kenny Brown scored 24 points for the Aggies.

"It was a great game," said Brown. "It took a lot of pride to come back after we were down 19 points."

Coming off a 94-90 upset win over SMU on Monday, Baylor lost to TCU as guard Dennis Nutt scored 22 points and Jamie Dixon added a career-high 21 off the bench.

TCU IMPROVED its record to 14-9, 6-6 in the SWC, while Baylor dropped to 9-13 and 2-9.

"I thought their outside shooting was outstanding, and Jamie Dixon really gave them a lift off the bench. We tried a lot of different defenses tonight, and nothing slowed them down," Baylor Coach Jim Haller said. "We didn't have the intensity or excitment that we had against SMU. It's tough to play with that kind of emotion twice within three days."

In Houston, guard Bubba Jennings scored 28 points, including a pair of free throws with eight seconds left, to pace Texas Tech, which upped its record to 15-7 overall and 7-4 in the conference.

Rice is 2-10 in the conference and 9-13 overall.

SWC Roundup

Binns creates air traffic

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

If you think you've noticed an increase in air traffic buzzing over the Chaparral Center on the way to Midland Regional Airport these days, you might be able to thank Midland College's Teviin Binns for that.

Binns, the leading scorer in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference with a 22.6 points per game average, has more than a dozen major college coaches regularly making the air trek to his Midland College dorm room.

And that's not mentioning the fifty or so other coaches who have expressed interest in the rangy 6-foot-9 center from the Bronx, N.Y. All the attention has made Binns the most sought after player in Chaps' history.

Tonight, Binns will lead the front-running Chaps (11-2) in a WJCAC contest at 8 p.m. at the Chaparral Center against Amarillo College. MC, a one-point loser to New Mexico Military Insitute Monday, needs a win to keep pace with Odessa College, also 11-2, at the top of the WJCAC.

SO, WITH a bundle of assistant coaches hanging on the railings with the anticipation of Binns some day putting on their team's uniform, Binns will put on a show of what he does best. Putting the ball in the basket.

"I just like to score, I don't know why, I just love it. Plus my blocked shots," Binns added, in an effort to please Chap Coach Jerry Stone. "I know you have to play defense in college basketball, but you have to score, too."

And ever since leaving the Big Apple for his senior year of high school in Valdosta, Ga., Binns has become the kind of offensive force that can keep coaches up nights.

Despite his vaunted skills under the basket, Binns has had a history of being unable to play the full 40 minutes of a game. His team leading 15.06 per game scoring average last season was restricted only by his scarcity of minutes played.

Most college coaches, however, feel the pencil-thin Binns can still work his offensive magic in major college ball despite his lean 195-pound frame.

Upper body strength is something Binns has concentrated on. Although he has gained little weight through an extensive weight training and running program, Binns has upped his capacity for work, and thus, his playing time.

And with the increased minutes, have come the points.

After being named all-conference and second team all-region in his freshman season, Binns has improved in nearly every statistical category, not only leading the WJCAC in points, but in rebounding (9.1 per game) and blocked shots (84 total). With those figures, he is a solid candidate for All-American honors.

"He is a lot better player this year," Stone admits. "First of all he has a lot better self-image. And, although he hasn't gained much weight, he is definitely stronger in stamina. We used to have to take him out just to rest him."

That is rarely the case, unless of course, the Chaparrals are rolling up a comfortable margin, a sight which is becoming more and more familiar these days at Chap Center.

"Everybody is playing together and nobody is hogging the ball selfishly," Binns said. "We just work hard and try to play solid defense and score when we can and try not to force it."

ANOTHER ONE of the reasons Binns has found his niche a little more comfortable this season was the recruitment of 6-4, 210-pound postman, Tony Wright, also from New York.

In Wright, Binns not only has a friend with the same background and a roommate, but a protective force on the court.

"I wasn't comfortable here last year, I felt good here but if I had someone here just to talk to it would've been all right. I've known Tony for three years, and it may be one of the reasons (for improving this season), you never know. It's fun this year for me. A whole lot more fun than last year."

If Binns continues to have his fun, and the Chaps keep up their winning pace, his dream of major college basketball won't be far behind.

But Binns is keeping his choice a secret. He says he has narrowed the choices down to 10 schools, but he isn't telling.

Baylor starts cage probe

WACO, Texas (AP) — Baylor University officials have announced that they have begun an in-house investigation into the school's basketball program.

But Coach Jim Haller said Wednesday that recruiting violations were not involved.

Dr. Herbert H. Reynolds, Baylor's president, released a prepared statement Tuesday night that said he and two other members of a three-man committee had begun "evaluating some concerns" about the program.

With Reynolds on the investigating team are Bill Menefee, Baylor's athletic director, and Edwin P. Horner, Baylor's faculty representative to the Southwest Conference.

The Southwest Conference has been informed of the evaluation, Reynolds said.

"Some of the concerns relate only to the disappointment of the past two seasons, but other concerns will require a thorough review of the program, its leadership and the players," Reynolds' statement said.

Baylor's basketball program has been headed for the past seven seasons by Haller, who has a record of 102-125 since 1977.

Haller told the Waco Tribune-Herald Wednesday that he had had scores of calls asking if recruiting violations were involved and who had reported Baylor.

Asked about Haller's status, Menefee said Tuesday night, "Jim is in place. I don't care to go beyond what's in the statement."

Horner said, "I cannot embellish on the statement."

Rangerettes play Van Horn Friday

Greenwood High School's girls basketball team, ranked No. 2 in Texas Class 2A, will play Van Horn at 8 p.m. Friday at Crane in a bi-district playoff contest.

The Rangerettes took the championship in District 8-2A by going 10-0 in league play. The Rangerettes' lone loss this season came at the hands of Andrews.

Wacker's blue chip haul 'stinkin' unbelieveable'

Associated Press

SWC Grid Recruiting

The Texas Christian Horned Frogs got as many schoolboy football blue chips as the rest of the Southwest Conference on national signing day Wednesday, but the SWC failed to "touch the heart" of Bay City wide receiver Hart Lee Dykes, the state's top prospect.

TCU Coach Jim Wacker described his harvest of what he called "gold-chips" as "stinkin' unbelievable."

FIVE OF the state's top 14 blue chippers signed to play for Wacker, who was the SWC Coach of the Year with an 8-4 record. Four blue chippers went out of state, including Dykes, who signed with Oklahoma State of the Big Eight Conference.

"Oklahoma State showed a personal interest in me," Dykes said. "They touched my heart."

Overall, recruitment day belonged to Wacker and TCU, who also landed Midland High tight end Darrell Davis, listed among the Top 30 Texas recruits.

"Quite honestly, it still hasn't quite soaked in that this could be all really be true," Wacker said in the wake of the school's gold-plated harvest of schoolboy talent. "The response we have received this year has been just stinkin' unbelieveable.

"No question, this is going to be an excellent recruiting class. Basically, our coaches and players here do a great job of selling the program for us."

Jasper wide receiver Reggie Davis, Huffman running back Greg Moore, Houston Madison quarterback Ronald Jiles, Fort Worth Eastern Hills defensive tackle Mitchell Benson and Madison wide receiver Jarrod Delaney — all Texas blue chippers — will play for the Horned Frogs next season.

Southern Methodist got two blue chip signees from Corsicana, running back Bill Jones, 6-1, 205, and linebacker Robert McDade, 6-3, 230. Navasota quarterback Lynn James, who had earlier given a verbal commitment, and Lamar Consolidated cornerback Roderick Wilson, also chose the Mustangs.

"We're very pleased with the way things went," said SMU Coach Bobby Collins. "We recruited well to our needs."

The Texas Aggies signed three outstanding running backs — Steve Greene of Littlefield , Troy Jones of LaFayette, La. and James Howse of Murfreesboro, Tenn.

Greene, 6-1, 195, was a Class 3A all-stater, who led all the state's runners with 2,885 yards for the 1984 season. He also rushed 349 yards in a game against Friona, the top rushing performance of the season.

Howse led his team to a Tennessee state championship last season and rushed for 2,400 yards and scored 29 touchdowns. Jones scored 34 touchdowns land rushed for 1,856 yards.

"Outstanding out-of-state recruiting really helped us," said A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill. "We made a decision to recruit Louisiana like it was Texas."

The Aggies also signed Adam Bob, the Louisiana Defensive Player of the Year who also is out of Lafayette.

Arkansas Razorbacks Coach Ken Hatfield helped stem the trend of losing Arkansas players to out-of-state schools by signing two members of The Associated Press' Super Team, Helena lineman Freddie Childress, 6-4, 295, and Pocahontas lineman LeShon Browne, 6-2, 235.

The Texas Longhorns signed Ed Cunningham, a 6-8, 260 defensive tackle from Sanford-Fritsch. Cunningham had earlier given a verbal commitment to Texas.

LUBBOCK DUNBAR blue chip tight end Sam Collins signed with the Baylor Bears.

SWC co-champion Houston picked up Galveston Ball running back Kimball Anders, 5-10, 200.

Delaney was the final blue chipper to come into the Horned Frog fold, making his decision late Tuesday.

"Jiles and I have been hooking up since the seventh grade," Delaney said. "I figured if we went to TCU and played to the best of our abilities, we could win a championship there."

Texas Tech didn't land any of the so-called blue chips, but did well in West Texas, landing 1,000 yard rushers Walter Jones and Tyrone Thurman of Midland Lee and Dal Watson of Odessa Permian.

No pass, no play rule halts Paschal team

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A high school soccer coach's misinterpretation of Texas' new "no pass, no play" regulations has caused his team to be booted out of the state soccer championships and forced to forfeit its victories.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported that the Fort Worth Paschal soccer team will be replaced in the march toward the state championship by an El Paso team it had beaten.

Three members of the 19-player squad were counting, as one of the four courses they were required to pass, an outdoor awareness and adventure class, state officials said.

Under the new legislation enacted last year, students must be passing four "core" courses in order to participate in athletics or other extracurricular activities.

Certain physical education and other locally optional courses cannot be counted.

Soccer coach James Bretthauer took responsibility Wednesday for the foul-up. Neither he, school principal Radford Gregg nor any counselor told the players they could not receive credit for P.E. classes, he said.

"I have to take that responsibility. There was confusion at the beginning of school with the new changes under the new state laws. I thought all was OK until Monday, when eligibility rules were discussed," Bretthauer said.

The coach said he acted on incorrect information from other coaches.

"I checked our students after the eligibility meeting and found three in violation, so I reported it," he said.

His players learned Tuesday from Bretthauer that the misunderstanding has cost them a chance at the state championships. They were two games away from a state title game.

Moses to take stand in trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Olympic track star Edwin Moses planned to take the stand today in his trial on a misdemeanor charge of seeking $100 worth of sexual favors from a policewoman posing as a prostitute.

The prosecution rested its case Wednesday after calling two police officers directly involved in the case.

"As far as the solicitation, it was very direct and one of the quickest of the night," testified Police Sgt. George E. Haines Jr., who monitored the conversation between Moses and an undercover policewoman. "... I made the comment, 'Gee, that was quick.'"

HAINES TESTIFIED that he was listening to the conversation picked up by a hidden microphone worn by Susan Gonzales, the policewoman. Moses spoke to her from his Mercedes Benz at the corner of Sunset Boulevard and Genesee Avenue in Hollywood on the night he was arrested.

Haines testified that Moses was one of 35 men arrested early Jan. 13 in a prostitution crackdown. Moses has pleaded innocent in the case.

He is the winner of 109 consecutive races in the 400-meter hurdles and gold medalist in both the 1976 and 1984 Olympics.

Police have contended that Moses pulled away in his car as Ms. Gonzales directed him to and planned to pick her up a few hundred yards down Sunset Boulevard. Moses has said he was just joking and drove off in another direction before being stopped by other officers.

In his testimony, Haines recalled that Moses offered Ms. Gonzales $100 for sex.

"The amount of money was the largest amount for that night," Haines said.

However, there was an apparent disparity between Haines' testimony and that given by Ms. Gonzales on Tuesday. She had said that after the alleged solicitation, she had repeated the slang terms she said Moses used for two specific sex acts.

Sooners rip Iowa State

Associated Press

Wayman Tisdale scored 33 points, and Oklahoma recorded its fourth straight 20-victory season by beating Iowa State, 104-76, in a Big Eight Conference game.

The victory gave Oklahoma a 20-4 record, 9-0 in the Big Eight. Tisdale scored 19 of his points during an eight-minute stretch in the first half, which ended with the Sooners leading 48-32. Oklahoma led by as many as 30 points in the second half.

In other games involving Top Twenty teams, No. 9 Southern Methodist survived Texas A&M 81-79, No. 5 Memphis State defeated Cindinnati 68-55, seventh-ranked Duke downed Stetson 94-51, 13th-ranked North Carolina defeated No. 20 Maryland 60-54 and Virginia Commonwealth upset No. 19 Alabama-Birmingham 67-53.

Top Ten

Keith Lee scored 18 points, and Memphis State led all the way in beating Cincinnati in a Metro Conference game. Memphis State led by as many as 21 points in the first half, and the closest Cincinnati could get in the second half was 62-52 with 2:15 to play. Memphis State now is 18-2 and 8-1 in the conference.

Duke scored the game's first eight points and never looked back in its non-conference game with Stetson. Kevin Strickland, a reserve forward, scored 13 of his team-leading 19 points in the second half. Stetson got within 50-30 with 15:05 to play but could come no closer.

College Basketball

Second Ten

Brad Daugherty scored 21 points and North Carolina denied Maryland Coach Lefty Dreisell his 500th coaching victory for at least one more game. Maryland, which trailed 35-32 at halftime, led 50-49 late in the second half before a basket by Warren Martin put the Tar Heels ahead for good.

North Carolina is 19-5 and 6-3 in the Atlantic Coast Conference, while Maryland fell to 19-8 and 5-4 in the ACC. Len Bias led the Terrapins with 15 points.

Rolando Lamb had 26 points and Mike Schlegel 22 as Virginia Commonwealth moved into a tie with Alabama-Birmingham at the top of the Sun Belt Conference. Both have 9-2 records. VCU led 27-23 at halftime, and upped that lead to 41-28 with 13:40 to play. James Ponder had 21 points for UAB, 21-6.

Unranked

Rutgers-Newark tied the NCAA record for consecutive losses with 46, bowing 97-65 to Ramapo. It was the last game of the season for Rutgers-Newark, a Division III school which went 0-22 this season. Cliff Owen led Ramapo with 30 points.

C.W. Post saw its 32-game Big Apple Conference winning streak ended with a 59-58 loss to Dowling. It was believed to have been the longest conference winning streak in the nation. Mike Echeandia hit a layup with 45 seconds left that gave Dowling the victory.

MUGS sign up Saturday

From Staff Reports

First sign up for the Midland United Girls Softball Association fast pitch leagues will be held Saturday at the Midland Park Mall.

Additional registration times for the leagues will be Feb. 23 and March 2 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at San Jacinto Junior High auditorium both days.

Registration fee is $30 per girl, payable at registration. If the girl is new to the league, a certified copy of her birth certificate will be needed. The entry fee will be used to provide the girls with a uniform and insurance.

MUGS is divided into four divisions, but age groups have changed this year. Division I is now open for ages seven through nine while Division II will be ages 10 through 12. Division III is ages 13-15 and Division IV is ages 16-19.

Division I will play five innings while the other divisions will play seven innings.

Every team is managed by a woman, a female chaperone and two coaches. Every girl who registers is placed on a team and is assured of playing at least two innings in Division I and three innings in the other divisions.

All games will be played at the MUGS facility at Ulmer Park and all games start at 6:30 p.m.

All-Star teams from each division will be chosen at the end of regular season to advance into state, regional and national competition.

The season starts April 10 and runs through June. For additional information call 682-5576.

Thomas' 25 feeds sink Mavericks

Associated Press

Isiah Thomas' thigh was still hurting, but there was nothing wrong with his helping hands.

The All-Star guard scored 23 points and tied a club record by dishing out 25 assists as the Detroit Pistons defeated the Dallas Mavericks 124-119 Wednesday night.

"I think I was able to push the ball up the court better than last night (a 139-126 overtime loss to Chicago)," said Thomas, who leads the National Basketball Association in assists with a 13.2 average.

He suffered a bruised thigh in Sunday's All-Star Game. "My leg was loosened up. My thigh is just sore — not as tight as it's been the past couple of days — just sore."

While the Pistons got plenty of assists from Thomas, the backcourt wizard had plenty of help from Terry Tyler, who led Detroit with 25 points. Dallas' Mark Aguirre led all scorers with 40 points. The Pistons outscored the Mavericks 25-6 over an eight-minute stretch to lead 63-47 at halftime. But the Mavericks, who got 14 fourth-quarter points from Jay Vincent, cut the deficit to 111-109 with 3:20 remaining. Tyler and Thomas each scored two baskets in the next two minutes and Dallas couldn't recover.

NBA

"We fell behind in the first half and I don't think we were really ready to play," said Dallas Coach Dick Motta. "I think Mark was wired. I just honestly feel the rest of the players stood around and watched the Aguirre show (27 points) in the first half. We let this game get too far out of hand before we started playing basketball."

The 25 assists by Thomas tied the Piston record set by Kevin Porter in 1979.

76ers 131, Knicks 129

Rookie Charles Barkley scored five straight points in the final 41 seconds to seal Philadelphia's victory and enable the 76ers to tie Boston for first place in the Atlantic Division. Moses Malone scored 37 points, Andrew Toney added 23 and Barkley 20 for Philadelphia, which won its fourth straight game. Barkley's late surge offset a 46-point performance by New York's Bernard King, which tied the mark set by Buffalo's Bob McAdoo in 1974 for most points by a visiting player at the Philadelphia Spectrum.

Nets 112, Cavaliers 105

Otis Birdsong scored 10 of his 31 points in the fourth quarter and Mike Gminski hit five free throws in the closing minutes. Trailing 90-89 early in the fourth period, the Nets outscored Cleveland 12-1 to open a 101-91 lead. Micheal Ray Richardson had five points in the decisive spurt and Birdsong added four while Cleveland scored only one field goal in the first 6:43 of the fourth period. Cleveland's World B. Free led all scorers with 34 points.

Hawks 94, Jazz 88

Kevin Willis scored 11 of his 21 points in the fourth quarter to rally Atlanta, which trailed for most of the game. Utah turned cold in the fourth quarter and the entire team only managed to match Willis' 11 points in the period. Dominique Wilkins led the Hawks with 26 points. Thurl Bailey was Utah's top scorer with 20 points.

Clippers 108, Warriors 105

Norm Nixon scored half of his game-high 32 points in the fourth quarter and the Clippers survived a late scare. The lead changed hands eight times in the final period before the Clippers took the lead for good 97-94 on a three-point play by James Donaldson with 4:18 to go. Purvis Short led the Warriors with 28 points. Center Bill Walton, who missed the Clippers' last five games, played six minutes in the first half and scored four points but had to leave the game after his troublesome right ankle became sore.

BINNS

North Carolina State, now home of Spud Webb, a former MC great, New Mexico, Arizona State, Memphis State, Mississippi, Seton Hall and Oral Roberts are among the schools interested in Binns.

"It doesn't really matter where I'm at, as long as the place is nice and I can play right away," Binns said of his college plans.

One thing is certain, as long as Binns remains undecided, the Midland airport can rely on the regular business of a dozen or so additional customers.

Bosox hit double win

BOSTON (AP) — The signings of Jim Rice and Bob Stanley were "almost like a doubleheader victory for the Red Sox," says Boston General Manager Lou Gorman. It was a costly triumph.

Their long-term contract extensions, coupled with an arbitrator's award of a $1 million salary in 1985 to third baseman Wade Boggs, turned Wednesday into a "$15 million day" for the American League baseball club.

That's the amount the Red Sox will have to spend on those three key players as a result of the contract developments announced Wednesday.

Rice, Boston's slugging left fielder, and Stanley, the club's top reliever, had one year left on their contracts and could have become free agents after the 1985 campaign.

Instead, they signed pacts reportedly giving Rice an additional $10 million and Stanley $4.4 million more for the four seasons after 1985. The club has an option on their services for 1990.

O'Meara 'puring it' in dead solid streak

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — In the inner sanctum of the professional golf tour it is known as "puring it," hitting the ball so well that it feels, as sports author Dan Jenkins once observed, dead solid perfect.

Mark O'Meara is doing that just now — has been doing it, in fact, for the better part of a year. Since last June, the 27-year-old Palm Desert, Calif., resident has amassed a small fortune — nearly $660,000 — by hitting the golf ball about as well as anyone on the PGA tour.

"I just don't think of it as a hot streak," said O'Meara, struggling to play down the fact that he has been 26 strokes better than par in his last eight rounds on the tour. Those rounds produced back-to-back victories at the Bing Crosby Pro-Am and the Hawaiian Open.

"I mean, what's a hot streak? How long does a hot streak last?" he said. "Your chances of winning a golf tournament, no matter how hot you are, are always very slim because there are so many good golfers out there."

O'Meara can become the first three-time winner on the 1985 tour, which is only six weeks old, at the Isuzu-Andy Williams San Diego Open, which began today at the twin Torrey Pines courses in this elite coastal community just north of San Diego.

The winner's check of $72,000, from a total purse of $400,000, would add to a 1985 earnings sheet that already is best among professional golfers. O'Meara has won $194,625 in the first five weeks of the tour.

To win three times in a row on the PGA circuit is almost unheard of. Only two golfers, Tom Watson and Denis Watson, won three events in 1984, and those weren't consecutive. Five others won twice, including Gary Koch, the defending champion here.

O'Meara won only once, at Milwaukee, yet finished with the second-best earnings of the year, $465,873. He led the tour with 15 top-10 performances.

"I don't even remember ever winning two tournaments in a row before," he said when asked about the possibility of winning three. "I didn't win that many tournaments in junior golf, didn't win that many in amateur golf."

He did win the U.S. Amateur title in 1979, but languished on the tour until last year, when, under the tutelage of Hank Haney, O'Meara began to reconstruct the mechanics of his swing at the tee, striving to bring the golf club more to the outside as he began his backswing.

"You watch: Probably 90 percent of all golfers bring the club too far inside when they go into the backswing. Then, on the way back down, they have nowhere to go but out," he said. "By the time they hit the ball, they've ensured themselves a slice."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, February 15, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: A change of residence could assist your career. A family member's health or attitude improves. Get partner to help you develop a shrewd idea into a full-fledged business. Fabulous financial gains are possible in autumn! Refuse to let negative people waste your time. Strike a better balance between work and play. Actresses Claire Bloom and Jane Seymour, U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John Block, labor leader Leonard Woodcock, actor Harvey Korman, Chicago Cubs third baseman Ron Cey, former congressman and presidential candidate John Anderson, singer Melissa Manchester and Cesar Romero share your birthday. Also born on this date: feminist Susan B. Anthony.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Joining a special group puts you in touch with interesting new people and ideas. Be flexible today and ride with the tide. Spur-of-the-moment invitations are favored.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): All goes well so long as you keep your impulses in check. Ingenuity is the key to greater success in business or romance. Show off your talents! Influential people are impressed.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Conflicting interests could make it difficult for you and an associate to get along. Be cautious when dealing with strangers. You need to take your time when making important choices.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Partnerships and family matters are in the spotlight. Furthering your education will help you attain a cherished goal. Remain calm if a Scorpio questions your motives. The facts speak for themselves.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Working behind the scenes will help you make headway with someone influential. Promote those people who can help you career. New friends brighten your social life. Entertain at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Try to make do with the materials on hand when starting a project. Someone you meet socially could help your business. Real estate ventures look especially profitable.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Information gleaned from overseas contacts helps you make business or financial gains. Protect your sources. Discretion pays big dividends. Keep entertainment costs to the minimum this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Adopt a more conservative attitude towards spending. Who you know can be more important than you think. Ask influential people for their support.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Give a cold shoulder to someone who spreads cruel gossip. Higher-ups welcome well-thought out suggestions. Do not be afraid to speak up. A raise or promotion is likely.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Complete those small tasks you have been putting aside. A teenager will take your advice if approached in the right way. Be diplomatic. Say exactly what you mean when writing business letters.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Close friends rely on your good judgment; do not let them down. A tendency to be indecisive could undermine an important relationship. Make a decision and stick to it. Give romance more time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A temporary sacrifice will prove worthwhile. Do not dwell on inconvenience. A family member is unusually supportive. Show your appreciation in tangible way. Forget past grievances and disappointments.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♠.

The name end play is terminologically inexact. While the majority of cases do occur late in the play, you might be "end played" at trick one. It happened quite early in this hand from a European tournament.

North-South were using a mini-no trump opening bid of 10-12 points. North had full value for his raise to game, and West attacked with the fourth-best of his longest and strongest suit.

Declarer won the opening lead in hand with the ten and could count seven top tricks. The obvious place to look for the two he was shy was in spades, so at trick two he led a spade to the ten, with great success.

Next came a club to the king, and West ducked. Declarer continued with a spade and, when West and dummy both played low, East found, to his surprise, that he had won a trick with the nine. However, he also found that he was end played at trick four!

He did the best he could by exiting with the ten of hearts. Dummy's king won and the ace was cashed. When declarer now led a low heart, he was reasonably sure that East held the jack. But he was dead sure that the finesse was not necessary.

He won the queen of hearts and, when West did not follow, he threw East back on lead with a heart. East's forced diamond return was run to the queen and that became the fulfilling trick.

Harvard club honors Cher with 'Pudding Pot'

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Actress-singer Cher, who's known for her exotic and stylish clothes, found herself upstaged by dozens of male students in drag as she accepted the "Woman of the Year" award from Harvard University's Hasty Pudding Theatricals Club.

The award was presented Wednesday to the actress after a traditional raucous, 20-minute parade through Harvard Square, in which club members decked out in wigs, gowns and makeup danced and swayed for thousands of passersby.

"This is a nightmare," the actress said, jokingly, as she accepted the award, the small gold "Pudding Pot."

"I don't know what the other recipients did with their pots, but I'm going to make mine into an earring," she said.

Like past members of the 137-year-old club, students appeared for the parade in wigs of all colors, overdone makeup, overstuffed bosoms and fringed or tasseled floor-length gowns.

Cher rode in the parade perched atop a 1930s-vintage Lincoln Continental convertible that was pushed through the narrow streets by club members. As the car moved along, she signed autographs and waved at workers watching the spectacle from their offices.

Cher is the 35th woman to win the award, which recognizes a "lifetime contribution to entertainment." Past recipients have included performers Katharine Hepburn, Bette Midler, Rosalind Russell, Angela Lansbury and Joan Rivers.

The club also presents a "Man of the Year" award, which is to be given next week to comedian Bill Murray.

Cher took some ribbing at the ceremony, particularly over her role in the 1983 movie "Silkwood."

The film, for which Cher received an Academy Award nomination, told the story of Karen Silkwood, a worker at a Kerr-McGee Corp. nuclear fuel plant in Oklahoma who blew the whistle on her employer for safety violations.

"That kind of exposure to radiation would probably result in rapid hair loss and change of hair color, but I guess that didn't happen here," Chris Charron, president of the theatricals, said at the ceremony.

Cher recently dyed her brunette hair blonde and had it cut in a short, punk style.

"When you look at the people who have received this award, it's hard to take it less than seriously," Cher told the crowd.

Mandrell expecting third child

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music entertainer Barbara Mandrell, who was seriously hurt in a traffic accident last fall, is expecting her third child in early October.

B. Mandrell

"We are shocked, surprised and thrilled to death," the 36-year-old singer, musician and actress said Wednesday. "We've been through such serious, hard times that it's nice to have some good news. We're overjoyed."

Miss Mandrell and her husband, Ken Dudney, have a 14-year-old boy, Matthew, and an 8-year-old daughter, Jaime.

Miss Mandrell suffered multiple injuries, including a severe concussion, in the Sept. 11 accident near Nashville that injured her two children and killed the other car's driver. She spent 19 days in the hospital and is still recovering.

She said her pregnancy would delay plans to do a television special and make a made-for-TV movie.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Production on the movie "Peggy Sue Gets Married" with director Francis Ford Coppola is in limbo because its star, Debra Winger, has injured her back and could take up to six months to recover.

Debra Winger

The 28-year-old actress was to begin work next month on the movie but she hurt her back about a month ago during a mountain hike in New Mexico and is now in traction in her Los Angeles home, publicist Pat Kingsley said Wednesday. The injury was diagnosed as a herniated disk.

It could take Ms. Winger six weeks to six months to recover, said Ms. Kingsley.

Tri-Star Pictures and Rastar Productions plan to wait for her to recover and won't replace the actress in the film's starring role, Tri-Star production chief Jeff Sagansky said.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Gov. Bob Graham switched from politics to acting to tape a music video in Key West with pop star Jimmy Buffett.

In the video, an alluring woman tries to distract the 48-year-old chief executive, who is listening to Buffett sing his song, "Who's The Blond Stranger?"

"I was dressed in sort of a Key West outfit," Graham said Tuesday. "A, you know, kind of open, casual shirt and a tennis kinda hat. The shirt was mine. The hat was theirs."

Graham said his part was "non-speaking...I certainly wasn't asked to sing."

Bette Davis

NEW YORK (AP) — Movie legend Bette Davis, who has just completed a film in England, says her "greatest, greatest fear" while recovering from a mastectomy, a stroke and other ailments was that she would never work again.

Nine days after her mastectomy, the 76-year-old actress suffered a stroke. Only days after getting out of the hospital, she broke her hip.

"I really thought many times I never would be acting again and that was my terror in the hospital, night after night sleepless," she said in an interview taped Wednesday for ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

The star of such films as "All About Eve" and "Jezebel" called her recovery "a great victory" because "many of the doctors said I would never work again, in fact they didn't think I would live for many a day."

But, she said, "I'm back into the whole career thing with confidence." She said she may do another film in Italy.

The interview is to be aired Tuesday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Soviet poet Yevgeny Yevtushenko, who published his first novel last year, has been nominated for the new $50,000 Hemingway prize with two other novelists.

The other nominees were Mario Vargas Llosa of Peru, for "The War of the End of the World,' and Milan Kundera, a Czech now living in France, for "The Unbearable Lightness of Being," said Robert Woodrum, executive director of the Ritz Paris Hemingway Award.

Yevtushenko's book is "Wild Berries."

The winner will be announced in Paris on March 29, Woodrum said.

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Tennis players Vitas Gerulaitis and Bobby Riggs say they want to give a big box of Valentine's Day candy to Martina Navratilova and Pam Shriver, the top women's doubles team in the world. Then they want to beat them in a battle-of-the-sexes tennis match.

"We are issuing a challenge to Martina and Pam," Gerulaitis said Wednesday, flanked by Riggs and a huge, heart-shaped box of candy with the inscription "To Martina — From Vitas and Bobby."

PBRPC OKs request for airport noise study

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

An application by the city of Midland for $202,500 in federal funds to prepare a Noise-Compatibility Study for Midland Regional Airport was given favorable comment Wednesday by the board of directors of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission.

The study would show how much of a buffer zone is needed between airport runways and future development in the area, "so Midland Regional Airport won't have the same conflicts other airports in other parts of the country have had with development coming in," said Jerry Tschauner, director of planning for the Planning Commission.

The $202,500 to be approved by the Federal Aviation Administration would be matched with $22,500 in local funds for a total cost for the study of $225,000.

"Midland Regional is one of the few airports of its size in Texas that hasn't had this study done or on the way," said Jon Mathiasen, assistant director of aviation for administration and development.

"The study will protect the airport from adverse development," Mathiason told the board, "so zoning and development are compatible to the airport."

The directors seemed more interested in finding out when the airport would be equiped with snow-removal equipment ("It's been ordered," Mathiasen said), but they approved the noise-study request unanimously. If approved by the FAA, the study would take 12 months and be done in four phases:

— Airport requirements would be studied to determine future growth and space needs.

— A recommended development plan for the airport would be selected.

— A noise-compatibility analysis would be conducted to identify existing and future aircraft noise and land-use patterns.

— Airport plans would be drawn up depicting existing facilities, proposed development, on-airport land uses, clear zones, obstructions and FAA requirements.

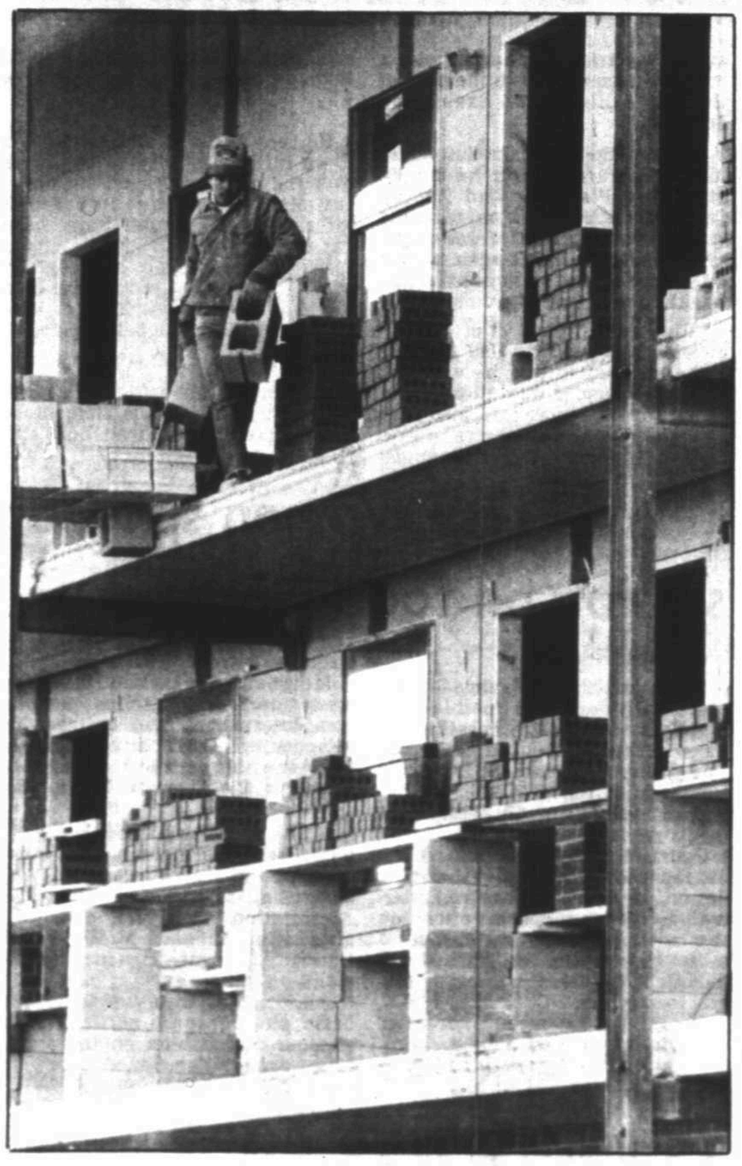
"The quicker we get the study done the better off both we and the developers will be," Mathiasen said.

In other action at the monthly board meeting, the directors gave approval to a $1.4 million State Department of Highways and Public Transportation proposal to extend Loop 338 in Odessa 3.5 miles south and east of Interstate 20 to U.S. 385.

"This will provide a (north-south) bypass and preclude any hazardous material from coming into the city of Odessa," Tschauner said.

The directors also approved a $407,000 proposal by the SDHPT to widen Loop 338 to four lanes between Yukon Road and State Highway 302; tabled a motion to approve a developer's request for a $864,000 Farmer's Home Administration loan to build low-and-moderate apartment housing in Crane until more is heard on the subject from Crane officials; and approved the appointments of new members to the Permian Basin Health Council.

Two Midlanders were appointed as ex-officio consultant members: Bill Smith, director of the Permian Basin Area Agency on Aging, and Cathy Clayton, director of the Permian Basin Regional Alcohol Authority.



Woman arrested for shoplifting

From Staff Reports

A 25-year-old Midland homemaker was arrested Wednesday night in a grocery store parking lot while making her third trip to her car with a cart full of merchandise police allege was stolen.

The woman, whose name will not be released until she is formally arraigned later today, remained in city jail on felony charges of theft over $750.

Police said they were called at 9:50 p.m. to Albertson's Food & Drug, 3317 N. Midland Drive, where assistant grocery manager Kelly Franklin said he was retaining a shoplifting suspect.

The woman, who gave police an address in the 4300 block of Andrews Highway, had taken $754.70 worth of items from the store in a cart she pushed herself. The items included food, makeup, plants, diapers, cigarettes, picture frames, photo albums, a toaster-oven and a food processor.

About five items valued at $15 were recovered from her purse, reports said. Another 43 items valued at $230 were found in her vehicle and 37 items valued at $500 were found in the grocery cart during the alleged third trip to her car, reports said.

Ricky Sanchez Marquez, 902 N. Lee, was arraigned Wednesday on charges of burglary of a building in connection with the burglary early Wednesday morning of an elementary school.

Justice of the Peace Robert Pine set bail at $7,500.

Marquez, 19, was arrested after police responding to an alarm at De Zavala Elementary School, 1101 E. South St., saw the man leave the building and chased him.

A 1985 Cadillac Seville valued at $27,337 was reported stolen Tuesday night from Berg Motor Co., according to police reports.

John Barker reported the locked car was taken between 6 p.m. Monday and 8:30 a.m. Tuesday.

A 1983 Volvo GL was reported stolen from the street in front of 2828 Maxwell. According to Michael W. Roye of the same address, the locked car was taken between 11:30 p.m. Monday and 8:30 p.m. Wednesday. The car was valued at $9,000.

Richard C. Haley Sr., 1501 S. Dallas, told police Wednesday $1,125 worth of equipment was stolen from him after the items did not show up at a warehouse on West Industrial, where they were supposed to be delivered.

Four tires and rims, valued at a total of $750, were reported stolen from a drilling yard at 1602 S. Midkiff Road. The tires, owned by Gene Sledge, were discovered missing Wednesday night, according to Robert Chatwell, who reported the offense.

Rosa Bejarmo, 1006 S. Terrell, told police her car was burglarized while parked at 405 S. Terrell between Monday and Tuesday. According to police reports, witnesses said a blue pickup was seen driving from the scene. A carburetor, battery, radio, alternator and air cleaner, valued at $340, were taken, reports said.

Roosevelt Campbell, 1412 E. Parker, told police his wife's wedding ring and engagement ring were discovered missing Wednesday morning from their home. According to reports, the rings, valued at $300, were last seen Monday.

Women charged in prostitution ring

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A 57-year-old Odessa woman believed to be the owner of a West Midland County massage parlor that "fronts" for a prostitution ring and a Midland woman were released on $50,000 bonds after their arrest Wednesday night on charges of aggravated promotion of prostitution.

Vonceil Brisco Monahan of Odessa was arrested about 8:30 p.m. after leaving The Relaxation Center, 9321 E. Highway 80, about a mile east of the Ector County line.

The arrests of Ms. Monahan and Jessie Howk Burks, 53, culminated a "lengthy" investigation conducted by the Midland County Sheriff's Office, Midland County District Attorney's Office, Midland Police Department and Department of Public Safety intelligence officers into "an organized prostitution ring," said Sheriff Gary Painter.

The two women "had just left The Relaxation Center and myself and two other units stopped them at a grocery store west of it," Painter said.

The incident followed the 6 p.m. arrests at a downtown Midland hotel of three Odessa woman for prostitution. A 19-year-old was released on a $1,000 bond while the two other women, ages 27 and 28, were released on $500 bonds, Painter said.

The Class B misdemeanors are punishable by maximum sentences of six months in jail and/or a $1,000 fine.

"The girls were arrested first," said Lt. Roy Harrison of the sheriff's office. "We had to make the case on them before we could go after the other two."

Three undercover officers made contact with the women at the massage parlor before setting up the meeting at the hotel. Other officers "were staked out in the area for protection and security purposes," Painter said.

If convicted of the third-degree felonies, Ms. Monahan and Ms. Burks face maximum sentences of confinement in the Texas Department of Corrections for two to 10 years and/or a fine not to exceed $5,000.

The massage parlor was the scene of the Dec. 11 arrest of a 22-year-old woman on charges of prostitution. Officials with the sheriff's department said the owners of The Relaxation Center also operate an Odessa massage parlor.

Committee approves oilman's nomination

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Midland oilman William F. Roden and two others were approved by the Senate Nomination Committee on Wednesday to serve as regents for the University of Texas System. The appointments, made by Gov. Mark White on Monday, must still be approved by the full Senate.

Roden, 63, president of Roden Oil Co., and the other appointees were expected to be considered by the 31-member Senate today.

Also nominated by White are Shannon Ratliff, of Austin, and Jack Blanton, of Houston. Ratliff, a partner in the law firm of McGinnis, Lochridge and Kilgore, was White's campaign treasurer in 1982, and Blanton is chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Scurlock Oil Co. in Houston.

All three were appointed to serve on the board until Feb. 1, 1991.

Roden, who attended the University of Texas at Austin but left after three years to serve in World War II, said Wednesday he supports a tuition increase for all students to offset the state's budget crunch.

"I'd hate to be in your position to try and balance the budget," Roden told the Senate Nominations Committee, which is headed by Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texarkana. "Everybody's going to have to bite the bullet and cut back a little bit."

Roden termed the state's financial crunch, which threatens a loss of state funding to Texas colleges and universities, a "very difficult situation," and hinted at cutbacks but gave no specifics.

Blanton agreed that students should "shoulder a little bit more of the cost" of their eduction, and Ratliff said raising tuition "makes more sense than having to make cuts that perhaps don't just take fat but get most of the bone as well."

Although the University of Texas of the Permian Basin is located in his area, Roden said regents have an obligation to ensure all UT System schools receive their share of attention.

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, made the motion to send the appointments to the full Senate for consideration. The committee approved the motion by a 6-0 vote.

Jailed man temporarily 'sprung' for wedding

TEXARKANA (AP) — A 27-year-old man jailed in connection with a string of traffic accidents was temporarily sprung by sheriff's deputies for his own wedding.

Troy Wayne Higgins and Dianna Lyn May, 19, of Texarkana, were married Wednesday by a justice of the peace across the street from the jail. Higgins had been arrested Monday after his involvement in at least four traffic accidents, police said.

"We married them right here in the office," Bowie County Justice of the Peace John Grigson said. "Of course, he got to kiss the bride, but that's about all."

Grigson said he decided to perform the ceremony when Ms. May came to his office Tuesday and asked about a wedding. "I thought I might as well. She might not be seeing him for awhile," Grigson said.

Ms. May came back Wednesday morning with a marriage license, so Grigson asked a sheriff's deputy to fetch the groom, the Texarkana Gazette reported.

Using dryers can be dangerous in bathtubs

From Staff Reports

There are worse things that can happen in bathtubs than slipping and falling. Electrocution, for instance.

Each year about 20 people in this country are electrocuted in bathtubs, according to Texas Electric Service Co., and about half of these deaths involve hair dryers.

To prevent this kind of accident, TESCO is circulating a list of suggested precautions.

"What we're trying to warn them is, if they're taking a bath, don't be drying their hair at the same time," says Gerald Gotcher, TESCO customer service manager. "Be conscious of the fact that electricity and water don't mix."

Of 95 people who were electrocuted in bathtubs from 1979 to 1982, more than half were killed by plugged-in hair dryers which fell into the tub, and many of these victims were children, according to a TESCO release.

To avoid trouble with electricity in bathrooms, kitchens and laundry rooms, TESCO suggests:

— Do not place or store appliances where they can fall or be pulled into a tub or sink. Disconnect kitchen appliance cords at wall outlets, not at the appliance. A cord removed from a coffeemaker and left plugged into an outlet is energized and could be deadly if it fell into a sink filled with water.

— Never turn on an electrical appliance while standing on a wet floor. Keep electric parts away from water.

— Don't touch plumbing or metal objects and an electrical appliance at the same time.

— Disconnect an electrical appliance that sparks or stalls.

— Follow manufacturers' instructions when operating electrical appliances or equipment.

— Pull the plug, not the cord, when disconnecting appliances. Avoid kinking, twisting, binding or crushing cords.

Teen-agers learning sex in church? Scandalous!

A darling friend of mine, a teenager, is taking sex in church.

Scandalous.

She's so young and innocent.

And she's not doing it alone. There are boys in there with her and the other girls. And like her mom, she's blonde, which certainly entices me and probably interests the boys.

Of course, as you might know, I wasn't invited to enroll in the nighttime sex education class. I'm so worldly, perhaps, but never too old, and probably would be embarrassed despite the gentle, sensitive coaxing by the wise, understanding instructor. Anyway, boys and girls don't talk to each other about sex in or out of class. That's taboo. They don't talk; they just do it.

Now, back when I was a pre-teen and a teen-ager, I went to church but certainly not for sex. That didn't occur to me. Of course, I went to school, but sex wasn't offered there as an elective or a required course. It wasn't even discussed in class. Naturally, some of the boys and girls took extracurricular sex. They were emotional, curious and adventuresome creatures interested in practical matters. Back then, virtually no one talked academically about sex. They didn't know enough facts — just rumors. They just pondered the matter, picked up tidbits after class, heard risque jokes and ribald tales, got ample impressions from the underground and "experienced" sex veterans, made suppositions from movies, the Bible, catalogues, magazine articles, literature, and sort of made a mental collage from those images.

Whoever thought about getting formally educated on about every aspect of sex — the physiology, the morality, the psychic, the emotions, the intellect, the techniques, the pitfalls and delights, the love it expresses, the bonds it makes and the life it creates?

Why expose impressionable young people to sexual enlightenment? Why not let them "go with the flow" and stumble along the way many of us older folks did. Why not let them wallow in ignorance, myths, confusion, anxiety and pain. And when they're older and into adulthood, see if they can't work out their problems. Send them to marriage counselors, psychologists and psychiatrists, abortion clinics, physicians, ministers, libraries and suggest they watch educational television. Let them learn about sex when they're old enough to understand and to be responsible? Let them learn after the big surge of adolescence. Let them wonder why they waited so long to be enlightened about this complex phenomenon called sex.

Now, my young blonde friend seems to enjoy her sex class just as she does those regular academic classes at school. She's inquisitive and loves learning and knowledge. And in one respect, it seems a bit ironic that she's taking sex in church and Latin in school.

DEATHS

Andres C. Covarrubias

Covarrubias

Andres C. Covarrubias, 81, of Midland died Wednesday afternoon at his home following a lengthy illness.

Rosary is to be recited at 7:30 p.m. today in the Ellis chapel with the Rev. Jim Foelker of Our Lady of Guadalupe Church officiating. Mass will be at 10 a.m. Friday in Our Lady of Guadalupe Church. Burial will follow in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Covarrubias was born July 8, 1903, in San Luis, Monterrey, Mexico, moving to Midland 73 years ago. He was a conductor for T and P Railroad for 29 years, retiring in 1955. He later opened the Andres Grocery Store which he operated until 1960 when he opened a snow-cone stand.

Survivors include his wife, Clara Covarrubias; two sons, Andy Covarrubias and Benjamin Covarrubias, both of Midland; two daughters, Mary Aquirre and Julia Galindo, both of Midland; a sister, Maria Ramirez of El Paso; 11 grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren.

Lela Prescott

COLORADO CITY — Lela Prescott, 87, of Brownwood, formerly of Colorado City, died Tuesday afternoon at her home.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Friday at the First Baptist Church in Colorado City with John C. Jones officiating. Burial will be in Colorado City Cemetery under the direction of Cocker-Seal Funeral Home.

Mrs. Prescott was born March 4, 1897, in Falls County. She married Robert Clifton (Bob) Prescott Sept. 12, 1925, in Colorado City. She was a member of Mountain Top Church in Cisco and was a 20-year resident of Brownwood.

She was preceeded in death by her husband May 21, 1957; a daughter, Bette Lou Prescott; and a son, R.C. Prescott Jr.

Survivors include three daughters, Mae Bowman of Denver, Colo., Frances Johnson of Brownwood, and Vivian Noel of Euless; two sons, James Prescott of Midland and Delmer Prescott of Hobbs, N.M.; 17 grandchildren; and 22 great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be her grandsons.

Tyrus Oakes

Services for Tyrus Oakes, 68, of Midland, were to be today at the First United Methodist Church. Burial was to be in Conowa, Okla., under the direction of Watts-Pickard Funeral Home in Conowa. Local arrangements were handled by Ellis Funeral Home.

Oakes died Sunday afternoon at his home.

He was born July 14, 1916, in Osage, Okla., and spent his early life in Kansas. He attended and graduated from Wichita University with a degree in Geological Engineering. Following a discharge from the Air Force he became employed with Texaco and lived in Russellville, Kan.; Tulsa, Okla.; Chicago, Ill.; and moved to Midland in 1963. He retired in 1982.

He was a member of the First Methodist Church; a 32 Degree Mason of Salina, Kan.; the Russellville Masonic Lodge; and the Salina Shrine Temple.

Survivors include his wife, Dorothy Oakes; two daughters, Franceile Hubbard of Conowa, Okla., and Lizabeth Brown of Oklahoma City, Okla.; and his mother, Pearl Oakes of Conowa, Okla.

The family suggests memorials be directed to the Scottish Rite Crippled Childrens Hospital or the Shrine Burned Childrens Hospital.

Mae Darrow

BIG SPRING — Mae Darrow, 73, of Colorado City died Tuesday afternoon at her home.

Services were to be at 2 p.m. today in Nalley-Pickle and Welch Rosewood Chapel with burial in Trinity Memorial Park.

Mrs. Darrow was a Baptist and a homemaker. She had been a resident of Colorado City since 1974.

William Thompson

William Thompson of Midland died early this morning at a local hospital.

Services are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Robert V. Lockhart

Robert V. "Bob" Lockhart of Midland died Sunday in Pomona, Calif.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Saturday in the First United Methodist Church with Dr. Charles Lutrick, pastor, officiating. Burial will be at Resthaven North Mausoleum under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Survivors include his wife, Ann Lockhart; a daughter, Cynthia Campbell of Dallas; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tate Lockhart of Snyder; and a brother, James Lockhart of Pomona, Calif.

MISD candidate committed to local control

Robinson

Betsy Robinson has announced she is seeking election to Place 7 on the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees, the seat now held by trustee Joyce Sherrod.

Ms. Sherrod has indicated she will not seek re-election.

Mrs. Robinson said she is a candidate for the board because she is "committed to local control and active community participation in our education system."

She said she believes that "MISD is one of the most outstanding and creative systems in Texas" realizing, however, that "school trustees will face some tough decisions in the coming years because of the hasty passage and inflexibility of educational reform in House Bill 72.

"Successfully implementing HB 72 will require complex recommendations from local people, elected officials, teachers and parents. We as a community need to look for the best possible solutions," she said.

Mrs. Robinson received a bachelor of arts degree in history, social studies and English in addition to earning teacher certification from Wayne State University in Detroit, Mich. She also attended summer courses at Baylor University in Waco and holds Texas teacher certification.

Mrs. Robinson was a junior high and high school teacher in Michigan, taught adult education for five years to Air Force personnel stationed in Texas and serves as a substitute teacher for kindergarten-eighth grade students at MISD.

She served as secretary of the DeZavala Elementary School Parent/Teacher Association for two years at its inception; in addition to serving as co-chairman of the carnival, room mother and classroom volunteer.

Mrs. Robinson presently is an active member of Christian Life Center, Community Bible Study, Midland County Women's Republican Club, Midland Crime Prevention Commission, Neighborhood Watch and Neighbors Against Burglary and Drugs.

She and her husband Jerry have been residents of Midland for nine years. The couple have two sons, Tim and Jonathan; and one daughter, Catherine.

Electrician files for District 2 council seat

From Staff Reports

Aleman

Patrick Aleman, 33, 1312 E. Golf Course Road, has filed for District 2 on the Midland City Council.

A native of Midland who attended St. Ann's Catholic School and graduated from Midland High School, Aleman is a graduate of University of Texas at El Paso with a degree in philosophy.

He is self-employed as a licensed master electrician and also holds a broker's license. He is a member of the city's Electrical Examining Board.

Aleman said he became interested in city affairs when he began attending Planning and Zoning Commission hearings on rezoning tracts in east Midland. "I was on the negative side. I wasn't against what they were trying to do, but to the way they were trying to do it."

Citing an historic lack of communication between City Hall and east Midland, Aleman said he wants to bridge that gap. "I want to have that district become more informed as to how the city works. We've always had the opportunity to do something, but we didn't know how to do it or go about it in an effective way."

He sees Midland as becoming a more influential city in the state over the next few years. "In order for Midland to become more influential, every community here has to contribute to its (the city's) success. I'm running to be a contributor. I want that side (east and south) of town to contribute so Midland overall will be a better place to live."

Aleman and his wife, Gloria, who is a teacher at De Zavala Elementary School, have two children, Lora and Kristine.

Bill would make child care centers fund training programs

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas child care facilities should pay an annual fee to fund training programs for child care workers and parents, according to Rep. Erwin Barton.

Barton, D-Pasadena, told the House Committee on Human Resources Wednesday that the program could help parents "self-police" the child care industry, which has been under fire as a result of news accounts of child abuse.

"The stories that are making headlines are terrifying and tragic," said Barton, committee chairman.

Under his proposal day care facilities would pay annual fees averaging $1.60 per child. The state now collects no fees from child care providers. The Department of Human Resources inspects the 7,000 licensed day care centers, but does not inspect the 19,000 registered family homes.

Approximately 128,000 children are in registered family homes, according to DHR.

Lions host state eye bank meeting

From Staff Reports

District 2-A1 Lions Eye Bank of Midland will host the annual meeting of the Eye Bank Association of Texas on Saturday at the Airport Executel at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

There will be an informal gathering on Friday for early arrivals. The business session will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday.

Progress reports will be given by each eye bank represented, and new officers will be elected. Mike Ludlow of Temple has served as president for the past year.

After lunch, technical sessions will be led by Dr. Joe Ruda of Midland and Dr. Eric Wasserman and Don Quarles, representing Sheets-Tolia and Associates of Odessa.

Highlight of the meeting will be the White Cane Kick-Off Banquet at 7 p.m. with Nolan Underwood of the Texas Lions Camp of Kerrville as speaker. Gov. Mark White has proclaimed March 4-10 as White Cane Week in Texas. White Cane is a project of the Texas Lions.

More information can be obtained by contacting Margie McCain, 685-1550 (mornings), 697-1633 (afternoons).

MC courses to begin Monday

Speedwriting I, Joy of Money and Watercolor offered by the Midland College Department of Community Services will be beginning Monday.

"Speedwriting I" will meet from 6:30-8:20 p.m. Monday and Wednesday through March 20. The course is designed to teach basic "ABC" Shorthand in a four-week period. Books are available at the MC Bookstore. The class is limited to 25 students and the fee is $28.

"Joy of Money" will meet from 7-8:30 p.m. Wednesdays through March 20. The course is designed for persons beginning to assume responsibility or wish to gain better control of their finances. Students will be assisted in conquering their fear of the "money world." Fee for the course is $15.

"Watercolor" will meet from 6:30-9 p.m. Thursdays through April 11. The course includes instruction in the use of transparent and opaque watercolor with development of different techniques using a variety of subject matter. A drawing background is not required. A demonstration and explanation of materials is planned for the first class meeting. Material costs vary according to individual student selections. The class is limited to 16 students and the fee is $24.

Aerobirythms workshop set

From Staff Reports

An aerobirhythms workshop sponsored by Cyndi Simpson will be Friday and Saturday in Midland. It is designed for fitness instructors and others interested in beginning their own program.

Aerobirhythms is an aerobic and fitness exercise program which makes vigorous rhythmic exercises enjoyable by choreographing them to contemporary Christian music. The workshop is designed to develop leaders for church fitness programs.

Creative aerobic routines, calisthenic workout, musical tapes and a "how to" manual along with personalized instruction will be provided. Workshop participants also receive special help in organizing, promoting and using aerobic programs as an inreach and outreach tool in the local church.

Ms. Simpson is the new regional director of aerobirhythms. She was graduated from Texas Tech with a degree in music education. While attending the University of New Mexico she was involved in the ballet department and danced in the faculty recital. She has danced in production numbers for Miss New Mexico and Miss Hobbs pageants. She has her own dance school and has taught aerobics for about 3½ years.

More information about the workshop can be obtained by contacting Ms. Simpson, 3003 Whittle Way, Midland, 79707, (915) 689-0646.

Texas Press Women sponsor session on food writing

From Staff Reports

A session on food writing — complete with cook and food — will highlight the monthly meeting for Texas Press Women on Saturday. The group will meet at 2 p.m. in Odessa at Peaches, 716 W. 8th St., and all members of the West Texas media are invited.

Gourmet chef Karen Hilliard will demonstrate the preparation of a dessert for which she has won international acclaim. Persons attending the meeting will have a chance to sample the dessert. Ms. Hilliard will include examples of writing by several food critics.

Ms. Hilliard has made a career of creating the thickest, richest chocolate cakes, the lightest breads and exquisite entrees.

Members are asked to bring guests, and the fee is $2.50 per person. Reservations must be made by telephoning 683-8622, or by telephoning Anne Sherburn at University of Texas of the Permian Basin, 563-2400.

TPW membership is open to anyone involved in newspaper, magazine, public relations, free-lance, advertising, television or radio. The organization meets once a month, alternating between Midland and Odessa. Future meetings include sessions on putting your best foot forward in job interviews, March; basic photographic skills, April; glamour and fashion photography, May; travel writing, June.

Dog hunt ends happily

DALLAS (AP) — The largest dog hunt in the history of the Dallas Fort-Worth International Airport ended happily when Jake, a 130-pound jet-setting Great Dane, galloped into the arms of a suburban dogcatcher.

"I'm ecstatic," said his owner, Mary Radloff of Spring, said after elated Delta Air Line officials called her with the news Wednesday. "I can't believe it. I'm just going nuts."

Jake's odyssey began when he broke out of his shipping crate on Feb. 6 and led Delta and airport personnel on a two-hour chase around the taxiways before disappearing under a fence.

It ended when a North Richland Hills dogcatcher spotted a black-and-white dog matching Jake's description Wednesday at a construction site about 15 miles from the airport.

Council approves land annexation

From Staff Reports

Midland City Council approved this morning on first reading a request by Scharbauer Brothers Corporation for annexation of 101.72 acres at the southwest corner of State Highway 191 and Loop 250.

During the special session, Doug Henson, representing Scharbauer Brothers, said permitting should be started by March 31.

The tract is being developed into a shopping mall. Henson said the major tenant has merged with another corporation and that has put a hold on construction. But the mall should be completed by spring 1986, he said.

"They're bringing out tenants every week to look at Midland," Henson added.

Death row inmates upset by reports Autry ran betting pool on his life

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Texas death row inmates simmered for a week over comments that executed prisoner James Autry ran a betting pool on his own life, but the inmate who revealed the bets stood by his story.

Death row inmate Wayne East said last week that Autry, hoping to cash in on a second last-minute stay of execution, organized a betting pool that would have paid him $280 if he had avoided the death chamber last March.

But inmate Billy Hughes on Wednesday defended his colleagues, saying "they're not that callous."

"They are really upset," Hughes said. "A whole bunch of people are upset. There's no denying that there is betting on the ball games and things such as that."

Another inmate, Charlie Bass, who described himself as Autry's "best friend," said Autry very seldom had money.

"All the time I lived in cells next to Autry, he didn't gamble, everybody would know about it," Bass said.

East, however, said he saw the betting slip that was passed around on Autry and said he "understood" that Autry himself had organized the pool.

"I could care less what other people say about me," East said. "Everybody's entitled to their own opinion."

At the time of Autry's execution last March, East was among general population inmates. Bass and Hughes insisted that if a betting pool existed, there was no way Autry could run it from death row and get it circulated among the general population.

No death row inmates would participate, they said.

But East said James DeMouchette, a death row resident, won the $280 pool. DeMouchette's involvement could not be confirmed Wednesday because he refused all requests for interviews.

East characterized the affair as a "misunderstanding."

Prison officials have said they could have no way of confirming existence of such a pool.

Death row inmates are available to reporters for a two-hour period each Wednesday and reaction to East's comments had been simmering for a week.

"This last thing is wrong — out and out wrong," Hughes said.

Bass said Autry's mother wrote him a note, enclosing a newspaper clipping of East's comments and asking if it were true.

"First, she loses a son, and then she finds out they are gambling on his life," Bass said.

Bass did not have the letter with him when he spoke with reporters Wednesday.

"Anytime any pool is going around, we all know about it," Bass said. "People don't play with each other's lives."

Horse-racing bill to include referendum

AUSTIN (AP) — It appears that horse racing legislation will include the statewide referendum Gov. Mark White and some others want.

Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, added a statewide referendum before the House Urban Affairs Committee met Wednesday night. Berlanga also said other substitutions to his bill would include sections on charity days and lower ownership regulations.

After hearing over three hours of public testimony, committee chairman Rep. George Pierce, R-San Antonio, said the bill would remain pending until next week for the substitutes to be reviewed.

Earlier Wednesday, House Speaker Gib Lewis said it appeared the horse-racing legislation would include the statewide referendum, but Lewis said that he still doesn't favor the demand from black lawmakers that pari-mutuel proceeds should be dedicated to Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

The Legislative Black Caucus last week withdrew support for horse racing, complaining there wasn't enough in the bills for its constituents. Caucus members are upset that the bills don't include a dedicated fund for AFDC and a statewide vote on whether to legalize horse-race betting.

White also has said a statewide vote is needed or he will veto a racing bill. Current proposals before the Legislature lack the referendum, but can be amended.

Lewis said he told black caucus members there are "several changes I'd like to personally see in the bill," and one is the statewide vote "that's going to be necessary to get the bill passed."

Lewis said he does not "care one way or the other" about the statewide vote, but thinks it should be put in to satisfy White.

The speaker said he sees no room to negotiate on the dedicated fund for AFDC.

Coaches 'victims' at party featuring topless dancers

EDINBURG (AP) — Several high school coaches who attended an awards banquet featuring topless dancers were "victims of circumstance" and did nothing wrong, school officials said.

The coaches did not know about the entertainment nor that the man who reportedly planned the party is an ex-convict facing trial on aggravated kidnapping charges, the officials said.

The Dec. 14 party at a club called The Place in Edinburg featured seven to 10 topless dancers and was planned as a celebration of the Edinburg High School football team's 10-2 season and trip to the playoffs.

"Those coaches involved as well as other individuals of the highest integrity were basically victims of circumstance," school board member Noe Calvillo said in a prepared statement.

An investigation by school officials found that the coaching staff was not aware of the entertainment plans and did nothing wrong, he said. No current students were involved.

Juries issue indictments in adoption scam

FORT WORTH (AP) — Federal indictments have been returned against five members of what authorities say is an international adoption ring that bilked people in 40 states with the promise of children from Mexico, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram said.

The sealed, multi-count indictments issued by grand juries in Boston and Salt Lake City, cap the largest ever federal investigation into unlicensed adoption intermediaries, the newspaper said.

The indictments allege mail and wire fraud, the Star-Telegram said, quoting sources close to the investigation. The newspaper said the indictments would be opened today.

A 14-month, nationwide investigation spearheaded by the FBI and the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service found evidence that people in 40 states paid money into the network between 1978 and 1983 on the promise of getting Mexican children for adoption, the newspapers said.

But investigators reportedly found that at least 180 couples and individuals never received children.

In addition, INS agents working in Mexico found that more than 40 couples were given fraudulent papers that could jeopardize the legality of their adoptions.

In some case, the Star-Telegram said, birth certificates were forged to make the children seem younger so they would bring higher fees. The newspaper also said that actresses were sometimes hired to pose as biological mothers during interviews with immigration authorities.

At least two Mexican women now say they were duped by adoption go-betweens and want their children back, the newspaper said.

Targets of the investigation are Debbie Tanner, 35, of Wilcox, Ariz.; her former husband, Terry Tanner, who manages Midland Bean Co. in Wilcox; Bryan Martin Hall, 38, who manages a topless bar in El Paso; Becci Kelley, 33, of New Market, Iowa; and Lorenzo Prospero, an attorney in the border town of Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

The investigation was sparked by claims from U.S. couples that Ms. Tanner, Hall and Kelley were paid between $7,000 and $1,000 apiece to arrange adoptions of Mexican children.

Baird matriarch dies

FORT WORTH (AP) — Flossie Baird, 84, matriarch of the Mrs. Baird's Bakery family, died at her home here Wednesday after an illness of about one year.

She was the wife of W. Hoyt Baird, chairman of the executive committee of Mrs. Baird's Bakeries, and the mother of Vernon Baird, who appears in television commercials for the bakery and is chairman of the board.

Her husband was the son of Ninnie L. Baird, founder of the enterprise.

The funeral will be at 3 p.m. today at University Baptist Church, followed by burial in Greenwood Memorial Park.

Heat-sensitive camera fails to locate woman's body

FORT WORTH (AP) — A three-hour search with a heat-sensitive television camera has failed to turn up the body of a missing Fort Worth woman.

Police hoped the camera, which can detect heat emanating from a decomposing body, would find the only one of five women still missing since their disappearances

Four have been found slain, and the cases are the focus of a local task force investigation.

The search in an undeveloped area of southwest Fort Worth Wednesday failed to locate the body of Angela Ewert, 21, police said.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Some studies indicate food allergies cause infants' colitis

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have an 18-month-old child who has colitis. I have always had certain food allergies and, putting two and two together, I was wondering whether allergies can cause colitis. — Mrs. W.O., Denver, Colo.

Dear Mrs. O.: There are differences of opinion about the cause or causes of colitis, but it appears that in many of my patients food allergy may be involved. In a study conducted by Dr. H.R. Jenkins and associates at the Hopsital for Sick Children in London, for example, the researchers concluded tht cow's milk was responsible for provoking the children's symptoms.

I would repeat, however, that there is not complete agreement about the cause of colitis, and parents should not begin to experiment with their children's diets without first discussing it with their pediatrician or family physician.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know that milk is the best source of vitamin D, but if someone doesn't like milk, are there any other foods that would provide the vitamin? I would also like to know exactly how much vitamin D the average person should have each day. — Beth, Washington, D.C.

Dear Beth: Milk is the most common source of vitamin D for most people, but it is not, as you suggest, the "best" source. An eight-ounce glass of milk contains 100 international units of vitamin D. By contrast, mackerel contains about 1,100 international units per 100 grams, and sardines contain about 1,500 international units per 100 grams.

The recommended daily dose of vitamin D is 200 units for adults and 400 units for pregnant women and children.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I keep hearing about how important it is to have selenium in the diet because it prevents cancer, but then I hear that it is not a good idea to use a selenium supplement. Would you pelase clear this up for someone who is very confused? — Vince, Brockton, Mass.

Dear Vince: The results of animal studies suggest that selenium has a protective effect against cancer. In addition, it apperas that geographic areas that have low selenium levels in the soil have a higher rate of cancer than do geographic areas that have high selenium levels. The strongest association between the levels of selenium and the incidence of cancer appears to involve breast and colon cancer.

However, although selenium is an essential trace element, too much can be toxic. Since the specific level at which toxicity might occur has not been defined, supplementation may therefore carry some risk.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Some people have suggested that a man who commits a sex crime should be castrated. I've never completely understood what this means. Does castration mean that a man is unable to have sexual relations for the rest of his life? — Donna, Philadelphia, Penn.

Dear Donna: A man becomes impotent following castration; however, according to Dr. G. William Bates, of the University of Mississippi Medical Center in Jackson, administration of testosterone can restore normal sexual function.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine has found out that he has diabetes, but he's always been afraid of needles and the idea of injecting himself is enough to make him sick. He is now going for hypnosis to try to get over this fear, and I would like to know whether you ever heard of this and how successful hypnosis can be. — Ms. R.B., Hutchinson, Kan.

Dear Ms. B.: Fear of needles has been reported in an insulin-dependent woman. Hypnosis was successful in enabling her to give herself the necessary injections.

Dear Dr. Solomon: How can a person tell if he has a case of hay fever or just a cold? I've had a stuffed nose for some time but I don't know why. Is there any way to tell what I have? — Mrs. G.S., Rockville, Md.

Dear Mrs. S.: A person who experiences an acute attack of allergic rhinitis may have symptoms for about three days. On the other hand, a respiratory infection lasts for about five to seven days. This is one way of distinguishing between the two.

When a patient tells me that he or she has a stuffed nose that lasts a short period of time, then disappears and then returns once more, I suspect allergic rhinitis.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I'm smart enough to figure out that tension headaches are caused by tension, but I would like to know what happens when a person gets a tension headache, and how it should be treated. — Jo, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Jo: Tension headaches generally are associated with a contraction or tightening of the muscles of the face, neck and scalp. In view of the cause, it is not surprising that the most natural form of treatment is rest and relaxtion, whether through biofeedback or another method.

Medication for tension headaches consists of the old standbys, aspirin or an aspirin substitute and muscle relaxants.

For Gloria, Minneapolis, Minn.: The results of a study of patients with eating disorders (such as anorexia) indicate that a large majority appear to be depresses. Their symptoms become more pronounced when they attempt to control their eating behavior. Dr. John Viesselman, director of the Eating Disorder Program at the Glendale Adventist Medical Center in California, has expressed the view that eating disorders, like alcoholism, are a type of addiction.

Dollar eases

LONDON (AP) — The dollar eased amid widespread profit-taking early today after seven straight days of record-breaking gains. Gold was a shade higher.

Dealers said trading was moderately active as investors sought to cash in on the dollar's surge, which took it above 10 French francs and 2,000 Italian lire for the first time ever and 3.30 West German marks for the first time in 13 years.

"This is an entirely natural reaction," said one trader, in Frankfurt, "especially given these high levels."

Dealers said investors also seemed worried about the prospect of further central bank intervention. Some were speculating that the West German Bundesbank, sensing the downturn as a chink in the dollar's armor, might intervene in a big way.

The dollar began the day with a marginal gain in Tokyo. It edged up to a closing 262.55 yen, compared with Wendesday's 262.50.

When trade opened in Europe, the dollar turned down against most currencies. Against the yen, it was quoted in London at 260.93.

Other rates at mid-morning, compared with late Wednesday:

–3.2896 West German marks, down from 3.3010, a 13-year high.

–2.8005 Swiss francs, down from 2.8047, a 7-year high.

–10.0550 French francs, down from 10.0650, an all-time high.

–3.7253 Dutch guilders, down from 3.7360, a 13-year high.

–2,030.00 Italian lire, an all-time high, up from 2,028.37.

–1.34005 Canadian dollars, up from 1.34000.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.0927, up from $1.0875 late Wednesday and better than the all-time trading low of $1.0838 reached during Wednesday's London dealing.

Sterling was helped by the British National Oil Corp.'s proposal to return to its official price for North Sea crude. BNOC had been undercutting that price, contributing to an oil market slump that dragged the pound down, too.

In New York Wednesday, gold rose $1 to close at $302.80.

Stocks swell to record highs

NEW YORK (AP) — Bullish investors buoyed by a belief that the economy will continue to grow without triggering runaway inflation pushed the most-used indicator of Wall Street's health to record heights.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange swelled to 142.46 million shares Wednesday, up from 111.12 million on Tuesday, as the Dow Jones index of 30 industrial stocks closed at 1,297.92 for a gain of 21.31 points on the day.

At one point Wednesday the index broke through the 1,300 level, hitting 1,304.66 before retreating in the last half hour of trading. The widely watched market barometer's previous closing high, 1,292.62, was reached Jan. 29.

Wall Street is encouraged that interest rates have remained relatively stable following their declines in late 1984. The declines lowered yields available on bonds, making returns on stocks more competitive. Inflation on the consumer level was a modest 4 percent in 1984.

"There's been a lot of persistent evidence that the economy is continuing to recover," said Richard Fontaine, vice president of T. Rowe Price Associates in Baltimore.

"Fundamentally, the market is bullish because it realizes that there is no recession," said Theodore Tung, senior vice president and chief economist of the National City Bank in Cleveland.

Also benefiting from the robust economy are auto and retail sales.

Retail sales rose 0.7 percent in January thanks to a 4 percent gain in auto sales, and major U.S. carmakers said their sales climbed another 2.3 percent in the first 10 days of February.

Retail sales climbed to a seasonally adjusted $110.7 billion despite record cold weather in much of the country, the Commerce Department said Wednesday. The gain followed a 0.5 percent decline in December and a 1.5 percent rise in November.

Auto dealers' sales rose a sharp 4 percent in January; excluding the increase, overall retail sales would have slipped 0.1 percent in January.

Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc., said the January sales figure "suggests that the retail side of the economy is only in a mild upturn. This points to a continuing advance in consumer spending, but only at a modest pace."

The early February sales gain reported by the U.S. auto industry was led by Chrysler Corp., which said sales climbed 18.5 percent in the period.

Industry leader General Motors Corp. said its sales rose 5.4 percent. Ford Motor Co. reported an 11.1 percent decline, which analysts attributed to unusually large sales last year when the company offered sales incentives.

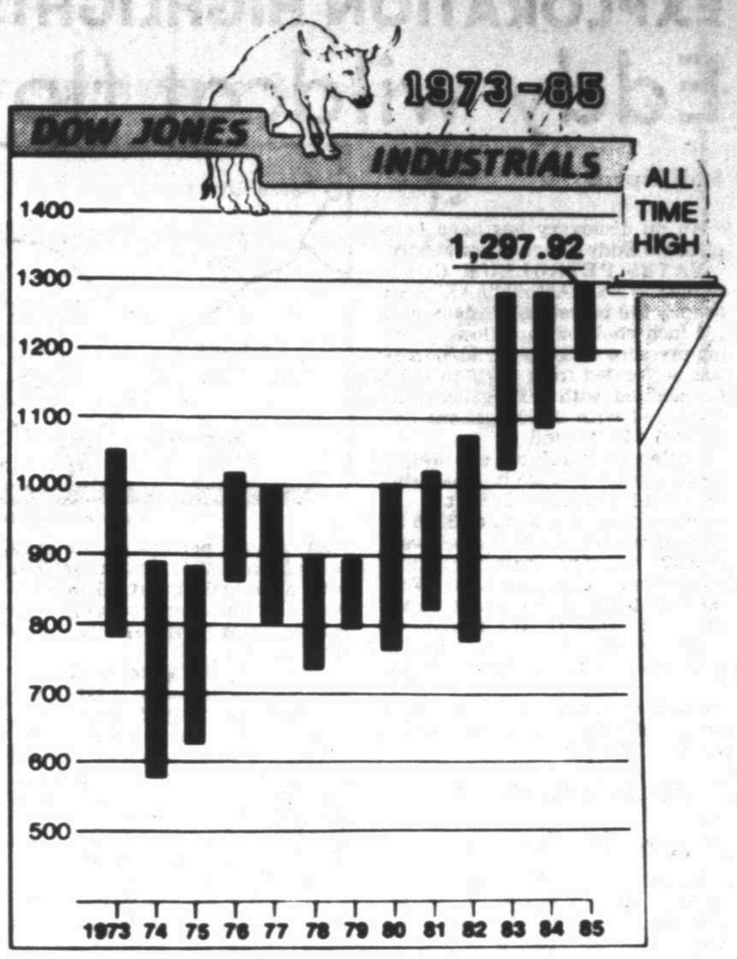
Separately, Ford said its fourth-quarter profit slipped 8 percent from a year earlier to $721 million from $781 million, but that full-year 1984 earnings rose 55 percent to a company record $2.90 billion from $1.87 billion

Ford said the decline in its fourth-quarter profit reflected a bigger tax bill stemming from the expiration of tax credits earned by the industry during the four-year sales slump that ended in 1983.

Ford's fourth-quarter sales rose to $13.4 billion from $12.4 billion. Full-year sales climbed to $52.4 billion from $44.5 billion.

In foreign-exchange trading Wednesday, the dollar set record highs against the currencies of France, Italy, Norway, Spain and Sweden, reached 13-year highs against the West German mark and Dutch guilder and a seven-year high against the Swiss franc.

The dollar also is benefiting from the economy's expansion. And, although interest rates have fallen from mid-1984 levels, they remain high relative to inflation, making yields on dollar-denominated investments attractive.



Insurance industry challenges proposed health benefits tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — The insurance industry, backed by major businesses, labor and a consumer group, is challenging the Treasury Department's plan for taxing a portion of employer-paid health benefits as an unfair burden on Americans least able to bear it.

"Taxing employer-sponsored benefits will mean that many Americans may have great difficulty making it to the second American Revolution of fairness and opportunity" that President Reagan envisioned in his State of the Union message, said Ralph J. Eckert, chairman of Benefit Trust Life in Chicago and of the Health Insurance Association of America.

Alexander B. Trowbridge, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, joined Eckert at a news conference Wednesday to denounce the parts of the Treasury tax-overhaul plan that would tax a share of health insurance and all employer-paid group life insurance.

The long-term effect of such changes could be "higher rates of poverty for the elderly (and) greater demands on social programs provided by the federal government," Trowbridge said.

Barbara F. Warden, executive director of National Consumers League, said taxing worker benefits is not the "revenue-neutral tax simplification" that the Treasury has billed it but is "a regressive tax put on those who can least afford to pay."

Reagan has endorsed the broad goals but not the specifics of the Treasury tax plan, which would make the most sweeping changes in the income tax in at least 30 years. The proposal would bring lower tax rates for most Americans but would pay for those cuts by reducing or eliminating many deductions.

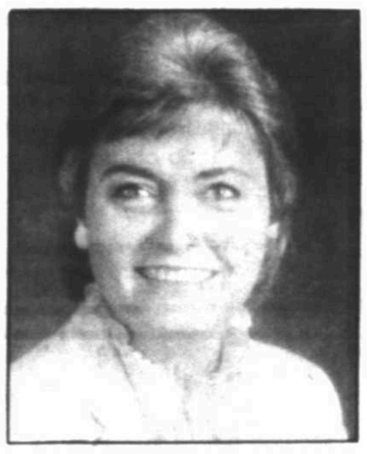
Among those changes would be taxation of all employer-paid group life insurance (only that portion above $50,000 now is taxed) and of the part of group health insurance premiums that exceeds $175 a month for a family plan or $70 a month for an individual.

The Treasury says the latter change would reduce overuse of the medical-care system and end a subsidy that unfairly discriminates against many workers.

But if workers' system of providing for their own health care and retirement is threatened through taxation, said Edward E. Phillips, chairman of the American Council of Life Insurance and of New England Life Insurance, "the needs that these benefits meet still remain; and the solution then, in time, becomes more government assistance. We do not believe that government can do it cheaper and better than the private sector."

Robert A. Georgine, president of the AFL-CIO's building and construction trades department, added: "The entire collective bargaining process is very seriously jeopardized and actually faces destruction if some of these tax proposals are enacted."

Eckert said the health proposal would be most unfair to workers in urban areas, where health care costs more; employees in hazardous industries, and older workers, who might have to pay higher premiums if younger workers opted for cash instead of taxable health insurance.



Kathy Blackman

PBAPC names Blackman as new president

The Permian Basin Association of Personnel Consultants held installation ceremonies at the new Masters Club for their 1985 officers and board of directors.

Paul Burnett, president of the Texas State Association, installed the officers.

Kathy Blackman, CPC of Midland, was named as incoming local president for 1985. Flo Dean will act as vice president; Phyllis Marshall, CPC, secretary; Mark Bennett, CPC, treasurer. Board of directors include Jane Bucher, CPC; Alma Byrd, CPC, and Hazel Barnes.

Government challenges GM accident analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Statistics don't always tell the complete story regarding automobile accidents, according to a federal official who testified that General Motors' data on its 1980 X-cars may have overlooked some mishaps.

James Hedlund, a statistics expert for the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, testified Wednesday in U.S. District Court that problems caused by alleged brake defect might not be evident in GM's analysis of accident rates.

Hedlund said GM's analysis of traffic accidents correctly showed there was no evidence that a brake defect caused an "enormous" number of accidents. But he said a defect could be causing a lesser portion of the accidents without showing up in such an analysis.

"A defect may cause a relatively small number of accidents and not be visible in accident data," Hedlund said.

Hedlund took the stand as a government witness in the non-jury trial, which resumed Wednesday before Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson following a 2½-month recess.

Both the government and GM previously completed their main arguments in the suit, which seeks the recall of 1.1 million 1980 models of the Chevrolet Citation, Buick Skylark, Oldsmobile Omega and Pontiac Phoenix.

The suit, which claims brakes on the X-cars often lock up prematurely, also seeks a $4 million fine.

Hedlund testified in response to an earlier presentation by risk analysis expert Roger McCarthy, who had testified for GM that accident rates for X-cars were comparable to those of other cars.

Kimberly-Clark moving headquarters to Texas

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Kimberly-Clark Corp., a $3.6 billion paper and health products company ranked 120th on the Fortune 500 list, will move its world headquarters to Irving by this summer, company officials say.

The new headquarters will include about 75 people, about half of whom would move from the Neenah, Wis., headquarters of 113 years, board chairman Darwin E. Smith said during a news conference Wednesday.

The move to the exclusive Las Colinas area should be completed by June 1, Irving mayor Bobby Joe Raper said.

"I was very excited about it," Raper said. "Anytime you get a Fortune 500 company, that can't be anything but good for you."

Kimberly-Clark makes Huggies diapers in Paris, Texas, and has a subsidiary, KC Aviation, at Love Field in Dallas.

Smith said the company had not yet decided on an exact location, but that Irving and Dallas promised a high quality of life.

Irving city officials said they were told the headquarters would be housed in 50,000 square feet of the Williams Square building in Las Colinas.

"I didn't let myself be sold on this area," Smith said. "This area sold itself to me."

He said he made several trips to Dallas in "an old shirt and blue jeans" to meet the people in the area.

The company employs about 35,000 people worldwide, and about 5,000 will remain in Wisconsin in manufacturing plants and an operating headquarters, Smith said.

BBB has arbitration program

The Better Business Bureau will hold an Arbitrator Training Session from 6:30-9:30 p.m. Thursday, February 28, at the Airport Executel.

Better Business Bureau Arbitration is a program designed to settle business-customer disputes without having to go to court. Volunteers are trained to listen to both sides of thedispute and then make a final decision on whether or not to grant customer's demands.

Eight car manufacturers have now pledged to arbitrate any dispute that cannot be settled to thecustomer's satisfaction regarding a manufacturing defect or recurring mechanical failure. This has caused tremendous growth in the Better Business Bureau Arbitration program.

Everyone is invited to attend the training session. No special background or skills are required. For more information call 563-5264 or 563-1881.

Atchison to write column

Susan Atchison, communications manager for the Midland Chamber of Commerce, will be writing a bi-weekly column called Chamber Notes.

A native of Dallas, she is a 1982 Texas A&M University graduate with a BS in journalism and a minor in business.

She worked as membership manager of the Plaza Club before joining the chamber.

She is a Young Life leader, a Clean Midland director and active in Act IX and the Celebration of the Arts.

CHAMBER NOTES

Small Business Council filling TradeShow booths

By SUSAN ATCHISON

The Chamber's Small Business Council is rapidly filling booth space for TradeShow Midland, a yearly exhibition designed to foster better knowledge of local product and service availabilities.

Scheduled for March 20-21 at Midland Center, the show has already attracted many local business participants, as well as one special exhibit featuring Texas Sesquicentennial items from across the state.

Approximately 75 percent of available exhibit space has been reserved, leaving only 14 booths still for rent.

Mark Kimball, show co-chairman, said all local businesses are invited to participate in TradeShow Midland '85 — whether they are wholesalers, service firms, equipment suppliers, professional agencies, financial institutions or leasing agent, and whether their operation is large or small.

The show will be open to the public, free of charge, to view, test and become familiar with the products and services Midland has to offer.

Most exhibit booths are 10-foot by 10-foot and rent for $400. Contact Alison Peeler, 683-3381, for information on how your company can participate.

•••

Midland businesses can also support the community by playing a part in the education of local children. The Chamber's Education Committee is seeking sponsors for teachers who will participate in the UT-Austin Free Enterprise Teacher Intern Practicum this summer.

While the state has mandated that the study of economics be included in the curriculums of all schools, many teachers find themselves ill-equipped to effectively teach the subject.

Last year, Val Butler, a social studies teacher at Goddard Junior High, received the instruction and hands-on experience she needed to understand, and teach, about free enterprise.

Sponsors are needed again this year to send teachers from Midland through this six-week summer program. Businesses may participate in two ways: by funding a $2,200 grant to pay for the expenses of the program, or by opening up their doors to a teacher so that he can gain four weeks of valuable on-the-job experience with a company. Call the Chamber for more information on how your company can support this program.

•••

In an effort to attract and facilitate new companies considering a move to Midland, as well as to inform businesses already established in the area, the Chamber's Economic Development Department has surveyed local firms to determine office space availabilities and typical employee wages and benefits.

Reports recently completed from both surveys are available at the Chamber office, 109 N. Main. Cost for the Wage and Benefits Survey is $35. The Office Survey will be free of charge.

•••

The Chamber of Commerce encourages representation of Midland, not only within this area, but on a state-side level, as well.

To that end, the Board of Directors of the Chamber has agreed to endorse and actively support the appointment of Ralph L. Way to a position on the Texas Tech University Board of Regents; Bill Roden for a position on the University of Texas Board of Regents; and Odessan Ray Stoker to a position on the State Highway Commission.

•••

The Chamber filled out its own board recently with the appointment of four new directors: Bill Parker, Western State Bank; Charlie Spence, Midland Reporter-Telegram; C.W. Barclay, TESCO; and Roger Robles, New York Life.

•••

Businesses in Midland continue to receive Chamber support, as they officially open with ribbon cuttings by the M-Squad, the Chamber's representatives. San Jacinto Jewelers, Kentucky Fried Chicken and Water Wonderland's new "wave machine" were welcomed last week. Upcoming ribbon cuttings include Pages and Prints and Ramada Hotel.

PUBLIC NOTICE

AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc. ("AT&T Communications"), in accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas ("PUC") hereby gives notice of its intent to implement a new schedule of rates for its services. The new rates will be effective February 22, 1985, unless otherwise determined by the PUC. All customers and classes of customers would be affected by the proposed rates.

AT&T Communications has filed restructured tariffs designed to more closely recover access and other costs for private line, DATAPHONE* Digital Service, OCC Facilities, WATS and 800 services.

Also proposed is the institution of a charge for directory assistance to begin to recover access costs incurred for such service, and increases in rates for operator assisted AT&T Long Distance calls.

AT&T Communications is proposing to restructure its AT&T Long Distance Service and to reduce its overall revenues from basic long distance approximately $25 million.

While long distance rates will, in most instances, be reduced, certain AT&T Long Distance rates are proposed to be increased to more nearly recover the access charges approved by the PUC for such service.

The proposed new rates for all services would result in an increase in adjusted test period revenues of $123.4 million, or 11.3 percent.

A complete copy of the proposed tariffs are on file with the Texas Public Utility Commission.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

"17 days and 87,834 passengers after my money-back guarantee began, I only made 16 people mad. And for me, that's pretty good."

—M. Lamar Muse

So I've extended the guarantee.

Starting January 15, I offered a refund to over 87,000 Muse Air passengers if they had any problems with our service.

Sixteen people took me up on it. That translates to about one out of every 5,489 passengers. Not too shabby.

But to me it's not too surprising.

When you guarantee a product as good as Muse Air, it's only natural you won't have many complaints. So now, I'm extending the guarantee.

THEY CAME. THEY SAW. THEY GOT A REFUND.
Out of over 87,000 satisfied passengers, only 16 had a complaint.

If we mess up, we'll pay up.

The next time you fly Muse Air (and as you can see in the chart, you've got a lot to choose from), remember this. If you ever have a legitimate complaint (note the word "legitimate") about any part of your flight on Muse Air, I'll see you get a refund of the percentage of your ticket you feel appropriate. Just contact any Muse Air Supervisor, ask for a guarantee form, and fill it out. Have the Supervisor initial the form, then mail it, along with your boarding pass and copy of your ticket receipt, to me.

Destinations and Fares	# Flights
Brownsville/ So. Padre Island $70/$90	5
Dallas Love Field $30/$45	5
Houston Hobby $55/$70	7
Las Vegas $100*/$120	2
Los Angeles $89*/$119	2
McAllen $70/$90	5
New Orleans $70/$90	4
San Jose $115*/$135	1
Tulsa $55/$70	2

*Restrictions Apply.

Nobody else offers a guarantee like this. They'd be crazy if they did.

Why? Because I know nobody else can match the level of service found on Muse Air. The clean, smoke-free cabins. Reserved, leather seating. The convenient schedules and everyday low fares that some airlines make you jump through hoops to get.

Put Muse Air to the test.

Odds are, 5,489 to 1, you're going to love us.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Understand terms: The rest is easy

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD

NEW YORK (AP) — Pity the poor shareholder.

Not only has Wall Street's merger binge dumped many a tough decision on stockholders' laps lately, but it also has confronted them with the arcane Wall Street jargon of wheeling and dealing.

Terms like shark repellant, poison pills, greenmail, leveraged buyouts, white knights and two-tier offers abound.

Those phrases are being heard more often as the pace of takeovers escalates.

The largest was the record $13.3 billion purchase of Gulf Corp. by Chevron Corp.

Next week, giant Mobil Corp. holds a special shareholders meeting to erect a takeover defense.

Phillips Petroleum Corp., which is trying to escape from an unsolicited $8.06 billion buyout offer, scheduled a stockowners' meeting for Feb. 22 to vote on a major corporate facelifting proposal that the company had endorsed in December to end an earlier takeover threat.

Here is a lexicon of merger terms to help shareholders understand the latest takeover tactics and defenses:

—Leveraged Buyout — this kind of takeover is financed with borrowed funds, with the purchasers tapping the company's own cash flow or selling its assets to foot the bill.

Typical targets of leveraged buyouts are companies that are trading in the stock market at well below their assessed value. Some oil companies fit that bill because of uncertainty about the course of oil prices. Managers of companies, who know the value of their properties better than many shareholders, often are partners in leveraged buyouts.

—White Knights — these friendly bidders emerge at the beckoning of a company trying to escape an unwelcome bid. Chevron was the white knight that Gulf sought to rescue it from an assault by an investor group led by T. Boone Pickens Jr., the chairman of Mesa Petroleum Co.

—Two-Tier Offers — these offers are made in two parts. The first step involves buying a controlling interest in a company. The second step, often at less attractive terms, is for the remaining stock.

The theory behind a two-tier offer is that if the first offer is attractive enough, shareholders will rush to accept the terms out of fear of being left out, thereby assuring the suitor control of the target company.

—Greenmail — a kin of blackmail, this term describes a practice where a major shareholder threatens a takeover in an attempt to convince a company to buy back his stock at terms more favorable than available to other stockowners.

—Shark Repellant — a defensive measure adopted by a company in an attempt to make it less attractive to a corporate raider.

—Poison Pill — one of the more severe forms of shark repellant. A company sets up a poison-pill defense in an attempt to make itself prohibitively expensive, or too poisonous, to a suitor.

Phillips, for example, has a poison pill in the form of rights that are to be issued to its shareholders on Monday. Each right enables a shareholder to convert one share of common stock into a note redeemable for $62 in cash in one year, plus 15 percent interest. The rights are exercisable only under certain conditions, such as when a hostile suitor acquires 30 percent of the company's stock and fails to match or better the terms of the poison pill.

The $6.7 billion cost of redeeming the 108 million remaining shares at $62 a share in cash, on top of the price of building up a 30 percent stake in the company, would be a staggering debt burden to any purchaser.

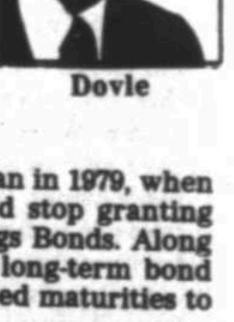
Will HHs be granted 'extended maturity?'

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My wife and I have $24,000 of Series HH U.S. Savings Bonds. We received them about three years ago in exchange for Series E bonds we had owned for many years.

HHs are scheduled to mature 10 years after their issue dates. Is there any possibility that their maturity will be extended?



Doyle

A. There is a possibility — but no promise by the U.S. Treasury Department — that HH bonds will be granted "extended maturities." However, I wouldn't count on it.

Think back through the years to when the Treasury granted extended maturities to old E and H bonds and made the sales pitch: "All Savings Bonds now outstanding — regardless of age — are still earning interest."

The boast went into the trash can in 1979, when the Treasury announced it would stop granting extended maturities to old Savings Bonds. Along with it went the hopes of many long-term bond owners who had expected extended maturities to go on forever.

The Treasury's action was a particularly low blow to people who planned to hold their Savings Bonds until retirement, when they would be in lower income tax brackets and cashing their bonds would result in smaller tax bites.

The oldest Es now reach final maturity after 40 years, the oldest Hs after 29 years, eight months.

HH and EE bonds have been issued since 1980. The Treasury Department has given no indication if those bonds will be granted extended maturities.

In your shoes, I would wait several more years before doing anything. Then, if there is no announcement of extended HH maturities, start redeeming your bonds over, say, four years. That way, the accumulated interest from your old E bonds won't be added to your taxable income in one year — kicking you into a higher tax bracket and resulting in a bigger tax bite.

Candy lightens up

By LINDA ANDERSON

Let's face it — one of the universal childhood pleasures rarely, if ever, outgrown is chocolate. It seems to stick to folks' sweet teeth.

Consequently, many chocoholics demand their Favorite Flavor in candy bars. For some, candy isn't worth eating if it is not coated in chocolate. Centers surrounded by chocolate can include nuts, marshamallows, coconut, raisins, candied fruit — and even ants. Evidently chocolate can cover a multitude of sins.

However, some of us who love candy and other sweet goodies get tired of chocolate sometimes and yearn for a less over-powering flavor. Nestle's Co. has recently introduced a "white chocolate" candy bar with almonds. Called "Alpine White," this confection is not always easy to find, at least in West Texas. The only places I have ever found it are in the candy machine at my office and at our favorite convenience store.

But because Nestle's is a well-known brand, the candy probably is more readily available to the general public than that. Anyway, as candy lovers, the taste-testers checked out this new sweet treat for taste, price and advertising accuracy — and how it compares to ordinary "brown chocolate."

The white chocolate bar is identical to chocolate chocolate bars in price and size. A 1-5/16-oz. bar of Alpine White costs 40-cents, the same as most ordinary chocolate bars of the same size bought from a machine. (Prices in a supermarket may be less. Prices at other locations may vary.)

White chocolate is not just pale chocolate. Evidently it is made from cocoa butter but without the cocoa. Other ingredients in the bar are sugar, milk, almonds and vanillin.

The only advertising I've seen for this product is on its wrapper: "...exquisite confection ... Old World tradition ... use only pure cocoa butter and ... roasted almonds ... new sensory experience."

The taste-testers weren't so sure about this "new sensory experience." The adult male wouldn't taste it; the teenage tester said it looked funny, tasted okay but would never replace real chocolate, and the adult female thought the taste was slightly pale, like its color. The 1-year-old tester doesn't have enough teeth to eat nuts which disqualified her as a participant. The 4-year-old tester took one bite and said, "Yecch! It tastes like soap!" (She should know — when she was much younger, she took a big bite of soap which she remembers as being an unpleasant experience.)

For candy lovers who want a change of pace, white chocolate can be a different treat. But real chocolate, the kind chocolate lovers crave, is deep, dark, delicious and brown!

Cheesy labels confusing

By MARIAN FARR

It may look and even taste like cheese, but these days only the label will tell you what you're eating.

Under Food and Drug Administration regulations, a dairy product which does not meet the relevant standard of identity must be called "imitation." If the product substitutes for and resembles another food and is not "nutritionally inferior," it does not have to be called imitation.

Some cheese is labeled as imitation simply because of a change of ingredients from real cheese. Some grated Italian-style cheeses which contain added whey, for example, are in the "imitation" category.

Another class of "imitation" cheese is the non-dairy product, made from vegetable oils, sugars, a protein source such as sodium caseinate and other ingredients. Some of these products, like imitation cream cheese, are not nutritionally equivalent to the products they imitate. They must be labeled imitation, may be marked "non-dairy product," and may bear a nutrition label.

An "imitation" label also appears on a popular and economical category of substitute cheese which has been fortified to contain the same amounts of protein and the 19 other ingredients for which U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance have been established. The nutrition labels on these products indicate that they are equal to or better than natural cheese in providing protein, vitamin A, riboflavin and calcium. These products may be equivalent in fat content to natural chese.

For consumers, the labels on packages of imitation cheese can be confusing. The FDA required full ingredient listing but nutrition labeling is not normally required.

Shoppers may have even more difficulty identifying imitation cheese in processed foods since the processor does not always have to state on the label that imitation cheese is used. For example, if a pizza is called "cheese" pizza and the processor uses imitation cheese, the word "imitation" must be listed on the label. When a pizza is called "mushroom pizza," that means mushrooms are the primary topping ingredient and any cheese used is secondary, so the imitation label does not have to appear.

When the cheese is genuine, the word "cheese" will appear in the ingredient listing. But the only way a consumer can identify imitation cheese in many processed foods is to look for sodium caseinate and vegetable oil, its two primary ingredients, on the ingredients listing.

'Baby gate' hazards questioned

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Kimbrough Sherman was watching the evening news recently when he learned that six manufacturers had voluntarily agreed to stop producing accordion-style "baby gates" because they pose a possible safety hazard to the small children they were intended to protect.

"I thought at first that they were doing this because the product had caused hundreds of deaths," said Sherman, a business professor at Loyola University and a member of the Maryland Consumer Council. "But then the news said there had been eight deaths (and 23 near deaths), which is a rather small number, particularly when you consider the lives that the gates may have saved."

The gates are used to keep children from falling down stairs or getting into rooms where there are hazards.

The point raised by Sherman strikes at the heart of safety regulation, namely: How many deaths and injuries, if any, should occur before a product is removed from the market?

The answer varies, depending on which regulator you ask.

Terrence M. Scanlon, chairman of the Consumer Product Safety Commission, the agency that worked out the agreement to halt production of the baby gates, said, "One death, to me, for any reason is bad."

However, he said, if the agency had tried to force a halt in the production of baby gates by taking the companies to court, "eight deaths would not have been enough for us to prove that there was a significant hazard, because there are 15 million baby gates out there."

"The parents are so afflicted with guilt and self-blame in these cases that they are reluctant even to talk about the incident; they blame themselves for not having provided adequate supervision," said CPSC Commissioner Stuart M. Statler, "and it appears that they are even reluctant to report what happened."

Cajun critters replace cupids

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Instead of saying it with chubby Cupids, you can now say it with grinning gators and cuddly Cajun 'possums.

Critters from Louisiana's bayou country waltz across the colorful valentines and greeting cards created by Robert Harris, a 26-year-old lifelong doodler from Lafayette who started his unique greeting card business last year.

"I've always been pretty decent in making people laugh and making them happy when they're not so happy," Harris said. "Now I'm just putting it on paper so people can keep it instead of trying to remember what I told them."

The cards, with hand-scrawled captions in Cajun dialect, are available only in Louisiana, Texas and Mississippi, although their distributor, Cajun Novelties of Broussard, hopes to start selling them on the East and West coasts, where Cajun restaurants are popping up.

About 60,000 of the valentines hit the market last week.

One features a bright green alligator pulling a wagon brimming with bright red hearts. Inside, the card says, "mais (well), let me told you somethin' cher (dear), i always needed some body like you to pick my heart up!"

In another, two possums dangle by their tails from a tree limb over the message: "I cant play possum with my feelings no mo'." Inside: "would you be my valentine, cher?!"

Harris' personal favorite is a big green frog sitting on a lilypad and looking lovesick. Hearts float overhead. Inside, the message reads, "I love you so much I could croak!"

"You don't live long enough to let things bother you, to be unhappy," Harris said. "It's such a waste of time. Smiling is good for your face, anyway. A smile a day keeps the wrinkles away."

Pete Lina, a fourth-generation Cajun who is president of Cajun Novelties, dismissed the question that French purists might take offense at the cards.

"These particular cards, there's no way, shape or form that we're making fun of the French background," he said. "I think they're real cute, French-type cards, and people will laugh with them, not at them."

"Actually, we're communicating with people in a humorous way, reflecting the Cajun culture. A lot of people we sent the cards to out of state rang the phone off the hook wondering where they could get them," said David Gordon, general manager of the company.

He said the company, begun in May, has sold about 300,000 cards, which retail for $1.25 each. The selections include invitations for a crawfish boil and cards for Easter, birthdays and other occasions.

Harris described the language in the cards as the gently lilting Cajun that he heard as a boy at his grandparents' home.

'Our Bodies, Ourselves' revised

BOSTON (AP) — Controversy is no stranger to "Our Bodies, Ourselves," a 15-year-old feminist health book that has sold 3 million copies, and the book's authors say they expect the revised volume to create a new uproar.

The new edition, released nationwide last month, contains an explicit photo of a woman who died after an illegal abortion.

"In our own group, making the decision to put that (abortion) picture in was controversial," said Judy Norsigian, one of 12 primary authors of the 647-page paperback produced by the Boston Women's Health Book Collective.

The picture, from a medical examiner's files, shows the nude body of a woman lying face down on a motel room floor. Ms. Norsigian said the intent was to counter the arguments of anti-abortion groups.

"Many women who are desperate to get an abortion will get it by some means," Ms. Norsigian said Monday in a telephone interview from the collective's Watertown office. "What we want to do is remind people of the other side of the equation — if you make it illegal, you endanger women's lives."

Ms. Narsigian said conservative groups such as the Moral Majority have asked that the volume be removed from libraries because of its blunt advice on abortion, birth control and other controversial topics. She expects the same reaction from the new edition.

The revised "Our Bodies, Ourselves" for the first time contains chapters on older women's health care, occupational health hazards, new reproductive technolgies and violence against women.

"We're hoping the book will help women use the medical care system more wisely," Ms. Norsigian said.

Chocolate valuable on Valentine's Day

By ERMA BOMBECK

Valentine's Day seems as good a time as any to talk about that box of chocolates most of you will be receiving today.

Chocolate is an aphrodisiac, one of the love foods that supposedly has the special power to stimulate you sexually.

Aphrodisiacs were never anything I planned my meals around, you understand, but I figured it was worth knowing about in the event I was in Walgreen's eating at the counter someday and Redford sat down next to me. I'd know what to suggest.

I never put a whole lot of stock in the myth until one day I was doing a cooking segment with Julia Child for "Good Morning America" when she passed me a plate of flaming bananas.

As I stuffed half of the banana into my mouth she observed, "It's an aphrodisiac, you know."

When I got to thinking about the number of gorillas and monkeys and baboons out there who looked lousy, but multiplied their brains out, I became a believer.

All my life I heard whispered rumors about the powers of oysters and strawberries, but I never knew about chocolate until a few years ago.

Scientists did some studies and found out it contained phenylethylamine. This is a chemical that is released by the brain when people fall in love. (For years I've been blaming my mother.)

According to the studies, this would explain why, when a romance goes on the rocks, lovers will go on a chocolate binge which is the body's way of replacing phenylethylamine.

In preparation for Valentine's Day, I approached my husband a few days ago and said, "Did you know that chocolate is an aphrodisiac?"

"Where did you hear that?" he asked.

"And that the Mexican Emperor Montezuma drank 50 cups of chocolate before entering his harem?"

"After what Montezuma did for me in Mazatlan a few years ago, I wouldn't believe him if he told me oranges grew on trees."

"I'd hate to think what would happen if someone gave me a three-pound box of chocolate creams."

There's no need to labor what I got for Valentine's Day, but I wonder how far Montezuma could have gotten with a bag of Trail Mix.

DEAR ABBY

Gambling scares wife

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I've been married to Al (not his real name) for 16 years. I love him and I know he loves me, but I cannot stay in this marriage unless he quits gambling. Al owns his own business and we live well, but he owes money all over. He bets on football, basketball, baseball, boxing, horses and dogs. He even bets on elections, and he bets big!

I know he's won a lot of money, but he never tells me how much he loses.

Please help me to help him, Abby. Gambling is like a disease with him. — AL'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Compulsive gambling IS a disease; it's never "cured," but it can be controlled. Gamblers Anonymous (fashioned after Alcoholics Anonymous) offers this questionnaire:

1. Do you ever lose time from work due to gambling?
2. Is gambling making your home life unhappy?
3. Is gambling affecting your reputation?
4. Have you ever felt remorse after gambling?
5. Do you ever gamble to get money with which to pay debts or otherwise solve financial problems?
6. Does gambling decrease your ambition? Efficiency?
7. After losing, do you feel you must return as soon as possible and win back your losses?
8. After a win, do you have a strong urge to return and win more?
9. Do you often gamble your last dollar?
10. Do you ever borrow to finance your gambling?
11. Have you ever sold anything to finance gambling?
12. Are you reluctant to use "gambling money" for normal expenditures?
13. Does gambling make you careless of the welfare of your family?
14. Do you ever gamble longer than you had planned?
15. Have you ever gambled to escape worry or trouble?
16. Have you ever committed, or considered committing, an illegal act to finance gambling?
17. Does gambling cause you to have difficulty in sleeping?
18. Do arguments, disappointments or frustrations create in you an urge to gamble?
19. Do you ever have an urge to celebrate any good fortune by a few hours of gambling?
20. Have you ever considered self-destruction as the result of your gambling?

Ask your husband to answer these questions honestly, and if he answers yes to seven or more questions, he is a compulsive gambler, and I strongly recommend that he get in touch with Gamblers Anonymous (it's in your phone book).

It is a non-profit fellowship of men and women who admit that gambling is not a game or a sport — it's a disease they must learn to control.

Encourage your husband to go to a meeting and learn firsthand how he can overcome the disease.

For more information about Gamblers Anonymous, write to the national office: P.O. Box 17173, Los Angeles, Calif. 90017. Please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: Don't tell me it's St. Valentine's Day again! Well, it is, so be a sweetheart, and call someone you love and say, "I love you." (Make two or three calls. Who said you can't love more than one person — in different ways, of course.)

Go through your closets and put all those clothes you haven't worn in a year in a box for Goodwill or your favorite charity. Take some flowers to someone in a nursing home and offer to take him or her for a little ride. Forgive an enemy. Pray for your friends. Donate some blood. Pay your doctor bill. Listen to your teen-ager. Tip the cook in addition to the waiter — or waitress. Invite a lonely lady (or gentleman) to lunch. Tell your parents you think they're wonderful. Drive carefully. If you're walking, watch where you're going.

And don't wait until next year to be a sweetheart again. Love, ABBY

Mihal visits area

Mrs. Paul E. Mihal of Glendale, Calif., supreme worthy president of the Social Order of the Beauceant, will visit Midland Assembly No. 143 and Odessa Assembly No. 206 at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the Masonic Temple, 9th and Lasseter Streets in Odessa.

Mrs. Mihal will preside for the 65th annual Supreme Assembly Sept. 23-27 in Portland, Ore.

A dinner in honor of Mrs. Mihal will begin at 6 p.m. in the banquet room of the Masonic Temple.

Members of the Midland and Odessa assemblies will be hostesses.

Mrs. Don Harless is president of the Midland assembly, and Mrs. Joe W. Kropf is president of the Odessa assembly.

Permanent project of the Social Order of the Beauceant is the Knights Templar Eye Foundation.

Gray winter days can cause blues

Copley News Service

Winter depression was first scientifically described in 1984 by National Institute of Mental Health researcher Dr. Norman Rosenthal. Rosenthal studied 29 sufferers of what he termed Seasonal Affective Disorder (known more commonly as winter depression). He identified these common characteristics among them:

— The majority (80 percent) are women.

— Most are bipolar, which means they experience both depression and manic periods.

— Symptoms start most frequently between October and December and usually end by March. Symptoms include fatigue, anxiety, sadness, lethargy, lack of motivation. Subjects say they feel slowed down, as if they were hibernating.

— Winter depressives say that if they change climate the symptoms change.

Woman likes to tell families to 'fly a kite'

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Sherry Kirk

Making and flying kites has been a part of Sherry Kirk's life for as long as she can remember. She first learned the art from her father when she was growing up on the Texas Panhandle and she has passed the craft down to her three sons.

Kite lovers will have an opportunity Saturday to learn what Mrs. Kirk knows during a workshop from 1 to 3 p.m. at the Girl Scout Office, off A Street on Dengar Street. Each person attending the workshop, sponsored by Midland Arts Assembly, Midland Parks and Recreation Department and the Museum of the Southwest, will build a kite. Then, March 16, a special kite flying event will be at 10 a.m. at Windlands Park, by the Girl Scout Office, for persons interested in flying their own kites.

"We came up with all kinds of kites," Mrs. Kirk says of her father's kite-making activities. "We had box type round kites — they look like flying saucers. And, they all flew.

"But we could come up with all kinds of wood because we had an old fallen tree at the back of the ranch, and it was like balsa wood. We'd go out and cut ourselves off chunks of wood and Dad would make us a kite out of it. We had a lot of room, no power lines and we could fly them to our hearts content."

Kite making was the family's way of communicating with one another.

"That's the reason I like homemade kites," Mrs. Kirk says. "If the family gets involved in putting them together, it brings the family closer together."

Kids need help from their parents in creating and making kites because they can't do it all by themselves, Mrs. Kirk says. She views the family involvement in kite making as being a positive step in "getting kids away from the TV and keeping them out of trouble.

"They're home trying to figure out how this is going to work, and how can I make this one just a little bit better," Mrs. Kirk says.

"Sitting around the TV watching TV together, you're not communicating. And if you can't communicate, you lose all touch with your kids. This way, the family gets together and they start talking and the first thing you know they're not only talking about kites and how to make them fly, they're talking about other things as well."

The smallest kites Mrs. Kirk has flown she learned to make when she was growing up. The kites, made out of toothpicks, are flown with sewing thread. The highest they will fly is between 15 and 20 feet. Last year, Mrs. Kirk made one which was about 1½ inches long and an inch wide.

"You have to have them (those made with toothpicks) perfectly balanced with just exactly the right tail on them or they won't fly," she says. Her creation last year flew, but it had to have very light wind to do so.

The largest kite made by the Kirk family was put together by her husband. When they were living in Roswell, N.M., he made a kite which was about 10 feet long and eight feet across. It also flew.

"And it kept flying. In fact, it broke his line and kept flying right on over the neighborhood."

The Kirks live in the county where they don't have to contend with power lines so they fly kites all the time. Although, Mrs. Kirk says, windy West Texas has days which aren't good for flying homemade kites. "The wind will tear them up at about 20 miles an hour."

But she pointed out "there are some store-bought kites that are so strongly built — they have two lines attached to the end and they spin in the middle — they can fly in 50-mile-an-hour wind as long as the string's tight enough.

"Let's hope March 16 it's not raining and that there's a nice breeze."

'Hollywood Wives' needs more than face lift

ENTERTAINMENT

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — Do lunch. Do dinner. Do anything else. But don't waste time watching "Hollywood Wives," ABC's plastic miniseries that needs a lot more than a tummy-tuck and a face-lift.

This lethargic video version of Jackie Collins' best-seller will be broadcast in three two-hour installments Sunday, Monday and Tuesday nights.

Producer Aaron Spelling ("Dynasty," "Love Boat," "Finder of Lost Loves") has turned Miss Collins' fetchingly satirical novel into his standard series glop: humorless, meaningless pap that takes refuge in glitzy costumes, lavish sets and sleek cars — all to the crescendo of sappy violins.

The shame of it is that this crass trash could have been classy trash, according to this columnist's wife who read the book, with the front cover torn off so nobody would know, and thought it was a gas, frequently laughing aloud at Miss Collins' clever writing.

Quality aside, Spelling is a proven ratings winner, and ABC is expecting a blockbuster performance from "Hollywood Wives." Of course, it has the prerequisite murders, seductions, betrayals and blackmailings.

"Hollywood Wives" ("Hollywood Whines" fits better) is about the women behind the powerful men in the movie capital, their quest for vicarious fame and fortune, and their lunches, facials and affairs, or as ABC's gushing publicity material says, "the private lives of the world's most public people."

All these public people and plot lines intersect at the third night's big bash, which Elaine Conti (Candice Bergen) throws in the hopes of resurrecting her husband's fading film career. Elaine believes that if Ross' star can rise again through a plum role in the movie "Final Reunion," he'll be more macho in bed and she'll be restored to her rightful place at Hollywood's chic spots.

Meanwhile, Ross (Steve Forrest), a former matinee idol relegated to low-budget, spaghetti Westerns, is having a torrid dalliance with Elaine's friend, Karen (Mary Crosby).

"Final Reunion" is the focal point for much of the story's scheming, jockeying and philosophizing. The "Final Reunion" script was written by Montana Gray (Stefanie Powers) whose husband, Neil (Anthony Hopkins), is a reformed alcoholic who will be directing the film.

Sexpot Gina Germaine (Suzanne Somers) is ready for a career change and the part of the innocent young thing in "Final Reunion." We learn about her new acting direction in a breathless interview with Mary Hart of "Entertainment Tonight" who plays herself quite believably.

In the one intentionally funny line in "Hollywood Wives," Gina says her latest film has her playing "an archaeologist who gets captured by a band of pygmies" but she's had enough of those sexploitation parts.

Gina ends up seducing Neil for a screen test, blackmailing him with tapes of their affair and causing him to have a heart attack in the sack. "Apparently, he's been under a lot of stress lately," the doctor who can't save him tells his wife and ex-wife (Joanna Cassidy).

Buddy Hudson (Andrew Stevens), an ex-gigolo, is also desperate for a part in "Final Reunion," but will he stoop to sexual hijinks, jeopardizing his marriage, to get his big career break? Stevens' only asset here is his upper torso, which he manages to reveal in half a dozen scenes.

Fort Worth Ballet comes to Odessa

ODESSA — The Fort Worth Ballet is opening its 1985 tour at Odessa College's auditorium at 8 p.m. Friday.

The company is directed by choreographer Anthony Salatino, former associate director of the Hartford Ballet and former director of the Syracuse Ballet. The program opens with Allegro Brilliante, a traditional ballet choreographed by George Balanchine. It also includes two works choreographed by Anthony Tudor, Little Improvisations and Continuo.

The one-night performance will conclude with the company's featured work "Texas Swing," a tribute to Texas. This work features music by Carroll Hubbard and includes such traditional songs as "Sweet Georgia Brown," "Lone Star Rag" and "Orange Blossom Special."

Tickets are available at two Odessa locations, The Dance Connection and the Globe Theatre box office. The performance is sponsored by Permian Ballet Theater Association.

Odessa Opree offers Texas Twisters

ODESSA — The Texas Twisters with Larry Elkins appears on the Odessa Brand New Opree at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Globe Theatre.

Elkins, a veteran West Texas musician, will also host the show. Special guests on this week's Opree include La Nay Holiday, Midland; Mark Clary, Kermit; and Betty Pelts, Odessa.

Admission is $4 for adults, $2 for students and senior citizens and $1.50 for children under 12. Tickets may be purchased at the Globe box office prior to the show or during the week from 1 to 5 p.m. For more information call the Globe Theatre.

The Odessa Brand New Opree is a showcase for area country and Western talent.

British director defies type-casting

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — In an industry that thrives on type-casting, Alan Parker is a puzzlement.

"I'll admit that all of my choices for pictures have been a little bit odd," said the British film director, and the record seems to bear him out.

His first feature was "Bugsy Malone," a musical satirizing 1930s gangster movies, with Judy Foster and other adolescents playing all the roles.

Next came "Midnight Express," a starkly realistic story of an American in a Turkish prison. "Fame," which concerned New York's high school for aspiring entertainers, attracted an Academy Award nomination for Parker and spawned a television series that won't quit.

"Shoot the Moon" starred Albert Finney and Diane Keaton in a drama of domestic upheaval. "Pink Floyd — The Wall" was a flat-out rock music film. "Birdy" is Parker's latest film.

"Birdy" is — well, it's one of those movies that is easier to enjoy than to describe. It concerns the friendship of two boys, played by Matthew Modine and Nicolas Cage. One (Cage) is a normal jock type; the other (Modine) has a peculiar attraction to birds. Both are wounded in Vietnam, and Cage struggles to bring Modine back from a catatonic state. It is based on the celebrated book by William Wharton.

"When I first read the book, I decided there couldn't be a movie in it," Parker said in an interview. "Half of the story took place inside the boy's head. Later I read the script that had been written, and I knew I wanted to make it. Either I was a lot more arrogant or I liked the script. I'm not sure which."

Parker conceded that "Birdy" would have been a hard sell at any major company because of its unique story. Though it concerns young people, it contains no drag races, no sexual awakening, no rock music.

"I'm sure I would have faced big trouble if there hadn't been a Tri-Star," Parker said, referring to the heavily financed "instant major." "Tri-Star had been talking to me about doing a film, and the company was keen for product.

Will North Texas be home to fine wines?

By MILES WRIGHT

IVANHOE, Texas (AP) — Reims, Bourgogne, Wolfe City, Collinsville, Beaune, Ivanhoe — to aficionados of fine wines, something about these names doesn't fit. Sure, it's easy to pick the three French wine-producing cities, but why are the names of three North Texas towns included in the list?

If the folks at Texas Vineyards succeed, don't be surprised to see fine wines bearing a Fannin County label. The wine industry is no longer a Texas curiosity — it now holds enormous economic potential for North Texas farmers.

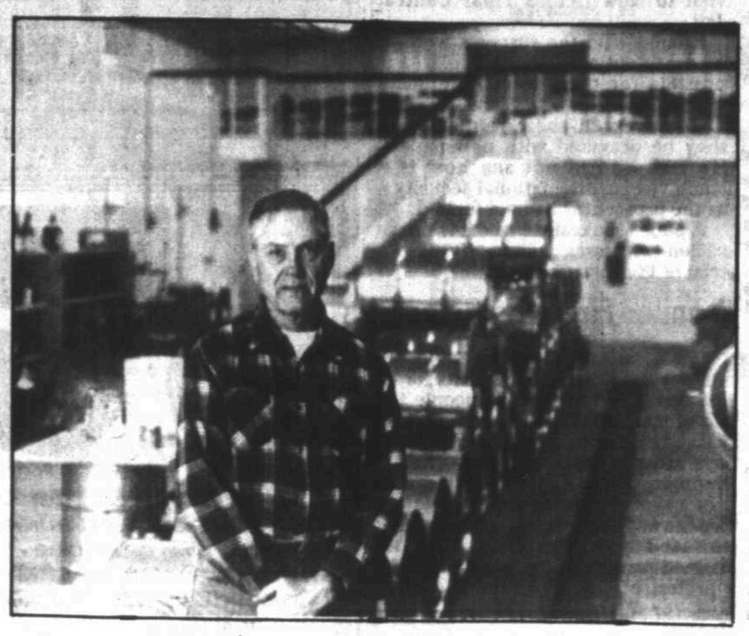
"There's been so much talk about the wine industry in Texas," says Darroll Martin, president of Texas Vineyards. "So many feel it is a sleeping giant getting ready to explode."

Experts expect the number of Texas acres planted in grapes to double by 1995, and the number of gallons produced last year to more than double for next year. Texas' 13 commercial wineries should ferment close to 350,000 gallons in 1985.

The American interest in enology (the art of wines and winemaking) is not confined to Texas, California and New York, though. Wineries have sprouted in Washington, Arkansas, Missouri and particularly in New Mexico. For Texas, current interest began around 1976 when agriculture officials with the University of Texas at Austin were looking for a revenue-generating crop for the University's lands in West Texas.

Although oil is the chief source of revenue, another cash crop was sought that wouldn't deplete the declining water table. The hardy grapevine can thrive with an efficient drip watering system.

Vines send root systems as deep as 35 feet into the earth and grow in diverse soils. Martin says not one of these plants succumbed to the devastating freeze of 1983.



AP Laserphoto

Darroll Martin of Texas Vineyards poses with containers holding the first year's wine products. The Fannin County vineyard produced its first bottle this year.

Winemaking, though, is not new to Texas. Many people made wine from wild grapes, but as early as 1878, T.V. Munson of Denison pioneered scientific approaches to winemaking. Among wild grapes like the Post-Oak and Mustang, Munson started two acres in 1878 and soon expanded his vineyards to hold a great many varieties.

Today more than 350 varieties are credited to Munson, and he was also instrumental in developing more drought- and disease-resistant strains that saved many European producers in lean years.

An outbreak of phylloxera, a root disease, almost devastated French vineyards until Munson and others sent hardier plants down the Red River and the Mississippi on barges to be shipped across the ocean. He was decorated by the French government for his work.

Today a 10-year-old viticulture program has been established at Grayson County Junior College in memory of Munson. Director of the program, Roy Renfro, said the college owns five planted acres of grapes and has planned four seminars for this spring and fall.

"We're trying to establish a regular viticulture center at the college so local growers will have a place to go. We are already playing an integral part in Texas. We've had great cooperation with the University of Texas in Austin and Texas A&M University," Renfro said.

Texas Vineyards began in 1982 when Martin retired after 30 years of service for a New York life insurance company. A native of Mission, Martin returned to Texas and chose the Ivanhoe area simply because he liked the land. After planting a few vines, Martin became acquainted with another new grower in the area, Dr. James Bledsoe.

"From wine what sudden friendship springs," as English poet John Gay was fond of saying.

"I put in some grapevines but I really didn't know what I was going to do with them or what kind of vines I wanted. We went to the Texas Grape Growers Convention in Lubbock in 1983 and met some other people who had the same idea we had," Martin said.

"We had to find something to do with our grapes, so we decided to start a little winery, with no idea how successful we would be."

Two years later, Texas Vineyards was established and $400,000 was spent on a facility and equipment such as a wine press, a crusher-destemmer, fermenting tanks and bottlers. This year marks the first bottle of wine produced by the corporation, and many more are being planned for 1985.

Approximately 5,100 gallons will be the final total for Texas Vineyard's initial contribution to the commercial wine market. Nearly 80 acres are cultivated in grapes by the 33 stockholders of the company. Much of their grapes and juice for wine is still being brought in from the Lubbock and Midland areas.

This woman isn't your typical mom

By REBECA ZIMMERMANN

WACO (AP) — When Sandy Bailey says she's "not your typical mother," she is referring to her child-rearing philosophy.

But Mrs. Bailey is an atypical mother for a more obvious reason. She has cerebral palsy.

While Mrs. Bailey was pregnant with her daughter, people asked her how she would take care of the baby.

"I've never dropped this child yet," said Mrs. Bailey, who describes her gait as that of someone who's done too much partying. But she admits to facing the problems of all new parents.

"It was just one panic after another," she said. She found a friend to call "six times a day" for those ordinary crises, and she and Jamie, now 21 months, made it through the first year.

"I refuse to think of her as a baby," Mrs. Bailey said. She talks to Jamie in a logical, grown-up fashion. She politely asks Jamie if it's all right to change her diaper. When Jamie has a crying fit, Mrs. Bailey puts her daughter on her lap and asks, "Can I help? Do we need to talk?"

Jamie is sensitive to her mother's needs, Mrs. Bailey said.

"I find that she responds to me differently than other children respond to other parents."

She also gets help and encouragement from her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Van Wyk. "Grandpa's the best baby-sitter in the whole world," she said. And Richard, her husband of three-and-a-half years, encourages her and boosts her self-esteem, Mrs. Bailey said.

> "She doesn't like anything uncomplicated. She's a bigger challenge than any college course I have ever taken."
>
> —Sandy Bailey, mother with cerebal palsy

Mrs. Bailey has worried about Jamie's speech, since children usually learn from mimicking others.

"My speech has been my biggest problem," she said. "When I'm tired, nobody can understand me." Mrs. Bailey, 34, has had cerebral palsy since birth and was unable to speak until she was eight or nine.

She said her worries about Jamie's speech apparently have been unfounded. "I can tell her a word and she'll say it correctly," or at least as correctly as any 21-month-old can.

Mrs. Bailey also worries about keeping up with Jamie as she gets older. "She doesn't like anything uncomplicated. She's a bigger challenge than any college course I have ever taken," she said.

Mrs. Bailey has an associate's degree in mental health from McLennan Community College.

She is now studying computer science at MCC. She also is taking an acting class. "Acting is feeding my soul," she said.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Fire on Indian ship kills 50 passengers

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Fire broke out on an Indian passenger ship carrying more than 900 people in the Bay of Bengal, killing 50 people who were watching a movie, the United News of India reported today.

The M.V. Chidambaram liner, en route from Singapore to Madras, caught fire late Tuesday about 310 miles east of the Indian coast, the Shipping Ministry said.

UNI said the blaze was caused by an electrical short circuit and broke out in a rear room where the movie was being shown.

The ship, owned by a giant Indian government shipping company, arrived in Madras, about 1,050 miles southeast of here, this morning after the blaze was put out with the help of seven Indian navy vessels and two air force aircraft, officials said.

UNI quoted the ship captain as saying 50 people perished.

Neo-Nazis on trial

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Five suspected neo-Nazis have gone on trial in a state court, charged with car-bomb attacks on three U.S. soldiers in 1982 and armed robberies of five banks.

Three defendants — Hans-Peter Fraas, 24, Dieter Sporleder, 24, and Helge Blasche, 42 — have been in custody since their arrests in West Germany in February 1983.

Walther Kexel and Ulrich Joahnn Tillmann, both 23, were extradited to West Germany in June 1983 following their arrests in London.

The Federal Prosecutor's office has issued an arrest warrant for a sixth suspect, 26-year-old Odfried Hepp, who apparently fled West Germany after the bombings.

All six were linked by the prosecutor to political groups that espouse neo-Nazi aims.

The five defendants are charged with forming a terrorist group, robbing five banks of the equivalent of $210,000 in 1982 and planting three car bombs that seriously injured two American soldiers in December 1982 in central West Germany.The defendants face long jail terms and heavy fines if convicted.

Londoners can remarry

LONDON (AP) — The winter synod of the Church of England has approved a plan designed to create a fairer system for divorced people wishing to remarry in the Anglican church.

In 1981, the church reversed its previous ban on remarriages and said second weddings could be permitted in some cases. The decision was left to parish priests, which led to widespread complaints of inconsistency between different regions and even neighboring parishes.

The new plan, approved Wednesday, requires a parish priest to consult his bishop in each case. It does not affect a priest's legal right to marry or refuse to marry any couple.

The change was supported by Dr. Robert Runcie, who as archbishop of Canterbury is head of the Church of England and spiritual leader of Anglicans worldwide. "There has been a common desire to hold the principle of lifelong marriage, together with the principle of grace towards those who have departed from it," he said.

Sikhs' appeal rejected

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A New Delhi judge has rejected appeals against solitary confinement by three Sikhs charged with criminal conspiracy in the Oct. 31 assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

The three prisoners — including Satwant Singh, one of Mrs. Gandhi's bodyguards and the sole surviving accused assassin — claimed they were being held in cells "unfit for human habitation."

The vice chief metropolitan magistrate, S.L. Khanna, said Wednesday he had found their cells "clean and fit for human habitation" during a visit to New Delhi's Tihar Central Jail.

Khanna said the suspects were in separate, adjacent cells and it was possible for them to communicate with each other.

He accepted their request that they be provided with newspapers. He said he did not see how this could "jeopardize national security," as the prosecutor had contended.

A police spokesman said 144 prosecution witnesses will testify at the trial of the three men.

Manila: Fire was arson

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The military today blamed arsonists for a fire that killed at least 24 people in one of Manila's largest luxury hotels and was still burning nearly two days after it broke out, the official Philippine News Agency reported.

In a typewritten note delivered to two news agencies, a previously unheard of group, The Angels, claimed responsibility for the fire as a protest of U.S. and Japanese support for President Ferdinand E. Marcos.
