'That's what America's all about'

Associated Press

ROMA, Texas — Wayne Sutton drove 1,500 miles from his New Jersey home to the Texas-Mexico border to help a poor South Texas mother he had read was clothing her children out of a county garbage dump.

"Helping one another" is "what I feel America is all about," said Sutton, 47, of Northfield, N.J. "There are a lot of desperate people in need and yet some of us have so much."

Sutton was heading home Wednesday after going to the dump to visit Anita Navarro, the impoverished mother of five whose struggles were detailed in an Associated Press story that appeared in the Atlantic City Press earlier this month.

Ms. Navarro had been scavenging in the Starr County dump for recyclable aluminum cans, change and clothes for her children, ages 3 to 9. She said her children would be wearing to school the "rags" she finds at the landfill.

The $50 the unemployed Rio Grande City woman earns each week by selling aluminum cans is her only means of supporting her family, she said.

Sutton said he was "very touched, moved" by Ms. Navarro's plight and called friends and neighbors in Northfield asking for donations of clothes for her and other unemployed Starr County residents. He then called the newspaper to locate someone in Rio Grande City or nearby Roma to whom he could send the donations.

A church in Starr County agreed to accept and distribute the clothes and another article in the Atlantic City Press about Sutton's project generated additional donations.

"After the local newspaper article appeared, the whole thing just suddenly took off," said Sutton. "I wasn't prepared to handle all the clothes that arrived."

He said he eventually packaged 80 cartons of clothing for needy Starr County families.

"I put them (the clothes) all over my house, in my neighbor's garage and finally on the front lawn, covered by a tarp. If I'd kept going I would have needed a warehouse," he said.

Sutton drove about 1,500 miles with a friend in a rented truck. He said the truck was paid for by Stephen Wynn, chairman of the board of the Golden Nugget Casino in Atlantic City.

When he returns to New Jersey, Sutton hopes to repeat his effort by collecting canned food for South Texas poor.

"I'm just one person. But if I can make an impact, if I can help, then maybe it will motivate others to do the same," he said.

Discovery finally finds way to space

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — America's new shuttle Discovery finally soared into orbit today on its thrice-delayed maiden flight, carrying three communications satellites and a six-member crew that includes NASA's second woman astronaut and its first paying passenger.

After three frustrating postponements in two months and a last-minute wait to get two airplanes out of the way, Discovery lifted off into blue, cloudless skies on a mission critical to rebuilding the confidence of customers in the shuttle's commercial reliability.

Nine minutes after the fiery departure at 8:42 a.m., Mission Control in Houston reported the liftoff was perfect and Discovery was in orbit 184 miles high and streaking around the globe at 17,400 mph.

"I know it's been kind of rough, turning this thing around ... and getting it ready to go again," commander Henry Hartsfield, 50, told the control center shortly before launch. "We're ready to go and we thank you for it."

The flight combines two missions into one as NASA struggles to get back on schedule and packs 24 tons of cargo, the heaviest yet for a shuttle.

Discovery's inaugural, the 12th shuttle flight, began almost seven minutes late because two private aircraft had penetrated the Kennedy Space Center airspace. One had to be chased away by a government plane.

With tens of thousands of spectators watching from nearby beaches and highways, the blastoff culminated a countdown that was interrupted for 24 hours Tuesday night. That halt was required because of an electronic malfunction that theoretically could have prevented the booster rockets and fuel tank from dropping off after they exhausted their fuel.

But a hastily redesigned computer program worked perfectly, and the twin boosters peeled away two minutes seven seconds into the flight to splash down in the Atlantic for retrieval. The rust-colored tank fell away into the Indian Ocean after the ship's main engines burned out eight minutes later.

Hartsfield, who flew on a shuttle two years ago, is joined by five first-time space fliers. They are pilot Michael Coats, 38; mission specialists Judy Resnik, 35, America's second woman astronaut; Steve Hawley, 32; and Richard Mullane, 38, and payload specialist Charles Walker, an industry engineer whose employer, McDonnell Douglas Corp., paid NASA $80,000 for his training.

The crew's main job will be to deploy the three satellites for commercial customers — one of them later this afternoon. Walker will operate a drug factory to produce a hormone in greater purity than is possible on Earth. Also aboard is a 10-story-tall solar sail that will be unfurled in a test of a device that may one day convert the sun's rays to electrical power for space stations.

The flight is to end Wednesday morning at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

A successful journey is vital to NASA, which must demonstrate to its commercial payload customers that the shuttle is a reliable space transportation system.

The 12th shuttle mission was delayed twice in June and again on Wednesday because of a series of technical problems. The June delays came back-to-back and both times the crew had climbed into the cockpit for launch, only to scramble out again frustrated.

AT A GLANCE...

Spaceship: Discovery, the third shuttle, on its first flight. Flight postponed twice in June, once this week.

Launch: 8:42 a.m. EDT, today, Aug. 30, from Kennedy Space Center.

Orbit: 96 orbits of Earth at altitude of 184 miles.

Mission length: 6 days, 59 minutes.

Landing: 6:34 a.m. PDT, Wednesday, Sept. 5, at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

Crew: Henry W. Hartsfield, 50, commander; Navy Cmdr. Michael L. Coats, 38, pilot; mission specialists Steven A. Hawley, 32, Richard M. Mullane, 38, and Judith A. Resnik, 35, second American woman named to a space flight, and payload specialist Charles D. Walker, 36, a non-astronaut who is an engineer with McDonnell Douglas Corp.'s Astronautics Division.

Payloads: Three commercial communications satellites; a solar panel which will be unfurled to a length of 105 feet in a test of a device that may one day draw power from the sun for future shuttles or space stations, and a machine in which Walker is to electrically separate biological material to produce the first made-in-space medicine for testing on animals and humans. The medicine has not been identified.

Next flight: Challenger, on Oct. 1, with a science payload and a crew of seven, including two women, one of whom will take a space walk to test techniques for transferring fuel to orbiting satellites.

Iraq reports defection of Iranian pilots

By MOHAMMED SALAM
Associated Press Writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — One of Iran's U.S.-made jetfighters landed at an Iraqi airport today and its two pilots requested and were granted political asylum, a military spokesman announced.

Meanwhile, Iraq's ruling Revolutionary Command Council issued a statement saying it had released an unspecified number of Iranian POWs to mark a Moslem feast, and was inviting more Iranians to defect.

The unidentified military spokesman's communique, carried by Iraq's state media, said the plane was an F-4 Phantom jetfighter. The statement did not specify the air base at which the Iranian plane landed.

(Iran's official state radio, in reporting on the incident, used a Persian word that could indicate the plane was stolen or hijacked. The Tehran radio broadcast, monitored in London, said the plane was flown to an "unknown destination" in Iraq. It said the incident was "part of the propaganda program designed by world arrogance and the regime ruling Iraq."

("World arrogance" is a term often used by Iran to mean the United States or another world power.)

It was believed to be the first Iranian jetfighter to fly to Iraq during the four-year-old war. Earlier this year, two Iranian air force pilots defected to Saudi Arabia on a mission to attack a Kuwaiti oil tanker in the Persian Gulf region.

Iraq's minister of culture and information, Latif Nsayyef Jassem, said Wednesday that Iraq is "ready to receive any Iranian plane" that requests landing rights in Iraq.

He made the comment two days after a young Iranian couple hijacked an Iran Air passenger jet with 206 people on board while it was on an internal flight between Shiraz and Tehran, the Iranian capital.

The Iran Air Airbus landed Tuesday at a southern Iraqi military air base.

Factions fight while mourning Gemayel

By G.G. LABELLE
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Rival Moslems and Christians united today in mourning Pierre Gemayel, the father of Lebanon's president and a dominant figure from the nation's fight for independence through its long civil war.

As preparations got underway for the burial, Gemayel's Phalange Party militia clashed with Druse fighters south of Beirut, and rival Moslem militias battled in Tripoli, bringing the death toll in that city to 23 in three days.

In much of Lebanon church bells tolled, flags flew at half staff and radio stations played sad music in tribute to the nation's most prestigious Christian leader, the fallen founder of the Phalange Party. He died Wednesday at age 78 of a heart attack.

The government has declared a three-day national mourning for Gemayel, beginning today. His funeral was scheduled for this evening in Bikfaya, his mountaintop hometown where he died, 10 miles northeast of Beirut.

In his will, Gemayel wrote that he wanted to be buried at the family cemetery in a simple wooden coffin next to his slain son, Bashir, and Bashir's daughter, Maya, who was killed in a car bomb blast at age 4 in 1979, an official announcement said.

Bashir was elected president by Parliament in 1982, but was assassinated before his inauguration. His brother, Amin, was then elected president and has held the office for the last two years.

Pierre Gemayel's death casts a further shadow on the nation's already dimming chances of halting the nine-year civil war. Only former President Camille Chamoun, a fellow Christian and political rival, came close to Gemayel in national influence.

Lebanon's Shiite Moslem warlord, Nabih Berri, and his Druse ally, Walid Jumblatt, offered their condolences in separate telephone calls to President Gemayel.Prime Minister Rashid Karami, a Sunni Moslem, praised Pierre Gemayel in a statement read over radio stations.

Arab heads of state and one Israeli leader expressed sympathy with the Lebanese people over the loss of Gemayel.

"I share you sadness over the loss of a father and a leading Cabinet member of your administration," Syrian President Hafez Assad said in a message of condolence to the Lebanese head of state.

King Hussein of Jordan and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak cabled similar messages, and Israeli premier-designate Shimon Peres issued a statement praising the elder Gemayel.

Chedli Klibi, secretary-general of the Arab League, arrived to offer condolences, the state radio said.

The overnight battles near Beirut pitted Gemayel's "Lebanese Forces" militia against Jumblatt's Druse fighters in artillery and rocket duels in the Kharroub region northeast of Israel's defense line in Lebanon.

The hostilities broke a five-month truce in the region abutting Jumblatt's strongholds in the Chouf mountains. No casualty estimates were available in the battle, which police said ended at daybreak.

In the northern port of Tripoli, police said Moslem militias vying for local dominance battled with mortars and multiple rocket launchers through most of the night, killing eight people and wounding five.

This brought to 23 dead and 44 injured the toll of three days of battles that came despite a ceasefire between the "Arabian Knights" militia and the "Tawheed Islami," or islamic unification movement.

The cease-fire declared one week ago halted four days of random bombardment that left 120 people killed and 325 wounded in lebanon's second-largest city.

Gemayel was minister of public health and communications in the present government and had been a member of Parliament since 1960. He was twice defeated in bids for the presidency.

Gemayel's death could set off a power struggle within the party and strain the national coalition Cabinet.

The young Phalangists, who control the Israeli-trained and supplied Lebanese Forces militia, were outraged by the president's decision last March to scrap a U.S.-mediated troop withdrawal pact with Israel.

In 1982, the militia was blamed for the massacre of hundreds of Palestinians in the Sabra and Chatilla refugee camps when invading Israeli troops occupied the Lebanese capital.

State of Texas to get $50 million from Hughes estate

AP Laserphoto

Attorney William R. Lummis of Las Vegas, left, watches Attorney General Jim Mattox sign an agreement under which Texas would get $50 million from the estate of Howard Hughes.

AUSTIN (AP) — The estate of billionaire Howard Hughes will pay Texas $50 million in an agreement that settles what one official called probably the most complicated probate case in history.

The agreement, signed Wednesday by Texas, California and Hughes estate officials, ended eight years of legal maneuvering over inheritance taxes that began on April 5, 1976, when Hughes died aboard a private jet that was en route from Acapulco to Houston.

Texas will get $50 million cash. California will get between $119 million and $150 million in cash and land.

California officials said the federal government's share would be between $150 million and $180 million, but William R. Lummis, a cousin of Hughes and a Las Vegas, Nev., attorney representing the estate, estimated the federal tax at about $100 million.

"The Howard Hughes estate case probably has been the most publicized and complicated probate case in this country's history," Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said.

"You realize that when you look at the amount of money involved and also because of the rather eccentric lifestyle of Howard Hughes," Mattox added after signing the agreement.

Lummis, who flew to Texas after signing the agreement in Sacramento earlier in the day, said he believed the settlement was the best for all parties involved.

"I think they did nick us pretty good," he said. "Dealing with the payment of sums of this magnitude, it's hard to say you're elated...

"It's a good settlement. Litigation tends to take on a life of its own. I think that's what was happening," Lummis said.

Texas and California each had pursued inheritance tax claims on the massive Hughes estate since the reclusive billionaire's death. The case had been before the U.S. Supreme Court three times.

Hughes left no verified will. More than 40 purported wills and hundreds of prospective heirs surfaced over the years. A series of trials in be a Texan, lived in rented or borrowed homes and said he was visiting California on business.

In 1966, Hughes moved to a Las Vegas hotel from which he began acquiring hotels and land in Nevada. He later moved to the Bahamas, Nicaragua, Canada and London, secluding himself in posh hotel suites.

Texas, saying Hughes was a Texan, claimed an 18 percent inheritance tax. California, contending Hughes 1981 trimmed the number of heirs to 22.

Hughes, the son of the inventor of an oil drill bit, was born in Texas and lived in the state for 20 years.

He lived in Los Angeles and San Diego counties for about 41 years, but claimed during that time to still was a resident of that state, wanted to impose the 24 percent state inheritance tax in effect in 1976.

But the heirs said Hughes was a resident of Nevada, which had no state inheritance tax.

Mattox said Texas officials had concluded that Hughes spent only about 48 hours in Texas after 1926.

However, Mattox said, "He did claim himself as a Texas resident in a number of court cases and tax protests in California way past the time he left Texas and even paid his Texas poll tax (at least through the 1940s)."

"We say once a Texan, always a Texan, and that was our interpretation in this case," he said.

Mattox said the agreement apparently still needs court approval, but voiced confidence the settlement will be final.

Under the agreement, Texas will be paid $25 million within 60 to 90 days. Another $25 million will be held in escrow in an Austin bank for one year.

At the outset of the case, Texas officials estimated the state could collect a maximum of about $100 million.

Mattox said the state decided to accept the settlement to avoid more delays.

"We felt we could have gone on in litigation for the next 10 years, easy," he said.

Group will look into men's arrests

DALLAS (AP) — An Arab-American group charges that nine men from Iran, Syria and Jordon were arrested only because of their nationalities in connection with alleged plots to attack the Republican National Convention using an ultralight airplane.

Federal and local law enforcement authorities confirmed Wednesday that the nine were taken into custody on immigration charges before and during the GOP gathering because they were believed to be plotting some kind of attack on the convention.

But officials said they were never able to substantiate that the men intended to attack the convention, even after giving them lie detector tests.

Joe Chamy, vice president of the Dallas area chapter of the National Association of Arab Americans, said Wednesday that the men were being singled out because of their nationalities and "guilt by association."

"There's an effort now being made by the Arab-American Anti-Discrimination Committee to look into this situation," Chamy said. "We want to find out exactly what has brought this whole scenario about and make a full study of it.

"These are people who were arbitrarily isolated in this case," he said.

Chamy said the nine — four Iranians, four Jordanians and one Syrian — were held for about 10 days before being released. The nine include eight students in their 20s and the father of three of the men, the Dallas Morning News reported. They were initially held without bond in Lew Sterret Justice Center.

All were out of jail by Friday on reduced bonds, according to Wallace Heitman, the attorney for five of the men.

Heitman said he knew of no terrorist plot against the Convention Center and that his clients were not involved in any of the Iranian student protests during the GOP gathering.

The Dallas Times Herald first revealed the alleged plot and arrest in Wednesday's editions, quoting federal sources as saying that officials were so concerned that motorcade routes were changed and security was increased even after the nine were jailed.

The men arrested included at least five supporters of the Palestine Liberation Organization, investigators said.

Ronald Chandler, district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Dallas, said the nine men were detained for various immigration violations.

"The Iranians were alleged to have been involved in some plot involving an ultralight aircraft," Chandler said. "We questioned these individuals and determined they were out of their immigration status either because they were working or had overstayed their (student) visas."

Chandler said the FBI asked the INS to check the men's status, but declined to reveal the reason for the FBI's request. The check showed that some of the students were in the United States beyond the time permitted by their visas, and others were working without INS permission, as required by law. Chandler said.

He said after being interviewed by FBI agents and given lie detector tests, the men were cleared of any terrorist involvement and their bonds were reduced by immigration Judge Gary Burkholder to $5,000.

Agreement reached in desegregation suit

HOUSTON (AP) — The city's school board and attorneys for two minority groups today announced an out-of-court agreement which would end a 28-year-old desegregation lawsuit if approved by a federal judge and the Justice Department.

Lawyers for the Houston Independent School District said formal approval from U.S. District Judge Robert O'Conor and federal officials could occur within "several weeks."

The agreement capped four tense, emotionally charged days of negotiations among the school district, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund.

"This is the highlight of my 10 years in Houston," said Superintendent Billy Reagan. "I think the children in the district are the great winners tonight."

The school board voted 5-0 Wednesday to offer an out-of-court settlement similar to an earlier proposal by the NAACP. After a round of haggling that resulted in minor changes, lawyers for the NAACP and the Mexican-American Legal Defense Fund accepted the $13.5 million package early today.

"I was pleasantly surprised with their proposals," said NAACP attorney Lowell Johnston.

The offer contained 24 provisions, including a proposal of a 60-40 ratio of minority group students to white students at magnet schools in an inner-city school district of 117,546 students.

In addition, it suggested continuing desegregation in the present form but without federal court supervision and appointing a seven-member committee to monitor student achievement throughout the district.

After five years, the three groups will be able to drop the agreement, renew it for two or three years or extend it indefinitely, attorneys said.

Records show that 19.9 percent of the district's students are white, 42 percent are black, 34.6 percent Hispanic and 3.5 percent Asian.

The NAACP had proposed changing magnet programs to allow 65 percent minority students and 35 percent white students to enroll, beginning in the 1985 school year.

NAACP attorneys argued that the current 50-50 ratio limits participation by black students. They said the district's refusal to concede the issue was a major reason for a walkout.

Teachers' strikes in six states affect 86,000 students

By GEORGE KAOUGH
Associated Press Writer

NATION

Teachers in North Chicago, Ill., rejected a 10 percent raise to join the more than 4,000 instructors in six states on strike today as picket signs replaced lesson plans and affected the start of school for 86,000 students.

Districts in Michigan, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Louisiana and Rhode Island also were hit by walkouts.

And in San Francisco, teachers and school officials were trying to settle salary grievances with 3,600 teachers who could disrupt the opening of classes next week for 62,600 students.

One strike was settled Wednesday night when 135 teachers at Thornton Community College in South Holland, Ill., approved a two-year contract. But the school's 10,000 students remained home today pending a ratification vote by the college board tonight.

About 175 teachers in North Chicago on Wednesday night declared a strike beginning today after rejecting a one-year contract offer that included a 10 percent raise. Seven other Illinois districts already were on strike.

Vernell Whitaker, president of the North Chicago Teachers Association, said the union wants a two-year contract containing a 10.5 percent pay increase each year.

Anticipating the walkout, school officials had already canceled today's opening of classes for 3,700 students.

More than 3,100 other teachers are on strike across Illinois in job actions that have affected nearly 57,000 students, including more than 29,000 in Rockford, the state's second-largest public school district.

In Rhode Island, the 56 teachers of the Exeter-West Greenwich Regional School District failed to show up for opening day of school Wednesday to protest the school committee's failure to appropriate funds for a 7 percent raise approved last year. The strike kept 960 students out of classes.

"We have a contract; we are not going to negotiate or mediate," said Ronald L. DiOrio, president of the National Education Association-Rhode Island, after a teachers meeting Wednesday.

The committee, facing a deficit of more than $300,000 for the coming year, recently voted to rescind the raise and instead pay the 1983 level. Voters twice have refused to fund the committee's budget requests.

State Education Commissioner J. Troy Earhart, who said he would seek a court order forcing the district to grant the raise, planned a hearing today on the funding issue, said Forrest Avila, an Education Department attorney.

About 5,700 students were staying home as five walkouts continued in Michigan. More than 260 other teachers have been on strike since Monday in four school districts, while 80 instructors have been off the job at Kellogg Community College in Battle Creek.

Meanwhile, negotiations were scheduled today in South Fayette Township School District outside Pittsburgh, where 72 teachers remained off the job in a salary dispute, extending summer vacation for 1,175 students.

"The money they're saying is in the budget just isn't there," school board President Leonard Fornella said of the union's wage demand.

Handicapped boy's Olympic torch missing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A bystander looking on while participants in the Olympic torch relay gathered for a picture session apparently made off with a torch belonging to a handicapped 12-year-old boy.

Jerry Ortega Jr. said he passed his treasured memento to a woman Wednesday so he could help another handicapped child down the steps of City Hall.

"When I went to help the boy, this woman said to me, 'Here, let me hold that for you,' but when I came back she was gone," said Jerry, who was too distraught to take part in the photo session, which included Mayor Tom Bradley.

Ortega's mother, Patricia Gomez, told Bradley the torch was missing, and the mayor turned to the crowd and asked whoever had it to bring it forward. No one did.

Part of the incident was videotaped by the boy's father, Jerry Sr.

The tape shows the boy handing the torch to a dark-haired young woman, who then gave it to a man wearing a suit and tie. The man appeared to look at the torch in surprise.

The tape was then interrupted because the elder Ortega, unaware of what was happening, turned off the camera until his son returned from helping the other youth.

Later, the tape showed young Jerry crying.

His mother said the family would hold off calling the police until the serial number of the torch could be obtained from the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee. Each participant in the cross-country torch relay kept his own torch after passing on the flame.

Jerry lost most of his left foot in a traffic accident nine years ago. His run through Griffith Park was sponsored by the Hollywood Boys Club, which paid the $3,000 fee.

His mother said that after the photo session, several runners "came up and told Jerry how sorry they were and that maybe the Olympic people could give him a new one if the old one wasn't returned."

Angels return to streets briefly

BOSTON (AP) — The Guardian Angels, who vow their patrols here will go on despite being taunted by neighborhood youths, returned to the streets briefly Wednesday night, but were escorted away in a police van, authorities said.

Youths in Boston's Mattapan section again jeered at six Angels, who walked along the sidewalk as a police car slowly cruised alongside, said Police Sgt. William O'Brien.

The Angels were taken into a police wagon and dropped at the nearest bus stop "for their own benefit," O'Brien said. "Then they went home."

"They weren't arrested," he added. "They came willingly."

A group of 10 Angels were greeted with boos and catcalls when they patrolled Mattapan on Tuesday night, defying the pleas of community leaders and city officials who asked them to stay out the area where members of the group and local youths clashed in two nights of violence last week.

"There were a lot of people mouthing off, yelling stuff, but it was much friendlier than I anticipated," Angels national director Lisa Sliwa said Wednesday. "I was definitely prepared for some bottles.

Mrs. Sliwa said she spoke with police Wednesday to arrange meetings with Mattapan teen-agers next week.

Before Tuesday's patrol, the Angels stalked out of a two-hour meeting at City Hall that was attended by Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn, police and about 30 local leaders.

Local leaders asked the self-appointed crime-watch group to stay out of the low- and middle-income, predominantly black neighborhood until tempers cooled, but the Angels refused, saying they were wanted and needed there.

Mrs. Sliwa at first said the meeting resolved little, but Wednesday, she said, "I feel we're definitely making progress. We are going to approach the situation in a peaceful manner.

"We are going to reduce size of patrol to six or eight members so it's not seen as a confrontation, so that no one feels intimidated, and so they understand we're just there to help."

She said she would lead a patrol of eight Angels through Mattapan Wednesday night.

From Staff and Wire Reports

Mild temperatures tonight will climb to highs in the mid-90s Friday and continue through the Labor Day weekend, said the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The forecast for tonight calls for isolated evening thunderstorms although the chance for rain is less than 20 percent. Temperatures will be in the upper 60s with winds from the southeast at 5 to 10 mph. Friday will be mostly sunny and very warm with southeasterly winds at less than 10 mph.

Forecasters predict the Labor Day weekend will be partly cloudy with lows in the mid-70s warming to highs in the mid-90s.

Wednesday's high of 98 was six degrees cooler than the record set in 1964. The morning low of 69 was eight degrees above the 1971 record of 61.

STATE

Showers and thunderstorms roared southward out of Oklahoma early today, bringing beneficial rainfall to areas of North Texas along the Red River.

The showers and thunderstorms, triggered by a low pressure trough aloft, weakened as they moved southward.

Wichita Falls received .33 of an inch of rain and wind gusts up to 43 mph as the activity moved southward. Brief heavy rain, high, gusty winds and some small hail fell at Iowa Park.

Heavy thunderstorms were also reported near Haskell and Mineral Wells. The National Weather Service warned of possible heavy rain, gusty winds and hail in that system.

The rest of the state had clear skies and continued warm temperatures.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 70s, ranging from the low 60s in the Davis Mountains of West Texas to the low 80s across North Central Texas and along the upper Texas coast. Extremes ranged from 62 at Marfa in Southwest Texas to 86 at Fort Worth.

Other readings around the state included 68 at Amarillo, 69 at Wichita Falls, 79 at Waco, 76 at Austin, 74 at Houston, Corpus Christi and Brownsville, 76 at San Antonio, 70 at Lubbock and 72 at El Paso.

Forecasts called for clear to partly cloudy skies and hot temperatures statewide. Some widely scattered thunderstorms were expected over North Texas and Southeast Texas. Highs today were to be mostly in the 90s, except along the coast where slightly cooler readings were expected and in North Central Texas and the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas where readings were expected to approach the 104-degree mark.

NATION

Powerful thunderstorms over northern Illinois and Lower Michigan today killed one woman, injured at least two people and damaged buildings while bringing some relief to a sizzling Midwest heat wave that toppled temperature records for a second consecutive day.

Golf-ball size hail struck Apple River, Ill., and large hail pelted parts of Lower Michigan during the storms.

In Michigan, a 30-year-old Otsego woman was killed when her car hit water on an Allegan County road and went out of control into a ditch, authorities said.

A 12-year-old Kalamazoo girl was critically hurt when a lightning bolt struck her through a bedroom window and a man camping in North Muskegon was slightly injured by a lightning strike, authorities said.

High winds lifted a Flint lumber company building off its foundation and blew it into the middle of a nearby street, police Officer Jim Hollinger said.

"We had several power outages," Hollinger said. "We've had windows blown out all over the city."

In Grand Rapids, the winds blew parts of the roofs off at least six apartment buildings, flipped an airplane at Grand Rapids International Airport and overturned a tractor-trailer rig at a warehouse, authorities said.

Power was out to 106,000 Consumers Power Co. customers during the storm. By mid-morning power had been restored about half the customers, said Paul Knopick, company spokesman.

Another 40,000 southeastern Michigan residents also lost power during the storm, said Detroit Edison Co. spokeswoman Lorie N. Kessler.

Thunderstorms also raked much of the intermountain region, Oklahoma and Arkansas and lingered along the Louisiana coast and the southern coast of Florida and over New York state.

Meanwhile, Montana authorities classified 18 fires ravaging that state as "major." So far, 160,000 acres of prairie and forest land have been burned since Saturday, 30 homes have been destroyed and 500 people evacuated.

At least two dozen communities in eight inland states saw record high temperatures shattered Wednesday — 16 of them above 100 degrees.

Montana wars with wind-fed fires

By HUGH VAN SWEARINGEN
Associated Press Writer

HELENA, Mont. — Windborne flames that have scorched 160,000 acres of forest and prairie leaped battle lines toward more homes, disappointing firefighters as air support and reinforcements from seven states joined the war against fire today.

Residents of the 15-home El Dorado Heights subdivision near Helena were told to evacuate Wednesday after winds shifted the 22,400-acre North Hill fire toward their neighborhood.

"We're not catching up with it now. If we get a break in the winds, we hope to," said Paul May, spokesman for the Department of State Lands.

Authorities classified 18 Montana fires as "major." Because of the number of state and federal agencies involved, there have been no firm figures on the total number of fires still burning. Most of them started last weekend or early this week, presumably by lightning.

The fires have destroyed more than 30 homes and routed more than 500 people.

The 5,000 firefighters on the lines Wednesday were supported by 42 air tankers and 21 helicopters spraying fire retardant chemicals, said Dick Guth, a Forest Service spokesman.

But efforts to control the 75,000-acre Hawk Creek fire that destroyed 30 houses in three hours in the Roundup area Monday were to no avail as gusts carried across fire lines.

Firefighters did make progress at containing a 13,000-acre blaze in north-central Montana and smaller fires elsewhere.

"It's been a disappointing day so far," said another spokesman, Don Kendall. "We didn't accomplish what we wanted today, but we're rapidly building our resources.

"We're in good shape as far as resources, and we have adequate manpower," he said. "Weather is still the deciding factor."

Kendall said one mobile home was destroyed Wednesday and that air tankers dropped retardant chemicals near ranch buildings threatened by the Hawk Creek fire.

May said the fire's perimeter covered an area roughly 30 miles long and eight miles wide. Winds shifted and pushed the fire south to within about eight miles of a housing subdivison near the town of Shepherd north of Billings.

Throwing a shovel of dirt on flames he's fighting in a Roundup, Mont., forest fire is 19-year-old Troy Heiken of Ladina, Mont. About 18 windborne fires dot the state.

But the good news, he said, was that the fire had moved out of the Bull Mountains onto the prairie. "It's easy to get tankers there," he said.

Authorities said the stubborn rampage of fires that began across Montana last week probably will burn out of control for days unless there is a break in the weather. Scattered thundershowers were forecast for the weekend.

Slack winds in extreme northeastern Montana allowed about 500 firefighters to hold the line against the 12,000-acre Houghton Creek fire 30 miles south of Libby.

About 200 people have been evacuated because of that fire since Monday. Officials said the blaze has destroyed at least five houses, including two summer cabins that burned Wednesday.

U.S. 2, a major route across northern Montana, remained closed between Libby and Kalispell, with the fire burning on both sides of the highway.

The Houghton Creek, Hawk Creek and North Hill fires, all considered threats to communities or ranch homes, were given disaster designations by President Reagan on Tuesday.

The Red Owl Creek Fire 20 miles southeast of Kalispell climbed over the top of the Swan Mountain Range on Wednesday. It covered about 1,400 acres but was burning away from the heavily populated Flathead Valley, and some people were allowed to return to their homes.

The Crystal Creek fire on the southern edge of Glacier National Park remained out of control, covering about 2,700 acres, officials said.

Crews managed to build a fire break around the 3,400-acre Napi Peak fire on the east side of Glacier Park, but Lee Skabelund, a U.S. Forest Service spokesman, said the fire was not designated as being contained. The fire has destroyed two homes on Lower St. Mary's Lake.

The 11,250-acre Pine Hills fire east of Miles City was contained Wednesday and authorities began releasing firefighters.

Also contained Wednesday was the 13,000-acre Centennial Mountain fire south of Havre near the Rocky Boys Indian Reservation, Bureau of Indian Affairs spokesman Bob Seinko said.

High heat continues on southern Plains

Associated Press

A late-summer heat wave kept its grip on the southern Plains today after driving schoolchildren from sweltering classrooms and prompting utilities to lend fans to needy Kansas families wilting under 110-degree temperatures.

At least two dozen communities in eight states saw record high temperatures shattered Wednesday — 16 of them above 100 degrees.

Five records fell in Kansas alone, where the Kansas Power & Light Co. was loaning fans to low-income elderly people and families with small children. Officials in Topeka, where the mercury hit 110 degrees, planned to open three centers around the clock for people seeking air-conditioned relief.

Records were broken in the Kansas communities of Dodge City, Topeka, Wichita and Lawrence.

According to the National Weather Service, high temperature records were also set in Missouri, Iowa, Arkansas, Illinois, Oklahoma, Michigan and Texas. More records were expected to be broken today.

The upper Midwest and northern Plains were getting some relief today as a cool front moved in from Canada, kicking up thunderstorms with high winds and hail in Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan, Arkansas and Oklahoma.

School officials in Wichita shortened the school day by an hour on both ends, and school days were cut short elsewhere in the state because of a lack of air conditioning.

While 5,000 firefighters battled 18 major blazes in Montana, hot, dry conditions around Kansas City, Mo., made it easier for grass fires to erupt. Firefighters fought more than two dozen such fires Wednesday, with several of them treated for heat-related illnesses.

"When it's 104 degrees, there's nothing much you can do to them except turn a hose on them and cool them down that way," said fire department spokesman Harold Knabe.

Water was not as plentiful in Corpus Christi, Texas, where mandatory water rationing has been in effect since Aug. 25 because of a lack of rain dating to last September. Residents of San Antonio have been voluntarily conserving water since June 25.

It only took the central Missouri city of Columbia until noon Wednesday to reach a record high of 102 degrees. By 3 p.m. it was 110.

School officials in southern Illinois ordered that schools in Highland, Triad and Trenton, east of St. Louis, Mo., be closed shortly after noon because of temperatures expected to top out at 100 to 105 degrees.

The band of hot air extended as far north Wednesday as North Dakota, where Fargo had its second consecutive 100-degree day, and as far west as Texas, where Wichita Falls broke its 1956 record for Aug. 29 of 105 degrees with a reading of 106.

On Wednesday, Palm Springs was the nation's hottest spot at 114 degrees.

In North Platte, Neb., Tuesday's 100-degree reading was the highest recorded on Aug. 28 in 105 years. When the mercury hit the century mark in Des Moines, Iowa, it shattered a record set in 1881.

British military hero put out to pasture

Associated Press

LONDON — Sefton, the celebrated royal guardsman's horse who survived an IRA bombing at Hyde Park two years ago, munched lumps of sugar and posed for photographers as he was serenaded out to pasture by his cavalry regiment's band.

The musicians of the Blues and Royals played "Auld Lang Syne" as Sefton posed for photographs and contentedly munched sugar during the salute at the regiment's Hyde Park barracks.

At noon, the band struck up the quick march "The Black Beauty," and Sefton was walked into the trailer that took him to a pasture in rural Speen, Buckinghamshire, northwest of London.

Sefton underwent a series of operations on 30 shrapnel wounds suffered July 20, 1980, when a bomb tore through the Blues and Royals unit as it rode along the edge of Hyde Park to the Changing of the Guard ceremony at Buckingham Palace. Four members of the queen's Household Cavalry regiment and seven of their mounts were killed in the bombing.

Sefton's rider, trooper Michael Pederson, 23, spent three months recovering from his own shrapnel wounds. But he was on hand Wednesday for Sefton's retirement from service.

The horse became the darling of British schoolchildren, who sent thousands of get well cards, sugar lumps and other gifts to help speed his recovery. The last of his operations was completed just three weeks ago.

A veteran of 15 years with the army, 21-year-old Sefton was excused from guard duties during his convalescence, but was given a place of honor at the Trooping the Color — Queen Elizabeth II's birthday parade — in June.

"This is a very sad day for me," said Pederson. "I think he will be very happy at Speen. He thoroughly deserves his retirement. He is in good health and like me just has a few scars. I shall go to see him from time to time."

'Plastic' surgery keeps goose honking happily

Associated Press

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa — When Angela Everett's pet goose tangled with a dog Sunday, she wondered if her goose would end up, well, cooked. But a veterinarian's "plastic" surgery has Housa honking happily again.

The feisty, 4-month-old gosling provoked a row with an unwitting neighbor pooch that tore half the upper beak from Housa, leaving the goose unable to eat or drink.

"Most anybody else would say, 'Let's have it for dinner,'" said Ms. Everett, of Ely.

But Dr. Dean Frey grafted a replacement beak of epoxy plastic onto the remainder of Housa's beak, using a procedure he had read about in a veterinary journal.

"I had skim-read it at the time, not knowing I was going to need it," Frey said.

As it turned out, Frey, who has tended to small and exotic animals in the Cedar Rapids area for 22 years, needed only a few scraps to do the work.

"The resin I had was from boat-floor repair," he said. "The plaster of Paris was left over from something else I had a couple of years ago."

Ms. Everett had retrieved the broken-off portion of the beak and decided to put it in the freezer. She then called Frey, and he used the beak portion to make a mold for the replacement. Three wires and two stainless-steel pins hold the green, plastic snout on Housa's face.

Luckily, the break was below the nostrils, so Frey didn't need to carve air holes into the hard plastic.

Ms. Everett got the fluffy, white goose after one of her turkeys died and she wanted a playmate for the surviving fowl. Ms. Everett's menagerie also includes three dogs, three cats and two salamanders.

Frey is charging only $75 for the 90-minute operation, Ms. Everett said, because of the novelty of the job.

The beak operation wasn't Housa's first veterinary emergency. Earlier, she required treatment after a cow stepped on one of her dainty, webbed feet.

"She's going to have to start laying golden eggs" to pay her medical bills, Ms. Everett joked.

Frey is worried that Housa may get into another scuffle and injure the replacement beak, so he wants Ms. Everett to keep the frozen original for future casting.

Housa returned home Tuesday afternoon, and for now she is just content to once again munch on her beloved garlic bread.

SHUTTLE

"There's been a history of teething problems in getting orbiters off on the first launch," Kennedy Space Center spokesman Richard Young said. "We've come to anticipate this sort of thing."

The inaugural flight of the first shuttle, Columbia, was delayed two days by computer software problems, while the second ship, Challenger, had engine troubles that pushed its debut back two months.

Besides the delays, NASA's reputation also as been tarnished by the failures of three satellites to reach proper orbits after being launched from shuttles. A few commercial customers have shifted their business to the European Space Agency's Ariane rocket.

The satellites are owned by American Telephone and Telegraph Co., Satellite Business Systems and Hughes Communications Services, which are paying NASA between $10 million and $17 million each to deliver the payloads to orbit.

These will be the first commercial satellites launched from the shuttle since February, when two communications payloads fired into the wrong orbits because their booster rocket nozzles failed. The AT&T and SBS satellites have the same type of rocket system, and, although engineers are confident they have fixed the nozzle problem, officials will be holding their breath until after the rocket firings.

The SBS satellite was to be spun overboard late today.

The heavy cargo results from NASA's decision after the dual postponement in June to combine the best features of Discovery's first two missions into a single flight, adding two satellites to the manifest. Officials said that would save time and maintain the shuttle launch rate.

'Crash of bomber will have little or no impact on aircraft's future'

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The first crash of a B-1 bomber, which killed the manufacturer's chief test pilot and injured two crewmen, will have little or no impact on the future of the controversial aircraft, proponents and critics say.

Air Force investigators converging on this desert base to study Wednesday's fiery crash of the $200 million prototype said it could be months before they determine the cause and why there were casualties when the three-man crew escaped in a parachute-equipped capsule.

The B-1A, one of four prototypes, crashed on sagebrush- and greasewood-dotted federal land about 10 miles northeast of the Mojave Desert base and 75 miles northeast of Los Angeles while on a low-speed, low-altitude test flight.

It came just six days before Rockwell International Corp., the prime contractor for the B-1, was to unveil the first production model of the B-1B, which is to be the bulwark of America's nuclear bomber force.

In Washington, Air Force Lt. Col. Ron Greer said the four-engine plane was engaged in "extremely low-level, extremely low-speed" tests on its 127th test flight.

Development of the B-1 began in 1970, and its history has been characterized by sharp debate.

The Defense Department has argued that the nation needs an advanced, multipurpose bomber with low-flying capabilities to penetrate enemy defenses. Critics say the B-1 is expensive, lacks maneuverability and that its job can be handled by existing B-52s.

After rejection by the Carter administration in late 1977, the B-1 project won a new lease on life from President Reagan. The House and Senate approved Reagan's request for $8.3 billion for 34 B-1 planes in fiscal 1985. Eventually, the Pentagon intends to buy 100 B-1s at a cost now projected at about $28.3 billion.

"Any tragedy like this is bad news," said Wolfgang Demisch, an aerospace analyst at First Boston Corp. "But in terms of the specific B-1 program, I don't expect it to have any impact."

"It shouldn't be a setback," said Rep. Robert Badham, R-Calif., a longtime B-1 supporter. "It's one of those unfortunate things that happen in a test program."

His comments were echoed by some of the plane's detractors, including Rep. Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y., and Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga.

Nunn told CBS he did not think the crash "has any implications in terms of stopping the B-1B program. I think it may at most slow it down. Any aircraft can crash."

The crash scattered wreckage in a circle roughly 200 feet in diameter, said Associated Press photographer Doug Pizac, and sparked at least three small brush fires that were quickly extinguished. A guard at a nearby U.S. Borax plant who wouldn't give her name said she saw the plane trailing smoke shortly before it went down at 10:30 a.m.

"The crew escape capsule successfully separated and landed near the crash site," the Air Force said.

The dead pilot was identified as T.D. "Doug" Benefield, 55, of Marshall, Texas.

Benefield, the chief test pilot for Rockwell's B-1 program, was a veteran of Air Force F-4C Phantom combat missions in Vietnam and the man who made all the early B-1 test flights. He began as a Rockwell test pilot in 1984.

The retired Air Force colonel "tested the Concorde for France. He had an extremely impressive background and was a test pilot for many, many years," said his sister-in-law, Suzanne, of Jefferson, Texas.

The injured were Maj. Richard V. Reynolds, 35, an Air Force pilot from Hoquiam, Wash., and Capt. Otto J. Waniczek Jr., 30, a flight engineer from Seattle. Both in stable condition at Antelope Valley Hospital in nearby Palmdale.

A formal Aircraft Accident Investigation Board will be named within a few days to probe the crash, Air Force Col. Alan Sabsevitz said Wednesday as investigators began arriving to examine the wreckage and flight tapes.

"It's going to be quite a while.... It can be a matter of months," before the cause is determined, Sabsevitz said.

The B-1B is to replace aging B-52s and eventually carry up to 14 air-launched cruise missiles with nuclear warheads as well as conventional and nuclear bombs.

B-1 pilot one of the best

JEFFERSON, Texas (AP) — A relative of the pilot who died in the fiery crash of a B-1 bomber said he was "one of the top test pilots in the entire world."

T.D. "Doug" Benefield, 55, of Jefferson, was killed Wednesday when an unarmed B-1 bomber prototype he was piloting crashed and burned on a low-altitude test flight over the Mojave Desert, the Air Force said.

Two other crew members were injured in the crash, officials said.

He was "one of the top test pilots in the entire world," said Benefield's sister-in-law, Suzanne, late Wednesday.

Benefield was the chief test pilot for Rockwell International's B-1 program. Wednesday's crash was the first involving a B-1 bomber, said Air Force Col. Alan Sabsevsitz.

Benefield, a retired Air Force colonel, graduated from Jefferson High School and Texas A&M University, Mrs. Benefield said. He had moved from Texas to Lancaster, Calif.

He was the son of Thelma Benefield and the late Allen Benefield of Jefferson. Other survivors include Benefield's wife, Suzanne, of Lancaster, Calif.; sons, Terry of San Diego and Tommie Jr., a U.S. Navy pilot stationed in Jacksonville, Fla.

In a statement Wednesday night, the Air Force said: "The crew escape capsule successfully separated and landed near the crash site. Two survivors were air-evacuated to the Edwards Air Force base hospital for treatment."

It wasn't immediately clear how Benefield died. His body would remain in the capsule until the coroner could take charge of the scene, said Senior Airman Tom Bennas.

The $200 million plane was seen trailing smoke before it went down at 10:30 a.m. near Boron, 75 miles northeast of Los Angeles, a guard at the nearby U. S. Borax plant said. She wouldn't give her name.

The injured were identified as Air Force Maj. Richard V. Reynolds, 35, of Hoquiam, Wash., the pilot, and Capt. Otto J. Waniczek Jr., 30, of Seattle, the flight engineer. Both were listed in stable condition at the Antelope Valley Medical Center, in Lancaster.

The charred and mangled wreckage was scattered in a circle roughly 200 feet in diameter, and was still burning six hours after the crash, according to Associated Press photographer Doug Pizac. A scorched white cylinder that appeared to be the escape capsule lay at the outer edge of the wreckage, an orange and white parachute draped nearby, he said.

The crash, which ignited at least three small fires that were extinguished quickly, came less than a week before a B-1B prototype was to be unveiled. The plane that crashed Wednesday was an earlier B-1A prototype, Pentagon officials said.

The four-engine plane was engaged in "extremely low-level, extremely low-speed" tests on its 127th test flight, a 3-hour, 45-minute mission, said Air Force Lt. Col. Ron Greer in Washington.

"There were absolutely no warheads on the ship," Bennas said.

A board of officers will investigate the accident, the Air Force said.

Armed and willing

Results of a recent poll of 1,243 people from across the United States revealed a number of startling facts that give insight into the America of the 1980s.

Among the revelations are these:

— Forty-four percent of those polled said they keep a gun at home to protect themselves from crime.

— Ten percent said they carry a gun or some other weapon with them.

— Thirteen percent said they have installed burglar alarms in their homes.

— Fourteen percent said they are afraid to go out in their own neighborhoods after dark.

— More than one-fourth of the respondents — 28 percent — said either they or someone in their families have had something of significant value stolen in the past five years.

— Fifty-four percent said they oppose making the sale of handguns illegal while 37 percent said it should be illegal to buy handguns.

— Eighty-five percent said registration of handguns should be required.

What those statistics tell us is that across the country people consider themselves significant risks for being victims of crime, but that they are not merely going to lie down and let criminals have their way. Americans are willing to fight for their lives and their property.

But they don't consider vigilante justice the way to go in countering crime. Why else would they insist on registering handguns? Obviously they consider the registration of handguns an important crime-fighting tool and are willing to give police authorities that advantage even though it would mean an obvious strike against them if there was ever a move to ban possession of firearms.

On the other hand, though, Americans are obviously not going to sit idly by with no means of self-defense. The 44 percent of Americans who say they keep a gun at home attests to that fact.

The poll results give a good profile of America in the 1980s — an America worried about crime and obviously concerned about the capabilities of government to protect them. They also give a glimpse of the American determination for self-protection.

The justice system and legislative bodies should take notice of these statistics. They give a revealing look at life in America.

Burden in Manila

A vivid figure in the Arabian Nights is the Old Man of the Sea, whom Sinbad meets and offers, out of kindness, to carry. Once aloft, the Old Man locks his legs and refuses to let go. So it is with President Marcos of the Philippines, a now ruinous burden to the 52 million people compelled to bear him. With the Old Man's effrontery, Marcos counts on American aid to rescue him from a mess of his own making.

Nothing has prospered for the House of Marcos since the murder a year ago of the opposition leader, Benigno Aquino. Having promised a thorough and impartial inquiry, the Marcos regime has failed to deliver. Its obstruction is typified by the refusal to permit the testimony of a Japanese journalist who witnessed the killing. He was barred from the country as an "undesirable alien."

Marcos has similarly failed to keep his promises to his democratic opponents. When they won nearly a third of the seats in May's parliamentary vote, he nullified a hopeful evolution by refusing to surrender the power to rule by decree. He broke another promise by reappointing his wife, Imelda, to the Cabinet and implying a dynastic succession by reconfirming her governor of Greater Manila.

What once persuaded many Filipinos to support or to tolerate this high-handed regime were the economic benefits it brought, especially to the middle classes. But now the country is broke, a fourth of its work force is jobless. There is no end in sight for the steepest economic decline since the Japanese invasion of 1941. Unable to meet payments on $25 billion in foreign debts, the government is pleading for a $650 million standby loan from the International Monetary Fund.

The roots of the crisis are political. Desperate to restore his popularity, Marcos has resisted the fund's austerity conditions, and even misled its officials by overstating his foreign reserves.

Cautiously, but too slowly, the Reagan administration has tried to distance itself from Marcos and to befriend his democratic challengers. In that spirit, it ought to insist on compliance with the IMF's conditions for aid, thereby affirming that Marcos's power to rule by decree does not reach to Washington.

The hard-headed London Economist puts the matter succinctly: "President Marcos cannot afford to lose American support. The Americans should take a deep breath and recognize that they most certainly can afford to lose President Marcos."

America's bases at Clark Field and Subic Bay are indeed important. But Marcos's assurances about their future are only as secure as his own and may be worth no more than his promises to expose Benigno Aquino's killer and to restore democracy.

'Perfect crime' in Big D!

Sherlock Holmes tapped down the tobacco in his pipe and prepared to light it with a match. He was studying press clippings from Dallas.

Dr. Watson, who was playing "Trivial Pursuit" by himself, said, "Holmes, something seems to be bothering you."

Art Buchwald

Holmes replied, "You watched the Republican National Convention last week, didn't you, Watson?"

"I certainly did. Ripsnorting good show it was too. There was not a dull moment, as far as I was concerned."

"Quite, Watson. But wasn't there something missing?"

"Missing? I can't think of what it could be. If anything, it had too much of everything."

"Too much of everything, and yet an important ingredient was lacking. Wait a minute, Watson, I think I may have it. Would you hand me that book on the shelf, 'History of the Past Republican Conventions Since 1956.'"

Holmes excitedly went through the pages. "That's it. It was right in front of our noses and we didn't see it."

"What did we miss, Holmes?"

"For the first time in modern history the Republicans did not attack the media. Not one speaker raged at the networks or Eastern establishment press. Everyone passed up a surefire opportunity to get a standing ovation by refusing to complain that the reporters were not giving their side a fair shake."

"By Jove, you're right, Holmes," said Dr. Watson. "It was a love feast. Usually the Republicans shake their fists at the convention network booths, and beat up on the Washington Post and New York Times. What do you suppose turned them around?"

Holmes lit his pipe. "It's elementary, my dear Watson. Rather than attack the media this time, the Republicans decided to manipulate them. Whatever they wanted the GOP gave it to them. They served up everybody for interviews from Jerry Falwell to Joan Rivers.

"All animosity toward network anchormen was absent. Vice President Bush called Rather 'Dan,' Nancy Reagan called Donaldson 'Sam,' Barry Goldwater called Brokaw 'Tom,' Jesse Helms called Brinkley 'David,' and Phyllis Schlafly called Lesley Stahl 'Honey.'

"Every Republican star was on a first-name basis with the interviewer. By playing the good guys, the Republicans wound up co-opting anyone who wore a press badge in Dallas."

"Amazing, Holmes. How did they get away with it?"

"There was no story in Dallas, my dear Watson. The networks were desperate to fill two hours of time every night, and the Republicans were more than happy to oblige them with such diverse right-wingers as Bunker Hunt and Jack Kemp. In the past the far right refused to talk to the press. This time they not only sought them out, but invited them to their $1,000-a-plate parties."

"Why the change of attitude, Holmes?"

"It was quite simple, Watson. While the media and the GOP Convention had no choice but to suck their thumbs, the pack of journalists who passed up Dallas were going after Geraldine Ferraro and John Zaccaro. The Republicans didn't want to antagonize the press while they were so intent on nailing a Democratic vice-presidential coonskin hat to the wall. The GOP wrote the script in Dallas last week but the real drama was being played in Queens, N.Y."

"So that's why the Republicans passed up an opportunity to make the media the scapegoats of their convention. What clue tipped you off to their strategy?"

"I became suspicious when all the media dogs were barking every time you saw Ferraro and Zaccaro on the TV screen. But not one of them barked in Dallas."

"Why didn't they bark in Dallas?"

"Between the heat, the tequila and the speeches, they all went to sleep, and gave the Republicans an opportunity to commit the perfect crime."

Grace: Frugality can save taxes

WASHINGTON — Like a great vacuum machine, the federal government sucks up money at the rate of $4.7 million a minute. Every disappearing dollar is painfully extracted from the taxpayers, who don't begrudge money for the nation's needs but hate to see it wasted. Yet appalling sums are squandered, with reckless abandon.

Jack Anderson

The government's voracious appetite for greenbacks has stirred alarm across the country. Economists warn that federal extravagance is draining raw materials and skilled labor from the economy, that the astronomical deficits are driving up interest rates, that our political leaders must drastically change their wasteful ways.

Massive waste has been uncovered by Peter Grace, a tough, outspoken financial curmudgeon, with a take-charge manner. He heads a presidential commission that has been investigating the government's wasteful practices and procedures.

Behind his grizzled exterior and gruff amiability is perhaps the canniest financial talent ever turned loose in the government's counting rooms. He has used his analytical powers to penetrate the collusions between free-spending bureaucrats and budget-breaking congressmen.

He has found enough possible savings to eliminate the deficit and balance the budget. He has found 3-cent screws that were palmed off on the government for $91, $15 hammers purchased by the Pentagon for $400, $235 million worth of firewood that was given away.

With our money, the government has subsidized the rich and pandered to the poor. Refrigerators have been given to Eskimos; tubes of toothpaste have been shipped to foreigners with no toothbrushes. Millions have been appropriated to persuade people to stop smoking and, at the same time, millions have been used to promote tobacco sales.

Uncle Sam also purchases with his right hand what he already holds in his left. The procurement people have a cavalier attitude toward government funds. Enough is never sufficient; they must always have more.

Browsing among the billions, Grace has discovered that fraud and abuse are costing the government over $25 billion a year because of weaknesses in financial controls. He has also found $38 billion in overdue bills that are owed to the government. Yet the federal bookkeepers are indifferent to collecting the overdue money; it's less bother just to raise taxes.

Grace's exposures have caused members of Congress to become jittery over the spending excesses. But they're holding in abeyance their next move, lest the goose be killed with many a golden egg yet to lay.

They would prefer to postpone any political inconvience until their re-election is safely past.

Meanwhile, the bureaucrats have built a cordon sanitaire around their spending programs. It will take an outcry to overcome the congressional flummery and the bureaucratic resistance.

You are invited to join in the outcry. Grace and I have formed a non-profit, non-partisan organization to oppose government misspending. It's called Citizens Against Waste, and we need the support of all concerned Americans.

Please sign the following taxpayers' declaration and mail it to Citizens Against Waste, P.O. Box 1000, Ben Franklin Station, Washington, D.C. 20044:

"As the true owners of the U.S. government, we protest the appalling waste of our money by those we entrust to spend it. We demand action, not discussion, to stop the excessive and unnecessary squandering of government funds for foolish projects, wasteful programs and inefficient operations. We want corrective measures taken against those in Congress and the federal bureaucracy who irresponsibly authorize and misspend our tax dollars."

We will deliver this petition to the next president and the new congressional leaders in January.

HANSEN'S RED HERRING: Arguing against a House reprimand for violations of the financial disclosure law that earned him a felony conviction, Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, warned his colleagues:

"There are 253 — we have done a little research — who have enough aberrations in their forms that the happy bag man at the Justice Department might end up bringing you to the grand jury."

A check revealed that Hansen was referring to members who had amended their annual disclosure forms, usually soon after filing the originals, during the years 1978-1983. The amendments seem unlikely to interest a grand jury. Here are some of the changes Hansen's colleagues have made this year:

— Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich. After consulting the House clerk's office, he included a 25 percent interest in Detroit property, worth an estimated $5,000 to $15,000 if it is eventually sold.

— Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, added a capital gain valued at $50,000 to $100,000.

— Reps. Ron Paul, R-Texas, and Beryl Anthony, D-Ark.: spouses' income from salary or stock sales.

— Rep. Carroll Campbell, R-S.C.: his son's earnings of $1,000 as a summer intern at the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

— Rep. Wyche Fowler, D-Ga.: receipt of seven free Atlanta Falcons football tickets, worth $98.

— Reps. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, and Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., forgot to sign their original forms.

— Ethics Committee Chairman Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, changed the category of a wooden chair worth $150, a gift from Case Western Reserve's school of medicine.

— Rep. Phil Crane, R-Ill., changed earnings from his Indiana farm from "earned income" to "return on investment."

— Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., added a real estate debt of $15,000 to $50,000, and upgraded the value of an energy holding from under $1,000 to between $15,000 and $50,000.

— Rep. Ralph Hall, D-Texas, gave details of four bank stock transactions originally listed only as "sale of stock."

— Reps. Geraldine Ferraro, D-N.Y.; Mickey Edwards, R-Okla.; Douglas Bereuter, R-Neb.; Barbara Boxer, D-Calif.; Ralph Regula, R-Ohio; and Mickey Leland, D-Texas, refiled their forms to reflect the dates on which they received honoraria.

ANTHONY HARRIGAN

Vice presidency merits attention

In this election year, the vice presidential candidates are receiving more than ordinary attention. This is properly the case. If the vice presidency wasn't highly regarded in the past, this certainly isn't the correct attitude for our times. The presidency has become so burdensome that the nation's chief executive needs to make effective use of the individual elected to the second highest constitutional office.

Anthony Harrigan

The choice of a vice president is a major decision for the American people. President Theodore Roosevelt came to the White House after serving as Vice President in the McKinley administration. Theodore Roosevelt turned out to be one of the truly great American Presidents.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt made a decision of fateful importance when he chose Harry Truman to replace Henry Wallace as his vice presidential running mate in 1944. As president, Truman took many courageous stands, including the decision to use the atom bomb to end World War II. He authorized development of the hydrogen bomb in the face of furious opposition from pacifists and leftists, enabling the U.S. to gain that mighty defensive power a few months before the Soviets tested their H-bomb. He ordered the defense of the free nations of Western Europe. History would have taken a tragically different turn if Henry Wallace, a dupe of the Left, had been vice president at the time of FDR's death.

Since Truman, presidents have been making much more extensive use of their vice presidents. The responsibilities of the vice president will increase in the years ahead. Therefore, it is all the more important that vice presidents be well prepared for their expanding duties.

Vice President George Bush's preparation for his office certainly commands notice. He was a Navy flier in World War II, a successful businessman, ambassador to the United Nations and the Peoples Republic of China, and director of the Central Intelligence Agency. This is a record of preparation that can be cited in a factual way without any suggestion of partisan political feeling.

The vice presidency is very important because it provides the vital element of continuity in our governmental system. Our system has a built-in constitutional, tested system for continuity of leadership when a president dies in office or is incapacitated. The lack of such a system is one of the great flaws and weaknesses in the Soviet system. A handful of men in the Soviet Politburo made the decisions as to continuity, and the changeover leaves the Soviet bureaucracy and people uncertain as to national leadership.

Given these facts, it is appropriate that the election this year should focus to a considerable degree on the role of the vice presidency and the qualifications of the candidates. When voters make their choices in November, they will be making enormously significant decisions as to continuity in national leadership in the event of a crisis.

Chernenko's six-week absence from view puzzles U.S. analysts

An Analysis

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko's six-week disappearance from public view is puzzling the State Department, where some analysts theorize he could be forced out if he is too sick to govern.

Chernenko's disappearance coincides with a deepening slump in U.S.-Soviet relations. Prospects for arms control talks in Vienna in mid-September are not considered bright.

There are no other major negotiations between the superpowers.

And yet, said one official, who declined to be identified, "routine decisions are being handled. There isn't in any sense a complete vacuum."

Another doubted Chernenko would be permitted to remain in office very long if he is seriously ill. "I would expect they'd have to do something about it, push him to resign on account of health," the official said.

Chernenko was last seen in public in early July. Since then, some announcements have carried his name, but except for a letter to Irish Nobel laureate Sean McBride, he has not issued any personal statements.

Theoretically, at least, the Soviet president is on vacation. He has not missed any major scheduled engagements, such as with a visiting chief of state.

When Chernenko's predecessor, Yuri V. Andropov, was ill, his absence frequently was explained as due to a cold. Such has not been the case with Chernenko, who at 72 is known to have health problems, probably including emphysema.

Officials here said that might mean the Soviet leader's authority has slipped.

Even before the latest rumors, American analysts said the Soviet leadership was having trouble reaching decisions. Chernenko's selection last February was said to be a stop-gap measure — elevating an aging Politburo member to the top while younger potential leaders fight it out.

The result, these analysts suggested, was a period of indecision that was traced to the last years of Leonid Brezhnev's rule, through the 15-month presidency of Andropov and extending to Chernenko's six months.

"One of the difficulties we've had with them in recent months and recent years is uncertainty and a crisis in succession," an official said Tuesday.

It results in predictable behavior, he said, and amounts to a mixed blessing.

While relations with the United States have not improved, the Soviets also "don't take risks and they're not off invading other countries."

But a second official, who also declined to be identified, said if Chernenko is not "hitting on all cylinders" but stays on as president "it's going to be difficult to conduct diplomacy on a normal basis" because the Soviet state will be unable to reach a decision.

"At some point this would have to be recognized by the Central Committee (of the Communist party)," he said.

Meanwhile, there are fears in West Germany that Chernenko is seriously ill and his absence could stall Soviet approval of East German President Erich Honecker's planned visit to Bonn late next month, a West German government source said Wednesday.

The source, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said Bonn has information that Chenenko is "practically out of action."

The structure of political power in the Soviet Union

The party

Politburo
The most powerful party institution, the Political Bureau of the Central Committee, or Politburo, meets at least once a week. Membership is not set, but since 1981 the number of voting members has declined from 14 to 11. The Politburo predetermines appointments or removals, which are typically approved by the Central Committee.

Secretariat
The nine members plus its general secretary have overall control of the 20 Central Committee departments. Secretaries have considerable powers in appointments and policy execution.

Central Committee
The committee, its membership predetermined by the party leadership, has about 320 full members, maintains 20 departments and meets twice a year. Between full party congresses, held every five years, the Central Committee is responsible for directing the work of the central government and the party, which in reality, is done by the Politburo.

The government

Presidium
An "inner cabinet" for the Council of Ministers, the Presidium meets frequently. The chairman of the Presidium is the head of state, in effect, the president.

Council of Ministers
The council, according to Soviet law, is supposed to be the highest executive and administrative body of the state and is responsible to the Supreme Soviet, which appoints it. The 100 members are in charge of government ministries and meet quarterly.

The Supreme Soviet
The Soviet parliament has two chambers and about 1,500 deputies. One chamber is concerned with overall national matters and the other with nationalities, of which the Soviet Union has more than 100, and regional issues. Members are elected every five years and meet twice a year to ratify decisions from the party leadership.

Walesa says Poland faces 'threat of conflict' without democracy

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa, declaring the outlawed Solidarity trade union is alive despite government attempts to suppress it, warned that Poland's Communist authorities face the "threat of conflict" as long as they ignore the people's desire for democracy.

Walesa accused Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's government on Wednesday of abandoning agreements made with striking workers in August 1980 that made Solidarity the first free trade union in the Soviet bloc.

"It is inadmissable to try to govern without taking into consideration our will to gain self-determination and democracy," Walesa said in a statement. "Further ignoring of the will of the nation bears a threat of conflict, the tragic outcome of which we are not able to imagine."

The 950-word statement was prepared for delivery in the Baltic port of Gdansk on Friday to mark the fourth anniversary of the signing of the accords, but it was unclear whether authorities would allow Walesa to speak. The statement was read by an aide over the telephone to Western correspondents in Warsaw.

The statement was more critical of the government than other recent comments by Walesa, in which he has called for moderation by the political opposition following an amnesty that freed 630 political advisors and thousands of common prisoners. Several of those released were former Solidarity leaders and Walesa rivals.

"I have always been an advocate of compromise," said Walesa, winner of the 1983 Nobel Peace Prize. He said he was speaking "not with bitterness, but concern.

"After 16 months of legal operation and 32 months of hard fight without legal structures, Solidarity is alive," Walesa declared. "Independent trade unions are needed for us, the working people, but they are also needed for Poland."

The government imposed martial law on Dec. 13, 1981, and banned Solidarity the following October.

Walesa charged that authorities had honored the 1980 agreements only in "articles and speeches" published in the state-run news media.

"What about union pluralism? What about freedom of speech, publications? What about lifting repression for conscience?" Walesa said, reciting some of the worker demands covered in the accords.

"Where are the prisons without political prisoners? What about the just wage adjustments and prices? Where is the selection of managerial personnel on the principle of qualifications, not party membership? Where is the reduction of the time for waiting for an apartment?"

Government newspapers have published a series of articles in recent days arguing that authorities have honored the agreements.

"The party considers the August strikes as the expression of justified opposition to discrepancies and distortions in building socialism," the official Communist Party daily Trybuna Ludu said Wednesday.

The article reiterated the government stand that the union leadership steered Solidarity on a radical course for political motivations, forcing the government to suppress it.

Walesa did not join a call issued by the Solidarity underground leadership for Poles to demonstrate their support for the union on Friday. Walesa praised the amnesty as a "step in the right direction" by authorities.

Boy talks his way from Honolulu to Sydney

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — David Smith apparently managed to talk his way onto a plane in Honolulu without ticket or passport to fulfill a desire to see a beach in Australia.

But when his feat became known, bureaucracy took over — and now the 14-year-old American is grounded here.

U.S. and Australian officials are trying to decide who is responsible for him.

The boy arrived here Sunday aboard a Qantas Airlines plane without a ticket or any papers, immigration officials said.

Quantas spokesman Ken Boys said Smith has given different versions of how he got onto the Boeing 747 in Honolulu, ranging from telling an official he had left a coat on the plane to picking a lock.

Wearing only cutoff shorts, a T-shirt and thongs and with nothing in his pockets, he got past Australian security checkpoints and out of Sydney airport by telling officials he was waiting to meet his mother and had wandered into the arrival area by mistake, they said.

Smith then headed for Sydney's Bondi Beach, a well-known surfers' paradise, and did some sightseeing before returning to the airport to try and sneak onto a plane for Greece, officials said. But he didn't have money to pay a taxi he had hailed and the driver turned him over to airport police.

Kerry-Anne Walsh, a spokeswoman for the immigration department, told The Associated Press today that Smith had given conflicting accounts of where he was from, but officials were sure he was American from his accent.

"On one occasion, he's a Canadian, on another he's an American, one minute he's from the East Coast, the next from the West Coast," another Australian immigration official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said.

There is evidence that Smith is from a child welfare center in either Hawaii or California, but it has not been determined whether he is an orphan, Ms. Walsh said.

She said an initial inquiry indicated Smith may have been placed in a Honolulu welfare center after he arrived as a stowaway on a plane from California two years ago.

Relatives of jet's victims gather for memorial

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — About 300 foreigners who lost relatives when Soviet fighter planes shot down a Korean Air Lines jetliner a year ago are coming to South Korea for the dedication of a monument to the dead, sponsors said today.

All 269 people aboard KAL Flight 007 were killed. The dedication and a memorial service are scheduled for Saturday, the first anniversary of the incident.

The jetliner was flying from New York to the Korean capital Seoul when it was attacked near the Soviet Union's Sakhalin Island. The Soviets have claimed the flight was on an espionage mission, but South Korean and U.S. officials have denied the charge.

Investigators have said the aircraft apparently strayed off course.

Soviet chief cites continuing corruption

MOSCOW (AP) — The former KGB chief who was appointed two years ago to crack down on corruption says more policemen have been assigned to deal with continuing swindling in the Soviet economy.

The late Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov, who promised to deal sternly with corruption in the Communist system, appointed Vitaly V. Fedorchuk as Interior Minister in December 1982. The post is among the Soviet Union's top law enforcement jobs.

Andropov, who took power in 1982, died last February.

In an interview with the weekly Literary Gazette on Wednesday, Fedorchuk cited corruption in agriculture, transportation and the food industry, and blamed alcoholism or drunkenness for most crime and a third of all traffic accidents.

Fedorchuk's said his Interior Ministry, which rules a vast network of uniformed police and more than 13 million volunteers known as "druzhinniki," was working as promised last year to halt corruption and solve more crimes.

The number of officers investigating theft of state property has been increased 25 percent so they get out on the streets and track down criminals and "don't spend all their time in police offices," he said.

The minister and his interviewers reiterated that police are cracking down on black marketeering on streets, at private farmers' markets and in trade organizations.

One interviewer disclosed that about 100 people were recently sentenced in Kiev for swindling in trade organizations.

Passenger jet catches fire on takeoff

DOUALA, Cameroon (AP) — A Cameroon Airlines passenger jet caught fire today as it prepared to take off for Yaounde, and National Cameroon Radio said two people died. U.S. officials said five Americans were hurt, but none of the injuries appeared serious.

The radio report did not say how many of the reported 116 people aboard the Boeing 737 were injured. An early report by the French news agency Agence-France Presse had quoted unidentified sources as saying up to 100 people were killed.

U.S. Consul General Charles Twining in Douala, Cameroon's largest city, said there were seven Americans aboard the plane, including three children. He said their identities would not be made public until they had contacted their families.

Twining said all of the Americans were residents of Cameroon.

"None of the injuries appeared critical," he said. "Four of the people suffered burns and two of them had broken ankles from jumping out of the plane.

"One woman, who was in the worst shape, suffered burns and broken ankles, but the doctor told us she was in no danger," Twining said.

He said one of the Americans told him "he was sitting on the left side of the plane and looked out and suddenly saw that an engine was on fire. Then, somehow, the fire quickly spread to the cabin."

Officials said the cause of the fire was not known.

Cameroon Airline's Paris office confirmed there had been an accident on the plane, but provided no other information.

Employees get credit for working in pollution

MEXICO CITY (AP) — U.S. Embassy employees receive extra retirement credit for the time they work here because this megalopolis of 17 million people has some of the worst air pollution in the world.

"It is a new thing and we are the only U.S. embassy to have this type of policy — the State Department thought this would be a way to compensate for the unhealthy post," embassy spokesman Lee Johnson said in an interview Wednesday. "This plan was put into effect because of the high levels of pollution prevalent in Mexico City. It is something that has been well received by the embassy employees because they recognize the health problems," he said.

Mexican health officials have conceded publicly that the city's air quality is among the world's worst due to millions of vehicles without emission-control devices, the altitude, and geographic features.

Under the plan implemented July 1, the 340 U.S. employees working at the embassy get six months extra credit toward their retirement for every 12 months worked in Mexico City, Johnson said. The benefits do not apply to those working in the nine U.S. consulates elsewhere in Mexico.

Normally, embassy employees can retire at age 50 with 20 years service, but people working four years in Mexico will be able to retire at the minimum age after working 18 years and receive the benefits of 20 years service.

The plan also means that a person who worked four years in Mexico City could retire after 20 years and receive credit for 22 years service.

Embassy employees receive 50 percent of their salary when they retire with 20 years service and an additional 2 percent for every year beyond that.

The normal tour of duty for embassy employees here is from two to four years. The embassy is one of the three largest U.S. missions in the world.

The decision came after the embassy made an 18-month study of air pollution in Mexico City that confirmed heavy pollution. Johnson said the study was made because the State Department in Washington did not have data on air pollution here and Mexican government figures were incomplete.

An environmental scientist here, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said about 370,000 tons of air pollution blanketed Mexico City last year, and the amount grows each year as the number of people and vehicles rise.

"To say breathing the air here is like smoking two packs of cigarettes each day is not an exaggeration," he said in an interview.

Of the pollution, the scientist said, about 65 percent to 70 percent is carbon monoxide, hydrocarbons, sulphur dioxide and lead from the 3 million cars and 7,000 buses that use the city streets each day.

Most vehicles here have no anti-pollution controls, as required in the United States, and they burn a poor grade of gasoline containing high levels of sulfur and lead.

Compounding the problem, he said, is Mexico City's high altitude. The thinner air at 7,800 feet makes the effect of vehicle emissions twice what it would be at sea level.

Longshoremen decide to abandon walkout

LONDON (AP) — Longshoremen at the twin ports of Immingham and Grimsby in northeastern England, who led a dock strike earlier this summer, today voted to abandon a second walkout called in support of striking coal miners.

But the walkout, and the six-month-old coal strike that spawned it, remained serious enough for Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to put off a Far East tour. Opposition lawmakers demanded she call Parliament back from recess.

About 3,300 workers at Britain's biggest port complex, Tilbury docks on the River Thames east of London, were to vote today on whether to join the strike.

Almost all of the twin ports' 700 workers turned out for a meeting in Grimsby. The workers, who handle $8.5 billion worth of goods annually, voted with only a few exceptions to end their six-day-old walkout.

"We are dockers, not miners," declared one longshoreman after the vote. "We are not idiots."

It was Immingham workers who started the summer's first dock strike. They walked out in July when non-union labor was used to handle coal in defiance of a union boycott backing the coal miners. That strike lasted 11 days.

Mrs. Thatcher had been scheduled to visit Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia and Sri Lanka Sept. 14-28. But her office said Wednesday night she "has decided that against the background of the present industrial situation it would not be right for her to be so far from Britain."

The deputy chief of the opposition Labor Party, Roy Hattersley, said in a radio interview that Mrs. Thatcher should recall Parliament to deal with the labor crisis.

Korean police detain students for investigation

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Police said today they had detained about 140 students for an investigation of sporadic anti-Japanese demonstrations that have broken out just before the first state visit of a South Korean president to Japan.

The most serious incident was late Wednesday at a Japanese government information center, where several hundred students smashed windows with rocks and bottles. Witnesses said the students then tried to march on the nearby Japanese Embassy. They were turned back, but along the way broke windows in a police substation.

The outbreak came on the anniversary of the 1910 annexation of the Korean Peninsula to Japan, the beginning of 35 years of Japanese colonial domination of Korea.

President Chun Doo-hwan plans to visit Japan beginning Sept. 7.

Plant officials go to jail

MOSCOW (AP) — Two sugar plant officials have been sentenced to jail for negligence that led to pollution of the drinking water for the Ukrainian city of Vinnitsa, a Soviet newspaper reported.

The article in Wednesday's edition of the Literary Gazette recounted two instances in which the plant polluted water in the area, which borders Czechoslovakia.

The newspaper said P.P. Melnik, a chief engineer at the Turbov sugar plant, and his deputy, N.I. Letyagin, were responsible for poor maintenance of wastewater retention fields, which resulted in spills that polluted drinking water and killed fish. The first spill was in August 1983, and the second was last December.

KAISERSLAUTERN, West Germany (AP) — A military court has sentenced an Air Force sergeant who admitted selling American and NATO defense secrets to the East bloc sentenced to 10 years in prison, a military spokesman said.

The court also gave Sgt. Francisco de Asis Mira, 24, a dishonorable discharge and ordered him to forfeit all pay and allowances. The sentence handed down Tuesday will automatically be appealed, said Capt. Richard McNally, public affairs officer for Sembach Air Force Base.

The Greenwood Rangers have taken a big step in athletics this year, moving from Class A to Class 2A, but the move might be made easier with the likes of veteran quarterback Chad Longley (14) and fullback Roger Smith.

Rangers make quantum leap

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

GREENWOOD— Ranger head football coach Joe Longley doesn't believe in resting on last year's laurels. Well, the University Interscholastic League didn't give him a chance.

After guiding Greenwood to its first District championship last year in District 7-A, the UIL upped the school classification to 2A. Now, the Rangers go from top dog to underdog.

Let this be a warning: Watch out, District 8-AA. There's a new kid in town.

"We expected it," Longley says of the new ruling. "We knew we'd be going this year (to the AA level). We're still not ready for it, but we'll be there ready or not.

"My feeling on it right now is that the district we came out of was a pretty rough little district. Now it will be that way every week."

LONGLEY'S GROUP last year wasn't expected to do a lot. But what they did was fight on after two straight losses to open the season. Eight games later, Greenwood had a district crown, but the glory was short-lived as the Rangers suffered an inexplicable loss in the first-round playoffs.

Don't overlook the Rangers, however. While teams rarely make a classification jump with ease, Greenwood has some valuable commodities.

And they start with a running back and a quarterback that was the most successful combo in the district in 1983. Quarterback Chad Longley's father calls the plays on the sidelines, and the elder Longley all but adopted tailback Roger Smith as the senior ripped defenses for over 1,500 yards last season.

It is a solid place to start. Smith transferred from Ballinger, so has a degree of experience in a higher classification. Smith earned his stripes last year. Longley, just a junior, is deceptive. He stands only 5-10, but has muscled up to 140 pounds. As a sophomore, Longley carried only 125 pounds dripping wet. With the added size and the already developed smarts and skill, Longley should have a banner year.

"Our skill people are good," said Longley. Besides the main thrust of his offense returning, the Rangers got a move in named Terry O'Steen that has raised eyebrows. Longley is considering moving Smith to fullback to free up the tailback slot for O'Steen.

"He's looking real good. We could have quite an inside-outside game."

OBVIOUSLY. If O'Steen can displace a 1,500-yard tailback in his first year, the talent is there.

Also returning offensively is John Ellis, a brawny tight end and defensive stalwart; and John Gilliam, a ferocious hitter both ways.

Gilliam is feared as a linebacker. This will be his final year of starting for the Rangers. Opponents are pleased.

"We're going to be small, but it's deceiving," said Longley. "They're quick and strong."

Realistically, though, the Rangers have a stern test in the new district. "There are a lot of things going on," said Longley. "We lost a lot of experience in the offensive line so we've got a big job there. We have no returnees from tackle to tackle." "It's a big worry. We've got some good skill people. We know they can do the job if we open the holes for them."

Fortunately, the Rangers now have two extra non-district games to get ready. The switch put Greenwood in a smaller district, so the Rangers will be afforded every opportunity to grow.

"They'll have to get experience in the pre-district games. Looking at it realistically it's a rebuilding year. It will just depend on how fast they come along. We'll be pretty small," said the coach. "We're asking the kids to just be competitive and to make strides every week."

The Rangers start the district slate in grand fashion - against defending champion Wall on the road. "Everybody will be checking our water," commented Longley. "The district we're going into is very competitive.

"McCamey will have a good football team. Stanton will be competitive. Last is where we should be picked."

BUT LONGLEY and his people will be ready to rumble. "I was real pleased with their physical condition. The hitting has been real sharp, and the offensive line is just a matter of experience. We've got the nucleus to build around."

Longley added, "I think our kids realize the importance of it. They'll respond to the challenge - they've got pride. They won't lay down for anybody."

The coach also realizes the challenge ahead. "I guess I'm over-cautious right now. We scrimmage McCamey every year but that's a scrimmage. But there's 11 men out there, that's all they can put out there and we've been playing with 11. All those schools have a football tradition. Our goal is to let them know we're there."

Ranger Report Card

Offensive Line: C - Rangers lost a lot of studs.
Receivers: C - Unknown area here.
Quarterbacks: A - Longley looks small, but all he does is beat you.
Running Backs: A - All West-Texas returnee in Smith.
Defensive Line: B minus - Still needs depth, but some skill.
Linebackers: B plus - Strong and tough.
Secondary: B - Not blazers, but very smart.
Overall: B - Until the Rangers can grow up and find some answers to their line questions, they could be in for some rough going. But Smith and the Longley team are a good place to start a new venture.
Predicted Finish: 6-4.
1984 Schedule: 9/7 at Ozona; 9/14 Water Valley; 9/21 Presidio (at Ft. Stockton); 9/28 Grandfalls; 10/5 at Rankin; 10/12 at Wall; 10/19 Stanton; 10/26 McCamey; 11/2 at Big Lake; 11/9 Eldorado.

Rebs prepare for Andrews

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Midland Lee Rebels will eat barbecue tonight and then will finally get a chance to tangle with some real strangers Friday night when they travel to Andrews for their first and only taste of scrimmage action.

It was last December when the Rebels last faced faces they didn't recognize and 55 seniors have since departed from Lee's 13-3 team of 1983. So, new Lee boss Jack Tayrien will have some breaking in to do when his squad faces Andrews around 7:30 p.m. in Mustang Bowl.

But first things first. There's that barbecue to consider at 6:30 p.m. The public will get its first chance to view the Rebels up close and for $3.50 per person can eat along with the Rebs.

Considering the fact that Lee has sold over 2,000 season tickets this year, there will be a large group on hand to send the Rebs off for their first taste of foreign meat.

TAYRIEN IS looking forward to the meeting with Andrews, but he knows his team is not in top playing form.

"After last Saturday's scrimmage, we know we need to correct a lot of mistakes," noted Tayrien. "We're not ready to play a football game. We run some good plays and some bad. Little things like execution, wrong paths and backs taking wrong steps are still hurting us. We need a lot of repetition in those areas.

"We need consistency in our offensive scheme and more consistency in our defensive line. We've still got some real battles going on in the interior line positions and we will be looking very close at that when we play Andrews."

Since Andrews is a 4A squad, the Mustangs have already had one scrimmage under their belt and have been working out a week longer than Lee.

"Andrews is always a tough test for us at this time of the year. They are ahead of us in nearly every area. They are just one classification below us," said Tayrien.

"We've scrimmaged the Mustangs the last six years and they have always been tough on us. We'll get knocked around pretty good. Andrews has a very good defensive team this year and beat Borger in their first scrimmage. They are ahead of us on both sides of the ball."

Tayrien also said that his team needs a lot of imporvement in the area of throwing and catching the football.

"Most of the things we are doing wrong right now is a matter of execution and technique. It sure isn't a lack of effort on the part of the kids. They came to work and that has been the brightest spot of the program so far," said Tayrien.

ANDREWS HAS been hampered this year since head coach David Visentine has been in the hospital. Last week, Visentine thought he may have had a heart attack. He was taken to Lubbock for tests and at last report, doctors seemed to think that it wasn't a heart attack after all.

The exact time of the Lee-Andrews varsity scrimmage is not known since the two junior varsities will tee up around 5:45 p.m. "The varsities will scrimmage as soon as the JVs are through," said Tayrien.

Lee's sophomore team will scrimmage at 10 a.m. Saturday at the Lee field against San Angelo.

Meanwhile, Midland High is also preparing for Friday's 6:30 p.m. scrimmage with Lubbock Coronado at Memorial Stadium. The MHS JV and sophomore teams will scrimmage Coronado today at 6 p.m. with the sophomores playing of the MHS practice field and the JVs in the stadium.

Midland High will hold its annual Super Dog festivities after the Coronado scrimmage on Friday. That will be the chance for MHS fans to mingle with the players.

The preview for the MHS-Coronado scrimmage will be run Friday in the Reporter-Telegram.

Pryor leaves Raiders to play for Texas A&I

KINGSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Former Judson High School football standout Chris Pryor likely won't have any trouble making the team at Texas A&I, where he transferred this week from Texas Tech, a school spokesman said Wednesday.

Pryor enrolled at A&I on Tuesday and was expected for practice Wednesday, said Fred Nuesch, sports information director.

Pryor's enrollment at A&I was the latest chapter in a continuing story of where he will attend school and play football.

He would have been ineligible to play for Tech this year since he failed to graduate with his high school class last spring. NCAA Division I rules, which govern athletics at Tech, would have made him ineligible.

But such a restriction is not in effect at A&I, which is a Division II school.

Pryor finished the English course he needed to graduate this summer and earned his high school diploma.

A&I Coach Ron Harms thinks Pryor "will be a big plus for the football team. This type of player always is welcome in camp," Nuesch said.

The 5-10, 195-pound back gained 2,800 yards in 16 games during Judson' season that led to the 1983 Class 5A state championship.

"You would think a person of his caliber would have no trouble making the team," Nuesch said Wednesday. "We feel like he's here to stay."

Pryor told the San Antonio Express-News late Tuesday, "I feel great. I tried it up there at Tech, but I missed football too much. I want to play this season. I came down here to play football and try to learn. I'm going to try my hardest to make it.

"I'm glad it's over. Now I've absolutely made up my mind. This is it. I'm here to stay," he said.

Victories major key for Sooners

Switzer hopes edge returns to Oklahoma

By MIKE KING

College football is a source of spirited entertainment for thousands of people each fall, and a visit to Norman, Okla., reveals that at the University of Oklahoma the price of that entertainment is hard work.

Most fans see only the Saturday afternoon product in the fall. They might appreciate it more if they visited a preseason practice session. It is quickly evident how much work is really involved for players, as well as the coaches, who are at it well into the night, long after the work on the field ends.

I was one of those fortunate enough to see the Sooners' work out, and I had the opportunity to visit with Barry Switzer, OU's head football coach.

My visit was on a Saturday morning. Saturday! Players and coaches don't get weekends off. It was also mid-August. Anyone who has been in Oklahoma during the summer knows how hot and humid it is in August. The practice session lasted two and a half hours, and was the first of two drills for the day. The second drill was scheduled for the afternoon.

NOW YOU know the conditions: Saturday morning, hot, humid, 2½ hours long and a second session in the afternoon. Practices are all work. The players run, do calisthenics, block, tackle, throw and more.

The same moves are rehearsed over and over, exactly as demonstrated by the coach. The coaches watch, encourage and correct. Every move, every play is repeated over and over until it is embedded in their minds. By the time they are finished, they execute plays in their sleep.

OU's Barry Switzer
...winning with work

I was exhausted and I only watched.

BUT, IN addition to the hours practicing in the hot sun to prepare for those autumn afternoons, the ingredients for a successful football program must be assembled. It takes the best coaches, recruiting the best athletes, athletes who must be conditioned, trained and kept healthy. Opponents must be scouted. Game plans developed. Starting lineups must be selected each week and the fans must be kept happy by answering their questions, and accusations.

There is one more thing. You must win! No one knows this better than Barry Switzer. Switzer has the winningest record of active major college coaches and hopes to improve on that winning record this season.

I ASKED Coach Switzer about the lack of success Oklahoma has experienced the past three years in winning the Big Eight title. The answer could have been a forearm shiver, but Switzer said:

"Our goal is to win championships, but you can't tell your team they were not successful because they finished second," Switzer explained. "Our players have put us in position to play Nebraska for the championship every year. I would call that successful. Nebraska has enjoyed the edge in talent the last three years, and, before that, we had the edge.

"Maybe we will have the edge this year."

How do you feel about your contract not being extended at the end of last year? Still, no forearm, but the terse reponse was:

"I didn't expect the contract to be extended. You get what you earn."

Do you think your contract will be extended at the end of this season if you win the Big Eight title?

"Again, you get what you earn, and I think if we can win the conference championship, we will have earned it."

What are your thoughts on this year's team?

"I am excited. This is the best our offense has looked this early in the year since I have been here. We are going back to the Wishbone, but will throw more. We have a whole new understanding, new potential, on offense this year.

"The defense may not be as good as last year's. We had several starters graduate, but we have some young talent that should develop."

Do you think this year's team can win the conference championship?

"I think that every year."

What do you think of the new television package?

"I think it will be good, but it may take a year or two to develop."

What do you try to instill in the young people you work with?

"The importance of an education. Get a degree. Football isn't the most important thing in life, and it shouldn't be. Life has more to offer than that, and you can't play football forever. If you live to be 60 or 70 years of age, you will have to know more than just football. I also encourage them to perform up to their capabilities in whatever they do."

What would you like to be remembered for?

"I haven't really thought about it. Carrying on a winning tradition would be one thing."

What is the toughest part of your job?

"Well, I don't really look at it like that. I think of it as fun. I guess I might say winning enough."

Are you happy with your job and living in Oklahoma?

"Sure! I have been here for 19 years. I must like it."

"I really didn't have all that many questions," I remarked.

"No, but you had enough," Switzer said, looking toward the field.

Coach Switzer's attention returned to the practice field and the hard work still ahead. My attention turned to air-conditioned comfort, and a reclining chair.

1905 — Ty Cobb made his major league debut, collecting a double off Jack Chesbro of the New York Highlanders in the Tigers 5-3 win.

Chicubs keep on rolling

Associated Press

Leon Durham drove in three runs with a home run and a single, Bob Dernier broke an 0-for-20 slump with a key homer and Rick Sutcliffe won his 11th straight game as the surging Chicago Cubs beat the Cincinnati Reds 7-2 Wednesday.

The victory was the ninth in the last 11 games for Chicago, which holds a 5½-game lead over the New York Mets in the National League East. The Mets beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2 in a night game.

Ryne Sandberg banged out three hits, including a double and a triple. He doubled in the first inning and scored on a single by Keith Moreland.

The Cubs broke it open with four runs in the third after the Reds had tied the game an inning earlier. Dernier led off with his third homer off Jeff Russell, 6-15. Gary Matthews walked and Durham followed with his 20th homer. A pair of walks and a double by Jody Davis accounted for the other run.

THE CUBS picked up another run in the fourth on singles by Dernier, Sandberg and Durham as Sutcliffe raised his NL record to 13-1 since being acquired from the Cleveland Indians June 13.

Fred Lynn's 16th homer and Brian Downing's 18th, successive solo shots in the eighth inning off Mike Boddicker, 16-9, led the California Angels to a 7-5 victory over the Baltimore Orioles in the only other day game. Rob Wilfong hit a three-run shot for California.

Keith Hernandez' double in the ninth inning scored pinch-hitter Danny Heep from first base as the Mets beat the Dodgers to sweep a three-game series. Jesse Orosco, 9-5, who had yielded an eighth-inning, game-tying pinch-hit home run to Candy Maldonado, was the winner in relief of Ron Darling, who fanned a career-high 12 batters in seven innings.

The Philadelphia Phillies fell seven games behind the Cubs when San Diego's Mark Thurmond, 11-7, tossed a three-hitter at them. Steve Garvey's double play grounder off loser John Denny, 6-5, and Kevin McReynolds' sacrifice fly accounted for the runs.

Bob Brenly led off the 11th inning with an inside-the-park home run, enabling the San Francisco Giants to defeat Montreal 4-3 and hand the Expos their sixth straight defeat, all by one run. Brenly hit a fly to right-center field which squirted out of the glove of center fielder Tim Raines and rolled to the fence.

Baseball Roundup

Willie McGee drove in four runs, three with a bloop double in the fourth inning and another in a five-run eighth, as the St. Louis Cardinals downed the Atlanta Braves 10-6. The Cardinals, trailing 6-5, took advantage of three infield hits and two errors in the eighth.

Winning pitcher Don Robinson's RBI single in the ninth inning scored Marvell Wynne from second base with the go-ahead run to give the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 4-2 victory over the Houston Astros. Robinson, 3-5, scored the final run on Tony Pena's double off Frank DePino, 4-7.

Hal McRae homered and tripled to drive in two runs, and Bud Black, 14-10, pitched a six-hitter to lead the Kansas City Royals to a 4-1 victory over the Texas Rangers. Loser Frank Tanana, 14-12, had a five-game winning streak snapped.

CARLTON FISK, Greg Luzinski and Scott Fletcher slugged solo home runs as the Chicago White Sox beat the Toronto Blue Jays 8-5.Dennis Boyd checked Minnesota on two hits and Mike Easler drove in a pair of runs with two clutch singles to lift the Boston Red Sox over the Minnesota Twins 4-0. Boyd, 9-9, struck out six and walked four for his second shutout of the season.

Former Midland Cub Joe Carter doubled to sparke a three-run outburst that broke a sixth-inning tie and carried the Cleveland Indians past the Milwaukee Brewers 5-2. Mike Jeffcoat, who relieved Steve Comer in the fourth inning, improved to his record to 5-1.

Rookie left-hander Mark Langston pitched a two-hitter and struck out 12 as the Seattle Mariners beat the Detroit Tigers 5-1.

Ken Griffey and Mike Pagliarulo hit solo home runs to give the New York Yankees a 4-1 triumph over the Oakland A's.

Sandberg on verge of baseball history

CHICAGO (AP) — Ryne Sandberg insists he is trying to remain consistent and do the right things at the plate this season, and if he keeps it up he's going to achieve something that has never been done before.

Sandberg is on the verge of becoming the first major league baseball player to amass 200 hits in one season, with at least 20 doubles, 20 triples, 20 home runs and 20 stolen bases.

After collecting a single, a double and a triple Wednesday, Sandberg needs 26 hits — including 3 triples and 3 homers — to accomplish the feat.

Barring injuries, he should have no trouble getting the 200 hits or 20 home runs, but there is some question about the 20 triples, which most experts insist will be difficult because of the shortness of the walls in Wrigley Field..

"He'll do it," said Manager Jim Frey, who is partly responsible for Sandberg's extra-base prowess because he told the All-Star second baseman last spring to "nail the ball in certain situations."

But Frey is among those who claim getting triples in parks like St. Louis, Montreal and Houston is a lot easier than in Wrigley Field.

"Once he starts running, he's hard to stop," said Frey. "And he makes the turns on the bases so well that he always picks up a couple of steps other players don't. And when he hits them in the gaps on the road, there's no way to stop him. In some parks on the road, the fences are 20 to 30 feet deeper, which makes it easier to hit triples, especially in Houston."

Sandberg has another theory — it is just as easy to hit triples in Wrigley Field.

"When a ball gets past an outfielder here, it goes up against the vines and stops," noted Sandberg. "In other parks, a ball can bounce off the wall and come back to the outfielder. Here it doesn't, and the outfielder has to chase it down, which gives you a few more steps."

Knowing this, Sandberg usually turns on the speed when his drives elude the outfielders, and the statistics bear him out. He has hit 11 of his 17 triples at home this year, although the Cubs have played only four more games at home than on the road.

"I'm not thinking about it, but it could happen," said Sandberg when asked if he might be able to convert this unique baseball first. Sandberg already has his quota in doubles with 30 and stolen bases with 26.

Potestio finally gets Cub support

Hurler has mixed emotions over 1984 season

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Doug Potestio will head back to San Leandro, Calif., for the winter with a 6-10 Texas League record and mixed emotions about his 1984 season with the Midland Cubs.

When the subject of the season comes up, he'll talk about his earned run average, not his won-lost record. Who can blame him. Talk about statistics lying through their teeth.

When Potestio pitched a nine-hitter to earn a 5-2 win over San Antonio's Dodgers at Cubs Stadium Wednesday night, it was his sixth complete game, tops for the team. It gave him a 3.27 earned-run-average for the year and since he deserted the bullpen for a starting role May 28, he shows a 3.21 ERA.

BUT BACK to those lying, thieving statistics to give you an idea of what 24-year-old righthander has had to contend with this season. For the month of August, Potestio's record is a miserable 1-4, yet his ERA is 2.64 for the month.

During that stretch the Cubs were shutout twice, held to one run twice and three runs in a game in which Potestio escaped with no decision.

The five runs Midland gave him Wednesday was the most support he has gotten since Gerald Ford's Presidency or, to be perfectly honest, since July 7 when he beat San Antonio 6-3 for his fourth win.

When first baseman Jeff Jones belted a three-run over the left field fence to give Potestio a 3-0 lead in the first, the first reaction was that the game was over, and then came the sudden realization that the shock might be too much. Doug might not be able to stand prosperity.

The fear was groundless, although that's somewhat contradictory in that Paul Noce handled seven assists at short and of the 27 outs 14 were infield grounders.

GOING INTO the seventh, Potestio, who was 6-1 at Salinas, California League last year, kept it interesting. In seven of the last eight innings, the leadoff batter got on via base hits. In fact, Stu Pederson and Ralph Bryant hit lead off singles to open the fourth.

Only in the seventh when Larry See led off with a double and Dan Cataline hit is 15th homer, second in two nights, to left did Potestio get burned. Until then he was working on his second shutout of the season.

Jones' homer was his second in two nights and 17th of the season. Noce beat out an infield hit and Darrin Jackson doubled to set the table in front of Jones.

The Cubs struck for another run in the fifth off San Antonio starter Brian Piper, 6-6, when Mike Brumley walked, moved to third on Noce's single, a walk to Jackson and scored when Jones hit into a double play.

In the sixth, a walk to David Denton, an infield hit by Potestio, a walk to Brumley and a tougher chopper between the mound, second and first by Noce got the run home.

Noce wound up with three hits as the Cubs collected nine off three Dodger pitchers. Ralph Bryant had three of San Antonio's nine hits off Potestio.

Brewers first team eliminated

MILWAUKEE (AP) — It was only two years ago that the Milwaukee Brewers came within one game of winning the World Series.

But this year, on Aug. 28, the Brewers became the first team eliminated from a major-league pennant race.

"It definitely hasn't been like two years ago," said shortstop Robin Yount, the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1982. "It's almost over and next year will be here soon enough. So we'll be ready then."

A lot has happened to account for the rise and fall of the Milwaukee Brewers.

The Brewers were 55-77 and 32 games out of first place in the AL East Tuesday night. They even trailed the sixth-place Cleveland Indians by 3½ games.

"I'm not going to look back at it once it's over with," said second baseman Jim Gantner, who was a member of the 1982 squad. "It's a very disappointing and frustrating season. There's no need to look back at this type of year."

Milwaukee has a good shot at surpassing the franchise's all-time worst record — a 64-98 mark in 1969 when the club played its only season as the Seattle Pilots. A year later, after the move to Milwaukee, the newly-named Brewers improved to 65-97.

Eleven players this season have been on the disabled list, including ace reliever Rollie Fingers, third baseman Paul Molitor and All-Star catcher Jim Sundberg.

The once-feared "Harvey's Wallbangers," named for then-Manager Harvey Kuenn, blasted 216 homers in 1982. So far this season the "Brew Crew" has hit only 78, lowest in the majors.

"I'm sure there's a number of people who have theories, and I'm sure most of them can be discounted," pitcher Don Sutton said of the fall of the Brewers. "I'm sure it's a combination of a lot of things. Someday, somebody will look back and say this is the answer. But I don't think they'll be as smart as they think they are, because I think it's a combination of things."

There was a renewed optimism on the Brewers this year after the club faltered in the final month of 1983. The popular Kuenn was fired and Rene Lachemann was hired as manager last October.

DO YOU WANT A NORMAL LENS!

We don't think so. In the past the so-called "normal lens" was far less expensive than lenses of other types, especially zoom lenses. Now for only $80 more than the price of 50mm lens you can get a 35-70 12.8 macro zoom lens. We call this lens a "super normal" because it drastically increases the versatility of your 35mm camera. You get 3 different lenses in one small package. Wide angles for scenery and groups, telephoto for sports and portraits plus the added bonus of macro for close-ups of flowers, etc. When you buy any of today's exceptional 35mm cameras, match it with the Sigma 35-70 f2.8 Macro "Super Normal".

STATE IN BRIEF

County doesn't get funds

AUSTIN (AP) — For the second time, the federal government has refused to approve a disaster area designation for Motley County, where a May 1 tornado destroyed school buildings at Matador.

Approval of the designation would have made available U.S. Department of Education funds to rebuild the Motley County school buildings. The buildings served all of the county's 252 school-age children.

Insurance will cover about $1 million of the estimated $2.8 million in damages.

Roads to be landscaped

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Highway and Public Transportation Commission ordered highway officials Wednesday to proceed with a statewide landscape development and rehabilitation program and set aside $1.5 million for the initial year of the landscape program.

The program calls for a concentration on urbran projects in the Houston, Dallas, Fort Worth, San Antonio, Amarillo and Austin areas during the first year.

The landscapers will utilize a minimum of 60 percent native plants for the projects, to reduce mowing and watering expenses.

Extradition refused

KERRVILLE (AP) — Only one of nine defendants charged with organized crime in the torture death of a drifter remains to be returned here for prosecution, authorities say.

Martin Leroy Miller, who was picked up in Tucson last month, has refused to waive extradition. But Sheriff Cliff Greeson says a governor's warrant for his removal to Kerrville is being processed and he should be returned by Tuesday.

Wednesday, Paul Harvey Hicks, 19, was returned to the Kerr County Jail. He had waived extradition from San Diego, where he was arrested Aug. 18 after he was stopped on a traffic charge.

Both men are wanted in the March 3 cattle prod torture slaying of Anthony Warren Bates, a drifter, who was one of several held against their will on a Hill Country ranch near Mountain Home, prosecutors say.

Drowning investigated

HOUSTON (AP) — Investigators were trying to determine whether a man jumped or accidentally fell from a bridge Wednesday after he was stopped by a Harris County constable for speeding.

The man, whose name was not released, was driving along Texas Highway 225 about 5 p.m. when the constable stopped him on a bridge of Sims Bayou, investigators said.

Witnesses told investigators that moments later the man plunged into the water. Divers were called and searched the water for nearly three hours before finding the man's body, investigators said.

Workers to be laid off

FORT WORTH (AP) — Bell Helicopter Textron has laid off 113 workers from jobs at its eight Tarrant County plants, a company spokesman said Wednesday.

The layoffs, effective at the end of the workers' shift Friday, will affect 89 production workers and 24 clerical workers, who belong to two different locals of the United Auto Workers.

About 3,200 UAW workers returned to work without a contract Monday after being suspended for three weeks in a dispute over mandatory overtime. The union rejected Bell's offer for a one-year contract over the weekend.

Union sources were quoted by the Fort Worth Star-Telegram as saying that the layoffs were not connected to the ongoing labor dispute. One union employee said the layoffs are "just a regular-type thing.

Greyhound to pay fine

AUSTIN (AP) — Greyhound Bus Lines, Inc., has agreed to pay a $10,000 penalty to the state for temporarily halting service to five Houston-area cities without approval of the Texas Railroad Commission.

The commission said Wednesday the Interstate Commerce Commission in 1983 overruled the commission and authorized Greyhound to discontinue bus service to 38 cites, including all of those on the company's Houston-San Antonio route.

However, Richmond, Rosenberg, Sugar Land, Missouri City and Stafford, all of which were on that route, were not included in Greyhound's original application to the commission.

Crews cleaning up oil spill

BAYTOWN (AP) — Crews working for the Exxon Pipeline Co. were cleaning up about 84,000 gallons of crude oil from the San Jacinto River Wednesday after a barge or tugboat apparently struck a pipeline, a company spokesman said.

The oil was contained inside booms in a mile-long stretch of the river, spokesman Perry Smith said.

Associations oppose increased premiums

AUSTIN (AP) — An official of the Texas Association of Business says employers cannot afford a record-breaking 25 percent increase in premiums for companies writing workers' compensation insurance in Texas.

The increase, which would add $450 million a year to Texas employer premiums, has met stiff opposition from the TAB and other major trade associations.

"We simply cannot afford that additional tariff," Gerald Dorsey, TAB vice president and general counsel, said Wednesday. "Workers' comp premiums in Texas last year totaled $1.75 billion which must ultimately be passed on to Texas consumers.

"Now the insurers are seeking another $500,000 a year on top of the $4.7 billion in taxes levied by the Legislature last month. The Texas economy will bear only so much," Dorsey said.

The request for a increase was made through the National Council on Compensation Insurance, which represents workers' compensation firms. The insurance writers were scheduled to take the matter before the State Board of Insurance today.

The request for a rate increase was brought on by State Board of Insurance data showing that income from workers' compensation carriers "severely deteriorated" during mid-1982 and throughout 1983 when unemployment was high due to the economic downturn.

The Board of Insurance staff and the National Council on Compensation Insurance have both recommended changing the manner of setting rates which would cost premium payers an additional $125 million a year.

"It is my opinion that now is a very inopportune time to consider such a change," Dorsey said. "The SBI should refrain from any discretionary action which would impede Texas' economic recovery."

Dorsey said the insurance board staff, along with most business and industry organizations, also is recommending that ratemakers recognize an insurance company's investment income when calculating rates. However, Dorsey said, NCCI strongly opposes this position.

Dorsey said TAB and other major trade associations have joined in forming the Texas Association of Compensation Consumers to confront issues facing purchasers of workers' compensation insurance in Texas. He said TACC has employed Dallas attorney Bob Davis, former chairman of the Texas House Insurance Committee, to represent it.

Proposals made for indigent care

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Despite its dubious distinction as being the state that least provides health care for its poverty-stricken residents, Texas could climb to higher status through recommendations made by the State Task Force on Indigent Health Care, according to the task force staff director.

"Texas is at the absolute bottom of the list as far as taking care of its poverty population," said Bryan Sperry, adding that an average of 53 percent of the nation's poor are covered by the states. Individually, "some states are up to 80 or 90 percent but we cover less than one-quarter of our poverty population."

Speaking Wednesday to health care professionals and members of civic organizations from Midland and Odessa at a luncheon sponsored by the United Way of Midland's Government Relations Committee, Sperry outlined several of the proposals.

The recommendations were formed after Gov. Mark White, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis created the task force, which was charged with identifying indigent health care issues.

Bryan Sperry

THE TASK FORCE, which contains five persons from the West Texas area, gathered information from public hearings concerning the scope of services to be provided, the eligibility criteria to be applied to those requesting such aid, an administrative structure to implement a program and methods of financing such a program.

Most of the load of caring for indigent patients in Texas is shouldered by public hospitals, Sperry said. According to Texas Hospital Association statistics, $1.6 billion of uncompensated care was recorded in 1983. The money went to care given to indigents (persons who can't pay) or was written off as bad debts.

"Indigent is an unfortunate term because there are a lot of medically indigent patients who get written off as bad debts," Sperry said.

"Public hospitals in Texas do have a much larger indigent patient load than public hospitals nationally," he said.

Locally, Midland Memorial Hospital has projected a $2.2 million price tag on care to be given to county indigent patients next fiscal year.

While Texas law assigns taking care of indigents to the counties, lack of a standard definition of indigent "has led to many difficulties," Sperry said.

A NUMBER OF lawsuits have been filed for purposes of recovering costs, establishing legal responsibility, defining indigent and prescribing the scope of services required.

The Hill-Burton Act, a federal program passed in 1946, required hospitals receiving federal funds for construction to provide a certain amount of medical services for free or at low cost. It was expanded in 1970 to include provision of such services in return for federal loans and loan guarantees.

According to Attorney General Jim Mattox, whose office has undertaken a study of providing care for indigents, health care facilities across the nation have received about $6 billion through the program. But a 1982 report by the U.S. General Accounting Office (GAO) estimated only half of the required services have been provided to those who should have been covered under the Hill-Burton Act, according to a press release from the attorney general's office.

One year ago Suzanne Brower, now Mrs. Laufer, was just beginning her teaching career. This week, things have gone much smoother for the "veteran" educator.

Second-year teacher feels like veteran

RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Everything was different this year for the Santa Rita second-grade teacher.

One year ago Suzanne Brower, now Mrs. Laufer, was just beginning her teaching career. This week, although the teacher and Room 108 appeared much the same as last year, things had changed considerably for the educator behind the desk.

"I slept the night before," she joked. "I feel like an old teacher today. I felt a lot more comfortable and well-prepared. I knew what was expected of me. I could plan my lessons and I knew exactly what should be accomplished that first day."

And not just the first day — this year Mrs. Laufer was able to plan lessons through Christmas.

"A first-year teacher is overwhelmed by everything they have to do. Last year I had no idea what went into teaching. I thought I'd just come to work and teach. After the first week I realized there was more to the job than just reading a book and talking to the children. There's a lot of paperwork and red tape. Now that's just become part of my routine."

She found her job involved other unexpected aspects, as well. "The kids look at you like you can't do anything wrong. They're not even sure if you eat. Last year I had a girl who said she didn't know teachers were allowed outside of school. She thought we slept there.

"Last year was enlightening," she said. "But I really enjoyed it.

"This year was different in that we had the opportunity to meet the students and they got to meet us. I knew who was going to be in my room. It made the first day really go a lot smoother," despite the fact she has 29 students this year instead of 22.

The curriculum, too, had changed somewhat following the passage of new state regulations. "Time management is really emphasized. We have to spend so many minutes per day on each subject, and they watch it very closely."

And school hours had changed as well, she noted. Classes now begin at 8:15 instead of 8:40 a.m. "Some of the parents still don't know and they send in their kids at 8:30."

The children, of course, were new, but even the personality of the class as a whole was different, she said. "They're more verbal this year. Last year they were more intense. This year they're more happy-go-lucky."

"And they seem smaller," she added, finding it difficult to believe her students the previous year had grown so much over 12 months.

Of course, one of the advantages of experience is being able to work faster. "I have learned all kinds of shortcuts. It takes me about half as long to do things as it did when I first started."

But there were still many things that remained unchanged from the previous year. "My old students still call me Miss Brower," Mrs. Laufer said. And the first day was still characterized by mass confusion.

"The first day is hectic. There's no way you can look at it any other way. The first week of school is basically getting the children into a learning routine. They've been playing all summer. They have so many rules that they don't have to follow at home."

But in spite of all its demands, teaching is a worthwhile occupation, she said. "It's a job, but it's enjoyable because you can see your accomplishments. You give of yourself, but you get the satisfaction of knowing someone is going to be better from what you have taught him.

"There's not a child I had last year that either didn't tell me or give me something to let me know how much they appreciated me. There's not another job in the world that gives you as much positive feedback as teaching."

DPS estimates Labor Day weekend death toll

AUSTIN — As many as 54 deaths from traffic accidents on Texas roads are expected during the Labor Day weekend, according to a Department of Public Safety officer.

The estimate is based on traffic fatalities of previous holidays, said Jim Adams, DPS director.

"During the last Labor Day period, we had 52 deaths reported in both urban and rural accidents," he said. "The inclusion of subsequent deaths due to traffic-related injuries which occurred during the period brought the final count to 55.

"Obviously, we would be pleased to have no fatal accidents during this 78-hour holiday, but our statistics show that is not probable. We know that some drivers will insist upon driving while intoxicated, others will deliberately exceed the speed limits and still others will drive in a careless or reckless manner," Adams said. "Unfortunately, fatal accidents can be expected."

The DPS will conduct two major programs during the Labor Day period, which begins at 6 p.m. Friday and ends at midnight Monday. Operation Motorcide will provide updated numbers of traffic deaths to the news media as the accidents occur. Operation Holiday stations troopers at locations where high volumes of traffic are anticipated or where violations are expected.

"DWI (driving while intoxicated) and speeding are always the biggest contributing factors to our traffic deaths, but the failure to use seat belts is another reason we have so many fatalities," Adams said.

Joe Mendoza claims he killed two men in self defense

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Joe Mendoza took the stand Wednesday and admitted killing Ronald Don Lopez and Johnny Moreno, but claimed he acted in self-defense.

Mendoza, 27, and his 34-year-old brother, David Mendoza, are being tried for the murders of Lopez, 19, and Moreno, 18, last June 23 near the Mendoza home at 811 Autumn Ave. in south Odessa.

The defense rested its case Wednesday, and the nine-woman, three-man jury was expected to begin its deliberations today.

The incident apparently began around 6:30 p.m. when a car carrying Lopez, Moreno and 15-year-old Jesse Hernandez passed a car driven by Frank Mendoza, a brother of Joe and David. Words were exchanged, and the Lopez car turned around and drove up to the Mendoza home as Frank Mendoza pulled into his driveway.

What happened next remains in dispute. Several defense witnesses have claimed Lopez was armed and fired shots at the Mendoza house; prosecution witnesses have claimed Lopez had no gun, and that he and Moreno were shot down in cold blood by Joe and David Mendoza as part of a continuing feud between two southside factions.

According to Joe Mendoza, he shot Lopez and Moreno in self-defense.

"He was going to kill me or one of my family members. I was scared," said Mendoza tearfully, his voice breaking.

According to Mendoza, he was in the back yard when the cars pulled up to the house and the commotion began.

"I heard the shots. I saw Frank fall down — I thought they had shot my brother."

Mendoza said he had a gun stuck in his waistband because he was afraid there might be trouble after his nephew Johnnie Mendoza was beaten by Lopez and three others two nights before.

He ran to the front of the house, by which time the green Monte Carlo with Lopez, Moreno and Hernandez had moved several blocks down the street. Mendoza said he ran after the car, and as he came up to it, Ronald Lopez got out and threw a beer bottle at him.

"He cussed me out, said he was going to kill me. Then he went like this," said Mendoza, gesturing towards his waist as if going for a gun.

"I pulled my gun out and shot him."

Mendoza said he then shot Moreno, who had gotten out of the car and was struggling with Frank Mendoza.

Under cross-examination by District Attorney Mike Holmes, Mendoza admitted he didn't know for sure if Lopez and Moreno were armed when he shot them.

"How could I tell if they were armed or not? They'd just attacked my house," he said. "I was scared."

Holmes asked why Mendoza had fled the scene after the police arrived, and not turned himself in until the following Wednesday, if he knew he'd done nothing wrong.

"I was scared — I couldn't think straight," said Mendoza. "I should have never run because I didn't do nothing wrong."

After the defense rested, the prosecution introduced some photographs to rebut the testimony of Barbara Patino, a neighbor of the Mendozas who claimed to have seen a gun held out the window of the green Monte Carlo. The photographs, taken from Ms. Patino's front porch, were of a Sheriff's Department employee holding a flashlight out the window of a car parked where the Monte Carlo had been sitting on June 23.

Apparently, the photographs cast doubt on Ms. Patino's claim to be able to see clearly what was going on down the block.

Prosecutors also called an Odessa police officer and an Odessa Police Department detective, who testified they had found no bullets or bullet marks on the Mendoza house after the incident, disputing the defense claim that Lopez had shot at the house.

The jury is scheduled to hear closing arguments today after receiving the charge from 70th District Court Judge Gene Ater.

Philosophical persuasion often last resort

Neither the Harvard Classics nor your neighborhood thinker owns the exclusive rights to philosophy — that great quest for meaning behind living and dying.

Hollywood's glitter occasionally sparkles with thought.

Take this: The other day, a nun in an old — 1940ish — Alan Ladd detective movie came out with this screenwriter's gem: "People don't pray to keep from dying; they pray to keep from being disappointed when they do (die)."

I always favor a bit of gentle philosophical persuasion in movies, plays, books, articles, speeches and just everyday yakking.

I like it, for it reminds me that of all things — from copper pennies to gold coins, from bare feet to oxfords, from dinghies to yachts, from huts to mansions — thought is best.

Unfortunately, it often rates last — such as the last resort. ("I'll pray on my deathbed.") Otherwise, philosophy often becomes a luxury, a frill. Have you ever heard in modern academe of philosophy being a required course in liberal arts or a science major? It ought to be.

If at all, philosophy comes last. It should be foremost.

Now, it's a rule in political propaganda that you feed a hungry belly and clothe and shelter the malleable masses before you start indoctrinating them. In the main, it's the same for you and I: After hunger has been satiated we may think, talk and ponder.

In today's horribly frightening world, our thoughts about living and dying and for what purpose may be clouded by our speculation on basic survival.

It's a helpless feeling to realize that an accident, an insane act or political or personal grudges could launch this world into a nuclear holocaust and virtually destroy this wondrous planet. It wouldn't merely decimate the human and wildlife populations; it would virtually or totally make this beautiful Earth uninhabitable.

The proliferation of nuclear arms exceeds the realms of insanity just as does the concept of a "limited nuclear war." How could that be? Eisenhower's domino theory is not limited to a distant land.

Still, in spite of or, perhaps, because of this looming holocaust, it would seem mankind has an obligation to delve deeply into the things of the heart, mind and spirit.

Just as praying should help keep us from being disappointed when our death comes, so should pondering life's mysteries help us maintain a keenness in living.

A vitality for life is a key to not being disappointed in life and dying. I am convinced that in all of mankind there is a desire for fulfillment. Some, blessed with directions, seek and find; others grope and if they are "lucky," also find reward in living.

That and prayer, I think, keep us from being disappointed when we do die.

San Antonio experiences housing glut

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Move in today, get a microwave tomorrow — or a ceiling fan, or $200 cash or bonds worth $20,000 in 30 years.

These are just a few of the incentives apartment complexes are offering to boost their occupancy rates, which were averaging a low 80 percent in San Antonio last month.

There is a housing glut in San Antonio, and it's affecting not only the rental market but also the real estate business. Despite the surplus, new houses and apartments are still going up at a fast clip.

The oversupply in the nation's 10th largest city is most evident among apartments, where there are an estimated 95,000 rental units on line.

Ken Szymanski, spokesman for the San Antonio Apartment Association, says a variety of factors are contributing to the abundance of residences.

"It's the Sunbelt phenomenon," he said. "The anticipation of growth on the part of investors and developers on the national level.

"They feel like it's a good idea to have the product on line, in the ground, when the growth occurs," Szymanski said.

San Antonio already is growing. The most recent city population figures are 850,000, with projections of 30 percent growth this decade.

The city generates eight out of 10 new jobs through internal growth, said Gen. William McBride, president of the Greater San Antonio Chamber of Commerce.

The Alamo City is host to five major military bases, a thriving tourist industry and is attracting high-tech industrial development.

Another reason for the apartment glut is the recent availability of financing, officials say.

Laserphoto

Apartments abound in San Antonio where occupancy rates are as low as 80 percent.

The Bexar County Housing Finance Corp., a joint city-county operation, was set up to provide low interest money for apartment development.

Szymanski said the stated purpose of the corporation was to provide low-and moderate-income housing, but many multi-family dwellings for people in middle and upper incomes came out ahead as well.

"In the last two and a half years, 40 percent of apartment housing starts have been financed by this corporation," he said.

Apartments also have proven to be solid investments for savings and loans and syndicates. Tax laws allowing bigger depreciation breaks have fueled the construction fire.

"Some people say San Antonio has a two-year supply of apartments," Szymanski said.

At 80 percent occupancy, developers could be losing money on apartment complexes, said Bill Melson, senior vice president of Hendry Investments.

But since many projects are funded totally by financial institutions, developers are staying afloat through deferred interest payments tacked onto the later years of a loan.

Meanwhile, in the real estate business, there are more than 9,000 houses on the market in San Antonio. The average turnover time is 80 to 90 days, about a month longer than normal, officials said.

The figures do "reflect that it's slow," said William Chapman, president of the San Antonio Board of Realtors.

"It has to be directly related to interest rates," Chapman said of the sluggish turnover.

"How can you convince people who can rent a three-bedroom, two-bath apartment for $400 to go out and buy a house for $850 a month?" he asked.

At the current mortgage interest rate of 13.5 percent, many families and individuals can't qualify for a loan.

The picture is even grimmer in the condominium market, which Chapman says was "literally destroyed" in early 1983 when the Mexican peso collapsed.

Mexicans, who had been thriving under a booming economy, had purchased hundreds of condominiums in San Antonio for investment purposes.

When the peso was devalued, those condos were dumped onto the market. Now the average condominium takes 112 days to sell.

"The building of new condos and conversions have all but stopped," Chapman said. But he predicted the condominium market would line out in another year.

Despite the slowness of the market, the number of homes for sale has remained steady in the past couple of years.

There were 2,455 new listings in July, compared to 2,481 in July 1983. However, sales in July this year totaled 836, down 24 percent from last year's July figure of 1,100.

INDIGENT

Lack of funds is cited as one reason institutions are trying to duck helping those who can't afford to pay for medical care. Many of those prospective patients are from other counties, and therefore, are not the responsibility of the county in which they try to receive medical attention, some say.

"THERE IS A problem with migration for services," Sperry agreed. "Collecting payment gets to be very difficult and counties are limited in what they can do."

According to the Texas Hospital Directory, a 1983 publication put out by the Texas Department of Health Hospital Licensing Division, 36 counties in the state do not have a hospital while 11 of those counties also lack physicians.

"There is a problem with access to primary care services despite the production of 1,000 doctors a year in the state," Sperry said. "We have ended up with a system that has really perverse incentives (because only those who desperately need health care can receive it) and I think we can do better."

Recommendations include:

— Implementing a prenatal plan which would reduce the risk of prenatal deaths and disabilities. The program most likely would be monitored by the Texas Department of Health. The direct costs would be offset by the reduction in longer term costs of caring for infants born disabled because of inadequate care.

— EXPANDING Medicaid with the goal of including those below the 50 percent poverty index by 1989. They would include, among others, pregnant women with income below the AFDC (Aid to Families with Dependent Children) eligibility and without other eligible children. These women would become eligible as soon as their baby was born under present guidelines but by covering the prenatal care for the women before the baby is born, complications and eventual costs would be reduced.

— Allowing those receiving indigent health care to contribute as much as possible to the costs. Copayments would reduce unnecessary utilization of health services and help maintain the patients' dignity and self-esteem, the task force contends.

— Modifying the certificate of need applications, which are submitted to the Texas Health Facilities Commission for expansions and new services costing above a set amount, to require a minimum level of indigent care.

— Exempting county funds used for state-mandated indigent health care from tax rollback election requirements.

The task force also suggests the federal Medicaid funding target system, "which unfairly discriminates against Texas because of the Texas eligibility and benefit levels," should be opposed and prenatal and follow-up care, primary care and preventative health education programs should be expanded.

Mondale's son, Doggett will speak on Labor Day

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — William Mondale, son of Democratic presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale, will speak Monday in Odessa at the 27th Annual Labor Day Celebration of the Permian Basin area of West Texas, sponsored by the Odessa Central Labor Union.

Democratic U.S. Senate candidate State Sen. Lloyd Doggett, President of the Texas AFL-CIO Harry Hubbard and former State Democratic Chairman Calvin Guest also are scheduled to speak at the event, which will begin at 11 a.m. at Floyd Gwin Park, located at West 10th and West County Road.

Rep. Geraldine Ferraro has been invited to attend, as have other local policitians, said D.L. Willis, president of the Odessa Central Labor Union, AFL-CIO.

Mondale, 22, is a student at Brown University in Providence, R.I., where he is majoring in American history. He has taken a leave of absence from the university to campaign for his father.

This will be the second trip to the Permian Basin area for Mondale. He visited Big Spring and Midland during the May primary.

The celebration also will include a barbecue, fiddler's contest and games for the kids. There is no charge.

In the event of bad weather, the celebration will move into the park auditorium.

Attorneys publicly disagree on settlement

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Attorneys in a $50 million lawsuit against General Motors have become more vocal about a settlement they reached for Patrick Davis, who was paralyzed in an accident involving a Trans Am auto.

But they can't agree in public on the actual amount of the out-of-court settlement, which was reached Monday.

Davis, 22, had sued GM after he was paralyzed in a 1980 accident in a Pontiac Trans Am. He was a passenger in a car traveling 90 mph when it hit a telephone pole and claimed the driver was trying to imitate racy televison commercials aired by GM.

Monday, attorneys refused to disclose the terms of the settlement. But Davis' attorney Sandy McMath said his client would get housing, transportation and rehabilitation, a package that could cost $300,000 a year according to testimony.

However, Tuesday, GM attorney Thom Rumberger said Davis could receive less than $90,000 once attorney fees and other costs are subtracted from the settlement.

His remarks prompted a statement Wednesday by another Davis attorney Pat Maloney Sr., who said his client "will receive 10 times the sum suggested by Rumberger."

Davis had claimed in his suit that the Trans Am with a T-top roof was unsafe and that GM promoted it as a stunt vehicle.

He has been under nursing home care since his injury.

Rumberger, who earlier had refused comment on the terms of the settlement, flew to San Antonio from his home in Orlando, Fla., to tell reporters Davis would collect less than a half percent of the original damage claim of $50 million.

"I frankly think that's kind of disgusting," he said of Davis' share of the settlement.

McMath, a Little Rock, Ark., attorney, had settled two similar cases in Arkansas out of court.

Midland worker electrocuted

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A Midland man was accidentally electrocuted Wednesday while installing ceiling lights at an Odessa dance studio.

Roy Joseph Ybarra, 24, of 2404 W. Holloway, was in the crawl space between the ceiling panels and the roof at Judy Gorlin's Dance Studio, 815 Royalty, when he was accidentally electrocuted at 9:52 p.m., according to police.

His fellow workers heard him screaming and cut off the main breaker, but paramedics were unable to revive him. Ybarra was taken to Odessa Medical Center Hospital, where he was pronounced dead at 11:30 p.m. by Justice of the Peace Manuel Valles.

In other Odessa police reports Wednesday, five men were arrested on narcotics charges at 1900 E. 14th St. by police who obtained a search warrant after receiving a tip through the Crime Stoppers program.

Three were arrested for possession of methamphetamine, one for possession of codeine and one for marijuana. Their names were withheld pending the filing of formal charges, police said.

DPS

"If more drivers would simply stay sober, drive within the speed limits and wear seat belts, fatalities would decline still further."

DPS statistics for the year to date reveal a 2 percent decrease in fatalities statewide. Adams said the decrease in total deaths may indicate more people are using seat belts.

"While the decline in fatalities is not as substantial as we'd like to see, we do feel that seat belt use is increasing and may be a factor in this decrease," he said. "It is an obvious lifesaving device that is available in the vast majority of our vehicles."

House heavily damaged in fire

From Staff Reports

A house fire at 1319 E. Chestnut caused heavy damage to a bedroom and contents when it broke out at about 12:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Ten men responded to the blaze at the house owned by Velma Young. The fire was extinguished with 50 gallons of water.

More than $4,500 worth of items were taken from the home of Ray D. Foster, 4310 Nicklaus between Sunday and Wednesday. According to reports, Foster said he'd been out of town and returned to find his front door open. Entry apparently was made by breaking a window.

Among the missing items were a video cassette recorder, turntable and receiver, telephone, shotgun, three necklaces, eight two-piece suits, a camera and assorted old coins. Total loss was placed at $4,661.

Manuel Marmolejo, 309 S. Dallas, told police he returned from work at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday to find assorted men's clothing and two leather belts missing. Entry apparently was gained by cutting a window screen. Total loss was placed at $258.

On Sept. 19, Jane Clancy Debenport will sing light opera accompanied by Midge Anderson from noon to 12:20 p.m. Both are from the Musicians Club. Then, from 12:20 to 1 p.m. the Permian Basin Chapter of the Society for the Preservation of Barber Shop Quartets in America will perform.

On Sept. 26, from noon to 12:20 p.m. Elaine Berman, of the Musicians Club, will sing followed by the United Spiritual Gospel Singers from 12:20 to 12:45 p.m. From 12:45 to 1 p.m. is unscheduled at this time, however, it is likely the Groovie Grannies will be the closing act.

All performances are free.

'Life in Davis Mountains' on exhibit at museum

The exhibit "Life in the Davis Mountains: Recent Works by Wayne Baize" is on display at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., through Nov. 4 in the Stables Gallery.

Baize skillfully portrays the vitality and serenity of the West and the working cowboy.

Born in Stamford in 1943, Baize began private art lessons with Sarah McDonald. When his family moved to Potosi and then Baird, he continued to take lessons from her as well as beginning lessons under other artists. He also began a lasting friendship with Tom Ryan, now of Midland, who encouraged him to continue in a realistic style.

"Drawing was what I'd always liked to do; I just didn't know you could make a living at it," Baize says. "My pencil caught on, then people started wanting color, but they weren't really satisfied with my oils. Drawing with colored pencils was a subtler statement that fit me better."

Baize shows at the Texas Art Gallery in Dallas and Mongerson Gallery in Chicago. The annual shows where his work appears include the Western Heritage Show, Houston, the OS Ranch Art Show, Post, the Governor's Invitational Art Show during Cheyene Frontier Days and the Texas Cowboy Reunion, Stamford. His work has been in shows in St. Louis, Kansas City, New York, Los Angeles and Denver.

Magazines that have used his work on their covers include the Quarter Horse Journal, The Hereford Journal and The Cattleman.

A public reception and autograph party with the artist is scheduled for 1 to 4 p.m. Sept. 30.

Museum hours are Tuesday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 2 to 5 p.m. There is no admission charge.

No recession says government

Economists say the second straight drop in the government's gauge of future economic activity signals a slowing of the economy's earlier brisk growth, but not an imminent recession.

The Commerce Department said its gauge, the Index of Leading Economic Indicators, tumbled 0.8 percent in July, and it revised the June decline to 1.3 percent instead of the 0,9 percent initially estimated.

Meanwhile, the U.S. foreign trade deficit soared to a record monthly high of $14.1 billion in July, surpassing the previous peak of $12.2 billion set in April, the department said in a separate report.

In other economic reports Wednesday:

—Sales of new homes held steady in July at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 630,000 units, according to a joint report from the Commerce Department and the Department of Housing and Urban Development. But sales were 11.5 percent below their February pace following increases in mortgage interest rates.

—The value of contracts for new construction rose 3 percent in July from the previous month, as increased demand for commercial and industrial construction offset a slow housing market, according to the F.W. Dodge division of McGraw-Hill Inc.

—Major U.S. newspapers printed more help-wanted advertising in July than in June, the Conference Board said. The business-sponsored research group said its Help-Wanted Advertising Index, covering 51 newspapers, rose to 138 in July from 134 in June.

The June-July declines in the index of leading indicators marked the first consecutive drops since the depths of the recession 2½ years ago.

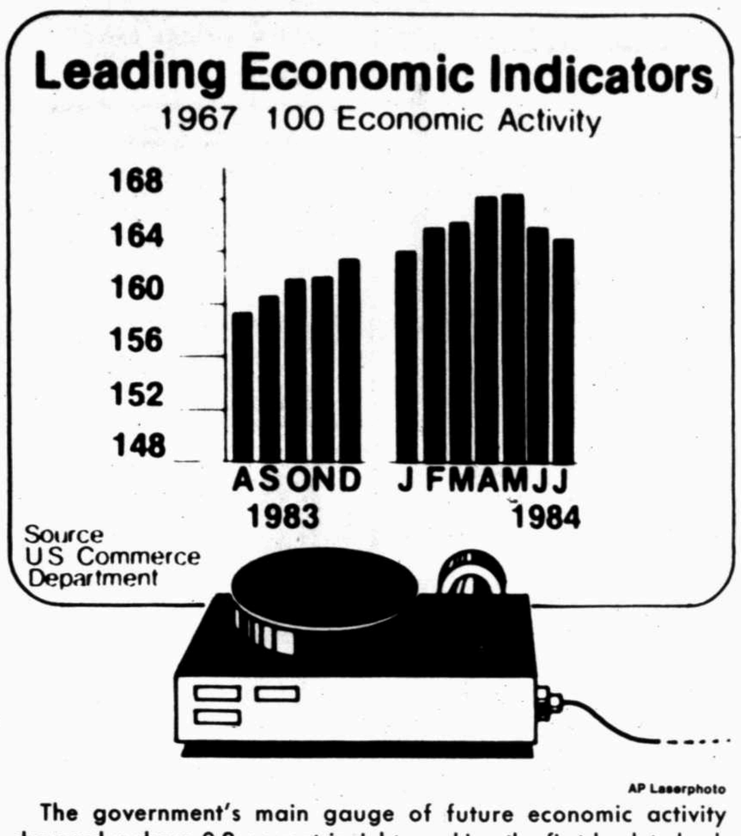
The Reagan administration said the declines were no cause for concern but merely an indication that the economy was slowing to a more sustainable rate of growth. Private economists agreed.

"No one should conclude the economy is fizzling out," said Allen Sinai, chief economist at Shearson Lehman-American Express Inc. "The two months of declines do not suggest a recession, but they do suggest a decided slowing in growth."

Michael Evans, who heads a forecasting firm bearing his name, predicted the slowing of growth in coming months would send interest rates lower and this would help keep the recovery moving along, although at about half the pace turned in during the first half of the year.

The index of leading indicators is calculated from a variety of economic forces, such as building permits and stock prices, that tend to change direction long before the overall economy does.

The record July deficit outpaced the June shortfall of $8.9 billion, and lifted the deficit for the first seven months of 1984 to $73.8 billion — already above the $69.4 billion record set in 1983.



AP Laserphoto

The government's main gauge of future economic activity dropped a sharp 0.8 percent in July, marking the first back-to-back monthly declines since the depths of the recession 2 years ago. The setback for the Index of Leading Economic Indicators followed an even sharper June decline.

ARCO to repurchase part of stock

The Board of Atlantic Richfield Co. has authorized the repurchase of 25 million shares or 10 percent of the company's outstanding common stock, announced William F. Kiescnick, president and chief executive officer.

The acquisition will be financed prinicipally from proceeds of asset sales in the company's metals and chemicals areas and from funds realized from coporate restructuring in recent years.

Kiescnick said the company plans to take a one-time write-down of these assets of $515 million after tax.

He said the company also plans to erovide another $270 million for write-downs in its minerals operations coupled with an increase in reserves against exposures from Alaskan operations for prior years. These will all be charged against third-quarter earnings and represent about 7 percent of the company's net worth.

These actions come from the company's program of restructuring is chemicals, metals and minerals operation through sale or upgrading of assets, said Kieschnick. The planned effort has been completed in ARCO chemicals, and the company is anticipating major exposures in metals and minerals, he said.

"The company is conducting the stock repurchase program," he said, "because management believes the stock to be an excellent value. And, by reducing the number of outstanding shares, the purchase will increase the amount of petroleum reserves per share – in effect, representing an attractive acquisition for the remaining shareholders.

"The purchases may take up to a year, but probably will be completed within six months," Kieschnick said, "and will no affect the company's aggressive oil and gas capital program, nor a previously announced plan to acquire stock for employee benefit plans."

The write-down in the company's metals operations include substantially all of the metals assets, including the proposed sale of aluminum properties to Alcan Aluminum Ltd, now under antitrust review with the Justice Department. Discussions with the department are continuing.

"In concert with the moves already made to strenthen our chemicals operations," Kieschnick said. "These latest actions now permit us to focus more fully on opportunities in our core business."

Union to pay $35 million

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal judge has given final approval to settlement of a class-action lawsuit in which the Teamsters Central States Pension Fund agrees to set aside $35 million for some 25,000 members denied benefits in the past.

The settlement, approved by U.S. District Judge James Moran, also mandates that the fund receive $2 million from 14 fund trustees because of asset mismanagment.

The $2 million is expected to be paid by the insurance carrier for the trustees, although Secretary of Labor Raymond J. Donovan had argued that they should pay personally. Under the settlement, approved Monday, the trustees admit no wrongdoing.

The settlement came after a legal battle that began in 1976, when union member David Dutchak sued the Chicago-based fund for denying benefits to members. The suit later was consolidated with a 1979 class-action suit containing many of the same allegations made by the Labor Department in a 1978 suit.

The suits accused trustees of being imprudent in making investments, not requiring enough money to secure loans from the fund and improperly foreclosing mortgages.

The settlement sets aside $35 million to be distributed to 25,000 of its 500,000 beneficiaries who claimed they were improperly denied benefits since 1955. The money is to be paid out over 25 years.

Merger to include $1 billion assets sale

LOS ANGELES — Kiewit-Murdock Investment Corp. disclosed Wednesday that it expects to sell about $1 billion of the assets of the diversified industrial giant Continental Group Inc. if the proposed $2.75 billion merger between the two companies goes through.

Continental's public shareholders are scheduled to vote Sept. 26 on Kiewit-Murdock's offer of $58.50 per share.

In a recent filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission, Kiewit-Murdock said that there had been no determination of which assets would be sold. The private company is 80 percent owned by Omaha builder Peter Kiewit Sons Inc. and 20 percent by Los Angeles financier David Murdock.

The filing said that proceeds from the sale of assets would be used to help repay money borrowed to finance the merger and to pay preferred dividends.

When Continental, a publicly traded company based in Stamford, Conn., announced its agreement with Kiewit and Murdock last June 29, the buyers reported that they had arranged $2 billion in financing for the cash takeover through a group of banks led by Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York.

They said that they would pay the remaining $750 million.

At the same time, they said that they probably would sell off some Continental assets to reduce part of the debt under a bank line of credit that had 6 1-2 years to run.

Continental, reputedly the world's largest maker of cans and other packaging products, also owns Life Insurance Co. of Virginia, Lawyers Title Co., Casualty Insurance Co. and Western Employers Casualty Insurance Co.

According to its annual report, it also owns 1.45 million acres of timberland in the South and has proven oil reserves of 10 million barrels and 333 billion cubic feet of natural gas. It also has natural gas and carbon dioxide transmission facilities.

Four nuclear reactors scrapped

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Four unfinished nuclear reactors in Tennessee and Mississippi were scrapped by the Tennessee Valley Authority because rising costs made them "too expensive an option," says an official of the giant federal utility.

The utility's board voted Wednesday to halt work permanently on two reactors at Hartsville, near Nashville, and two at the Yellow Creek Nuclear Plant near Corinth, Miss.

TVA estimates the Hartsville plant would cost $6.5 billion to finish while the Yellow Creek plant's price tag would have been $10 billion.

"The increase in costs to complete and operate the plants has made them too expensive an option," said Hugh Parris, TVA manager of power. "The cost of Yellow Creek alone would be more than we've invested in the entire power system."

The board also voted in favor of increasing electricity rates four-tenths of 1 percent, or about 19 cents a month on an average residential bill, beginning Oct. 1.

TVA hasn't had a major rate increase since 1981. But it will have to raise rates from 2 percent to 4 percent over the next 11 years to pay for nuclear power plants it started and then scrapped, Parris said at a July 16 board meeting.

The cost of the four reactors in Tennessee and Mississippi, plus four others canceled in 1982, totals about $4.1 billion, according to TVA officials. Ratepayers have already absorbed about $1.4 billion, and the remaining $2.73 billion will be spread out over the 11-year period.

TVA once projected a need for 17 nuclear reactors to provide electricity in its seven-state service area.

But declines in the demand for power, partially caused by economic recessions which slowed the region's growth, have forced TVA to scale back its nuclear program to two operating nuclear power plants and two more due on line in the 1990s.

"TVA certainly wasn't alone in making those miscalculations," said John B. Waters, who was sworn in as TVA's newest director earlier this month.

Waters said it would be destructive to try to blame anyone for the error. He said it was "a blessing" the region didn't need the Hartsville and Yellow Creek reactors because "we can't afford them."

Union chief urges contract by fall

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — The head of the United Auto Workers says a decision to target both General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. for possible strikes means the companies should "start all over" and make better contract proposals in time to avert a walkout.

UAW President Owen Bieber said Wednesday that GM and Ford should propose new contract terms "with haste because there's only 16 days left" to avoid a strike when the current contract expires Sept. 14.

Bieber's comments at a meeting of nationwide union locals came one day after GM and Ford offered nearly 500,000 domestic auto workers no increase in basic wages and no guarantee that more jobs won't be lost to foreign countries or non-union shops. GM offered a lump-sum payment to workers, while Ford offered a profit-sharing plan.

Ford's top negotiator said the decision to name GM and Ford as dual strike targets complicates the labor negotiations. GM issued a noncommittal statement calling the UAW move an "opportunity."

The union had made job security its No.1 issue in this year's contract talks, which a GM spokesman said were to resume today.

UAW bylaws provide for a strong presidency and in keeping with that, the 25-member executive board granted Bieber the right to pick one of the two companies later as sole strike target.

Wednesday's vote by the board initiated a move the UAW has tried only once before since pattern bargaining began nearly 30 years ago. Under pattern bargaining, a union agreement with one company sets the standard for the rest of the industry.

"We came to that conclusion based on the fact that the proposals made to our people by the companies really don't represent any proposal," Bieber said.

Bieber called on GM and Ford, which are making record profits, to "start all over" and offer new proposals that do not "represent a lack of fairness."

Ford chief negotiator Peter Pestillo said the move could rob the talks of the intensity that occurs when one company is the target and the other waits its turn.

"We are suffering the passage of time," Pestillo said.

Pestillo said Ford never expected its offer to be final, but neither was the company abandoning it. "We are not prepared to report its death," he said.

Beiber sought to squelch speculation that union leaders could not make up their minds this year, saying a double target was the UAW's best chance to speed up the talks.

Orson Welles won't sell state 'before it's time'

Welles

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — The rotund image of Orson Welles has filled television screens for years touting the man who would "sell no wine before it's time." Now the maker of the movie classic "Citizen Kane" is putting his weight behind the state of Oregon.

Bill Taylor, Oregon's travel director, says the entertainer is taking part in the state's new radio and newspaper campaign aimed at bringing more tourists to Oregon during the fall months.

Welles' 60-second radio spot is being broadcast in 13 West Coast cities in northern California, Washington, Idaho and British Columbia.

Welles' opening line in the radio commercial is: "As you might expect, we sell no state before it's time. That time is now for the full pleasure you richly deserve — in Oregon."

NEW YORK (AP) — French designer Hubert de Givenchy will be draping his creations on a line of dolls starting next year. But this isn't Ken and Barbie we're talking about. These china porcelain and vinyl creations will sell for up to $2,500.

Givenchy has signed a three-year agreement with World Doll Inc. to produce a line that will reflect his idea of "the ultimate woman," Jessie Josell, a spokeswoman for the doll company, said Wednesday. The dolls will be created by Givenchy and will wear clothes designed by him.

They will range in price from $100 for an 18-inch vinyl doll and a vinyl baby doll to a 16-inch china porcelain doll that will sell for $2,500, Ms. Josell said. The latter will be a limited 500-piece collection.

The dolls will be available in stores beginning in February.

BOSTON (AP) — Ellen DeGeneres has had to live up to the title of "America's Funniest Person" for the last year, but her reign as the queen of comedy is about to end with her crown possibly passing to the likes of Ryan Kiley or a guy billed only as Tony V.

Kiley and Tony V were among 35 aspiring comics who took the stage Wednesday to strut their stuff as part of Showtime's search for new talent. The winner, to be chosen in October, will get to perform on the cable television channel next year.

About 100 spectators laughed, groaned and sometimes just stared as the comics took their best shots.

The young and balding Kiley tickled the crowd's funny bone when he said he used a shampoo called, "Gee, your head smells terrific."

The man who calls himself "just Tony V" is a very pudgy fellow who swears he weighs only 160 pounds because he's hollow.

First to take the stage was Ms. DeGeneres, who displayed the form that won her last year's contest.

"People are stupid," she told the crowd.

"Ever notice when you're with someone and they have something that tastes bad, they ask you to taste it?" she asked. "And we do."

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — New Jersey-bred Frank Sinatra says this isn't his kind of town anymore, blaming a state casino commissioner for insults that prompted the entertainer to cancel his appearances at a gaming hall.

On Wednesday, Sinatra's attorney, Milton Rudin, announced that the entertainer "has decided he will not perform in a state where appointed officials feel the compulsion to use him as 'a punching bag.'"

Rudin was referring to casino commissioner Joel Jacobson's reference to Sinatra as "an obnoxious bully" in connection with a blackjack game in which cards were dealt illegally to the entertainer and Dean Martin. Casino workers said they were intimidated by Sinatra.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Pierre Gemayel, a dominant figure in Lebanese history from independence in 1943 through the long civil war, died Wednesday after he suffered a heart attack. He was 78.

As founder and head of the Phalange Party, Gemayel led a right-wing Christian political organization in the civil war. Gemayel was minister of public health and communications in the present government and had been a member of Parliament since 1960.

Film's makers decide to forego MPAA rating

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When is an X-rated film not an X-rated film? When it's not rated at all, as is the case with "Bolero," an erotic adventure from Bo and John Derek that opens Friday in 1,022 U.S. and Canadian theaters.

"Bolero," described in radio ads as showing more of Ms. Derek than Playboy magazine did, will not have a rating from the Motion Picture Association of America Classification & Ratings Board.

Cannon Films, which produced "Bolero," decided not to seek the rating because of unofficial word that the film would earn an X — a classification that makes it difficult to book a film into first-run theaters and to promote it through ordinary channels.

Cannon is not an MPAA signatory and therefore has no obligation to seek a rating.

"There are exhibitors and there are radio and television stations that have a firm policy against advertising X-rated films," said Micky Hyman, Cannon's chief operating officer. "We wanted to ensure the public has an opportunity to see the movie, enjoy it and make their own decisions on it."

"The film is a love story, and there's love-making in the film," he added. "But we don't think it's a dirty movie or a pornographic movie."

Cannon, which is also distributing "Bolero" through its newly formed Cannon Releasing Corp., already has begun a massive print and broadcast advertising campaign for the $7 million, 110-minute film.

"Bolero" was written and directed by Derek, and produced by Ms. Derek, who stars as an adventure-seeking 1920s heiress.

The film originally was to have been distributed by MGM-UA, which had a distribution deal with Cannon until a few months ago. But even before that arrangement ended, MGM-UA had said it would not release the film because of the expected X-rating.

Newspaper ads billing the film as "An Adventure in Ecstasy" show Ms. Derek in a Lady Godiva-esque pose on a horse, tresses tumbling over her chest, superimposed alongside a dreamy close-up of her face.

Where the rating might ordinarily appear, the ads bear the small boxed warning that "Due to the adult nature of this motion picture, no one under 17 will be admitted" — the same restriction that applies to films rated X by the MPAA.

"We didn't want to mislead the public," Hyman said. "There is erotic love-making in the film. We're not trying to hide that."

Among the publications that have run the ads are the Los Angeles Times and the New York Times.

New York Times spokesman Leonard Harris said the newspaper places severe size and content restrictions on advertising for most X-rated films. When a film is unrated, the newspaper's Advertising Acceptability Department reviews the ad to make sure it contains nothing objectionable.

However, Harris said large-format ads for an unrated film will be dropped if the newspaper's film critics determine the film to be purely pornographic.

"If we discover we have made a mistake in judgment we will apologize to our readers and drop the ad," he said.

Hyman acknowledged that the publicity surrounding the film hasn't hurt its commercial prospects, but also predicted at least partial critical success.

"I'm predicting that at least one critic in the U.S. will say this is the movie of the year," he said, adding quickly: "I'm not saying which one."

"Bolero" has not yet been reviewed because Cannon decided not to hold press screenings.

Will political career take off?

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — The governor's political career may be taking off, at least if the New Hampshire Executive Council has anything to say about it.

The five-member elected panel which oversees the operations of the state government unanimously passed a light-hearted resolution Wednesday nominating Gov. John Sununu for a ride aboard the space shuttle.

President Reagan has ordered that a nationwide search be made for a a teacher who will fly as the first "citizen passenger" on a future shuttle mission.

Movies hit, miss with department

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Some moviemakers bomb when they ask the Defense Department for help in putting together films with military themes.

The Pentagon, marching to its own drummer, doesn't always see eye-to-eye with Hollywood when it comes to questions of how things like war and the country's armed forces should be portrayed on the screen.

The new television series "Call to Glory" was a hit with viewers and with the department's staff members who oversee requests from movie producers for aid.

A liaison office was set up to facilitate filming test pilots at Edwards Air Force Base, north of Los Angeles, for scenes in the ABC fall series.

And Davis said his office has been "suggesting story ideas, providing research and making suggestions on scripts which are sent over to us."

On the other hand, "An Officer and a Gentleman" got the cold shoulder when its producers asked for a base at which to film scenes for the Academy Award-winning film.

Davis said about 100 projects, including both film and television, pass through his office each year.

"When we receive a script, I take a look at it to see if it would be in the best interests of the Air Force to cooperate," Davis said. After reading a script, he makes a recommendation and then sends the script to the Department of the Air Force and to Baruch's office.

The military declined to cooperate with "The Day After" — which showed the aftermath of a Soviet-U.S. nuclear exchange — because it didn't show the Soviets striking first, Baruch said.

It also turned down "Private Benjamin" mostly because of a subplot in which a general becomes lecherously fixated on a soldier played by Goldie Hawn. "That was unacceptable," Baruch said.

"What's so wonderful about a 4-4 fit?" asks a reader from Maryland. "Surely its better to have five trumps." Not always, as this hand testifies.

It is from a duplicate pairs tournament. In duplicate bridge, minor suits have become second-class citizens. Players ignore the minors in favor of higher-scoring no trump and major suit contracts. While that is a sound tactic at the game level and below, when it comes to slams safety should be the paramount concern.

In the tournament in question, almost every pair in the field bid to a slam in the major suit. Some lingered in six spades, others bid the grand slam. All found that, no matter what the lead, they could make only 11 tricks—there was no way to avoid the loss of two club tricks.

Only one pair managed to get to the minor suit slam. Their auction is shown above. Note that after East made a lead-directing double of four clubs, South did not feel constrained to bid on a minimum balanced hand. Only after the double fit had been uncovered did South cooperate in the search for slam with a heart cue-bid. North wasted no more time. He launched into Blackwood and, when South showed three aces, he bid the grand slam in diamonds.

West dutifully led a club, but 13 tricks did not prove to be much of a problem. Declarer won the ace of clubs, cashed the ace of hearts and ruffed a heart high in dummy. Declarer returned to hand with a trump and ruffed another heart high. Now trumps were drawn, and five spade tricks brought declarer's total to 13—five spades, one heart, four diamonds, one club and two ruffs.

Pac-Man gobbles his way into new products

By LINDA ANDERSON

I can remember a lot of fads coming and going — hula hoops, love beads and bell bottoms, surfing, skateboarding — but one recent fad has even affected the supermarket.

Pac-Man fever has struck the food products industry. Some manufacturers have begun marketing grocery items with Pac-Man themes.

We tested two of these new products — Pac-Man Pasta and Pac-Man cereal — for price, taste and how (or if) they differ from similar products without the Pac-Man name. Taste testers included a small child, adults and teenagers.

Chef Boy-ar-Dee has recently introduced "Pac-Man Pasta," which is canned Pac-Man-shaped pasta in a tomato sauce (also available with meatballs). A regular-sized (15 oz.) can without meatballs cost 54 cents. (All prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

According to label information, one 7.5-oz., 170-calorie serving contains 8 percent of the protein, 15 percent of the thiamin, the riboflavin and the niacin, and 10 percent of the iron in the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance of these nutrients, as well as smaller percentages of the USRDA of vitamin A, vitamin C and calcium.

An average serving also contains, according to the label, 5 grams of protein, 35 grams of carbohydrates and 1 gram of fat, which means Pac-Man pasta a low-fat source of carbohydrates.

The 3-year-old tester loved the product. She ate two servings at one sitting and then requested another serving for a before-bed snack.

Two teenagers said the product was similar to Spaghetti-Os, another pasta-in-a-can product (from Franco-American) although one said the texture was a little different and tasted like it had more cheese than Spaghetti-Os. Another teen said Pac-Man pasta was OK, but she had never tasted Spaghetti-Os.

The adult female said the flavor of Pac-Man pasta was identical to that of Spaghetti-Os, but the adult male said the product was "absolutely horrible" and he never wanted to taste it again.

Pac-Man cereal, manufactured by General Mills, is a sugar-coated, puffed corn cereal complete with little marshmallows in the form of Pac-Man and four "ghosts."

A 13-oz. box of Pac-Man cost $1.99 and a 13-oz. box of Kix, another puffed corn cereal but without sugar coating and marshmallows, cost $1.89. (I know, that only amounts to about 15-cents per one-ounce serving, but to me that seems like a lot to pay for dry cereal.)

According to label information, a regular serving of Pac-Man cereal contains 25 percent of several vitamins and nutrients, including vitamin A, vitamin C, thiamine, riboflavin, niacin, iron, vitamin B6 and vitamin B12.

The resident expert in dry cereal at our house is the 3-year-old tester. She loved the Pac-Man cereal, although she seemed more interested in the marshmallows than the corn puffs. In fact she always made sure each serving she ate had several of each of the five kinds of marshmallows. And she usually left most of the puffs.

The teenage tester said the cereal was "okay," and the adult tester could find little difference in Pac-Man cereal and any other sugar-coated puffed corn cereal — except maybe the shape of the marshmallows.

Both these products have a certain amount of nutrients and can be useful to parents whose children are Pac-Man fans and fussy eaters. However, both products contain significant amounts of sugar, which some people want to — or must — avoid.

But we couldn't find anything out of the ordinary with either of these products to cause them to become staples in our pantry.

I guess we just don't appreciate the finer points of video games.

Pet owners flock to exotic birds

Copley News Service

Move over, Fido and Tabby. You're being replaced in the hearts of pet owners by exotic feathered friends, according to statistics gathered by both bird fanciers and pet store retailers.

Sales records since 1980 show that's the way the cracker is crumbling. A survey taken several years under the wing of the American Federation of Aviculture — a national association of bird breeders — indicated that more pet birds were sold than dogs and cats combined. And the numbers have been flying higher and higher ever since.

These days, most every pet store has added a large section devoted to exotic birds, something that was a rarity through the 1970s.

The parakeet is still the first choice of many who select a feathered friend over the traditional hairy, four-legged variety. Parakeets have a reputation for being both entertaining and inexpensive.

But it's the dramatic increase in the sales of cockateels, cockatoos, macaws and parrots — some costing thousands of dollars — that has caused many pet store owners to put out the cash to get in on the action.

The South American toco toucan sells for $550 to $695; the blue crown Amazon for around $700, and the green-winged macaw for $900 to $1,000. Still not impressed? A Hyacinth macaw from Brazil brings $3,000 to $4,000.

But not all multicolored birds cost a fortune.

The cockateel, a gray Australian bird about twice the size of a parakeet, is now the second most popular bird in the United States. Cockateel prices range from $29.95 to $49.95 in most pet stores. Restrictions forbid the exportation of this bird from its native land, but many Americans are successfully breeding cockateels here, where they're fairly abundant.

Big price tags haven't taken a peck into big business, though.

Cockatoos, which are also native to Australia and on the banned exportation list, are few and far between. Find one and its price will no doubt flutter into the $3,000 to $4,000 range.

The rose-breasted Australian cockatoo in Raymond Busby's "Animal House" hasn't found a home in the two or three months since it has taken up residence in the San Diego pet store. Busby bought it from a private owner and says he has become almost too attached to the 8-year-old bird to let it go even if someone were to come up with the requested $3,500.

"I let it (Busby refuses to give the bird a name and become even more attached) out of the cage most of the day and it has become so much a part of the surroundings that I can't imagine coming to work and not having it here," he said.

"So what's the point of having a bird as a pet?" asks a stranger who has wandered into the store. "A bird sits in a cage and sings or talks when it wants to and messes up newspaper placed at the bottom of the cage. What kind of pet is a bird?"

"You don't have to be around birds very long to know the answer to that one," crows Busby. "A bird can relate to you as much as a dog, and a bird can be taught to talk, too. Birds have more personality than almost any other pet.

"Birds need to be touched, cuddled and loved, especially this one (he's holding his favorite cockatoo). With a few lessons, you'd be surprised at what you can teach a bird to do ... and then there's all that love and loyalty."

Bozo, a blue-and-gold year-old macaw, is another favorite. This bird comes with a $900 price tag "and a lot of personality."

Busby: "Bozo is real shy, but he wants the attention. He needs to be around people and is very loyal.

DEAR ABBY

Teen learns painful lesson

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm enclosing one of your articles. In it is a terrific lesson for every young person. Please run it again.

It is needed more today that it was when I clipped it from your column in 1970. — YOUR FAN IN STEUBENVILLE, OHIO

DEAR FAN: I agree, and here it is:

DEAR ABBY: I am 18 and in a pack of trouble. I was arrested for burglary and other charges.

This was not my first time, so I am locked up in Cambridge, Minn., awaiting trial. I would like to express some of the things I have learned in the 121 days I have been here.

One is that you should listen to your parents, as they will never steer you wrong. I never got along too good with my dad.

Every time he tried to talk to me we got into a heated argument, but now I realize if I had listened to him, I wouldn't be here.

I would also like to tell kids, don't quit school to go out and make money. I did, and look where I ended up.

Also, there are no shortcuts. A guy needs all the education he can get. And another thing. Don't blame your mistakes on other people.

My friends showed me how to break the law, but I am the one who now must take full responsibility for my own actions. I will probably get sent up to St. Cloud's, but thanks, Abby, for letting me say this.

Also, I want to thank Sheriff Erickson. He is a swell guy. He let me use his typewriter to write to you. Sincerely, "THE CAMBRIDGE BUM"

DEAR SIR: You're young yet, so don't go calling yourself a "bum." You can pay your debt and still amount to something if you really want to.

I talked to Sheriff Erickson, and he told me you had already been sent to St. Cloud. He said he certainly hoped you would straighten yourself out because you had a lot of good in you, in addition to being exceptionally smart. I believe him.

I wish you luck.

DEAR ABBY: Is it possible for a woman who has had her tubes tied two years ago to get pregnant by a man who said he had a vasectomy? — NEEDS TO KNOW

DEAR NEEDS: If the tubes were not properly tied and the vasectomy was not properly performed, it's possible, though statistically unlikely.

More often than not, the woman is victimized by a man who claims to have been vasectomized but wasn't.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Scientists report goldfish happier in schools

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — If your Cleo seems nervous, it could be because she is all alone in the bowl. Scientists in Wales studying feral goldfish — the descendants of pets dumped into streams by fickle owners — have found that goldfish are naturally gregarious, and that their innate social tendencies have persisted through centuries of life in aquariums and backyard ponds.

For goldfish in the wild, reports Anne Magurran in New Scientist, the main advantage of togetherness is that it eases the task of finding food. The larger the group, the greater the chances that one member will spot a patch of edible matter on the river bottom.

Numbers also seem to provide a certain safety. As a result goldfish in groups are more relaxed than loners. They do less darting and turning, and they spend less time hiding in weedbeds and more time foraging.

Communal feeding does have its drawbacks. The competition for sighted food can be fierce, and big congregations of fish tend to attract the attention of herons and other menaces.

According to Dr. Magurran, the optimal group size that balances the benefits and costs of sociality varies with environmental circumstances, but is always higher than one. Even for the long-domesticated goldfish, solitary life in a bowl is abnormal.

Turner makes free station offer

ATLANTA (AP) — A cable television music video station will be offered free for five years to cable operators who commit themselves by the end of the year to carry the service, the Turner Broadcasting System Inc. announced.

The Los Angeles-based Music Video Network aimed at a "wide-ranging audience" will kick off 24-hour-a-day broadcasting on Oct. 26, TBS chairman and president Ted Turner said Wednesday.

In apparent anticipation of TBS' plans, MTV Networks Inc. announced last week that it will begin a second channel Jan. 1 featuring "middle-of-the-road" music aimed at viewers older than 25.

Callers want to get shot at lottery

CHICAGO (AP) — Callers from as far away as Hawaii have besieged lottery officials in Illinois asking how they can get a shot at the North American record $32 million grand prize in this week's game.

This disappointing news is that you have to buy your ticket in person, Barbara Reed, administrative assistant for the Illinois Lottery, said Wednesday.

The jackpot for Saturday's drawing hit record proportion after three weeks of play produced no winners. The prize promises a single winner who picks the correct six numbers at least $1.6 million annually for 20 years.

Anderson's support raises questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — New questions about federal campaign finance laws have been raised by former Rep. John B. Anderson's endorsement of Democratic presidential nominee Walter F. Mondale.

A Federal Election Commission spokesman said Wednesday it was unclear what financial assistance Anderson's National Unity Party could give Mondale — if any.

Mondale aides said Tuesday they never discussed the possibility of the Democratic nominee getting financial help from Anderson's party.

FEC spokesman Fred Eiland said Anderson's party would be eligible for $5.8 million in federal funds for its presidential candidate — if it nominated a candidate now that Anderson has decided not to run.

That figure is based on the vote Anderson received in the 1980 presidential election, which was about 7 percent of the total cast for all candidates.

Crooks moved fast in department

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — Thieves cleaned out a department store's jewelry department even though police were on the scene just two minutes after the break-in, officials said.

Police who arrived at the J.C. Penney's store Wednesday found the thieves' escape route littered with jewelry they had dropped in their haste. A search of the building turned up no one.

Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro addresses a large crowd during a noon rally along Olive Street in downtown St. Louis Wednesday. Thousands lined the streets in 95 degree heat to greet and cheer Ferraro.

Ferraro tired of allegations about her financial reports

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro says she is tired of allegations being made about her family and campaign finances and, "I want this whole thing to stop."

The Queens congresswoman interrupted her campaign visit to the Tennessee capital to express indignation over a report in The Philadelphia Inquirer suggesting that Michael LaRosa, a man convicted of racketeering, had been responsible for an illegal corporate contribution to her campaign.

"The report in The Philadelphia Inquirer is totally inaccurate and I find it very offensive," Ms. Ferraro said in an interview Wednesday with local television reporters.

The congresswoman made no mention of the article during her stops before enthusiastic crowds at a town meeting in Cleveland and outdoor rallies in sweltering heat and humidity attended by 4,500 people in St. Louis and 1,500 in Nashville.

Ms. Ferraro said that the report will not keep her from pursuing her goal of winning the November election with Democratic presidential nominee Walter F. Mondale. She said she is "in this campaign, to stay ... to win. That type of attack has never gotten anywhere."

"I want this whole thing to stop," Ms. Ferraro said. "I sure hope it's behind us."

Ms. Ferraro said she spent nearly two hours being grilled by the media last week over her family's finances, but that questioning apparently has not brought an end to the matter.

"I expect we'll have story after story ... and quite frankly, the more I respond to them, the more credibilty I give to them and I'm going to stop doing it," she said in the interview.

A statement put out by her campaign said Ms. Ferraro had "nothing to do" with LaRosa's "labor activities."

"The article implies that I might have accepted an illegal corporate contribution from Mr. LaRosa. This is not the case," the statement said.

Federal campaign finance records show LaRosa contributed $500 to Ms. Ferraro's congressional campaign on Sept. 11, 1980, six months before he was indicted for labor racketeering, and $200 four days before he pleaded guilty on April 30, 1982. He served eight months in prison.

In addition to the personal contributions, the Inquirer said a bakery owned by LaRosa gave $500 to Ms. Ferraro's congressional campaign last July 1. It was this contribution the Inquirer said would be illegal if the contributor were a corporation.

Ms. Ferraro said campaign records show a check was received from "G. LaRosa and Son, Flour Corp." on April 25, 1984, and that it was returned immediately "because it was a corporate contribution."

She said the contribution mentioned by the newspaper actually came in a check dated May 6, 1984, on the account of "G. LaRosa and Son, Flour Bakery Supplies."

Ms. Ferraro said the bank told her campaign the check was not issued by a corporation. It is not illegal for a business to make a campaign contribution as long as the business is not incorporated.

Documents filed with the New York County Clerk show there is a corporation and a partnership with similar names. The partnership is named "G. LaRosa & Son" and the corporation is named "G. LaRosa & Son Inc."

In the interview, Ms. Ferraro said: "I've known Mr. LaRosa, he's a businessman in New York, and that's all I'm going to comment on."

"My husband and I have already disclosed more information about our finances than any other candidate for president or vice president in history," the statement said. "This article leaves an impression about my family which is wrong, altogether inaccurate, and offensive."

James M. Naughton, associate managing editor of Inquirer, said late Wednesday the story was accurate and added:

"The question whether the 1984 contribution from G. La Rosa & Son was a corporate contribution will be determined not by the wording on a check but by the source of the funds, according to the Federal Election Commission. This remains to be clarified. And Ms. Ferraro's statement does not address the central question, which is the propriety of accepting any contributions from Michael La Rosa."

Ms. Ferraro was returning to the Northeast today to concentrate on the urban voters she has courted during her three-day campaign swing through six states in the Northeast, South and Midwest.

During her rally stops Wednesday, she charged President Reagan with failing to "level" with the American people.

"Fritz Mondale and I will tell it like it is," she promised. "Ronald Reagan has told the Democrats to keep their mouths shut about the deficits," she said. "With so much at stake, I won't close my mouth until he opens up his secret plans and tells the American people exactly how he's going to bring those deficits down."

South Africa denies Jackson's request

WASHINGTON (AP) — South Africa has denied the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson's application for a visa to visit the white-ruled country, an embassy spokesman said today.

"Much to our regret, a visit to South Africa during 1984 by Rev. Jackson will be inopportune," said Pieter A. Swanepoel, the embassy spokesman.

"Should he, however, wish to apply for a visa at a later date, the application will be considered on merit, taking into account prevailing circumstances," the spokesman said.

Jackson, the black civil rights leader who failed in his effort to capture the Democratic presidential nomination, said when he applied for the visa Aug.7 that he hoped to "facilitate a dialogue" that might lead to changes in the nation.

He visited the country in July 1979 and said he hoped to return this month with a delegation of ministers.

Within the past month, South Africans of Asian descent and those of mixed race have voted on a new constitution that would establish separate parliamentary chambers for the two groups.

Judge to rule on loans

NEW YORK (AP) — A state judge said he would rule today on whether John Zaccaro, husband of vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro, should have borrowed $175,000 from an estate he was managing.

Zaccaro maintained at a hearing a week ago before state Supreme Court Justice Edwin Kassoff that he was "doing the right thing" by borrowing the money for use by his realty firm, P. Zaccaro Co., because "I knew I had the wherewithal to guarantee" the loans.

In response to a question from the judge, Zaccaro said it had "never entered my mind" to seek legal advice on the propriety of the loans, which were repaid with 12 percent interest.

Zaccaro could be reprimanded or removed as the conservator of the estate if Kassoff finds he acted irresponsibly.

Zaccaro was named by Kassoff in 1982 to act as conservator of the estate of Alice Phelan, 84, a nursing home resident who had been declared incompetent to handle her own affairs.

Last October, Zaccaro borrowed $100,000 from the estate, repaying it five months later, and another $75,000 this year, which was also repaid.

Zaccaro's lawyer, Morton Povman, said last week that any attorney would have known the loans were improper, but Zaccaro is not a lawyer and "I don't think that knowledge is known outside the legal field." He also told the court the guidelines Zaccaro ws given when named conservator were "absolutely, completely vague."

The court-appointed referee in the case, Jonathan Weinstein, said the hearing was not a trial of Zaccaro's character and "the only question is with respect to his discretion, whether he should have known ... that self-dealing is prohibited in this case."

Ms. Ferraro, who was a part owner and director of the realty firm, announced before the hearing that she was giving up her interest in the company. The Democratic vice presidential nominee has said she had learned of the loans only recently.

Zaccaro said the loans came from funds which were earning only 10.5 percent interest and he could have borrowed the money at "a half point above the prime rate," which was then 11 percent.
