2 winning tickets

AUSTIN — Stores in Victoria and Yoakum were verified as having each sold winning tickets in Saturday's $3 million Lotto Texas jackpot, state Comptroller John Sharp said Sunday. As of late Sunday afternoon, neither ticket holder had called in to claim their prize of $1.5 million each, he said. Lottery security officials visited the Albertson's Drug and Food in Victoria and Handy Stop Grocery in Yoakum and verified that each did sell a ticket which matched all six Lotto numbers. "It's great," Sharp said. "What's really amazing to me is, if they don't know each other, coming up with the same numbers like that, and it happened just 40 miles apart." Sharp said lottery officials weren't expecting to receive any calls Sunday. "They never call us on Sundays," Sharp said.

Pathologist probe

LUBBOCK — District Attorney Travis Ware says he has ordered a systematic, independent examination of criminal autopsies by former Lubbock County pathologist Ralph R. Erdmann to clarify controversy surrounding Erdmann's work on murder cases. A spokesman for Ware had said earlier the collections of autopsy reports were part of a "routine review" of cases. Ware said the investigation will cover autopsies dating back to 1987, the year Ware took office. "I just decided it's time for the public to know the truth," Ware said./2B

'Boys break down door to NFL trophy case

■ Revellers take to streets in droves after 52-17 victory.

Associated Press

PASADENA, Calif. — The Dallas Cowboys won the National Football League championship Sunday, beating the Buffalo Bills 52-17 in the Super Bowl.

Dallas took the lead in the first quarter and held it throughout the game to win its first NFL title since 1978. It was Buffalo's third straight Super Bowl loss, a league record.

■ Coverage/1C

The game was played at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena. It was originally scheduled to have been played in Tempe, Ariz., but the NFL moved it to protest that state's failure to enact a Martin Luther King holiday. The holiday was finally enacted last fall.

In Dallas, blue and silver-clad revellers took to the streets in droves, honking and screaming with pleasure after the Cowboys' victory.

"We won the bowl ya all" and "Da Boys" were echoed by hundreds of people milling about Dallas' downtown area.

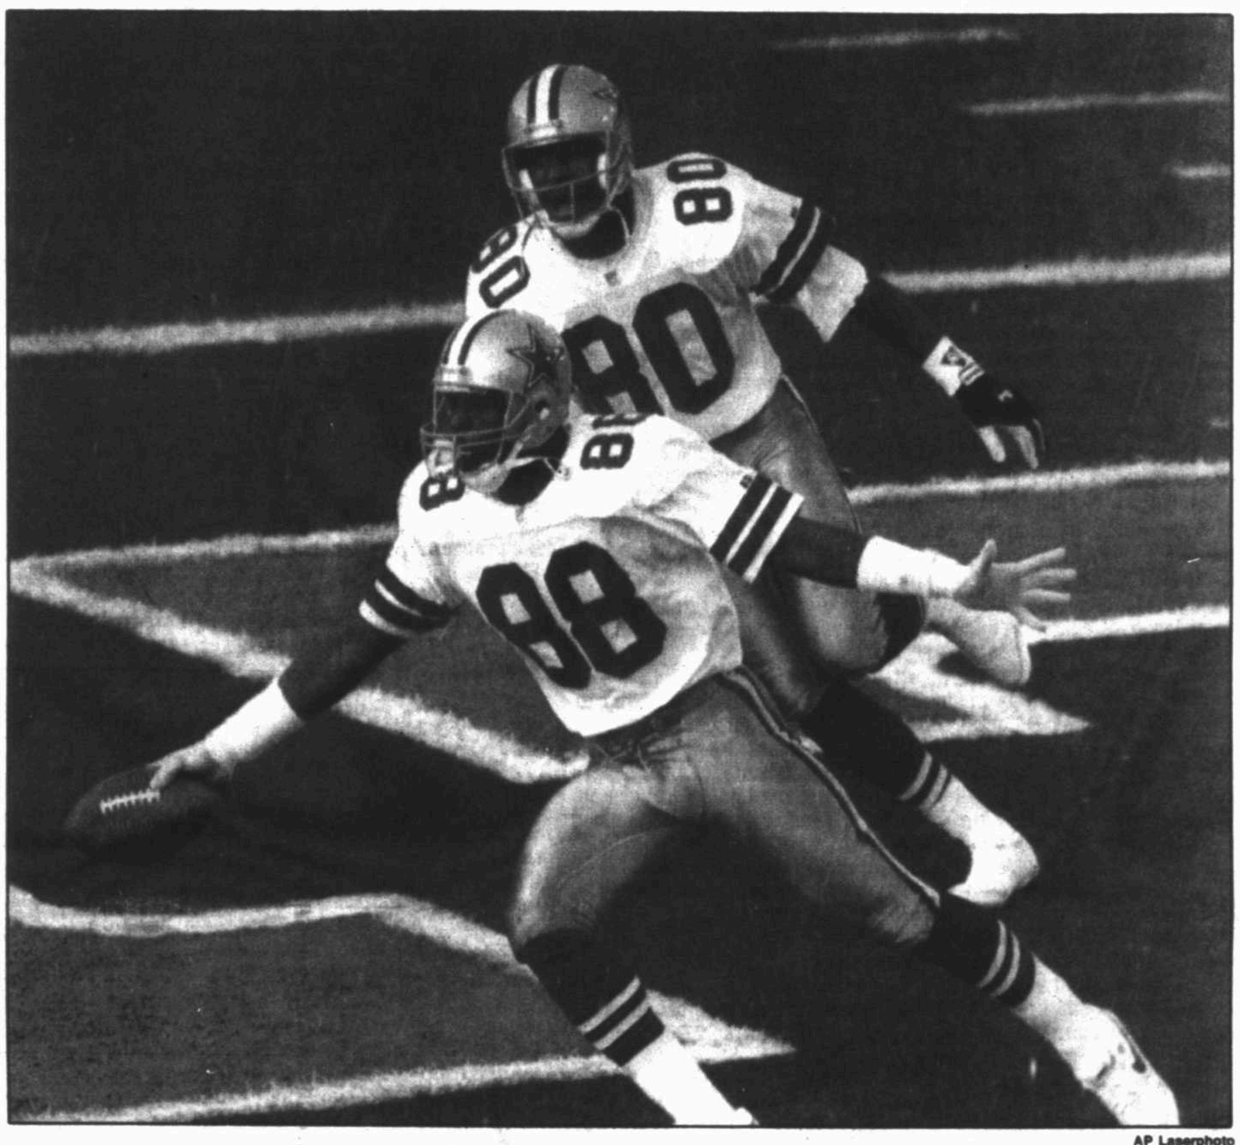

They were accompanied by police on horses, police on bicycles and police on foot as the city worked to keep the partying under control. No violent incidents were reported immediately after the game, police said.

"I'm very proud of the boys. They did not disappoint. They'll be back for more," said Scott Trapp at a bar in the West End area. The season ticket-holder drove two hours from Paris, Texas, to be in Dallas for the game.

Outside the bars, people spilled into the streets, waving flags and carrying balloons.

People in cars hung out of their windows, slapping hands with nearby pedestrians.

Area fans cheer, high-5, 'party down'

By Katherine Poteet

While the boys from Dallas rolled to their first Super Bowl victory in 15 years, the fans geared up and partied on in Midland.

At The Bar, a huge blue-and-white banner hung from the ceiling, proudly backing the Dallas Cowboys as were a majority of partygoers. Only a handful of cheers went up for the Buffalo Bills as the team was introduced before the game.

The crowd cheered and whooped as the Cowboys ran out of the lockerroom, the biggest cheers going to quarterback Troy Aikman and running back Emmitt Smith.

"I'm backing the Cowboys and I predict they will win 24-20," said Greg Boles, who was among a group of five who had positioned themselves directly in front of one of the many television sets.

Sid Lemon also backed the Cowboys, but she predicted a higher score of 38-23.

Troy Woodyard, Allen Dickson and Sandy Dickson, who all described themselves as "diehard Cowboy fans," said they had stuck with the Cowboys through the 1-15 years.

"They're God's team," Woodyard said. "That's the reason there is a hole in their stadium, so He can watch them play."

Mrs. Dickson, who yelled loudly as Aikman ran onto the field, said she had tapes of interviews her father did with Roger Staubach and Tom Landry.

"My dad used to be a DJ in Dallas," she said. "He

Tijuana lures ambitious poor, offers no services

By Tim Golden
N.Y. Times News Service

TIJUANA, Mexico — From the muddy hillside to which his tarpaper shack just barely holds, Ambrosio Castro can look up at a vision of Mexico's economic future. Behind him, U.S. and Japanese assembly plants spread over the landscaped terraces of a busy industrial park, their mirrored windows glinting in the sun.

But for miles below the tiny home that Castro shares with his wife and three children, the view is crowded with the sort of frail lives that were broken and lost when it rained hard in Tijuana earlier in January.

Nearly 10 years after Castro and other squatters began to "invade" the valley seeking a place to live, it bears no sign of sewage, storm drains or running water. Junked cars and old tires are strewn every-

President Clinton

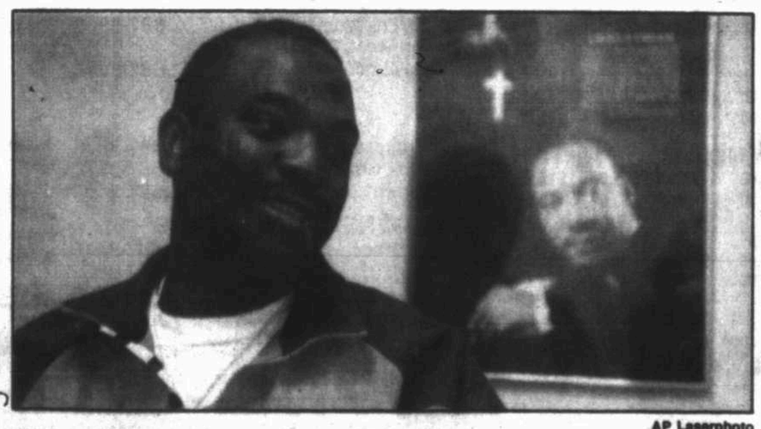

Administration weighs plan to vaccinate U.S. children

By Robert Pear
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration is considering a plan under which the federal government and the states would buy up all childhood vaccines, then distribute them free to public clinics and private doctors' offices to make sure that all children are properly vaccinated.

At present, the government says, only 40 percent to 60 percent of preschool children get the recommended shots, and in some inner-city neighborhoods the number is just 10 percent. Health officials say the low level of immunization is one reason for outbreaks of measles and other diseases in the last few

Durale Bollin discusses his switch from drug dealer to student.

Program targets at-risk blacks

By Darryl Ewing
Associated Press writer

DALLAS — Durale Bollin has always had a good head for business.

As a 16-year-old high school dropout, he made about $1,000 on a good day selling drugs. But when he realized that outstanding debts on the streets often are settled with gunfire, he decided to get out of the business.

"I would stand on the street corner and pray that I wouldn't die doing this," said Bollin, now 19 and working on his general equivalency diploma.

He's changing his life through one of 18 programs nationwide funded by the Rockville, Md.-based Office of Minority Health and designed to help build self-esteem among minority men.

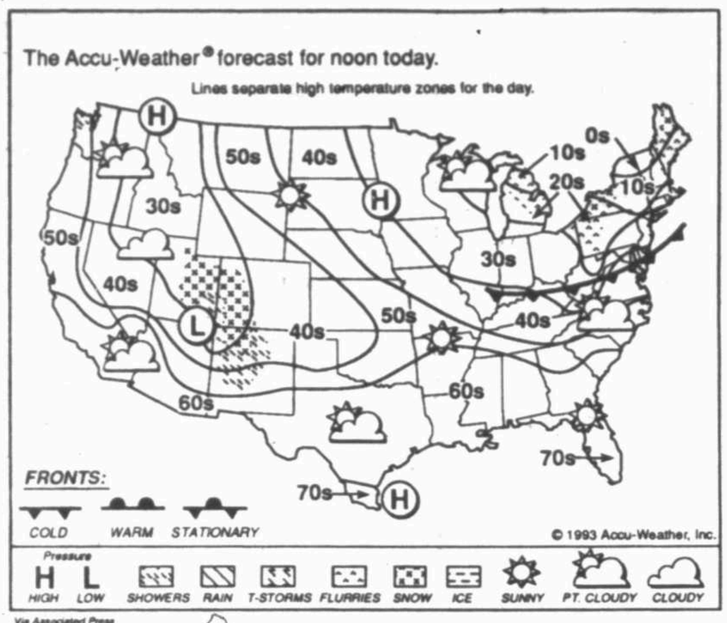

Eric Anderson, director of the Dallas Urban League Institute for Minority Males, which administers the program in Dallas, says Bollin is the "illegal entrepreneur-type" he knows well.

"The brilliant ones are successful in the street," Anderson said. "To run a drug operation, you've got to be smart. You've got to make contacts, you've got to market it, you've

PLAN: Clinton mulls vaccinating all children

The administration says its plan will lead to virtually universal immunization because the cost of vaccines, which has increased greatly in the last decade, would no longer be a barrier.

The idea is supported by leading pediatricians and child-advocacy groups, including the Children's Defense Fund, but it is vehemently opposed by drug companies, which say it will make the manufacture of vaccines unprofitable and may force them to slash spending for research to develop new, more effective vaccines. Moreover, they say it will not necessarily increase rates of immunization, because price is far less a barrier than the lack of education and accessibility for inner-city residents.

"Universal purchase would just kill innovation because the government would control the market," said Thomas L. Copmann, assistant vice president of the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association.

Under a program of universal purchase, vaccines would be treated as a public utility, with a guaranteed market and negotiated prices including profits for manufacturers.

"Under our current system, with limited access to vaccine, immunization has become a privilege," said Dr. Kenneth J. Bart, director of the National Vaccine Program Office at the Department of Health and Human Services. "We believe that every child has a right to be vaccinated, just as everybody has a right to clean water."

Several states, including Connecticut, Massachusetts and Washington, have programs to distribute vaccines to private doctors at no charge. The programs vary, but state officials say they significantly increase immunization rates.

In general, these states buy enough vaccine for all children, using a combination of state money and federal grants. Doctors may charge a small fee, up to $5 or $10, for their services, but may not charge for the vaccine itself. State officials say these programs help them measure immunization levels because doctors must report how the vaccine is used.

Such systems of universal purchase and distribution are used "in nearly every other country," the Children's Defense Fund said in a recent report.

In the United States, vaccines are now distributed through a hodgepodge of arrangements. Federal officials say these arrangements reflect basic problems in the nation's health-care system. About half of employer health plans do not cover childhood vaccines, regarded as a cornerstone of preventive medicine, the officials say.

Right now the federal government pays for one-fourth to one-third of all childhood vaccine bought in the United States, while state and local governments buy one-fourth or less. The federal government estimates that private doctors and other private health-care providers buy half of all vaccine, which is paid for by their patients and their insurance companies.

Under the proposal being developed by the Clinton administration, the federal government and the states would buy the entire supply of vaccine, which would then be administered at no charge to patients. The plan would cost the government $300 million to $500 million a year, in addition to the $175 million it already spends to buy vaccine. Federal officials said they had not decided how to pay for the program.

When the federal government buys vaccine in bulk, it gets a big discount. In 1992, for example, the federal contract price for measles, mumps and rubella vaccine was $15 a dose, while the catalogue price for the same vaccine sold to private doctors is $25.

A 1986 law required the Department of Health and Human Services to develop a national plan to immunize children. The plan was started but languished under the Reagan and Bush administrations; the Clinton administration wants to act on it.

PROGRAM: Plan seeks to reverse trend got to sell it.

"We try to break the cycle, to get them to see there's a different way to use their skills," he said.

The institute is located on the campus of Paul Quinn College, a black liberal arts college in southern Dallas County.

The average participant in Dallas is black, 22 years old, a high school dropout, addicted to drugs or alcohol and living with his mother. He has one or two children and has given up looking for employment or is selling drugs, Anderson said.

Seventeen- to 38-year-old minority males are eligible for the Dallas program. Similar programs in Window Rock, Ariz., and Bayfield, Wis., target American Indian men. Programs in Portland, Ore., and Santa Fe, N.M., target Hispanics.

The Office of Minority Health says minority males have the highest rates of mortality, hypertension, cancer, chronic and infectious diseases, and suffer most from social problems such as incarceration, poverty, low insurance coverage, unemployment and teen-age fatherhood.

"They don't feel as though they are a part of the overall society," Anderson said. "A lot of them are talented, intelligent individuals. But . . . they've gone in the wrong direction."

Four months of classes on job preparedness, character development and self-esteem, reducing drug and alcohol abuse, reading, computer literacy and health and fitness "transform the way they approach life," Anderson said.

About 10 men were scheduled to graduate this month, completing the third session since the program began in September 1991.

About 30 people already are enrolled for the fourth session, Anderson said. The cost for ushering about 40 participants through the program is about $70,000, he said.

Most of the 40 men who begin each session are attracted to the program because they hope it will help them find jobs — not an easy task when more than half have had brushes with the law.

Several black business leaders try to help.

"The young people were saying, 'We can't get jobs. We can't get jobs,' " said Lamarr Vines, general manager of Dallas' Radisson Hotel and Suites.

"As I talked to them I found out that people were not properly filling out job applications," he said. "They weren't even making it to the interview process."

So he conducted a two-hour session on completing job applications and interviewing.

"I saw the program as a heck of an opportunity for me as a black male to give something back to my community," he said.

Program coordinators say about 90 percent of those who complete the program get and hold jobs. Four graduates of the program are enrolled in college.

Bernard Skinner, 20, who graduated from the first four-month session, is taking freshman courses at Paul Quinn to get into nursing school.

The former gang leader credits the program with helping him get his GED and a job as a shift manager at a fast-food restaurant.

"They call me Mr. Doctor around here because they know what I eventually want to do," Skinner said. "It makes me feel good that someone would even think about saying something like that to me. I'd never heard those things before."

LURES: Border cities don't provide for needs

where, remnants of the garbage that dammed up natural drains and then burst, causing more severe flooding below. Hundreds of ranshackle homes like Castro's have been torn open by the waters or carpeted with mud.

"We thought it would be a little easier to get by here," said Castro, 41 years old, who brought his family from a farm town in the central state of Guanajuato and has found work off and on as a laborer and taxicab driver. "But so many people came."

In the aftermath of the mudslides and floods, the gap between Tijuana's attraction for poor, ambitious immigrants like Castro and its failure to provide them with basic services has opened like a chasm before the city's hopes of booming again as a gateway for free trade between Mexico and the United States.

The problem is replicated to varying degrees in other Mexican border cities. In almost all of them, the rapid growth of light assembly plants and other industries since the 1970s has transformed their economic base. But with minor exceptions, that change has taken place without any corresponding investment in housing, sewers, roads and social services.

In Tijuana, the image of a seedy frontier town has worn away, replaced by that of a vital, if chaotic, metropolis on the forefront of Mexican economic and political change. Yet years of corruption, populist politics, environmental degradation and an utter lack of urban planning have also left a place in which many experts say disaster was only a matter of time.

"Tijuana is really at a crossroads," said Roberto Sanchez, an urban planning expert at the Colegio de la Frontera Norte, a research institute just south of the city. "Either it imposes dramatic measures to order its growth or it condemns itself to chaos."

The havoc caused by the rains was by no means Tijuana's alone.

Just across the border in San Diego, the floodwaters caused $10.5 million in damages, Dan McAllister, a city spokesman, said. At least 12 homes and 17 mobile homes were destroyed, and 23 other homes were badly damaged.

Across San Diego County, McAllister said, the flooding claimed three lives. In all of Southern California, the rough estimates are $100 million in damages; most of it to crops and homes.

Tijuana, with a fraction of the region's people and wealth, was left with more than 5,000 homeless and perhaps $40 million in damages, the city's new mayor, Hector Osuna, said. (Some federal officials and non-governmental experts rejected those figures as too conservative.) According to the counts of various government agencies, 30 to 35 people were killed.

In the 30-odd canyons that make up much of the watershed of the Tijuana River, squatter settlements and unregulated, upscale housing developments blocked the waters' natural course. Hillsides cut up for subdivisions gave way in sheets of mud. In the vast areas where storm drainage was inadequate or non-existent, dams of garbage stopped up the waters temporarily and then burst, flooding areas below with torrents of muck.

Homes were damaged by the tens of thousands. Poorly built roads and bridges washed away, leaving people stranded. Streets turned to rivers of mud.

In the working-class Gavilondo neighborhood, Jose Antonio Bernal, a 30-year-old waiter, looked out over the remains of a bridge that residents had been pressing local officials to repair for months.

"They always said they were going to do something about it, but they never did," he said.

used to interview the team."

A rare quiet came over the crowd came only as Garth Brooks sang the national anthem.

There was no lull in the excitement at Kenny's Lounge, as a large group of Cowboys fans were treated to two Dallas touchdowns in the first quarter. After each score, the bar treated customers to $1 shots.

Teresa Fowler jumped from her seat and screamed loudly as Dallas scored, while James Chavez sat stone-faced. Ms. Fowler was obviously for Dallas while Chavez was pulling for Buffalo — a small difference for the two to overcome since they live together.

"He already owes me dinner for the San Francisco-Dallas game," Ms. Fowler said, pointing good-naturedly at Chavez. "We bet that whoever's team won, they had to buy the other person dinner."

"I'm waiting to decide on what to wage for," Chavez said. "I don't want to get into debt too much farther."

Chavez might have found better company at Mr. Gatti's, where it seemed that every Buffalo Bills fan in Midland had taken the tables to root for their team.

Cindy Eden, her children — 5-year-old Kristi and 6-year-old Kyle — and Ellen Hazelton pulled for the Bills, the team of their old hometown.

"We moved here 14 years ago," Mrs. Eden said. "We never let anyone know we are pulling for them unless they are in the Super Bowl."

Mrs. Eden's husband David is from Fort Worth, but became a Bills fan after Jerry Jones and Jimmy Johnson took over as head coach.

"I'm for the Dallas Cowboys until they become the Arkansas Cowboys," Eden said, referring to Jones and Johnson's Arkansas roots.

Unwilling to make an exact prediction on the game's final score, Ms. Hazelton said she would be happy if they won.

"If it was just by one point, that would be fine," she said.

DALLAS: Traffic backs up

(From 1A)

Somebody inscribed a Dallas Police car with "Da Boys" in white shoe polish.

Traffic quickly backed up for miles around the popular night-club area as fans drove around aimlessly tooting their horns and cheering.

"I'm thrilled. this means a lot more fun in another week (of selling merchandise) I just wish I had more merchandise tonight," said Mark Jones, an entrepreneur who drove from Sarasota Florida last week.

Over in East Dallas, residents shot off firecrackers and tooted their car horns bringing to mind New Year's celebrations.

In Irving, strangers were hugging and high-fiving and even the police were cracking smiles.

"I've got the Blue Fever, and its contagious," said Dallas Cowboys fan Gwen Harris, as she stuck out her blue tongue. "It's just great."

Ms. Harris was one of about 750 blue and silver clad fanatics who filled a tent called "The Corral" in the parking lot of Texas Stadium during the Super Bowl.

Ms. Harris was helping the revellers bond by giving away instant photos that she took of strangers as they celebrated for the Cowboys.

One of the wilder costumes was a hat worn by Bob Blanque that had six flashing lights surrounding the words "Da Boys," the nickname being marketed by Tony Dorsett, a former running back for the Cowboys.

"I figured the game would go this way," said Blanque, a season ticket holder since 1977.

■ 1st private TV station obtains license

PRAGUE, Czech Republic — The nation's first private commercial television station will start broadcasting within one year, the official news agency CTK reported.

A 12-year broadcasting license was granted Saturday by a parliamentary commission to CET 21, which stands for Central European Television for the 21st Century.

The private group of five investors is backed by $45 million from the Czech Savings Bank and the Central European Development Company, a U.S.-Canadian firm run by Mark Palmer, former U.S. ambassador to Hungary.

There are three TV channels in the Czech Republic. CET 21 is expected to take one of them. The two others would remain under state control.

■ Polish navy suspends search for bodies

WARSAW, Poland — Rough weather forced Polish navy frogmen to suspend a two-day search of the sunken ferry Jan Heweliusz before any of the 17 bodies missing from the shipwreck were found, the PAP news agency said.

The divers inspected some of the ship's cabins before the search in the Baltic Sea was suspended Saturday night, navy Lt. Cmmdr. Leszek Siudit told PAP. The divers also aim to find a cause for the disaster.

The Polish ferry capsized Jan. 14 in heavy storm off the German isle of Reugen, and 52 of the 63 people on board died in what was Poland's worst shipping disaster to World War II. The bodies of 17 victims are missing.

The submerged wreck drifted into Polish territorial waters and is lying on its left side, about 92 feet under water.

■ Israeli gunships fire rockets on house

TYRE, Lebanon — Two Israeli helicopter gunships on Sunday rocketed a vacant house in south Lebanon, apparently suspecting it was used as a guerrilla base, security sources said.

They said there were no casualties in the 2 p.m. (7 a.m. EST) raid on the house, which sat in a ravine between the villages of Bracheet and Shaqra, 16 miles southeast of the port city of Tyre.

An Irish officer serving with the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon said the Cobra gunships fired three rockets at the house, scoring direct hits.

After the helicopters left, Israeli gunners fired five 155mm howitzer shells on the area, two of whih hit the same house, said the security sources, who insisted on anonymity.

There was no immediate report from Israel on Sunday's raid. It came two days after Israeli helicopters strafed a mountainous area near the southern town of Nabatiyeh following a clash between Israeli troops and Shiite Muslim guerrillas. Five Israeli troops and a Lebanese civilian were reported injured.

■ U.N. supervises return of refugees

DHAKA, Bangladesh — A U.N. agency supervised the repatriation of 981 Burmese refugees Sunday, resuming a process that stalled over allegations that other refugees had been sent back against their will, an official said.

The repatriation by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees brought to nearly 18,000 the number of refugees that have returned to Burma since September last year.

The repatriation was stopped Jan. 15 after the Geneva-based UNHCR and the U.S. State Department accused Bangladesh of sending thousands of refugees home forcibly. Bangladesh has denied the charge.

The refugees that returned Sunday were interviewed by UNHCR officials to ensure that nobody was being forced to leave, Foreign Minister Mustafizur Rahman said.

More than 268,000 Muslim refugees fled into Bangladesh in 1991, alleging widespread persecution, including rapes and murder, by Burma's military junta.

■ Chinese missile destroyer passes trials

BEIJING — A new-model Chinese missile destroyer has passed sea trials, the official Xinhua News Agency said Sunday.

The report was the latest indication of China's determination to strengthen its navy, long the weakest branch of its military, so as to defend its claims to Taiwan and to disputed islands in the South China Sea.

Xinhua said the destroyer, named the Zhanjiang, was designed and built by Chinese using the latest technology. It was especially accurate in night firing, it said.

The brief report did not say how many of the new model destroyers were being built.

Human cost of recession mounts in Japan

TOKYO (AP) — When business got so bad that he couldn't make payments on his loans, a tire-shop owner and his wife went out early one morning and lay down in front of a commuter train.

Companies are slashing overtime, laying off part-time workers and reducing investment because of the recession, and the growing number of suicides due to financial problems add to the human cost.

Even some large companies renowned for promising lifetime security have started laying people off.

"The wonderfully kind, thoughtful Japanese company that employs for life is a total myth," said Paul A. Summerville, an economist at Jardine Fleming Securities.

The conservative government, proud author of the transformation to an economic superpower, is taking the heat for what some economists call Japan's worst recession since the oil shock of the 1970s.

Business leaders and many politicians accuse Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa of doing nothing while the economy gets worse. They want him to cut taxes and to rush out a supplementary budget aimed at stimulating demand.

Miyazawa also faces pressure from the Clinton administration to increase domestic demand as a means of helping reduce a trade surplus that surged to a record $107 billion in 1992.

While the export surplus grew, so did business failures at home. They reached a six-year high in 1992 of 14,167, up from 10,723 in the previous year.

Hundreds of companies have quietly laid ofi the workers they regularly hired on a seasonal or temporary basis when times were good. Others are urging permanent employees to take early retirement.

As larger manufacturers cut orders or switch suppliers, times are hardest for employees and owners of the small shops and factories that are the economy's backbone.

Last summer's plunge in the stock market did not send financiers jumping from windows in Kabutocho, the financial district, but police reported 1,800 suicides due to debts or business problems during the year ended in November.

The unemployment rate of just over 2 percent seems low compared to double-digit joblessness in Britain and some parts of the United States. But Japan's count of those with jobs includes members of the armed forces and anyone who worked more than one hour in the previous week.

Summerville, the economist, expects the official unemployment rate to double in 1993 as companies slim down for tougher times.

Yasushi Mieno, governor of the Bank of Japan, is under fire for the central bank's apparent reluctance to cut interest rates to stimulate the economy.

Columbia officials blame drug kingpin for bombings

BOGOTA, Colombia — Two powerful bombs exploded in Medellin early Sunday, following the explosion of a car bomb that killed 20 people in Bogota on Saturday night.

The explosions in Medellin, in the upper-class Poblado district, wounded four people and damaged several buildings, the police said.

Officials blamed Pablo Escobar, the cocaine kingpin, for the bombing in Bogota. Earlier this month, Escobar announced a new campaign of violence to pressure the government into granting immunity to drug traffickers.

No one has taken responsibility for either attack, but many officials believe Escobar was responsible for the blasts in Medellin, too.

A vehicle packed with dynamite blew up in a busy commercial district of downtown Bogota on Saturday evening, when many children were out with their parents buying supplies for the new school year, which begins Monday. Five of the 20 people killed were children, the Bogota Health Department said. Another 60 people were injured, including a dozen children.

The scene was one of utter destruction: broken glass stained with blood, demolished buildings, bodies strewn about, mothers screaming for their children and a six-foot hole in the ground.

In a telephone conversation with reporters from the Galapagos Islands late Saturday, President Cesar Gaviria said there was no doubt about who was responsible. "Our information indicates that this attack was the work of Pablo Escobar and what remains of his terrorist apparatus," said Gaviria, who ends a three-day visit to Ecuador Sunday.

The authorities also blamed Escobar for the detonation of two bombs in Bogota on Jan. 21 that wounded 17 people.

Some news reports speculated that the bombings in Medellin may have been the work of Escobar's enemies; several of his relatives reportedly live near the site.

Croatian president threatens further attacks on Serbia

SPLIT, Croatia (NYT) — President Franjo Tudjman of Croatia on Sunday completed a quick tour of territory wrested from Serbians over the last week, and he used the occasion to promise the "liberation" of more land deep inside the Serbian enclave in this country.

In speeches ringing with nationalistic phrases, he declared that "every drop of Croat blood is precious" but that the nation must be prepared for sacrifices to win back more land.

Croatia, which lost about one-third of its land to Serbian fighters backed by the Serbian-dominated Yugoslav Army in 1991, sent its soldiers storming across U.N. cease-fire lines nine days ago to take back some strategic sites along the Adriatic coast.

On Saturday, in speeches here and in Zadar, a coastal town near where the fighting began, he hinted at a larger objective: control of the self-styled Serbian republic-within-a-republic called Krajina.

"We will move ahead with the liberation of Drnis, Obrovac, Benkovac and even Knin," he shouted to a cheering crowd of several thousand in Split, naming towns that lead deeper and deeper into the heartland of the Serbian area, and including its capital, Knin.

"We've assured the Serbs in the Krajina that they will be forgiven and given amnesty," he asserted. "But for that they will have to drive out their Chetnik ringleaders," he added, using the World War II term for Serbian guerrillas.

Tudjman also criticized the United Nations for not enforcing certain provisions of the peace accord. He hinted, as he has in the past, that he might try to block the U.N. mandate to station 14,000 troops here when it comes up for renewal next month.

Silent majority quits being quiet

If President Clinton or members of Congress ever entertained any doubts about where the American public stands on Clinton's proposal to lift the 50-year-old ban on homosexuals serving in the military, that doubt was removed last Wednesday and Thursday. Who says the "silent majority" never speaks its mind on a controversial issue?

On Wednesday and Thursday last week, more than 874,000 calls flooded the Washington switchboard, inundating phone circuits and creating an "unreachable" situation for many callers trying to contact U.S. Capitol personnel. Several Midlanders trying to reach their representatives reported being unable to do so.

Normal daily volume of phone calls when Congress is in session is 84,000 calls.

According to staff personnel in the offices of U.S. Reps. Lamar Smith, Larry Combest and Henry Bonilla, the callers were overwhelmingly voicing support for the representatives' opposition to Clinton's proposal to lift the ban.

The outpouring of concern from residents of Congressional Districts 19, 21 and 23 underscores the strong belief among residents of this region in taking their convictions beyond the mere talking stage. Residents of this area told the congressmen in no uncertain terms what vote they want them to register in the Congress.

That's the way it should be. Clinton's proposal to lift the ban on homosexuals in the military struck a chord with the public and brought virtually immediate response. Of course, it won't happen on less volatile subjects, but on major topics of the day constituents should give direction to their elected representatives.

The only question mark now remaining is how the three local congressmen vote on the subject and how the public response to this issue tempers Clinton's future actions.

Government officials: figures are misleading

Before Texas lawmakers start flailing away with their budget axes at public education and programs that provide sustenance — barely — for the state's most vulnerable residents, they should pay very close attention to two news items that surfaced last week.

One of them was concerned with Comptroller John Sharp's menu of $3 billion in proposed spending cuts, which, if followed up on by the Legislature, could give lawmakers considerably more leeway in trying to balance the state's budget with a minimum of suffering on the part of the public schools and the people who depend upon state assistance for survival.

The other news item contained the disturbing revelation that the budget proposal currently being considered by lawmakers includes some sizable increases in funding for the governor's office, the Senate and the House.

Representatives of the governor and the Senate were quick to defend the proposed increases, calling the figures "misleading" and explaining that much of the money involved will ultimately be disbursed to Texans through local agencies.

Perhaps. But it is nonetheless distressing to learn of such large proposed government expenses while the people who would receive them claim to be busy looking for ways to cut government spending — and finding them at the expense of those Texans who can least afford them.

Violence at courthouses calls for more security

A shooting inside a Dallas courthouse . . . could be explained away as an isolated incident — if it weren't for the July 1 shooting in a Fort Worth courthouse. Or the July 20 shooting outside a Beaumont courthouse.

As State Bar President Harriet Miers pointed out following the latest tragedy, family law is the area where violence is most likely to erupt. The high level of emotion found in family law disputes just isn't found in other areas of the law.

The continuing violence is making it obvious that some level of Texas government should take steps to fund security. People who turn to the courthouse to resolve disputes should not fear for their lives. Neither should the people who work there.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Feb. 1, the 32nd day of 1993. There are 333 days left in the year.

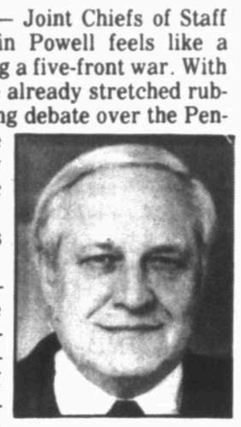

Today's highlight in history:

In 1943, 50 years ago, one of America's most highly decorated military units of World War II was authorized — the 442d Regimental Combat Team, made up almost entirely of Japanese-Americans.

JACK ANDERSON

Military gay ban was clumsy, ill-timed

WASHINGTON — Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Colin Powell feels like a general fighting a five-front war. With the military and morale already stretched rubber-band thin, the coming debate over the Pentagon budget may make the gays in the military issue seem like a picnic by comparison.

To be sure, Powell is not a happy warrior.

According to a Pentagon source close to the five-star general, Powell is increasingly agitated over the failure of the Clinton administration to stock the Pentagon with a new team; over the injection of gays in the military, although the process of enfranchising women in the military remains incomplete; and, most especially, over the fact that while conflicts rage in Somalia, Bosnia and Iraq, and with a watershed budget document due soon, raising the gay issue was ill-timed and clumsy at best.

For Powell, the mother of all battles will be budgetary. The Defense Department budget already exceeds $250 billion, and boasts a workforce of nearly 3 million uniformed and civilian employees. Defense analysts believe the Bush administration's $1.4 trillion defense spending plan for the fiscal years 1993-1997 contains lots of funny bookkeeping, such as a failure to recognize more than $35 billion in potential weapons cost increases. Also, much of the $53 billion in management savings predicted in the Bush budget are looking doubtful.

Between politics and purse, Powell and Clinton are likely to find themselves alternately as allies and adversaries. Some of the looming battles include:

— Aspin vs. Dellums. How will new Secretary of Defense Les Aspin get along with the new Chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif.? Will Dellums be the first peacenik chairman of the committee, exposing Clinton on his left flank? "Interestingly, his big battle is going to be with the House and Dellums in particular," said one Senate Republican. "I think he'll win it. Everybody calls for these cuts. But Aspin has the ability to say, 'we'll cut it here, here and here in your district,' and you'll get the (member) to back off."

— Procurement. Despite the end of the Cold War, the Defense Department has proposed spending about $100 billion a year on the development and procurement of weapons and related items through the end of the decade. Yet the new mission for the military often seems disconnected from the sticker-shock machinery being clamored for. All major programs have constituencies — ranging from members of Congress in whose districts parts are made to the defense contractors and military officials. Procurement as pork was on display last year when 19 members of the California congressional delegation wrote President Bush defending the B-2 bomber manufacturing on the grounds that it "sustains more than 36,000 jobs and generates over $1.2 billion in our state . . ."

— Base closings. For the members of Congress whose districts include bases to be shut, this is about as popular as cutting Social Security benefits. Clinton has promised $60 billion in cuts from the Bush administration's five-year defense budget, and many officials believe more bases will have to be closed. In 1991, some 34 bases were closed and nearly 50 others were realigned, for a savings of approximately $2.3 billion. Military bases are important forms of pork-barrel projects for congressional districts; shutting them off will also cut off a key Pentagon constituency.

FORTUNES OF FAILURE — The "golden parachute" is alive and well for at least one former Bush administration official. Last year we reported on the expensive habits of William N. Rudman, cousin of former New Hampshire Sen. Warren Rudman and the head of the Defense Technology Security Agency. While the agency was facing a major funding shortfall, Rudman was charging the taxpayers for trips to Paris that included an $1,800 tab for a car and driver to take him around the city. A few months later, Rudman invited some French guests over for an estimated $500 to $1,000 feast at the posh Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Washington.

CHARLEY REESE

Clinton's team is his greatest danger

We've elected ourselves a pretty good president, I think, and we need to take to heart his words and participate in the process of re-inventing America.

One thing we can all do is be patient and give Bill Clinton time to make changes. Nothing he needs or wants to do is either easy or quickly done. People who want to put a stopwatch on him or hold him to some imaginary schedule are just playing the old cynical politics.

Reese

One change would be to focus on substance instead of fluff. I don't care by what date President Clinton completes his appointments as long as they are good ones. The appointments are the substance; the timing is the fluff.

For 12 years the only thing Republican presidents did about the deficit was increase it, so I'm not going to get out of joint if Clinton hasn't reduced it by this spring.

For 12 years Republicans did nothing to reform the health care system so why should President Clinton be required to do it in a 100 days? That's fluff and nonsense. Again the substance is the reform itself, not the date he submits it to Congress.

We should also recognize that virtually everything Clinton will try to do depends on others and if things go wrong, we should be accurate in pin-pointing the responsibility.

While I think Clinton has the potential to be as popular a president as Franklin Roosevelt, he certainly takes office at a time of trouble and difficulty. One of those difficulties is that the press today is much more cynical than it was in Roosevelt's day.

The greatest danger to Clinton's success, however, lies within his own administration. It is nearly always the people around a president who do him in because nearly all the people who are attracted to political jobs have large egoes and their own agendas.

Some of them will attempt to manipulate him by the advice they give him, by the way they frame the problem, by the options they present to him, by the assessments they provide him.

Clinton would do well to study Dwight Eisenhower's presidency. Historians have discovered that contrary to his public image of a sort of genial, lazy person, Eisenhower in fact was always in tight control of his administration. He went over and around his aides to double-check what they were telling him and he was ruthless about dumping those that became a hindrance or were disloyal.

If Clinton recognizes, as Truman did, that the ultimate responsibility for decisions is his and his alone and that there are few people indeed a president can trust to put Clinton and the country's interests ahead of their own agendas, then I think he will carve a place in history for himself.

I think he is lucky that his wife is smart and interested in public policy matters. She will be a great help.

Incidentally, from personal observation long ago, I can tell you that aides to a politician often are jealous of the wife and most often are the source of nasty leaks to the press about their boss's wife. In the political aide business, the name of the game for the egotists is to be the person with the most influence on the office holder. These characters see this as power for themselves. Naturally, no hired employee is going to match a man's wife in terms of influence; hence, a natural antipathy on the part of this kind of egotistical staffer develops toward the wife.

If Clinton catches a staffer leaking negative stories about his wife, I hope, as a proper Southern gentleman, he will not only fire the twit, but black his eye and break his jaw.

On the whole, I'm optimistic. I think perhaps America's proverbial luck has once more given us the right leader at the right time.

GEORGE WILL

Sax is oboe after sucking in helium

If William Jefferson ("Dizzy") Clinton sees his shadow, are we in for four and possibly even eight more years of our president going around playing a saxophone?

Or does it matter whether it sees his shadow? Is he simply going to play his sax, anyway?

Will

We've already had to endure his playing the horn on the Arsenio Hall Show in an effort to win over the jazz vote.

And there he was again saxing away during the post-inaugural activities.

If I had paid what it cost to go to some of those parties, if you've got to give me a saxophone player who can play — don't give me a rank amateur like the president of the United States.

I'm not sure if Bill Clinton is going to be another John Kennedy, Franklin D. Roosevelt or Thomas Jefferson.

But one thing's for sure: He's no Boots Randolph, my favorite saxophone player of all time.

Boots Randolph, for those who have forgotten about him, or are learning of him for the first time, lives in Nashville. What makes him my all-time favorite is I can't think of any other professional saxophone players and, as far as I know, he is the only person in the history of civilization to have had a hit country record playing a saxophone.

That would be, "Yakety Sax." There are no words to "Yakety Sax," so it will be difficult to explain exactly how it goes, but I'll try.

Imagine two cats fighting and meowing loudly in an alley. Put a fast beat to it, and you've got "Yakety Sax."

From what I've heard of the president's playing, I think he would have a hard time with "Yakety Sax." And if you are going to attempt it, Mr. President, please do it as far away from Boots Randolph fans as you can.

I asked a musician friend to tell me what kind of saxophone player the president is. He answered, "About an 18th-round draft choice."

To be perfectly honest about it, I'm no big fan of saxophone playing even if one is being played by the legendary (in some circles, or, perhaps, semi-circles) Boots Randolph.

A saxophone sounds a lot like whining to me. That and the aforementioned cat fight in the alley.

A saxophone seems to be saying, "When is this game going to be over? I'm cold."

Or, "Why don't you ever talk to me about getting married?"

Or, "But I don't waaaant to go to the Ducks Unlimited banquet with you and all your riff-raff friends."

A guitar played by somebody older than 30 who is wearing a shirt is a gentle strum. A steel guitar is a clear, nasal pitch of a George Jones or a Randy Travis.

A violin soothes the soul. A trumpet heralds the coming of angels. A piano invites the world to sing along.

But a saxophone is an oboe after sucking in helium

I hope my humble opinions here do not cause the ruckus former President Harry Truman had with the press when they panned his daughter's singing.

Truman took it personally and fired off angry notes.

All I'm trying to do is save the president some embarrassment if ever he plays that infernal thing and real music critics take aim at him.

He's going to get enough grief to last him three terms from the keeper of the conservative flame, Sen. Bob Dole.

Verily, and yakety, somebody had to say it.

■ Man shoots self as neighbor watches

CHEROKEE, Ala. — A woman and two of her children were found fatally beaten and strangled in their home after her boyfriend shot himself as a neighbor watched.

Alonzo Burgess, 25, left a note telling police to "look in the bedrooms" before he wounded himself Saturday, Police Chief Royce Hulsey said.

In the bedrooms were the bodies of Sheila Long Nnodimele, 31; and her daughters, Latoria Long, 14, and Alexis Nnodimele, 8. Two-year-old Larico Long suffered a severe head injury and was hospitalized Sunday in satisfactory condition.

Colbert County Sheriff Buddy Aldridge said investigators wanted to question Burgess before filing charges in the slayings. Burgess was hospitalized in guarded condition Sunday.

Ms. Nnodimele had filed several assault complaints against Burgess, but the two continued to live together in her northwest Alabama home, Hulsey said.

A neighbor told police that Burgess invited him over, then shot himself in the chest as the door swung open, Aldridge said.

■ Police take tags of insurance violators

NEW ORLEANS — Law enforcement officials in Louisiana on Monday are taking up a new weapon against the many drivers who don't carry mandatory automobile insurance coverage — a screwdriver.

Drivers who cannot show proof of insurance will have their license plates removed and replaced with a sticker good for 10 days. If proof of insurance is provided within 10 days, the plate will be returned.

If proof cannot be made, the plate will be destroyed and the vehicle registration cancelled.

The crackdown is aim d at the estimated 25 percent of Louisiana drivers who don't carry insurance.

"For years, our citizens have decried the compulsory insurance law as having no teeth," said State Police Superintendent Col. Paul Fontenot. "We are hopeful that this new law will change that perception."

Although proof of insurance has to be presented when getting a license plate, many drivers cancel it as soon as they obtain their tags.

■ Accused killer dies of drug overdose

WATERLOO, N.Y. — A man who was thought to have died of a heart attack while awaiting trial in the slaying of his teen-age son actually committed suicide, a sheriff concluded.

Toxicology reports showed that Michael Matello, 39, died Dec. 12 from an overdose of the heart medication Cardizem, not from a heart attack, Sheriff Thomas Fox said Friday.

The day he died, Matello, who had a history of heart problems, complained of chest pains and was taken from his cell to a hospital where a doctor prescribed Cardizem and other medication.

"Somehow he hoarded the medicine or somehow he regurgitated it," Fox said.

Matello was charged with fatally shooting his 12-year-old son, Robert, last August. Matello then shot himself in the face in an apparent suicide attempt.

Matello had been arrested twice before on domestic violence charges, police said. He was released from jail where he had been held after an alleged break-in at the family's home only hours before his son's death.

■ Three die in collision at train crossing

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind. — A passenger train hit a car at a crossing, killing three of the four people in the car, an Amtrak spokesman said Sunday.

The car's driver, Randy Mitckess, 31, of Knox was hospitalized in serious condition, said Porter County sheriff's officials.

None of the estimated 100 people on the Toronto to Chicago train were injured in Saturday's accident.

"We don't know if the driver saw the train and thought he could beat the train, or was distracted," said Amtrak spokesman John Jacobsen.

Jacobsen says the intersection was marked with stop signs and railroad crossing signs, but no gates or signals. Track speed in the area is normally 79 mph, he said.

The dead were identified as David Marquart, 35, of Wanatah, his 13-year-old son, Brian, and a 12-year-old passenger, Brandon Pullins of Wanatah.

Court awards $58 million to Steinbrenner

WASHINGTON (AP) — Baseball team owner George Steinbrenner failed in the first round of a contract dispute with the government. But his second try was a sweet success — a $58 million bailout for his family shipbuilding business provided quietly by Congress.

Having already made $16,500 in political contributions to key congressmen since 1987, Steinbrenner enlisted two lobbyists with connections to the Appropriations subcommittees that control Pentagon spending.

The imposing owner of professional baseball's New York Yankees even made a few personal calls on Congress along the way.

Last October, without a single public hearing and without even consulting the government officials who steadfastly refused to pay the claims, Congress quietly added the money to the Defense Department's 1993 budget.

The final amount ordered paid to Steinbrenner's Tampa, Fla., shipyard was even more than he originally sought in negotiations and a lawsuit he filed against the Navy and U.S. Maritime Administration.

"It's bad public policy," said Patrick Morris, deputy administrator of the Maritime Administration. Congress, he said, was meddling in an area where it had no proper role.

Steinbrenner accused federal officials of trying to shut his struggling American Ship Building Co. out of an exclusive club of favored contractors, and said Congress was his only recourse.

"Every single major shipyard in this country has had problems with the Navy on their contracts," he said, calling his donations to congressional figures during the period a matter of "friendship."

The Navy, afraid of angering its congressional patrons, would not discuss the case. "The Navy's not going to bite the hand that feeds it," said one Pentagon official.

The Steinbrenner case distills several key issues that will test a reform-minded Congress this year: the role of special-interest donations, the "revolving door" through which officials pass between government and lobbying, and the survival of defense contractors with a slimmed-down Pentagon.

The dispute arose over two contracts: a 1987 agreement to convert and refurbish a pair of crane ships for a fixed price of $43.1 million, and a 1989 pact to complete two fuel supply ships for $49 million.

The shipyard, like many others in the industry, was starving for work at the time because of dwindling Pentagon business.

Explosion forces town to evacuate

GWINNER, N.D. (AP) — Five large propane tanks at a manufacturing plant burned Sunday after one exploded and triggered a blaze that injured one man and forced evacuation of the town.

The explosion shattered windows and started small fires on the roofs of nearby homes, said Gary Rogers, a volunteer firefighter.

"It sounded like a jet airplane coming over and then crashing. There was just a big roar and then a big ball of fire," said Ken Hopkins of Gwinner, a maintenance worker who was in the plant at the time.

Officials did not know what caused the explosion.

The town of 500 to 600 residents in southeastern North Dakota was evacuated, said Jim Aldrich, a hazardous materials technician with the Dwight, N.D., fire department.

The smaller fires were doused, but the propane tank fires were left to burn themselves out. Those fires were out by late Sunday afternoon. The tanks were several hundred feet from the Melroe Co. plant, where farm implements are made. The plant did not catch fire.

Forty National Guardsmen were sent to Gwinner to help repair the city's power supply, which was knocked out by the blast.

The injured man, a maintenance worker at the plant, was hospitalized in stable condition with burns to the head.

Nancy McMichael displays some of the 4,500 snowdomes she has collected over the years in her Washington home. McMichael has domes ranging from traditonal souvenirs of cities, states and famous landmarks to convention promotions, figures of Elvis and erotica.

Miniature domes shake up collector's study

WASHINGTON (AP) — It takes just a few shakes to start a blizzard in Nancy McMichael's study, where the walls are lined with thousands of the miniature, snowflake-filled worlds known as snowdomes.

Place one in the palm of your hand, give it a jiggle, and the flakes — suspended in water — begin to swirl, slowly settling on an Eiffel Tower, Empire State Building or a sailing ship.

McMichael has 4,500 of them — from traditional souvenirs of cities, states and famous landmarks to convention promotions, wedding day scenes, figures of Elvis and erotica.

She's got Abraham Lincoln under glass, the pope under plastic, bottled British beefeaters, and a submarine perpetually hovering over seaweed.

She even has a newfangled, battery-operated dome that blows the snow around by itself.

McMichael wrote "Snowdomes," the book, which has sold more than 25,000 copies. And her quarterly newsletter — "Snow Biz" — which she started in 1990, now boasts 1,300 subscribers.

Bush misrepresented role, Shultz says

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Bush misrepresented his role in the arms-for-hostage deals with Iran while he was vice president, former Secretary of State George Shultz says in memoir excerpts published Sunday.

In the excerpts, which appear in this week's Time magazine, Shultz says he was "astonished" to read a 1987 interview in The Washington Post in which Bush said no one strongly opposed the arms deals during 1985 and 1986 White House meetings.

Shultz remembers those meetings differently. He said that on Nov. 9, 1986, he had a heated talk with Bush.

Shultz also tells of angry confrontations with former President Reagan, who pursued the arms-for-hostages deals despite protests from Shultz and Weinberger.

Shultz said that when he objected about the arms deals during a Nov. 24, 1986, National Security Council meeting, Reagan "was angry in a way I had never seen him before.

"To him, reality was different," Shultz said of Reagan.

THEY CALL IT...

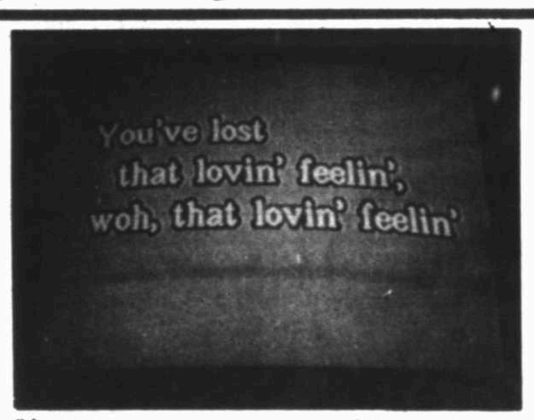

KARAOKE

Tom sings. Anne doesn't.

"I'm too embarrassed, too shy," Anne Smith, 34, said.

"I'd love to do it if I had the voice," she said as she looked over a list of some 600 songs. "He has a good voice so he can sing."

Her boyfriend, Tom Hill, 40, just finished singing one of his favorites.

"Babe, I'm leaving.
I must be on my way . . . ," he sang.

Like Ms. Smith, the crowd — through cheers and applause — responded positively to Hill's performance.

"I like to get up and have a good time," Hill said after his performance of the Styx song "Babe."

"The No. 1 song of 1979," Hill was quick to point out.

"Babe" wasn't the only hit performed that Thursday night and Hill wasn't the only one in the spotlight.

After the first person takes the stage on karaoke night at Bayou Wadley restaurant-bar, there's not a shortage of participants, said Danielle Brookes, an announcer for Power 106 radio.

Karaoke is a sing-along entertainment where a patron (or patrons) sings to music less the vocals. Lyrics are displayed on a video screen and the words change color at the time to be sung.

"Don't boo. It's not my rule, it's the house rule," karaoke hostess Ms. Brookes tells the crowd.

The audience responds with claps, yells and whistles or silence or indifference depending on the singer, or singers, and the song.

Participants can pick songs from dozens of artists ranging from Madonna to Frank Sinatra.

"Overall, they like the oldies. Doing karaoke is a little intimidating to begin with so they pick a song they are familiar with, a crowd pleaser," Ms. Brookes said.

And people choose an artist who's admired, Hill said.

"I think a lot of people have always wanted to be a big singer and fantasize about it. They put themselves in the place of Neil Diamond or someone like that. I always wanted to be Neil Diamond," Hill said.

In that respect, Karen Mosley, 26, a special education teacher, had dreams of being a Motown star.

"It's fun. It's something to do," she said while sipping a soft drink. "But when it goes like that last song, it's embarrassing."

Ms. Mosley's friend, Debra Coleman, 28, also a special education teacher, knew the feeling, as evidenced by her response when asked how it went after her premier performance.

"After my heart came back into my chest?" she asked back with a smile.

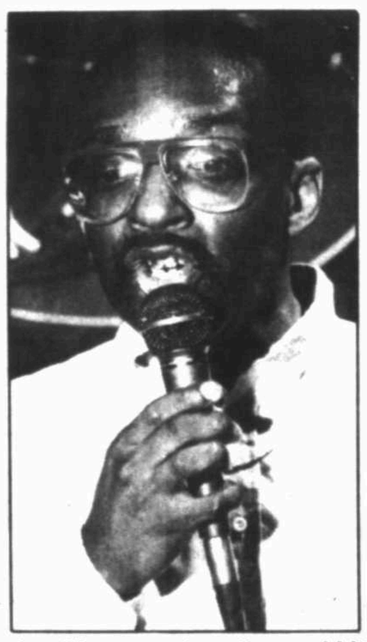

But that's just at first, she explained. After a few minutes, the performer becomes involved in singing and oblivious to the audience, she added.

"The way you heard the song, or remember the song, than the way it's written (on the video screen) is different," she said.

And not being the only to get up and perform helps overcome any self-consciousness, Ms. Mosley said.

"You don't feel as bad because nobody else in here is as good as they think," she said.

District attorney orders review of autopsies

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — District Attorney Travis Ware says he has ordered a systematic, independent examination of criminal autopsies by former Lubbock County pathologist Ralph R. Erdmann to clarify controversy surrounding Erdmann's work on murder cases.

A spokesman for Ware had said earlier the collections of autopsy reports were part of a "routine review" of cases.

Ware said the investigation will cover autopsies dating back to 1987, the year Ware took office.

"I just decided it's time for the public to know the truth," Ware told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal on Saturday.

"I'm literally sick and tired of hearing the handful of defense attorneys who have been critical of the role of this office in regard to the prosecution of homicide cases and the lies they have perpetrated with regard to whether or not these were valid autopsies," Ware said.

Erdmann pleaded no contest last September to seven counts of falsifying autopsies. He was sentenced to 10 years' probation and ordered to surrender his medical license. He also had to repay $14,000 he charged for autopsies that were never performed. Authorities have said they don't believe he faked any autopsies involving criminal cases.

One aim of his request, Ware said, was "to draw a distinction ... between types of cases."

"The controversy that has brewed with regard to Dr. Erdmann has been over a number of suicides and accidental death cases — not homicides," Ware said.

Forensic pathologist David Hoblit said that he and two pathologists are reviewing about 80 Erdmann autopsies. The three-member panel should complete a comprehensive report of its findings within two weeks, Hoblit said. The report will be released to Ware and to all Lubbock County justices of the peace, he said.

Defense attorney Rod Hobson said he is skeptical of the review.

"We welcome any kind of inquiry into what was going on," Hobson said. "We just hope it isn't another attempt at a whitewash."

Hobson and some other defense attorneys said earlier Ware's intent may have been to help Erdmann's defense in civil litigation. "That's just ludicrous — it's just a baldfaced lie," Ware said Saturday. "I have had no contact with Dr. Erdmann since before he was indicted in Hockley County. He has not contacted me for any purpose."

James Hobbs has filed a civil lawsuit against Erdmann, alleging he took without permission Hobbs' daughter's brain after an autopsy and turned it over to a neuropathologist.

Report: Rebuffs on contract led to chief's departure

DALLAS (AP) — A series of rebuffs from City Manager Jan Hart ultimately led police Chief Bill Rathburn to accept an offer to oversee security for the 1996 Olympics in Atlanta, The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday.

In a copyright story, the newspaper quoted sources as saying that Rathburn, 51, had been seeking since last fall a written contract through 1996 that would protect him from political instability at City Hall.

"It was never about money," one source told the newspaper. "That's what they're saying now. But he really wanted to make sure he could work here until he was ready to retire."

Last Thursday Rathburn accepted the new job in Atlanta and a pay package that included an annual salary of $250,000.

"I asked for a contract when I came to Dallas," Rathburn told reporters at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport on Friday. "I think the chief of police needs a contract. If (I would have) had a contract, a five-year contract when I got here, I couldn't have entertained the prospect of leaving."

City Attorney Sam Lindsay said the City Council would have had to place a charter amendment on the ballot for voters to approve before the chief could have been given a contract. Some believed that would have been disruptive, but Rathburn felt the voters would back him because of his success in reducing crime and improving community relations since taking the job in 1991.

Assistant City Manager A.C. Gonzalez said the city officials including Ms. Hart had offered verbal assurances to the police chief that he would have a job for five years.

In a news conference on Friday, Rathburn urged Dallas city leaders to give his successor a contract of three to five years. "Large organizations like the Dallas Police Department need stability," he said. "To have that stability, you have to give the chief a contract."

Rathburn grew concerned about having a contract after a series of racial controversies, and sought one last October after City Councilman Don Hicks was arrested at a protest site where he allegedly disobeyed police orders.

Furor over the arrest caused Mayor Steve Bartlett to call an emergency council meeting at which speaker after speaker berated the police department and Rathburn. Rathburn announced the charges would be dropped, and apologized to Hicks.

He privately said the episode make him realize how vulnerable his job was. "There's 3,000 officers running around out there. Any one of them could cost me my job tomorrow," a News source reported him as saying.

When Ms. Hart turned down his first request for a contract, he asked supporters in the business community to pursue his case. When Rathburn again asked Ms. Hart to explore the legalities of giving him a contract, it was more than a week before anyone at city hall responded, the newspaper said.

Teen-age protester could be placed in state custody

HOUSTON (AP) — At only 15, Jamie Tellier has lost count of the number of times she has been arrested for protesting at abortion clinics.

She now faces another legal obstacle to her efforts to "rescue" and "witness" at clinics. The teenager has been ordered to appear in state district court Feb. 19 to determine if she is a juvenile delinquent.

The judicial proceedings could take months and possibly establish a precedent. If convicted and judged delinquent, she could be placed in a Texas Youth Commission institution until she is 21.

The girl's mother, their lawyer and an Operation Rescue official claim no other Texas juvenile has been prosecuted for trespassing or obstructing a street or passageway — the typical offenses that have led to the girl's arrests and the specific charges she now faces.

Miss Tellier, an eighth-grader from Dallas, insists she is old enough to willfully engage in civil disobedience for religious reasons. Nothing has stopped her efforts.

"Right now, the only thing that could stop me is death," she told the Houston Chronicle.

And so far, she has faced few legal consequences for her actions.

Because of her age, police typically have released Miss Tellier within a few hours of her arrests.

The youngster says the only time she was jailed for as long as three days was last summer in Atlanta. She was released and came home to Texas, ignoring whatever the Georgia judicial system had planned for her and other protesters.

"They said that our trial was going to be postponed till Dec. 1, when of course I wasn't there, and they wrote me a letter saying a bunch of stuff like if I'm ever in Atlanta they'd arrest me and put me in jail and take my license away," said Miss Tellier, who is not old enough to have a driver's license.

Most frequently, she has been arrested in Dallas — 20 or 30 times by her own estimate. But she never has been prosecuted.

The district attorney's office is forbidden by the laws that apply to juveniles from discussing the girl's case outside of the courtroom. So they cannot discuss why the delinquency case is being pressed now.

Normally, young, nonviolent offenders who promise to cooperate are placed on probation and allowed to remain with their parents. Miss Tellier says she won't make any deals.

"If I am fined and found a juvenile delinquent and they threaten to put me on probation, I'm not going to take it," she said in an interview last week after school.

"I'd have to promise I won't rescue again and, of course, I won't do that. Jail won't stop me from rescuing. I don't care how long it is."

Officials convict Houston man of attempted manslaughter against Louisiana policemen

OPELOUSAS, La. (AP) — A Houston man has been convicted of attempted manslaughter for a gunfight with the Opelousas police chief and narcotics officers, but was acquitted of attempted murder.

George William Moore, 25, was convicted late Friday after a two-day trial in state court. The crime carries a maximum sentence of 21 years at hard labor.

Moore said in court that he had pleaded guilty in Texas to car theft, and prosecutor Don Richard said he would see whether the Texas convictions are enough to get him sentenced as a habitual offender.

He was charged with attempted first-degree murder because he shot at police and allegedly tried to kill someone during a drug deal.

Defense co-counsel Randy Wagley argued that Moore came from a violent Houston neighborhood and reacted instinctively to men rushing toward him with guns.

The shoot-out occurred after 7 p.m. on Jan. 20, 1992, when plainclothes officers approached a house where an informant allegedly had set up a drug deal. Shooting began as Police Chief Larry Caillier, Detective Perry Gallow and Sgt. Dwain Grimmett started up the driveway.

None of the officers was injured. One of the three other men — Gregory McGowen, 27, of Missouri City, Texas — was shot in the back of the leg.

Douglas Barrow, 20, of Houston, McGowen and Jessie James Isaac, 27, of Opelousas, also were charged initially with attempted murder and drug charges. Isaac pleaded guilty to possessing cocaine.

KARAOKE: Illusion gives songs, music popularity

(From 1B)

But it's that illusion that apparently makes karaoke popular.

"They have the opportunity to go up and show off," Ms. Brookes said.

Americans have being showing off through karaoke for several years, she said. The sing-along survived an initial yuppie craze and isn't considered just a fad anymore, Ms. Brookes said.

In Japan, karaoke — Japanese for "empty orchestra" — has remained popular for about two decades.

For others, karaoke may just be catching on.

"I may get up there some day," Ms. Smith said, as if wanting encouragement.

"I tried to talk her into it tonight," Hill said. "She thinks her voice will scare everybody off," Hill added with a smile.

Ms. Smith decided not to sing that night but vowed to buy a compact disc by the Eurythmics to practice.

Beaux Arts Ball benefits MCT

By Linda Anderson
Staff writer

Friends of Eliza Doolittle and Prof. Henry Higgins helped Act IX celebrate the opening of Midland Community Theatre's 1993 season with the second annual Beaux Arts Ball, a benefit for MCT presented Saturday night at the Midland Hilton Ballroom. About 250 guests attended, according Peggy Kuss, chairman of the Beaux Arts Ball.

Because MCT's major musical this season is "My Fair Lady," the music and atmosphere of that play were the theme of the benefit. Flowers, including mums and carnations, decked the stairs and flower carts, which also were topped with parasols. Balloons in pastel colors floated above every table.

A buffet dinner of prime rib, Chicken Wellington and Snapper Torquay, vegetables and assorted desserts was served, and during dinner partygoers were treated to the talents of the MCT Singers performing "A Little Bit of Broadway." Featured tunes included music from "Guys and Dolls," "Crazy For You," and of course, "My Fair Lady."

After dinner the eight-piece Connie Mims Band from Houston, presented by Wemus Entertainment, provided music for dancing. Music — from the "golden age of rock 'n roll" to current hits — brought the crowd to its feet and onto the dance floor.

Mrs. Kuss, chairman of the ball, said, "We hope to raise $10,000" from the event. Funds will "be used for several different theater retrospectives throughout the year," she said, adding that the money raised will be used by MCT wherever it is needed.

MCT's planned performances for this year include "My Fair Lady," Feb. 12-March 28; "All's Well That Ends Well," March 12-28; "A Few Good Men," April 16-May 1; "Dearly Departed," May 14-29; "Love Letters," June 4-19; "Breaking Legs," Sept. 10-26; Director's Choice production in October; and "Our Lady of the Tortilla," Nov. 5-21 at the Yucca Theatre. Special productions in 1993 include "The Taffetas," which was presented in January, and "A Christmas Carol: The Musical," scheduled for December.

Christmas letters make season bright

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: What a treat you gave our Marines here at Camp Kinser on the island of Okinawa! We placed the Operation Dear Abby mail under the tree on Christmas Eve, and it was the most popular part of the room. The Marines even abandoned the free snack table to get to those letters!

Van Buren

It was so sweet to see them scanning the envelopes looking for a letter from their home state. Others stood in little groups reading parts of letters aloud to their buddies; some passed snapshots around.

Our USO was open from Christmas Eve morning until the following Sunday night — 83 hours straight — to give the lonely troops somewhere to be. We served a festive Christmas Eve dinner, and a great Christmas morning breakfast with tables of snacks in between. Movies were shown, games and tournaments for prizes were held, but the highlight of Christmas was all those Dear Abby letters from your wonderful readers.

When I get close to the Marines who are young, away from home for the first time, and have no one, it hurts my heart. One fellow told me he had joined the Marine Corps because he had no job, no money, nothing to eat and nowhere to sleep. Here was this tough-looking, handsome Marine — the kindest and gentlest of men.

Dear Abby, please let your readers know what a wonderful gift they gave those young men who are serving on this faraway island in the East China Sea. — BRENDA CARNES, DIRECTOR, KINSER USO

DEAR BRENDA: You just did — and very well. Thank you!

DEAR ABBY: I know this letter is too late for the holiday season, but I hope the guilty parties will see it and remember for next year — or any gift-giving occasion.

Just before Christmas, I had three women ask me: "What are you getting for Christmas?" One was my boss's wife and the other two were co-workers.

Abby, how am I supposed to know what I'm getting? To each I replied, "Well, it wouldn't be a surprise if I knew, would it?"

Abby, I find these questions to be nosy and in poor taste. How dare people ask such personal questions? Even if I knew, I wouldn't tell them.

Please print this letter for people who don't realize how rude this question is. — PREFERS PRIVACY

DEAR PREFERS: Good letter! Another equally nosy question: "What did you get for Christmas?"

DEAR ABBY: In regard to the one-finger salute: My father, Frank Simancik, artist, philosopher and notoriously unorthodox driver, has received many of these salutes. Preferring not to take these gestures as an insult, Dad simply states that he has to be the best driver around because everywhere he goes, people indicate that he's "No. 1."

With such an outlook on life, it's no wonder that, at 81, Dad is healthy, active, sharp as a tack and well-loved. — FRANK'S KID

DEAR READERS: Here's a quote I love but whose author I can't identify. Can anybody help?

"Kindness is the only service that will stand the storm of life and not wash out. It will wear well and be remembered long after the prism of politeness or the complexion of courtesy has faded away. When I am gone, I hope it can be said of me that I plucked a thistle and planted a flower wherever I thought a flower would grow."

Something for everyone — teens to seniors — is in "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It." To order, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Anger Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

First City's demise saddens banker

■ 'I obviously have an awful lot of untold regret about the eventual outcom,' founder's son says.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — James Elkins Jr. watched helplessly this past week as First City Bancorporation — the bank he has been aligned with for much of his life — fell apart.

Federal regulators announced last Wednesday that First City, the largest bank to fail in 1992, had been sold in pieces to 12 buyers.

It was a bittersweet moment for the 73-year-old Elkins, whose father, Judge James Elkins, founded the bank as Guaranty Trust Co. in 1924 and built it into a financial powerhouse.

"I obviously have an awful lot of untold regret about the eventual outcome," Elkins told The Houston Post. "By the same token, I'm terribly proud of all this company and the people in it have done for this city and this state as a whole over the years."

Elkins, once senior chairman of First City, stepped in with outside directors to try and rescue the bank after chief executive Robert Abboud was ousted in 1991.

He said that until 14 months ago, he believed there always would be a First City.

"The only time we really realized it (was over) was when they (federal regulators) walked in and took it away from us," he said.

"We thought we had the problems pretty well solved and had not been given any counter-indication," Elkins said. "We thought we were on the right road, but the authorities didn't think so."

Beginning at 13, the younger Elkins worked at his father's bank. When the bank became First City National Bank after a consolidation with First National Bank in 1956, Elkins became president.

"There was no air-conditioning and you made up monthly statements by hand and you had a great big ceiling fan that blew all the checks all over the building and you perspired a lot," he said. "There was one big, happy family. It was a pretty simple operation."

"Now, it's a completely different world."

Under Elkins' direction, First City became a holding company with banks that blanketed Texas in the 1970s. But then came the oil bust of the mid-1980s.

"The whole economic conditions of these markets, which were dependent on energy and real estate, went into severe depression, and as a result all Texas banks were severely damaged," Elkins said.

He also blamed the "increased vigilance" of government officials as a contributing factor to the banking problem.

By 1987, First City needed a cash infusion to stay in business. Regulators chose a bid by Abboud in 1988. Elkins, then senior chairman, retired from that post, but he kept a seat on the board.

He credits First City employees for making the bank unique and he worries about their future.

And while saddened by First City's demise, he has kept his perspective.

"When you've been around this long, you finally find out not one thing is indispensable," he said.

First Republic penalty draws defendants' ire

DALLAS (AP) — The legal drama that had grown from the nation's biggest bank failure could only be described with Texas-sized superlatives.

The FDIC in July 1991 sued some of the state's most prominent businessmen for more than a half-billion dollars, saying they were negligent in the 1988 collapse of First RepublicBank.

Nineteen months later, attorneys had barely dented a pile of 1 million documents and a witness list expected to exceed 100 people. The saga ended late last week with the 66 defendants agreeing to a $23 million settlement.

In interviews this weekend, several maintained they did nothing wrong, expressing disappointment at losing the chance for court vindication and bitterness at being accused in the first place. But they said the cost of fighting had become too much.

"It galls me and burns me up and turns me so that I don't even speak rationally," said H.R. "Bum" Bright, oilman and former Dallas Cowboys owner who was a director of First Republic and its predecessor Republic Bank for six years.

"What makes me the most unhappy and remorseful is this was just done in an extortive manner," said Paul Seegers, former chief executive of Centex Corp., a Dallas home builder, and director of the bank for 10 years. "It makes me very angry that the government can be so oppressive."

Other defendants included former Dallas mayor Jack Evans, oilman Ray Hunt, Texas Instruments Inc. chief executive Jerry Junkins, Trammell Crow principal J. McDonald Williams, former Zale Corp. chief executive Donald Zale and George Strake, former Texas GOP chairman.

They had already accrued legal fees of several million dollars and were facing FDIC attorneys who appeared to have limitless resources. A trial date was first set for early 1994, then moved back to mid-1995.

"Some of these men had the ability to ride with it," said Mike McKool Jr., a Dallas attorney who coordinated the defendants' 16 law firms. "Most didn't . . . Some of them could not even defend themselves to the point that it got."

Check issuers before leaping into stock sales

By Andree Brooks
N.Y. Times News Service

Last August, the Atmos Energy Corp. of Dallas joined a small but growing number of corporations that allow investors to buy their stock directly rather than through brokers.

In the past, such opportunities were reserved for stockholders who were reinvesting their dividends, but Atmos and other corporations discovered that the concept of buying without paying a broker's commission was very attractive to some investors. Within three months of the Atmos offer, the natural gas utility had raised $2.3 million through stock sales, far in excess of expectations.

Among the companies that have similar programs are Texaco, Procter & Gamble, Exxon and W.R. Grace. Twenty-six corporations now have such programs, according to Joseph Tigue, editor of the Directory of Dividend Reinvestment Plans, which carries the full list. It is published by the Standard & Poor's Corp. of New York City.

But are such deals really a bonanza? It all depends, financial advisers say, on the outlook for the company. Anyone who buys stock in these companies just to avoid a broker's fee could be making a big mistake.

"You should never invest in anything just to save money," warned Iris Taymore Schnitzer, a principal with I&S Associates, financial advisers in Boston.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Co-owner can't be forced to forfeit stock

By Bill Doyle

Q: I have some telephone company stock, which I purchased and had my eldest son's name put on as joint owner. Since then, I have remarried and would like to put my husband's name on the stock as joint owner.

My son refuses to sign the stock certificates and claims he doesn't have to. Where do I turn now?

Doyle

A: Back to your son, with the hope he does an about-face. However, he can't be forced to do so. If he stands firm, there is no legitimate way to remove his name.

When you bought that stock and put your son's name on it as joint owner, the registered ownership read your name "and" your son's name "as joint tenants with right of survivorship."

Stripped of legalese, that means your son owns the stock just as much as you do. While you are both living, you and he are joint owners. When either you or your son dies, the survivor becomes the sole owner.

Unless you can talk your son into signing the assignment form on the back of the stock certificate or a "stock power" form, which accomplishes the same purpose, there is no way you can make your new husband or anyone else the joint owner. This applies even though you bought the stock and, as I assume is the case, paid for it with your money.

Q: Please discuss capital gains and the tax on them. When figuring that tax, do you use the price you paid for a stock or its appreciated value at the time you sell it?

A: Both. The money you paid for a stock — which includes its price and brokerage commission — is your "basis," the cost for tax purposes. The money you receive when you sell — which is the selling price minus brokerage commission — is your sales price.

The difference between your basis and your sales price is either a capital gain or a capital loss.

You are required to report capital gains and capital losses on Schedule D of your Form 1040 federal income tax return.

Assuming the stock appreciated in value, you have a capital gain. Short-term capital gains on stocks and other "capital assets" owned for one year or less are taxable at the same rate as ordinary income. Long-term capital gains on capital assets owned for more than a year are taxed at the same rate as your ordinary income if you are in the 15 percent or 28 percent bracket; at 28 percent if you are in the 31 percent bracket.

These are the rules as they now stand and are used for reporting capital gains on 1992 income tax returns. Horseplayers I have known would lay long odds the capital gains tax treatment will change under the Clinton administration.

Q: My husband and I are concerned because of your recent explanation that a married person can leave a spouse unlimited amounts, free from federal estate tax, "providing the surviving spouse is a U.S. citizen."

I am a U.S. citizen. He has been a resident alien since 1948. We've always understood that a resident alien has all the privileges and responsibilities of a U.S. citizen, except the right to vote or become president.

What causes an estate left to a spouse who is not a U.S. citizen to be subject to federal estate tax? More important, what revision can we make in our estate planning to avoid that tax?

A: A provision of the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988 is the cause of your problem. It removed the estate tax marital deduction for property passing directly to a noncitizen spouse.

However, that marital deduction is allowed if the surviving spouse's interest is in a qualifying domestic trust — QDT, for short. Because QDTs are complicated, you should set one up only under the guidance of an experienced tax practitioner.

Super Bowl XXVII

Dallas running back Emmitt Smith (22) picks up yardage under Buffalo linebacker Cornelius Bennett sending the Cowboys to a "Super" romp.

Oh 'Boys, a third title

Dallas climbs worst to first

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

PASADENA, Calif. — It was quicker than anyone could imagine.

Three seasons ago, the Dallas Cowboys were the worst team in NFL history. Now they're Super Bowl champions and they did it with four of the quickest touchdowns ever.

That left the Buffalo Bills as the first team to lose three straight Super Bowls and the NFC's supremacy intact — nine straight NFL titles, seven in overwhelming fashion, this time 52-17.

With MVP Troy Aikman throwing for four touchdowns and Charles Haley and Ken Norton leading a defense that forced a record nine turnovers, the Cowboys scored two touchdowns 15 seconds apart in the first period of Sunday's Super Bowl and two more 18 seconds apart in the second.

"Our defense is somebody now," Norton said of a unit that had no Pro Bowlers to six for Dallas' offense. "Everybody knows who we are."

Along with Aikman, the defense was the factor that made Buffalo the first team to lose three straight Super Bowls after becoming just the second team to make it three straight times.

"You always wonder why, why us?" said Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly, who was knocked out of the game with 6:52 in the first half when he resprained his right knee. "We turned the ball over nine times and you can't beat a college team doing that."

Two of Aikman's TD passes went to Michael Irvin and one each to Jay Novacek and Alvin Harper as the NFC East won the Super Bowl for the third straight year, a record. The three winners were different — Dallas, Washington and the New York Giants — but the victim each time was the Bills.

"Early on, the whole team was a little uptight," said Aikman, who was 22

■ Heavy pressure and Buffalo turnovers equal a Super Bowl rout for Dallas.

By Frank Litsky
N.Y. Times News Service

PASADENA, Calif. — With its youth and lack of Super Bowl experience and unfamiliarity playing against a hurry-up offense, this could have been a disastrous day for the Dallas Cowboys' defense. Instead, the Cowboys made big plays against the Buffalo Bills, with five takeaways in the first half alone.

In that half, the Cowboys made two goal-line stands, scored one touchdown on a fumble they caused by racking the quarterback and scored another touchdown after an interception.

They kept constant pressure on Jim Kelly, the Bills' quarterback, eventually knocking him out of the game on a sack, and they got one key hit after another from many players, notably Charles Haley, Ken Norton Jr. and Jimmie Jones.

off a pass, and James Washington intercepted. Six plays later, the Cowboys scored their first touchdown.

One play after the ensuing kickoff, Haley racked Kelly, the ball popped loose and Jones picked it off in the air on the 2-yard line and stepped in for a touchdown.

Late in the second quarter, with Frank Reich at quarterback for the injured Kelly, it was more of the same as Leon Lett smacked into Reich, the ball came loose and Jones recovered. One play later, the Cowboys scored again. Jones became only the third defensive player in Super Bowl history to recover two fumbles in one game.

Norton has been better known for his heritage — his father is the former heavyweight boxing champion — than his football. Here, he showed his family had more than one dominant athlete.

In the second quarter, when the Bills had third down on the Cowboys' 1-foot line, Kenneth Davis tried to ram over left guard, only to have Norton stop him cold. On fourth down, the Cowboys intercepted Kelly in the end zone. Five minutes later, Norton hurdled a blocker and crashed into Kelly, leaving the quarterback with an injured right knee and knocking him out of the game for good.

PASADENA, Calif. — For Troy Aikman, the setup was almost too perfect, too storybook even for nearby Hollywood.

Here was the golden boy quarterback returning to the place where he played his college football, leading the Dallas Cowboys, America's team, in the Super Bowl, America's game.

Of course he was the MVP. How could he not have been?

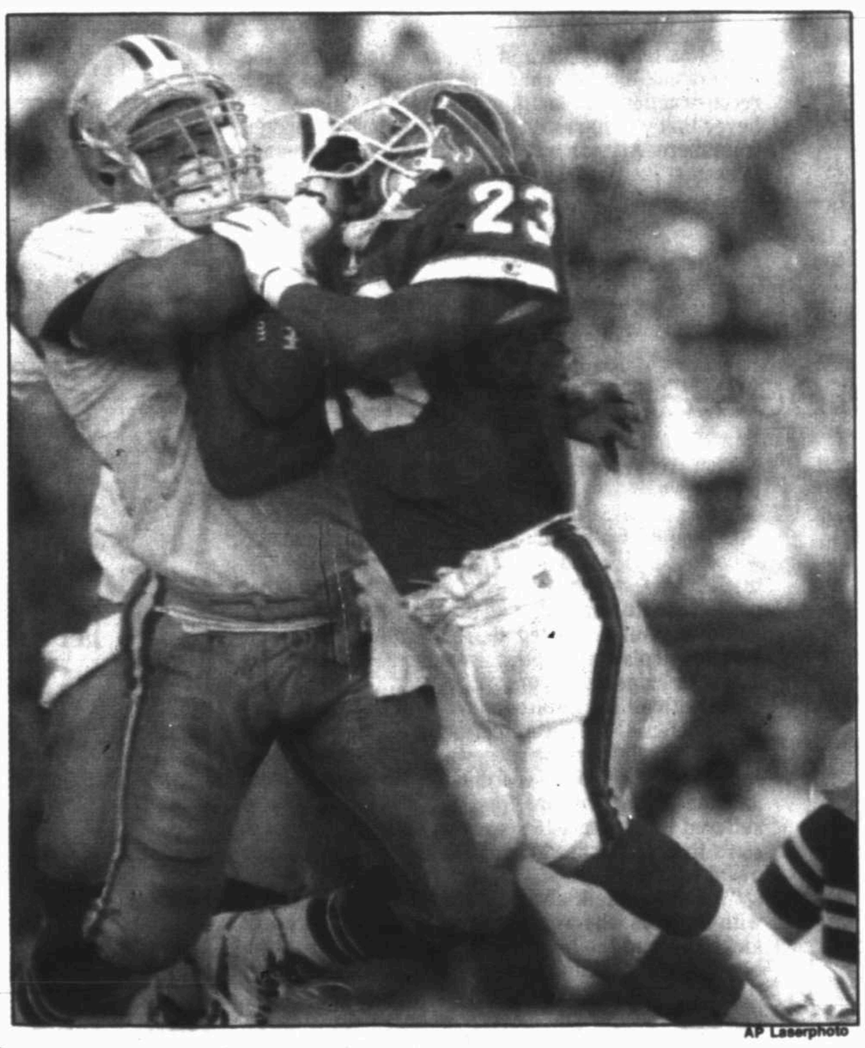

"This game meant everything to me," Aikman said after leading Dallas to a 52-17 rout of Buffalo with four touchdown passes Sunday.

"It's a tremendous amount of weight off my shoulders. No matter what happens for the rest of my career, at least I can say I took my team to a Super Bowl and I was able to win."

Playing in the Rose Bowl where he starred with UCLA, Aikman had a field day on his favorite field. He threw three first half touchdowns, two within 18 seconds, to break the game open.

Then he completed the virtuoso performance with a 45-TD pass to Alvin Harper. He finished the game complet-

First City's demise saddens banker

■ 'I obviously have an awful lot of untold regret about the eventual outcom,' founder's son says.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — James Elkins Jr. watched helplessly this past week as First City Bancorporation — the bank he has been aligned with for much of his life — fell apart.

Federal regulators announced last Wednesday that First City, the largest bank to fail in 1992, had been sold in pieces to 12 buyers.

It was a bittersweet moment for the 73-year-old Elkins, whose father, Judge James Elkins, founded the bank as Guaranty Trust Co. in 1924 and built it into a financial powerhouse.

"I obviously have an awful lot of untold regret about the eventual outcome," Elkins told The Houston Post. "By the same token, I'm terribly proud of all this company and the people in it have done for this city and this state as a whole over the years."

Elkins, once senior chairman of First City, stepped in with outside directors to try and rescue the bank after chief executive Robert Abboud was ousted in 1991.

He said that until 14 months ago, he believed there always would be a First City.

"The only time we really realized it (was over) was when they (federal regulators) walked in and took it away from us," he said.

"We thought we had the problems pretty well solved and had not been given any counter-indication," Elkins said. "We thought we were on the right road, but the authorities didn't think so."

Beginning at 13, the younger Elkins worked at his father's bank. When the bank became First City National Bank after a consolidation with First National Bank in 1956, Elkins became president.

"There was no air-conditioning and you made up monthly statements by hand and you had a great big ceiling fan that blew all the checks all over the building and you perspired a lot," he said. "There was one big, happy family. It was a pretty simple operation."

"Now, it's a completely different world."

Under Elkins' direction, First City became a holding company with banks that blanketed Texas in the 1970s. But then came the oil bust of the mid-1980s.

"The whole economic conditions of these markets, which were dependent on energy and real estate, went into severe depression, and as a result all Texas banks were severely damaged," Elkins said.

He also blamed the "increased vigilance" of government officials as a contributing factor to the banking problem.

By 1987, First City needed a cash infusion to stay in business. Regulators chose a bid by Abboud in 1988. Elkins, then senior chairman, retired from that post, but he kept a seat on the board.

He credits First City employees for making the bank unique and he worries about their future.

And while saddened by First City's demise, he has kept his perspective.

"When you've been around this long, you finally find out not one thing is indispensable," he said.

First Republic penalty draws defendants' ire

DALLAS (AP) — The legal drama that had grown from the nation's biggest bank failure could only be described with Texas-sized superlatives.

The FDIC in July 1991 sued some of the state's most prominent businessmen for more than a half-billion dollars, saying they were negligent in the 1988 collapse of First RepublicBank.

Nineteen months later, attorneys had barely dented a pile of 1 million documents and a witness list expected to exceed 100 people. The saga ended late last week with the 66 defendants agreeing to a $23 million settlement.

In interviews this weekend, several maintained they did nothing wrong, expressing disappointment at losing the chance for court vindication and bitterness at being accused in the first place. But they said the cost of fighting had become too much.

"It galls me and burns me up and turns me so that I don't even speak rationally," said H.R. "Bum" Bright, oilman and former Dallas Cowboys owner who was a director of First Republic and its predecessor Republic Bank for six years.

"What makes me the most unhappy and remorseful is this was just done in an extortive manner," said Paul Seegers, former chief executive of Centex Corp., a Dallas home builder, and director of the bank for 10 years. "It makes me very angry that the government can be so oppressive."

Other defendants included former Dallas mayor Jack Evans, oilman Ray Hunt, Texas Instruments Inc. chief executive Jerry Junkins, Trammell Crow principal J. McDonald Williams, former Zale Corp. chief executive Donald Zale and George Strake, former Texas GOP chairman.

They had already accrued legal fees of several million dollars and were facing FDIC attorneys who appeared to have limitless resources. A trial date was first set for early 1994, then moved back to mid-1995.

"Some of these men had the ability to ride with it," said Mike McKool Jr., a Dallas attorney who coordinated the defendants' 16 law firms. "Most didn't . . . Some of them could not even defend themselves to the point that it got."

Check issuers before leaping into stock sales

By Andree Brooks
N.Y. Times News Service

Last August, the Atmos Energy Corp. of Dallas joined a small but growing number of corporations that allow investors to buy their stock directly rather than through brokers.

In the past, such opportunities were reserved for stockholders who were reinvesting their dividends, but Atmos and other corporations discovered that the concept of buying without paying a broker's commission was very attractive to some investors. Within three months of the Atmos offer, the natural gas utility had raised $2.3 million through stock sales, far in excess of expectations.

Among the companies that have similar programs are Texaco, Procter & Gamble, Exxon and W.R. Grace. Twenty-six corporations now have such programs, according to Joseph Tigue, editor of the Directory of Dividend Reinvestment Plans, which carries the full list. It is published by the Standard & Poor's Corp. of New York City.

But are such deals really a bonanza? It all depends, financial advisers say, on the outlook for the company. Anyone who buys stock in these companies just to avoid a broker's fee could be making a big mistake.

"You should never invest in anything just to save money," warned Iris Taymore Schnitzer, a principal with I&S Associates, financial advisers in Boston.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Co-owner can't be forced to forfeit stock

By Bill Doyle

Q: I have some telephone company stock, which I purchased and had my eldest son's name put on as joint owner. Since then, I have remarried and would like to put my husband's name on the stock as joint owner.

My son refuses to sign the stock certificates and claims he doesn't have to. Where do I turn now?

Doyle

A: Back to your son, with the hope he does an about-face. However, he can't be forced to do so. If he stands firm, there is no legitimate way to remove his name.

When you bought that stock and put your son's name on it as joint owner, the registered ownership read your name "and" your son's name "as joint tenants with right of survivorship."

Stripped of legalese, that means your son owns the stock just as much as you do. While you are both living, you and he are joint owners. When either you or your son dies, the survivor becomes the sole owner.

Unless you can talk your son into signing the assignment form on the back of the stock certificate or a "stock power" form, which accomplishes the same purpose, there is no way you can make your new husband or anyone else the joint owner. This applies even though you bought the stock and, as I assume is the case, paid for it with your money.

Q: Please discuss capital gains and the tax on them. When figuring that tax, do you use the price you paid for a stock or its appreciated value at the time you sell it?

A: Both. The money you paid for a stock — which includes its price and brokerage commission — is your "basis," the cost for tax purposes. The money you receive when you sell — which is the selling price minus brokerage commission — is your sales price.

The difference between your basis and your sales price is either a capital gain or a capital loss.

You are required to report capital gains and capital losses on Schedule D of your Form 1040 federal income tax return.

Assuming the stock appreciated in value, you have a capital gain. Short-term capital gains on stocks and other "capital assets" owned for one year or less are taxable at the same rate as ordinary income. Long-term capital gains on capital assets owned for more than a year are taxed at the same rate as your ordinary income if you are in the 15 percent or 28 percent bracket; at 28 percent if you are in the 31 percent bracket.

These are the rules as they now stand and are used for reporting capital gains on 1992 income tax returns. Horseplayers I have known would lay long odds the capital gains tax treatment will change under the Clinton administration.

Q: My husband and I are concerned because of your recent explanation that a married person can leave a spouse unlimited amounts, free from federal estate tax, "providing the surviving spouse is a U.S. citizen."

I am a U.S. citizen. He has been a resident alien since 1948. We've always understood that a resident alien has all the privileges and responsibilities of a U.S. citizen, except the right to vote or become president.

What causes an estate left to a spouse who is not a U.S. citizen to be subject to federal estate tax? More important, what revision can we make in our estate planning to avoid that tax?

A: A provision of the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988 is the cause of your problem. It removed the estate tax marital deduction for property passing directly to a noncitizen spouse.

However, that marital deduction is allowed if the surviving spouse's interest is in a qualifying domestic trust — QDT, for short. Because QDTs are complicated, you should set one up only under the guidance of an experienced tax practitioner.

Oh 'Boys, a third title

Dallas climbs worst to first

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

PASADENA, Calif. — It was quicker than anyone could imagine.

Three seasons ago, the Dallas Cowboys were the worst team in NFL history. Now they're Super Bowl champions and they did it with four of the quickest touchdowns ever.

That left the Buffalo Bills as the first team to lose three straight Super Bowls and the NFC's supremacy intact — nine straight NFL titles, seven in overwhelming fashion, this time 52-17.

With MVP Troy Aikman throwing for four touchdowns and Charles Haley and Ken Norton leading a defense that forced a record nine turnovers, the Cowboys scored two touchdowns 15 seconds apart in the first period of Sunday's Super Bowl and two more 18 seconds apart in the second.

"Our defense is somebody now," Norton said of a unit that had no Pro Bowlers to six for Dallas' offense. "Everybody knows who we are."

Along with Aikman, the defense was the factor that made Buffalo the first team to lose three straight Super Bowls after becoming just the second team to make it three straight times.

"You always wonder why, why us?" said Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly, who was knocked out of the game with 6:52 in the first half when he resprained his right knee. "We turned the ball over nine times and you can't beat a college team doing that."

Two of Aikman's TD passes went to Michael Irvin and one each to Jay Novacek and Alvin Harper as the NFC East won the Super Bowl for the third straight year, a record. The three winners were different — Dallas, Washington and the New York Giants — but the victim each time was the Bills.

"Early on, the whole team was a little uptight," said Aikman, who was 22

■ Heavy pressure and Buffalo turnovers equal a Super Bowl rout for Dallas.

By Frank Litsky

PASADENA, Calif. — With its youth and lack of Super Bowl experience and unfamiliarity playing against a hurry-up offense, this could have been a disastrous day for the Dallas Cowboys' defense. Instead, the Cowboys made big plays against the Buffalo Bills, with five takeaways in the first half alone.

In that half, the Cowboys made two goal-line stands, scored one touchdown on a fumble they caused by racking the quarterback and scored another touchdown after an interception.

They kept constant pressure on Jim Kelly, the Bills' quarterback, eventually knocking him out of the game on a sack, and they got one key hit after another from many players, notably Charles Haley, Ken Norton Jr. and Jimmie Jones.

off a pass, and James Washington intercepted. Six plays later, the Cowboys scored their first touchdown.

One play after the ensuing kickoff, Haley racked Kelly, the ball popped loose and Jones picked it off in the air on the 2-yard line and stepped in for a touchdown.

Late in the second quarter, with Frank Reich at quarterback for the injured Kelly, it was more of the same as Leon Lett smacked into Reich, the ball came loose and Jones recovered. One play later, the Cowboys scored again. Jones became only the third defensive player in Super Bowl history to recover two fumbles in one game.

Norton has been better known for his heritage — his father is the former heavyweight boxing champion — than his football. Here, he showed his family had more than one dominant athlete.

In the second quarter, when the Bills had third down on the Cowboys' 1-foot line, Kenneth Davis tried to ram over left guard, only to have Norton stop him cold. On fourth down, the Cowboys intercepted Kelly in the end zone. Five minutes later, Norton hurdled a blocker and crashed into Kelly, leaving the quarterback with an injured right knee and knocking him out of the game for good.

Super Bowl XXVII

Wannstedt gets best of farewells

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys gave defensive coordinator Dave Wannstedt the ultimate goodbye present, a Super Bowl ring to wear to Chicago.

The Cowboys fashioned their first Super Bowl victory in 15 years with a record nine turnovers by their no-name, big-play defense.

"I can leave for the Bears knowing my job is complete," Wannstedt said. "I can leave with a good feeling knowing that everything we worked for the last four years paid off. As young as these Cowboys are they will be on top a long time."

The NFL's youngest team knocked out Jim Kelly, saved one touchdown with an end zone interception on a brilliant goal-line stand, and caused turnovers that produced four scores in Sunday's 52-17 rout of the Buffalo Bills.

"Our youth showed up," Wannstedt said. "We knew we'd have to take the ball away from them to win and we did it. It was an even game except for those turnovers."

Wannstedt's masterpiece included a bit of mind-reading of the Buffalo offense on a fourth-and-1 call with the Bills trailing just 14-7 in the first half.

Wannstedt figured the Bills would pass from the 1 and he sent in an extra defensive back. Wannstedt was correct and the confused Kelly served up an interception to Thomas Everett.

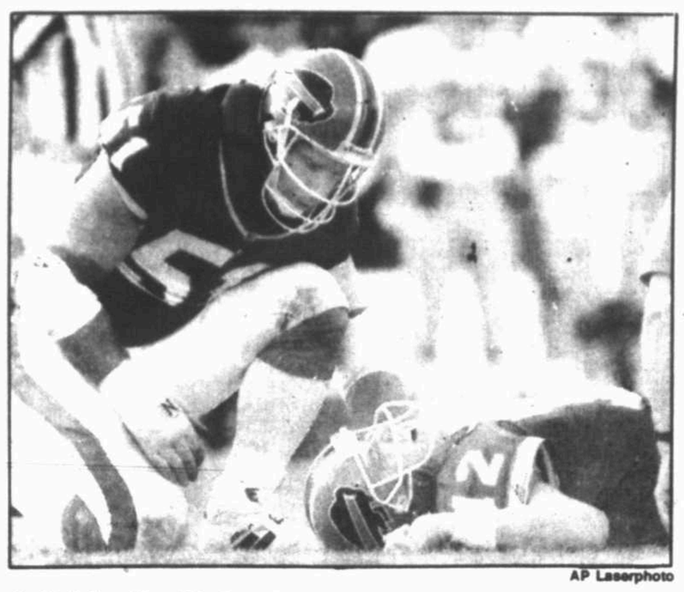

"It was a big play, maybe the biggest play of the game," Wannstedt said. "We thought they might pass and that's the way it turned out. It was a big momentum swing."

Wannstedt signed with Chicago to replace Mike Ditka with coach Jimmy Johnson's blessing during the playoffs

"We wanted to send coach Wannstedt to Chicago with a ring and we did it," defensive tackle Leon Lett said. "We wanted to make this last game special for him."

Tackle Jimmie Jones scored a touchdown from 2 yards out when Charles Haley knocked the ball away from Kelly into Jones waiting arms and Dallas' defensive dominance was underway.

"It was my first score ever," Jones said. "It felt good doing this for coach Wannstedt. He taught me a lot. He instilled an aggressive attitude in his players. We didn't have any stars but we'll have diamonds in a Super Bowl ring."

Buffalo's Jim Ritcher (51) looks over his fallen quarterback Jim Kelly, who was injured in the first half.

Kelly down and out

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — For Jim Kelly, it all boiled down to one word: "Why?"

His knee swollen and sore, Kelly gingerly stepped up to a makeshift lecturn, bracing himself on a security guard who held his crutches.

He asked a question no one could answer: "Why did we deserve to lose today?"

Knocked out of the game with 6:52 left in the second quarter when linebacker Ken Norton, Jr. rolled onto his right knee, Kelly knew immediately he would not get a chance to avenge the Buffalo Bills' last two Super Bowl losses.

It was the same knee that Houston Oiler defensive end Ray Childress rolled onto in Buffalo's season finale, causing a sprain that kept Kelly out of the Bills first two playoff games.

"It was the same thing that happened against Houston," he said. "A guy fell on it and it popped."

Just like that, Kelly was finished for the day. There would be no chance to make people forget Super Bowls past. He now must live with the sad numbers: 50-for-95, with only two touchdowns and six interceptions in his three Super Bowls.

He insisted he didn't care about his ignominious place in football history.

"We've made it three times," Kelly said. "There's a lot of teams that never made it once."

Kelly said he was "proud to be the quarterback to lead this team in three Super Bowls. We haven't won yet, but we still have a lot to hang our hats on."

Even when he was in there, Kelly came up flat.

He completed 4 of 7 passes for 82 yards, but more importantly, he threw two interceptions and lost a fumble — a big fumble.

After dropping back to pass with 1:21 left in the first quarter, Kelly coughed up the ball as he was blind-sided by Charles Haley at his own 2 yard line.

The ball bounced right into defensive lineman Jimmie Jones' hands, and Jones stepped into the end zone to make it 14-7.

Kelly was also hit as he threw his first interception, which Dallas converted into a touchdown that tied the game at 7-7.

His second interception came at the Dallas 1, when a hurried Kelly lobbed a fourth-down pass into the end zone that was intercepted by Thomas Everett.

"We turned the ball over nine times," Kelly said. "You can't beat a college team doing that."

Frank Reich, who led the Bills on the greatest comeback in NFL history while subbing for Kelly against Houston in the Bills' first playoff game, replaced Kelly after Norton knocked him out of the game.

But the aggressive Dallas defense didn't allow Reich a chance to repeat his spectacular performance in Buffalo's 41-38 victory over the Oilers on Jan. 3, when the Bills erased a 32-point deficit.

The Cowboys ended up picking off Reich twice.

"It's a very humbling experience," Reich said. "As happy as I felt after the Oiler comeback win, I feel that disappointed right now."

"Why?," he asked. "Why has it happened like this?"

MVP: Aikman is close to perfect

ing 22 of 30 attempts for 273 yards. In his three playoff games this season, Aikman threw for eight touchdowns and no interceptions.

It was the kind of day every UCLA quarterback dreams about having in the Rose Bowl.

"I didn't draw parallels with the Rose Bowl," Aikman said. "It was nice to be back and practice at UCLA and to play here where I played in college. In college, I was not able to win a Rose Bowl. It was something I always wanted."

The Super Bowl will make up for it.

Aikman's first TD, a 23-yarder to tight end Jay Novacek, tied the score in the first quarter.

Then, as the first half reached the two-minute warning, he threw for 18 yards and a TD to Michael Irvin. When Dallas intercepted Buffalo on the next series, Aikman made the Bills pay for the mistake immediately, nailing Irvin again, this time on a 19-yard TD pitch.

"They started with a lot of two-deep coverage, taking the wideouts away," Aikman said. "They forced us to come underneath. I started finding Jay inside."

After a turnover touchdown put Buffalo behind, the Bills altered their coverage. "Once we were ahead, they couldn't afford to sit back," Aikman said. "They had to try to make something happen, pressure the quarterback."

Buffalo lined up with a safety in the middle, giving Aikman 1-on-1 coverage for Irvin and resulting in the two quick touchdowns.

Aikman admitted that the scope of the Super Bowl affected him early.

"I was just thinking, 'Stay relaxed. Don't make the game bigger than what it appears,' " he said. "Going out and seeing the pageantry of it, I had to talk myself into relaxing. Early on, I was caught up in the moment and too anxious. I didn't feel real comfortable until midway through the second quarter. Then I got into a groove."

It was the sweet completion of a long trip for the quarterback, who was the No. 1 pick in the 1989 draft and the whipping boy of a 1-15 Cowboys season.

He was the first piece of the puzzle for Dallas, the cornerstone around which the Cowboys began their reconstruction. Coach Jimmy Johnson has always believed that you start with a strong quarterback and go from there. Aikman was his man from the beginning. It seems like ages ago.

Aikman had impeccible credentials for the assignment. In two seasons at UCLA, he completed 64.8 percent of his passes for 5,298 yards and 41 touchdowns. He finished his college career as the third rated quarterback in NCAA history and took the Bruins to 20 victories in 24 games.

fact, although the Cowboys had the National Football League's top-ranked defense this year, their only celebrated defensive player is Haley, and he earned his status with the San Francisco 49ers before becoming a Cowboy this year.

Haley is smaller than many defensive ends, but he is so quick that he can get by blockers who cannot match his moves. He was everywhere in the Bills' backfield, and when the Cowboys needed a big play he made it.

For example, late in the second quarter, the Bills were driving for a touchdown that would have made the score 14-14. On third-and-1 from the Cowboys' 3, they gave the ball to Thurman Thomas over right guard.

Haley and Russell Maryland plugged the hole; Thomas was held for no gain and the Bills settled for a field goal. That was costly because the Cowboys scored two touchdowns in the next two minutes for a 28-10 halftime lead, and the Bills left the field befuddled and in deep trouble.

More heroes? Safety Thomas Everett made an endzone interception. Larry Brown batted down a pass in the end zone. Maryland kept stopping runs. Lett forced a fumble that led to a Cowboys touchdown.

In the fourth quarter, Reich fumbled a snap and Norton recovered the ball and ran it in for a touchdown.

It was not a perfect day for the Cowboys' defense. Not when Brown's holding penalty in the first quarter wiped out a sack and allowed the Bills to keep driving to their first touchdown. Not when a roughing-the-passer penalty against Lett in the first quarter allowed the Bills to keep the ball rather than punt (Washington's interception two plays later left the Cowboys in good shape).

But with all the inspired plays by the Cowboys' no-name defense, they were certainly entitled to a few slipups. Their performance was a tribute to their soon-to-leave defensive coordinator, Dave Wannstedt, and the highest reward for the older Cowboys who suffered through a 1-15 season in 1989, Jimmy Johnson's first as the head coach. As Norton said of that awful season:

"We always talk about it. We have a strong bond with the guys who went through the battles and were kicked around the league the way we were for a couple of years. That makes where we are now that much sweeter. We worked very hard to get here, and one attribute that we have, even when we were being kicked around, is the fact that we played hard. That carried over and made us the success that we are now."

GAME: Third biggest margin

of 30 for 273 yards. "I really had to talk myself into staying relaxed out there. This is the greatest feeling that I've ever had in my life and I wish every player could feel it."

There was another first — Jimmy Johnson became the first coach ever to win both a national college title and a Super Bowl. The NFL title came just three years after he began his pro coaching career with a 1-15 record.

It was the Cowboys' third Super Bowl victory, but their first in 15 years and Johnson got his just reward — a dousing by his players at the 2-minute warning that left his hairsprayed coiffure uncharacteristically mussed.

"I played for a national championship team, I coached a national championship team and I coached a Super Bowl team," Johnson said. "There's a common thread in all three — quality people who are committed to do their best."

"Nine turnovers in the game and they converted five into TD scores," said Buffalo coach Marv Levy. "We picked the wrong day to play poorly."

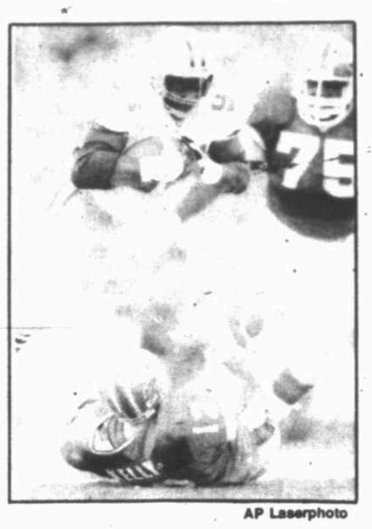

The Cowboys won on both sides of the ball. Emmitt Smith, the NFL's leading rusher, ran for 108 yards on 22 earries and became the first rushing leader to win a Super Bowl. He was the first to ever play in it.

After spotting the Bills an early 7-0 lead on a TD set up by a blocked punt, the Cowboys turned on the defense, getting five of the turnovers in the first half.

James Washington's interception of Kelly set up a 23-yard TD pass to Novacek. Fifteen seconds later, Haley knocked the ball loose from Kelly at the goal line to defensive tackle Jimmie Jones, who took two steps into the end zone for the score that put the Cowboys ahead for good.

"I was reading and reacting just like I was supposed to," Jones said. "All of a sudden Charles hit Kelly and the ball fell right in my hands. I couldn't believe it. I hadn't even scored a touchdown in high school."

Then Norton and Vinson Smith sparked a goal-line stand that stopped the Bills on three shots inside the Dallas 1 — the last on a fourth-down pass from the 6-inch line. Dallas defensive coordinator Dave Wannstedt — whose prowess helped earn him the head coaching job in Chicago next season — had a nickel defense in on the play and Thomas Everett intercepted Kelly's desperation pass in the end zone.

Dallas' Jimmie Jones ...finding the thrill

"I wish we had run it in," Kelly said. "We'd run that play in practice and it worked."

Everett had a second interception in the fourth quarter that set up a 10-yard TD run by Smith. Then Norton scored — taking in a fumble from 9 yards out after it bounced into his arms following a high snap.

That first interception was typical for Buffalo.

With and without Kelly, who reinjured his right knee with 6:52 left in the first half, it couldn't produce when it had to.

Frank Reich, who engineered the biggest comeback in NFL history when he brought the Bills back from a 35-3 third-quarter deficit in the wild-card game with Houston, had no such miracles in him this day although he did throw a 40-yard TD pass to Don Beebe on the final play of the third quarter.

On his first series, Reich drove Buffalo from his own 33 to the Dallas 3.

But Haley stuffed Thurman Thomas on a third and one from the 3-yard line, forcing a 21-yard field goal by Steve Christie that cut the deficit to 14-10 with 3:24 left in the half.

It was the last gasp for the Bills.

First Aikman drove the Cowboys 77 yards in 5 plays, hitting Irvin for a 19-yard TD on his favorite slant across the middle.

Then Leon Lett stripped Thomas on the first play from scrimmage and Jones recovered on the 18.

And then Aikman found Irvin at the 2 and he stepped around Nate Odomes for the score. It came 18 seconds after the previous TD and sent the Cowboys off with a 28-10 halftime lead, all but ending the game.

"Those two TDs were the turning point," Levy said.

Johnson made sure that his team didn't sit on the 28-10 halftime lead, reminding them about the Bills' comeback against Houston.

"We didn't talk long," guard Nate Newton said. "Jimmy said damn Houston. We ain't Houston. We're the Cowboys."

They were.

Lin Elliott's 20-yard field goal on the first series of the second half made it 31-10. Then, after the Reich-Beebe hookup had made it 31-17 and aroused the Buffalo fans — a minority in the crowd of 98,374 — Aikman put them out of their misery by hitting a wide open Harper from 45 yards with 10 minutes left in the game.

Then Norton made it 52-17, the third biggest margin in Super Bowl history. It might have been more. But Lett, racing toward the end zone with a fumble with 4:42 left in the game, had the ball knocked from his hands by Beebe as he tried to jog in, holding the ball knee-high in his right hand.

"I thought I was there," Lett said, adding that Johnson told him: "Don't celebrate until you score."

At the beginning, it was the Cowboys, the NFL's youngest team with an average age of 26, who looked like they might self-destruct with three costly early penalties.

The Buffalo defense and special teams set up the first score — along with a critical Dallas penalty.

"I thought it would be a tough ballgame," Smith said. "But things just started working out for us."

For NFC teams, it almost always does.

SUPER BOWL
At A Glance
By The Associated Press
SUMMARY
Dallas' top-rated defense forced nine turnovers and the Cowboys' offensive weapons all enjoyed big days in a 52-17 rout of Buffalo in the 27th Super Bowl.
The Bills' lost the Super Bowl for the third straight year and allowed the second-highest point total in history.
STAR
Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman completed 22 of 30 passes for 273 yards and four TDs. He also ran three times for 28 yards, did not throw an interception and was named the game's most valuable player.
STYMIED AGAIN
It was another poor Super Bowl for Buffalo's Jim Kelly, who was four of seven for 82 yards with two interceptions and a costly fumble when a knee injury sent him to the sidelines with 6:52 left in the first half. Kelly watched the second half on crutches as Frank Reich, who engineered the Bills' 41-38 overtime win against Houston and 24-3 victory over Pittsburgh, failed to come close this time. Reich was 18 for 31 for 194 yards, one touchdown and two interceptions.
SUFFERING
Thurman Thomas, the NFL's leading all-purpose back the last four years and a key to the Bills' offense, also had another poor Super Bowl — 19 yards on 11 carries and 10 yards on four catches. In last year's game, Thomas had 13 yards on 10 carries and gained 27 yards on four catches.
STREAKS
The NFC has won the last nine Super Bowls by an average score of 38.4-15.7.

Toyota wins Rolex race

■ More Sports/6C

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Toyota Eagle spent a good portion of Sunday on the endangered list. However, in the end, the prototype co-driven by P.J. Jones, Rocky Moran and Mark Dismore survived and won the Rolex 24-Hour sports car endurance race at Daytona International Speedway.

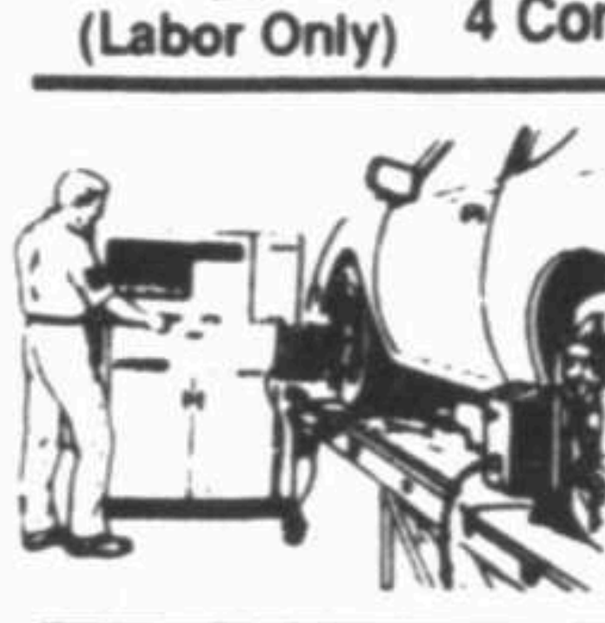

The car, known more for its sprinting ability than for its endurance, started from the pole and led numerous times, battling with the other Dan Gurney All American Racers Eagle in the early hours, then with a Jaguar, and finally a Nissan.

Meanwhile, the Toyota overcame Dismore's brush with the wall in the pre-dawn hours of Sunday, a 76-minute pit stop at midmorning to replace the gearbox and the rear end, and several shorter non-routine stops to replace brake pads.

Jones, at 23 the older of former Indianapolis 500 winner Parnelli Jones' two racing sons, set a qualifying record in putting the Eagle on the pole Thursday. He was at the wheel when the Nissan shared by former Daytona winners John Paul Jr. and Derek Bell of England and Italians Gianpiero Moretti and Massimo Sigala stopped on course only 1 hour, 39 minutes from the 3 p.m. EST finish, with Moretti at the wheel.

The Nissan had built a lead of just over two laps over the Toyota, which moved back into the top spot at 1:43 p.m. and drove on to give the Japanese car-builder its second straight Daytona victory. An all-Japanese team gave Nissan its first-ever 24-hour race win last year.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Ambition propels you forward at work. However, obstacles could stand in your way unless you adopt a more cooperative attitude. Business associates and family members alike may grow resentful if not kept informed of your plans. In summer, make a point of asking others for their opinions. Business and financial opportunities will abound in the fall. Careful planning and improved finances put you in a happy holiday mood for December.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: poet Langston Hughes, singer Don Everly, actor Sherman Hemsley, Princess Stephanie of Monaco.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A surprising opportunity will come your way. Dress attractively but on the conservative side. An evening out may include a club function or business meeting.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your desire to implement new methods quickly may have a steamroller effect on your associates. Work your way up by taking smaller steps without fanfare. Keep your game plan under wraps.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Put your determination and innovative methods to work, even if you must postpone socializing. Sticking to a strict timetable guarantees you better business results.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Curb a tendency to withdraw when others question your ideas. You must learn to speak out when something is important to you. An older person could prove to be your strongest ally.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An excellent time to find out the truth and clear up puzzling mysteries. A friend is the bearer of terrific news. Financial problems ease. Letters have special importance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Going along with established procedures will let you make faster headway. Do not allow someone's opinion of you to affect your morale. You cannot afford to rock the boat in romance right now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Learn how to hold others spellbound. Then you will be in a position to command top dollar for your skills! Get down to brass tacks in financial negotiations.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Take a firm line this morning. Afternoon will bring many changes. Socializing adds a special dimension to your evening. Listen carefully to teen-agers' problems before offering any advice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You could find yourself in unusual circumstances by late morning. Do not give way to panic or anger. Things will straighten themselves out if you keep your cool.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It would be easy to make a bad bargain now. Keep your eyes open. Stand up for your rights if someone tries to put you down or stop a wonderful project.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A hasty decision could boomerang. Review your options before announcing your intentions. Self-pity can be dangerous. Look to the future with confidence. Try new methods.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Business obligations and domestic duties will keep you on the run today. You are more aware than ever of your responsibilities. Romance enjoys favorable influences.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are intellectual, idealistic and dutiful. Although interested in innovative ideas, these Aquarians tend to be somewhat fixed in their thinking. A strong streak of conservatism makes them reluctant to take risks — even when they should.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK8 ♡63 ◇AQJ54 ♣962
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You won't find this problem in any textbook—it's too difficult to answer! A jump to three no trump with the club suit wide open is unthinkable, as is a raise of partner's suit. Since rebidding your five-card minor would describe a far weaker hand and you don't have a second suit, the only solution is to show your concentration of strength by bidding two spades and hope partner's next action isn't embarrassing.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠4 ♡AK98753 ◇Void ♣AJ743
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	2 ◇	?

What action do you take?
A.—First, let's eliminate one option—a cue-bid of the enemy suit. That promises support for partner's suit. All you need do for the moment is bid two hearts. Since a new suit by responder is forcing, opener must give you another chance and, if the opponents preempt vigorously in diamonds, at least you will have gotten one of your suits into the auction.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K ♡AK64 ◇K9852 ♣A96
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—At first it might seem that three no trump is automatic. However, partner has gone out of the way to stress a possible spade contract knowing that you have at least nine cards in the red suits. Your prime values and king in North's suit are gold—raise to four spades.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠6432 ♡AK ◇74 ♣AKJ109
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—That's not much of a four-card major you hold, but what alternative is there to a one-spade rebid? To rebid two clubs risks losing a possible spade fit; the hand lacks both the strength and suit length for a jump to three clubs; and you can't bid no trump with no stopper in either unbid suit.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQJ1063 ♡K109 ◇K5 ♣A9
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—This hand qualifies for a jump shift on all counts. The spade suit is self-sufficient and the fit for partner's suit increases its playing potential enormously. Bid two spades.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠5 ♡A98742 ◇J762 ♣52
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—Beware of responding on a dead minimum with a potential misfit—partner's rebid of two, three or even four spades could prove costly. However, the odds favor finding a better spot and there's even the possibility that you could unearth a game in hearts. Respond one no trump.

Willie heads back to birthplace on courthouse-restoring cause

HILLSBORO — Crusading country star Willie Nelson, who raised money for struggling American farmers, is heading back to his birthplace for another cause: restoration of a century-old courthouse ravaged by fire.

Nelson

Nelson, the bandana-wearing country rebel known for such songs as "On The Road Again," will headline a March 28 benefit concert to help rebuild the Hill County Courthouse.

Nelson, organizer of several Farm Aid concerts, was born in Hill County, where the 102-year-old courthouse was destoyed by fire on New Year's Day. The concert will be staged in front of the gutted landmark.

Jim Showers, a Hillsboro attorney who is coordinating the event, said organizers hope to raise $200,000. Tickets were expected to range in price from $20 to $100.

Nelson, also known for singing "To All the Girls I Loved Before" and "Always on My Mind," was expected to attract other top entertainers, Showers said.

"He has tried to support whatever he can when he can in Texas," said Beth Torroll, a spokeswoman for Nelson. "He's going to try to do something about a county that needs a courthouse."

LOS ANGELES — Hollywood met the NFL at the annual pre-Super Bowl bash thrown by sports agent Leigh Steinberg. "Northern Exposure" star Janine Turner rubbed elbows with quarterbacks including Warren Moon and Steve Young.

Steinberg, who represents some of the biggest stars in football, served hamburgers, chicken, ribs, tacos and hand-dipped ice cream bars at the outdoor party Saturday at 20th Century Fox studios.

Turner, a Texas native who plays Maggie on "Northern Exposure," proved popular with camera-toting partygoers.

Quarterbacks Moon, Young, Mike Tomaczak and Jeff George, and Heisman Trophy winner Gino Toretta mingled with other guests on a street built to resemble New York City.

Actor Corbin Bernson, his wife, actress Amanda Pays, and Ian Ziering of "Beverly Hills 90210" also attended.

MIAMI — The parents of jazz trumpeter Arturo Sandoval fled Cuba and arrived safely in Florida after their first escape boat sank, the musician's manager said.

A speedboat picked up the elder Sandoval, also named Arturo, and his wife, Cira, after the fishing boat they left Cuba in on Saturday began taking on water. The Sandovals, both in their 60s, were taken to Key West, Fla.

Mrs. Sandoval was hospitalized for minor back injuries suffered during the crossing, which was rough, said the manager, Carlos Valldejuli.

Sandoval, 42, a protege of the legendary trumpeter Dizzy Gillespie, left Cuba two years ago and has not seen his parents since 1990. They will be reunited this week when he returns from a concert tour in Japan, Valldejuli said.

The elder Sandoval is a retired mechanic and his wife is a homemaker. They left behind a daughter, her husband and grandchildren in Cuba. They plan to stay in Miami, where other members of the family live.

MARIAZELL, Austria — Karl von Habsburg-Lothringen, namesake grandson of the last Austrian emperor, married an heiress Sunday in an elaborate church ceremony snubbed by four uncles said to be miffed over Karl's choice of bride.

Francesca Thyssen-Bornemisza is the 34-year-old daughter of German steel magnate Heinrich Thyssen and Fiona Campbell-Walter, a relative of the Duke of Argyll.

Her betrothal to Karl, 32, is rumored to have triggered a family feud about whether she was blue-blooded enough to marry the Habsburg heir. Four brothers of Otto von Habsburg, Karl's father, were absent from the wedding festivities.

The couple married in a Roman Catholic ceremony attended by 800 invited guests at Mariazell Cathedral, about 70 miles southeast of Vienna.

The bride's gown was a present made by Italian fashion designer Gianni Versace. Noble guests included the Duke of Argyll, Princess Lalla Hasna, the daughter of Moroccan King Hassan II and a host of German aristocrats.

The old Habsburg double-eagle flag in black and gold, symbol of the family's Austro-Hungarian Empire that collapsed at the end of World War I, was carried in front of the bride and her father, escorted by lance bearers.

LA CROSSE, Wis. — Cable TV mogul Ted Turner and his wife, actress Jane Fonda, will give a talk on the health benefits of eating buffalo meat at the International Bison Conference in July, organizers said.

The Turners, who own bison ranches in Montana and New Mexico, will be guest speakers during the five-day event, said Linda Kouba of the La Crosse Area Convention and Visitors Bureau.

More than 2,000 people are expected to attend the conference July 27-31 that will include a 140-booth trade show at the La Crosse Center featuring buffalo art, equipment, products and souvenirs.

Chaps bring shovel for loop game with OC

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

The Midland College Chaparrals attempt to post their third straight Western Junior College Athletic Conference win tonight when they welcome Odessa College to Chaparral Center for a 7:30 p.m. tip-off.

The Chaps will also look to return the favor OC presented them in the first half. The Wranglers, 21-2 overall and 6-1 in the conference, handed the Chaps an 88-67 loss at the Sports Center in December.

That loss was the first of four straight MC would go on to suffer in league play, a stretch that put MC in a hole it is still working to dig out of.

"I don't know what we need to do to get to Waco (and the Region V post-season tournament)," MC head coach Steve Green said. "I'm not a coach who midway through the season will look for help from other teams. I'm not going to be that way. We put ourselves in a hole, and we're going to have to dig ourselves out of it. I don't expect Odessa College, or South Plains, or Howard to come in here with a shovel and start excavating us.

"I don't hang my hat on hope. I hang it on our work ethic. Wishing and hoping is for losers. If we don't get the job done, we don't get it done."

MC has gotten it done of late, posting successive wins against NMMI (79-67) and Frank Phillips (112-101). Still, no one expects OC to be the quite the pushover either of those teams were. Not the way OC adeptly displayed its full-court press against the Chaps in the two teams' first meeting this year.

"Maybe we can talk them into doing something different," Green joked of OC. "Maybe we can get them to search for something else."

Doubtful. OC's press is a big reason why the Wranglers have been successful in 21 of their 23 outings and have achieved a No. 11 ranking nationally. It's not likely they'll change anything tonight.

Something will have to give, though, as the Chaps put a 12 game home court winning streak on the line against OC, a team coming off a 91-70 spanking of New Mexico Junior College last Thursday. A win for MC would keep the Chaps ½-game behind South Plains in the race for the fourth and final Region V tournament spot.

Sophomore Demeitreus Drew leads the Chaps in scoring, averaging more than 22 points per game. Drew, who hit 24 against Frank Phillips, is one of five Chaps in double figures, and also leads the conference in scoring average.

Elsewhere in the conference tonight, South Plains goes to New Mexico Military while New Mexico Junior College hosts Clarendon in a non-conference game.

If OC wasn't enough for one week, MC hosts Howard Thursday at 7:30 p.m. The Hawks are 5-1 in conference, in a virtual tie for first place, and also nationally ranked.

Wins this week at home against the major conference contenders could help vault the Chaps back into Region V contention quickly. However, they need to win some big games at home.

Palmer wins $190,000

■ Senior Skins Game

MAUNA LANI, Hawaii (AP) — Arnold Palmer romped around on 63-year-old legs, slapping high-fives with the gallery, after dropping a 22-foot birdie putt worth $140,000 Sunday in the Senior Skins Game.

Palmer's conversion on the 16th green at the Mauna Lani Resort Francis H. I'i Brown course insured him of a successful defense of his money-winning title in this four-man, two-day, 18-hole, made-for-television event.

The oldest man in the quartet, and the most popular player in golf's history, Palmer won a total of $190,000 from the purse of $450,000.

Chi Chi Rodriguez, who got into the field as a replacement for Lee Trevino, won $145,000, including $70,000 in a two-hole sudden death playoff.

Ray Floyd, who missed several short putts, was shut out over the last nine holes and finished with $60,000.

"I just lost confidence in the putter," Floyd said after missing putts of six feet or less on both playoff.

Those misses occurred after the national television cameras had concluded their live coverage.

Jack Nicklaus, who had his ball in his pocket much of the overcast day on the Kohala Coast, was last with $55,000.

"I can't remember when I played this bad for two days," Nicklaus said. "I've worked pretty darn hard for three months with very disappointing results."

Nicklaus won $25,000 with a 15-foot birdie putt on the 12th hole, "then wasn't seen the rest of the day," he said.

The 368-yard, par-4 16th was the turning point. With three carry-overs, it had a value of $140,000.

Nicklaus and Floyd each drove into a lava bed, took penality drops and, essentially, were out of the hole.

Iowa stings No. 5 Michigan

Associated Press

■ Top 25 Roundup

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Adversity is bringing out the best in the Iowa Hawkeyes.

Playing its second game without the late Chris Street and its first at home, No. 11 Iowa turned in a second straight emotional performance and beat No. 5 Michigan 88-80 Sunday.

Val Barnes scored 27 points as Iowa (14-3, 3-2 Big Ten) overcame an early 9-0 deficit, blew a nine-point lead in the second half, then pulled away with key plays on both ends of the court down the stretch.

Michigan (16-3, 5-2) couldn't hold on after leading with less than four minutes to play.

Iowa beat Michigan State 96-90 in overtime on Thursday night in its first game without Street, a 6-foot-8 junior who was killed in a traffic accident Jan. 19.

Syracuse 76, No. 9 Seton Hall 67

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Lawrence Moten scored 15 of his 21 points in the second half as Syracuse beat No. 9 Seton Hall for its second upset of a ranked team in five days.

Seton Hall, which got only 10 points from Big East scoring leader Terry Dehere, lost its third straight and fell from first place in the Big East. The Pirates (15-5, 5-3) are 0-13 in the Carrier Dome and haven't won at Syracuse since the 1950-1951 season.

Syracuse (12-5, 4-5), which beat No. 13 Pittsburgh 95-79 Wednesday, got 18 points and 12 rebounds from freshman John Wallace. Adrian Autry also scored 18 points.

No. 19 Florida St. 96, No. 18 Georgia Tech 77

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Two-sport star Charlie Ward sustained a separated left shoulder early in the second half Sunday, a big loss for No. 19 Florida State in its 96-77 victory over No. 18 Georgia Tech.

Ward, the Seminoles' starting point guard, will be out indefinitely, team doctors said. Ward is the quarterback on the football team and was considered a leading contender for next season's Heisman Trophy.

Ward was injured with 16:17 left in the game while scrambling for a loose ball.

LA-Boston rivalry falls to mediocrity

Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

BOSTON — Sedale Threatt and Anthony Peeler scored 16 points each as the Los Angeles Lakers beat the Boston Celtics 96-87 Sunday in a battle of longtime championship rivals reduced to mediocrity.

The Lakers took control with a 12-0 run that gave them a 48-43 lead with 2:32 left in the first half and led by at least five points the rest of the way.

It was the first meeting between the teams since Larry Bird and Magic Johnson retired. The clubs had met in the championship finals in 1984, 1985 and 1987.

But this season Los Angeles is 22-20 and Boston is 22-21. The Lakers had lost seven of their previous 10 games, while the Celtics won 10 of their previous 13.

In the only NBA game on Super Bowl Sunday, Boston was led by Reggie Lewis with 23 points and Dee Brown with 17. Celtics center Robert Parish played his 1,303rd NBA game.

Late birds save Janzen

■ Phoenix Open Golf

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Lee Janzen, thriving in blustery weather which troubled others, birdied the last two holes Sunday to pull away for a two-stroke victory in the Phoenix Open.

His 3-under-par 68 finale was enough for the $180,000 first prize, considering how others fared in conditions reminiscent of a British Open — wind gusts to 28 mph and 3-inch rough.

Robert Wrenn, the leader at 11-under after 54 holes, shot a 74 and finished in a four-way tie for third. He hasn't won a title since 1987.

The experience of David Frost, a six-time winner in eight previous years on the tour, was even worse. Frost, who started 10-under, had three double bogeys and a bogey in a four-hole stretch ending at No. 12.

He wound up at 7-over-par 78 and 3-under 281 for the tournament.

Andrew Magee, who shot 64 in similar conditions Saturday and began the final round tied with Frost, was all alone in second after sinking birdie putts on four of the last six holes. Nevertheless, he had a 72 in the final round and finished at 275.

The group at 8-under 276 included Wrenn, Mike Springer, Kirk Triplett, and Michael Allen, another late challenger who faltered with a bogey on No. 18.

Janzen, 28, who earlier in the tournament said he didn't think his record after three years on the tour qualified him as one of the game's top players, finished ninth in earnings last year with $795,279.
